Henry's Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school ?

Our instruction being individual, you may start at any time.

For highest marks made by a candidate from the rural schools of the county the medal was awarded to Faith Robertson of S.S. 1, Matilda Tp. Miss S. Annable, principal of the Winchester P.S., prepared the village gold medalist and Miss M. Moore, teacher in S.S. 1, Matilda, prepared the rural gold medalist. To these candidates and equally to the teachers much credit is due for the excellent work done. Both candidates made over 80 per cent. of the aggregate of marks.

Wild Runaway

A very serious runaway occurred Tuesday at the noon hour resulting in severe injuries to Christopher McManus and Jacob Bird, both of Finch Township. The two men with a very spirited team were proceeding to the station to make a shipment of a crated cutter when the horses took fright and instead of turning them east into the station yard crossed over the tracks and turned in at the north gate where the cutter was thrown from the wagon. Both men were doing their utmost to regain control of the team but when the wagon struck the rails of the Condensing Company's siding, opposite the station, they were both thrown forward on to the whiffletrees, and going under the wagon were dragged for some distance before getting free. The horses continued down the yard and leaving the wagon behind the old factory took to the track at a reckless pace, making the distance to the railway bridge in short order, where Tom Valley caught them as they were about to cross over.

The men who were badly shaken up and bruised were given medical attention but will no doubt be some time in completely recovering.

Germany is said to have had eight million men to start the war but has never been able to equip more than 3,200,000 at any one time since.

An Excellent Showing

Of the twenty-two successful students in the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry who obtained full junior matriculation in the recent examinations Chesterville High School had five among the number, which is a percentage to be proud of when it is considered there are six other high schools and three collegiates in the united counties with only seventeen successful on the same exams. Parents should give this thoughtful consideration when choosing the school for their children.

Junior Matriculation Results.

In Group I. are given the names of all candidates who have obtained complete Matriculation by passing on the twelve required examination papers.

They have therefore, failed in not more than three papers. In order to complete their matriculation they must pass in all the papers in which they failed at one examination, the standard for pass being 40 per cent. of the marks assigned to each paper.

Such candidates have been awarded partial matriculation, and in order to complete their matriculation must obtain at one examination 40 per cent. on each of the remaining papers with an average of 60 per cent. on the same.

The thrifty Housewife will put up more fruit this year than ever before—Plums with their numerous varieties present a change for table dessert which is not possible with any other variety of fruit. Peaches, are especially favorable as a home canning and preserving fruit—easily preserved and delicious when served on the table. ARABIC'S CAPTAIN SAW FATAL TORPEDO COMING

Queenstown, Aug. 20.—Captain Finch gave the Associated Press a detailed account of the loss of the liner Arabic.

"We were 47 miles south of Galley Head at 9.30 o'clock Thursday morning," he said, "when I perceived the steamer Dunsley in difficulty.

"Going towards her, I observed a torpedo coming for my ship, but could not discern a submarine. The torpedo struck 100 feet from the stern making terrible havoc of the hull. The vessel began to settle immediately and sank in about 8 minutes.

"My order from the bridge about getting the boats launched was promptly obeyed. Fourteen were quickly filled and lowered. Two capsized. We had taken every precaution while in the danger zone.

"There were plenty of life-belts on deck and the boats were ready for immediate launching. The officers and crew all behaved excellently, and did everything possible in the circumstances, getting people into the boats and picking up those in the sea. I was the last to leave. I remained on the bridge until the water was lapping at my feet, and then dove off.

When I came up my head struck some wreckage and I was slightly injured. I swam to a nearby raft, but was unable to draw myself up on it. Two women with a baby were clinging to one side. I helped them to clamber on the raft, and then hung on. We were rescued about twenty minutes later."

Captain Finch paid special tribute to the heroic conduct of several engineers and firemen, who remained at their posts to the last, and sacrificed their lives to execute orders from the bridge, thus insuring the safety of the passengers. Among those lost was the Captain's nephew.

The Arabic's commander spoke appreciatively of the kind treatment receieved by passengers and crew aboard rescuing vessels, and likewise the arrangements made for their comfort at Queenstown. His chief regret was that he was not able to save the lives of everyone on board.

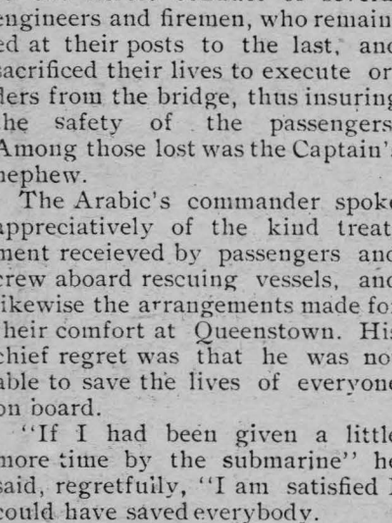

"If I had been given a little more time by the submarine" he said, regretfuily, "I am satisfied I could have saved everybody.

"When I saw the white wake of the torepedo it was 300 yards away, said the captain." "It struck about at right angles.

"A big stream of water spouted up to a great height, carrying a lot of wreckage and splintering one of the lifeboats."

W. R. Travers, who was held responsible for wrecking the Farmers' Bank, and sentenced to six years in Kingston penitentiary, it is reported will be released next month after serving three and a half years of his term.

Brutal Cornwall Mother Sent to Jail

A young woman named Dufresne was placed under arrest in Cornwall last Thursday by Officer Seymour on a charge of ill-treating her four-year-old step-son.

