Easter Seal Campaign Rolling Along in High Rotary Club Sponsors Confident of Fine Support

This week finds the annual drive for funds for crippled and underpriviliged children of the district and province well under way. Chesterville Rotary Club, as in other years, is the sponsoring body in this area.

At the end of last week over 5,500 mailings of seals and letters went out to everyone in the district. An appeal for help in carrying on the important work of repair and readjustment to those who canot help themselves is being made to all able to donate. No sum is too small to add to the amount needed.

Chesterville Rotary uses the money received only for crippled and underprivileged children. The calls on the fund are many and to date the club has been able to answer all appeals made upon it through the openhanded generosity of the contributing public. In the past year many needy cases have been taken care of by the club through the Crippled Children's Committee headed by Eric Casselman.

Ten orthopaedic cases were attended to in 1952 with continuing care being given to several of these. They included therapy treatment for crippling due to infantile paralysis, treatment and training for four cerebral palsy cases. Several non orthopaedic cases were fitted with proper eyeglasses and received treatments for bad vision. The throat, nose and ears of many children needing attention were attended and included treatment for a variety of conditions including hare-lip and split palate.

Several hospital admissions were taken care of by the Committee and a gratifying number of children in the area covered by the campaign are able to walk and use their crippled limbs due to braces and supports supplied by the Easter Seal contributions.

The work of the Committee is in progress at all times. Their help is available to all cases of proven need and every effort is made to provide what is needed and recommended by medical advice. During the summer, several district children spend two weeks at the Ontario Society for Crippled Children's Camp at Merrywood-on-the- Rideau. That outing alone is worth untold good to those able to enjoy it. The camp is maintained by the Society and the children are under constant and understanding care of trained nurses and therapy specialists. The value of the camp life and the lovely surroundings give the children a tremendous boost each year in their struggle to overcome their physical handicaps.

On page seven of this issue of the Record will be found a sponsored page of advertising for the Easter Seal Campaign. The generous contributions of the merchants and others of the town have made it possible. We recommend it to your attention.

If you have not already made your donation, do so now. Just enclose it in the pink, addressed and stamped envelope provided. It will reach the treasurer, P. J. Gilroy, and a receipt will be sent promptly.

J. W. McLaggan Winner Of Overseas Scholarship

J. W. 'Bill' McLaggan, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McLaggan, of Chesterville, is one of the three graduate students chosen to receive an overseas scholarship.

Three graduates of Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B., and two honours students of the 1953 graduating class have been named winners of the Lord Beaverbrook Overseas Scholarships and will begin post graduate studies at the University of London in September. The announcement was made by Dr. W. T. Ross Flemington, President of Mount Allison University and Chairman of the Selection Committee.

In these post graduate scholarships Lord Beaverbrook generously provides travelling expenses to Britain and return, university tuition fees, normal living expenses during the academic year and travel in the United Kingdom during vacation periods. The scholarship will provide for one year's study but the scholar receiving a certificate of proficiency on the first year's work may be considered by the committee overseas for an extension of the scholarship for a second year.

John Wiliam McLaggan was born at Newcastle, N.B. He is twenty-six years of age and is at present an accountant with Canadian Industries Limited at their Montreal office. Mr. McLaggan received his Bachelor of Arts Degree and Certificate in Commerce from Mount Allison in 1948. In his undergraduate years he showed unusual qualities of leadership and maturity and while maintaining a high standard of scholarship, held many positions of responsibility in student affairs including the office of Prime Minister of Mock Parliament and President of the Maritime Intercollegiate Debating League. Mr. McLaggan received the Master of Commerce degree in Business Administration from the University of Toronto in 1950 and wishes to do post graduate work in the field of Economics and Politics as further preparation for a career in the business world or in government service.

The two other squadrons in the operation, termed Leap Frog Three, are 413 Squadron, Bagotville, P.Q., and 427 Squadron, St. Hubert, P.Q. This will be the third aerial transAtlantic mass movement of RCAF Sabre -jet fighters, bringing Canadian fighter strength in Europe to 9 squadrons. The Wing will come under the RCAF's Air Division which it to total 12 squadrons, with plans calling for No. 1 Fighter Wing at North Luffenham, England, ultimately to move over to a Continental base. North Star transport aircraft of 426 Squadron will accompany the fighters on the flight with groundcrews and equipment. This assures the squadrons of servicing by their own ground crews, familiar with the aircraft and pilots.

