CORRESPONDENCE

County Building,
Cornwall, Ontario,
November 21st, 1928.

The Editor,
Morrisburg Leader,
Morrisburg, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

In a recent issue of your paper you published a letter signed by Mr. J. S. Anderson, South Mountain in which Mr. Anderson grossly misrepresented what took place at a meeting held in South Mountain on October 17th.

For the benefit of those who were not present at said meeting and may have read Mr. Anderson's article, we are writing this letter to inform them that practically all of Mr. Anderson's statements are incorrect, meaningless or misleading.

At the meeting referred to there were present Mr. Muir, Chief Engineer of Municipal Roads, Mr. Schermerhern, District Engineer of Municipal Roads, Mr. Cameron, County Engineer, County Road Committee, Reeve and Deputy Reeve of Mountain Township, together with several others. Mr. Anderson made several statements at this meeting and asked several questions, which were satisfactorily answered by Mr. Muir and Mr. Cameron, who quoted from the audited records of the County Council. Mr. Anderson for some reason, known only to himself, apparently was not satisfied and wrote the above mentioned letter to the press.

The first three paragraphs of Mr. Anderson's letter mean nothing in so far as the Highway Improvement Act is concerned. He said that "Mr. Cameron claims he may spend the money where he pleases" and this was not said by Mr. Cameron at the meeting in question, and anyone with any knowledge of municipal affairs knows that the County road appropriations are made by the County Council at the January Session and the expenditure directed during the season by the Road Committee, the work being under the supervision of Mr. Cameron.

The last paragraph of Mr. Anderson's letter states that "The County Report says we paid F. Milligan and others for work done on Road No. 1 in 1927, but there was no work done on Road No. 1 in 1927." This statement is absolutely false and it was pointed out to Mr. Anderson by Mr. Muir and Mr. Cameron that the figures referred ti were taken from the 1926 Auditor's Report, published in 1927, for work done in 1926.

Mr. Anderson's letter besides being misleading and incorrect shows that the writer does not understand the Highway Improvement Act or its operation. The Government pays half the cost of all work on County Roads, and all accounts are audited by Government auditors as well as County auditors, and any ratepayer wishing correct information on anything pertaining to the County Road System may obtain same in the County Building at Cornwall, where all records are kept.

We, the undersigned, consider it our duty to publicly contradict the statements made by Mr. Anderson, knowing them to be incorrect and casting reflection on the integrity of the members of the County Council of 1928 and past years, and County officials.

Kindly give this letter publicity in the next issue of your paper similar to that given Mr. Anderson's letter and consider further newspaper controversy on this subject closed.

WELLS—VANALLEN

A charming fall wedding took place at the parsonage, Aultsville, on Saturday November 17th, when Lois Martha VanAllen, daughter of Mr. Edgar A. Vanallen, became the bride of Sanford George Wells, son of Mr. Samuel G. Wells. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Geo. W. Dustin. The bride looked lovely in a dress of poudre blue georgette, trimmed with transparent velvet and pink flowers with hat, shoes and stockings to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Doris Vanallen, looked pretty in a dress of sand georgette. Mr. Creighton Anderson acted as groomsman. The happy couple left, via the C. N. R., on a wedding trip and visited in Toronto and Niagara Falls. The bride travelled in rose beige satin dress with shoes and stockings to match. On their return on Wednesday November 21st, a reception was held at the bride's grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Vanallen. About 60 relatives and friends were present, and all spent a most enjoyable evening. The array of beautiful gifts was a testimonial of their popularity.

THIEVES VERY ACTIVE IN IROQUOIS DISTRICT

(Chesterville Record)

Fanciers of pullets and turkeys have been touring through Iroquois district visiting farmers' henhouses and carrying off much loot; in fact, relieving the owners in some cases of their entire stock.

Peter Locke, of Brinston, has been a heavy loser, and Andrew Bell of the same place had 20 turkeys that were in prime condition taken away, while John Connor, of the third concession, lost 15 the same way.

Cephas Smith, Dundela, the same night missed 100 pullets that he had just stocked up with, and the pick of his fowls were also carried away. At Iroquois the general store of Allen McInnis was entered from the door facing the river by breaking a glass in it, and reaching in to the lock; at least that is the supposition from the appearance of things in the morning. Several articles from both shop and storehouse are missing, though where a large stock is carried the loss cannot be estimated. Provincial police are investigating the case. A store opened a short time ago by A. W. Jackson was also entered and boxes of chocolate bars and minor articles are missing.

PEDLAR FINED TEN DOLLARS AND COSTS

On Tuesday, November 27th, a man by the name of Chas. Baum, of Jewish nationality, giving his address as Montreal and claiming to be a naturalized Canadian citizen, was arrested in Morrisburg by Provincial Constable Jakeman and brought before Police Magistrate John McCormick of Winchester at the Court House in the former village, on the charge of selling eyeglasses without a license. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $10.00 and costs, amounting in all to $16.00, with a warning not to repeat the offence or he would not get off so easily the next time.

This man claims to be a watchmaker by trade and goes from house to house through the country plying his trade, and incidentally selling and repairing glasses. He claimed that he was not aware that he required a license to sell glasses as he said that he does not attempt to test eyes and does not own a trial case or other device for testing. The Magistrate ruled, however, that according to the Optometry Act he had committed an offence by selling glasses from house to house without holding a license under the act, even if he made no attempt to test eyes.

The matter was first brought to the attention of an Optometrist of the district about a week previously and constable Jakeman was advised of the matter. The man was not located until the day of the arrest, when a patient of one of the Optometrists of the district telephoned information that resulted in constable Jakeman getting his man, with the above result.

This co-operation on the part of the public is a great help to the guardians of the law, and will not only help to rid the district of this undesirable practice but prove a salutary warning to these men.

DR. T. N. MARCELLUS

The death occurred at Mountain Sanitarium, Hamilton, on Thursday November 22nd, of Dr. T. N. Marcellus. Born at Williamsburg, Dundas County, in 1885, he attended the M. C. I. at Morrisburg, later taking a degree of medicine at Queens University. He practiced two years in St. Luke's Hospital, Ottawa, and from there went to Fort Churchhill with the R. N. W. M. P. He then went to Port Nelson with his wife, formerly Miss Clara Owens of Fallowfield. Four years later he returned home and purchased his brother's practice at Finch, Ontario, where he remained four years. Later he moved to Georgetown and from there to Hamilton, Ontario, where he was resident physician in the Mountain Sanitarium.

He is survived by his widow, his father, two sisters, Mrs. George Hill of Williamsburg, Mrs. Briggs McIntosh of Winchester Springs, two brothers, Dr. E. H. Marcellus of Iroquois and Charlie Marcellus of Williamsburg.

SEAWRIGHT—DEEKS

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Tuesday evening, November 20th, at the Alhambra United Church of Toronto, when Dorothy Eileen, eldest daugter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Deeks, Morrisburg, Ont., was united in marriage to James Seawright, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Seawright of Donacloney, Ireland. Rev. J. E. Reid, minister of the church, officiated. The wedding music was played by Mrs. T. R. Robinson, and during the signing of the register Mrs. J. H. Jolly sang. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. F. A. Morin, of Toronto, wore a gown of powder blue georgette and velvet, with picture hat of silver grey georgette, and carried Columbia roses and lilies of the valley.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Seawright left for eastern points. Upon their return they will reside in Toronto.

