Northfield Boy is Killed By Bolt of Lightning

Cecil C. Wereley, 17, Was Standing in Barn as Fatal Flash Entered Door, Passing Through Building.

Cecil Clifford Wereley, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wereley, of Northfield, 15 miles southeast of Chesterville, was instantly killed when struck by a bolt of lightning on Sunday evening.

During a severe electrical storm, Wereley and a cousin, Denis McLear, were in the barn on the farm of Wereley's grandmother, Mrs. Richard Bender, completing the evening chores. McLear, who was only six feet away from Wereley when he was struck, was of the opinion that the bolt entered a north door of the barn and passed between him and Wereley. McLear was unhurt while Wereley was knocked to the floor and when McLear reached his side he was dead. The bolt passed directly through the barn without doing any damage to the building and spent its remaining fury on the north wall of the Bender home, 150 feet away.

Young Wereley is survived by his parents; four brothers, Stanford, of Newington; Alfred, Clarence and Carl at home, and two sisters, Mrs. Ewin McMillan, Avonmore, and Mrs. James Robertson, Cornwall.

LEGS BADLY BRUISED.

Last Thursday as Charles A. Munro of Munro's Garage, was attempting to move a three-ton lathe at McElheran's Dairy, the heavy machine tilted over pinning Mr. Munro's legs, causing many bruises. Ethan McElheran, with prompt and skillful use of a jack, relieved the pressure and released Mr. Munro from his perilous position.

BUDDING RADIO SPEAKERS.

Party politics with your noon-day meal is now quite in order if you tune in on the budding orators who are broadcastng considered opinions on the issues of the day. It is one sure way to forestall all heckling but leaves the speaker in much doubt as to who may have tuned him out.

DR. A. C. PATTERSON, JASPER, CHOSEN STEVENS CANDIDATE

At a delegated convention of the supporters of the Reconstruction Party held in Winchester last Friday evening, under the guidance of Dr. A. B. Clayton, of Chesterville, a committee of 100 delegates chose Dr. A. C. Patterson, of Jasper, as the standard bearer in the approaching election.

Mrs. Mansell Brownlee Passes at an Early Age

Well-Known Chesterville Young Woman Was In Her 30th Year.—Suffered Illness of Many Months.

Saturday afternoon the death occurred in an Ottawa hospital of Mrs. Mansell Brownlee, in her 30th year, after an extended illness, leaving one daughter, Lois, and her husband to mourn a loving wife and mother. The deceased, who was Minnie Garrett Neelin before her marriage, was one of Chesterville's well-known and popular young matrons who took an active part in church and social work, and her untimely death has occasioned much sorrow.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon in Trinity United church when Rev. R. C. Tait made his discourse from the first two verses of the 14th chapter of John's gospel which had been requested by Mrs. Brownlee, who also selected the hymns to be used. A solo was very feelingly rendered by Miss Addie Campderros. The pallbearers were Messrs. P. S. Boyd, A. J. Barrie, S. Morris and Albert Smith. Interment was made at Maple Ridge cemetery.

Floral offerings were received from the following: Nestlé's Food Co., Chesterville; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Garrett, North Lancaster; St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Choir, Chesterville; Mrs. Jessie Harper, of Merrickville; Mr. and Mrs. George Bavid, Smiths Falls; Mr. Geo. Louis and Family, Merrickville; Mr and Mrs. Alex Barrie, Chesterville; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gore, Beauharnois, Que.; Mrs. John Baluck, Merrickville.

GLEANINGS FROM THE GREENS

By The Secretary.

August 6th. — The Hutt-Hamlen combination was up against a lot of stiff competition in the Eastern this week but came home with second prize in the second event. The boys are to be congratulated as this means fourth place in a six prize competition. Had they won the second event they would have captured the Dominion Cup for a year, but as it was they took handsome motor rugs.

With the entry in the Eastern and a night baseball game in Ottawa, the turnout was slim Tuesday so Dixon and Clayton decided to settle an old grudge in 21 ends. Doc took the first and last ends, but in between slipped to give Bill a 7-point lead. Geo. Reaburn donated steel tape measures for the evening.

The Higgins Challenge entry has been postponed for a week on the request of the defenders and two rinks will go to Prescott next Wednesday Aug 14th.

Thursday night Bill Dixon was one man short but he took Jim Hanna into an extra end before Jim could take the prize, and Bill went into the last round four down to boot.

The line-up—

Merkley, M Harper, Woods, Hanna —skip.....9 8 3 1—21

Jr. Hamlen, Reaburn, Dixon, skip— .....6 7 7 0—20

Howard, King, Doering, Robertson —skip.....1 3 8—12

Marcellus, Lloyd, Hutt, Hamlen— skip.....4 2 2— 8

Thursday Night, Aug 8th, both the Chesterville entries in the district playdowns were eliminated by Brockville on the Prescott greens. Jim Hanna went down to Walsh 22-9. They had a good game but got stuck at the 9-hole and couldn't get going, but for all that the MacIntyre-Walsh pair as a doubles entry are not to be sneezed at and should go far in the playdowns.

Billy Dixon had an uphill fight all night and just as he was able to see over the top got another of several bad breaks of the night when he attempted to run the jack and got a wick. His bowl struck the jack aright but it shot over to the side and Ness netted six on the play That was in the 19th end and, although Bill killed two ends following trying to get Ness out of position, ten was too many to overcome in two ends and the final score was: Dixon 15, Ness 25..

Friday, Aug. 9th. — Chesterville added six points to their total in the St. Lawrence league with this club defending the Caldwell trophy when we took three out of the four games played here with Winchester Friday night. There were some substitions due to holidays. Jim Hanna skipped Art Robertson's rink to a win over Coons and Geo. Lacey took over Doc Clayton's rink and won from Johnston. Bill Dixon struck some hard going and lost to Jimmy Stewart, but Doc Hutt won his game from Dr. Sherwood. Winchester brought down some tough opposition but the boys figured we needed the points and went out to get them.

The line-up:

Chesterville	Winchester
G. G. Merkley	Clark Curtis
T. Flynn	O. L. Worthen
G. W. Reaburn	A. E. Goodfellow
J. Hanna, skip 21	F. A. Coons, skip 5
A. Olsen	Dr. D. MacLean
S. Howard	J. J. Gray
C. L. Hamlen	G. M. Davidson
Dr. S. H Hutt, skip 16	Dr. W. Sherwood, skip 14
M. Harper	A. A. Casselman
W. Harper	Wm. Leslie
K. K. Wood	W. H. Agnew
G. C. Lacey, skip 20	Wm. Johnston skip 16
L. David	W. A. Rowatt
L. H. Doering	J. Fader
H. E. Durant	R. H. Crowder
W. O. Dixon, skip 8	J. O. Stewart, skip 25

Next game we play away from home on the 16th, when we visit Prescott.

Coloured Ball Players to be Chesterville Fair Attraction

Chappie Johnston's Sensational Team Will Tackle Championship Smiths Falls Players on Last Day.

Arrangements have been completed for an outstanding attraction for Chesterville's big fair on September 3rd and 4th, when Chappie Johnston's coloured team of baseball players of Ogdensburg, N.Y., will meet Smiths Falls, St. Lawrence League Champions, in a game on the local diamond. Smiths Falls trimmed the House of David team and will find just as tough a proposition when they stack up against the coloured boys. Chappie Johnston's team has some of the smartest players in baseball, only barred out of the big-time stuff by the colour line. It is anticipated that the biggest crowd to witness a game in Eastern Ontario will be on hand when these teams hear the umpire call "Play Ball."

OCTOBER 14TH IS NAMED FEDERAL ELECTION DATE

PREMIER R. B. BENNETT announced yesterday that the date set for the Federal election is Monday, October 14th, the 17th Parliament of Canada coming to an end by dissolution.

Thanksgiving Day is set for October 24th.

Remembrance Day comes Nov. 11th.

It seems to be a nice arrangement.

Over 1,000 in Attendance Maple Ridge Memorial Service

Service Conducted Sunday Afternoon by Rev. R. C. Tait of Trinity United.—Splendid Collection.

The Maple Ridge cemetery memorial services held last Sunday at the cemetery attracted a crowd estimated at more than a thousand, which came in a reverent manner to give yet another tribute of respect to the departed loved ones whose remains lie at rest in that haven of tranquil beauty. It was a beautiful thought of the cemetery board to arrange such a service and was evidently much appreciated by those most interested.