Neighbors of the family complained of the abuse the child was receiving from the step-mother, and local officers of the Children's Aid Society were appealed to. Officer Seymour swore out a warrant and locked the woman up.

Parties who went to the Dufresne home gave evidence of the most brutal treatment.

Friday afternoon the woman appeared in the police court and was sentenced by Police Mrgistrate Danis to one month in jail.

British Front Now 100 Miles

A Paris paper is permitted by the French and British censors to state that in nothern France and Flanders the British army now holds over a hundred miles of the front, instead of the forty miles which constituted the British front, in the earlier stages of the war. From the sea southward the first army is Belgian, the next is French and the third British. Then comes another French army, with a new British army immediately to the south. There are 800,000 British troops now on the firing line, according to The Petit Parisen, and the British reinforcements have been so well trained at home that they are now sent straight from the transports to the trenches.

Ten years ago two young women of Big Laural, Virginia, wrote their names on an egg while waiting in turn to make their purchases at the local grocery. Only recently a letter arrived at Big Laural, addressed to Miss Stella Andrews, one of these two girls, saying that her name had just been seen on an egg in a New York grocery, and, out of curiosity the letter had been written to find out the age of the egg. Miss Andrews had been dead for seven years, and the letter was delivered to her parents. Certainly cold storage is a wondertul thing.

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong and active.

A Call From The Front

To the Editor of The Record:

I saw an editorial that stated that mothers of Canada are afraid to let their boys join the army for fear that they will learn to drink, and that the mothers are more afraid of drink than of the Germans. If the lads who are restrained from enlisting on this account were worth it (which doesn't seem likely) I could assure the mothers that conditions here are more like a Keeley Institute than a saloon, and, as a matter of fact, the Germans are worth fearing a little now and again.

I think there are people in Canada who don't just realize the relative values of things in peace and war. One has to watch a battalion that came out here over 1,000 strong, march past with 60 or 70 of the original men in it to get the right perspective. Any man who can get away, and is able to do anything with his hands or head in the Empire's service without subjecting his family to starvation is needed, at once. And any man who because of his business or convenience, doesn't is an abject coward in every sense of the word. This war has only started, and our casualties have only started. When one considers the ease with which the Germans have rolled back the Russians, and the strength of the German positions along our front, any man must realize what a sacrifice we have to make to free Belgium. And that is the irreducible minimum that Britain has to accomplish before she can accept peace with honor. The position of Britain in my opinion, is critical. The future of Canada is irrevocably bound up with that of the United Kingdom.

France is our example. There isn't an able-bodied man who isn't in the army, or working for the Government. The crops are being harvested by the women, old men 75 to 80 years of age, and child ren, all working in the fields. They realize that a year of pleasure and a man's life are small sacrifice to make when the liberty of their children and country is at stake.

The Parisian newspapers are cut down to a small sheet, while the English and Canadian papers still run their theatrical and sporting pages, market and fashion reports. Every cent that is spent in these things should go to the war fund. You in Canada have got to realize that if Germany is not broken in this war, she comes out as the the mistress of the world, with a war-crazy Kaiser and military circle at her head. We at the front realize what we are up against and that our chances of coming out of it whole and well are small. What we need more than anything is not to hear that the Governor-General or the Canadian Government and nation are proud of us, but that they are straining every nerve and muscle to back us up, and that our places will be taken here by men who are able to do our work. And that means the best men Canada has.

Gunner Oliver E. Baillie,
2nd Battery, 1st Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, on active service in France.

August 3.

In twenty years the egg production in Canada has increased from sixty-four million dozen to over one hundred and twenty-three million dozen, and still their are not enough produced in Canada to supply the demand. Twenty years ago a population of four million eight hundred thousand people consumed only at the rate of 11.8 per capita, while now, a population of over seven millions use eggs at the yearly rate of 17.39.

An exchange remarks that a man can start out any day and inside of an hour and thirty minutes he can engage a woman to work for him for life for nothing a week, while it will take two weeks of solid search to get one to work at fair wages and board.

A Brockville girl, Mildred Derbyshire, grandaughter of Senator Derbyshire accomplished the feat of swimming across the St. Lawrence at that point. The distance is two miles.

Lance-Corporal Allen's Lone Battle In Trench

London, Aug. 24.—Dr. Benjamin Rand, in a letter to The Times, claims that too little attention has been given to the gallant deeds of individual Canadian officers and men who were engaged at Ypres and goes on to instance the case of Lance-Corporal Allen, of the 10th Brigade. Allen, he says, was awarded the D.C.M., two months ago, but the beief official record of his deeds did not do him justice, as the following report of one of his superior officers will testify:

"I will give you some idea of what Allen did. Our machine-guns were all in one particular strip of trench. In one hour or so all the machine-guns were out of action except the one Allen was hanging to. You can imagine what it was like when I tell you that he was the only man left in that part of the trench and it had previously held about 40 men. He fought at least 30 minutes entirely on his own. He had to set his gun up two or three times, and then when it was finally smashed by a shell he went along the trench to the next gun and did the same with that. When the last gun was smashed Allen banged away with his rifle until he was killed. He undoubtedly deserved the V. C."

A Reason for Advertising.