Along The Way

By Stylus

"Well, Nell, what's doing this morning, anything I can help you with?"

"Why I thought I might bake another of those walnut cakes you like, Bill."

"Do you think you're well enough to do that? Perhaps you'd better just lie around for another day or so, they say you can have a quick relapse from this flu you know."

"Oh I think I'll be all right, Bill. I'll just take my time and if I feel tired I can go and lie down awhile."

"How would it be if I helped? Remember the cakes I've baked? There isn't anything too important that has to be done to-day so I could readily take the time."

Nell looked a little rueful at the memory of my cooking experiments, but she said: "Well, that would be swell, Bill. I'll be able to sit here in the rocker and work at my smocking, and goodness knows I'm way behind with it now. If there's anything I can help with just let me know."

"Hmpf! As if anyone would need any help to bake a cake! What dishes do you use, Nell, the round ones or the square ones? Where's the recipe? Are all the things you put in the cake here in the cupboard?"

As I turned from the work table I caught Nell's slow smile. She said, very slowly, "As if anyone would need any help, Bill?" "Oh," I expostulated, "but I don't work around here every day."

"I can vouch for that all right," she replied. "Well you'll find the cake pans in the cupboard down below. The Mixmaster is there in the corner ready to go as soon as it is plugged in. The recipe is in the file under "C" (for cake), just look through the "Cs" until you come to "W" which is for walnut. The ingredients are all on the shelves right before your eyes, or in the refrigerator; and if there is anything you can't find I'm right here to tell you where it is."

After a little searching I found the recipe, and I must admit it wasn't hard to find for the file was very neatly kept. I think I'll have to file my feed bills, milk records and other stuff the same way, it would save those half days I too often lose looking for something I can't find. I studied the recipe after I located it, and then I wished I hadn't been quite so free with my offer of help.

"Nell," I said, "you know I don't drink, don't you?"

"Why of course Bill, whatever made you ask such a question?" Then I guess she saw something in my question I hadn't meant and added, breathlessly, "Bill you're not trying to warn me . . ."

"No, no, Nell, no I'm not changing, but I always thought you'd respect a fellow's feelings in these things and not play on them."

"Why, Bill, whatever do you mean?" Nell showed her surprise so evidently I knew it was genuine.

"Well it says here in this recipe '¾ cup of sherry' so I presume that the last time I ate this cake I ate (or would it be drank) ¾ cup of sherry, did I not?"

"You did not, Bill! Although I'm very much tempted to say 'Well, didn't you like it?' But just read that line of fine print at the very bottom; what does it say?"

I turned back to the recipe, and found this following all the instructions, embellishments and other superlatives that described this wonderful cake. I read aloud "Fruit juice may be used if no sherry is handy. Oh, that's different. I could hardly believe that you'd ever want to give me a taste for drink, Nell."

"Of course not, Bill. But you'd better get on with the job, it's quite a long one. If I may make a suggestion I'd turn on the oven now, if I were you, so that it will be ready when the cake is mixed."

I did so, then started getting the stuff out of the cupboard and fridge: Rind 1 orange; juice 1 orange; "Nell, does this mean I've got to take the rind of one orange and the juice of onother?"

"No, Bill, its the same orange."

"Well, then, why don't they just say throw in an orange."

"Bill, you're impossible! I think I'd better make that cake."

"No, no, Nell, I'm doing fine, you just sit still." I continued pulling out the ingredients: Walnuts, flour, baking powder, salt, etc. When I got them all lined up on the counter there wasn't room for anything else.

But I'd only begun! The first step to getting the cake mixed was:Mark on waxed paper around bottom of 10" pan and inside tube with pencil. Cut out ring. Grease pan; flour sides; fit in paper; grease paper. "Well for crying out loud," I exclaimed.

"What's the matter, Bill?"

"They're about as clear as mud in these directions. It says here: Mark on wax paper. Mark what on wax paper, Nell? Do they supply wax paper with the recipe or something?"

"Oh Bill, how can you be so dumb? There's a roll of wax paper right over your head. Take a piece out of it large enough to set that angel cake pan on and make a mark on the paper so that you can cut a piece out that will fit snugly into the bottom of the pan."

"Angel cake pan, what's that look like? We're not making angels' cake are we?"