Rev. R C. Tait of Trinity United, Chesterville, was the special speaker for the occasion, assisted by Rev. G. H. Smith of Morewood, and Rev. A. K. Woodwark of Elma United church. The musical part of the service was under the direction of Mr. P. G. Hewitt and the choir of Trinity United with special numbers by the church male quartette, Messrs. Hutt, Forward, Bolster and King, and by a mixed quartette in which Misses Hewitt and Campderros sang with Messrs. King and Hutt. Mr. Thos. Nash of Ottawa assisted the choir and Mrs. George Reaburn presided at the piano, while Messrs. P. G. Hewitt and Arthur Hewitt played cornets.

A collection of more than $100 will be added to the fund for the upkeep of the cemetery.

Trinity United W. M. S. Meets on Parsonage Lawn

Mrs. Clayton Was in Charge of Committee Conducting the Study.—Interesting Programme Enjoyed.

The August meeting of the W. M. Society of Trinity United church was held on the lawn of the Parsonage yesterday afternoon with Mrs. W. H. Lloyd, the president, in the chair. The programme was in charge of Mrs. Clayton and her committee, the subject being on "Hymns for Out-of-Doors."

The devotional leaflet was read by Mrs. Tait. Others taking part in the programme were Mrs. Barkley, Mrs. Forward, Mrs. Reaburn and Mrs. Cross. Several musical numbers were given by Misses Shirley King and Vivian LaSalle. Miss E. Harrison gave a reading and a flower contest brought a very interesting programme to a close.

Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Clayton, Mrs. Cross, Mrs. Slosser, Mrs. Barkley, Mrs. Doering and Mrs. Wales.

Morewood W I. Members Guests of Russell Home

Mrs. Wm. Sheppard is Hostess Ror August Meeting. — Sports Committee Awards Prizes.

The August meeting of the Morewood Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Sheppard of Russell and a picnic held on the spacious lawn of the Sheppard home. The meeting opened with the Ode, followed by the Institute Creed. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The roll call was answered with current events. The secretary read the correspondence, and business arising from this was dealt with. The rink committee gave its report and, after a brief discussion, it was moved by Mrs. Myers and seconded by Mrs. Smith that the following men be added to this committee: Messrs. Murray Dillabough, Walter Carlyle, J. W. Bogart and Henry Stein.

Librarian for the month is Mrs. Arthur Steinburg. The sports committee conducted a number of races and a contest was enjoyed, the prizes being awarded to Mrs. Cecil McKendry, Russell; Miss Doris Annabel, of Winchester; Mrs. Andrews, Morewood and Mrs. Barrington, Morewood.

The hostess served a very fine picnic lunch assisted by Mrs. C. Thompson. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Lightning's Tremendous Power Shown in Mattawa Storm

Radio Smashed, Wall Paper Ripped, Partition Moved ,Gate Posts Ripped Up, Pasture Ready Ploughed.

Mattawa. — During an electrical storm that passed over Mattawa on Sunday, the home of Gordon Robbins at Boom Creek was struck by lightning. A radio was smashed, dishes on the sideboard knocked off and the paper on the walls badly torn, while downstairs windows were broken, a partition moved an inch out of place and the gate posts were torn up. The bolt is believed to have entered by the electric wire in the living room and followed the radio wires. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins, who were sleeping upstairs, saw smoke following the crash and ran downstairs to find the house filled with smoke, although there was no blaze.

Neighbours, seeing smoke issuing from windows, were quickly on hand. A pasture nearby, belonging to F. W. Lowin, was torn up for 100 yards; a plum tree was struck; a patch of rhubarb levelled to the ground and fences on the property were also torn up, while transformers in two neighbouring houses were burned out.

Shirley Temple's Singing Prevents Riot at Honolulu

20,000 Children and Adults Storm Hawaiian Palace to See Child Star on Her Vacation Journey.

Honolulu.—Twenty thousand children and adults seeking a glimpse of Shirley Temple on her only scheduled Hawaiian vacation, nearly precipitated a riot Saturday.

The crowd broke rope barriers, hurled aside 20 policemen and 100 Boy Scouts and stormed toward Iolani Palace, the Territorial capitol, forcing Shirley and her party to retire inside and necessitating cancellation of plans for a formal procession past the little movie "queen."

Shirley retreated to a second story balcony and sang her famous "On the Good Ship Lollypop," quieting the crowd.

Ottawa Exhibition Opens Its Gates Next Monday

Next Monday, August 19, the Ottawa exhibition will be officially opened by Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden. It will be the 48th annual of the Central Canada Exhibition Association and every indication is that even the marked successes of previous years will be eclipsed.

Entries received for various departments indicate that visitors will see the finest horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and pets and dogs in competition for the generous prizes offered. The saddle and harness classes which will be judged in the evening in the Coliseum arena will make a wonderful show for horse lovers.

Special features are outstanding. Notably will be the matchless Creatore and his band to be heard in two free concerts daily. For the grandstand evening performance the headliner offering will be the Revue of Revues, one of the most elaborate productions ever presented on an outdoor stage, with dances, music and comedy presented by a talented cast, mostly girls. Stellar vaudeville and fireworks will round out the bill.

In the afternoons the grandstand vaudeville bill will be augmented by horse races for four days and automobile racing on the Friday and Saturday. These will give real thrills as the fastest of dirt track speedsters will compete.

From far-off India will be seen a baby jungle which will attract old and young. Wild animals, live fish and game birds also will be shown by the Ontario Game and Fisheries Department.

A display of handicrafts from India, primitive Canadian handicrafts, government displays, showings by merchants, dog show, baby show, child welfare demonstrations, Experimental Farm demonstrations, automobile show, pure food show, junior agriculture competitions, model home, a new midway and scores of other factors will appeal to young and old, urban and rural visitors.

Reduced railway and bus fares have been arranged and special provision in the grounds has been made for parking automobiles. Coupon tickets giving five admissions for one dollar may be obtained from branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia and at various business places before the opening of the exhibition. These tickets are transferable and the purchasers effect a saving of fifty cents on each strip. There will be six full days and nights, August 19th to 24th.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Apples For Sweet Cider.

Tests conducted in the Fruit Products Laboratory at the Central Experimental Farm have shown that Rufus, Ribston, Scott Winter, Baldwin, Mavis, Russett and a blend of Ben Davis and Spy are excellent varieties of apples for making good cider.

Indians Organize.

Interest in good ploughing is not confined to a few counties in Central Ontario. A branch of the Ontario Ploughmen's Association has just been formed by the Indians on the Unceded Reserve, Manitoulin Island.

No doubt this will improve ploughing and cultural methods in Wikwemikong vicinity.

Weekly Crop Report.

Barley and oats are now being cut and. while the crop is heavy, the yield will be reduced through lodging. Rains have lowered the quality of a heavy hay crop. A satisfactory pack of peas has been completed. Root crops are progressing satisfactorily. Corn is making excellent headway and promises well. Small fruits are plentiful and the yield of peaches is expected to be above the average. Canning tomatoes are making rapid growth. Priming of tobacco is under way and a good crop is indicated.

Controlling Mustard.

In an experiment conducted on the Central Experimental Farm, mustard was controlled in the following manner. Buckwheat, which is a fast growing smother crop, was seeded about June 15th. The mustard seed lying in the first 1½ inches of soil germinated about the same time as the buckwheat but the mustard seedlings were soon killed by the faster growing smother crop. After harvesting the buckwheat, the land was not cultivated or disturbed in any way. The following spring, oats were seeded on the buckwheat stubble, directly with the seed drill, with no previous cultivation. Some mustard came up in the grain but the infestation was so small that the plants were hand pulled with little difficulty and the yield of the grain was higher than on adjoining plots seeded in the ordinary way.

Northern Agricultural Societies.

The officers of Agricultural Societies in the newer parts of Ontario are charged with even greated responsibilities than those in the South. Apparently these duties are assumed in an enthusiastic way. as very successful District Meetings were held recently in Muskoka, Nipissing, Manitoulin Island and Algoma.

Progressive Society.

The South Brant Agricultural Society is to be congratulated on a very fine field crop competition in barley The judge, Mr. W. A. Galbraith of Iona Station, reports very keen competiton and has emphasized particularly the trimming of all fields.

A new feature was attractive signs about two feet square, announcing each field as an entry in the competition in the South Brant Agricultural Society. Mr. Galbraith added "a number of the fields were located on the highway and constituted good advertising for the district."

Lakehurst Agricultural Society.

This society has recently purchased the imported percheron stallion "Jasmire" from G. A. Pedden, Strathroy.

