Little Lad Almost Loses Finger

Last week as the two little sons of Mr. Alfred McMahon, three miles south of Grantley, were cutting kindling with an axe, Lyle aged 6. had the index finger of his left hand almost severed as his younger brother, Kenneth, wielded the axe and struck his hand. While the younger lad was doing the chopping he is also the larger, and as he cut the cedar Lyle was pulling it away from the block. Dr. Casselman dressed the wound and has hopes of saving the use of the finger.

Former Dunbar Resident Died Effects of Accident

An old resident of Dunbar died at St. Mary's Hospital, Ottawa, on May 2nd of injuries he susutained at the intersection of Wellington and Booth streets on April 28th when he was hit by a truck owned by A. Monette, of Hull. An inquest was held in which the driver was exonerated of negligence. Mr. Whitteker never regained consciousness.

He was in his 77th year and was born at Williamsburg where he learned his trade of shoemaker. He moved to Dunbar 55 years ago, residing there for years, an esteemed and respected resident. From there he moved to Ottawa about 25 years ago, where he remained until his sudden passing.

The funeral service was conducted at his late home, 621 Wellington street, Ottawa, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives by Rev. L. N. McCreery, pastor of St. Peter's English Lutheran Church, Ottawa. During the two days preceding the service, over 300 persons called to extend sympathy to the sorrowing family. Fourteen motor cars followed the remains to Williamsburg where interment was made with Rev. McCreery officiating.

Chief mourners and survivors are his widow, formerly Edith Merkley; one son, Frank Whitteker, Chesterville; six daughters: Mrs. Charles Cope Way, N.J., Mrs. Fred VanAllen, Morrisburg; Mrs. J. L. Golightly, Montario, Sask., Mrs. K. L. MacIntosh, Mrs. Carleton O'Connell, and Mrs. Walter Wright, Ottawa; one brother, Isaiah Whittaker, Williamsburg; two sisters, Mrs. John Barclay, Williamsburg, and Mrs. Nathan Barclay, Dunbar; also 22 grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

Floral offerings were received from the principal of Wellington Street School, Mr. Roy Pharoah; Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Wallace, the grandchildren, the family, Staff of Fleetwood Wilson Co., Staff of Home Steam Laundry. Lutheran Church Council, Miss M. A. Dow, Miss E. Christie, and others.

Miss Minnie Merkley Honoured On Her Approaching Marriage

Miss Minnie Merkley was agreeably surprised Thursday evening when, on arriving at her home, she found about thirty of her girl chums assembled to honour her. Miss Merkley, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Merkley, of Church street, is to be married shortly to Mr. W. H. Strader, of Cardinal.

Amusement was provided in different ways, including a mock marriage by three young ladies, which created a good deal of merriment, and about eleven o'clock Minnie was encircled by the guests when Miss Addie Campderros addressed her on behalf of the Chesterville girls as Miss Ida Baker made the presentation of a combination bridge lamp and smoker stand. Miss Merkley replied in a pleasing manner, thanking her friends.

Luncheon was served and the girls departed after the signing of the Bride's Book presented by Miss Mae Hummel.

Box Lacrosse For Chesterville

It is announced from a meeting of the St. Lawrence Amateur Box Lacrosse League that Chesterville and Smiths Falls have been accepted as members. It is also announced that Smiths Falls will play their first game here on May 24th, when the schedule is supposed to get under way. Local information is to the effect that while Chesterville will be a member of the St. Lawrence League the sport will not be taken up seriously here until the early Fall.

Alton Perrault Fatally Injured In Pressure Tank Explosion

Tuesday afternoon at 4.15 when an air pressure tank at D. A. McDonald's garage on Main street south in this village, blew up, Alton Perrault, 25 years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Perrault, received such injuries to his head causing his death in the Civic Hospital, Ottawa, Wednesday morning about seven o'clock.

The young man who has been intermittingly employed at the garage, was assisting Dan McDonald and Tophile Labre in the operation of straightening the bent frame of an automobile in which a gasoline blow torch was used. Perrault was in the operation of increasing the pressure within the tank by the use of a hand-operated air pump. Labre was operating the torch at the end of 25 feet of hose, reaching from the pressure tank about six feet outside from the building to about ten feet within the building or a distance of about fifteen feet from the tank to the work. McDonald had just passed the tank on his way to the blacksmith shop at the rear for tools to continue in the work. Without warning as Perrault pumped air there was a subdued detonation and the bottom of the tank was blown out, resulting in the very forcible ejection of the remainder of the tank which struck Perrault a terrific blow in the face, smashing his jaw bone and displacing one eye, knocking him on his back towards the garage doors which stood open. Drs. Clayton and Casselman were immediately called and the injured man was taken into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McCauley, where after further examination it was feared that his skull had been fractured and he was immediately rushed to the Civic Hospital where he passed away.

The pressure tank and connections which were being used are the property of the Nestlé's Milk Products Co., which were loaned to the garage in order that the necessary repairs could be made to the car on which they were being used. The tank is a small affair about eighteen inches high with a diameter of from ten to twelve inches, on top of which are three valves and a pressure guage. It is supposed that these gadgets striking Perrault inflicted the heavy injuries.

With Perrault close to the tank at the opposite side as it blew up stood Bert Lynch, and although he was spattered with flying gasoline he was uninjured.

The cause of the accident has not been determined and as the vapor did not take fire, and there was still gasoline in the hose, it does not seem that there could have been a back-fire.

Alton Perrault wou d have reached his twenty-fifth birthday in a short time and was working his last day at the garage before going to work for Mr. J. A. Bogart on the latter's farm, in fact, it is said he should have started Tuesday morning but sought permission to continue with McDonald until the job in hand was finished.

Dr. P. McLaughlin, of Winchester, coroner, after consultation with County Crown Attorney Harkness of Cornwall, has decided that an inquest will be necessary to determine the causes that were responsible for the accident which caused Alton Perrault's death, the date of which has not been announced.

Raised to Important Post

Albany Times.—We take great pleasure in announcing that Mr. Max Beckstadt, who has been General Freight Agent of the Delaware and Hudson Railway Company has been transferred and promoted to the position of General Traffic Manager and Chairman of the Board of Directors, having entire supervision and control of the whole local and foreign freight and passenger service of the said railway with headquarters at Albany, N. Y. His election to high office is the reward of great ability and eminent services and becomes effective at once. We wish him every success in his new sphere of labour.