DAN BARRY'S DAUGHTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Finding the lifeless bodies of his two partners at their gold-mining camp, Harry Gloster flees southward, knowing that he will be accused of the crime. On the way Gloster is jailed after getting into a fight with several men over a girl.

Joan Barry helps Gloster to escape. Later Joan falls in with a bandit gang in the mountains. To be near her, Gloster casts his lot with the gang, too. Joe Macarthur, the chief, confesses to Gloster that he killed the two prospectors. Samuel Carney, cashier of the Wickson Bank, gives Macarthur the combination to the safe, then repents of his deed and tells the president of the bank what he has done. A trap is set for the robbers. Carney rides to head them off, but falls asleep and the bandits ride by to their destruction.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

THE VENGEFUL BULLETS

They had made the trip down from the mountains perhaps half an hour before their schedule time, so well had the horses done their work and so eager were the riders to get to the town. The clearness of the light from even that old moon which hung in the sky had worried them a little as they came down the valley, but before they reached the town of Wickson the high brown haze of clouds had passed across the surface of the moon and made it as dim as a sickle of tarnished tin. Under these favorable auspices they reached the town itself.

Wickson was soundly asleep. At least, there was not a light shining in a single window and the houses watched them go by with blank faces.

At the first corner they separated, as the previous agreement had been. Gloster and Macarthur rode on up the main street, the others turned to the sides. They were to circle around the block and come in again to wait near the bank itself in case of an alarm.

All was so carefully arranged that there appeared slight danger of any interruption, and yet the heart of Harry Gloster was hammering as he went on with the leader. Not a word passed between them, however. They left their horses behind the bank and passed around to the front. The key which the cashier had furnished to Macarthur fitted the door. It opened to them, and they stepped into the black interior.

All was perfectly still, except that the wind which entered with them rattled a paper somewhere in the distance. But when the door was closed behind them, there was a perfect quiet.

With his electric pocket torch Macarthur cast a swift ray of light around the lace, so swift indeed that Gloster saw nothing but a blur of many outlines, but to the leader all seemed to be as clear as day, for he went on now, with a perfect assurance, and after Gloster had stumbled over a chair he fell in behind Macarthur.

They found their way straight to the safe, on which Macarthur flashed the light, partly hooding it with his hand, so that only a dim radiance fell on the combination. He took a slip of paper from his pocket and as he read the numbers Gloster worked the combination, and as he worked it his heart sank within him.

There was little time for conscience to work then. In a moment Macarthur had unlocked the drawer which Carney had previously designated. It was a deep compartment, and from it he drew out small packages done up in strong paper. The other half he stuffed in his own pockets.

"You look as white as a sick kid," commented Macarthur. "Kind of weak in the stomach, Harry?"

The latter shrugged his shoulders.

"Don't let that worry you none," Macarthur went on. "That's the way with the best of us the first time out. It sure bites in on a fellow his first trip. But the second is easy as pie. That's always the way."

As he said this, there was the soft but unmistakable sound of a door being closed somewhere near them.

All the strength passed out of Gloster's big limbs and left him shaking. It appeared to him that the sound of that closing door was the sound of the prison gate clanging loudly upon him, and the voice of the hangman at his ear.

Even Macarthur had started. Now he switched off his light.

"Fire at anything that moves!" he cautioned and led the way back, stealing with wonderful skill among the desks and chairs.

But Gloster did not draw his gun. If there was fighting to do, he would use his hands to the best of his ability, if only the blood would run back into the muscles of his arms again. But he would not take a life—

They had come to the outer corridor when half a dozen shadows sprang up before them, soft and confused objects against the light colored wall, and the gun of Macarthur exploded.

The flash showed Gloster, for the smallest glimpse, six resolute faces, six gleaming guns. The reply was a blasting volley which would have torn them to pieces had it gone home, but, at the instant of Macarthur's shot, the two big men dropped for the floor, Macarthur as a clever manoeuvre, and Gloster because his shaking legs refused to bear him up.

"Take 'em alive!" yelled a voice.

The six plunged at them. A knee struck Gloster on the ribs, another grazed his head, and half a dozen hands tore at him, striving for a grip.

The contact of flesh against flesh sent the blood shooting hot through his veins once more. He heaved himself up. His assailants piled off him, then grappled close, but not close enough.

Near him he saw Macarthur struggling with the men who had fallen upon him, and while the assailants were slight, Macarthur was cursing in a steady stream, although softly, as if even now he were striving to keep from alarming the town.

But in the meantime he had one arm and hand free—a hand which could be balled into a lump as hard and as effective as the jagged head of a club. One man had his arms around his waist, driving him back against the steel fence behind him.

He struck that fellow above the ear, and he went down limply. A swinging hook brought down the next. The third leaped back with a cry of alarm from this fighter of such unhuman strength and swung up his gun.

It was of no use to him. Unseen ruin sped at him through the darkness. There was only a flash of the fist before his eyes as it struck. Down he went, toppling head over heels, and firing his bullet into the ceiling.

Then Gloster turned to Macarthur. The latter was big enough to have handled two men, but there were three of them, and each a sturdy fellow. He was down on the floor, his curses were stifled as his face was bashed against the concrete.

Gloster picked off one man as he might have picked an apple from the ground. He dashed him face down on the floor. The victim lay without a quiver.

He leaned and crashed his swinging fist into the back of another's neck. The third he tied into a knot and cast away. Then he jerked Macarthur to his feet.

"Damn them!" gasped Joe, by way of thanks. "Now fast work, Harry!"

They could see well enough, and everywhere they looked was ruin. At their feet before the door, sprawled on his back with his arms thrown wide, lay big Lew Cambridge. His face was unmistakable. He had come loyally to the defence of his leader and companion when the crisis came. So, too, had Sliver Martin, whose lean body was now crouched near by taking vain shelter behind a concrete hitching post while he emptied his revolver at the windows of the nearby houses.

And every one of those windows, so it seemed, was filled with fighters who had waited prepared for the signal for battle. Against the blackness of the interiors of the rooms were firefly glows as rifles and revolvers spoke. Now Sliver dropped to his side with one gasp and did not stir.

Fatty Guiness and Dud Rainey rushed up the street, bringing a whole group of led horses.

"Joe! Joe!" cried Fatty. "For the love of heaven, Joe and Harry, where are you?"

There was heroism worthy of any battlefield. No gallant soldier who ran out from the trenches to carry in a wounded comrade better deserved a decoration than Fatty and Rainey. But the reward which Fatty collected at once was a bullet through the head which drove him headlong to the ground. One of the horses squealed with pain as a bullet raked across its back, and the whole group bolted, saving only Rainey on his own horse.

He was out of the saddle, now, and across the treet came Babe Cooney. He had stood off making a separate point of diversion. But now he came to join the others at their Waterloo, only to receive a bullet from behind that dropped him on his face in the dust.

And all of this in the space of three seconds as Macarthur and Gloster clambered through the broken door!

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE STURDY MEN OF WICKSON

Certainly Oscar Fern had chosen his men well! Never had there been straighter shooting, although indeed that mass of lead which was sweeping toward the bank was sure to wash down any life that might be in its way.

"Around the corner!" cried Macarthur, and they darted away.

They were out of the main focus of the bullets to be sure. People could no longer shoot at them from three corners. But right across the street were five men kneeling, each with a magazine rifle from which they were pumping a stream of lead. The windows on that side of the bank began to go out with a crash, and Macarthur, with a gasp, dropped to his knees.