For many years the Lakehurst Society has consistently followed a policy of maintaining pure bred bulls for the use of its members. This progressive work, covering a period of years. has resulted in a uniformly high standard of feeder cattle, for which market channels are open. The district is well known to cattle buyers.

Apparently a similar policy is now being adopted to serve horse interests in the area.

Outbreak of Moths.

The moths that have been flying so numerously in Western Ontario this summer and especially during the last days of June are the adult form of the sod webworms which sometimes do considerable damage in old pastures. Commenting on these insects under date of July 4th. Professor Lawson Caesar. Provincial Entomologist. has this to say:

"It is possible that we may have a serious outbreak of this pest in another two or three weeks. The outbreak will likely be most destructive —if it does come—to golf courses and old pastures. Often, however, we get a lot of these moths without any serious outbreak. Sod webworms have been doing some damage in Essex and Kent and probably in Middlesex, both in old pastures and to corn."

Improvement of Pastures.

The improvement of grasses for both hay and pasture is being given a great deal of attention at the present time.

A notable advance during recent years has been the discovery of the remarkably high feeding value of fresh young grass. So rich is young gass in protein that it may be regarded as a high protein concentrate. It is also rich in vitamin content and in the essential minerals which are so important in feeding milk producing animals. No other crop is capable of maintaining live stock for five months of the year at so low a feed and labour cost. The digestibility of young grass is considerably greater than that of hay, and there is no loss of nutrients in curing, which in hay may amount to from 30 to 50 per cent. The discovery of these facts has led to a new appreciation of pastures, and to a closer study of the factors which influence their productivity.

Care of the Growing Flock.

Management, feeding and hygiene are the chief considerations in the successful handling of a growing flock of poultry. Under "management" come numerous factors of great importance. Where chicks are placed in a brooder house they should not be overcrowded. A 10 by 12 foot colony house will accommodate a maximum of 300 chicks. Larger numbers are dangerous from the standpoint of physical comfort and disease. Sufficient hopper space should be available so that all the chicks may feed comfortably. This requirement will generally be satisfied by one inch per chick, at the start, with a gradual increase as they become larger.

During the whole of the rearing period when practicable, the birds should have access to free range of as good quality as can be made available. When the pullets begin to lay, they should be taken into the laying houses in order to avoid difficulty in teaching them to use the nests and so that their feeding may be adjusted to take care of the increased demands of egg production. In so far as feeding is concerned, in view of the importance of the growth period upon the eventual production of the pullets, the use of cheap feeds is poor economy.

Two women had a heated argument at an "at home." Later one of them confided in a friend.

"You know, I don't like Patsy," she said. "She's not fair."

"No," said the other, "but she's dyeing to be."

In beach fashions, there is always something new under the sun.

Miss Screecher, the soprano, was relating some of her experiences at the musical "At Home."

"I have had some exciting adventures." she said. "The most memorable of all happened on a voyage from New York. A terrific storm arose, and the captain asked me to sing, to calm the terror-stricken passengers. You should have seen the heavy seas running."

"H'm," grunted the unhappy Brown who had so far suffered her singing in silence, "and I don't blame them!"

The Part the C. N. R. Plays in Marketing Canada's Crops.

So essential to the trade, commerce, and general welfare of Canada are the various classes of freight carried in the course of a year by Canadian National Railways that it is difficult to give pride of place to any particular one, but in their all-round importance to every section of the community, agricultural products must rank very high. They form the back-bone of the nation's business activities and contribute directly and in large volume to its industry and employment everywhere.

During 1934 the C. N. R. carried over eight and a half million tons of agricultural produce, being an increase of 6.44% over 1933. In this total are included 134,700,000 bushels of wheat, 14,000,000 bushels of corn, 35,700,000 bushels of oats, and 15,500,000 bushels of barley; the aggregate of these commodities showing an increase of 4.1% when compared with the preceding year.

It is interesting to note that the average haul of each ton of wheat was approximately seven hundred and fifty miles.

Without the rail facilities of the C.N.R. no doubt some of this agricultural produce might still have reached a market, but it could only have done so at a much higher cost to the producer, and the quantity would necessarily have been negligible...for practically all the crops which enter into the figures above enumerated were placed in freight cars at points where the only rail transportation obtainable was that provided by Canadian National Railways.

These crops come from far scattered districts...in many cases from sparsely populated communities . . . but they are the result of the labours of men and women who each year create millions and millions of dollars of new wealth for Canada. In this work the C.N.R. is their partner and helper.

As is well known the crop movements of recent years have been much below normal . . . much below the standard of productivity of our prairies and agricultural areas, and much below the volume which the C. N. R. is equipped to handle. The figures quoted should, therefore, be considered in that light.

The carriage of agricultural produce is, of course, only one of the activities of the C.N.R. In every branch of rail transportation it is equipped to give the best of service . . . all the year round . . under all conditions . . . economically, courteously, and competently. Your patronage is respectfully solicited.

During the present Summer season the C.N.R. is providing special fares and excursions between points throughout Canada. These are exceptional travel bargains. The nearest C.N.R. Agent will be glad to give full particulars.

Quintuplets Receive Present of Framed Birth Certificates

Provincial Government Presents Rarely Issued "Official" Certificates in Individual Frames.

Callander, Ont.—The Dionne quintuplets received a new gift from the Ontario Government this week when five individually-framed birth certificates arrived at the Dafoe hospital from the Legislative Buildings in Toronto.

The certificates, signed by Provincial Secretary Harry C. Nixon and S. J. Manchester, director of the division of vital statistics, are of the "official type," seldom issued. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe said they would be hung in the playroom of the hospital.

Although all five of the babies lost weight during the week-end, the fact failed to concern Dr. Dafoe or his hospital staff. "We expect these losses," he remarked, "and they mean absolutely nothing. The babies maintain their excellent progress and slight losses in weight are to be expected from time to time. They are rgained in a short time."

Motives are Badly Mixed in Maternity Hospital Dash

Police Escort Taxi Through City, But Lady Just Wanted To Visit Her Friend and Had But Half Hour.

Kansas City.—The woman in this comedy had a baby's layette in one hand, and she told the taxi-driver:

"Please hurry me to the ——— maternity hospital. I must get there within the next few minutes." The driver nodded and speeded away.

After a few blocks at a breakneck clip, a screaming siren called a halt.

"Officer," the taxi driver shouted excitedly, "I'm taking this woman to the maternity hospital."

"Go ahead," said the speed cop, "my buddy and I will escort you."

Across town, sirens screaming, went the motorcycles and taxicab. At the hospital door, the anxious driver asked his fare, "Lady, are you all right?"

His fare had fainted. The ride had been too much.

Orderlies bore the woman to the expectant mother's ward. She regained consciousness in a patient's gown.

"Where am I?" she asked weakly.

"Why, you're in the hospital, just where you said you wanted to come." murmured a nurse soothingly. The woman fainted again.

When revived, she explained she had purchased a layette for a friend and had only a half hour in which to reach the hospital during visiting hours when she called the taxicab.

She left, a bit miffed, refusing to disclose her name.

HE'S BEST JAM MAKER.

SHICAGO.—Women, so far as bachelor David Hipple is concerned, may invade barber shops and otherwise take over masculine affairs as much as they please.

David, a 48-year-old farmer from near Elgin, this week bested 100 women in a jam contest at the Cook county fair. His blackberry jam took first prize.

HERE WE EXPOSE SHORT CHANGE ARTISTS

By J. V. McAREE in The Mail and Empire.

DETECTIVE MAGAZINES which have done so much to reduce the moral tone of the community and debauch literary taste and are read by us with as much avidity as by tuckpointers, chiropodists and college professors, usually contain some pious bumblings by a states attorney or governor to the effect that crime must be curbed. These are intended to give tone to the publication, but they never give tone to us for we refuse to read them. They also contain now and then some article which might well be useful to the general public in that it puts people on guard against some particular kind of swindle. An illustration is provided by True Detective Mysteries for July, which publishes one entited "Beware of the 'Hype Man," by Samuel Chase. We do not know whether a real hype man ever operated in this province, though a simple form of his swindle is employed by all short-change artists. We find it rather difficult to follow the complicated movements by which the hype man performs his swindle, but those more used to making change will no doubt be able to do so.

BILL MURPHY'S LUCK.