A lady who understands advertising says, "No lady wishes to be looked upon as a shopping fiend; she does not care to go into a store and have a merchant show all his stock in order to find out whether he keeps what she wishes to purchase and whether the article is sold at a price she can afford. It is much easier and pleasanter to look through the advertisements of a newspaper than it is to bore the clerks and waste her own time. Next to the local news items, the advertisements in a paper stating articles for sale with prices, will keep much of the money which goes to the large cities at home.

Italy has now joined in the chase after Turkey. It will require an experienced carver to give each "white meat" when all hands "sit to."

In the Back Yard Garden contest in Toronto, the trophy for the oldest gardener was won by a contestant whose card recorded his age as 105 years. Nothing like "back to the land" for an elixir.

The amalgamation of the Royal Bank and the Bank of Hamilton has been forbidden by the Minister of Finance on the grounds that they are both strong institutions now, and the public would be the loser in lessening competition among banks for the people's business.

A burglar in Toronto tried the old game of the hare and the tortoise on Satuaday night when after makIng up a bundle of booty he laid down on the counter for a nap which extended until late Sunday when he was awakened by the police.

Ex-president Roosevelt in referring to the torpedoing of the Arabic says it is now time for action by the United States. Evidently President Wilson is following the advice of Ex-president Taft after he was defeated by Wilson when he said "When you get a blow between the eyes, sit down."

It is announced by the Minister of Militia that all machine guns available have been ordered. Your money and assistance is now more necessary than ever in lessening the suffering caused to our soldiers by the enemies' machine guns.

Cheering War News

After all the depressing news of Russian retreats before the advancing Germans in Poland, it was very cheering on Monday to read of the defeat of German fleet in the Gulf of Riga by the Russians when the Germans lost one of the latest and most powerful cruisers in their fleet, the superdreadnought Moltke, three other cruisers and seven torpedo boats. The Moltke is believed to have been accounted for by a British submarine. The Germans attempted to land troops at the north east corner of the Gulf of Riga which also met with disaster when the Russians captured four enormous barges crammed with soldiers and are reported to have killed the entire lot.

From the Dardanelles also comes cheering news, where the landing of a new allied expeditlon has gained considerable ground and almost surrounds the Turk position and will lead to early success in that quarter. In the Vosges the French have not only repulsed the Crown Prince in his attempt to force a way towards Paris, in one of the greatest battles of the war but they actually hold a better position than that before the Crown Prince's effort.

Germany's Day Of Reckoning

(The 'Statist',)

There is a widespread delusion respecting the resources of Germany which it is desirable to dispel. Newspaper writers and public speakers are never tired of dwelling upon the wonderful resource that Germany has shown during the eleven months of the war. These people have never been prepared by the classical education which they received to understand national staying power. It is not surprising, therefore, that they are dumbfounded by the evidence given that Germany is not yet exhausted.

We are prepared to stake whatever reputation we possess on the assertion that the two Central European Empires have not at the present time six millions of men in the field, and never will be able to bring that force to bear upon their opponents. If the reader will bear in mind what is happening here at home he will share our disbelief.

We have been engaged in the war now for over eleven months, and yet we have had to change our Government, to create a new Department, and to transfer our most energetic public man from the Exchequer to this rew Department so as to be able to supply our Army with sufficient munitions of war. We have thrown our whole economic organization into disorder by withdrawing a couple of millions of men from peaceful pursuits and enlisting them in the army; and yet we are asked to belive that Germany has withdrawn, not a couple of millions, but five millions of men or over, from productive employments, and that yet she has beaten all her adversaries in producing munition supplies in unheard of quantities. The thing is absolutely impracticable, and is as much of a dream as any fantasy that haunts midnight sleep.

What enables Germany to do what she is doing in regard to men is that she has, since her victory over France nearly half a century ago, been devoting herself unceasingly to preparation for this war. With that view she has built an admirable system of strategic railways, and by means of those railways she shifts troops from France to Poland and back again as circumstances compel her to strengthen the one position or the other.

But that kind of thing may be done for months. It cannot be persisted in very long.

When one hears of what is being done by Germany, one should remember that a great deal of the ability to do so is derived from plundering Belgium and the occupied provinces of France. The resources of Germany, in real simple truth, are by no means what they are supposed to be. They are very nearly exhausted, as will be seen so soon as Russia is in a position to bring up overwhelming forces and to drive the Austrians and Germans before them. But the real resources of the two Central European Empires are very nearly exhausted already.

Germany looks imposing now because she made vast preparations and they are not yet quite exhausted, and because her people are wonderfully patriotic and are fighting well. But the day of reckoning is rapidly approaching.

Women's Institute Meeting

The meeting of the Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. David Allison yesterday afternoon was largely attended. The programme consisted of a splendid address on the Life of Adelaide Proctor by Miss Smith of Chesterville which was thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed by every one.

Miss Boyd of Winchester gave a piano solo, and Miss Amy Beattie sang "The Lost Chord," and was accompanied on the piano by Miss Ruth Lawson, both which where heartily applauded.

A pleasant feature of the afternoon entertainment was the presenting of a cut glass compote dish to Miss Hazel Saucier. The presentation was made by Mrs. W. B. Lawson on behalf of the Institute, who in a few well chosen words voiced the sentiments of all present.

Tea was served in the dining-room, Mrs. J. T. Kearns and Mrs. Ingram Smith presiding at the tea table and were assisted in serving by the following ladies: Misses Ruth Lawson, Violet Saucier, Amy Beattie and Ruth Garrow.

