Electors of Winchester

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

The issue in this election appears to be the building of the Highway through Winchester. As a member of the 1931 Council, I will remind you that each Street in the village has been materially improved. It has not only increased the value of the property in the business section, but also in every part. This will be more appreciated in years to come.

During my term on the Municipal Board, I have endeavoured to give my best service to all.

I solicit a continuance of your support for 1932.

GEORGE E EARLE.

To the Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen—Having been nominated to run for Councillor for the Village of Winchester, I assure you that if I am elected, I will serve you to the best of my ability. Your interests will always come first. I solicit your support at the polls on Monday.

EARNIE J. CHRISTIE

Electors of Winchester

Your vote and influence at the polls on Monday next will be well appreciated, and I promise, if my election as councillor is successful, to serve you and your interests to the best of my ability. Thanking you, and wishing you all the compliments of the season, I am,

PETER McGREGOR.

To The Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen—I respectfully solicit your vote and influence as candidate for councillor for the Village of Winchester for 1932. The record of the council of 1931 has not been found fault with, and I promise, if elected, to do my best to serve your interests. Wishing you all the compliments of the season, I remain,

ALBERT P. JOHNSTON.

To The Electors

Being a candidate for Municipal honors, I hereby solicit your vote and influence in the coming election for Councillor for the Village of Winchester, on Monday next, and if elected, promise to serve you to the best of my ability.

WALTER MOFFATT.

Our Column

The best way to better business is through advertising.

If you would make your shopping problems easy, get the habit of studying the ads. It is a great economy also.

Many attics are being searched for the grandeur of former days which will adorn the characters in the play, "Aunt Sophia Speaks," to be given by the Mizpah Mission Circle.

A tourist entered a local store the other day. "Whaddya got in the shape of auto mobile tires?" and a smart clerk replied. "well, we've got funeral wreaths, life preservers, invalids' cushions and doughnuts, any of them you want."

In spite of all that has been done to incite the people of Ontario to beautify the county cemeteries in honor of the dead who pioneered the country, very little is being done in this line. The greatest shame upon any community is an untended cemetery.

The people who are most ready to give others advice are generally the ones who have had the poorest success with their own lives. The woman who never earned a dollar can tell her husband just how to run his business. The man who is never able to hold a job is the one most caustic in his criticism of the Government for the way it deals with big problems. The tendency to meddle in other people's affairs by giving unasked and unwelcome advice in the trade-mark of inefficiency.

Rightly directed public spirit can and will accomplish wonders. What the world and communities need, most is leaders. Individuals can do little alone, but the well directed efforts of a few can do almost anything. When the community is filled with a progressive spirit and every citizen works toward a common end in a united and harmonious way, then they will get results. When this is done, business will move forward rapidly and big things are accomplished. We have many evidences of this. What we want is boosters not grumblers.

ROSS AGAIN REEVE

Looked Like a Lively Contest, but the Opposition Withdrew and Allowed Acclamation. Record of Old Council Could Not Be Found Fault With.

ELECTION FOR COUNCILLORS

Nominations for the various Municipal offices took place in the Town Hall. on Friday night last. There was not a large attendance, but it was a representative gathering and the keenest interest was shown in the affairs of the municipalities As usual there were a number nominated, but those qualifying were not so numerous.

Those nominated were:

For Reeve—Messrs N. W. Beach, J. H. Ross, T. O. Keyes, George Earle and Thos. Bailey.

For Councillors—Messrs. Geo. E. Earle, Thos. Bailey, Albert Johnston, Peter McGregor, Ernest Christie, Walter Moffatt, Andrew Suffell, Jay Quart, A. E. Goodfellow and Chester Robinson.

For School Trustees—Messrs. Leroy Boyd, J. L. Dixon, Frank Davidson, E. J. Christie, Robt. J. Empey, Roy Annable Colin Hay and Thomas Annable.

When the Clerk and Returning Officer, Mr. C. J. Empey, declared the pole closed Mr. A. Sweet was asked to act as chairman. The first called upon was Reeve J. H. Ross, who spoke at some length, going fully into all the transactions of the Council for the past year. He explained the expenditure of the Relief Fund the work connected with the building of the new cement road through the village, and the building of new streets and various other activities, including his work at the Counties Council. At the close he asked if any had any questions to ask, any explanations they wanted, or any fault to find. After waiting a few minutes he resumed his seat.

The other members of the 1931 Council were each called upon and they were brief, expressing their lovalty to their Reeve and expressing that the work for the past year was done as well as could be.

Mr. N. W. Beach, on coming forward, said that he had no criticism to offer, as he thought the Council of 1931 had done good work. The only criticism he might offer was that he thought some better provision should have been made to get at the town drains on Main and St. Lawrence Streets in case they needed attention. He commended the work of Reeve Ross at the Counties Council, and thought he had taken the only course he could. Mr. Bailey was not sure he would be a candidate for the Reeveship but would take until the next day to make up his mind.

Mr. Geo. Earle said he had served many years on the Council Board, and was pleased to serve the municipality. He had consented to act some years much against his will, but to save an election. He tried to do his duty, and had found the last year a very active one, and was very pleased to serve under the present Reeve. If Mr. Ross was not a candidate he would be one for the Reeveship, but he would not oppose Mr. Ross who had worked so hard for the municipality during the past year.

Mr. A. E. Goodfellow, who was nominated for Councillor, said he had no intention of standing. He was surprised that none of the previous speakers had referred to the splendid surplus this year of over $2300. He thought the Council of 1931 had done good work and should be returned.

Those who qualified for Reeve on the following morning were Messrs. J. H. Ross and N. W. Beach, and for Councillors: Geo. Earle; P. McGregor; A. Johnston, T. Bailey; W. Moffatt and E. Christie

It looked at one time as though it was to be a real, lively and interesting fight, but by Monday night the enthusiasm of some cooled down, and Mr. Beach retired from the contest and thus Mr. Ross, for a fourth term, was elected to the Reeveship without opposition.

The Election for Councillors will be held on Monday.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

There will be a Celebration of Holy Communion in St. Matthias' Church next Sunday at 10.30 a. m.

Reserve Dec. 15th for the Entertainment in the Town Hall, under the auspicess of Group 1 of the United Church Ladies' Aid.

Mr. Myron Davidson left last Friday on a brief hunting trip to Quebec. He returned Tuesday and brought with him a beautiful "Buck" deer, that will weigh well over 200 lbs dressed. It is a beautiful animal and Myron is well satisfied with his luck.

Miss Helen Jamieson was an Executive representative of the Brockville Presbyterial to Morrisburg where she spoke to the Mission Band, and also gave an address in Prescott at a special meeting of the Women's Missionary Society. The Presbyterial is sending out the Executive to speak over their district.

ANNUAL BAZAAR

Plans have been completed for the Annual Bazaar, to be held on Saturday in the Sunday School Hall, of St. Paul's Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. The President, Mrs. Moffatt, will formerly open the bazaar.

STILL AT IT

Judge Costello is still hearing evidence on the appeal of the Urban Municipalities against the Counties Assessment fixed by the Valuators. These hearings have been going on for the past few weeks, and the learned judge must go home at nights, dizzy in the head, after listening to the contradictory evidence. He shows more patience and forbearance than most Judges would, and whatever his decision, it may be depended on as one that is arrived at after due and fair consideration. The examination of the valuators is having proceeded with this week

The Annual Bazaar of St. Paul's Ladies' Aid will be held in the S. S. Rooms on Saturday, Dec. 5th, at 3 o'clock. There will be included in the sale, Fancy work, Gentlemen's accessories, Kitchen Articles at 50c and 75c, Touch and Take at 25c, Homemade cooking and candy.

Afternoon tea will be served, also a 25c Supper from 5.30 to 7. Do not miss this bazaar.

MAIL CHRISTMAS PARCELS EARLY

The post office advises that parcels for insurance must be wrapped in strong covers, securely tied, legibly addressed and bear the address of the sender in the upper left hand corner.

The following are the dates on which parcels should be mailed to insure delivery by Christmas: British & Foreign, Nov. 30th; U. S. A., 1st week of Dec.; British Columbia, Dec. 15th; Sask. & Alta, Dec. 16th, Que. and Man., Dec 18th, Maritime Prov., Dec. 18th, Ontario Dec. 21st.

PATRONIZE THE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

To-morrow night in Lannins Hall, what is known as "The Hope Chest" will be drawn for, and the person holding the lucky number given the chest. There should be an overflowing house, not only because there is no admission fee but because of the cause represented, and the splendid entertainment to be provided. The W. I. is doing noble work, work that no other organization will undertake. They are a band of self-sacrificing women, working for a good purpose, not a possibility of personal reward, and what they do they do well. The program to-morrow night will consist of Musical Selections, under the direction of Mrs. McLean, Instructor, by Public School Pupils There will also be Drills by High School Pupils and the very humorous Play that was presented at the H. S. Commencement, "A Perplexing Situation," will be repeated. Mrs. McLean will also render solos. "The Drawing for the Hope Chest" will take place immediately after the entertainment, when the name of the person holding the lucky ticket will be announced. Yes, there will be a collection. It will be taken at the door as you enter, and let it be a liberal one. A silver or paper collection is what it should be. The money is for a charitable purpose Your contribution will help someone less fortunate than yourself. Attend at Lannins Hall to-morrow (Friday) night. Concert begins at 8 o'clock sharp.

Hear the young ladies of the Mizpah Mission Circle present the play "Aunt Sophia Speaks" on Tuesday, Dec. 8th, at 7.30 p. m. in the Town Hall. Tickets 25 cents.

THREE DAYS FREE COURSE

Farmers of the district will no doubt be interested to learn that through the efforts of feed firms in the village of Winchester and the local Branch of the Department of Agriculture, a Special Three Day Course in "Feeds & Feeding" has been arranged for the benefit of the farmers and feeders of the district.

The course is to be held on the 9th, 10th and 11th of December in the Town Hall Winchester. Sessions are from 1.30 p. m. to 4.30 p. m. and 7.30 p. m. to 10.00 p. m. each day.

Wednesday, December 9th, will be devoted to the "Feeding and Management of Poultry." Mr. J. E. Fraser, of Kemptville Agricultural School, is the special lecturer for this day.

Thursday, Dec. 10th, is to be devoted to Swine. Mr. J. G. Lefebvre, of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, is the special lecturer, and will bring to the meeting a wealth of experience and information learned from the most successful hog raisers throughout the province.

Friday, Dec. 11th, is Dairy Cattle day. Prof. Geo. E. Raithby, of O. A. C. Gnelph will present to the meeting the latest and best information with regard to overcoming the many nutritional problems which confront the dairymen of to-day.

Farmers will do well to keep these meetings in mind, and decide early to be in attendance at all sessions.

Late Harold Logan Lee

No event has occurred in this community that has so astounded and stirred public sympathy than the tragic death on Sunday night last of Mr. H. L. Lee, manager of the local branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. On the Saturday previous, Mr. Lee was at his place in the bank as usual, and those who met and talked with him had not the slightest idea that he was suffering under a mental strain that led up to his tragic death on early Monday morning.

When his wife and children had retired after spending a very pleasant evening, Mr Lee went to the basement and ended his life with a revolver. The act was evidently premeditated and deliberate for he had taken the revolver home from the bank. He loosed his clothing and exposed his body, shooting himself through the heart. Death must have been instantaneous. None of the family heard the shot fired.

Mrs. Lee and children, who had retired earlier in the evening, left Mr. Lee in his usual chair, reading a book, and they had not the slightest inkling of his premeditated act.