This racket seems to have been discovered accidentally by a man named Bill Murphy in Indianapolis. He asked for a pound of coffee, and produced several bills, tendering one to the clerk. When he received his change, he was surprised to learn he had given the clerk a twenty instead of a one. The clerk then suggested that he exchange the smaller bills for a ten and Mr. Murphy agreed. But, in counting them out, the clerk discovered an error. Says Mr. Chase: "There is something peculiar about money. It seems that it will stand just so much shuffling around and then confusion ensues." In trying to arrive at the proper change the money was passed back and forth several times. Finally Mr. Murphy became exasperated and said: "Here," shoving a handful of bills toward the clerk, "give me my twenty-dollar bill back and we're all square." The sheaf of notes added up correctly this time, and the clerk passed over the twenty-dollar note. Mr. Murphy, returning home, counted the money two or three times to make sure that he had not been a loser. To his great delight he found that he was a winner of ten dollars. Then followed many labourious hours in which he reviewed the transaction again and again to discover at just what point the clerk had made the mistake. In the end he found it, and we do not suppose that Mr. Murphy worked thereafter.

TWENTY, TEN AND ONE.

It is said that he worked out a dozen variations of his original swindle which was at first called "the flop" because at one part of the proceedings the swindler would flop the bundle of notes on the desk before the cashier and ask him to count them. He was a student of human nature, and knew just the kind of man he could confuse by an intimidating manner. He practiced and preached boldness. "Don't let them suckers make you wait," he would say to a confederate who was inclined to await his turn in a store. "We got calls to make." Now the props for the original hype racket consist of a twenty-dollar bill, a ten, and a one, all folded lengthwise. The twenty and the ten are in the left-hand trousers pocket, the twenty on the outside, and the one in the right pocket. The swindler enters a store and asks for an article costing less than a dollar. He offers the twenty and when he receives the change, including a ten, a five, four ones and some silver, he regards it with astonishment.

CHEATING HIMSELF!

"Did I give you a twenty-dollar note?" he asks. "I meant to give you a one," and he reaches into his right-hand pocket and produces the folded one. This is to impress the clerk with the fact that he had a one dollar bill which he would naturally use. He has now in his possession thirty dollars in bills and some change, the silver and one of the tens in his left-hand pocket, and he restores his one dollar bill to his right. The rest of the money is in his hand, and he shuffles it, remarking: "If you don't mind, will you give me a ten-dollar bill for these smaller ones?" And as he holds the money out he switches among the smaller bills a ten, and hands to the clerk a ten, a five and four ones. The clerk turns to the till, glad to have the smaller bills, and produces a ten. The gyp does not hand over his bundle, or, as they say, flop it, until the clerk's ten is in his hands. This note he slips swiftly into his left-hand pocket where the other ten already reposes, and at the same moment tosses the bundle of smaller bills down on the counter, a movement that never fails to distract the eye. The clerk counts the money, and finds that he has an extra ten. This ruse is to suggest to him the bonafides of a customer who is so careless that he short-changes himself.

TEN DOLLARS DISAPPEARS.

He hands the extra ten back to the customer, who drops it in his pocket where the one-dollar bill reposes. Again the money is counted and of course there is only nine dollars in the bundle. The swindler then reaches into his pocket and draws out the one and the ten, remarking that if he had given the one instead of the twenty in the first place there would have been no confusion. This is to remind the victim that it was really a twenty-dollar bill which was given him at the beginning. He then says: "You have nine there. You might as well take it all and give me back my twenty," and with this he adds the one and the ten to the heap. The clerk counts it and finds it correct, hands over the twenty and the deal is closed. But do not forget that the swindler had already two ten-dollar bills, one of his own and the one the clerk had given him, stowed in his left-hand pocket. The clerk's ten represents the profit on the transaction. Mr. Chase remarks that smart people are usually the easiest prey for this manoeuvre. The slower witted are more likely to stop in the middle of it, remarking: "Wait a minute. Let's see where we are," and if the blustering of the crook does not stampede them they are saved.

Orchardside

We are sorry to report Mrs. Ed Hummel seriously sick. We all hope for a speedy recovery.

Miss Matilda Wilson, Chesterville, visited Miss Grace Cunningham for a few days. Messrs. David and Walter Beckstead are spending a few days in Williamsburg.

ORAL SPEEDOMETER FOR SAFE DRIVING

Timely Advice Dealt is Out by Attachment Working With Phonograph Record.

AMONG the reported new inventions for motor cars is one called the Oral Speedometer, which operates with a phonograph attachment. When the speed reaches 30 miles an hour, it remarks: "The city speed limit has been passed. Is there a motorcycle policeman behind you?"

At 35 miles per hour: "Too fast for city driving. We hope you're in the country."

At 45 m.p.h.: "Your car is still under control, but watch the car behind the car ahead of you. Have you had your brakes tested recently?"

At 50 m.p.h.: "Your responsibility is increasing. Keep your eyes on the road."

At 60 m.p.h.: "Are your insurance premiums paid to date?"

At 70 m.p.h.: "You drive. This attachment will do the praying."

At 80 m.p.h.: "Someone will probably have this car repaired. If so, we thank you for the sale of a new speedometer to replace this one which in a few moments is going to h—— along with you."

FORGOTTEN IN NAME, REMEMBERED IN WILL, BARBER MAY COLLECT

Vancouver.—John P. Bennett, 68-year-old Vancouver barber, expected to inherit one-sixth of the fortune accumulated by the late Sir Catchick Paul Chater, "father of Hong Kong," on grounds he is the brother whose name Lady Chater forgot.

Lady Maria Christina Chater died last March, aged 79. Her will includes this provision:

"For my brother, whose name I cannot remember, one-sixth of my estate in trust."

"His whereabouts," she added, "I have not been aware of for many years, but his last known place of abode was Vancouver, British Columbia."

"I can't understand why she couldn't remember my name," said Mr. Bennett. "She is a great friend of my daughter (Mrs. E. T. Swanson of Vancouver), and stayed with her here last year. I haven't seen her since 1917, when she passed through here."

Lady Maria named four sisters and the brother, each to receive one-sixth of the estate. Mr. Bennett and his daughter have forwarded photographs and other identification to Hong Kong.

Mr. Bennett was born in Sweden and came here in 1890. He visited China once in 1900 as a barber on the old liner Empress of Japan.

Mrs. Colin MacGregor and Mrs. S. Lowe returned home Tuesday evening after spending a few days with friends in Carleton Place.

The regular meeting of Morewood Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. Clarke Smith, Wednesday, August 7, with 38 members and several visitors present. Plans were made for an ice cream social to be held on the church lawn Friday evening. Donations were received for the bazaar in October. Those serving lunch were Mrs. Clark Smith, Mrs. Wm. Barrington, Mrs. Keith Carruthers, Mrs. Vernon Fetterly, and Mrs. Milford Glasgow.

A large number of members and guests assembled at the home of Miss Sybil Smirle on Friday for the August meeting of the Crusaders' Mission Band of Morewood Presbyterian church. As it was the last meeting that Margaret Nimmo would attend before leaving for her new home in Athelstan, Que., she was presented with a Morrocco-bound Bible. The address was read by the president, Mary MacLeod, and Isabel Hunter made the presentation. Miss Lill Feeley and Mrs. Colin MacGregor were appointed assistants in place of Mrs. Nimmo who has been the faithful and able assistant for several years. After lunch a vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Nimmo to Mrs. Smirle for her hospitality.

THE WEEKLY EDITOR.

Belleville Intelligencer

THE EDITOR of the Napanee Beaver is making a trip to Russia to study conditions there with a view no doubt of acquiring first-hand knowledge of one of the most interesting countries in the world and one of the most interesting experiments in mass manipulation of the human race. The Beaver editor, before going, makes several observations about the editorial policy of the weekly press in which he says that "a study of the weekly press shows that in an increasing way it is giving intelligent consideration to international matters." There was a tme not long ago when the weekly editor confined his editorials to the town hall, which needed repairs; to the fire hall, which needed a new coat of paint; to the policeman whose uniform had shown signs of wear, and was glossy at the elbows, or to the lack of shed room for the farmers' horses on a Saturday." All that is changed now, in his opinion, and the Weekly Press is turning its attention, editorially, to world affairs, and giving opinons on why the Italians should keep out of Ethiopia, and why the Japs should not be allowed to swallow up Manchuria for breakfast and China for lunch. However, we still think that the Weekly Press can best employ itself editorially and locally with local affairs in which its readers are more interested than in international complications thousands of miles away. The metropolitan dailies and magazines have experts who can write with intimate knowledge on world events, and their views are easily available to those interested, but only a weekly editor can create an interesting article about the town hall, the fire hall, or the market building back home, or the horseshoe game the other night down by the blacksmith shop, besides the hundred and one other things that the city chaps only hazily remember as incidents of childhood. No Siree, the weekly editor is a Specialist, just as big and important in his class as the guy who can write a column about Manchukuo, mostly culled from the Encyclopaedia Britannica. However, we are all in favour of editors, weekly or otherwise, visiting Russia, or anywhere else they can wangle transportation to, as a personal benefit in added knowledge, only, we'd like to have them inform us how those trips are financed, what they use for money, etc.