"No, but this cake has to be baked in that type of pan. Didn't it say to mark the inside of the tube too?"

"Yes."

"Did you think they were talking about a tooth-paste tube? After all there's no other pan with a tube in it."

"Oh," I said, half convinced and wishing more than ever that I was spreading manure instead of cake batter. However, I did as Nell directed, got the pan greased, floured and papered—and thought for a moment I was back to the paper doll cutting stage!

The rest of the process was fairly straight-forward and went ahead without too much trouble. When I went to chop the walnuts "with a sharp knife," as directed, I chopped my finger some too; and when I tried sifting the flour etc., I shifted it rather than sifted it and it all spilled on the floor. I was thankful Nell was so handy, or the butter would have gone in a lump with cream poured over it (for it said creamed butter) and also that I had my overalls on 'cause when I went to beat the eggs the mixer went too fast and sprayed them all over the place.

But eventually the job was done and the result was real good if I do say so myself. But I guess it's true, Neighbour, that a woman's place is in the kitchen, for most men aren't much good there, now are they?

Control of Moths and Carpet Beetles

Investigation seems to indicate that carpet beetles may be just as injurious in Canadian homes as clothes moths. Fortunately similar control methods apply to both, says entomologist C. Graham MacNay, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Although various chemicals are now available to assist the housewife in her fight against these pests, it should not be overlooked that good housekeeping, including the regular use of a vacuum cleaner on rugs, upholstered furniture and cracks in flooring, is an important measure in the protection of woollens. Long-lasting, residual insecticides, several of which have been developed in recent years, are very effective in the control of fabric pests, providing protection for several months. A thorough spraying at least once a year, using a residual insecticide such as 5 per cent DDT, preferably in a refined kerosene base, is highly recommended. Residual insecticides should be applied as rather coarse sprays or by means of a paint brush, thoroughly wetting surfaces on which adult moths are likely to occur. Such surfaces include the walls and shelving of clothes closets, the interiors of dresser drawers, chests, trunks and other places of storage.

Breeding areas where the larvae of clothes moths and carpet beetles are likely to be located should also be thoroughly and forcefully sprayed in order to penetrate accumulations of lint, dust and other material. These areas include cracks and crevices in flooring and around baseboards throughout the house, particularly in clothes closets; also cold air ducts in the heating system which should first be vacuumed to remove accumulations of dust and lint. The under-surfaces of rugs, carpets and scatter mats should be well sprayed.

Upholsetered furniture, if infested, should be lightly sprayed, particularly between cushions, or should be treated with a moth-proofing material. Sodium fluosicate (silicofluoride) dissolved in hot water at the rate of two ounces per gallon and applied when cool to fabrics until they are thoroughly wet, provides protection for many months. Infested blankets and other woollens may be lightly sprayed or exposed to either subzero temperatures in winter or strong sunlight in summer. Woollen garments not in use should be dry-cleaned before storing; they are then much less attractive to fabric pests.

The felts in pianos should be treated with residual insecticide, preferably 5 per cent DDT household spray having a kerosene base is suitable. Emulsions of water-base sprays should not be ued as they may cause rusting of piano strings and other metal parts.

Mothballs, naphthalene flakes and paradichlorobenzene (Dichloricide) are effective only when confined with woollens in a tightly enclosed, practically airtight space that will retain their vapous. They afford practically no protection in the ordinary clothes closet as they are not repellents as is commonly believed, and the average clothes closet will not retain their vapours sufficiently to permit the buil-up of a lethal concentration. Boxes, paper bundles , garment bags and storage chests, in which these materials are used for the protection of woollens, should be sealed with strips of adhesive paper or other material to ensure the destruction of any insects present.

Mr. MacNay cautions that DDT is poisonous to humans and pets, as well as to insects. It should not, therefore, be permitted to come in contact with food materials, dishes and cooking utensils. If the insecticide is spilled on the skin, it should be washed off with soap and water.

How We Got Our Alphabet

"We have inherited our letters from a very distant past," says a writer in "My Magazine", who throws light on a question often asked by old people as well as young folk.

"Certainly they are not English in any special way. Long ago our ancestors borrowed them from other languages, as did also a number of other nations. We had no share in their invention, though we use some letters in a way of our own.

The foundations of our European alphabet were laid down 3,000 years ago. The main body of the letters (the consonants, as we call them) was then in existence, but people of the British race had not conceived of an alphabet and knew nothing of writing or reading.