Shortly after midnight, Mrs. Lee went down stairs to procure a glass of water, and not finding her husband in his usual place she called to him, and receiving no answer and seeing a light in the basement, she went down the stairway where she found her husband lying on the floor, the revolver by his side from which the fatal shot had been fired.

No words can adequately express the awfulness of the discovery, and the feeling that must have overwhelmed her at that time. Dr McKendry, the family doctor, was at once called, but he could do nothing to bring back life into the prostrate form that lay before him.

Mr. Lee had suffered for some years from ulsers in the stomach, and his suffering from that affliction was at times very acute, and that together with the great mental strain he was constantly under in connection with the interests of the bank, no doubt led to the desperate act that ended his death. He left several type written messages, one to his wife, one to Dr. McLaughlin, coroner, stating that no inquiry into the cause of his death would be necessary; one to the president of the bank he was connected with, and some to relatives.

In his home life Mr. Lee was a model husband and father, and he was at all times devoted to the welfare and happiness of wife and children. In fact, his was considered a very happy home circle, and it is very evident that his mind had become so overwrought through illness and mental strain that in desperation he thought to end all by what he did.

Mr Lee was in every respect a most enterprising and valuable citizen. He took an active interest in our municipal and educational affairs, and for the past two years was an efficient and painstaking chairman of the High School Board. In sporting circles he was always ready and willing to do his part and encourage manly sport. An enthusiastic curler and bowler, he entered enthusiastically into the various contests and was always ready to take his part, either as leader or assistant in contests at home or at outside places. He was always active in assisting in the sports of the high school and local organizations, and was looked upon as one whose suggestions and advice were well worth acting upon. He was active in the Public Library Board and the Horticultural Society, and in fact any local enterprise had his hearty support. He was also a prominent member of the Masonic Society.

As a friend he was loyal and helpful, and those who were most intimate with him realize that this community has lost a citizen whose place it will be hard to fill.

His general popularily was evident by by the large number of beautiful floral contributions, and the many expressions of deep sympathy extended to the bereaved wife and children. His home was ever open to his friends, and his hospitality was genuine and pleasing. In social circles he and Mrs. Lee were always very welcome guests.

No words can express the deep sympathy felt for those most intimately concerned in his sudden and tragic death. Nothing has so profoundly moved this community, and when on Monday morning the sad news of his death was spread about, there was a profound and deeply sympathetic feeling in every heart that a very sad calamity had taken place.

Mr. Lee, son of the late Wm. Lee, of Quebec City, and Mrs. Lee, of Moose Jaw, was born at "Bona Place," Quebec City, on January 6th, 1886. He entered the service of the Union Bank twenty-eight years ago and served in various capacities until he was appointed manager of the Branch at Mount Brydges, Ont., in 1912. From there he was moved to Shelburne, coming to Winchester nine years ago.

In religion Mr. Lee was a member of the Church of England and took an active part in the work of St. Matthia's Church here.

THE FUNERAL

Service was conducted at the late residence, Cameron Ave., at 2 o'clock Wednesday by Rev. Rural Dean G. Oliver Davies, Rector of St Matthia's Church, assisted by the Rev Canon E. A. Johnston, of Ottawa, both close friends of the family.

The Pall-bearers were: Messrs. Weir, Pierce, Melvin, Ross, Sweet and Dr. McKendry.

Deceased is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Florence Jessie Carson, of Quebec City, and four children, Harold Logan Jr., Jessie Vivian, John Carson and Frances Noreen; also his mother, Mrs Wm. Lee, who resides at present in Moose Jaw, Sask.; and the following brothers and sisters: Fred S Lee, Quebec City; W. R. Lee, Montreal; Dr. James C. Lee, St. Leonard's on the Sea, England; Charles P. Lee, Kincaid, Sask.; Mrs. G. J. Staton Vancouver, B. C.; Mrs. J. G. Vicq, Moose Jaw, Sask.; Mrs. (Dr.) N Grace, Tunbridge Wells, England; Mrs. D. B. Cutcliffe, Norwood, Ontario.

The Head Office of the Royal Bank was represented by Messrs C. A Gray, P. T Sylvain and Dorval, of Ottawa. Numerous messages and telegrams of sympathy have been received by the family from friends and relatives throughout Canada, among others being a very consoling message from his Lordship, John Charles Roper, Bishop of Ottawa.

A tribute of deep respect was paid the late Chairman of the Board, by Staff and Student body of the High School, who formed a guard of honor in front of the School.

The floral tributes were as follows:

Pillows—Wife and Children; Brother Charles and family; Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Weir.

Cross—Mother, brothers and sisters.

Broken Compass and Square—Lorne Lodge and Prince Edward Chapter, R. A. M., Shelburne, Ont.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE

On Monday evening, November 30th, the Baptist Young People met at the home of Miss Marion Edwards for their regular meeting twenty four young people responding to the roll call.

A special feature of this week's meeting was the presence of Mr. Grey Barrick, President of the Ottawa Association of Baptist Young People's Unions, and a member of the Cornwall B. Y. P. U. Mr Barrick brought a report of the Annual Convention of B. Y. P. U's of America, held last July in Washington, D. C. His report was followed by the singing of a hymn, entitled, "The Magnetic Christ," especially written for that Convention. The hymn was sung by a quartette consisting of Miss Williamson and Mr. Barrick of Cornwall and the Rev. and Mrs. Ostrom of Winchester.

Mrs. Osttom then gave a short inspirational talk on, 'Christ us a Teacher."

In closing the quartette sang, "What will you do with Jesus," after which Mr. Ewart Carkner led in closing prayer.

BEAN-SHARRA

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized Saturday, Nov. 21, when Rev. Dr. J. W. Woodside, of Ottawa, united in marriage, Janet Sharra to Dr. J. A. Bean, V. S., of Winchester. The bride had been living with her brother, Mr. George Sharra, at Brinston.

The happy couple were unattended.

The bride was becomingly attired in a lovely brown georgette dress, trimmed with brown transparent velvet and wore hat, shoes and purse to match. She carried a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses.

After the ceremony, a dainty dinner was served and the newly married couple left for a trip to Toronto, where they will visit the Royal Winter Fair, then on to Syracuse, N. Y., via Niagara Falls.

The bride travelled in a black seal coat trimmed with sable and and wore hat and shoes to match. They arrived home in Winchester on Monday last.

BIRTHS

To Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nesbitt on November 27, 1931, a daughter, Marjorie Elizabeth.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear brother, Stewart Baker, who met his death by accident Dec. 4, 1930.

Surrounded by friends, we are lonesome;
In the midst of our joys, we are blue;
With a smile on our face we've a heartache,
Longing dear brother for you.
Sadly missed by his brother and sisters.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our darling son, Aicel Willis C. Steele, who departed life Nov. 25th, 1929.

Our thoughts of him will never fade,
When all the years have flown,
His memory, as the brightest star,
Will always light our way.

Ever remembered by his loving Father and Mother, Mr. and Mrs. David W. Steele.

WITH THE LONE SCOUTS

Lone Scout Signs.

It has very frequently been suggested, and the idea has been boosted periodically from time to time, that Lone Scouts should make a special decorative sign of their own design, bearing the words, "A Lone Scout Lives Here," and erect same in a conspicuous place outside their homes.

During the past summer a check up was made throughout Ontario, and it was found that very few Lonies in this province had troubled to fall in with this idea.

This is unfortunate and it is thought that perhaps the Lone Scouts of Ontario do not fully realize the significance and importance of such signs in the communities in which they live.

Of course all Scouts know that they have a big duty to perform, not only to themselves, but to the rest of the world at large, aand not only are Scouts supposed to voluntarily perform a "Good Turn" each day, but also they are intended to "be prepared" to do a good turn whenever called upon to do so.

But how can a Scout be called upon when no one knows where he lives?

The making and erecting of a Lone Scout sign not only gives a boy craft training, but it also serves as an announcement to the general public, to Dominion, Provincial and County officials, the Red Cross officers, Humane Society officials and to district nurses that here is a Scout who can be called upon in case of emergency.

Scouts are expected to train themselves to "be prepared" to meet emergencies, in the case of accident, illness, flood, fire, and storm, and in the fighting of diseases and pests, to both human beings and to plants.

A Scout should have a good working knowledge of First Aid, and it is his duty to learn all he can of this subject as quic ly as possible.

The following survey was taken in the United States of America by one of the staff of "The Farmer's Wife" magazine, and no doubt the same conditions prevail throughout the Dominion of Canada.

These facts serve to show him how important a matter it is to have the Lone Scouts mobilized in readiness to meet emergencies.

"The average distance from rural homes to the nearest doctor is seven miles.

"The average time required by doctors to reach rural homes in America is over 30 minutes in summer and over 58 minutes in winter.

"The average distance of all rural homes to the nearest dentist is 14 1-2 miles.

"Eighteen per cent. of the rural population is more than 12 hours away from the services of a trained nurse, and 82 per cent. of the rural homes are from 2 to 12 hours away from this service.

"Average distance of nearest hospital from rural homes in America is 18 miles.

Average distance of rural homes to nearest drug store is 11 miles.

"Average amount paid by rural population during 1929 for services of a doctor was $29.35.

"Average amount paid by farm families for doctors and specialists was $19.28.

"Average total amount paid by rural people during the last year, due to sick s alone, was $104.94."

The above figures will show clearly the need for an organization such as the Lone Scouts, trained to meet emergencies.

Therefore, Lonies, see to it that you do your duty. That you train yourselves to be ready for any call that may be made upon you, and have your sign outside your home to let every one know where you may be found, and incidently to inform any other Lonie what may pass your way that his Brother Scout is at hand.

Chr tmas is drawing very near now. Have you completed your Lone Scout Toyshop arrangements? By this time you should have your list of names of the children to whom your parcels are going. If you have not yet received them write to Lone Scout Headquarters immediately.

If you are not a Lone Scout and would like to be one, write to the Lone Scout Department, Boy Scouts Association, 330 Bay Street, Toronto 2, and ask them for particulars.

Lone Scouting is designed for boys who live on farms and in country districts, and who are located in places where it is impracticable for them to join an ordinary Scout Troop.

Youth Hostels In Britain Prove Popular

Arrangements Between Britain, Norway, Austria and Denmark Permit Travel at Low Cost

Birmingham, Eng.—The value of the British Youth Hostels Association as an instrument for promoting international understanding was stressed by E. St. John Catchpool, national secretary of the association, at a conference of the Midland Group, held at an old mill at Kilkewydd, on the borders of England and Wales, writes a correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor.

"For the first time," he said, "it becomes possible for many young people from the continent to come over and see something of England in the best possible way—by walking in it.

"Costs have been too high for youth to come before or since the war in any numbers. Now, with our hostel charge of 1s. a night, and with an increasing number of reciprocal arrangements with the Youth Hostels Associations of other countries, their coming is made much easier. In this way international understanding is fostered.

"We can do almost anything with this movement, if we keep it on the right lines. It is completely democratic; the son of a millionaire may find himself sharing a small stove with a boy from a slum district.

"Another valuable service of the movement is that it encourages young people of 13 to 16 to do their own holiday budgeting, and that has the effect of encouraging economy and self-reliance."

Mr. Catchpool added that so far reciprocal arrangements as to the use of hostels had been completed between Britain, Norway, Austria and Denmark. Negotiations with Holland and Germany were nearing completion.