Great Minds Think Alike

Two Irishmen, long enemies, met in the street one day. Said one:

"What's the sinse of two intilligint min goin' year after year, like a couple of wildcats spittin' at each other? Here we live in the same block, and 'tis a burnin' shame that we do be actin' like a couple of boobies. Come along wid yer, shake hands and we'll make up and be frinds." This they did. One looked at the other and said:

"What are you thinkin' about?"

The other replied: "Oi'm thinkin' the same thing that you are."

"So," said the first one, "ye're startin' agin, are ye?"

TITLED NUNS.

Many Englishwomen Have Gone Into Convents.

The announcement that the Hon. Albinia Brodrick, sister of Viscount Midleton, has almost completed a hospital in County Kerry at a cost of £5,000, for the peasants, calls attention to the noble work of this lady, who for several years has been living a life of self-sacrifice among the poorest of Ireland's poor.

For their sakes she sold her beautiful old furniture, her china and jewellery, trained and became a certificated medical and surgical nurse, midwife, and sanitary inspector, and lived among the peasants in a little cottage on 5s. a week. Not only, however, did she dispose of her effects in order to find money for the benefit of the Irish poor, but she saved the expense of having a foreman in connection with the building of the hospital, by doing the work herself. Pending the opening of the hospital, Miss Brodrick keeps a supply of drugs and medicines in her cottage. Sometimes she is summoned to visit her patients, and tramps for many miles over the mountains to their homes.

Another titled lady who is an ardent worker on behalf of the Irish poor is Lady Hermione Blackwood, daughter of the late and sister of the present Marquess of Dufferin and Ava. She, too, became a trained nurse, entering one of the big London hospitals, in which she worked exactly like any other probationer, and since then has devoted much of her time and energy to work among the Irish peasants.

Quite a number of ladies have sacrificed wealth, rank, and title in order to enter convents and devote themselves to charitable work. At the beginning of the year it was announced that Julia Lady Lyveden had been received as a novice in the convent of Poor Clares at Edinburgh. Poor Clares is one of the most severe and exacting orders in the world. The nuns go barefooted, or sandalled, while abstinence, silence and voluntary poverty are insisted upon.

Some time ago, too, it was announced that Lady Maud Barrett, second daughter of the late Earl of Cavan, was about to enter a sisterhood and cut herself off from the outside world for life; while in 1912 Lady Mary Catherine Ashburnham entered the Sacred Heart Convent at Rochampton, an order which devotes itself chiefly to the education of children.

But this does not complete the list of ladies belonging to the British aristocracy who have become nuns. No fewer than four of the Duchess of Norfolk's aunts are in convents, while the duke has one sister in the Carmelite Order, and another a Sister of Charity. Two daughters of the late Lord Russell of Killowen are in the Convent of the Holy Child at Mayfield, Sussex, while Lord Petre, Lord Albemarle, and Lord Denbigh have sister nuns.

Then Spake the "Dead."

It was a suit in Chancery, and there was a great gathering of the deceased's family, quarrelling, as relatives will, over the division of the spoils. The lawyers engaged chuckled, for the suit seemed likely to be prolonged and complicated.

There were many lawyers, too, and the judge marvelled at the immensity of the deceased man's family as silk and stuff rose in rapid succession, introducing themselves with the usual formula: "And I, my lord, am for the nephews, or nieces, or fifteenth cousins removed, as the case may be, of the deceased." The procession seemed interminable, but at last it came to an end. Then a small voice was heard timidly saying from the back of the court, "May I be allowed to speak, my lord?"

There was dead silence as his lordship adjusted his spectacles and asked, rather dejectedly, "Who are you?"

The answer was, to say the least, unexpected.

"I am the deceased, my lord," said the modest voice from the back of the court. That ended the action.

Quite unknown to his relatives, the "deceased" had turned up from the wilds of Rhodesia. Obviously a man of humor, he must have taken a delight in watching how "the best-laid schemes of mice and men gang aft aglee."

Why We Lack Ennui.

It is a grand thing for the English language that there is no word for "ennui." If the creation had been drab-colored; if there had been no horses, dogs, water rats, or dragon flies; if science and art had been intuitive; if religion had been clear; if all men's conditions had been equal; if men and women were always amenable to reason, and boys were always quiet, then the world might have been somewhat dull; there would have been a justifiable word for ennui in all languages.

To Conserve Ruins.

The most interesting of the archaeological works lately taken in hand at Delhi is the conservation of the ruins known as the Kotila, of citadel of Firozeabad, the city built in the early part of the 15th century by the Pathan Firozeahah. These ruins contain the pillar of Asoka some twenty centuries old which was brought from its site in the Siwalik hills by Firozeshah in 1357 and set-up by him on a high base consisting of a treble series of arches.

"DICKINSON OF BOW STREET."

Sir John Is London's Most Popular Magistrate.

Scrupulous fairness and kindness are the prevailing characteristics of Sir John Dickinson, who has been Chief Metropolitan Police Magistrate at Bow Street since 1913, and who is hearing the preminminary stages of the "Brides in Bath" case, as it has been termed.

Sir John has always been a humane judge. He was one of the strongest advocates of the children's court, and a little scene which took place on one occasion at Old Street Children's Court illustrates the great kindliness of his disposition. A little girl of eight was brought before him charged with begging.

"Are you not very naughty?" Sir John said to her.

"No!" was the indignant reply.

"But you are. And if you are not good you will be sent away from your father."

"I want to go with daddy now."

"Will you be good?"

"Yes. Please may I go with daddy "

"Well, this time I think you may go."