Marjorie was visiting her Uncle Frank, who had a handsome Manx cat. She looked at it in a puzzled way and finally got up and walked slowly around it.

"Well, Marjorie," said uncle Frank, "how do you like Bobby?"

"I don't like it," replied Marjorie; "it isn't finished."

ELECTRIC SHOCK HAZARD.

IN this age of electricity, the latest hazard added to life on the farm is electrical shock. The passage of electrical current of considerable voltage through a man causes paralysis of the nerve centres, entailing the stoppage of breathing. The failure of the normal tests of life should not be taken as evidence of death. Persons have been rescuscitated after hours of effort although ordinary signs of life were absent. In cases where the contact was of short duration and where artificial respiration has been applied without delay there is a better chance of recovery. Although, in reality, resuscitation from electrical shock is a case for the medical man, or at a pinch for those men of the power and telephone companies well-trained in the art of artificial respiration, there are certain things that everybody can do. In shock accidents the victim is usually thrown clear of the live wire or apparatus, but if such is not the case the obvious thing to do is to clear him at once from contact, the greatest care being taken that the helper himself is insulated from contact. Notwithstanding the fact that success in resuscitation decreases in hot summer months, warmth is of great assistance. The patient should be wrapped in warm blankets and hot water bottles applied. A person partially shocked should be made to lie down, and it is a point to be remembered that, owing to lack of tone of the blood vessels, it may be fatal to allow a resuscitated patient to sit up or stand. Artificial respiration, of course is of the greatest importance and should be kept up for at least four hours until the patient breathes or until the signs of the onrush of rigor mortis are definite

NEW CASH CROP FOR ONTARIO FARMERS.

Experiments Show Poplar Trees Can be Grown for Pulp and Paper Making in Ten Years. —$200,000 a Year Benefit.

IT IS ESTIMATED farmers of Eastern Ontario could benefit to the extent of approximately $200,000 per year by growing poplar trees to be used as wood for pulp and paper making. Scientists have been working on the problem of wood for pulp making purposes for some time and it seems likely that within a few years farmers will be using what would otherwise be waste land for the growing of wood for pulp.

An article in a recent issue of The Scientific American by R. G. Skerrett tells of the advances which have been made in this direction. The article says:

"After 18 years of research in cross-breeding poplars to find a new source of wood for papermaking, Dr. Ralph H. McKee of Columbia University and his associates have announced hybrids that can profitably be cut at the end of eight or ten years and that grow 10 to 14 times as fast as the wild poplars now used in large quantities. Experimental groves of the new hybrids are flourishing in Maine, New York, Florida, Wisconsin and North Carolina (though stocks are not yet available for commercial distribution). 'Our calculations,' Dr. McKee says, 'make it reasonably certain that more dollars per acre-year of wood can be grown than can be realized per acre-year in wheat or other farm crops.' In a country where the per capita consumption of paper is close to 225 pounds annually, paper mills have stripped nearby sources of pulp wood, and dependence on foreign sources is growing at a disquieting rate. The McKee poplars may be planted on unpromising waste land and in areas where they will greatly help to arrest soil erosion."

The information in this article is of interest to almost every farmer in this distrct. With pulp and paper mills at Ottawa, Hawkesbury and Cornwall and with means of transportation and road systems in increasing numbers, this is a matter which may well be considered seriously by the farmers themselves, and by the Departments of Agriculture of Province and Dominion. The most desirable feature of the proposal is that the pulp producing trees can be grown on land which would otherwise be waste land.

If the trees will grow sufficiently in ten years to produce a crop of pulp wood, then every farmer sixty years old or under should commence at once to plant a section of trees every year. In ten years' time, he would be harvesting the fruits of his labour. Once planted, the trees require little attention until they are ready for cutting. That these trees have been grown successfully in New York State and in Maine, means that they are almost certain to thrive in Eastern Ontario.

Howard Smith Paper Mills Cornwall Division has quite a large plot of land immediately to the east of their mill set out in poplars, as a test plot to demonstrate what can be done in this direction. The plan to plant poplars is one which should be investigated and acted upon at once, especially in Eastern Ontario.

Ontario Refuses to Give Aid Trekkers Stranded at Ottawa

Premier Hepburn Will Not Repeat Transportation Offer Made When Hikers Were at Oshawa.

Toronto.—Neither food nor transportation will be provided by the Ontario Government to the On-to-Ottawa trekkers now stranded at Ottawa. Premier Hepburn declared Sunday.

"That's definite and final," he said. "I made one offer to bring these people back and they turned it down. They can walk home. I don't think that will make them look any more foolish in the eyes of the public than they do already."

Premier Hepburn offered to transport the trekkers back to Toronto while they were at Oshawa en route to the Capital

Pomp and Splendor of Old England Unfolded in Moat London Tower

* * * *

'Our kynge went forth to Normandy
"With grace and myght of chivalry."

Late last night, beneath the dark battlements of the Tower of London treble voices soared in the Agincourt hymn. As the boys sang, the men and women of mediaeval London rushed forward to press about the charger of King Henry V.

It was November, 1415. The King was returning from his Crispin's Day victory at Agincourt. Before him rode the Mayor and Aldermen of London; behind came the captive Dukes of Orleans and Bourbon and the mounted archers.

"The God for hym wrought marvelously . . . " Still the hymn rose in triumph. Men-at-arms cleared the way. Leaves of silver were strewn before the unsmiling King, close-wrapped in his purple cloak; laurel boughs fell in his path; gold coins were showered before him. Through the clamourous streets of London King Henry was riding to St. Paul's.

So, as the hours passed, as the floodlights shone more radiantly on the walls, and, high above, turrets and bastions were etched against the night-blue sky, a living tapestry unfurled itself in the moat of the Tower of London.

A false wall — looking genuine enough under the glare of the searchlights—has been built in the moat, with the Tower rising high above it. At the dress rehearsal, writes the Morning Post correspondent, the wide space before the wall became, as it were, a mirror in which we saw reflected the colour and pomp of an older England.

First, the Pilgrim's—Franklyn and Squire and Wife of Bath, Friar, Pardoner and Cook, all the people of Chaucer's tales—jogged through on their way to the shrine of St. Thomas at Canterbury. Nearly half a century later, the voices of the singing boys greeted King Henry:

"Deo gratias Anglia redde pro victoria."

The Princes were murdered in the Tower; Fifteenth Century revellers danced around the maypole; Lady Jane Grey waited for death. In our mirror we saw the jousting at Westminster in 1570, when the Earl of Oxford with Lord Charles Howard, Sir Henry Lee and Christopher Hatton, held the lists against all comers. Armoured knights careered down the lists; lances splintered; above, Elizabeth on her throne, waited to acclaim the victors.

THE GREAT FIRE.

Later still, with banners of orange and green and blue, red and yellow and white, streaming in the wind the Trained Bands of the Seventeenth Century London marched up the moat. In the London of Charles II. and Samuel Pepys we saw the first sparks and smoke of the Great Fire and the turmoil as the blaze spread and the crimson glare beat against the walls of the Tower— illuminating a sentry who, careless of the pageantry below, marched steadfastly on his beat high above the moat.

Spectators had full measure. Although the great crowd scenes—in which hundreds of players shared—seemed more immediately successful than the intimate playlets, staged ingeniously in a three-tiered tower, this was because a high wind gave little chance for voices to carry across the arena. But the spectacle was the thing, and Major Goold Walker, the producer, who also planned the scenario, can be sure that the Tower Hill Improvement Fund will benefit by this most distinguished Jubilee show.

One picture, above all, will remain in memory; that of King Henry riding, a sombre figure, among the shouting crowd, while boys' voices rise in the triumphant hymn:

Oure Kynge went forth to Normandy . . .
The God for hym wrought marvelously.

Here the Past lived indeed.

THE PERFECT WOMAN?

What are the characteristics of the perfect woman? A Danish magazine has been asking its readers and from responses to the amusing inquiry it is gathered that the perfect woman is she—who reads the paper without putting the pages in the wrong order; who reads the leading article in the daily paper; who does not always try to have the last word in an argument; who speaks well of her friends in their absence; who pays no attention to the neighbour's gossip; who never goes to the bargain sales; who always gives her exact age; who never wishes she were a man.