The British Youth Hostels Association, he said, now had a total membership of 10,000. Of this number, London had 1,600, Merseyside, $1,600; Oxford and Cambridge about 1,000 each; Bristol about 700, and Birmingham about 500.

IMAGINATION

There is a distinction between the fancy and the imagination; the former gives us airy shapes, the latter gives us likennesses; fancy is concerned with trivial objects, imagination with grand, spiritual, eternal things. In long settled countries, where multitudes are reared in coal pits or confined to ditches, or factories, or rarely pass beyond the walls of their native city, or, if they do, it is to visit some thickly populated graveyard or some forsaken castle, the fancy may be vigorous; but in the forest of the new world there is out little chance for hobgoblins and apparitions. Man walks abroad freely amid the works of God—works in all the wild magnificence of nature. He is in the midst of broad plains, majestic streams; on every hand he meets with some object fitted to furnish him with elevated ideas, and to arouse into healthful and vigorous action the best powers of his mind; withal, he is not so hampered but that he can allow his mind free scope in depicting his own creations. It was under these circumstances that the grandest poetry of the world was produced.—Bishop Thomson.

Products Prove State To Be No Arid Desert

Tonopah, Nev.—While Nevada is not classed as an agricultural state, the United States census bureau reports reveal that Nevada produces apples, apricots, cherries, figs, nectarines, peaches, pears, plums, prunes, quinces, grapes, almonds, pecans, blackberries, dewberries, currants, gooseberries, raspberries and strawberries.

In the southern part of the State many of the so-called tropical fruits and vegetables are raised in considerable quantity. In the Boulder Dam area, which includes the city of Las Vegas, there are seven pecan orchards.

The Lahonton valley, under the Newlands irrigation project is famous for its Hearts of Gold cantaloupes. Apples are raised in every county in the State.

Night Surveys Made In Canadian Hills

Obtaining geodetic angular measurements from the mountain peaks towering 6,000 and 8,000 feet above sea level in British Columbia is difficult and dangerous. This work, done by the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Department of the Interior, must be performed at night, when lights can be seen from distant stations.

Electric lights are placed at certain points and the angles between them measured from the observing station. The length of the lines observed varies from thirty to sixty miles.

The peaks are usually rough, needle-shaped and treacherous and the observer has to exercise great care in moving around his instrument lest a small sidestep cause him to drop down a sheer precipice.

Better Times Coming

Quebec Soleil (Lib.).—There is no reason to remain pessimistic in face of the signs of economic recovery which are now manifest. Pessimism is demoralizing. And the reconstructions which are needed after these two years of trial demand the energy of our entire population; they demand the employment of all our efforts and the maintenance of a serene confidence, incompatible with the disastrous influences of pessimism. New mistakes will be made. Nervousness will provoke new conflicts and new deceptions. But the hope of better days must inspire all our initiative and direct us in the way which is opening up before us.

Revival of Earrings

In Victorian days almost every girl had her ears pierced as a matter of course, until the 'nineties, when earrings suddenly went out of fashion. To-day earrings will be worn as much as ever they were.

There is in souls a sympathy with sounds.—Cowper.

Highway Footpaths

Montreal Press (Ind.).—Two juries in Brantford and Toronto unanimously recommended the construction of footpaths alongside the highways as a means of avoiding accidents and traffic fatalities. The recommendation would mean an increase of extraordinary expenses, but the juries are of the opinion that they are justifiable and necessary for the purpose of safeguarding human lives and protecting motorists themselves against the many dangers which they cannot always avoid when they meet people on the road. If the roads had any kind of footpath at all alongside them, the responsibility of people driving motor cars or heavy lorries would obviously be less great, whilst pedestrians would not have as many risks to encounter.

Isle of Man Desires To Have Own Flag

London.—The Isle of Man has made known its desire to adopt a flag and the Governor has been asked to procure the assent of the British Government.

The only Manx flag which now approaches a national status is a red ensign bearing three legs. The Manx coat-of-arms consists of three legs in armor, kicking in different directions. Its origin is obscure, but it is thought to have typified the island's independence of England, Scotland and Ireland.

A Peck of Gold

Dust always blowing about the town,
Except when sea-fog laid it down,
And I was one of the children told
Some of the blowing dust was gold.

All the dust the wind blew high
Appeared like gold in the sunset sky,
But I was one of the children told
Some of the dust was really gold.

Such was life in the Golden Gate:
Gold dusted all we drank and ate,
And I was one of the children told,
"We all must eat our peck of gold."
—Robert Frost, in "Collected Poems."

When You're Writing

Remember, when you're writing about
New York,
Faces are as important as buildings.

Dive deep into the subway, that gallery of portraiture;
Bathe your eyes in that flood of bitter truth.
It is not lovely, it proves no theorems,
But there is no weariness it cannot heal.

Generalizers on human trouble,
Have you courage to face those faces?
You, and you, and you, seen only once,
Goodbye, forever, and good luck.

Man Domesticates Many Animals

Modern Man is a better domesticator of animals than his caveman ancestors, better even than the agricultural people who lived before machines decreased the need for animal labor. Mankind now possesses, it appears from a list published recently in the London scientific periodical, Nature, no less than 39 domesticated animals. Probably the total of all domestic animals is nearly a hundred. Of these only dogs, oxen, goats, pigs, horses, asses and perhaps some varieties of sheep and buffalo were domesticated by prehistoric men. Domestications in ancient but not prehistoric times include the cat, the ferret, the rabbit, reindeer, two kinds of camels and the South American llama. Inclusion of the elephant is doubtful since that animal does not breed well in captivity and accordingly cannot be considered fully domesticated, which is true also of apes and monkeys.

Other mammals, such as two kinds of foxes, the skunk, the mink and the muskrat have been domesticated recently for the sake of their fur. Several others now are domesticated as laboratory animals, including the white rat, the mouse and the Guinea pig. The yak, the Barbary sheep, at least two kinds of antelope and several other mammals have been domesticated by the natives of limited regions.

Outside the class of mammals, domestic animals include the chicken, the canary and several other birds; goldfish, guppies and other acquarium fish and several food fish, including trout; the silk worm, and several other insects chiefly bred by entomologists as aids against other insects which are pests; snails and oysters raised for food and leeches for medical purposes; and several kinds of microscopic animals, such as the protozoa raised in laboratories or the malaria germs now bred to treat certain nervous diseases.

Recent domestications include the lion, bred for sale to zoos; the alligator, bred for its skin, and the fly maggots now bred in hospitals to treat bone diseases.

Animal Ethics

Different savants bring up the fact that animals have a moral sense and system. R. L. Ditmars observes the working of conscience, J. B. Haldane the evidence of ethics, C. F. Russell finds "the distinction between truth-speaking and lying and other moral acts implicit in their conduct," and that our virtues trace back to the pre-human stage—to animal ancestry.

Gratitude, fidelity, bravery, obedience to duty, considerateness—these are indeed familia. qualities in horse, dog and cat, the quadrupeds we know best. No horse will step on a thrown rider; for an understanding master he will leap walls, swim rivers, burst his heart to answer a call to speed; and no creature in pain is a truer Stoic.

As for the cat, a mystery to many persons, its motto is service. Its pride is to exhibit the mouse caught in its owner's cellar. Some blame it for "walking alone." So doing, it is simply obeying what it is hard to teach the young idea—that one should captain one's self and make up one's mind regardless of what the crowd is shouting.

The dog in all latitudes has proved himself. He never bites without barking first his declaration of war. Things in his charge—persons, premises or herds—he will defend to the last. In life-saving, in the courageous actions called heroism, he has deserved more medals and monuments than he has received. No snobbery is in him; reprobate or demirep can gain his faith.

Once man was, it is believed, just as ethical. His dawnfall dates—according to recent resea ches by this corner—from the invention of the pocket, and its extensions—tin boxes, safes, vaults and warehouses.—Franklin Clarkin in The N.Y. Times.

Origin of "Summer" Time

"The real inventor of summer time was Benjamin Franklin, the great American, who wrote an article in a Paris paper showing how great economy in candles and oil could be effected by Parisians altering their clocks and work hours every summer."

"I presume you have an up-to-date city."

"Very. We've even got it fixed so that you can't stop your automobile within a mile of the place you want to go to."

Submarine To Be Used by Expedition

The submarine, primarily an instrument of war, is justifying the huge amount of research and engineering which has gone toward its development by enlisting in the peaceful service of science. Rear Admiral W. R. Gherardi, hydrographer of the U.S. Navy Department, announces that a submarine and tender will be part of the equipment of an expedition to study the sea floor about the Bahama Islands in 1932. This expedition, international in character, will be under the leadership of Princeton University. It will include also the Royal Society of Great Britain and a member of the Netherlands Geodetic Commission.

Besides the measurements in the intensity of gravity, investigations into the geological foundation of the Bahamas, said to differ in structure from other ocean islands, will be undertaken. While most of the other islands are known to be of volcanic origin, indications are that such is not the case with the Bahamas. The unusual characteristics of the foundation and the meaning of the structural features which account for their existence will be studied and analyzed by the experts of the expedition.

The submarine is called into the field because of the character of some of the work to be undertaken, which requires great steadiness obtainable below the surface of the sea and the necessity of submerging the instruments.

The submersible will be used in the submarine studies for a period of about two weeks. Vening Meinesz, of the Netherlands Geodetic Commission will conduct the multiple pendulum observations.

How Many of them Can Sew?

Quebec Action Catholique (Ind.): An Ontario Women's Association has asked the Government to find work for unemployed women. The problem is complicated, for the Government will have to find out what kind of work it can give these women. At the present the country has an army of white collar unemployed. There is also an army of unemployed artisans. The works voted are almost all of the pick and shovel type, the kind of work that can do the white collar man no good. He is not fitted for this work. If it is impossible to find work for an important part of our male unemployed, how are we going to find any for our women? About the only thing possible would be to start huge sewing circles to make clothes for those who had no money to buy clothes. How many of them know how to sew?

Volga Tapped For Water

It has now been decided that part of the Volga water shall be directed into the Moscow River by means of a canal.

By obtaining a reinforcement of water from the Volga the Moscow River will gain in volume, the water supply of Moscow, which is beginning to show signs of shortage, will be replenished, and Moscow will acquire additional significance as a river port.

It Pays to Advertise

Montreal Information (Ind.).—While we hear complaints on all sides of the reduced volume of business, there are certain firms and certain industries who are enjoying prosperity. Why is this so? In most cases it is the result of the intensified publicity which they have employed. Many enterprises believed it had become necessary to decrease expenses, as a consequence of the depression. Contrary to all business principles, they commenced to reduce their appropriations for advertising, though this item should have been the last to be reduced. These firms may have economized a few dollars on this score, but on the other hand they have lost much more through the reduction in their turnover.

The Human Touch

Sir Alexander Clegg in the Congregational Quarterly (London): Industry can never be shorn of its human touch except at the loss of efficiency. Men are men even when they become to some extent cogs in a machine, but the better the men and the women, the more silently and smoothly run the cogs, and it is the duty of the directors to encourage and contribute to all that promotes the well-being of their workpeople.

Engineer Predicts Tropics Habitable for Whites Soon

Toronto.—Willis H. Carrier of New York, President of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, told members of the Ontario Chapter of the society recently that adoption of a cooling and humidification system in tropical cities will eventually make the tropics habitable for the white race. He declared also that within the next five years theatres, office buildings, factories, homes and trains in the United States will have adopted air-conditioning as essential to comfort.

Mr. Carrier foresaw a quickening of business for the railways "when a man can travel on the hottest summer day from Toronto to Texas without wilting a collar." He foresaw also bigger box-office returns for air-conditioned theatres, higher efficiency of factory workers, more comfort in American office buildings and homes.