Mr. Beckstadt is a son of Mr. Norris Beckstadt, who has taken up residence with his sister, Mrs. Geo. N. Hummel, Mill street, after serving 24 years as station master at Lacolle, Que.

Lad Rendered Unconscious

Monday evening about the supper hour as Tommy Allen and Heber Dwyer were playing about the barn at Mr. Tom Allan's on the south side of the village, Heber fell from the mow to the floor below sustaining injuries which rendered him unconscious for some hours. After the fall Tommy Allan found much difficulty in bringing his playmate to the home of the latter's grandmother, Mrs. Jas. Dwyer, of Mill street, where he collapsed and the services of Dr. Casselman secured. It was not until several hours afterwards that Heber was out of danger. He is the eldest son of Mr. Frank Dwyer, of Brockville ,and has made his home with his grandmother for several years.

Free Gasoline for Many

Users of gasoline who were in a position to benefit by it secured a supply of gasoline Monday afternoon with very little effort. Recently the McColl-Frontenac people have been increasing the storage capacity for their gasoline at the local railway yards, the supports for a large tank having been laid and the tank erected. The first filling was made Monday when it is supposed through the settling of the centre support too much strain was placed on the tank and it sprung a leak. As the gas could not be saved motorists who could take advantage of it were allowed to "fill 'er up" free of charge. It is estimated that more than five hundred gallons were lost before the tank could be emptied by pumping into another one.

Two Cars Figure in Sunday Afternoon Smash

Sunday afternoon about four o'clock a car driven by Mahlon Dillabough in which were two men, three women and three children, and one driven by H. R. Johnston, accompanied by his wife, were very badly damaged when they met at the last turn on South street at the extreme limits of the village. The latter was coming from the south and had just passed several pedestrians and evidently had not noticed the approach of the other car to the corner. While there is nothing to obstruct the view from either way at this turn it is considered by most motorists as a dangerous corner. The removal of a telephone pole within a short distance of the road and a widening of the the corner would make it much safer.

Lawn Bowlers Re-Organize Dr. Clayton Is President

Last night the annual meeting of the Chesterville Lawn Bowling Club was held in the waiting room of the station when officers for the ensuing year were elected and arrangements completed for what is hoped will be one of the best seasons in the club's history. Those elected are:

Hon. Pres.—A. O. Robertson,
President—Dr. A. B Clayton,
Vice-Pres.—Harold Durant,
Treasurer—Jas. Hanna,
Secretary—Alf Jarvis,
Greens Committee—Dixon, Clayton, Hamlen, Dumouchel, Lacey,
Caretaker—Thos. Asquith.

The secretary's report showed the activities of the club during the past season when its representatives carried off a number of the more valuable prizes competed for in this district, and of the many enjoyable evenings on the local greens when competitions were carried on twice a week with suitable trophies for each event. There is no local institution which provides such enjoyable times during the evenings of the summer season as the events of the bowlers. The greens throughout the season were acknowledged to be equal to the best in Eastern Ontario and were given unstinted praise by the many visitors who used them last season. The membership fee of five dollars is lower than that of any other club in the district, and as there are enough bowls at all times to fill the five greens with players, there is no other expense for new members to enjoy play throughout the season to the benefit of their health and the encouragement of a wholesome community spirit.

Considerable discussion of the new Provincial Bowling Association was indulged in, very little of which was in favour of the control of bowling which it has assumed. The freeze-out policy is nothing short of a catastrophe for small country clubs without any resulting benefits. Members of Association clubs are not permitted to compete at tournaments of non-member clubs and vice versa. With the question of either affiliation with the Provincial Association or give up bowling, it was decided to take the former course rather than render several years' work and investment in providing first class greens a dead loss under a burden the Provincial Association is not making any easier to carry.

Results From Record Ads.

The use of Record "Bargain Table" Ads has surely been lifting the depression for those who have had desirable stock and grain to offer for sale. A couple of weeks ago Clark Smith, of Cannamore, offered a couple of pure bred Holstein calves for sale and after one insertion made a good sale and had seventeen inquiries that he could not fill. S. K. & A. E. Smith advertized mixed seed grain for sale last week and had customers for more than fifteen times the quantity they had to sell. Put your offerings on the Record's "Bargain Table" and make quick sales.

$17,000 Fire in Cornwall Destroys Furniture Store

Striking at the very heart of Cornwall's downtown business section, fire Tuesday night gutted the H. G. Jackson furniture store at Pitt and second streets, with a loss estimated at $17,000. The fire was brought under control after the entire fire fighting facilities of the local department had battled the flames for almost two hours.

Shortly after six o'clock, Sam Wong, a waiter in a nearby restaurant, noticed smoke issuing from the rear door of the building and sent in an alarm. When firemen arrived the entire interior of the store was filled with smoke and flames, and beyond removing furniture near the entrances they were unable to save the contents.

Tons of water were poured into the huge frame buildings, one of the oldest in Cornwall, and firemen were compelled to rip off almost the entire roof to check stubborn flames in the partitions of the second floor. By eight o'clock the last vestige of fire had been extinguished but dense smoke in the building prevented firemen from making a thorough survey.

The Jackson store with the King George Hotel and the Royal York Café to the south and the C. W. Kyte store to the north, was one of the chief business places in the city. The building was owned by Allan MacDonald, Cornwall, and was valued at about $7,000. H .G. Jackson placed the loss to contents at about $10,000. Building and stock were fully covered by insurance.

Sister of Williamsburg Man Died Suddenly at Parishville

Parishville, April 27.—Mrs. Maria E. Canfield died suddenly about 5.30 p.m., April 16. She had been in usual health until the evening before when she was slightly indisposed, but up and about the house as usual Saturday.

Maria E. Hill was born in Williamsburg, Ont., January 5th, 1850. In early life she became a tailoress, which trade she followed until a short time previous to her marriage to G. H. Canfield, of Parishville, which occurred October 15th, 1888. He preceded her in death December 24th, 1908.

While young she became a member of the Methodist Church at Elma, Ont., later of the Congregational Church of Parishville, of which she was still a member.

She is survived by one daughter, Ida R. Bump, and two granchildren, Alton and Rena Bump, of White Hill; one brother, Peter A. Hill, of Williamsburg, Ont.. and many nephews and nieces.

