Mets Open Season With a Win Gunning for Magedomas Tonight

The Morrisburg Mets Junior C lacrosse team opened with a 1-1 record in exhibition games this season, both against the Cornwall Township Patriots. The Mets, who boast a fast running, hard hitting team this year, under freshman coach Vic Foster, have already broken their unenvied last last year's record. They have 1 win. In 1973 they had none.

The 2 clubs met Tuesday of last week in the Long Sault area with the Patriots pulling out a narrow 15-14 win, but the Mets showed signs of great power playing. For 16 minutes in the 3rd period they played short-handed and yet outscored their opponents 8-3 before the clock ran out on them.

In the return game played here last Thursday, the Mets started right in where they left off Tuesday and aat the end of the first frame had a 4-1 lead, which adittedly they were holding with some real hot goaltending by Terry Ferguson. The locals let up somewhat in the second frame and were outscored 4-3 by their visitors, but that didn't faze coach Foster's charges, as during the final canto, Mets poured in six, while the Patriots could muster just two against John Vaughan, who was between the pipes for the period.

Kevin Duval put some punch in the Mets attack in this one with 4 goals and 2 assists. Zot Hess had a hat trick and Ernie Duval a pair. Singles went to Allan Hare John Johnston and Lee Beaupre. Allen MacDonell paced the Patriots with 3; Brian McMillan, Wayne Wood and Jim Locey had singles.

On Sunday afternoon the Mets had to forego the Stanley Cup final to travel to Kingston where they met the Kings and walked off the floor with a slim, but satisfying 15-11 victory in a hard-fought, chippy game, with the Mets picking up 24 of the 44 penalties, including three 5s, two 10s and two game misconducts.

The Mets power play proved to be in excellent working condition with a perefct record of 6 goals in 6 power-play attempts. Kings on the other hand, were unable to count in 2 power play situations, and the Mets came out of the 1st with a 7-3 lead. The Mets found penalties costly in the second and were short handed for most of the period, with Kings outscoring them 4-3.

Referees Grant and Simard had a hard time to maintain control of the game in the final stanza, which saw the Mets outscore their opponents 5-3.

Kevin Duval once again paced the Mets with 4 goals and 3 assists; hat tricks went to Gary Hess, John Johnston and Ernie Duval. Allan Hare and Bobbie Reynolds picked up singles.

Dan Wilson got five for Kings, while Norm Williamson picked up a hat trick. Singles went to Mark McKercher, Roy Virgin and Gary Wilson.

The Mets, who just could be in contention for the pennant this season, play their first home game of the regular schedule tonight against the Brockville Magedomas. Game time is 8:30.

34 BRAVE BAD WEATHER IN BIKE-A-THON FOR CANCER

Thirty-four brave souls completed the gruesome cancer bike-a-thon course on Saturday, May 4th. It was a cold windy day as the bikers rode out the entire distance of Lakeshore Drive and then the return to the Morrisburg Civic Centre — 13 miles — a proud feat for every finisher. Although the total proceeds at press time are not yet known it is estimated that over $300 was raised. Jeff Cassell was the first male finisher, while Marilyn Carkner who had pledges and collected nearly $70.00 was the first female finisher. Most money has been turned in, but both sponsors and riders are urged to turn the money pledged and collected into Doug Grenkie. Official receipts for tax purposes are available.

Heaps of thanks are expressed to the sponsors, riders and bikathon officials by the Morrisburg District Cancer Society.

Ministry of Natural Resources

Weekly Report

It pays to read bulletin boards. Ask Dave Jones, a natural resources conservation officer in the Ottawa-Carleton district.

Just before spring breakup this year he was glancing over the office board and noticed a story about two young brothers who had used hockey sticks to club to death a coyote that had wantered threat eningly towards them while they were playing shinny on Loney's Lake near Arnprior.

The newspaper clipping said the boys had dragged the carcass to the home of a friend of their father's Gerald Lalonde, a local trapper. The idea was to have the animal skinned.

What troubled Dave was Mr. Lalonde, in the article, stated the animal seemed to have been healthy, but apparently had been sprayed recently by a skunk. He said it had probably been blinded and wandered towards the children.

"That got me thinking," said Dave. "Most of the rabid foxes I've had contact with also had been sprayed recently by skunks. The disease makes them uninhibited to the extent they will approach almost anything. They lose that sense of danger."

Although the article said the carcass was to be examined, Dave decided to double-check and phoned Dr. M.K. Clugston, on staff with the department of agriculture's health of animals branch in Arnprior.

Apparently, some communications lines had become crossed. Dr. Clugston had never heard of the incident and knew nothing about the coyote carcass. Nor did he know of any other medical authority who had examined it.