"But one of the greatest benefits of air-conditioning for cooling and humidification will be that of making the Tropics habitable for the white race," he declared. Already air-cooling systems have been established in India, Brazil, Cuba and Northern Argentina, he said, and recently the King of Siam had ordered air-conditioning of his palace and national theatre, because he considered, Mr. Carrier said further, that "it changes living conditions completely."

"If the white man in the Tropics can go from his home to his office or club, the buildings in which he spends the greater part of his day being conditioned to proper effective temperature, the intermediate exposure will not bother him," he said.

CHEAPER FOR HIM

She was frowning when she returned from her shopping expedition.

"Henry," she said to her diminutive husband, "I've just found out that the woman next door has a gown exactly the same as mine."

Henry looked up from his banking account, which he had been trying hard to balance.

"Well, my dear," he said, "I suppose you'll want me to buy you a new gown?"

""That'll be cheaper than moving, won't it?" she returned.

French Woman to Head Feminine Move for Peace

Paris.—A dynamic blue-eyed French woman, whose creed is "the science of peace," will be the leading feminine figure in an international mass meeting on disarmament scheduled here late this month, preceding the world disarmament conference in Geneva in February.

She is Mlle. Louise Weiss, managing editor of the international magazine "L'Europe Nouvelle." Since the days when she worked as a nurse of World War prisoners she has delved untiringly into the study of international politics—to her "the sole means by which nations may master the science of peace and the prevention of wars."

"Disarmament is an international matter, which can be settled only through international understanding," says Mlle. Weiss

"True security can never be found in competitive armaments."

Heavyweight Boxer: "The trouble is, doctor, I can't sleep a wink." Doctor: "You must practise auto-suggestion. Why not lie on your back, relax, and count slowly up to ten?"

Cause of This Depression

A judge says it is the existence of corporations.

A financier says it is the hostility to corporations.

The farmer says it is the low price of wheat and cotton.

The silver man says it is the action of Wall Street.

The manufacturer says it is the fear of free trade.

The Wall Street men say it is the action of the silver men.

The consumer says it is the tariff.

The debtor says it is the creditor.

The creditor says it is the debtor.

The preacher says it is the devil.

Now what have you got to say about it?

Watt—"I thought you and Foozello were acquainted"

Howe—"We are."

Watt—"You didn't seem to recognize each other when you met."

Howe—"Our acquaintance is purely telephonic."

Mr. Lee was entertaining his small daughter in his lumber yard. The phone rang while he was out of the office, so Betty answered it.

Caller—"Hello, is this Mr. Lee's lumber yard?"

Betty—"No, this is Mr. Lee's little girl."

A Scot, who had worn the same hat for fifteen years, decided with heavy heart to buy a new one.

Going into the only hat shop in his neighborhood, he said: "Well, here I am again."

She—"Say, it's past midnight. Do you think you can stay here all night?"

He—"Gosh, I'll have to telephone mother first."

Mistress—"Saturdays I shall go to market with you."

Bridget—"But who's going to carry the basketh the other days, mum?"

Foreman — "Well, everything all right?"

Nnght Watchman—"Yes, I haven't done so bad for the first night. I've checked off everything and there's only one thing missing—the steam roller."

In the old days before mayonnaise became epidemic table scraps were hash instead of salad, and you could tell what the darned thing was. Grandmother's handbag may have contained a lot of foolish things, but it never contained a lipstick or cigarette case. Every boy asks for more than he expects to get. The woman who used to be ashamed of her past is now having it syndicated. An optimist is a guy who thinks his wife has quit smoking cigarettes when he finds cigar butts around his house. More than one girl has given a boy friend the bounce for rubbering at other girls. You can tell good literature. The publishers give you a set of it free when you buy a set of trash. We'll credit Admiral Byrd with finding all that land down at the South Pole, but just the same how is he going to get it defrosted? Naturally some women think better of their first husband after they have been hooked up a few years with their second

Nurse—"Your wife has just given birth to triplets."

Brown—"Gosh, that's what comes of her working in the recorder's office. Everything is triplicate."

Hudson—"Don't you find it hard to meet expenses?"

Ramsey—"Hard? Man alive! I meet expenses every time I turn around."

Frank—"Why don't you and Helen get marired. Are you afraid to pop the question?"

Peter—"No; afraid to question the pop"

Cooper (at the Southern Winter Resort)—"When did you discover that you loved me?"

Agnes—"When I found out that you were the only unmarried man in the place."

Possibility of Generating Power in Tropical Waters—Chemistry Offers Aid to Insane

Nikola Tesla has once more focused attention on the possibility of extracting energy from tropic waters—a possibility whch Georges Claude tried to convert into a reality on an experimental scale at Matanzas, Cuba. The basic principle is not difficult to understand.

Water boils at 212 degrees F. at sea-level, where the atmosphere exerts a pressure of 14.6 pounds to the square inch. On a mountain 10,000 feet high the atmospheric pressure is only ten pounds, so that water boils at 190 degrees F. If we could remove the atmospheric pressure almost entirely water could boil without any heat at all.

The surface temperatures of Caribbean waters is about 75 degrees, but at a depth of 3,000 feet it is not much above 35 to 38 degrees F. Pump the surface water into a fireless "boiler" and it will boil if the air is exhausted from the boiler. The steam given off the turbine is condensed to form a drives a turbine and the exhaust from vacuum by means of cold water drawn from the depths. Hence we have a kind of sink into which heat units flow, driving a turbine in the process.

When they read of projects such as those of Claude and Tesla, engineers sharpen their pencils and begin to figure. Suppose the turbine were of 35,000 kidowatt size. The rotating portion, or "ortor," would have a diameter pipe leading from the "boiler" to the of 100 feet. The diameter of the steam throttle would be about 25 feet. The very largest power houses would be pigmies in comparison with a Claude or Tesla plant of small capacity. Add to this the difficulty of designing plants of any size to avoid the slightest leakage, and we see how remote is the realization of what must be dismissed as an enchanting technical dream.

* * *

Game birds can eat with impunity grain poisoned with strychnine, not because they are immune to strychnine (they die if it is injected into their blood), but because the poison does not pass through the walls of the intestines. A man can swallow snake venom, but it will kill him if he gets it into a scratch. He can acquire the parrot disease by way of the mouth, but certain monkeys yield to it only when the blood is directly affected.

These facts were presented by Professor Wilder Bancroft of Cornell University before the American Chemical Society to defend and elaborate views that a famous French physician, Claude Bernard; advanced over sixty years ago on the subject of insanity.

All poisons, anesthetics and drugs that interfere with the brain or the sensory nerves produce mild insanity, because they affect thinking and action. Thus anesthesia causes a coagulation or puckering of the proteins in the brain and sensory nerves, with the result that emotions and reasoning are influenced. If the affected proteins are made mushier normality is restored. This actually turns out to be the case when ephedrine or sodium thiocyanate is administered to anesthetized men, dogs, rabbits and goldfish.

All this means that chemistry is gradually discovering how the tissues of the brain and nerves can be chemically affected to treat the insane. Not to the physician but to the chemist must we look for much of our progress in medicine.—W. K.

Armistice Day Silence

Oh, let us learn, we pray Thee God, today;
We who have lightly broken our brothers' hearts;
And when hot passion starts
And would our oft-bewildered senses sway,
Oh, teach us, God, we pray.

Just for a moment will the world's pulse cease,
And as her clanging noises sink to rest,
Let, for that moment, peace
Drop, like a sudden bird upon her nest,
On earth at Thy behest!

So we in stillness, seeing what we are,
Thy children yet, may turn, and with our tears
Wash out the merciless years;
Wash out the clamors and the wrongs of war,
And man no longer mar.

—A Jacqueline Shaw.

Nice For Both

Mrs. Riggs and Mrs. Briggs, the two unneighbourly neighbours, met by chance in the village shop.

"We'll be living in a much more respectable neighbourhood soon," said the former.

"As it happens, so will we," shot back Mrs. Briggs.

Mrs. Riggs looked a little crestfallen.

"Why, are you moving from the district, too?" she asked.

"Oh, no!" came the reply. "We're staying on here."

BABY FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made especially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

Hearts of Athletes Show Difference

From Study of Those of Nurmi and Hemol Doctor Says Action, Not Size, Counts

Berlin.—Dr. Victor Gottheiner, roentgenologist, who invented X-ray motion pictures, has made a special study of the organic constitution of athletes and recently filmed Finish runner Nurmi's heart in action, holds that athletic prowess is not so much a matter of how bodily organs are made but how they work and that the latter depends largely on what goes on in the brain. He threw on the screen a reel showing the heart and lungs of the German champion runner, Paul Hempl, in contrast to Nurmi's, and pointed out that whereas Nurmi's heart is more than double the average size Hempl's is barely average.

"Nurmi is in physical constitution an ideal athlete," Dr. Gottheiner said. "But Hempl is so far from it—in fact, he is asthenic; his extraordinary performance shows what a man can do when he has the will for it."

Dr. Gottheiner said he had started as a pathological anatomist but on the basis of his X-ray researches had come to the conclusion that mere knowledge of the organic structure was almost meaningless.

"When a heart has been cut out of the body," he said, "it is just a chunk of meat. You must know it in action before you know anything useful about it. Take Nurmi's heart: from a static X-ray picture of it no doctor could tell whether it was not enlarged by severe heart disease. A sick heart works unevenly.

"Look at the film of Nurmi's heart and you will see in what perfect rhythm it functions. It shows, indeed, an anomaly in its action unobserved in ordinary hearts; in pumping it turns on its axis through about a quarter circle but that is only because it is so big it otherwise would not find room in his chest Nurmi developed his heart—which is perfectly sound—to that extraordinary size much the same way as another athlete develops huge biceps. But unlike the latter Nurmi's huge heart demands constant exercise; if he stopped training very likely he would fall ill."

Seeing may be believing, but see that you don't believe all you see.

A Famous Captain's Sea-Log

Not many people alive to-day can truthfully say that they have seen a sea-serpent. But Sir Arthur Rostron, Commodore of the Cunard Fleet until his recent retirement, assures us that he has. He was Chief Officer on the Campania at the time, and one Friday evening, he tells us in "Home From the Sea," they were coming into Queenstown when off Galley Head he noticed something sticking up out of the water:

"Keep clear of the snag right ahead," I called out to the junior officer who was with me on the bridge.

We swung away a point but gradually drew nearer so that we were able to make out what the unusual thing was. It was a sea monster! It was no more than fifty feet from the ship's side when we passed it, and so both I and the junior officer had a good sight of it. So strange an animal it was that I remember crying out: "It's alive!"

Sketches of the Creature

Naturally Sir Arthur wishes as never before that he had a camera in his hands. But as he didn't, he says:

I did the next best thing and on the white "dodger board" in front of me I made sketches of the animal, full face and profile, for the thing was turning its head from side to side for all the world as a bird will on a lawn between its pecks.

I was unable to get a clear view of the monster's "features," but we were close enough to realize that its head rose eight or nine feet out of the water while the trunk of the neck was fully twelve inches thick.