The funeral was conducted from her late home at her daughter's at one p.m., April 19th, and from the Methodist Church at Parishville at 2 p.m.

Two great-nieces, Miss J. Rose Hill and Miss Helen B. Becker, of Williamsburg, very feelingly sang "Ive Done My Work," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Other relatives to attend the funeral were Mrs. Ida Philpot, of Watertown, N.Y.; Mr. Charles McBride, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Crysler and daughter, Alberta, of Rensselear Falls; Carl Norton and daughter Hilda, of West Stockholm; Mrs. George Hill and son Jack, of Williamsburg, Ont.' and Bernice Allison, of Inkerman, Ont.

Rev. W. A. Sullivan spoke words of comfort to the sorrowing ones. Four nephews, Messrs. Will and Parnham Allison, of Chesterville, Ont.; George Hill and Orlin Becker, of Williamsburg, Ont., bore her to her last resting place. Interment was made in Hill Crest Cemetery.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Corn and Roots

Corn and roots are two crops essential for all kinds of live stock, taking the place of green grass in the ration long after the season for grass is over. Corn is planted any time after danger of frost is past. Mangels should be put in fairly early so that the seed will have the early moisture. Turnips are not planted before the second week in June and may go until about July 10. If planted too early they make less palatable feed than those which make most of the growth in early fall.

Cull Them Out

As soon as the spring spurt in egg production commences to lessen there are certain hens in every flock that should be culled out and marketed. The sooner they are gotten rid of the bigger will be the flock profits. Labour is reduced, feed costs are lowered, and the profitable birds given more room in the laying house and on the range. Poultry should also sell for more money in the early part of the summer than later, so there is a material gain in disposing of the non-productive birds. One of the simplest ways to cull the flock is to go over the birds when they roost at night. Pick out those with shrivelled, rough combs and shrunk, hard abdomens. A bird with a large amount of hard fat around the abdomen is not in laying condition.

Soybeans in Ontario

Reports from thirty farmers who conducted soybean demonstrations in many parts of Ontario last year show the average date of seeding to be May 10th, average date cut for hay, August 20th, average height of plants thirty-two inches, average yield of hay 2.4 tons per acre.

Soybeans will grow on almost any ty peof soil although the best results cannot be expected on stiff clay or light sand. Soybeans to produce hay should be sown with an ordinary grain drill about May 15th for the average season. One and one-half to two bushels of seed per acre is required. The seed should be inoculated. For Ontario conditions the O.A.C. No. 211 variety has given excellent results. Seed may be obtained from dealers and growers throughout the province. Soybeans should not be sown on weedy land and it is usually advisable to go over the crop with a light harrow after the plants are well through the ground. The crops should be cut with a mower and the plants allowed to lie in the swath until they are thoroughly wilted. Subsequent treatment is much the same as for other hay.

Reforestation

Tree planting is gaining in popularity with farmers in all parts of the province. As an example of good work done by an individual farmer, Walter S. Riddell, of Thorndale, Ontario, this year undertook an extensive scheme of resforestation on his farm in Nissouri Township. He has 20,000 trees, mostly spruce, pine, cedar and quite a number of nut trees and hardwoods. There will be enough in all to cover fifteen acres. Middlesex County has been one of the leaders in reforestation. In 1931 there were 168,500 seedling trees supplied by the government to residents of the county for reforestation purposes. These seedlings are supplied free of charge. Other counties are doing almost as well and a number of fine municipal forests are in course of growth.

Rutabags in Demand

According to reports, the Farmers' Co-Operative Association of Blackwater, has an order for 30,000 bushels of "Big O" Brand rutabagas, to be delivered next marketing season. These rutabagas are intended for distribution in Toronto and Montreal.

This information is gratfying to the Ontario Marketing Board, as it was at the suggestion of the Board that the original idea of branding rutabagas was adopted by the Blackwater organization.

While the marketing of rutabagas was in the experimental stage, over 7,000 bushels were sold. mostly in Toronto, with trial shipments to Montreal and New York City. On every side satisfaction is reported, and one firm volunteered the information that its table turnip business has doubled this year, attributing this to the high quality of these branded rutabagas.

Weekly Crop Report

Orchards in Dundas Couny are looking particularly well and prospects are for a good crop in well-handled orchards. A large number of old orchards are being trimmed up and put into shape and will be sprayed this season for the first time in several years. Blossom time will be later this year owing to the backward season. Durham County reports that orchardists in the Port Hope district purchased a carload of ammonia sulphate to supply their requirements this year. Fall wheat has never looked better than at the present time, according to a report from Haldimand, but sweet clover has suffered badly from heaving. In the Muskoka and Parry Sound district it is reported that a much larger acreage of new land has been cleared than usual, in fact more than has been cleared altogether in the past five years. Northumberland County reports 1,000 acres of tomatoes will be contracted at a contract price of 25c a bushel as compared with 3,000 acres at 50c a bushel in 1930. Seeding has been general throughout the province. York County reports good seed exceptionally scarce and that farmers possessing good seed all report that they could have sold three or four times the amount they had on hand.

Planting Strawberries

The new bed of strawberries should be planted now. Obtain new plants from a one-year-old plantation. Dig them with a digging fork, shake out the soil, gather them up quickly and remove to some shelter where they may be gone over, sorted and straightened out preparatory to planting. The sooner they are planted the better, and just before doing so, dip the plants into water so that they are thoroughly wet. The spade is the best tool for hand planting, and with a boy to place the plants in the opening made with the spade, two people working together can plant very rapidly, even 3,000 to 4,000 or more plants a day. All blossoms should be removed the first year to enable the plants to produce an abundance of strong runners and new plants in order to form the matted row. Thorough and frequent cultivation should be given during the season. Nitrogen in the form of nitrate of soda or ammonia sulphate may be used to advantage just after the plants have started into growth.

Pasture Improvement

A vast amount of work on pasture improvement has been done in recent years. Experimental work has shown that pasture grasses are most nutritious when young, and out of that has grown the recommendation of closer grazing. Pasture grasses should not be allowed to become dry and woody. That may involve rotational grazing, moving the herd on to another field and bringing them back again after the first pasture has recuperated.

Fertilizers have shown marked results in several ways: First of all in more and earlier growth, in improved quality of grass, less growth of weeds and increased resistance to drought.