Enticing Birds Into the Garden

Birds are among the gardeners' best allies. Nearly every injurious insect has one or more enemies among the birds, so it is an advantage to have birds living in or about the garden. The majority of our common birds are friendly, and will, with a bit of coaxing, take up abodes on the home grounds. To entice birds to the garden, one might plant shrubs and plants that bear fruits and seeds found palatable by them, and arrange thick vines and shrubberies that will provide suitable nesting places. Wrens, robins and bluebirds are fond of bird-houses, and these are advisable because they provide a haven of safety from cats. Houses of bark are well liked by the birds, and inconspicuous as well.

Many birds like to vary their insect diet with seeds. The sunflower bears seeds that are a great attraction to small birds, and notably so to the gay little yellow warbler. These birds will perch upon the sunflower heads and pick until very few seeds remain. Indeed, so palatable are these seeds considered that the birds often take them before they are fully ripe. If the large common sunflower proves incongruous in the garden area, the small types, hybrids or helianthus cucumberifolius, may be used. These are truly charming plants, and well worth using in any case. The plants attain three feet in height and are bushy in the growth. The foliage is deep green and small in size, and the flowers are borne in abundance from early August until frost. "Orion," with narrow, pale yellow petals surrounding a black disk, and "Stella," with wider petals, are excellent varieties. Any seeds overlooked by the birds will come up the following years, as the plant is a hardy annual. Sunflowers surrounded by lavender boltonia make an effective combination. Cornflower seeds are sometimes eaten by birds, too.

PLANTING SHRUBS FOR THEM

Many ornamental shrubs bear berries that are relished by birds. The beautiful orange or red fruits of the bush honeysuckles (Lonicera tatarica in variety) ripen in July. The scarlet berries of the flowering dogwood supply food for the birds during the autumn and early winter, as do the handsome clusters found on the little mountain ash trees. Mulberries and wild cherries are standbys in the bird world, and when planted near the fruit garden will drew their attention from the cultivated fruits. The mazzard and the redbird cherries are the varieties to use for this purpose. The wild black cherry is a beautiful tree on account of its shining leaves, but its recemes of small fruits do not ripen until late July or early August. The mazzard and bird cherries have attractive white flowers in early sprin that contrast well with the varnished red of the young leaves.

The miniature thicket formed by rambler roses makes ideal nesting places for the cheerful song sparrows and robins. The debonair catbird will build his home there, too, if the vine is large enough to make him feel that his nest will be safe. Catbirds are beautiful singers, in spite of the fact that they insist upon inserting a catcall at intervals during the song. These three birds have tremendous appetites and are responsible for the annihilation of a great many injurious insects. The robin and catbird sometimes show little sense in their choice of nesting sites, and if cats are kept on the place they and their young often suffer because of proximity of the nest to the ground.

THE BIRD BATH.

Nothing will attract more bird visitors to the garden than the bird-bath. These should be placed in the sun, away from thick planting but quite near to a small tree. Birds seem to prefer a bath in the sun, but a tree or tall shrub near by is necessary for their safety, because they cannot fly well with wet feathers. Birds are quite particular about the depth of the water. Two inches is sufficient for the smaller ones, and four inches will do nicely for the larger members of the tribe. The bottom of the bath should be sloping, increasing in depth as the centre is reached. Where the depth is but two inches, the slope must be gradual, if at all. A bath three feet in diameter will provide ample room for the bathers.

Baths of good design, constructed of cement made to resemble marble, are good-looking and may be had for less than $10. If these are too formal for the garden design, simpler ones are easily made at home. In one small garden a log topped with an old earthenware pie plate proved so popular among the girls that two more had bo be set up so that the smaller and less aggressive birds could have a chance. These two were placed in a small, rather sparsely branched pear tree, on the side toward the afternoon sun, and seem to be considered more satisfactory to the birds than the original one, which was placed a yard or so from the base of the tree.

Birds must be treated considerately if they are to become tame and feel at home in the garden. They become more confident if one pretends not to see them. The nest should be left severely alone; it is best not to approach it at all unless positive that the old birds are away. Cats, of course, are dangerous to birds, but when belled the birds will have warning of their approach. Cats are cleverest at hunting when hungry, and mature birds are usually able to cope with and outwit a well-fed pet cat.—Now when winter is near is the time to prepare and plan for next year's visitors.

New Election Dodge

Liberals Will Use Old Churchill Speeches On Phonograph Records Backing Free Trade

London.—What at first glance reads like a political sensation of the highest order is the announcement made to-day that during the forthcoming general election the voice of WinstonChurchill, Conservative Chancellor of the Exchequer, will be heard from Liberal platforms extolling the merits of that truly liberal creed, free trade.

While the voice is the voice of Churchill, however, the hand will be the hand of his old political comrades, now his political opponents, who will broadcast Churchill's former views by means of gramophone records and a very loud speaker.

The time was when the present Conservative Chancellor was an ardent Liberal free trader. In his present capacity, however, it has been his duty to appear as the chief protagonist of the policy of the "safeguarding of industries."

What are his real views on the subject nobody knows, but his former opinions are literally "on record" and the free traders will seek, by means of an unholy alliance with science, to confound him out of his own mouth.

Canada Paid Tribute to 60,000 War Dead

Tenth Armistice Anniversary Stirs Memories of Her Offer to Send an Expedition to Defend the Empire, and of the Large Army That Went Overseas.

A nation hushed for two minutes! This is the tribute Canada paid to her 60,000 war dead on the tenth anniversary of Armistice Day.

The occasion has lost nothing with the passing of the years, and the silence will be observed by not only those who knew the great war in all its grim reality but by that younger generation which has grown up since and to whom war is only a faint echo rapidly becoming fainter.

The heroes are not forgotten. Who will forget that dramatic day in 1914 when Sir Robert Borden offered to provide an expeditionary force for the defense of the empire? This offer was accepted by the British Government. In response to calls for volunteers, some 40,000 men assembled in a few weeks at Valcartier, where land had been purchased, cleared, drained and otherwise prepared for the assembling and organization of the troops.

The mobilization scheme prepared in 1913 and revised later was ignored, but gradually the troops were formed into units prior to sailing for England. This original contingent consisted of one division of infantry and one brigade of mounted troops, together with lines of communication units. The immortal Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry was an independent unit, recruited throughout Canada.

Surplus troops were organized into an additional—Fourth—brigade and also accompanied the force. The contingent, with a total strength of 33,000, began to embark at Quebec on Sept. 22. The thirty-one transports gathered at Gaspe Bay, whence they sailed on Oct. 3 with a naval escort provided by the Admiralty.

The contingent remained encamped at Salisbury Plain during the winter of 1914-15, which proved to be an exceptionally wet one. The First Canadian Division proceeded to France in February, 1915, followed in May and June by the Cavalry Brigade (dismounted) and the Motor Machine Gun Brigade.

Meantime other units were being recruited in Canada and passed on to England. The Second Caandian Division was organized and proceeded to France in September, 1915, and together with the First Division formed the Canadian Corps. The Third Canadian Division was organized in France in December. In August, 1916, the Fourth Division, which had been organized in England, joined the Canadian Corps, and for the rest of the war the corps was maintained on a four-division basis.

Other Canadian Forces

The Fifth Canadian Division, which was formed in England in the early part of 1917, did not proceed to France and eventually, in February, 1918, was broken up and its personnel used as reinforcements, with the exception of the divisional artillery, which went to France intact.