SUMMER DIARRHOEA.

A SUDDEN INCREASE in the number of stools, especially if they are loose and watery, is a sign of illness. Diarrhoea in children may occur at any season of the year, but it is much more common in warm weather.

An attack of diarrhoea often marks the onset of some acute disease, such as a cold, pneumonia, or whooping-cough. It may be the result of a digestive upset, due to improper feedings, or to an infection of the bowels from contaminated milk.

Diarrhoea in a baby is always serious. Whenever the stools become watery, or when either mucus or blood appear in the stools, stop all feedings and send for the doctor. While awaiting his arrival, the child should be given cool, boiled, unsweetened water.

The rapid loss of body fluids which accompanies a severe diarrhoea, particularly if the condition is associated with vomiting, my cause an acidosis. It is, therefore, important to maintain the body fluids. and that is one reason why the child is given water, in reasonable amounts, every hour.

The summer is no longer the menace it used to be for the young child. However, when it is realized that each year over three thousand young Canadian lives are brought to an end as a result of diarrhoea, it will be appreciated how serious the situation still is.

Because diarrhoea is always serious, medical care should be secured promptly. Too often a life is lost because the mother thought the diarrhoea was a result of teething, or else that a dose of castor oil would clear the condition up.

Comparatively few breast-fed babies are troubled with summer diarrhoea. The baby on artificial feedings and all young children are particularly sensitive to the ill effects of impure milk. Pasteurized milk should be used, and if it cannot be obtained, then the milk should be boiled.

No matter how pure the milk may be when brought into the house, it will not remain so unless it is covered to keep out flies, insects and dust, and if it is not put on the ice to prevent bacteria and disease germs from growing in it. Milk is a food, and when it is warm, it provides a very satisfactory feeding-place for some germs.

The occurrence of diarrhoea means. at least. that the feedings need to be changed or regulated, or that the child is developing some other infection, such as bronchitis or measles, which upsets the stomach, or that the bowel is itself infected by germs, usually from contaminated milk. In all cases, diarrhoea is to be regarded as a serious condition.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Conducted By
MISS HELEN LACEY, B. H. Sc.

AN APPLE A DAY.

AN APPLE A DAY may not actually keep the doctor away, but the variety they add to our menus will certainly make our meals more interesting. And we must have interest in food in order to be healthy.

Apples are one of our most popular fruits and whether fresh, dried, evaporated or canned, are wholesome, easily prepared, attractive and palatable at all times.

APPLE BETTY.

3 chopped apples
½ cup brown sugar
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup water
1 cup buttered crumbs

Butter a baking dish; spread with ¼ of the crumbs. Add half the apples; sprinkle with sugar and spice, mixed. Repeat one-quarter of crumbs, one-half of apples and remaining sugar; add lemon rind, juice and water. Spread with remaining crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven 45 minutes or until apples are soft. Cover during the first part of baking to prevent burning. Serve hot with cream or hard sauce.

APPLE SAUCE CAKE.

1 cup apple sauce
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup sugar
½ cup seeded raisins
½ cup butter
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Cream the butter, add sugar and blend thoroughly. Mix soda in apple sauce and add to butter and sugar. Mix and sift flour and spices, saving a little flour to dust over raisins. Add flour mixture to first mixture and lastly add raisins. Bake in a moderate oven.

BOILED APPLE TAPIOCA.

½ cup pearl tapioca
2½ cups boiling water
½ teaspoon salt
6 sour apples
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter

Soak tapioca several hours in sufficient cold water to cover. Drain; add boiling water, sugar and salt; cook in double boiler until almost transparent. Wipe, core, pare and quarter apples; add to tapioca and boil until they are tender; add butter and nutmeg. Serve hot with plain or whipped cream.

APPLE, ORANGE & PEACH SALAD

Cut into cubes, equal quantities of apples, peaches, oranges and celery. Mix with salad dressing. Serve in mounds on a bed of lettuce. This salad may be made into individual salads or may be served in a bowl.

WALDORF SALAD.

1 cup tart apples
1 cup diced celery
½ cup walnuts

Mix diced apples and celery with mayonnaise or cream dressing. Just before serving add walnuts, broken in pieces. Serve on lettuce leaves and garnish with celery hearts or cheese carrots.

APPLE DUMPLINGS.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter
2-3 cup milk
6 apples
6 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in butter. Add milk gradually to form a soft dough, with as little mixing as possible. Roll into a thin sheet and cut into six rounds. Wipe, pare, quarter and core apples. Place five or six pieces of apple on each round of dough; sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar mixed. Draw the dough up around the pieces of apple to cover. Steam or bake until the apples are tender. Serve with cream and sugar or a pudding sauce.

On an average, apples are 84.6 per cent water; 13 per cent carbohydrates; 0.4 per cent protein; 0.5 per cent fat; 0.3 per cent minerals, and 1.2 per cent cellulose. One large apple provides 100 calories.

Fruits are classified as flavour fruits and nutritive fruits. The apple comes under both of these headings.

Corn on the Cob should not be boiled for more than 10 minutes. Salt should not be added to the water until just before the cooking is finished. If salt is added at the beginning of the cooking, or if the corn is over-cooked, it will be tough and hard.

Questions should be addressed to Miss Helen Lacey, Chesterville Record.

Late Comer: "What's the name of the selection the orchestra is playing?

Neighbour: "Go Feather Your Nest.

Late Comer: "Go jump in the lake. I asked you a civil question."

AUNT LIDA PENNY

THE NEW HENHOUSE that Amos Wood had built was like a little cottage — warm and tight and well lighted. There had been no real need for it; the old henhouse was in good condition, although somewhat weather-worn; but Amos had a passion for carpentry; his house fairly bristled with his handiwork—cupboards, bay windows, porches, wash benches and footstools. So when a slack season had given him an unexpected amount of leisure, he had decided to build a new henhouse.

Amos was on his way to look at the henhouse now. It stood at some distance from the house and beyond the barn where his property bordered upon the woods. He was thinking that in a few days he should move the chickens from the old house into the new. There was a pleased smile upon his face as he approached the new henhouse. There was no doubt that it was a very fine henhouse indeed. He ran his hand appraisingly over the clapboards. Then he opened the door.

There was a shrill exclamation. There in the henhouse confronting him was a little, stockily-built old woman with bright, dark eyes that were at once timid and defiant. Amos stepped back in amazement, but not before his startled vision had grasped in detail the picture of that square little old woman with her background of a bed, a chair, a small oil stove and a packing-box table.

Clutching at the door frame as if to steady herself, the old woman kept her frightened, defiant eyes fixed on Amos' face.

"Well," she said, "I s'pose you're Amos Wood. I've been expectin' you. I'm your Aunt Lida Penny. I guess you don't know me, seein' you haven't laid eyes on me since you was a boy."

She paused, then began again, and her words fairly tumbled over one another:

"I s'pose you wonder what I'm doin' here. Well, maybe you know and maybe you don't know that since I was left alone in the world three year ago I've been passeled out on my relations. I lived a year at my husband's niece's till she hinted I better move on; then I stayed with your cousin, Marvin Wood, till he thought he'd done his duty me; then I stayed nine months to Ada Wren's up Tully way; then I come to your cousin Alton's; and now I guess it's your turn to have me."

She grasped the door frame more firmly; she was trembling visibly now.

Alton carried me and my things over from Gesham yesterday. Your folks wasn't home; the house was all locked up, but Alton went right back. It was cold and windy. I might've been left to the north pole for all anybody cared. I got to thinkin' strong about things, and I got mad clear through. I went trampin' round the place, and I found this henhouse. Thinks I, 'I'm sick and tired of bein' passeled out on my relations, and they don't like it no more'n I do. I'm goin' to set up housekeepin' right here in this henhouse. I've carted my furniture round three years with never a chance to see a stick of it. I can live here well as not, and the old henhouse is good enough for anybody's hens. Amos's wife'll be glad enough not to have an old woman underfoot.' You won't have to do nothin' but to bring me a meal of victuals now and then. I can earn quite a little crocheting lace. I won't be scarcely any trouble to you."

In spite of the old woman's determination, there was something passionately beseeching about her. Amos stood staring at her. Finding a strange aunt living in his henhouse was probably the most astonishing thing that had ever happened to him.

"But this is my henhouse!" he blurted out."

"I guess your hens ain't sufferin' for want of it. They're housed a sight better now than lots of folks."