Alphabets began, probably as a change from picture writing, in the ancient empires of the Euphrates; but their exact origin is beyond the reach of our knowledge. It has often been said, with some confidence, that the picturewriting of the Egyptians became condensed for practical purposes into an alphabet, perhaps five or six thousand years ago, and indeed an Egyptian alphabet was produced, but the connection between that and our alphabet has not been made clear.

There were other alphabets and systems of writing which existed in the civilized regions of the East and have now vanished from actual use. Yet some of them are partly understood, and they will be better known as excavation reveals their records.

What is certainly known about our own alphabet is that its framework was used by the Phoenicians, who were the world's commercial navigators before the Christian era and needed a system of business correspondence; that the active Greek mind added the vowels to the consonants of the Phoenician alphabet; that through the Greek colonizing activity after the decline of the Phoenicians their alphabet was spread and reached Rome and the Latin world; and that the rise of Rome to imperial and religious power carried the Latinized alphabet to the Northern races, which since have so largely dominated Europe and the islands beyond the oceans. Of course, the name alphabet is from the first two letters of the Greek writing symbols—Alpha and Beta, A and B.

Equipment For Everest

A British expedition is soon to make the eleventh attempt on Mount Everest and Kenneth Freeborne, the man in charge of making the special boots needed for the final assault above twenty-three thousand feet, spoke about them in the BBC's "Radio Newsreel." These high-altitude boots giving complete protection from frostbite, unusually light and yet strong enough to be fitted with devices for crossing ice, look rather like blown-up football boots. Glacé kid, tough, comparatively water-proof and very light, was chosen for the uppers; it has the reputation of cracking easily but as the boots are required for only a few days wear at a high altitude this does not matter. Inside the boot are six layers of the specially prepared kapok developed for use in airmen's survival suits, and as it is vitally important that this should not become wet with perspiration the lining is made of fine waterproof fabric. The sole of the foot will be warmed by a thick layer of felt and the boot's outer sole, of rubber mixture, contains large numbers of tiny air bubbles to give yet greater lightness. A special pattern tread, selected by the climbers after actual tests, is used on the sole to prevent slipping. The completed boots weigh four and a quarter pounds, two thirds of the weight of those worn on the last expedition, and their fastenings are extremely simple, for climbers suffer from great exhaustion at high altitudes and anything complicated takes an interminable time to master.

Mr. Laurie, managing director of the London firm which has made much of the other equipment for the expedition—the ice axes, avalanche shovels and glacier lanterns, rather like miner's safety lamps and just capable of taking ordinary candle that will burn steadily inside however violent the wind and elements outside—also took part in "Radio Newsreel." His firm has made the boots that will be used until the final assault, and they are so light and compact that he hopes they will be used right up to the top—if the climbers get there. There is not much that Mr. Lawrie does not know about making climbing boots, for his firm has made them for all such great expeditions since 1933 and has provided some part of the equipment for each of the British Everest expeditions.

SEEDS HAVE A BETTER CHANCE

Soon all the snow will disappear from the Canadian scene. Ploughshares will be biting into the moist soil. Many kinds of seeds will be planted, always in high hopes for a bumper crop next fall.

But before the crop is harvested, a seed must surmount numerous obstacles and fight off hordes of enemies. Let's take a wheat seed for example. Its fight for survival began last fall after it was reaped and stored. Rats and mice could have eaten it up. Poor storage may have caused it to freeze or sprout early. Insects may have rendered it useless for reproduction.

Once planted, it is open to the attacks of soil-borne insects such as wireworms. Root rots and seedling blight may prevent the young plant from maturing. Bird or animal predators could use it for a tender snack. Grasshoppers or cutworms may destroy it. Weeds will try to choke it out. It has excellent chances of being infected by rust and loose smut. If it manages to get anywhere near maturity, adverse weather may prevent it from ripening. And if it does ripen, prolonged rain or snow might stop it from being harvested. If it is harvested and stored, the fight for survival starts over again.

Fortunately for humanity, a seed has much more than a 50-50 chance of bearing fruit—something it didn't have 50 years ago. The chemical industry has played some part in this improvement. Powerful fungicides have been developed to destroy soil and seed borne diseases. Chemicals are available to curb practically every insect attacking our plants. Selective weed killers control weeds without harming the crop. New poisons have been developed for successful rodent control. In adition, scientific storage methods have been devised. Man is even trying to control the weather—by seeding clouds with frozen carbon dioxide to produce rain.