"Oh," said the child, "you are good now. I should like to kiss you."

"Would you?" replied the magistrate, hesitating a moment. "Well, you may, because you are going to be a good little girl."

The little girl, who was standing close to the magistrate, kissed him gravely on the cheek, then she took her father's hand and led him out of the court, waving farewell as she reached the door.

Sir John has been a Metropolitan magistrate since 1890, and for twenty-three years was attached to the Thames Police Court, where he acquired a knowledge of Yidd'sh that was often of great service. People of almost every nationality have been brought before him, for the district is one of great poverty, and the tale of violent crimes which have been associated with it is notorious.

At the same time, however, Sir John believes, with enthusiasm, in the great reforming influence of the Probation of Offenders Act.

His interest in the welfare of the rising generation is illustrated by his remarks concerning the value of such organizations as boys' brigades and boys' clubs in supplying healthy discipline to youth. "A deal of crime," he once said, "is due to an utter lack of discipline in English life. So many of our youths grow into slouching men with slouching minds."

Staggering the Super.

In the art of grandiloquent circumlocution, few could give points to the old actor-manager, John Coleman. To an open-mouthed super he once said, "My dear sir, will you endeavor to demonstrate to the denizens of the auditorium that you are playing a character unlike anything of the present day? And when you ascend the raking piece and leave the stage, be good enough to emit a greasy laugh of truculent defiance."

To an equally astonished waiter at a Lyceum Fun supper he said, "Would it be infra dig. for me to ask for a little more fish? Heaven knows I am no gourmand, but really these infinitesimal portions are positively annoying."

"He loved," says Mr. J. H. Barnes, in "Forty Years on the Stage," to address an audience at all times, and would stop in a soliloquy to do so if there was a chance. Once in Lincoln, in playing Claude Melnotte, he came to the point some lines before the end:

"'That voice! Thou art——?'

"John Coleman: 'Thy h-u-s-b-a-n-d!'

"A man walked out of the rather empty pit, with heavy boots resounding. John advanced to the footlights, and said, 'My dear sir, this play has not yet concluded.'

"The man looked round, paused, and made reply, 'No, I dare say not, John; but I've seen as much as I want,' and pursued his way to the door, not in the least nonplussed."

Doctoring Dreadnoughts.

After the conflict, Jack Tars have several methods of stopping the incoming water when a battleship has been hit below the water-line. For instance, if a small hole has been made in the vessel's side, an apparatus like an umbrella is used. This is thrust through the hole, point first, and then drawn back so that it will open like an umbrella, leaving the canvas outside.

Of course, the pressure of the water effectually forces the canvas against the ship's side, thus stopping the leak; but to make it more secure the handle of the umbrella, which is formed like a screw, is fastened by a nut inside.

Australia's Trade Drops.

The total imports of merchandise into the Union of South Africa during 1914 were valued at $156,612,500 compared with $192,631,900 for 1913. The largest decrease was in imports of articles of food and drink, of which the values were $30,000,000 and $35,000,000 respectively. Exports decreased from $325,573,000 in 1913 to $192,475,000 in 1914. This large drop is accountable for principally by the stoppage of the export of gold and diamonds, the value of the former being $187,000,0000 in 1913, compared with $102,000,000 in 1914, and the latter $60,000,000 and $27,000,000 respectively.

Selecting Seed Potatoes

For many years farmers have given attention to the planting, manuring and cultivation of their potato crop, but generally neglected methods of seed selection or breeding. Regarding live stock it is universally recognized that it pays to put forth every effort toward improving the strain by careful selection and breeding. The field of plant breeding and selection offers to every farmer an interesting and profitable diversion, and it should become the farmers hobby.

Experiments have shown that potatoes grown from hill-selected seed will give an increase of from 30 to 50 per cent. over the average yield. The hill selection method consists in making individual hill selections in the field at digging time, selecting, of course, for uniformity in size and a maximum number of merchantable tubers. Each hill may be given a number and kept and planted separately the next year to permit comparison when the progeny is harvested. Another good plan is to go through the field in autumn just before the tops die down and mark, by a twig or a stake, the hills showing most vigor and resistance to disease When harvest comes the marked hills may be saved for seed, discarding the hills which do not come up to standard. Enough may be selected in this way each year to plant a plot sufficiently large to supply the seed for the whole crop the following year.

What The Farmer Did.

A city man recently visited with his 'country cousin.' The man from the city wishing to explain the joys of metropolitan life, said: "We have sure been having fun for the last few days. Thursday we autoed to the Country club and golfed until dark, then trolleyed back to town and danced until morning."

The country cousin, not to be outdone in the least, began telling some of the pleasures of the simple life. "We have been having pretty good times here too. One day we buggied out to Uncle Ned's and went out to the blacklot, where we baseballed all that afternoon. In the evening we sneaked up to the attic and pokered until morning."

A sturdy old farmer who was listening and who was not to be stumped, took up the conversation at this point and said, "I was having some fun about this time myself. I muled to the cornfield and gee-hawed until sundown. Then I suppered until dark, and piped until nine o'clock. Then I bedsteaded until the clock fived, after which I breakfasted until it was time to go muling again."—Judge.

Latest Fish Story.

Here's a fish story from across the river:—A farmer near Roberts Corners ran his air cooled machine to Silver Lake recently, and was a bit tardy in putting his foot on the brake. The machine slid into the pond and was later hauled up and run home. The farmer was greatly surprised that evening when on opening the hood he found two pickerel which had come up through the air vents, toasted themselves on the spark plugs over the engines and were ready for the evening meal. The farmer reported that both fish were over size. Fishing with autos is not prohibited, so the meal thus happily furnished was lawful.