"Well—but—I'll tell you how it is, Aunt Lida. This was built for a henhouse and meant for a henhouse. It isn't a proper place for folks. You come along to the house. My wife, she'll be glad to have you visit us for a spell."

"I'm goin' to stay here."

"You better come, Aunt Lida," said Amos.

"I'm goin' to stay here," Aunt Lida replied.

Amos stared at her helplessly. Then he turned and crossed the yard to the house.

"Carrie!" he called.

The kitchen door opened, and a woman stepped out on the porch, followed by a fair-haired young girl.

"Carrie, Aunt Lida Penny has set up housekeeping in my new henhouse."

"What! What are you talking about, Amos?"

"Aunt Lida Penny's come to live with us for a spell, and we weren't home, and she set up housekeepin' in the henhouse. She says she's going to stay right there."

"The land sakes!"

With Amos and Ellen following her, Mrs. Wood started hastily down to the henhouse.

"How do you do, Aunt Lida?" said Mrs. Wood in a cheerful, masterful voice. "I've never seen you before, but I used to hear Mother Wood speak of you. Amos says you've come to stay with us a spell. I'm glad to see you. Come right along to the house."

"I ain't a-comin'," Aunt Lida said. "You're real kind and I appreciate it. But I'm stayin' here."

"O Aunt Lida, that's nonsense! You can't live in the henhouse. Of course, it's nice and snug, and I told Amos it was much too good for the hens, painted so nice and good windows and everything; but it wouldn't look right for you to be living here. You come along to the house and stay with us just as long as you like. I've got a nice, sunny spare room."

"I'm goin' to stay right here," Aunt Lida repeated. "I don't care how it looks. I'm mad clear through, the way things have been goin' with me the last three years. Even if I haven't got any money, I guess I'm a free individual. 'Tain't my fault I've been a burden on my relations. And you can just know I don't like it a bit better'n they do, nor one tenth as much. I'm goin' to stay right here."

"But, Aunt Lida—"

"You needn't say a word. It won't do any good. I'm goin' to stay here."

"But I never heard of such a thing!" Mrs. Wood cried in despair. "You come—"

"I'm goin' to stay right here."

"Well, remember," said Mrs. Wood feebly. "I'll be looking for you all afternoon. I'll go in now and get the spare room ready, and you can come along in sometime before supper."

She turned away and went hesitatingly up the path. Amos and Ellen followed her. The child's eyes sparkled with excitement.

"O mother, did you see inside?" she cried "There's a bed and a stove and everything! It looks like a cunning little cottage. But, O mother, can't you just hear folks talking? They'll say we keep our aunt in the henhouse!"

The colour flamed across Mrs. Wade's face. She seemed to hear Sarah Wade, well-known as a bearer of tales, whispering to an interested friend, "Amos Wood's Aunt Lida Penny come to live with, and Carrie Wood, she wouldn't even let her into the house. Where do you suppose they have her?"

"Where?"

"In the henhouse!"

Aunt Lida did not come to the house before supper or bedtime or the next day or the next. Weeks passed, and still Aunt Lida lived in the henhouse. In vain Mrs. Wood and Amos tried to induce her to come to the house. She met Mrs. Wood's arguments unmoved; she put Amos to rout with a few words.

Ellen's prediction as to the gossip Aunt Lida's living in the henhouse would occasion was all too true.

"So your husband's aunt is staying with you, Mrs. Wood?" a neighbour said one day at meeting of the Sewing Circle.

Instantly silence fell upon the room. There was a concerted bending forward and craning of necks.

Mrs. Wood's cheeks became crimson. "Yes," she replied, casually turning the hem of an apron string. "She is living in a little house on our land. I wanted her to stay with me and I've a guest room she could have as well as not; but prefers to keep house by herself."

Mrs. Wood was almost hysterical when she reached home that afternoon.

"I can't stand it!" she wailed. "The whole town is talking! I don't know how I'm going to hold up my head and have this thing go on! Amos, you've got to do something to get her to come here."

"But how am I going to do it?" Amos asked heavily.

"How are you going to do it? Land sakes, how should I know? All I know is, I guess I'd try! I guess if I was a man I'd do something more than go meaching up to her and saying, 'Won't you please come to the house, Aunt Lida?' If nobody else'll do anything, I'm going this minute and give her a good talking to. I I guess I'm not afraid of a little old woman no bigger'n a pint of cider!"

Mrs. Wood stalked angrily down to the henhouse.

"Now, Aunt Lida, you're getting us into a peck of trouble by staying in this henhouse when I'd be tickled to death to have you to the house. Folks are talking. They're saying we're too mean and stingy to take you in, and are keeping you in the henhouse. I don't know what-all harm such talk will do us! Like as not Amos won't get elected selectman on account of it."

For an instant Aunt Lida looked white and frightened. Then her face hardened. "Let 'em talk!" she said. "Maybe it does make you feel bad, and maybe Amos won't get elected selectman, but that don't measure up as nothin' to the way I've been feelin' these three years. When Alton left me here that day, and it was cold, and you was away, and I knew you wouldn't want me anyhow, I just suddenly got hard and set as a stone! Nothin' could have kept me from going to housekeepin' in this henhouse; nothin' can keep me from it now!"

Mrs. Wood returned helplessly to the house.

The problem presented by Aunt Lida Penny remained unsolved. And her continued residence in the henhouse was still a topic of gossip among the townspeople. Certainly timid little Mr. Tibbets, the Congregational minister, of his own volition never would have called to see the Woods regarding Aunt Lida Penny. It was evident that some pressure had been brought to bear upon him.

Mrs. Wood was alone when he called. "I have come, Mrs. Wood, upon a —a rather delicate matter," he said timidly. "Of course, I understand—"

"That'll do!" cried Mrs. Wood angrily. "I know what you've come for. You needn't say another word. I'm not keeping Aunt Lida Penny in that henhouse any more than you are! I'd give anything if she'd come and stay here in the house, but she won't. Haven't I fairly gone down on my knees to her? She won't come; that's all there is to it!"

The instant the perturbed Mr. Tibbets left, Mrs. Wood, with her face grim with determination, started for the henhouse. Turning the corner of the barn, she suddenly stopped short. From a window of the henhouse there came a puff of black smoke. For the space of a heartbeat Mrs. Wood stood staring; then she broke into a run.

"Aunt Lida!" she called. "Fire, fire! Aunt Lida!"

She jerked open the henhouse door, and instantly the interior burst into flames. Aunt Lida was not there. Mrs. Wood stepped back with a breath of relief. Then she ran to the pump and caught up a pail of water.

Suddenly, above the roar of the flames, there rang out a tragic cry. "My things! Everything I got in the world!" And Aunt Lida rushed toward the flaming doorway.

"Aunt Lida! You'll be burned! Don't you dare go in there!"

Mrs. Wood caught her and drew her back.

"My things! My things!" Aunt Lida struggled to free herself, but after a little while she was quiet. The two women stood watching the burning henhouse.

"You better come with me now, Aunt Lida," Mrs. Wood suggested when the roof had crashed in, and the fire had burned itself nearly out.

Aunt Lida turned without a word and followed her up the path.

"Now sit in the rocker, and I'll make you a good strong cup of tea," Mrs Wood said as they entered the kitchen.

Aunt Lida seated herself. She seemed very calm, but her eyes were dark and stricken. She accepted the tea and drank it.

"I guess I'll have a cup, too," Mrs. Wood said. 'I'm all a-tremble. When I turned the corner of the barn and saw the smoke and thought you were in there—" She paused, noticing the revealing flash of Aunt Lida's eyes. The old woman had thought that her niece had set the henhouse on fire! Mrs. Wood gasped. "Aunt Lida," she said tentatively, "what do you suppose started that fire?"

Aunt Lida was silent. Finally she murmured miserably, "I s'pose I must have done it. I remember now, I left some grease tryin' out on the stove, and I sort of suspected the other day that the pan 'twas in had sprung a leak."

Aunt Lida slept in the guest room that night. The next morning she asked for a crochet needle and some thread. All day she sat quietly by the window, crocheting.

"I believe she's going to be real contented, now she's here," Mrs. Wood whispered happily to Amos.

At night Aunt Lida handed Mrs. Wood a length of crocheted lace. "That's to pay for to-day's keep," she said.

"Why, Aunt Lida, we don't want pay!"cried Mrs. Wood. "We're glad to have you here."

"I want you should take it."

"O Aunt Lida, it makes me feel bad for you to—"

"You take it." Aunt Lida repeated.