Many units which were used in excess of divisional establishments were depleted and their personnel transferred to reserve formations for use as reinforcements. Other new organizations came into being during the course of the war, such as the Canadian Machine Gun Corps, the Canadian Forestry Corps, the Corps of Canadian Railway Troops, etc., and much expansion and reorganization took place in the Canadian artillery and engineers.

Fighting in Canada was for three years on a voluntary basis, but the voluntary spirit gradually worked itself out and compulsory service was introduced in August, 1917, on the passing of the Military Service Act. By this time the reinforcement situation had become very serious.

Under the voluntary system 258 infantry battalions and thirteen regiments of mounted rifles, together with numerous other formations, had been raised; on the introduction of compulsory service the policy was adopted of passing recruits to depots, the process of forming new units to send to England and be broken up there being abandoned. Altogether, under both systems, 619,636 men were recruited in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Killed (including missing, now presumed dead)	39,488
Died of wounds	12,260
Died, other causes	7,796
Wounded and injured	175,841
Prisoners of war	3,870
Enemy prisoners captured	43,436
Guns captured	664
Trench mortars captured	471
Machine guns captured	3,154
Enlisted in Canadian Expeditionary Force	619,636
Number overseas from Canada	424,589
Served in France and other theatres of the war	344,596

The principal battles in which Canadian troops took part were as follows: In 1915, Ypres, Festubert, Mount Sorrel; in 1916, Somme, including Thiepval, Ancre Heights and Ancre; in 1917, Arras, including Vimy Ridge, Arleux and the Scarpe, Hill 70, Passchendaele, Cambrai (cavalry only), Saint-Quentin (cavalry only), Amiens; in 1918, the Scarpe, Drocourt-Queant line, the battles of the Hindenburg line (including Canal du Nord and Cambrai, 1918), Valenciennes, Sambre and the pursuit to Mons.

In September, 1918, a brigade of artillery and some details were provided from England for the North Russian front, divided between Archangel and Murmansk. In January, 1919, a force organized in Canada was sent to Siberia, consisting of two battalions of infantry, a battery of artillery and details; in all, 4,186 men.

Four hospital units served in the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force at the Dardanelles (Lemnos) and Salonika, and a bridging company served in Palestine. Forty-one picked Canadian volunteers took part in the Bagdad Mission, known as the Dunsterforce, and practically each man was detailed for an isolated mission in the vicinity of the Caspian Sea.

TYPICAL CAMP KITCHEN OF THE DEER HUNTER

Defence Against Failure

There is no end to the sufficiency of character. It can afford to wait; it can do without what is called success; it cannot but succeed. To a well-principled man, existence is victory. He defends himself against failure in his main design by making every inch of the road to it right. There is no trifle and no obscurity to him; he feels the immensity of the chain whose lost link he holds in his hand, and is led by it. Having nothing, this spirit hath all. It makes no stipulations for earthly felicity—does not ask, in the absoluteness of its trust, even for the assurance of continued life.—R. W. Emerson.

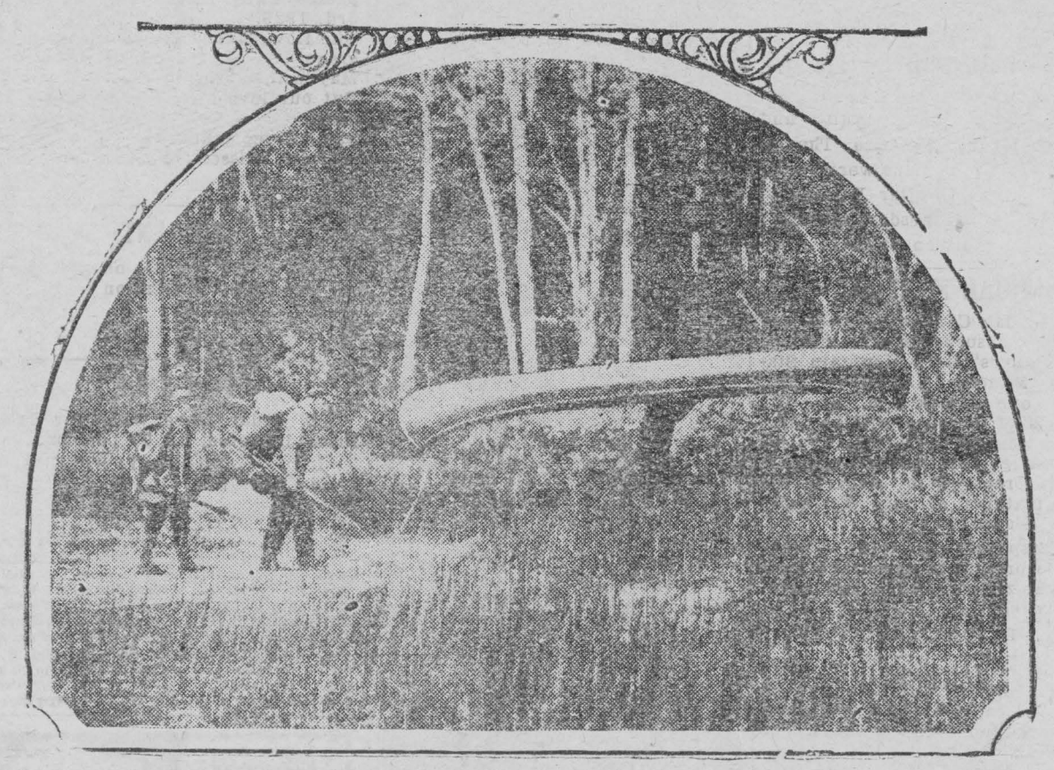

Worry

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rest upon the blade. It is not the revolution that desroys the machinery, but the friction.—Henry Ward Beecher.

A Thankful Heart

Sea Disaster Laid to Delay in Asking Aid

Captain Remained With Ship in Accordance With Law of Sea

New York.—The steamer Vestris sank when only about 80 of its 328 passengers and crew had been launched, after two boatloads of women and children had been hurled into the sea, and while the rest were leaping from the ship's sides and swimming fast lest they be dragged down with the foundering hulk.

Survivors brought here declared that the traditions of the sea had been scrupulously observed as to giving first thought to women and children, and they told an appealing story of inadequate preparation for disaster.

The first two boats were filled with women and children—there were 37 women and 13 children on board—and the crew started to lower away. Then the sinking ship lurched, the boats crashed against its side and women and children were tumbled into the waves. Reports indicate that all the children perished and but 10 of the women were rescued.

Began to List Saturday

On the whole, the 125 survivors arriving here on the Ame ican Shipper and the 23 on the Berlin agreed that in intention the officers and crew of the Vestris had been beyond criticism, but many of them blamed the captain, who went down with his ship, for indecision which they saw as one principal reason for the large number of fatalities believed to total 108.

The ship began to list on Saturday night, they said, and its condition grew more serious steadily throughout Sunday, and yet no distress call was sent until the middle of Monday morning, and as a result no rescue ships were on the scene until many hours after the ship sank at 1.30 that afternoon.

Many persons declared that when the captain did decide to abandon ship, shortly after the first SOS call, the tackle of the lifeboats was found to be faulty. It took hours to lower them, the ones with the women and children were crashed, and another was stove in and put away with a gaping hole in its side.