MONKEYS FOR BIBLES

Sellers of Bibles face strange adventures in remote parts of the world. One of them had to sail and paddle his canoe for eight days up a Brazilian river to reach the next village and, when he arrived, he found the people too poor to pay for the books in money. Instead, they gave him five monkeys, three parrots, ten crocodile skins, ten baskets of meal from manioc root, thirty fowl and 300 eggs.

A young man stepped up to a casino dice table in Las Vegas and made twenty-eight consecutive passes — winning $750.

The London Policeman

When Tom Fallon left the Scotland Yard Training School many years ago the old Superintendent who gave the parting lecture concluded, "You are now about to be let loose upon the unsuspecting inhabitants of this great metropolis—well, here's my final piece of advice to you. When you find yourselves alone, clothed in all the majesty of the Law, I advise you to stand your uniform in the corner of the street and remain very quietly within it. If you will do that, all will be well. And I wish you all every success in your new profession." Fallon, who rose to be a Superintendent at Scotland Yard and has also been in charge of the Thames River Police, quoted this advice in his BBC talk. A policeman's uniform could work wonders in the most difficult situations—if only the man inside did not talk too much. For thirty years he had stood in his uniform in places varying from the East End of London to the East African Bush, and the thing he valued most in his career was the opportunity it gave him to study ordinary me nand women. He said, "I have found kindness and courage in the most unexpected places, and I have come to believe that it takes little more than a stroke of ill fortune and a moment of weakness to make crooks of most of us."

He chronicled the working day of the London policeman, directing travellers, assisting the very young and old across busy streets, dealing with accidents, lost children and injured people, giving advice on manp subjects, watching for crooks on the prowl and thieves on the run. In between came the surprises and excitement and he well remembered one occasion when he turned a corner and found a large excited crowd looking up at a roof of a jeweller's shop. Someone suddenly shouted "There he is!" and he saw a crouching man, said to be a burglar, high among the chimney-pots. All the shops were locked and Fallon's only course was to pursue his man from outside the building by climbing to the roof and up a steep and narrow brick gable. He pulled himself up hand over hand and as he reached out for the final heave felt both mortar and brick giving way. He slippel and swayed backwards over an eighty foot drop to the street, saw the man coming towards him and somehow managed to recover his balance and throw himself flat on the narrow ledge. He waited, stiff with fright. The criminal came up and said, "It's all right guvnor, give me yer hand!" gave a strong pull and had him in safety. "As he did that I heard the people down in the street below cheer him. How the crowd loves a good loser," said Fallon. He thanked his rescuer, whom he reluctantly took prisoner, and next morning told the magistrate how the burglar had come to his assistance. This earned the man a considerably lighter sentence and when he came out of prison Fallon found him a job.

Another rooftop rendezvous took place some years later when he was a sergeant working in plain clothes. Just after midnight someone phoned the station to report thieves breaking into a flat on top of a five-storeyed building. Fallon took off with two police constables and was soon on his way to the roof where he found a large man with a big revolver who aimed his gun and said deliberately, "Put your hands up! This thing is loaded. Any funny business and I'll shoot." Fallon scrambled on to the roof, put his hands up and said that he was a police officer. The criminal was disbelieving until he saw Fallon's warrant card. The man started to apologize and said it was he who had phoned for the police and he had mistaken Fallon for another crook coming up to join the gang at work. Fallon later discovered that this large man was one of the wildest and most dangerous people in the district. "Whenever I read an account of a policeman finding himself at the business end of a bandit's gun I think of that night I faced one up on a London rooftop and I assure you that all my sympathies are with the policeman."

MUSKRAT SEASONS TO START

Trappers in the district are all in readiness for the opening of the muskrat season on March 20th. Meetings held in Delta and Smiths Falls on March 2nd and 3rd completed the trappers' organization for the district. Anyone requiring assistance or information in the setting up of their trap-lines should get in touch with their local officers or a representative of the local trappers' council. Trappers are cautioned as follows:

1. All traps set must be marked with the number assigned to the trap-line.
2. Next year's crop of fur depends on how the line is managed this year.
3. Trespassing trappers should be reported immediately to the local Conservation Officer. He will protect every trap-line if he is given co-operation.
4. Better prices can be obtained if a little extra time is spent in fleshing and stretching the furs.