Pastures may be improved in several ways. An application of manure or commercial fertilizers is, perhaps, the easiest method of restoring old permanent pastures. Another method is to reseed and disk or harrow. The most thorough practice is to break up the old pasture, build up the fertility and seed to a good pasture mixture. When the intention is to pasure meadows after one or two hay crops are removed (and this is general practice), seed of suitable pasture grasses should be included in the seeding.

ROARING AT FRITZ

SERGT. MARTIN is one of the British majors who were instructing American troops in the niceties of bayonet fighting. Mr. Herbert Corey, writing from American Field Headquarters, gives a graphic description of the sergeant's method of instruction.

"Roar at 'em when you charge!" ordered Sergt. Martin. "Don't come slippin' up to 'im gradual, like you was goin' to kiss 'im. Roar!"

They roared.

"That,' 'said Sergt. Martin bitterly, "was a pretty little roar! Ack like he was your wife and the coffee was cold. Now roar!"

This time the roar was full-bodied and vicious. The men grinned at one another, but they roared beautifully. That embarrassment, natural to plain citizens at being asked to stand out in the sunlight and roar, when never before in his life he had roared in public, had passed away. The sergeant's little touch of comedy had done the trick. The men were at ease.

"Look fierce!" ordered the sergeant, screwing up his face into a frightful scowl. The squad looked fierce, according to orders. Sergt. Martin regarded them carefully, one at a time. It was all they could do to keep from laughing.

"Look at each other a-lookin' fierce!" said Sergt. Martin. "Look at each other in the face, now. You Americans has a sweet wye with you when you look fierce! Kittens, I call you!"

They looked fierce with great eagerness.

"That's better," said Sergt. Martin. "Hi'll myke somethin' of you yet! We roars at 'em," he explained, "to shake their nerve. Fritzie is a good fightin' man. None of you need never doubt that. But 'e's a delicate bein', and 'e doesn't like to be roared at."

"It is high time," said the reformer, "that we had a moral awakening. Let us arise in our might. Let us gird our loins. Let us take off our coats. Let us bare our arms. Let us——"

"Hold on!" exclaimed a woman near the platform. "If this is to be a moral awakening, don't you dare take off another thing."

NEW USE FOR OLD TIRES

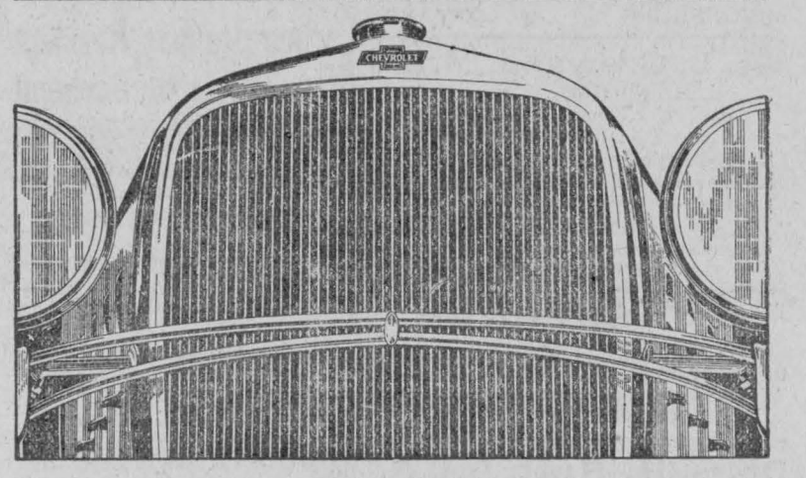
Canada's Blind Citizens Now Make Serviceable Rubber Mats From Worn-Out Tires

IT IS CLEAR to the most casual observer that the annual supply of worn-out motor tires far exceeds the purely seasonal demand for home-made dock bumpers, life preservers, and apple tree swings. For the millions of tires not used in the manner described, there still must be found a use. The Canadian National Institute for the Blind has found a way to dispose of many old tires and at the same time provide a new occupation for some of the sightless Canadians it serves. The Institute work shops are now busy making rubber door mats out of old rubber tires. Suitable rubber is flattened out and pared to an even thickness. Uniform pieces are then punched out, and the sightless workers make the mats by stringing these bits of rubber on steel wire and locking them in place with metal clips. Finished mats are thick, springy and pliable ,and effective mud removers. The demand for these mats is said to be excellent all across Canada. Incidentally blind workers in New Zealand obtain their supply of mat making materials from the workshops of the Canadian Institute in Toronto.

"Dear," she said, looking up from her paper, "a man has just been married to a girl he first met when rescuing her from a burning building."

"That'll teach him to mind his own business," replied hubby.

THE GREAT CANADIAN VALUE



THESE REASONS

make it wiser than ever

TO CHOOSE THIS SIX TODAY!

1 Chevrolet pioneered the six-cylinder engine in the low priced field because this is the one type of power plant that strikes a perfect balance of smooth performance and maximum economy. It is necessary to have six cylinders to get multi-cylinder smoothness.

2 Drivers of sixes never want less; and anything more than six cylinders means a sacrifice of economy! The Chevrolet Six costs less to operate than any other full-size car. Naturally, more than six cylinders would mean greater expense for gasoline, oil and upkeep.

3 The 1932 Chevrolet Six is a proved car. It represents the fullest development of the basic multi-cylinder principle which has resulted in highest satisfaction to more than 2,000,000 Chevrolet Six owners.

4 The Chevrolet Six is the lowest priced car combining Silent Syncro-Mesh shift and Free Wheeling.

Fatal Motor Accident Man Killed; Brother Injured

As a result of a serious motor accident, Saturday night at eight o'clock, on Highway No. 31, two miles north of Winchester, Edward Lemoureux, aged 20, is dead, and a brother, Felix, aged 15 years, was taken in a critical condition to the office of Dr. P. McLaughlin, Winchester.

About 7.30 p.m., the two brothers started from their home, three miles north of Winchester to do some shopping.

Were in Buggy

They were driving a horse and buggy, and although it was not yet dark, their sister, Ada, would not let them go until she had lit the lamp on the rig. Proceeding along Highway 31, they stopped at a neighbour's gate, and talked to Isaac Durant.

Leaving there, they had only gone a short distance, when they were struck by an automobile driven by C. H. Dann, of Toronto, who was accompanied by a young woman from Ottawa.