Vessel Sank Suddenly

Only two boats were successfully launched, although others broke loose as the ship sank and were caught by swimming survivors. The greater number of passengers and crew had to fling themselves into the water. One man told of seeing the ship sink two minutes after he jumped from the deck and there was a general feeling that others may not have jumped in time and were carried down with the captain.

Of those who did get into the water and survive the actual sinking of the ship, the majority of those eventually rescued were members of the crew, the greatest loss being among the passengers. This was thought to have some explanation in the theory that the crew were men accustomed to hard labor, more able to withstand the hardship of the long hours in the waves, and not to any general effort on the part of the crew to take positions of comparative safety in the boats rightfully belonging by the law of the sea to the passengers.

Knowledge is Power

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Does this not suggests the reason why some are unhappy and why all are not equally happy? Many have been delinquent in developing their minds and hearts to entertain happiness. They have had no time and no enthusiasm for getting wisdom, for discovering truth. Vessels may be equally full, but the large holds more than the small. Yea, knowledge is power, but knowledge alone is not happiness. The man who spends all his time in acquiring knowledge finds himself at last exhausted and standing still, with the heights of happiness yet far away. There is pleasure, often acute pleasure, in acquiring wisdom. There is no happiness in knowledge without action. Knowledge without action is like steam generated, but carried off on the bosom of the wind, unharnessed and uncontrolled. It is like the blossom in the springtime, for the moment beautiful, but disappointing when no fruit appears.—Daniel Poling.

Hazards

All desperate hazards courage do create,
As he plays frankly who has least estate;
Presence of mind, and courage in distress,
Are more than armies to procure success. —Dryden.

Blessings

The private blessings—the blessings of immunity, safeguard, liberty and integrity—which we enjoy, deserve the thankfulness of a whole life.—J. Collier.

Education

What is the true purpose of education? To make plain to the young the laws of the life they will have to enter. For example, that lying won't do, thieving still less; that idleness will get punished; that if they are cowards the whole world will be against them; that if they will have their own way they must fight for it. —Arthur Hugh Clough.

League "Shop Talk"

Committees are Active at League Headquarters—Many Problems Being Investigated by Experts at Geneva

Although the Assembly of the League of Nations, which brings so many statesmen, journalists and observers from the four corners of the earth to Geneva, concluded its sittings some time ago, the Swiss city still hums wit hactivity, writes a correspondent of "Interdependence," monthly review of the League of Nations Society of Canada, published at Ottawa. Commissions committees, sub-committees and various bodies are constantly in session delving into various abstruse international problems whose very character are generally so complex and technical that they baffle the common lay observer. But not a little that is romantic and interesting is buried beneath the mass of "shop-talk" that goes on.

The difficulty of collecting taxes from the natives in Western Samoa and the work of the secret "Citizen Committee" busy broadcasting false and fantastic news, were described, for instance, to the Mandates Commission, to whom report the various nations under whose control various remote and uncivilized areas have been placed. A report upon his stewardship was also given to this body by Mr. Werth, Administrator of the territory of Southwest Africa. Railways were functioning, the port of Walvis Bay has grown and prospered, and conditions have greatly improved, he said.

Hoping that the customs authorities of the countries of the world may be encouraged to call a spade a spade metaphorically—in all languages, a special sub-committee of exeperts have been sitting in Geneva for some time. Their task is to study the question of the unification of customs nomenclature and bring about a simplified system of tariff terms that will facilitate commercial intercourse between nations.

The Committee of the Health Section forms a clearing house for information regarding every disease, plague or sickness that is affiliating any portion of the earth. An epidemic of dengue—also known as aedes aegypti—that is causing many deaths in Greece is at present under invsetigation.

Two other committees dealing with involved and highly technical matters are those investigating international economic relationships and double taxation and fiscal evasion.

Daily Life

The daily life into which people are born, and into which they are absorbed before they are aware, forms chains which only one in a hundred has moral strength enough to despise and to break when the right time comes—when an inward necessity for independent action arises, which is superior to all outward conventionalities.—Mrs. Gaskell. (Ruth.)

Thankfulness

There is this difference between a thankful and an unthankful man: the one is always pleased in the good he has done, and the other only in what he has received; but there are some men who are never thankful.—A. Monod.

Nobility

Anything in any wise beautiful or noble, owes the beauty to itself, and with itself its beauy ends; praise forms no part of it. . . . true beauty needs no addition, any more than law, or truth, or kindness, or self-respect.—Marcus Aurelius.

December 2. Lesson IX, Paul Before His Judges—Acts 24: 24-27; 26: 19-29. Golden Text—I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision. —Acts 26: 19.

ANALYSIS.

II. THE TRIAL BEFORE AGRIPPA, 26: 19-29.

INTRODUCTION—The arrest at Jerusalem had far-reaching consequences. The story in Acts tells of the different speeches which Paul made in his defence, after the long imprisonment which he endured at Caesarea. It is probable that he had a considerable amount of freedom when there; but, nevertheless, he must have often chafed against these limits placed upon his activity. Luke was his companion during part of this time and they, no doubt, often discussed the fundamentals of their belief, and, perhaps, Luke was already gathering material for his literary works. Some place the epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians and Colossians in this period of Paul's life, but most prefer to assign them to the later imprisonment at Rome. But we may be sure that this time was not wasted, and Paul would penetrate more and more deeply into the mysteries of the gospel of Christ.

V. 24. Felix, Procurator of Judæa and Samaria, had a strange career. Originally a Greek slave, he had obtained freedom through the influence of the mother of Claudius, the Emperor, and he was the first freed man who had held such an office in the Empire. The Roman historian, Tacitus, says of him that, "With all manner of cruelty and lust he exercised the power of a king in the temper of a slave." Felix had married thrice and his present wife was a Jewess, who naturally would be anxious to see and hear one whose character had been so much discussed.

V. 25. It is possible that Felix had taken some personal interest in the movement which was so directly associated with the religious life of his wife's people, but Paul saw that such interest was very superficial, and that the real weakness of his judge lay in his character. It is suggestive that he makes no mention of Christ, as was the usual case in his sermons, but he reasons of righteouness, temperance and judgment to come. The message had so powerful an effect upon Felix that he had to bid Paul cease from his preaching till another opportunity might arise.

V. 26. Here a further light is cast upon the character of Felix. It was no unusual thing for prisoners to bribe their judges, and Felix hoped that this strange man might have some special source of revenue.

V. 27. Probably in A.D. 59, Porcius Festus took the place of Felix. Evidently there was no just cause why Paul should not be released, except that it might cause unpleasantness among the Jewish authorities. Festus is not well known to us from secular history, but evidently he had a better sense of justice than his predecessor. His lot, however, was not an easy one. Shortly after his arrival at Cæsarea he went up to Jerusalem, and was at once urged by the Jews to bring Paul for trial. He was suddenly recalled to Cæsarea because of the visit of Agrippa, but he determined to attend to this case, and, on the day after his return, he takes up the matter of Paul's trial and suggests that Paul should consent to go up to Jerusalem. "Wilt thou go to Jerusalem and stand for your trial before me?" Now Roman citizens were not compelled to take such a trial, and Paul is indignant over their subterfuges, and he takes a step that was to prove so important in his life, which was to bring him to Rome. He appeals to Cæsar. Luke makes it clear that Paul was forced to this action only as a last resort.