He found the Captain rather hard to convince, in spite of the junior officer's corroboration—but there was a sequel. On the next Monday Sir Arthur read in a newspaper of the strange experience a man had gone through in the Bristol Channel:

He had been picked up in a boat in a very exhaused condition, drifting out of control, as he had lost oars and boat-hook. He told a story how that on the Saturday previous he had gone been attacked by a huge sea monster out fishing, and in the evening had and had fought it off with his boat-hook and oars, losing them all. His description of the animal compared accurately with the one I had seen, and as I saw it heading from the south of Ireland towards the direction of the Bristol Channel there was left little doubt in my mind that it was the same—and no longer any doubt in the Captain's that my monster had been real enough.

The "Titanic" Goes Down

The most stirring experience in all Sir Arthur's career must have been that tragic night when the Titanic was lost. He was in command of the Carpathia, which picked up the heart-rending message, "S O S. Titanic calling. We have struck ice and require immediate assistance." He tells the story superbly. The Carpathia was a fourteen-knot ship, but that night, through an iceberg-infested sea, for three and a half hours she worked up to seventeen knots. And then, in the dawn, they came upon the first of the Titanic's boats:

Obviously those in the boat had got away in a hurry, for there were only twenty-five of them whereas the capacity of the boat was fully forty. They were in charge of one officer.

I asked that this officer should come to me as soon as he was on board and to him I put that heart-rending inquiry, knowing with a terrible certainty what his answer was to be.

"The Titanic has gone down?"

"Yes," he said; one word that meant so much—so much that the man's voice broke on it. "She went down at about two-thirty."

That was an hour and half ago. They were too late. But altogether they rescued seven hundred and six persons—out of over two thousand.

Sir Arthur tells us many stories of that terrible night. In the darkness before dawn one already overladen boat was seized by a swimmer. No one could see who it was, but many voices were raised protesting that the boat couldn't hold another:

One woman in the stern sheets, however, nursing her sorrow of a husband left behind on the sunken ship, begged for the swimmer to be taken in. The pity in her pleading prevailed and she knew the swimmer had been saved before she sank back into the frozen coma that great tragedy engenders.

Hours passed. At length dawn lit the haggard faces of those who huddled shiveringly in that boat. Only then did the woman see the features of the drenched man she had been chiefly instrumental in dragging from a death by drowning.

It was her own husband.

A Hurried Retreat

Sir Arthur recalls another incident in lighter vein. One of the men passengers on the Carpathia had given up his cabin, and was bedless:

He wandered about the ship looking for some niche in which to curl up when, miracle! he espied an empty mattress with some blankets handy. With a sigh of relief he lay down, pulled the blankets over his head, and went peacefully to sleep. Can you imagine his disconcerted surprise when in the morning he woke up to find himself entirely surrounded by women? He had camped himself out in a portion of the ship which had been reserved for the rescued ladies and had lain there unnoticed through the night His retreat was more hurried than strategic.

Now from his place of retirement on the Hampshire Downs Sir Arthur can look back on what has been a useful and adventurous lifetime spent on the high seas first in sail and then in steam, in command of some of the finest liners ever built, including the record-making Mauretania, which he calls the most beautiful ship ever afloat, and the Berengaria, the most comfortable. His is a fine breezy story, and it will make the reader feel almost as though he had sailed alongside Sir Arthur—in any case he will wish he had!

Trust a Girl

The school inspector was giving a test in general knowledge to the mixed pupils.

He wrote on the board the Roman figures LXXX.

"Now, then, my boy," he said, pointing to a smart-looking youth, "tell the class what that stands for?"

Before the boy could reply a little girl sprang to her feet.

"I know," she put in coyly. "Love and kisses, sir."

"THESE HARD TIMES"

"The hard times and scarcity of money makes it more important than ever to economize. One way I save on clothes is by renewing the color of faded or out-of-style dresses, coats, stockings, and underwear. For dyeing, or tinting, I always use Diamond Dyes. They are the most economical ones by far because they never fail to produce results that make you proud. Why, things look better than new when redyed with Diamond Dyes. They never spot, streak, or run. They go on smoothly and evenly, when in the hands of even a ten-year-old child. Another thing, Diamond Dyes never take the life out of cloth or leave it limp as some dyes do. They deserve to be called 'the world's finest dyes'!"

Vegetable Pills Did What Creams Couldn't

"I find (writes Miss E. T. Clapham) that Carter's Little Liver Pills will do more to keep the complexion clear and the skin free from blemishes than all the face creams I have used."

Dr. Carter's Little Liver Pills are no ordinary laxative. They are ALL VEGETABLE and have a definite, valuable tonic action upon the liver. They end Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Headaches, Acidity. All druggists. 25c and 75c red packages.

LOST 20 LBS. FAT
Without Altering Diet

To reduce weight without any attention to diet is rather more than anyone should expect. That the Kruschen method should have succeeded in this case, is a great tribute to its effectiveness.

"When I started taking Kruschen for reducing weight, I weighed 170 lbs. That was seven months ago. I decided I was too heavy, and now thanks to the half teaspoonful of Kruschen every morning, I tip the scale at 150 lbs. I have been that weight for nearly four months. I may say I feel much better. I did not diet myself in any way whatever."—E.C.

Kruschen Salts do not reduce you overnight—like so many products claim to do. But taken regularly over a period of time—with a modified diet and gentle exercise, half a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast will take away unhealthy flesh and restore your figure to its normal weight. Yet at the same time—build up health with a great increase in vigor and energy for you!

WHEN FOOD SOURS

ABOUT two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for correcting excess acidity. 50c a bottle—any drug store.

WOULD BE REFORMERS

The Reeve of Alliston, Ont., Simcoe County, evidently has a great conceit of his own wisdom and ability to solve all the ills that the people of Canada, and particularly the rural sections, are afflicted with. At the last session of the Simcoe County Council, this all-wise reeve introduced a resolution that would put an end to all road improvements, reduce the number of members of all parliaments, cut down all salaries, reconstruct the school laws, restore to County Council certain rites that have been taken from them, reduce the cost of the administration of justice, reform the law courts, and pass a law that when a man finds he cannot meet his obligation, pay his chattel mortgage, his taxes, or notes held in the bank, he be put on the installment plan, and pay so much into court monthly, or as directed. If this wise man at Alliston was better informed and had a wider experience, he would know that his propositions are not new, and some of them not untried, and then discarded as either impracticable or not for the general good. We have some such "wise" men down in this eastern section of Ontario, but they will probably live and learn.

ABOUT PRINTING PRESSES

We want a new press in the office of the Winchester Press. Just an ordinary cylinder press, capable of printing our paper with neatness and dispatch at a rate of say 2000 copies per hour. We have had visions of that press, but the prosperity that has so long lurked around a corner, has not yet exposed ifself to our view sufficiently for us to make a grab with confidence.

A few weeks ago a rural subscriber was in our office when the press was at work. He heard the noise, and looking through anopen door saw the press in operation. He asked to view it at closer quarters. We were pleased to show him how the blank sheet, fed in by the P. D., came out a printed newspaper. "My! My!" said our friend, "Isn't it wonderful. Never saw the likes of it. Never had any idea how you printed your newspaper. Acts like it's human, don't it?" Of course we puffed out our chest and treated the matter as of ordinary, and felt glad to be able to enlighten our friend on the mysteries of a newspaper office.

Now comes our big surprise. We have seen some big presses in our day. Presses that print, fold and deliver ready for the mail newspapers from 12 to 32 pages, at the rate of 20 and 30 thousand an hour. But we confess that we have been, well, as completely in ignorance of a real press as our rural friend, until we read of the wonder of the west. The Free Press of Winnipeg has just installed a press (now read carefully) that stands 17½ feet high, is 88 feet long, can turn out a complete newspaper of anything from 12 to 50 pages at a rate of 104,000 copies per hour, or 28 copies per second, ready for delivery. It is called the Goss press. We think it should be called the "Boss" press. It is the third of its kind manufactured and the first and only one in Canada. Its weight is equal to ten Pullman cars, and it took a train a third of a mile long to take it in parts to Winnipeg.

Some press. But the west does things on a big scale, and the publisher of the Winchester Press is neither envious nor jealous. And while we may dream of such a press, we will be content when we can install something better than what we have at present. What in the world would we do with such a press anyway.

DISQUALIFICATION OF MEMBER OF MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

During the past few days a good deal has been said as to the qualification, or disqualification of persons seeking municipal honors. Indeed it has been rumoured that the publisher of the Winchester Press was disqualified from holding the position of Reeve because the printing of the Municipality was done at the Press Office.

Vol. III, page 2712, Sec. 52-53 of the Ontario Statutes clearly defines who are qualified and who are disqualified from holding office in a municipality.

These two sections we quote for general information:

Disqualified—An assessment commissioner, assessor, a collector of taxes, a treasurer, a clerk, OR ANY OTHER OFFICER, employee or servant of the Corporation of a Municipality.

The above subsection (1) does not apply (see subsection d) to one who is "the proprietor of or otherwise interested in a newspaper or other periodical publication in which official advertisements or notices which appear in any other newspapers or periodicals, publications are published by the council, is a subscriber or which is furnished to any department or officers of a corporation of the same are paid for at the usual rates, and he has not agreed with the corporation to do the whole or the principal part of its printing."

No agreement or contract has ever been entered into between the Corporation of the Village of Winchester and the Winchester Press. All the printing and advertising has been done at regular rates.

LATE ROBERT LATIMER

The Town has been saddened in sympathy with a home bereaved by the passing away at Stratroy Hospital on Saturday eveuing, November 21st, of William Robert Latimer, in his 46th year. Mr. Latimer had baen a resident of Strathroy for about eighteen years, and took a keen interest in many community activities. He was born and grew to young manhood in Winchester, where many of his relatives still reside.

He was prominent in fraternal circles, being a member and officer in the Masonic, Oddfellows and Eastern Star Orders, of which he was ever an enthusiastic and faithful exponent. He had been a member of the Band almost the entire time of his residence here.

He was a valued employee of the Strathroy Furniture Company, and had been at his work until a few weeks previous to his death, which added to the shock felt by his host of friends in town when the seriousness of his ilness became known. He is survived by his wife, formerly Nellie Watson, and one son, Watson, aged eleven; also his mother, Mrs. Jeannette Latimer, one brother, John G., and two sisters, Maud Latimer and Mrs. Thomas Annable, all of Winchester, Ont.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, was held Tuesday afternoon, November 24th, from the family residence High Street, to Strathroy cemetery a great number of floral tributes testifying to the esteem in which he was held Rev. H. D. Cameron and Rev. A. C. Campbell conducted the services and Beaver Lodge A. F. and A. M. attended in a body. Miss Grace Dunn, accompanied by Miss Jean Meekison, sang with feeling "My Times are in Thy Hands." The pallbearers were Wm. A Campbell, J. Harry Kinder, Garry B. Hoskins, George McDonald, Dan Crawford and T. E. Bogue. Honorary pall bearers were Roy Lewis, E. R. McNeill Sam Evans, W. B. Ferguson, E D. Evans and Ian Bateman.

The Masonic rites at the grave in which all the brothers joined, were impressively conducted by Wor. Bro. T. E. Bogue, Master of the Lodge.

As a mark of respect to an efficient craftsman, the Strathroy Furniture Company was closed for the day.

Among those from a distance attending the funeral were his brother and sisters, from Winchester, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Watson, Mr. J. J. Watson and son and Mr. and Mrs Wm Ross Geddes of Detroit.—Strathroy Dispatch.

A WARNING

To The

Electrical Trade

It has come to the attention of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, Electrical Inspection Dept., that several unapproved and sub-standard types of ELECTRIC WATER HEATERS containing particularly dangerous features have been offered for sale in Ontario, contrary to the law.

TO the sellers of unapproved equipment, we draw attention to Rule Number 103.