The car was proceeding south towards Winchester in the same direction as the buggy and struck the rig directly behind, pitching the two young men into the air, and along the shoulder of the road. The driver of the automobile appeared unable to stop immediately after the crash, and for more than 200 feet parts of the wrecked buggy were strewn along the road. Mr. Dann found the two boys lying unconscious on the side of the road.

Starts for Help

With the assistance of others who had arrived, he lifted the boy, Felix, into his car, and started for medical aid at Winchester.

They felt it unadvisable to move the other victim.

Dr. P. McLaughlin rendered medical aid to Felix, who had been transferred to his office.

Examination revealed that no bones were broken, but that he was suffering from severe shock and congestion of the lungs. Dr. N. Malloch, another Winchester physician, hastened to the scene of the accident. Under his supervision the elder boy was taken home, where an examination showed his arm broken in three places, ribs fractured and his chest crushed. He was also suffering from other serious injuries, according to Dr. Malloch.

Call Ambulance

A Winchester ambulance was called, but before it reached the home, the young man died.

Constable Herb Helmer, of Winchester, investigated the accident, and telephoned Morrisburg for Provincial Constable Frank Rose and Traffic Officer Eugene Rose. who also made investigations. The motor car was badly wrecked by the impact, the windshield broken, radiator pushed in, and fenders and top badly damaged.

Mr. Dann said he did not see a light on the buggy, but the sister of the boys said she had lit the light before the boys left home. They had stopped along the way to talk to Isaac Durant and Nellie Durant who both say the light was on. They were both eye witnesses to the accident.

Those surviving are: Mrs. Eli Lemoureux, four sisters, Ada, Margaret, and Alice, at home, and Mrs. Charles Fobar, of Waddington, N.Y.; and five brothers. Cyril, of Montreal; David, Cannamore, Clifford and Wilfred, at home, and Felix, the injured brother.

Shifting the Responsibility

Bessie had a new dime, says the Christian Herald, and she announced her intention of investing it in an ice-cream soda.

"Why don't you give your dime to the missions?" asked the minister, who was calling.

"I thought about that," replied Bessie, "but I think I'll buy the ice cream and let the druggist give the dime to the missions."

Last fall when the car of vegetables was sent from here, Mr. R. Steven, of Cannamore, supplied several bags of potatoes, and a short time ago received the following letter which speaks for itself.

Trossachs, Sask., April 11, 1932.

Mr. Robert Steven,
Cannamore, Ont.

Dear Sir,—

A car of vegetables and potatoes, etc., was shipped here from your vicinity last winter and all distributed but a few bags of potatoes, which were placed in a cellar and left there until a few days ago. As I didn't receive any in the winter I was given a bag of potatoes a few days ago which was donated by you, for which accept my sincere thanks. There are quite a number living near here from Stormont county: Jas. Crump, David Crump, John Munro, Wm. Munro, Hector Munro, Chas. Munro, Geo. Wagner, Ross Hart, Fred McNairn, L. Gallinger, H. Gallinger, E. Gallinger.

I was born at Spencerville, in Grenville county, and was married at South Mountain in 1899, came West in 1906 and was last in the east in the Spring of 1915 at which time I visited a brother-in-law, D K. Cook, of Finch.

Again thanking you for your donation, I am,

Yours very truly,
J. W. Newman.

The train was racing along at sixty miles an hour and Robinson was dozing in a corner of his compartment when he was disturbed by a fellow-passenger rushing along the corridor.

"Excuse me," gasped the excited individual, "but is your wife a rather stout woman wearing a brown costume and a red hat?"

"Yes,' 'replied the astonished Robinson. "What's all the excitement about?"

"Excitement!" exclaimed the other. "The excitement is that she just fallen out of the train."

"Good heavens!" shrieked Robinson. "Don't stand there doing nothing. Pull the communication cord. She's got the tickets."

Millicent: "I think Harold is horrid. I asked him if he had to choose between me and five thousand pounds, which would he take, and he said the five thousand."

Maud: "That's all right! He knew if he had the five thousand you would be easy.' '

IN MEMORIAM

Ball—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Wilburn Ball, who departed this life May 16th, 1931.

God knew that he was suffering
And the hill was hard to climb,
So he closed his weary eyelids
And whispered, "Peace be thine."

Long days and nights he bore the pain,
In wait for cure, but all in vain,
Till God himself knew what was best,
He took him home and gave him rest.

In Lemoureux Inquest Open Verdict Is Given

An open verdict was returned by a coroner's jury under Dr. P. McLaughlin and Crown Attorney J. Harkness, of Cornwall, at an inquest held in Winchester Wednesday afternoon into the death of Edward Lemoureux, 20, who was killed on Saturday evening when he was struck by an automobile driven by C. H. Dann, of Toronto, about two miles north of Winchester.

Mrs. Eli Lemoureux, mother of Edward, stated at the inquest that she had made her daughter, Ada, light the lamp on the buggy prior to the two boys leaving home. It was also claimed that when talking to the neighbours the light on the buggy was lit.

Others who testified at the inquest were Miss Nellie Durant and A. Lamour, eyewitnesses of the accident.

C. H. Dann, driver of the car which struck the buggy, and Miss M. Morgan, a passenger in the car, both stated that their car was within 12 feet of the buggy before they noticed the light, and could give no explanation for their not seeing it before.

Traffic Officer Eugene Rose, who was investigating the accident, testified that although it was between daylight and dark at the time, the buggy carried a small red light at the rear, and that there was no reason why the vehicle was not noticed by Mr. Dann before he got within 12 feet of it.

THE LOWLY HOG DOES ITS BIT FOR SCIENCE

Experimental Farms Note

OF WHAT particular value are hogs except to produce our ham and bacon? Why are they experimented upon, and why is such care taken in the procuring of accurate experimental data? The answer to these and other questions may be derived, and a greater and clearer realization of the importance of the swine industry ascertained by a visit to the Central Experimental Farm and a survey of the work being carried on there by the Animal Husbandry Division.

Experts in livestock are not only guiding the work in the production of swine, but are producing more and cheaper pork. From their experience gained in actual experiments, they are enabled to advise the farmers throughout Canada how to make the same equivalent savings.