II. THE TRIAL BEFORE AGRIPPA, 26: 19-29.

V. 19. This is the most ceremonious of all the trials which Paul endured. The pageantry of the state adds to its impressiveness. King Agrippa was the great grandson of Herod the Great and had early won the favor of the Emperor of Rome, who had made him ruler of the northern parts of Palestine. "Clever, indolent and dissolute, he pursued a pro-Roman policy all through the Jewish rebellion of A.D. 66-70, and lived at Rome for nearly thirty years after the fall of Jerusalem." Agrippa had for a long time desired to see and hear Paul, and he and his sister gladly embrace this opportunity.

V. 20. Paul gives a third narrative of his conversion, telling of the heavenly vision that came to him on his way, by which he was appointed to be the herald of the gospel to the Gentiles. He sums up the Christian life in three stages: (1) repentance (2) turning to God (3) a new life.

V. 23. He lays stress upon two of the great doctrines of the Christian religion, which had a very prominent place in Paul's preaching, and which he found predicted in the Old Testament, namely, the crucifixion and the resurrection.

V. 24. Festus, with his Roman upbringing, could not understand the enthusiasm and spiritual insight of this strange prisoner and he fears that his mind has been unhinged by much reading and solitude.

V 25. In calm, courteous, but decided langueg Paul lays aside this charge and appeals to King Agrippa to testify to the fact that the whole country has heard of the fame of this movement.

V. 27. Paul knows that Agrippa cannot deny the validity of Old Testament prophecy, and he hopes to be able to make good this claim that Christ is the only fulfilment of their writings.

V. 28. But Agrippa will not commit himself, and with a jest he turns it all aside. "You think you can make me a Christian all in a minute." The meaning is not quite clear. It may signify in a short time, or by a short argument.

V. 29. Paul replies that, whether by long or short argument, he would like to count Agrippa and all others as members of Christ. He would have them like himself, except for the chains on his hands, or feet.

BEEF SCRAP AND BUTTERMILK FOR POULTRY

In the feeding of poultry at the Lacombe, Alberta, Experimental Station, buttermilk and beef scrap were compared as a source of animal protein for winter egg production. Pens of white Wyandotte pullets were used in the experiment, which lasted from the beginning of November until the end of the following April. Except for buttermilk given to one lot and beef scrap to the other the ration was the same with the different pens. At the end of the experiment it was found the pens given beef scrap produced slightly better results than those receiving buttermilk, from the standpoint of egg production. The cost per day of eggs produced was 1.6 cents per dozen in favor of the beef scrap.

The report of the superintendent of this station, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, gives the result of many other experiments in the feeding of poultry and in the other investigations and activities being carried on at the Central Alberta Station.

PROFIT FROM MILKING HERD

With a good milking herd and a liberal supply of forage and other foods a good profit can be made in the production of milk at all seasons of the year. During the whole of 1927 a record was kept by the superintendent of the Lacombe, Alberta, Experimental Station, of the weekly production and feed cost of the milk produced from a herd running from eight to thirteen head. During most of the year from twelve to thirtnen cows were milking.

The report of the station, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, contains an interesting table showing the cost of feed to produce 100 pounds of milk varying from as low as 63 cents to $1.30. From about the end of April to the first week in October the cost was less than one dollar a hundred. Without counting other costs than feed the profits from the herd in milk ran as high as $63 in seven days in the month of June; the lowest profit for the year was for the week ending January 15, when it amounted to $14.94 from the eight cows then giving milk.

The feeds were valued at 1¾ cents per pound for meal mixture, $4 per ton for ensilage; $15 per ton for hay; 88 per ton for oat green feed, and $2 a month per cow for pasture. The meal was mixed and fed in the proportion of 400 pounds rolled oats, 200 pounds bran, and 20 pounds oil cake meal. The meal was fed on the basis of 1 pound of the mixture for every 3½ pounds of milk produced.

ROOT ROT OF OATS

Although all of the cereal grains are subject to diseases known a foot-rots or root-rots, oats suffer perhaps more than the other cereals. One form on oats of a foot-rot or root-rot, more or less common in the Prairie Provinces, is unfortunately so inconspicuous as to give little or no hint of its presence. Frequently frought, wind, frost and other unfavorable conditions are blamed when foot-rot is really the cause of an unhealthy appearance of a field. The division of botany of the Experimental Farms has been working on this disease for several years, and has issued a bulletin which throws considerable light on the method in which it works, the damage it causes, and gives the results of their investigations from the standpoint of control.

Proper cultural methods, including rotations, the possibility of developing resistant varietie , and the use of chemical compounds for seed treatments, are indicated from the work done as methods that may be expected to assist in the control of this and other diseases.

Thi bulletin is numbered 105 and entitled "Seeding Blight and Foot-Rots of Oats caused by Fursarium Colmorum (W.G. Sm) Sau. It is published by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and copies may be obtained from the Publications Branch of the Department.

DIFFERENT SILAGES FOR DAIRY COWS

In northern sections where corn for silage cannot be grown successfully either of two crops may be used as a substitute. Silage from a mixture of oats, peas, and vetches seems to give results about equal to sunflower silage for feeding dairy cows. These two crops were compared at the Dominion Experimental Station for New Ontario at Kapuskasing. The superintendent in his report for the year 1927 published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, states that the experiment was carried on to determine the relative value of the two silages for milk production. Ten milking cows were selected which were in such stage of lactation that each would continue milking throughout the following four thirty-day periods which the experiment covered. During this period the silage fed was interchanged from month to month and accurate records kept. This experiment has been conducted yearly for five years. For the first three years each animal was fed five pounds per day more sunflower silage than oats, peas and vetch silage. This was done to balance up the dry matter as between the two kinds of silage. During the later two years the quantity of sunflower silage given was reduced, so that the cattle consumed equal quantities of each silage. Besides the silage ration, each cow received twelve pounds of hay per day, and six received in addition twenty pounds of roots per day. The grain mixture consisted of bran, 4 parts; ground oats, 2 parts; ground barley, 2 parts, and oilcake, 2 parts. This was fed in accordance with the individual requirements for the cows, according to the quantity of milk being given.

During the five-year period the average daily production of milk was 24.83 lbs. for the cows on the sunflower silage, and 24.52 lbs. for the cows on the oats, peas and vetch silage, while the cost of feed per 100 lbs. of milk produced was $1.63 and $1.58 respectively, showing that these two crops are very similar in feeding value, what little advantage there is lying with the sunflower silage. Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Silence

When trouble is brewing, keep still. When slander is getting on its legs, keep still. When your feelings are hurt, keep still—till you recover from your excitement, at any rate. Things look different through an unagitated eye.

In a commotion, once, I wrote a letter and sent it, and wished I had not. In my later years I had another commotion, and wrote a long letter; but life rubbed a little sense into me and I kept that letter in my pocket against the day when I could look it over without agitation and without tears. I was glad I did. Less and less it seemed necessary to send it. I was not sure it would do any hurt, but in my doubtfulness leaned to reticence, and eventually it was destroyed.

Time works wonders. Wait till you can speak calmly; then you will not need to speak, maybe. Silence is the most massive thing conceivable, sometimes. It is strength in very grandeur.—Burton.

Others

There are two times when a sensible man will not allow his position to influence his attitude toward others too much. One time is when he's top of the heap. The other time is when he is at the bottom. The right kind of effort on the part of somebody may change the relative positions very quickly.