103—No person shall dispose of, or attempt to dispose of any electrical equipment, other than that which has been approved, without furnishing with it a plainly printed notice that its use in the province of Ontario is unlawful.

TO the users of unapproved equipment, Rule 108 applies:

108—No person shall use any electrical equipment unless and until a certificate of approval therfor has been issued by the Commission.

For refusing or neglecting to comply with the provisions of these Rules, the offenders are liable to prosecution under The Power Commission Act.

The Unapproved Heaters are of Two Types

1. Faucet Type, with portable cord, manufactured under the following names: Tom Thumb Senior, Tom Thumb Junior, Alladin, Hot Shot, Major and Vulco.
2. Immersion Type, with portable cord, manufactured under the following names: Lux-Visel or Magic Disc, Mystosol, Alladin, Wonder, Jiffy, Bestever, Kwik, Comer, Hot Donut

No school in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa Schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising thet business men, in advertising for stenographers should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

A man with a poor memory has no business to become a liar

"About seven ordinary men and women out of ten are bored stiff with international politics."—Lord Cecil.

The Fens of England

The country that I would praise is the rigidly and mathematically flat country of Eastern England, lying but a few feet above the sea, plains which were once the bottoms of huge and ancient swamps.

In the first place, such country gives a wonderful sense of expanse and space; from an eminence of a few feet you can see what in other parts of England you have to climb a considerable hill to discern. . . The solitary distant clumps of trees surrounding a lonely farm gain a deep intensity of tint from the vast green level all about then; and the line of the low far-off wolds, that close the view many miles away, is of a peculiar delicacy and softness; the eye, too, is provided with a foreground of which the elements are of the simplest; a reedy pool enclosed by willows, the clustered buildings of a farmstead; a grey church-tower peering out over churchyard elms; and thus, instead, of being checked by near objects, and hemmed in by the limited landscape, the eye travels out across the plain with a sense of freedom and grateful repose.

A day or two ago I found myself beside the lower waters of the Cam, in flat pastures, full of ancient thorntrees just bursting into bloom. I gained the towing-path, which led me out gradually into the heart of the fen; the river ran, or rather moved, a sapphire streak, between its high green flood-banks; the wide spaces between the embanked path and the stream were full of juicy herbage, great tracts of white cow parsley, with here and there a reedbed. I stood long to listen to the sharp song of the reed-warbler, slipping from spray to spray of a willow patch. Far to the north the great tower of Ely rose blue and dim above the low lines of trees; in the centre of the pastures lay the long brown lines of the sedge-beds of Wicken Mere, almost the only untouched tract of fenland; slow herds of cattle grazed, more and more minute, in the unhedged pastureland, and the solitary figure of a labourer moving homeward on the top of the green dyke, seemed in the long afternoon, to draw no nearer.

I passed a trench of still water that ran as far as the eye could follow it across the flat; it was full from end to end of the beautiful water violet, the pale lilac flowers, with their faint ethereal scent, clustered on the head of a cool emerald spike, with the rich foliage of the plant, like fine green hair, filling the water. The rising of these beautiful forms, by some sweet consent, in their appointed place and time, out of the fresh clear water, brought me a wistful sense of peace and order, a desire for I hardly know what—a poised stateliness of life, a tender beauty—if I could but win it for myself!

On and on, hour by hour, that still bright afternoon, I made my slow way over the fen; insensibily and softly the far-off villages fell behind; and yet I seemed to draw no nearer to the hills of the horizon. Now and then I passed a lonely grange; once or twice I came near to a tall shuttered engine-house of pale brick, and heard the slow beat of the pumps within, like the pulse of a hidden heart, which drew the marsh-water from a hundred runlets, and poured it slowly seawards Field after field slid past me, some golden from end to end with buttercups, some waving with young wheat, till at last I reached a solitary inn beside a ferry, with the quaint title: "No hurry; five miles from anywhere." And here I met with a grave and kindly welcome, such as warms the heart of one who goes on pilgrimages.—From "The Thread of Gold," by A. C. Benson.

New Farmhand

Give him his pay and let him go. He knows
Nothing of farming. Used to leave the plow
Stuck in a furrow just to watch the crows
Lift from a field. See, he is standing now
Star-struck: he must have seen a dozen times
That hill at twilight, but it's something new
To stop and stare at. Then the Sunday chimes
Would set him off again. Even the blue
Of an ordinary April sky could hold
Him from his work. Better to let him leave
Before we've winter and it's bitter cold,
For that would finish him. You'd not believe
What a broken reed he is, and little good
For anything but mooning in a wood!
—Eleanor Chaffee in The Montreal Star.

Seek Definition of Good Teaching

Washington.—The American Association of University Professors is trying to find out what constitutes good and bad teaching.

A comprehensive investigation of teaching methods will be made by the association under a grant of $20,000 by the Carnegie Corporation and Foundation.

A committee, the association announced, "will seek to find methods of promoting effective teaching both among those now engaged in the profession and of those young instructors who are preparing to enter it."

"You're Wanted" Slogan Sends Britons to Phones

London.—Rural England isn't used to modern sales methods, so when the Post Office Department tried to promote the use of its telephones by a postmark the people did not understand

"You're wanted on the telephone," read the slogan, and many walked miles to reach a phone

"We've had requests for rebate of fares spent this way," said a postal official.

CLIMBING

That bold youth who climbed up the Natural Bridge in Virginia, and carved his name higher than any other, found when he had done so, that it was impossible for him to descend, and that his only alternative was to go on and scale the height, and find safety at the top. Thus it is with all climbing in this life. There is no going down. It is climbing or falling. Every upward step makes another needful; and so we must go on until we reach heaven, the summit of the aspirations of time. —H. W. Beecher.

ABSENCE

O Absence, what a torment would'st thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave

Interior Decorating of Ancients Revealed

Camborne, Cornwall, Eng.—Ideas of interior decoration as they appealed to Romans or "Romanized Britons" of the second century A.D. have been revealed at Magor Farm, near here, where an ancient Roman villa is being excavated.

Presence of Roman remains was first discovered during plowing operations, and excavations have brought to light a winged corridor villa or farm, with sufficient relics to indicate some of the decorative features of the building.

It is plain that the walls of the house were timber-framed on low foundations of stone, and the inhabitants had covered this timber with a thick coating of plaster. This plaster had been washed white and then painted with linear designs, mainly in red, but also in brown, blue, yellow and green. Great quantities of this plaster have been found on the site.

There are indications that the inner rooms of the main block were lighted by clerestory windows. One of the rooms displays a hard floor on cement, composed largely of brick dust.

Pottery of the second century A.D. has been found among the ashes in a fireplace, and other finds include a portion of a bronze ornament, nails and hooks, a number of pieces of several biscuit-colored flagons, and many oyster and limpet shells.

Successful Flight Made In Packing-Case Plane

Prague.—An amazing airplane flight was successfully completed the other day by a Troppau garage proprietor named Franz Kratochvil in an airplane which he constructed himself out of packing cases and laths with strips of canvas fastened to it by tintacks. The wings were attached with iron bands and nails. Pieces of pine served as wing supporters. To control the steering, Kratochvil used two pieces of wire which he held as a coachman holds horses' reins. The propeller he cut from two bits of common packing case wood.

At the first attempt to fly the machine it proved to be unevenly balanced. This the inventor remedied by simply nailing an extra strip of wood to one of the wings. He fitted in a twenty horsepower motor and started for Olmutz, 120 kilometers away.

Although the weather was so bad that military airplanes did not go up, Kratochvil got through, attaining a speed of 120 kilometers an hour at a height of 900 meters. When he landed at Olmutz airdrome he saw that in the wind and rain his machine had become warped out of shape, and as he grasped the "joy-stick" to ascend again it came away in his hand. As it was impossible to fly back, he quietly pulled his home-made machine to pieces, packed it into a motor car and drove home.

Anecdotes Recall Naughty Nineties

Delightful stories about famous people of the nineties—and after, are "as thick as autumnal leaves" and just as colored, in the reminiscences ("Life Was Worth Living") of W. Graham Robertson, the painter. Mr. Robertson—he has a genius for making friends and what is more difficult, keeping them—was for years the close friend of Sarah Bernhardt and Ellen Terry. And at one and the same time, too! Then he knew, intimately, Whistler, Sargent, Rossetti, Burne-Jones, Henry Irving, Oscar Wilde and —well, pretty nearly everybody in the artistic world worth knowing.

* * *

One day Robertson found the divine Sarah in the highest spirits, evidently raised by some paragraph she had chanced upon in a newspaper.

"There goes the last of them!" she cried, with a flourish of the paper.

"The last of . . . .?" he gaped, unintelligently.

"The last of the doctors who gave me only one more year to live when I was a girl. There were any amount of them, and now they're all dead and here I am!"

* * *

Another time he was dining with Bernhardt and old Madame Guerard, who always lived and travelled with her. The conversation fell upon the roles in life which each should choose to play.

"I should like to be a queen," said Sarah at once.

"My dear child," protested Madame Guerard, "what people do you think would ever stand you? You would find yourself with your head off in a week."

* * *

Ellen Terry had a collection of odd little cottages in unlikely places within reach of London and was perpetually disappearing, all by herself, into one or another of these burrows. One was a tiny public-house (saloon) called The Audrey Arms, and she was obliged by her lease to keep the business going! But she discouraged custom by the quality of the "swipes" she served, and the trade went to another little "pub" in the same row of cottages, which sold much better beer.

Just think of being served with a "pot of 'arf an' arf'" by Ellen Terry! What bliss!

* * *

In due course, Graham Robertson was bidden by Ellen Terry to come down to The Audrey Arms for "a breath of fresh air."

"On' one customer dropped in during my visit when we were at luncheon in the bar parlor," he recalls, "and I stepped out to serve him. It was my sole experience as a potman and I trust that I gave satisfaction and good measure."

* * *

A friend of Henry Irving's—Walter Pollock — who used to give a wonderful exact imitation of the famous actor, was paralyzed one night when in the presence of convivial friends, Irving said, suddenly.

"Now let us have that imitation of me that everybody is so fond of."

"Oh, I couldn't . . . ." "I ....." stammered the unhappy victim.

"Go on, go on," said Irving. "Here," handing him a book, "read a page of this imitating me."

* * *

Pollock meekly took the book and began in a half-hearted and shamefaced way, then warming to his work, finished in his best manner amidst the usual applause, chuckles, Robertson.

* * *

Irving waited till the laughter had ceased and then said slowly and with perfect sincerity:

"My boy, I never heard you read so well before in my life!"

* * *

It is an old trick with reporters, trying to obtain an interview with a celebrity who doesn't appreciate the honor—and there are some who don't —to use flattery by asking their victim for a "message to the people." A certain scribe once tried the dodge on Burne-Jones, the famous painter.

"Tell them," said the great man, "that I hope they are very well, and that I am pretty well"

And off he went.

Burne-Jones, in his younger days, asked Dante Gabriel Rossetti, the poet and painter, why he had introduced some inexplicable object into a picture.

"To puzzle fools, boy, to puzzle fools," came the unexpected reply.

"But," remarked Burne-Jones, relating the incident to Graham Robertson, "I don't altogether recommend the practice."

Whistler had long wished to paint a portrait of Disraeli, and one day he came upon his longed-for model sitting alone in St. James's Park, London, apparently absorbed in thought. Plucking up his courage (Whistler afraid!) he endeavored to recall himself to the mystic Prime Minister and finally made his request. Disraeli remained silent throughout; then, after an icy pause, murmured:

"Go away, go away, little man."