Farmer Found Buried Alive

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 20—Joseph Valade, a farmer, living at North Lancaster, lost his life to-day by a cave-in. Valade had gone to the farm of a neighbor for a load of gravel. Being missed, a search was instituted, with the result that his dead body was found buried in the gravel. Valade was a married man and leaves a widow and four young children.

Peculiar Prank of Ball of Fire in Recent Storm.

A peculiar freak of lightning was shown near Algonquin in Monday's storm. Neighbors of Mr and Mrs. James Dustin saw a large ball of fire strike the chimney of the Dustin home, near Algonquin, shattering the chimney. They expected to see the flames shoot forth but such was not the case. The lightning rushed down the stovepipes and blew the ashes all over the room. In the room at the time were Mr. and Mrs Dustin, Miss Dustin and two neighbors. As the lightning struck the chimney the noise was deafening and as it blew the ashes over the room each occupant involuntarily felt of the calf of the left limb, each one feeling a pain shoot through them, but none of the occupants were seriously injured. A plain white plate resting on the stove was badly cracked by the lightning, the pattern formed being so unique in design that Mrs. Dustin has decided to keep it for a souvenir.

Mrs. Dustin had a miraculous escape from being killed as only a few moments prior to the accident she had been moving some articles off the stove.

Bulgarian Atrocities

The ticklish position of Bulgaria in the war recalls the visit paid by David Christie Murray, the novelist, to Gladstone. When he left, Gladstone with old-fashioned courtesy, followed him out into the hall and helped him on with his overcoat. Now Murray was a great traveller, and his overcoat was a peculiar one - a garment of brown camel-hair, with a bear-skin lining.

"Where on earth," said Gladstone, "did you get this extraordinary coat?"

"I bought it in Bulgaria, sir," Murray replied.

"Humph!" said Gladstone, "I've talked a great deal in my time about the Bulgarian atrocities, but I never expected to see one of them in London."

Yacht Burned at Burritt's Rapids.

The glass cabin cruiser yacht Dianthe was burned to the water's edge at Burritt's Rapids last week. It was owned by H. C. Dier of Ottawa, who with his wife and son were on their way from the Bay of Quinte to Ottawa after a month's cruise. The yacht was used as their summer home and caught fire while they were away fishing. All their wearing apparel, jewellry, dishes, etc., were lost.

Train Carried one Passenger.

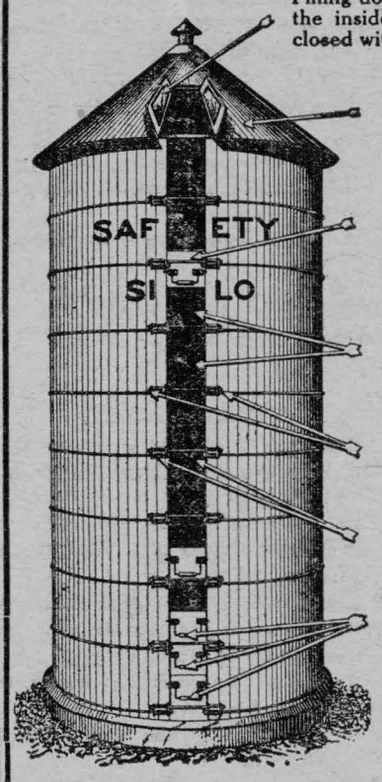

A Grand Trunk special train rolled over the road from Montreal to Hamilton, last Thursday in fast time. It carried one passenger. It shot out of Montreal at 12.21 p.m. and, treating the city of Toronto as a mere water tank, it rattled into Hamilton at 8.26 p.m. As Mr. Arthur Private, the lonely passenger, had given the road until three minutes to nine to land him in the Ambitious City, this was extremely satisfactory.

Mr. Private, who is in charge of the Overseas Club Funds in Canada, merely wanted to go to Hamilton to deliver a speech. But he wanted to go pretty badly. The G.T.R. people started to gather up a special train for his accommodation at 11.40 that forenoon. He was told that the road would guarantee nothing, but would try hard. The special consisted of a locomotive, baggage car and first class coach.

Mr. Private motored into the Bonaventure station six minutes late, but the special made up the lost time. It knocked out the time consumed between Montreal and Toronto by the famous International Limited. This train takes 7½ hours that far, and Hamilton is an hour further. The special, however, made it in 8 hours and 5 minutes. The mileage is 380. At least ten transportation stops had to be made, consuming five minutes each, including time wasted in slowing down, so it will be noted that Mr. Private was dragged through space at the rate of 52.41 miles per hour all the way.

A further calculation of the benefit accruing to the Overseas Club's Funds, which presumably paid the expenses, would add much interest to the accout of such a wild dash to make a speech.

Advantages of the Safety Silo

Filling doors have glass windows which light the inside and form part of the roof when closed without wind obstruction.

Cone shaped roof with Galvanized iron ventilator on peak to let out the gas and steam as they accumulate.

Our fasteners being entirely on the door, doors can be left in the opening at any height merely pushed up out of the way and always where they belong.

Easiest to get feed out of. Unobstructed continuous opening, 22 inches wide, makes it possible to shove ensilage out instead of having to threw it up three or four feet in the air to an opening.