ROOM!

By Angela Morgan

I WILL SEEK me a way no man has trod,
I will blaze new trails to the heart of God.
That my soul may walk wider ways than earth,
I will cleave new paths, that all may have fresh birth.

Here where terror and strife abound
I will mount and mount on wings of sound;
I will sour on symphonies of might,
To challenge the worlds in their flight.

That earth may hear and rejoice
I will summon the stars for their voice;
I will marshall the music of manifold spheres,
I will capture the chords of the thundering years.

I will range the abysm from sun to sod,
Spaces ringing and singing with God,
Till my passionate spirit has found at last
A splendid place in the splendid vast.

IN MEMORIAM

BAKER—In memory of our dear and beloved wife and mother, Margaret Baker, who left this earthly scene February 12, 1953.

Your vacant chair in the home will ever be to us a symbol of your presence. Your devotion in the home never slackened your nimble fingers that were ever busy for those you loved and never seemed to tire and are now at rest

Your pleasant smile that always greeted us when and wherever we came into your presence will ever be a shining light of remembrance. which we will ever keep until the dawning of a new day when we will meet you again in our Father's house where there will be no more parting and where thieves will not sneak in to disturb your rest.

Your loving husband, sons and daughters.

Higher Authority

A minister received a "call" from a much larger church in another city. It was a much bigger and more remunerative pastorate but he replied to the offer by saying that he would prayerfully consider the matter and give his decision in a few days. A short time later his little son was asked if his father had come to any decision.

"I don't know," was the lad's answer. "Papa is still praying, but Mama has all the things nearly packed."

Dear Lila:

It is with much pleasure and sincere good will that we, your friends and neighbours, have assembled here this evening to spend a social hour with you and to extend to you our congratulations on the occasion of your approaching marriage.

IN MEMORIAM

LOUCKS—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Thomas A. Loucks, who passed peacefully away on Tuesday March 13th, 1951.

We mourn for you in silence,
No eye can see us weep
But many a silent tear is shed,
When others are asleep.
God knows how much we miss you,
He counts the tears we shed
And whispers Dear, he only sleeps,
Your loved one is not dead.

Sadly missed and always remembered by wife, Nellie, daughter, Hazel, and son, Bruce.

IN MEMORIAM

RENWICK—In loving memory of a dear mother, Lillian Renwick, who passed away March 16, 1951.

We do not forget you, nor do we intend,
We think of you often, and will to the end.
Gone and forgotten by some you may be,
But dear to our memory, you ever will be.

Ever remembered by daughters, Mrs. Wilda Foley and Mrs. Opal Thorpe, of Chatham.

Home Sewing Becoming Increasingly Popular

Modern women, despite a much wider selection of ready-made clothes, are reverting to the days of the pioneer and are doing more sewing at home, Cora Burke, of the Women's Institute Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture reported.

The reason? Many women are turning to home-sewing as a hobby and are, at the same time, expressing their individuality. Many are finding too, that they are getting better clothes for the money spent.

"People are buying sewing machines, taking lessons in sewing and buying large quantities of fabric by the yard," said Miss Burke. "Making clothes at home is not necessarily cheaper, it is not always easy or quick and it takes plenty of patience, but there is satisfaction in the accomplishment."

"To do a good job of sewing at home you should have good tools and allow yourself time. Have good scissors, an iron and ironing board at hand, a good dressmaking book for reference. Even the best sewers will encounter problems. Look around for gadgets which will make your work easier and quicker. If your time is limited find out about dressmaking aids like tracing paper and tracing wheel, which cut down on time; also learn about the simplified methods of sewing.

"If you are a beginner choose a simple garment. A simple pattern will avoid worries and frustrations. When you select a pattern don't be carried away by a pretty picture. Make sure the style is right for you. Rely on simple styles with good lines, which will flatter you. Not only will they be easier to make, but they will be more becoming.

"If apply to your dressmaking all that you know about your looks, you'll be sewing for beauty as well as clothing. When you choose your pattern and material keep in mind all you know about your best colour, your best lines, and your figure faults. Don't be lured by the style, a colour or a texture which will not suit you.