Whistler went, and with him Disraeli's chance of immortality on canvas, adds Graham Robertson.

Ann Pavlowa, world famous dancer, was passionately fond of her beautiful home at Hampstead—adjoining good old Hampstead Heath—with its lovely garden and lake, the latter built specially for her swans. "Ivy House," for so it was named, had once been the home of Turner, the celebrated painter, and Pavlowa would say, "I am glad to be living in a house that used to belong to an artist!" Not because Turner was Turner, be it noted, but because Turner was an artist!

* * *

She loved her swans and was quite unafraid of them, recalls Walford Hayden (who for twenty years was with Pavlowa as a music director.) She would seize them rapturously and play with them by the water's edge for hours and they never injured her in any way. Despite the fact that she had danced "The Swan" dance innumerable times, she never allowed herself to become self-conscious in her love for the swans themselves.

* * *

Each time Pavlowa had to leave Ivy House on one of her prolonged world tours, she would go into every room and say god-bye to her birds and flowers, says Mr. Hayden (in his book, "Pavlowa.)) When she would come back into the drawing room she would be weeping. She would sit on a chair and pray, blessing her home in the Russian manner before leaving it.

* * *

She never failed to observe this ritual—except once. This was on the last occasion when she left Ivy House on her departure for the Continental tour during which she died When leaving the house this time, Pavlowa astonished everybody by her hurry. She seemed to be running blindly away from the home she was never to see again.

Applied Genesis

Little Wilfred had been absent from Sunday school, and the teacher called to inquire why.

"The real reason," said the boy's mother, "is because I fear he is learning things that only tend to make him mischievous."

"Mischievous!" exclaimed the astonished teacher. "Really, I don't understand how Sunday school could have that effect on him."

"You see," explained the parent, "it's like this. The last time Wilfred went to Sunday school he came home convinced that people are made of dust, and I found him trying to draw his little sister into the vacuum cleaner."—Country Gentleman.

Motor Age Claims One More

Amsterdam.—Pickles and herring stalls occupy nearly the same place in Amsterdam street life as hot-dog stands in New York, coffee stalls in London, or hot-sausage vendors in Berlin. The Dutch in general, but especially the population of the capital, Amsterdam, enjoy a certain fame for their piscatory taste, and on many a street corner, or by the side of a bridge, the herring and pickle stall has its permanent stand. Laborers, who in the early morning hours pedal their bicycles to their work, very often pay a daily visit to the herring man. And it is quite usual for them to repeat their visit in the evening, when going home, in order to swallow a nice young salted herring, or a pickled gherkin, or a slice of pickled cucumber. The owners of the herring stalls, which are quite often mounted on a pushcart—for they go home in the evening—take great pride in the equipment of the stalls, which are kept spotlessly clean, with acetylene gas lamps burning brightly. But modern progress has not left the traditional herring stalls untouched. One enterprising pickle man recently appeared on the scene of his daily activities as the proud possessor of a motor-driven pickle cart. No more pushing for him! A two-cylinder motor is doing the pushing now.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Moving Days in Berlin

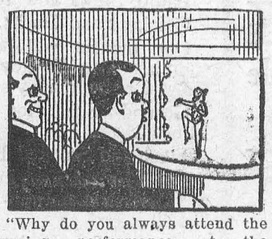
Berlin.—All Berlin seems to be moving these days, writes a correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor In normal times this would be nothing unusual at this time of the year. But in the past fifteen years so few new apartments have been built owing to the war and the economic conditions in the years following it, that moving had become almost obsolete. The German had almost forgotten what furniture vans look like. The latter were used for everything but moving household goods, often merely as a convenient carrier of advertising posters. The heavy vans and their sturdy horses, or puffing "iron horses," however, came into their own again this fall. A general flight from the larger apartments has set in. People are flocking to the tiny flats which have been built of late. They are cheaper in rent, need less furniture, less upkeep and are quite modern. It has been suggested that the big empty flats be split up into a number of small apartments so as to find occupants for them.

Youth Can Teach Much to Grown-ups

New York—Grown people have to keep on learning in order to be of any use to young people with whom they come in contact, declared Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in an informal address at the fifth anniversary meeting of the Parents' Magazine.

"The things we teach young people are not nearly so important as what we learn from them," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "We must always be prepared to meet each new age as we come to it. That is what helps us to pass on an atmosphere of experience and of a life lived with understanding, which, I believe, is probably the best thing we can do for children."

Mrs. Roosevelt said that her contacts with young people in her own family now range from one of 24 years to a grandchild of one year, which provide her with plenty of opportunities for diversification in becoming adjusted to them.



"Why do you always attend the opening performance at the theatre?"

"So I can enjoy the show without thinking what the critics have said."

Nearly every girl believes a lot of other girls are jealous of her.

A Youth's Dream Of Speed Realized

"Try and Try Again" Sir Sir Malcolm Campbell's Unspoken Code

One morning thirty years ago a youth terrified two old ladies on Bickley Hill, in Kent. He shot past them on a bicycle—and his hands were in his pockets. Next day he was brought before the Bench at Bromley police court and charged with having driven a bicycle to the danger of the public. A constable estimated the speed at twenty-seven miles an hour. "You have endangered public life and property on the public highway," said the presiding magistrate. "If you come before us again we shall take a much more serious view of the matter. As it is, you will be fined thirty shillings. We hope this will be a lesson to you not to travel so fast in future."

But the youth—whose name was Malcolm Campbell—was deaf to this advice. On the contrary, he has been going faster and faster ever since, making record after record until today he holds the world's land speed record of over two hundred and forty-five miles an hour.

Racing His Tyres.

But if Sir Malcolm endangered his life in those early days he has done so dozens of times since, as his friend Mr. J. Wentworth Day reminds us in "Speed: the Authentic Life of Sir Malcolm Campbell." Take that time at Fanoe, in Denmark, for instance, when he was trying to reach a hundred and fifty miles an hour. He came roaring along the sand and just opposite a dense section of the crowd, who were pressing as close on the track as they dare, both back tires flew off simultaneously. . , and Campbell saw, from the corner of his eye, the fantasic spectacle of both his tires racing the car down the beach.

It felt as though the back of the car had been wrenched off, as though the hand of a giant had suddenly jerked it sideways. For a few seconds his life hung in the balance. Would the car crash or keep on a straight course? Even as Campbell wrestled with the steering to keep the car on a straight course, he saw those two nightmare tires zigzagging wildly down the beach in front of him. They actually travelled faster than the car. Had either of them swerved in front the car would have been wrecked instantly.

But by his superb skill he kept a fairly straight course, though when he finally pulled up he said he felt as though he had been pummelled and punched all over.

Another Tire Flies Off.

Nothing daunted, Sir Malcolm immediately fitted a different type of tire to his back wheels and prepared to try again. But first of all he asked that the crowds of spectators should be moved further back; nobody listened to him So once more he came shooting up the beach, over the first timing strip and into the measured mile, at more than a hundred and fifty miles an hour. Dead opposite the thickest part of the crowd the offside front tire flew off, bounded into the crowd, cut a boy's leg off like a knife, killed him instantly, bounded over the heads of scores of people, struck the timing box and smashed it to pieces, and then shot a hundred feet into the air and was picked up a mile further on, having run into the sea.

By some extraordinary freak of luck not one of the officials in the timing box was hurt, although the whole box was demolished about their ears. The tire simply went through from side to side like a bullet. They missed decapitation by inches.

And once more Sir Malcolm, by a miracle, prevented his car from dashing broadside into the crowd. At the inquest the coroner completely exonerated him and commented scathingly on the fact that no notice was taken of his protest about the spectators being allowed so near the course.

A Record Missed By Seconds

Sir Malcolmn's succession of bids for the speed record reads like a temperature chart of a patient who is getting worse and worse. First a hundred miles an hour, then a hundred and fifty, then a hundred and seventy, then two hundred, and finally two hundred and forty-five. And at each fresh effort he took his life in his hands. One day on Pendine sands in 1927, says Mr. Wentworth Day, he actually managed, in spite of wind and wet sand, to get the car traveling at just over a hundred and eighty miles an hour—her maximum speed. The record seemed a certainty. Half a mile to go, and it would be covered in seconds.

Then suddenly the off-side rear tire burst like a gun. It had been cut to ribbons by sea-shells. The car swung violently to one side. Campbell tried to hold it on the course at full throttle, hoping just to make the timing strip. But she was swaying from side to side, rapidly getting out of control, so he had to slow down. The record missed by seconds.

In 1922 he had been down at Saltburn-on-Sea, in Yorkshire, meaning to lower Boillot's record of 109 miles per hour, which had stood since 1914. With his huge three hundred and fifty horsepower car Sir Malcolmn reached 135 miles per hour on the outward run:—

On the return journey, travelling well over two miles a minute, he suddenly saw a dog walking across the track. Swiftly he calculated their respective speeds. If the dog kept on walking he would just miss him If the dog turned back there would be the most unholy smash. Ten pounds of dog hit at the rate of a hundred and thirty-five miles an hour is enough to wreck most racing cars Fortunately the dog kept on walking.

The Ginger Cat.

But little things like that are a mere nothing to a racing motorist. Mr. Leon Cashman, the famous driver, was taking part in one of the Tourist Trophy races at Belfast:—

Just past Newtownards he took a couple of hairpin bends as fast as he dare, speeded up with a roar, and came charging down the straight at ninety miles an hour. Sitting bang in the centre of the track was a ginger cat, washing its face. Cashman had to swing wide, narrowly escaping a skid to avoid it. Even a cat hit at that speed might easily send the car straight off the road.

Another driver, in the same race, dashing along with his eyes fixed on the road ahead was suddenly completely blinded when the eddy of a passing car whisked up from the road a newspaper which wrapped itself round his face like a mask. His mechanic pulled it off in a flash otherwise the car would have been ditched.

"Blue Bird."

One cannot think of Sir Malcolm without thinking also of the "Blue Birds," as the chariots of this modern Jehu have been called for many years. But why "Blue Bird"? In 1910 Sir Malcolm bought a big, ungainly car, capable of a hundred miles an hour—a real flyer in those days. He was just going to call it "Flapper III." when a friend pointed out that as his other "Flappers" had been singularly unlucky, a change of name would be as well:—

That night Campbell went to a performance of Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird," which was having a run of the season in London. Night after night the audience rose to it. The augury seemed too good to miss. The car was to race at Brooklands the next day, but with a flash of that impetuous enthusiasm which occasionally breaks the imperturbability of his character like a gust of wind, Campbell determined to go straight home to his place in Bromley, Surrey, paint the car blue and christen her "Blue Bird." He reached home after midnight and sat up till the early hours of the morning smothering the car and himself with blue paint.

Next day, with the paint still wet and glistening, he went down to Brooklands and won his race! And the "Blue Birds" have been winning ever since.

Columbus brought twenty bloodhounds with him on his voyage to America in 1492.

Bird Song and Weather

The song of birds is affected by weather changes, according to an English naturalist, H. G. Alexander, who has been making a study of the effects of atmospheric conditions on our feathered friends, says Charles Fitzhugh Talman, in his Science Service feature, Why the Weather? (Washington):

"Changes in weather, especially the onset of severe cold or snow, have an influence upon the amount of bird song, but the effects are different for different species.

"Freezing weather reduces the amount of song of the ground-feeding species, such as skylarks and thrushes, while cold winds have the same effect upon more arboreal feeders.