Takes man or boy only one hour instead of a day to tighten or adjust every hoop on Silo while standing on ladder formed by fasteners. No dangerous slipping separate ladder needed as on other Silos.

Our safe fastener makes a substantial ladder right under opening rungs 15 inches apart, stands out 6 inches from the door and is 14 inches wide.

From the above points we leave you to judge as to its superiority over all others.

MORRISBURG, ONTARIO

The Minister For Horseshoes.

(The 'Little Paper,' London.)

The horses and mules of the British Army are being very largely shod by a London teacher! Behind that bald fact there is a great romance of thought, energy, and organization, which has sprung up where chaos and blank dismay existed not very long ago.

We think of horshoes as being hand-wrought in village smithies, where rosy-cheeked children at the door watch the sparks fly from the ringing anvil, but shoes for the horses of an army, even in times of peace, must be made by machinery. That had long been done in Great Britain, with the result that the trade was concentrated in the hands of a few firms, who, when the demand came for an enormously increased output, found themselves unable to furnish the supplies required. The British Army was, therefore, in a very serious position, for horses break and wrench off their shoes on the hard and broken roads of war-time in a way that is unequalled in time of peace.

What was to be done to meet the great need of the Army? Somebody at the War Office mentioned Mr. A. E. Hill, a London County Council school-teacher, who had been conducting classes for blacksmith work in his spare time at nights at a school in Bermondsey. Mr. Hill is not a farrier, he is not even an amateur farrier, but he knows all the farriers in the towns and villages, for so interested was he in his subject that he had started and successfully conducted a paper for blacksmiths called the 'Anvil.' To Mr. Hill, then, the War Office turned with a request for shoes for horses.

Mr. Hill's answer was practical and immediate. He put a notice to blacksmiths in his paper; he got in touch with blacksmiths big and small, townsmen and villages. 'How many shoes a week can you supply?' he asked each smith Each promised according to his ability—some a few dozens, some a few hundredweights, some in tons. Mr. Hill mapped the country into districts, appointed depots for each big area, and in a few weeks had 4,000 master blacksmiths at work, all turning out shoes for the horses and mules of the British Army.

He organized a department at the War Office, and, giving up school-teaching, he directs this department himself, with eighty clerks appointed to serve under him. Every day shoes are being hammered out in the smithies from Wick to Falmouth. They go to the depots, and then on to Bermondsey, where they are inspected and passed; then they go to Woolwich and out to the front.

Quietly the work goes on, without fuss or excitement, but Mr. Hill is providing a hundred tons of shoes a week, over a million shoes a month, and every week each blacksmith gets his cheque and goes on his way rejoicing. There never was a greater triumph of quiet cool-headed organization. What the British Army with all its organization could not do for itself a school teacher has done for it, and the Minister of Horseshoes is one of the most successful servants of the nation in these days of its need.

Horse Lands in Auto.

While driving on the stone road in Marlborough township, across the bridge at Beckett's Landing, Sunday evening, Dr. McGahey, accompanied by J. R. Appleby had an exciting few moments and wrecked their machine. They were proceeding in the direction of Burritt's Rapids at a fast clip and overtook a buggy to which was attached a young horse. The animal took fright at the auto and reared on its hind legs as the machine was passing, coming down on top of the car and narrowly escaping striking the occupants. The machine was forced into the ditch and overturned its occupants being thrown out, fortunately without injury. The car was but slightly damaged as a result ot the spill. —Kemptville Advance.

It Couldn't Help Itself!

The density of the German mind is well illustrated in the following story told by Mr. Andrew Carnegie.

He was once long before the war, traveling in America with a German financier, and together they went to Niagara Falls. The wonderful scene sent Mr. Carnegie into raptures of praise, but the German merely looked stolidly on and said nothing.

Mr. Carnegie was astonished at such indifference, and, hardly able to contain himself, he turned to his companion and said:—

"Don't you think that's a wonderful sight?"

"What?" asked the German.

"Why, that gigantic body of water pouring over that precipice?"

The German stared silently at one of the most extraordinarv sights in nature, and then he loked up blankly and asked:

"Why, what's to hinder it?"

Woman's World

QUEEN MILENA.

Queen Milena of Montenegro, though somewhat overshadowed by the aggressive personality of King Nicholas enjoys a unique distinction, that of being mother-in-law to more royalty than any other woman in Europe.

"Sire, I have noticed that Montenegro has no exports," once remarked a distinguished foreign traveler to King Nicholas.

"Monsieur, you forget my daughters," wittily retorted the reigning monarch.

The retort was justified, for queer little Montenegro has supplied two monarchs and three other important royal personages with wives. One Montenegrin princess is the present queen of Italy, and another now would be queen of Servia but for her premature death, while three other daughters of Prince Nicholas are the Grand Duchess Militza of Russia, the Duchess Anastasia of Leuchtenberg and Princess Anna of Battenberg.

The number of brides that Montenegro has supplied to the courts of Europe is altogether disproportionate to the size and importance of the little country. Montenegro has an area of 3,500 square miles and a population of a quarter of a million. The capital, Cetinje, is a village with a population of 3,000. The princely palace in which so many distinguished royal brides were born and brought up is a modest structure, in which a moderately successful American tradesman would never condescend to dwell.