"By learning to sew well and by using suitable styles and materials you can make youreself clothes that will have that custom-made look for the price of ordinary 'ready-mades.' Do you know that you can order labels embroidered with your name to stitch in the garments you make? You are creating a style for yourself when you choose the pattern, the colour and the material which are just right for you. Think of the feeling of accomplishment you will have when you proudly stitch a label 'Created by Mary Jones' into your well-made garment and when you can say to your admiring friends, "I made it myself."

AID TO SALMON

As salmon and trout cannot surmount a 400-foot artificial waterfall on the Baker River in North-West America, engineers are helping them.

On the way to their spawning beds the fish come to the falls, congregate in a trap, and are then guided into tanks. These tanks are transported on wagons along a single-track railway and are then discharged into aerated holding pools.

When the fish are rested they are scooped up in buckets for a journey of 300 yards across the dam on an aerial cableway. Normally the fish are then returned to the river, but if the dam gates are open they are carried by boat to a place where they can be deposited without the risk of being swept back over the falls.

These extraordinary precautions are being taken because the loss of up-river spawning grounds would menace the great fishing and canning industries of the North-West coast.

It is a remarkable fact that salmon will spawn only on the original gravel bed where they were born.

The per diem system under which railroads compensate one another for use of freight cars reached its 50th birthday on July 1st, 1952.

CANADA LIFTS IMPORT CONTROLS ON LIVESTOCK

Canada lifted import controls on meat and livestock on Monday.

A trade department spokesman said an order-in-council eliminating the trade restrictions became operative with the opening of the United States border to Canadian shipments. The order-in-council was passed February 26.

The U.S. border, closed since Feb. 25, 1952, was opened with an order signed in Washington Monday by Agriculture Secretary Ezra Benson. Canada imposed import controls on March 3, 1952.

With the U.S. embargo lifted, shipment of purebred Canadian dairy cattle likely will be moved into the American market almost immediately.

Buyers have been surveying the Canadian market for the last few months, officials said and some purchases have already been made.

But American cattle buyers are still staying clear of Canadian cattle for slaughter. The reason, said officials, is that they are finding prices in Canada a little too high and there may be some price reductions before heavy movement of Canadian cattle and meats are resumed.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! There are sounds, signs and the smell of spring. Yet, we do not know whether to believe that warmer temperatures are coming for sure. Although it is too chilly to start housecleaning there are housekeeping problems that are worth while discussing. For instance, what wax should we use on furniture, floorings and metal or leather surfaces? The knowledge of the uses of wax in the home is very important in the upkeep of our furnishings.

There are five kinds of wax polishes available for home use and they differ from each other in application.

1. Paste wax was the original wax for home use and is the most concenartted. It should be applied on a clean dry surface and buffed to a smooth satiny sheen.
2. Liquid polishing wax is paste wax thinned to a liquid by a solvent wit ha naphtha-like odour. Liquid polishing wax removes dirt and leaves a protective wax coating, whic hlike paste wax, requires buffing.
3. Self-polishing wax has a water base, little odour and dries to a bright high sheen without buffing. It should be applied to a clean dry surface and must be removed occasionally with fine steel wool and a detergent.
4. Cream wax is a creamy emulsion consisting of a blend of waxes and a dry cleaning solvent—as well as a small amount of neutmoves certain kinds of stains such as sugar and starch. It is recommended for use on furniture, woodwork and equipment such as refrigerators and washing machines. On the above mentioned equipment it cleans and polishes with a minimum of rubbing.
5. No-rubbing furniture wax cleans wood, metal and leather surfaces but needs a little wiping to polish. (We have not tried this wax on plastic coverings).

TAKE A TIP

1. Furniture which has previously been treated with an oily polish must be washed with tepid sudsy water, rinsed and dried before applying wax for the first time.
2. Apply wax to furniture to a small area with a circular motion. When polishing, first use quick short strokes across the grain and finish with long strokes rubbing with the line of the wood.
3. A recent wax on the market cleans and polishes without rubbingto obtain the sheen. Note the directions state wetting a soft cloth with the wax polish and spread over the entire surface and remoisten cloth before it becomes dry. When dry, buff the surface with a clean cloth, turning the cloth frequently.
4. Paste wax without naphtha odour is perhaps preferred for much-used surfaces which require a lot of protection.
5. Daily dusting of wax surfaces enhances the sheen and prevents a thick layer of gritty dirt which may scratch the finish.
6. Never use an oiled or treated dust cloth on waxed surfaces. Lintless materials (cheesecloth, flannel or old silk) are the best dusters.
7. A thin layer or application of wax lasts longer than a thick coating.
8. Paste or self-polishing wax on linoleum or wood floorings should be removed before dirt becomes embedded in the wax. Use fine steel wool with floor cleaner spilled on small areas when there is no open fire in the room. Have several cloths to mop up dirty cleaner.
9. Newly applied shellac on new or refinished floors should be permitted to set a day or two before waxes are used.
10. Allow a paste wax to dry 20 minutes before buffing with an electric polisher or other means of polishing.
11. Asphalt rubber tile and cork surfaces should always be finished with self-polishing wax. Do not use waxes with a solvent in them.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. H. asks: How can an electric polisher be kept in good condition?