"Some species, including the coal-tit, respond vocally to sunshine, and some, such as the blackbird, are encouraged by rain. The investigator suggests that sunshine or rain may affect the food supply of these birds and thus induce song, but rain stimulates blackbirds more than either thrushes or robins, though the food is very similar."

Tilling By Electricity Favored in Far East

Rural electrification in Algeria is being assiduously developed by the authorities. The country depends largely on its vines and its agriculture, especially cereals and olives, and electricity is used for much of the work in this connection. Electric power is also being extended to such operations as sawing, cream separating, dough kneading, and so forth, besides its growing use, generated by large tractors, for harvesting and threshing. One of its most important uses is for deep plowing, so important for vineyards where the rainfall is irregular and insufficient. Formerly the native used to turn only the surface of the soil with hand implements, and was satisfied with very low yields, but now with electric power available the soil is turned to a depth from 40 to 80 centimeters. Algeria is being forced to turn to machinery owing to lack of suitable labor.

Sylvester's Dying Bed

By Langston Hughes, Negro Poet, in "Poetry."

I woke up this mornin'
'But half-past three.
All de womens in town
Was gathered round me.

Sweet gals was a-moanin',
"Sylvester's gonna die!"
An' a hundred pretty mamas
Bowed they heads to cry

I woke up little later,
'Bout half-past fo'.
De doctor 'n' undertaker's
Both at ma do'.

Black gals was a-beggin',
"You can't leave us here!"
Brown-skins cryin', "Daddy!
Honey! Baby! Don't go, dear!"

But I felt ma time's a-comin',
An' I know'd I's dying fast.
I seed de River Jerden
A-creepin' muddy past—
But I's still Sweet Papa 'Vester
Yes, sir! Long as life do last!

So I hollers, "Com 'ere, babies,
Fo' to love yo' daddy right!"
An' I reaches up to hug 'em—
When de Lawd put out de light.

Then everything was darkness
In a great ..... big ..... night.

To Visit Stratosphere In Aeroplanes

Vienna.—Travel in the stratosphere, the thin upper reaches of the earth's envelope of air, where the Atlantic could be crossed with ease in 10 hours, is a thing of the near future, according to Prof. Auguste Piccard, the balloonist who ascended to the record height of more than 50,000 feet last May.

Announcing that nother flight is being planned for the summer of 1932 by a group of Belgian physicists, Professor Piccard said his ascension resulted in the obtaining of information about the stratosphere which made high altitude travel a present possibility.

Two airplanes for use in the stratosphere were now being constructed, he said. The rarefied air aloft will require them to have engines three times as powerful as the usual airplanes motor, but on the other hand, the fine weather, calm and possibility of predicting weather for long periods in advance which were characteristic of the upper region will be great aids to fast long-distance flights, he added.

Dropping of Gold Stabilizes Indias Silver Prices

Bombay.—The abandonment of the gold standard by Great Britain and other countries is benefiting India's millions by its stabilizing influence on the price of silver.

Most of the savings of the Indians are in the form of silver, and silver, like other commodities, has gone up since the recent currency changes. Financial circles here believe it will enjoy a growing demand when Indian farmers and others begin to realize the profits resulting from the sale of their products at higher prices.

It is doubted, however, that the rising silver market in India will benefit Mexico and other silver-producing countries. The government, as a result of the currency changes, has released itself from the obligation to sell sterling for imports of bullion. This, together with the indirect restriction imposed on the inflow of silver from abroad by the 25 per cent. duty surcharge, points to the possibility that the Indian government may be able to dispose of its surplus silver within the country.

Three Days

"I shall see her in three days,"
So Browning But the moon has devious ways;
The sun wears out, and many stars go wrong;
The old Earth totters, and none trusts her long.
"I shall see her in three days."
So Browning says.
But I: "To-day I make for her this song.
Sleep well, O nights: O sun, three days be strong."

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

Here are lovely slenderizing lines for the matronly figure.

You'll love the new skirt cut with its clever diagonal lines to reduce hip bulk. The crossover bodice has applied band trim that is very effective and becoming, besides producing a flat line much appreciated by the larger figure.

A patterned crepe silk is an excellent medium for this model. Plain blending shade crepe is used for bands and bow. Lace is used for the tiny vestee.

Style No. 3173 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 39-inch material with ½ yard of 39-inch contrasting and ⅞ yard of 3-inch lace.

Fashioned of black crepe satin it's stunning with white vest.

Dark green patterned sheer woolen is lovely with eggshell crepe used for the tiny vest.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

Blood Might Have Been Green Instead of Red

It may have been only an evolutionary accident that mankind has red blood instead of green and pink cheeks instead of faces tinted like the leaves of trees, says Dr. E. E. Free in his Week's Science (New York). He explains:

"Prof. H. Munro Fox of the University of Birmingham has discovered, he announces, that some varieties of sea-worms, believed to be distantly related to the wormlike creatures from which mankind evolved, possesses a bloodlike fluid which is green instead of red, and which contains a green chemical called chlorocruorin, which apparently carries oxygen around the worm's body just as the red hemoglobin of blood carries oxygen throughout the human body.

"Many millions of years ago, when the highest forms of life on earth were some of these wormlike creatures, relatives of which still survive in the sea, there may have existed, Professor Fox's discoveries suggest, two kinds of these sea-worms. One kind had the beginnings of red blood, and contained chemicals related to remoglobin. The other worm varieties apparently had green blood, containing Professor Fox's chlorocruorin or some of its close chemical relatives The red pigment and the green one evidently served about equally well as carriers of oxygen.

"For some reason, however, it happened to be the red-blooded worms which developed the beginnings of a backbone, and evolved, after millions of more years, into the higher animals and man. The green-blooded worms stayed about as they were, and now are represented by Professor Fox's finds."

Only Turkish-Made Clothes To Be Worn in Turkey

Istanbul, Turk.—Turkish officials from President Kemal down, and their families. must wear clothes of Turkish manufacture, the Turkish Cabinet decided in a meeting at Angora.

President Kemal is required to forgo his London tailors and Angora women their Paris gowns as a part of the Turkish Government's new economy measure.

Salaries of officials wil be reduced as one effect of the $10,000,000 cut in the 1932 budget and duties on imported luxuries will be greatly increased.

A LIVE YOUTH MOVEMENT

During this week the Young People of the United Churches of the Dundas-Grenville Presbytery rallied in their sectional group gatherings, ministering at four points in the Presbytery, viz Merrickville, Cardinal, Dundela and Winchester.

It was a most enthusiastic group that rallied here on Monday evening. They came from Hallvile, South Mountain, Morewood, Inkerman, Hulbert, Chesterville, Winchester Springs, and completely filled the Sunday School rooms.

Mr. LeRoy Boyd, president of the local Society, made a most efficient chairman

The devotional exercises were conducted by the group from Chesterville and were led by Miss Lillian Tait of that Society. The addresses given by the Young People's representative were of a very high order, and gave evidence of careful thought and preparation. Miss Isobel Hyndman, of Hallville, in a very inspiring message, presented "The opportunity for Young People in Church Service," while Mr. Daryl Graham of Hulbert emphasized, "The training necessary for young in such service."

If any one had a shadow of a doubt that the young people of today are failing to face up to the problems and call of the hour that doubt was despelled on hearing these young people present their arresting messages. Rev. Norman Coll, former Sec'y of Religious Education for the Montreal and Ottawa Conference but now pastor of Westdale United Church, Ottawa, was the principal speaker. He gave a most impressive and stimulating message challenging the youth present to launch out upon a life of Christian Service.

"Bill" Marshall, of Hulbert, who is one of the most agressive workers in this department, in a short message, presented the plans for the winter, summer and coming fall Campaign. This year he intimated the presentation of a short drama will form the basis of contest rather than that of public speaking. The soft-ball contests for the Spring and Summer are also in cause of preparation by the Committee. The final contests will be held again in September at Winchesterer, in connection with the Presbytery Rally at that time.

The program is a very comprehensive one but with the splendid leadership given by Mr. Marshall its success is assured.

Miss Lillian Tait of Chesterville was requested on behalf of the assembled group to send greetings to Rev. and Mrs. Gordon Newman, our Missionaries in Japan. After a brief period of community singing, dainty refreshments were served by the local society under the capable leadership of Mrs. Carl Rice and her efficient committee. The meeting was brought to a close with prayer and singing of "Taps."

NOTICE

Having sold out my business in Winchester, I am desirous of collecting my accounts without delay or unnecessary expense to myself or my debtors. All accounts will be sent out this week, if not paid, or a satisfactory note given by the 19th of December, will be handed over to Mr. Cass for collection.

ANNABLE—BELFORD

The marriage took place on Saturday afternoon, November 28th, 1931, in Mackay Street United Church, Ottawa, of Garner Lillian, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Belford, to Hilliard Rose Annable of Montreal, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Annable of Winchester, Ont. Rev. P. W. Anderson officiated and the wedding music was played by Mr. Arthur Loa, a friend of the groom Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Patou model of brown lace with hat and shoes of the same shade and carried tailsman roses. The maid of honor, Miss Harmor Baldwin, wore a deLong model of Nile green Spanish crepe with hat to match and carried Bronze Chrysanthemums. The best man was Mr. Ivor Tesky. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and later Mr. and Mrs. Annable left for New York. The bride wore a travelling costume of black velvet with hat of eggshell satin and a black cloth coat trimmed with Persian lamb Mr. and Mrs. Annable will reside in Montreal. Mrs. John Belford, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black transparent velvet with black satin hat and silver fox fur. Mrs. James Annable, mother of the groom, was in black satin with hat to match.

MOUNTAIN W. C. T. U.

The Mountain W. C. T. U. held a very successful parlor meeting at the home of Mrs. McGillis on Nov. 19th.

Mrs. Cheney presided and explained that the object of the meeting was to encourage prohibition. Mrs. Robinson led the devotions. Little Miss Irene Cheney and Master Lloyd Cameron each sang very appropriate songs.

Dr. Ferrier gave a very stirring address stressing the importance of educating the youth, showing the effect of alcohol on the human body. Miss Gladys Barriger sang very effectively, "One Sweetly solemn Thought." Rev H. B. Campbell and Rev. W. P. Wornell each gave interesting talks. Mrs. Campbell read a leaflet, entitled, "Why I joined the W. C. T. U." The Misses Rae and Mildred Derby sang a duet, entitled, "Was that somebody you," which was much appreciated. At the close of the meeting lunch was served and a social time enjoyed by all.

THE UNITED CHURCH

(Contributed)

A most encouraging message was brought by Rev. J. A. Waddell on Sunday morning from Ps. 116, verses 1 and 6. He said the Psalms illustrate the religious side of human life and are compassionate and reverent utterances addressed to a Worthy One, who stretches out His hand to help all who are sorely tried. He spoke of what strength comes to us when we feel that God is not far away, and when in life's darkest hour we find the peace of God that possesseth all understanding. No blow can crush the soul that trusts in God. Everything depends upon the spirit in which we meet our calamnities. We shouid realize our utter dependence upon God and the need of His Divine help.

At the evening service the pastor gave an interesting history of some of the great hymns of the church and their writers, the choir and congregation joining in the singing of these hymns, some of which were taken from the new hymnary. Eph. 5:19 was chosen as a text. Mr. Waddell said that in every revival of religion song has played an important part, awakening spiritual thoughts in apparently adamant hearts. The new Hymnasy was used by the choir for the first time at the morning service.

Rev. J. A. Waddell made a plea for under and outer clothing for children and said if any were left with him he would distribute them where needed.