Desert Pact Ends Ancient Feud in Arabia

Peace Signed by Paramount Sheiks of 15 Important Bedouin Tribes

Jerusalem—A long-standing desert feud has been ended by the peace pact signed at the Government House in Transjordan by the paramount sheiks of 15 of the most important Bedouin tribes roaming Syria, Jebel Druze and Transjordan. The peace conclave was called by the French and British mandatories to adjust outstanding feuds resulting from long-distance inter-tribal raiding of such powerful, populous tribes on the Syrian site sd r etaetaetaetaoinnt Syrian side as the Ruallas, disposing of thousands of tents and tens of thousands of camels and horses; and on the Transjordan side of Beni Sakhr and Howelitat.

The ancient foes, after three days' bargaining agreed to sign a pact drafted by Europeans based on written and unwritten Bedouin law, under which the former enemies bury the hatchet. The pact does not contain a definite undertaking regarding future peace, but the mutual forgiveness renders it unnecessary.

Turkish Methods in Desert

Emir Shekib, cousin of Abdullah, the ruler of Transjordan, presided; the British resident at Amman was represented by a young officer, Kirkbride, na authority on Bedouin law and customs, while five intelligence officers accompanied the desert chieftains from Syria.

London—A striking illustration of the different methods of the Turks and British ruling the desert is provided in the Bedouin peace pact. The Turks used all the wiles at their disposal in order to keep the feuds going, the usual plan being to offer one tribe desert-grazing rights in the recognized beat of another. Gifts of money were also employed. The quarrels over pasture, instead of end peaceably, as between Abraham and Lot, resulted in camel raiding.

The basis of the present settlement is the old desert law that "blood feuds arising from such quarrels need not necessarily be wiped out by the blood of some member of the slayer's family, but can also be paid for in money, camels or mares by the family or tribe which has suffered the fewest casualties."

An Ancient Tribe

The Rualla chieftain is of the famous family of Ibn Shaalan. Rualla used to wander from Homs and Hama in Syria as far south as Quasrel-Azraq and Wdi Sirham, between Transjordan and Nejd dominions, where their territory encroached on that of their ancient foes, Beni Sakhr. Laely, however, they have been obliged to remain in the north of Syria.

Beni Sakhr is said by some to be the ancient tribe of Issachar, but they have another name Ahl-esh-Shimal, and tradition traces their descent to a child abandoned on the deser, presumably Ishmael. The Howeitat are a scattered tribe, and mainly center round Wadi Sirhan, but with branches stretching through the peninsula to the deserts northeast of Cairo. They have been sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other, in the Rualla-Beni Sakhr feud. While the two latter tribes are generally highly regarded among the Bedouin tribes, the Howeitat have a bad name for treachery.

All three fought against the Turks in the Great War.

Dawn

There is something very beautiful to me in the preparation for the sight of the sun which there is in dawn; and also in the light that remains in the sky after the sun has passed out of our sight, softening the transition to darkness, as the warm sense of affection which is drawn out in a parting, and possesses the heart for a time, softens the transition to the blank of absence.—John McLeod Campbell.

FORTUNATE IF FREE OF BLADDER CAMPION

Presence of this Weed in Any Clover Prevents Crop Grading Top

Fortunate are those growers whose clover fields are free of bladder campion. This weed was placed in the primary noxious class, at the recent meeting of the Seed Advisory Board at Ottawa, which means that any seed containing it cannot grade No. 1 for sale in Canada. Although many of these weed seeds can be removed by modern cleaning machinery there is always a portion about the same size and weight as the clover seed and this fact explains why buyers are not anxious to bid at all on seed from fields infested by this very serious weed.

"We have great fear of the spread of bladder campion," states W. J. W. Lennox of the Dominion Seed Branch, "as it is a perennial, very difficult to eradicate, and each plant produces thousands of seeds, it may be considered one of our most serious weeds. If we are to maintain our high reputation in the production of clover seed it is essential that growers make a determined effort to combat this growing menace. In those favored cvlover sections where this weed is as yet unknown, growers are fortunate and should find seed growing a profitable business, but they should be very careful in purchasing seed of any description that the same does not contain any seeds of this weed. Where there are only a few plants of bladder campion individual treatment is recommended. By this I do not mean simple mowing the thing down as this is often worse than useless, causing the weeds to branch out and raise more seeds than would have been the case had it not been cut, but to thoroughly eradicate each specimen. The plants should be dug out and burned or cut off deep below the surface of the soil and some salt sprinkled over the portion of the roots remaining. This may seem like a big job, an dit is a big job, but bladder campion is a mighty serious weed."

Less than one half of our domestic requirements of red clover seed, it is pointed out, are produced in Canada, principally in Ontario where bladder campion has become widely distributed. With this weed considered primary noxious, and none allowed in grado No. 1, about 85 per cent. of the Ontario red clover seed will have to be graded No. 2 and No. 3, or designated rejected and prohibited from sale in Canada. This means that a part of our northern-grwn red clover seed will be exported to other countries where it is much in demand because of its winter hardness. The demand in Canada is principally for seed that will grade No. 1 and to meet this demand red clover seed will have to be imported from France, Poland, New Zealand and other countries. Much seed from these countries has been used in recent years and has proven adaptable.

Says Britain Not Asking for Advice

Lork Birkenhead Sharply Critical of Coolidge's Speech

London.—The Earl of Birkenhead, until recently Secretary of State for India, was sharply critical of the Armistice Day speech of President Coolidge in an address at a recent complimentary dinner tendered him.

"I thought there underlay in that speech a spirit of patronage and a capacity for giving to Europe and to England," the Earl said. "As far as England is concerned, I am not sure that we specially require it. We have not asked the United States, as far as I am aware, to do anything for us."

Asserting that the United States entered the war not from any desire to assist the Allies, but solely because American nationals were being murdered by German submarines, he said: "My answer to the President of the United States would be that we ask nothing from them except good will. When we discuss questions of naval construction, we do not specially invite lectures as to whether we are pacific or not i nour purpose."

WHEN YOUNG GIRLS GROW PALE AND THIN

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Should be Taken to Enrich the Blood

When girls grow weak, pale and thin, parents should not neglect these symptoms; to do so means danger. The girl in her teens cannot develop into robust womanhood without an abundant supply of rich, red blood in her veins. It is the lack of this that is the great trouble with nine girls out of ten. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have achieved world-wide fame for their remarkable blood-making properties. In these pills there is vigorous health, with glowing cheeks and sparkling eyes for every weak, pale girl. The value of the pills in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. Winnifred Rutty, Barton street west, Hamilton, Ont., who says:—"About two years ago my eldest girl got into very bad health. I took her to a doctor who advised having her tonsils removed, saying this was the seat of the trouble. We had them removed, but it did not help her, and she seemed to have absorbed so much poison from the trouble that she did not pick up at all. She could neither eat nor sleep, and what food she did take did not digest. Then she developed a cough that kept her awake at night, and went down in weight to 95 pounds. A neighbor said to me, 'You have tried so many things why not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills?' I got some and before she finished the second box she began to show improvement. She continued the use of the pills for some time and is now in the pink of condition, able to work and play, and eat and sleep with all her old-time vigor. These statements can be verified by neighbors who watched her restored from ill health to perfect health."

If your medicine dealer does not keep these pills you can get them by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LONG SLEEP MAKES BABY HAPPY AGAIN

"Our baby kept waking us several times a night, until we started giving him a little Castoria after his last nursing," says an Iowa mother. "He slept soundly from the first night and it made him look and feel worlds better." Baby specialists endorse Fletcher's Castoria; and millions of mothers know how this purely-vegetable, harmless preparation helps babies and children, with colic, constipation, colds, diarrhea, etc. The Fletcher signature is always on the wrapper of genuine Castoria. Avoid imitations.