Aunt Lida spent the next day in the same manner. In the evening she presented Mrs. Wood with another length of lace. "This is to pay for my keep to-day," she said. Day after day the same thing happened.

"I don't know how I can stand it." Mrs. Wood said to her husband. "It makes me feel like—like dirt! And she's getting so thin and old-looking. O Amos, what shall we do? If this goes on much longer it'll kill me! It is worse than the henhouse; it keeps wearing on me and wearing on me till I don't know what to do."

Amos grunted helplessly. Aunt Lida Penny a tragic figure of revolt against the humiliating dependence of the last three years, handing forth her lace every night and saying, "This is to pay for my day's keep," presented a baffling problem.

"But blessed if I wouldn't feel the same way!" Amos muttered, and a moment later an inspiration came to him. The next evening he sat for a long time, drawing.

"What are you going to build now, father?" Ellen asked.

Amos made no reply. Mrs. Wood arose and looked over his shoulder.

"Oh—" she began.

"Go sit down," Amos directed with a significant nod toward Aunt Lida.

Aunt Lida Penny never visited the site of the henhouse. All day long she sat crocheting. She looked white and old and was very quiet. If she noticed any unusual sounds or bustle around the Wood premises that summer, she gave no sign.

One day in August Mrs. Wood stepped into the kitchen, where Aunt Lida sat, and urged her to come outdoors. "It's terribly hot here, Aunt Lida." Come, I've got something to show you."

Mrs. Wood was smiling. Behind her Ellen appeared, with her face pink with excitement.

"Yes, come, Aunt Lida!" said Ellen. "It's the cutest thing!"

They drew the old woman to her feet. They started across the yard, and presently turned the corner of the barn.

"There, Aunt Lida," Ellen cried, "what do you think of it?"

Aunt Lida stood motionless, looking at a tiny white cottage with trim green shutters and a little porch.

"Come, Aunt Lida," Mrs. Wood said gently. "Come and see it. This is your own little house. Amos built it for you."

They went on down the path. Amos appeared.

"Well, Aunt Lida," he called in a hearty, pleased voice, "how do you like it?" But after one glance at her white face he was silent and his own face flushed with embarrassed sympathy.

"Isn't the porch cunning?" said Ellen, disappointed at Aunt Lida's silent acceptance of this wonderful surprise. The vastness of a joy that reduces a person to dumbness was beyond her experience. "And this is the living room. We furnished it from things we had in the attic. And this is the bedroom. And this is the kitchen. And this is the wee-est pantry in existence. Well, what do you think of it?"

S ill Aunt Lida could say nothing.

"Take your time, Aunt Lida," said Mrs. Wood softly.

"I should think you might ask us to sit down, Aunt Lida," said Ellen. "Here we come to your house and you don't even ask us to sit down."

A quiver passed over Aunt Lida's face; it was as if a veil had been lifted, allowing the clear light of happiness to shine through.

"Yes, sit down, do, all of you," she said in a voice ringing with proud hospitality. "Sit down, Amos. Take the rocker, Carrie."

They sat down. Ellen chattered ceaselessly. Aunt Lida beamed upon them all.

"Well, we had better go and let Aunt Lida get her supper," said Mrs. Wood at last.

"Don't be in a hurry," Aunt Lida protested. Oh, how long it was since she had repeated that homely formality!

"We haven't been," Mrs. Wood replied appropriately. "You must come up and see us often, Aunt Lida."

"Yes, thank you, I will." Aunt Lida's voice fairly sang. She took Mrs. Wood's hand in hers. "Forgive me for bein' so—so hard and set!" she murmured.

Mrs. Wood patted her hand gently. There were tears in her eyes. "Well, good-bye for the present, Aunt Lida," she said.

"Good-bye! Good-bye, all! And—and thank you!"

When they had gone up the path, Aunt Lida closed the door and sat down in the blessed friendliness of her own home.

Mr. Nurich was spending a few odd thousands to brighten up the walls of the castle he had just purchased.

In a dealer's work he took a fancy to a work of art.

"Let me see, now," he said, "who painted this picture?"

"It is a lithograph," said the dealer coldly.

"Why, yes," Nurich hastily agreed, "I ought to have recognized his style.

The farmer stated his errand. The householder was amused; but the farmer was adamant.

"Surely we're not going to quarrel over a matter like that?" said the householder. "Let's have a drink to settle it. What will you have?"

"Egg and milk," said the farmer.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

SWEDISH PRINCE NAMED LIKELY SUCCESSOR B.-P.

A movement to make Prince Gustav Adolf, eldest son of the Swedish Crown Prince, Chief Scout of the world when Lord Baden-Powell retires, was disclosed at Stockholm this week. At the conclusion of the international Rover Moot outside Stockholm under command of the Prince, the Polish Scout leader, Heinrich Kapisrezewski, in an interview, said "it is the general opinion that the Prince would be a natural successor to Lord Baden-Powell."

DINING ON ADMISSION TICKETS.

A "can of food" was the price of admission to a Parents' Night of the 40th Toronto (Church of the Redeemer) Scout Group. The result, 118 "admissions" toward the food supply of the summer's camp.

LIBRARIES ADD SCOUT BOOKS.

One of the signs of the increasing interest in Scouting is the adding of books on Scouting subjects to public libraries. Recently 19 new volumes were added to the Scout section of the public library at Medicine Hat, Alta., and 54 to the library at Saskatoon.

AS A GIFT, A COUPLE OF ELEPHANTS.

As an expression of appreciation of their reception and entertainment on a visit to Japan, the Boy Scouts of Siam presented a pair of Siamese elephants to the Scouts of the Flowery Kingdom. The animals were driven 200 miles from the interior of Siam, and are now ensconced respectively in the zoos at Tokeo and Osaka.

BRIDGEWATER'S JUBILEE ARCH.

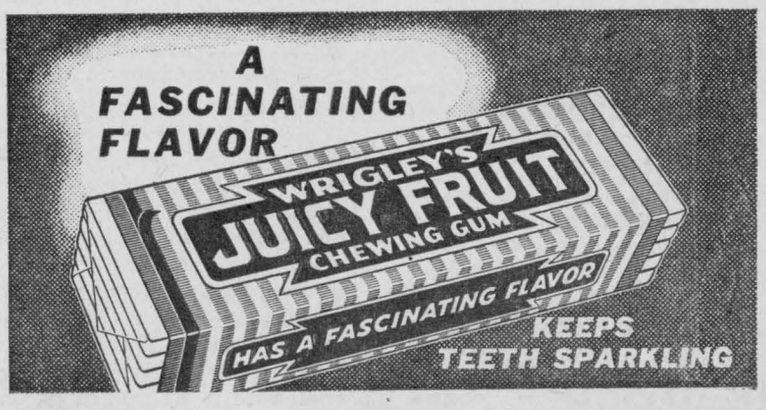

The citizens of Bridgewater, N.S., are maintaining throughout the summer the King's Silver Jubilee Arch erected on the bridge spanning the La Have river. To the local Scouts and Girl Guides has been given the duty of raising and lowering each day the Union Jack that tops the arch. In turn, week about, two Scouts or Guides, in full uniform, raise the flag promptly at 8 a.m. and lower it at sunset.

PRISON SURGEON COMMENTS ON CRIME REDUCTION

Dr. Amos O. Squire, surgeon at Sing Sing prison, addressing a Rotary International Conference at Niagara Falls, N.Y., offered four ways by which crime might be reduced: 1. Deport alien criminals; 2. Give the boy who has made his first mistake another chance; 3. Back the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides; 4. More attention by parents to their own children. He added: "Back Boy Scouts and Girl Guides because they are developing character. I never had a boy enter prison who admitted he was a Boy Scout."

"Yes, the boy who is taking me to the dance to-morrow night is an extremely intellectual person."

"My boy friend isn't very good-looking, either!"

THE WORK WE DO.

It's Rather Interesting to View Both Sides of Any Problem, So Here's Ours.

ALTHOUGH The Record may be owned by one individual, the general public looks upon it as the community newspaper and almost as if it were partly their property, and rightfully so, for the community expects its public institutions to be defended, its news to be correctly reported and its enterprises advertised at home and abroad. Churches, societies, schools and other organizations look for and expect their activities to be reported in their home paper. And the home paper does all these things—likes to do them. This being so, it is only human that the owner of and those who are employed at the local newspaper office should expect that all these various interests would return the compliment through giving it its printing orders. If half the printing requirements of Chesterville and district were to be printed in Chesterville, the staff in the local office would have to be increased.