The swine herd consists of pure bred Yorkshires and Berkshires. By the introduction of new sires from time to time, supplemented with rigid selection and culling a herd of high standard has been developed. From this herd, breeding stock is disseminated to other Experimental Farms throughout Canada and to the swine breeders and farmers of Eastern Canada.

Experimental and research studies absorb a large percentage of the pigs raised. Work is being carried on in testing the relative nutritional value of various individual feeds and in the compounding of suitable meal mixtures for pigs of various ages. Mixtures are tried out, and if found suitable, they are published in pamphlet form, and are widely distributed to Canadian farmers. Such distribution of valuable feeding information raises the standard of production, improves feeding practices and most important of all lowers the cost of pork production for the individual farmer.

Another line of work on accessory feeds deserves some comment. Cod liver oil, pilchard oil, mineral feeds, etc., are being tried out in an experimental way, and their value determined in swine feeding. These supplements to ordinary feeding have only of late come into prominence as livestock feeds, and especially so as swine feeds. Cod liver oil is a known source of vitamins A and D, and the claims for pilchard oil are that it contains these constituents and is available at a very moderate price. Comparisons of these two oils are in progress at the Central Experimental Farm and also on several Branch Experimental Farms, and the results when compiled should prove interesting and valuable. This is but one instance of the continuous testing and experimentation being carried on in the interests of the Canadian farmer, and also indicates the thorough way in which a problem is investigated. It is not only carried on at the one Farm, but is replicated on many other Experimental Farms. By such corroboration of results, accuracy is assured ,and the problem is completed much more quickly and with the same accuracy as if it were repeated on one Experimental Farm year after year.

The hog thus carries on, eating what he is given, thriving best on the more valuable feeding stuffs, and by his rate of growth, type, quality of carcass and economy of gains aids science in propounding advice for distribution to farmers and feeders concerning the suitable and economical swine practices.

WHAT FARMING COSTS

ANY FARMER who will succeed in his business must give consideration to cost of production. An interesting guide as to the more important factors which must be considered in this connection is supplied by the Field Husbandman of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, who says:

"In calculating the cost of producing farm crops it is necessary to estimate the value of all the various items which enter into the cost. Some of these items, such as those relating to the cost of manual and horse labour, are very easily figured, because in these instances it is possible to record exactly the number of hours worked on the various crops and then multiply this by the cost per hour of this labour. With other items, however, such as the cost of manure, it is necessary to make an assumption regarding what percentages of the total cost should be charged against each particular crop in the rotation."

PREVENTING BLINDNESS

THE LOSS of sight is a tragedy. We do admire the courage of the blind and marvel at the cheerful way in which most of them accept their handicap. Yet, it is for each one of them a loss beyond measure. It is bad enough to be blind, but it seems infinitely worse if the loss of sight might have been prevented. When we realize that as a result of ignorance or carelessness many children are doomed to pass their lives in darkness, we would do well to take the necessary precautions so that such cases may not be repeated.

At the time of birth the child's eyes may be exposed to infection. Certain germs may gain entrance and set up a destructive inflammation that may lead to blindness. Because such a danger does exist, it is the practice to treat the eyes of the newborn with a solution which will destroy these germs before they have a chance to do any harm. In many places such treatment is required by law. This simple and painless but efficient procedure would, if carried out regularly and without fail in all cases, eliminate quite a large percentage of blindness in infants.

The next important preventive measure is the securing of treatment without delay for the baby whose eyelids become swollen or red or if there is any discharge. When we say without delay, we mean actually without an hour's delay, because prompt treatment may offer the only hope of saving the baby's sight.

Injury to the eye is always serious and unfortunately it may cause the loss of eyesight. The proper selection of playthings will first of all help the child in his play and will also lessen, if not entirely avoid the chance of injury to himself. Toys which are thrown into the air such as a bow and arrow should not be given to the child who is too young to understand their use. The rifle with small shot is particularly dangerous. Blunt-pointed scissors should be provided for the child to use for cutting out.

The possible dangers of fireworks is generally recognized and it is well to remember that carelessness as regards firecrackers and other explosives may mean a serious injury.

It is because sight is such a precious possession and the loss of sight such a serious handicap that it is necessary for parents to keep in mind those things which are dangerous to the eyes of their children. Reasonable care will bring about a decrease in the number of childen who would otherwise belong to the world of the blind.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

HOW TO CAPTURE AND HIVE A SWARM OF BEES

Experimental Farms Note

"A swarm of bees in May is worth a load of hay,
A swarm of bees in June is worth a silver spoon,
A swarm of bees in July is not worth the fly."

A SWARM OF BEES represents the working force of a colony and therefore is a valuable thing to capture and hive, especially if it is a prime or first swarm and emerges early in the season. When a swarm leaves its hive the queen of the colony goes with it, otherwise the swarm soon returns to its former home and because of that fact, many beekeepers follow the practice of clipping their queens' wings before the swarming season starts, in order to prevent the escape of swarms later in the season. The same practice is followed in the experimental apiary on the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa and the following methods are used in hiving any swarms. When a queen's wings are clipped the hiving of a swarm is an easy matter. While the swarm is still in the air search for the queen in front of the hive entrance and when found place her in a small box or cage. Immediately move the old hive from its stand and in its place put a new hive fitted with drawn combs or foundation. The swarm will soon return and as the first bees enter the new hive release the queen amongst them. Now put a queen excluder over the new hive and above it place the supers from the old hive; the swarm will then go to work as though nothing had happened. All beekeepers do not clip their queens' wings, and where this is not done the queen leaves with the swarm. When the queen is with a swarm it usually clusters on some nearby object for a few hours and thus is easily captured. First prepare a hive with drawn comb or foundation and then if the object on which the swarm has clustered is moveable it can be carried to the hive and the bees shaken down in front of it when they will quickly enter the hive. If, however, the cluster cannot be carried to the hive, carry the hive to it and place it on the ground so that the entrance is beneath the swarm. Now sharply shake or brush the bees down in front of the hive, moving the hive up close to the fallen bees where they will soon find the entrance and signal the others to follow them home.

He: "Your husband has given up smoking? It requires a pretty strong will to accomplish that."

She: "Well, I'd have you understand that I have a strong will.."

LIGHTS AND SHADES OF LONDON

"AT THE WHEEL"

HE WAS SITTING in the acrid unpleasantness of a London fog holding a steering-wheel and—the lives of women and children. It was Sunday.