"Placating the Implacable"

Britannia (London): The South African Union has always had a different relation vis-a-vis the rest of the Empire from any other Dominion. Canada might conceivedly leave the Empire without bringing down the rest of the fabric. The secession of South Africa would cut in half our only assured line of communication with India, Australasia and the Far East. South Africa is the "clasp of the Imperial girdle." England acquired it by every conceivable title-conquest, cession and purchase. So long as she is responsible for India and has to keep touch with the Australasian Dominions, so long will she resist every means in her power, any attempt of South Africa to secede from the Empire.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ALWAYS IN THE HOME

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she always keeps a supply on hand, for the first trial convinces her there is nothing to equal them in keeping children well. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion, colds and simple fevers and making teething easier. Concerning them, Mrs. Saluste Pelletier, St. Dumas, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and am never without them in the house. They have always given the greatest satisfaction and I can gladly recommend them to all mothers of little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"So much crust was never associated with anything half-baked."

Empire Preference

Rockhampton Bulletin (Queensland): Empire preference, to be anything more than a mere sounding board for windy orators, has to effectively protect the markets of the Dominions in Britain for raw products and foodstuffs, as well as the markets in the Dominions for British manufactured goods. Nothing short of that will count.

An old maid went to confession and told the priest that she had been ardently kissed. "When did it happen?" said the priest gently. "Twenty years ago," the old maid told him. "Have you ever confessed this before?" "Many times, father," sighed the penitent, "but I just love to talk about it."

Horrors of War Depicted by Memorial in Germany

A war memorial that is not a glorification but a scathing denunciation of war and martial deeds has been erected at Ettlingen, Baden.

In the Town Hall tower, surmounted by a baroque helmet, one side of the wall is adorned with a haut relief depicting all the gruesome horrors and destructiveness of war. Symbolized death riding a black horse is seen swinging a blood-dripping scythe as his animal tramples on a mass of human beings and on soldiers engaged in fierce combat. The base of the relief, symbolizing human discord, pictures two men desperately clutching each other's hair, both enlaced in the coils of the serpent of paradise with the apple.

A theatrical troupe arrived in a New England town late one evening to find that no accommodation was to be had in the only hotel that the place afforded. The landlord did not seem a bit affected by the sad plight of the tourists but after much persuasion the old fellow said they could sleep in an abandoned church across the street. For want of any other shelter they accepted and retired for the night. About two o'clock in the morning the landlord heard the church bell ringing vigorously, and sent his son over to see what was the matter. Jake brough back the report: "There isn't anything the matter, Pop, but the gent in pew twelve wants a couple of gin fizzes sent right over."

Pamela had been so troublesome that her mother put her to bed a full hour earlier than usual. As she left the child, she murmured gently: "God bless you, darling, till the morning." "Dod bless you, too, mummy, till you bring me my supper," answered Pamela.

Announcement is made of the fact that a postal note for a sum as small as ten cents is now available at the post office to be used for remittance purposes. The use of postage stamps for remittance purposes is contrary to postal regulations, and an official notice issued by the authority of L. Gadboury, deputy postmaster general, states that stamps so used will not be redeemed. For such purposes as this, when small sums are involved, the ten cent postal note has been provided. It is expected that this will assist greatly in abolishing the present habit of using postage stamps for the remittance of small sums — Brockville Recorder.

A despatch from Waddington, N. Y. says: Mrs. George Weegar, a 68-year-old woman who resides in Waddington, saved herself from drowning in a well in her back yard, on Thursday last, when she pulled herself to safety by raising herself slowly from stone to stone on the inside of the well. She had fallen into the deep waterhole, when the platform of the well broke.

MR. HENRY HEAGLE

The people of Archer were very sorry to hear that on Friday evening, November 23rd, at about 6.30 o'clock, Mr. Henry Heagle had passed away, after only a few days illness, following a paralitic stroke on Monday last, from which he never really rallied, although he knew all his family who gathered at his bedside and at times could make them understand when he tried to speak. He passed very peacefully away, surrounded by his wife and family. The late Mr. Heagle will be greatly missed, not only in the family circle but by the whole community, as he spent practically his whole lifetime on the farm where he died. Mr. Heagle was a very industrious person, always working for the improvement of his home. The early part of his life was spent near Dunbar, where he was born, 76 years ago, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Heagle.

Left to mourn the loss of a good husband and father are his wife, who was before her marriage to Mr. Heagle over 50 years ago, Miss Julia Barkley of Dunbar, one daughter, Mrs. Carmi Froats of Gallingertown, and five sons, Joseph and Arthur of Gallingertown, Elmer and Shaler at home, and Ernest of Ogdensburg, N. Y., the eldest son Blake having died in 1918, also twenty grandchildren and a host of friends.

The funeral, was held from his late residence to Colquhoun United Church on Sunday afternoon, at two o'clock. Interment was made in Colquhoun cemetery. Rev. Mr. Russell, his pastor, preached a very impressive sermon and Mrs. Geo. Casselman sang a solo "The Home of the Soul", accompanied by Mrs. Earle Droppo on the organ. The pall-bearers were Messrs Andrew Collins, Wm. Southworth, Herbert Gallinger, Ellison Dennison, George Dennison and Sydney Dennison. Friends from Morrisburg, Aultsville, Cornwall, Ogdensburg, Dunbar, Chesterville, Grantley, Elma and Mountain attended.

THIS YOUNG LADY'S JOB is to "clock" the telephone service. She sits there with her decimeter stop watch and measures to tenths of a second the time taken to complete a call. Other "clockers" record the errors made, the speed with which "trouble" is repaired, all the items of telephone efficiency.

If speed and efficiency are not constantly on the climb these are the people who know it first and then there is a grand hunt to find out what's gone wrong.

It is a good game. It gets results. That is why your telephone serves you better this year than it did last year, and next year will serve you better than now. That is why it has contributed its share to Canadian progress.

FOR EXAMPLE, seven years ago the average interval from the time you lifted your telephone receiver until the operator answered was 5.1 seconds. Today the clocker finds the interval cut to 3.7 seconds. Tomorrow it will be still less.

Seven years ago there were 95 slow calls in every 1,000—a slow call being one in which the operator takes ten seconds or more to answer. Today there are only 33 in every thousand.

The number of errors of all kinds has been reduced from 40 in every 1,000 calls to 16, which is over ninety-eight per cent perfect.

FIVE YEARS AGO you ran 27 chances in every 1,000 calls of getting the wrong number. That is down now to 13 chances in 1,000, or nearly 99 times out of the 100 right.

There are only two chances in a thousand now that you will be cut off. There were five chances in a thousand, five years ago.

There used to be eight times in a thousand calls when you would break in on somebody else's conversation. Now there are only two such double connections per thousand.

THERE ARE "CLOCKERS" at work in other directions too and here are some of the things they have recorded.

The time taken to repair "trouble" on a line now has been cut to one-third of the time taken five years ago.

The time taken to install a new telephone used to be three hours and forty-five minutes. It has been cut now to one hour and forty-five minutes. That means something in hours saved, with 139,000 telephones installed in Ontario and Quebec this year.

PRETTY GOOD results. But the clocker isn't satisfied. Nobody in the telephone business is ever satisfied with today's mark. The system tomorrow must always be better to keep pace with the Canada of tomorrow.