But in these modest surroundings the princesses of Montenegro grew up to be splendid specimens of womanhood. As children they enjoyed the greatest liberty and escaped the restraints of court etiquette, which are the curse of most royal boys and girls. In the severe winters which are experienced in the country of the black hills, as Montenegro is called in the Balkans, the princesses were encouraged to harden their constitutions by sleighing, running in snowshoes, skating and indulging in other cold weather sports and pastimes. At the warmer seasons of the year they made long excursions into the wooded and mountainous interior and paid frequent visits to the prince's villa on the shores of the Adriatic sea. By the time they were in their teens they could ride a bare-back horse, drive a four-in-hand, hunt and shoot, swim and sail or row a boat to perfection.

While thus enjoying childhood to the full, the royal girls were educated by French and German tutors and governesses, who polished off the roughness which might otherwise have become apparent in their characters. Prince Nicholas allowed each of his daughters to run wild in Montenegro until sixteen years of age, after which the princesses were sent to Vienna and Paris to gain a knowledge of the western world, with its totally different manners and customs. After attaining her seventeenth birthday each princess spent six months of the year abroad and six months in Montenegro, and this plan proved to be an effective conclusion to an excellent scheme of education. The Montenegrin princesses developed from tomboy girls into women of unusual grace and beauty, of exceptional personal distinction and of remarkable talent in many directions.

A Suffrage Exhibit.

One of the exhibits which are attracting much attention in the suffrage booth at the Panama-Pacific fair is made of tiny imported dolls representing all the voting and nonvoting countries of the world. The nonvoting dolls stand behind a wall, "symbolic of the conservatism, inertia and self interest which keeps women from the ballot," the Empire State campaign commission announces. The costume of each country is carefully presented, except that midgets from the unenfranchised countries are dressed in mourning.

Another effective exhibit is a framed copy of the record of the Sixty-third Congress, giving each representative's vote on the woman suffrage amendment.

When She Talked.

Patrice—Yes, she is. You just ought to hear her play bridge whist!—Yonkers Statesman.

ARISTOCRATIC ETIQUETTE.

How You Should Address the "Upper Ten."

Broadly speaking, rank, official rank, and social importance give precedence in aristocratic circles, the latter when the two former are not present; age or mere riches give none; and, except in the case of a peeress in her own right, it is the man's rank alone which confers precedence. Furthermore, a man endows his wife with his own personal rank, which she legally retains during her widowhood, except in the case of the wives, or children, of great officials of state and bishops and archbishops. Such as these derive no benefit from the dignities of their husband's office.

In the peerage, those of the same degree in rank take precedence according to the date of the creation of their titles. For example, a duke of nineteen would go in to dinner before a duke of ninety, if the title of the youthful duke chanced to be of an earlier date than that of the veteran aristocrat. This holds good for every degree of rank in the peerage, and also the baronetage and knightage.

It is a curious fact that while a woman, such as the daughter of a peer or baronet, retains her innate rank and position if she marries a commoner, if she weds a peer who has less rank than her own she may lose many degrees of precedence. For instance, when Cornelia Lady Wimborne's late husband was made Lord Wimborne she, as a duke's daughter, lost very many degrees of precedence, and a recent example is that of the new Lady d'Abernon, who, as the daughter of an earl, held a higher rank when she was Lady Helen Vincent.

A peeress in her own right does not lose her rank and precedence either by marriage, widowhood, or re-marriage, but if she marries a peer of higher rank than her own she at once takes the precedence of her husband. Instances of this latter fact are afforded by the Countesses of Powis and Yarborough. Lady Powis is Baroness Darcy de Knayth in her own right, and Lady Yarborough is Baroness Conyers and Baroness Fauconberg; yet each of these ladies is known by the higher rank of her husband.

Turning to the subject of titles, dukes are addressed as "Duke" by the upper classes, and as "Your Grace" by all other people. A duke's letter should be addressed "The Duke of A.," or, more correctly, "His Grace the Duke of A." The words "His Grace" must be written slightly above to the left. Marquesses, earls, and viscounts are spoken of and to as "Lord B." by their equals, and as "My Lord" by other classes. Their letters would be addressed "The Marquess of B.," "The Earl of C.," and "The Viscount D." Barons are addressed as "Lord E.," and their letters to "The Lord E." In each case the prefix is written above and slightly to the left of the title. If a peer has two titles, they must both be used when addressing an envelope, but only one title is used colloquially. Thus, a lettter to Lord Brougham is addressed "The Lord Brougham and Vaux."

History In Wax Figures.

At an average rate of one model per fortnight I must have turned a round thousand in my time, some in hot haste to be up to date, others at comparative leisure, being less meteoric and of more abiding interest — royalties, for example, and men of letters, or great soldiers like Gordon, Wolseley and Roberts. Each stays as long as his fame endures. Nobody remembers when Shakespeare was not in the exhibition. Voltaire is its oldest inhabitant, and five generations have now passed before the figure of this revolutionary. The most notorious leaders of the French Revolution are there, as, of course, the exhibition was transferred from Paris to London over 100 years ago.

It was in 1802 that madame came to London, having lived in Paris through the whole of the French Revolution. Frequently had her art been requisitioned to mold the head of some sanguinary monster or other, Robespierre, Danton and Marat among the number. The cast of the last mentioned of this trio, still in the exhibition, was taken by Mme. Tussaud at the scene of the murder, and later she made a cast of the once beautiful face of his assassin, Charlotte Corday. Madame came to London alone, leaving her husband, Francois Tussaud, in Paris. After nearly half a century of peaceful and prosperous years in England, she died in 1850, in her ninety-first year. — John Theodore Tussaud in London Strand Magazine.