Inside the well-lit and almost pleasant omnibus a young man, wearing his Sunday hat, and a young girl, completely Sundayfied, sat holding hands while they pretended to read a newspaper. They saw no more than each other's eyes, and what more could they possibly have seen? Portentous women with unnaturally clean children entered or made a fussy exit from time to time, bent, no doubt, on that awfulness of a London Sunday—a visit to relatives. On some faces you could read a kind of comfortable condescension that somehow suggested a glittering descent on poor relations; on others a dutiful resignation—the composure of an ordained martyr preparing to meet the lions—and you pictured a stiff and patronizing tea in a distant but exalted suburb, with criticism underlying an afternoon of smooth insincerity!

All the time the Man at the Wheel exhibited a broad and stocky back to the human comedy he was carrying; sometimes his face, tense and questioning, was turned towards the lit interior as he tried to guage the right moment to accelerate after the descent of an agile passenger. Mostly, however, he just sat there peering into the white cotton-wool world of fog that was hung with saffron lights, his big hands in gloves, expertly and suddenly taking his vehicle from an unexpected near rush of light as a tramcar clanged past. And the passengers did not notice him. They had paid twopence to be taken in safety through the fog!

* * * *

I sat there frankly admiring him. I have never heard of any poet writing an ode to a London omnibus driver, but he always strikes me as a worthy subject of praise. He may not possess the social charm of the old horse-omnibus driver, who, according to legend, wore a top hat and used his whip butt on London as a lecturer uses a wand. He is a more solemn character. Machines always leave their mark on men. The big petrol engine has created a grim, silent, crouching character who, fortunately for London and Londoner's wives and families, has no time for social pleasantries as he urges his great red, double-decked steed through the thousand perils of a crowded street.

He has, I think, developed a sixth sense. His whole being seems acutely conscious of inches. Watch the way a press of omnibuses in High Holborn or Tottenham Court Road, or any other famous hold-up, will edge and nudge a way with a mere inch between their mudguards, all so skilfully and calmly done as though the scarlet sides of the vehicles had nerves—invisible feelers—that carried warning of danger to the rough, deft hands at the wheel.

As we crawled through the fog I watched his taut concentration, admired his judgment as he executed a circling movement round a candidate for suicide, as he jammed on the brakes within a yard of a halted motor-car, as he put on speed over a thin patch of fog, and as he shot ahead past a less speedy driver.

Now and then he had to crawl through a whiteness as dense as that terrible billowing mist that rolls down a Scottish mountain. Here and there pin-points of fire shone out, changed swiftly on approach into objects like long hair aflame in the wind, and, nearer still, stood revealed as tall fog flares shooting up in fire from metal standards.

At the terminus I watched the drivers dismount, stiff and cold, and pull off their gloves, and hit their cold hands on their chests. Wet particles of fog shone on their moustaches.

Pretty bad at Camden Town, and Baker Street was like a tunnel! Couldn't see a yard at Brixton. Fine and clear at the Crystal Palace. . . . So these adventurers of the London fog compared notes before, groping in remote recesses, they found money to buy coffee from a stall. Then a whistle, the roar of a chilled engine, and off again on their perilous pilgrimages across London.

Surely every man who has driven through fog with eyes that ache and imagine phantoms at each cross-road will be glad to raise his hat to the bulky figure behind the wheel of a London omnibus as he steers his living cargo to safety with no thought of praise because—it's all in the day's work?

Next Week: "Under the Dome."

THE MISERY OF GAMBLING

Sir Walter Runciman
In the Sunday at Home

IT HAS BEEN a stern plan of my romantic life never to put myself in the position of being tempted to borrow and my considered advice is: never to spend beyond my income; never borrow, lend, or back bills. I have learned the latter plan through bitter experience sometimes. One of the most subtle and puzzling vices of all is that of gambling on the Stock Exchange and horse racing—a hobby that is not confined to the rich, but has got a deep, fascinating hold of sections of the middle class and that of the poorest. What misery to themselves and to their families and to other people this ugly mystery brings; and yet neither culture, religion or morality can cure the pleasures of this dark puzzle.

Mr. Peaslee on the Complete Angler

URGED by an energetic pull upon the pole, Mr. Peaslee's line left the water with a faint plop! Mr. Hyne, assuring himself by a side glance that the hook was empty, gave vent to a surly grunt, whereat Caleb looked up quickly.

"I s'pose you think I'm a fool to keep on fishin', Hyne," he observed, "but that durned fish has bit eight times and I ain't hooked him yet. Seems to me I ought to make fast next time."

"That's what you thought all the other times he's bit," objected Mr. Hyne, "and you ain't any nearer hookin' him, 's fur as I can see, than you was the fust time he bit. Mebbe I'm wrong."

Mr. Peaslee fished silently for a few minutes, jiggling his line seductively from one likely hole to another.

"Cur'us thing,' 'he commented after deep thought, "how fishin' affects some folks, if they reelly like to fish. I wonder if you remember Jote Barker? I s'pose he liked to fish better'n ary other man I ever saw."

"He liked to fish so well he made a fool of himself over it," agreed Mr. Hyne promptly. "That time he like to got his death of rheumatiz and was laid up the better part of all spring—do you rec'lect what he done the fust day the doctor tol' him he could go outdoors and set a spell?"

Mr. Peaslee pondered for a minute and then shook his head doubtfully. " I d'know's I remember anything about it," he conceded at last.

"Wal, I remember 'bout it," remarked Mr. Hyne with conviction, "for the reason that I had to do his chores two weeks longer on 'count of it. Mis' Barker wropped him up and sot him out on the porch where the sun shone warm and went off 'bout her work. She kep' busy for a couple of hours, and then she went out to help Jotham get back into the house, but when she got out onto the porch he wa'n't nowhere to be seen. It scared her, thinkin' somethin' untoward might have happened to him, so she come over to my place to get help; and where on earth do you s'pose we found him?"

Mr. Peaslee looked expectant, but offered no opinion.

"Down by the mill sluice, fishin' fer yeller perch," said Mr. Hyne contemptuously, "and wet as a sop. It was the means of puttin 'him back into bed for another two weeks, so lame he couldn't wiggle 'thout groanin'. What d'you think of a man that don't know any better'n that?"