Answer: 1. If possible store the polisher on the edge brush so that the weight is not on the brush or brushes.

2. Clean brushes with cleaner every 3 or 4 months, depending upon its use.

3. Do not jerk the appliance or force it forward vigorously while in operation.

4. Always turn switch to "Off" before pulling plug from outlet.

5. Reverse the coiling of the cord to a figure eight wind over the holders.

6. Replace a worn or frayed cord.

Mrs. R. A. asks: What are the ingredients for a homemade furniture cleaner?

Answer: Our neighbour mixes 1 tbsp. gum turpentine and 3 tbsps. of linseed oil to 1 quart of boiling water. This amount should last for months.

Mrs. St. C. asks: How do you keep piano keys from yellowing and can they be whitened.

Answer: Real ivory keys will darken with age. Darkness tends to yellow real ivory and leaving the keyboard open except while cleaning will help. Although it is not wise to expose keys to direct sun. Clean ivory with a cloth moistened with denatured alcohol. Never use soap. Remember, too, that excess moisture loosens the ivory from the key blocks of a piano.

Mr. C. C. asks: Can mildew be removed from an old book?

Answer: Sprinkle French chalk (can be obtained from drug stores) between pages, close book and leave for several days. Brush off the chalk.

FOR ECONOMY AND VALUE BUY No. 2 GRADE POTATOES

Consumers who are looking for good value might well consider buying No. 2 grade potatoes, which are now available in most markets in Ontario, the Ontario Department of Agriculture suggests. Hotels, restaurants, hospitals, fish and chip establishments and caterers would also find it profitable to take advantage of the price differential.

Potatoes under this grade are usually of equal cooking quality to No. 1 grade but, in most cases, have failed to reach the higher standard simply because of slight surface defects which detract from their outward appearance.

At the request of the growers, consumers and trade, and in the interests of both the industry and the public, concerted efforts are being made to check closely on potato grades. Further information may be secured from the Fruit Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Goldfield School Observes Education Week

Education Week was observed in Goldfield school by holding "open house", when the parents and friends were invited to attend on Friday afternoon.

Under the direction of the teacher, Mrs. Donald Casselman, the pupils happily displayed their works of art, as was shown in their art books and their note books and in any way in which they felt they had done a good job. The visitors were very pleased to view the splendid work that teacher and pupils have done.

Under the convenership of the teacher, tea and refreshments were served. The visitors were received by the secretary-treasurer of the school board, Miss Nell Gillies, and the teacher.

The table was centred with tulips and gren tapers and presiding at the tea table were wives of the trustees, Mrs. Dan McMahon and Mrs. Hector Gillies, assisted by three of the pupils, Misses Mary Casselman, Vivian Leroux and Donalda MacRae. Guests and pupils were served at three tables during the afternoon.

Miss Nell Gillies moved a vote of thanks on behalf of the school board and visbitors to the teacher and pupils for all they had done to make the event such a success and for the enjoyable, instructive and and interesting afternoon spent in the school.

Mrs. Casselman replied and thanked all who had assisted in any way to make the undertaking, "Open House Day," such a success.

IN MEMORIAM

OLSEN—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, August Olsen, who passed away March 9, 1942.

It's lonesome here with cut you, dear
And sad the weary way,
For life is not the same to us
Since you were called away.
We still remember the way you looked
The way you spoke and smiled,
And all the things you said and did,
Are with us all the while.
Just how much we miss you, dear,
Only God will ever know
For the ache is still in our heart
As it was eleven years ago.

Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by wife and family.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks for the many calls, cards and kindnesses received during my recent illness at my home.