Mr. Peaslee chuckled delightedly. "I think, jest as I told you," he replied, "that Jote Barker reelly lives for fishin'; any feller that likes to fish seems to think that nothin' else is much account. I remember one time when he and I was bark peelin' in a section of the state where there never was a fish, fur's I know, less'n it was canned.

"There come a day when we didn't have any work to do and I was putterin 'round the camp, fixin' up things when all at once I missed Jotham. But I didn't worry, him bein' old 'nough and woodswise 'nough to look after himself.

"When it come noon, though, and no Jotham, I begun to get a mite concerned. There was a house out on the road and I thought mebbe he might have gone out there, so I put out to ask. The man of the house said no one'd been there, and I was for startin 'away when the man called after me.

" 'Mebbe,' s'he, 'the feller you're lookin' for is down on the aidge of the old tann'ry ditch. I see some one settin' down there a spell ago; looked 'sif he was fishin', whoever 'twas. But he couldn't 've been, for no one in their senses would try to fish in a ditch. It's jest a dug ditch, and there never was so much as a minner in it.'

"When he said that a load rolled off my mind. I knew that minute where to look for Jotham. And sure 'nough, when I went over, there sot Jotham, fishin' away as contented 'sif he was gettin' a bite a minute! With the trouble I'd been to and the worry I was kinder short with him.

" 'For pity sake, Jote Barker,' s'I, 'ain't you got sense 'nough to see that's a dug ditch you're fishin' in?'

"He looked up kind of s'prised. 'Course I can see it,' he says. 'See where they rocked the wall to keep it from washin'?'

" 'Wal,' s'I, 'what you wastin' your time fishin' in there for? Don't you know there ain't a fish in there, and never was?'

"He looked sort of hurt at that.

" 'Course I know there ain't any fish here. 'Tain't likely you'd find fish in a place like that!' s'he. 'But what on airth was I to do?'

" 'Do!' s'I. 'Wall, I'll tell you what you ought to do. You ought to quit fishin' in a place where you own up you know there's no fish. You don't have to fish there, do you?'

"He looked up at me kinder triumphin', 'sif now he'd got me cornered.

" 'That's jest like you, Kellup Peaslee,' s'he, 'lettin' on to know all 'bout everything! You say I don't have to fish here, but mebbe you'll change your tune some when I tell you this is the only piece of water there is within ten miles of here!'

"And," concluded Mr. Peaslee, "that shut me up!"

COOKIES—for the lunch box, a bite before bed, or even for "dunking" is you can "dunk." The children appreciate them between meals, and guests appreciate them with tea or coffee. Here are two recipes for delicious cookies:

Oatmeal Cookies

1½ cups special cake flour, sifted
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sifted brown sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1¾ cups oatmeal
1-3 cup milk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and spices, and sift together three times. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, and cream well. Add egg. Add oatmeal and flour, alternately with milk, mixing well. Drop by teaspoons on greased baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (350 d. F.) 18 to 20 minutes. Makes 4 dozen cookies.

Gold Cookies

2 cups special cake flour, sifted
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
4 egg yolks, unbeaten

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift again. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add flour. Chill. Roll into balls ¾ inch in diameter. Roll some balls in mixture of chopped nuts and cinnamon, and remaining ones in tiny coloured candies. Bake in moderate oven (350 d. F.) 15 minutes, using lower grate during first half of baking period and upper grate during last half. Makes 3½ to 4 dozen cookies.

Delicious Custard Pudding

2 eggs
½ cupful raisins
½ cupful sugar
½ teaspoonful vanilla
2 cupfuls rice flakes
2 cupfuls milk
grating of nutmeg (if desired)

Beat eggs well and add rice flakes and raisins. Mix sugar with milk and add to the egg and rice flakes mixture. Add vanilla and nutmeg if desired. Pour into a greased baking dish, place dish in a pan of hot water, and bake in a moderate oven until custard is firm. Serve very cold.

PHLOX FOR BRILLIANT COLOUR

THE ANNUAL PHLOX, Phlox Drummondi, provides the most brilliant mass of colour with the least trouble more quickly than any of the commonly grown garden annuals. Originally a native of Texas, it has yielded remarkable results to hybridizing and selection. Some 25 or more distinct colourings are listed in this delightful annual and several strains have been developed.

There is a large flowering type and a dwarf, compact, free flowering type. Besides these two there are star-shaped and fringed strains. The colours range from the richest and most brilliant of reds through pinks, roses and blue tones to creamy yellows and whites, some of the last with brilliant eyes. All usually have a contrasting centre.

The seed is of fairly good size and should be sown in the open ground. The plants should be thinned to six inches apart to produce a quick mass effect. While the annual phlox may be transplanted, it does not move as readily as some annuals and usually does better untransplanted. It comes into bloom quickly from seed and its blooming period may be prolonged if fading flower clusters are kept cut to prevent seed formation. If allowed to seed the blooming period is short.

This phlox is not particular as to soil, seeming to do well in almost any soil medium of reasonable fertility. It does, however, need full run for its best development.

For specimen blooms the large flowered grandiflora type is the finest. For masses of colour in the garden or for edgings, the dwarf compact type is the best. This is an annual to sow liberally to provide a sure supply of colour. As it comes into bloom so quickly from seed it is well to make successive sowings. It can be sown as soon as danger from frost is over.

While usually sold in mixtures which provide a remarkable array of colour, fine effects are produced by sowing in blocks of separate colours as it comes fairly true from seed, sufficiently so to be dependable for colour effects.

For early effect Phlox Drummondi may be started in seed boxes and carefully transplanted into paper pots from which it can be turned into the ground without disturbing the roots. There are semi-double forms but the singles are finest. The star type is more curious than beautiful.

The family was gathered together concocting a death notice for the papers. The writer of the notice read the draft, whereupon one ofthe mourners suggested that the words "greatly beloved" should be added, but the notice writer replied: "Do ye no think we should wait until we hear the will read?"

"I'll see if Ella can come"

The very day visitors were coming, Bob Emery's wife caught a bad chill. She tried to keep going, but it was obvious that she would have to go to bed.

"Now don't worry," Bob said, "Ella's only 30 miles away. I'll just get her on the telephone and see if she can't come and help us out."

A few minutes later they had Ella's cheery promise. Once more, in an emergency, Long Distance had proved quick, dependable — and surprisingly inexpensive.