He soon found out for himself. The carcass was imponded and the head sent away for examination.

The test came back positive.

Mr. Lalonde, who had hung the carcass up using gloves, just to be safe, has just finished taking his 14 anti-rabies shots in the abdomen and is waiting to take two more booster shots.

Dave Jones continues to keep an eye on the office bulletin board

If You Suspect Rabies . . .

Clear Out Fast!

"Feet, don't fail me!" That's the first thing your mind should say to your body when you even faintly suspect an animal near you is rabid. Distance is the best insurance you won't be bitten.

That's the advice of natural resources predator control officer Bruce Turner, commenting on an incident of rabies in a coyote near Arnprior.

"Before it starts, let's get one thing clear. We have not had a rabies epidemic among coyotes here in Eastern Ontario. I've been around rabies for a long time and there is just no comparison between the number of foxes and skunks that become rabid and the number of coyotes and wolves. For some reason, coyotes and wolves rarely contract rabies," he said.

Staying around to subdue a possibly rabid animal? "Don't", was the advice.

"If an animal, especially a wild animal like a fox or coyote wanders out of the bush and starts towards you, you should be long gone", said Mr. Turner.

"Normally, foxes, coyotes, all wild animals are shy. If they're not, then look out!" he said. "Get away from the animal and report it to the proper authorities."

"Staying around to observe or getting close enough to kill the animal with sticks is just to much of a risk," he said.

"That advice should be passed along to everyone," he said, "but especially to children by their parents."

"Change in behavior, that's the thing to look for," warned Mr. Turner.

"As everyone knows, wild animals have a natural fear of humans and are inclined to keep out of sight. Rabies affects the nervous system and brain of any animal, causing them to act unnaturally, do things that aren't normal to the habits of the species. Coyotes and foxes do not normally associate with skunks. If a coyote or ofx has a strong odor of skunk, that's a good indication it's infected with rabies. Also, if you see a skunk wandering about during the daylight hours, that's almost a positive sign the animal is infected," said Mr. Turner.

There's only one good piece of advice if bitten by a possibly rabid animal: "Get to a doctor immediately."

Napanee Area Provincial Parks Geared For Another Million Visitors This Year

Provincial parks in the Napanee area, officially open since May 10, are geared to expect more than 1,000,000 visitors before the summer ends.

Last year that number took advantage of facilities for camping, swimming, hiking, picnicking and fishing at Presqu'ile, Outlet Beach Sandbanks, North Beach, and Lake on the Mountain provincial parks.

Visits by people even before the season opened this year indicates the number will be just as high.

Presqu'ile provincial park south of Brighton didn't really need an official opening date — already campers and day users have been exploring physical changes made by work crews during the fall and winter, clicking away with cameras and viewing the wide variety of waterfowl and just enjoying the arrival of spring in the park which juts out into Lake Ontario.

Gerald Cox, Presqu'ile park superintendent, expects a healthy influx of visitors to the natural history museum during the Victoria Day holiday weekend. He has also scheduled naturalists to be on hand to conduct hikes along the park's nature trails.

Hikes will start at 2 p.m., Saturday and Sundays, from the museum parking lot. The theme of the hikes will be "Spring". For those who would like to christen the camping season, sites have been readied and the picnic area is open for business.

Improvements at Presqu'ile this year include installation of a central water supply system for day use water outlets. Plans for spring and summer include intensive maintenance and improvement of beach and swimming facilities.

In Prince Edward County, staff at Outlet Beach and Sandbanks provincial parks have also been scurrying about in an attempt to have everything working smoothly by the holiday weekend. Although temperatures may keep the famous beaches and duned areas clear of bathers, superintendent Bob Davison expects a busy time.

Lake on the Mountain and North Beach parks will also be open for those holidayers seeking day use and picnic facilities.

As in previous years, park officials at Outlet Beach are anticipating at least 70 percent of their campers over the Victoria Day weekend to be fairly high-spirited youth on their first outdoor excursion of the year.

Administrative staff are always concerned about user conflicts during this weekend. Often actions of an irresponsible few infringe upon the camping experience of other visitors to the park.

"A tolerance level is set in order that most of the younger crowd can enjoy themselves," says one park superintendent. "However, more often than not, a few spoil everything and controls must be tightened."

This year, park staff have been granted police officers status and will be acting in this capacity in their efforts to reduce nuisance and depreciative behavior, to protect the area's natural qualities and upgrade the camper's experience while visiting the park.

For those who want a newer experience, a new provincial park —Ferris—is under construction in the Campbellford area, north of Highway 30.

The park offers picnic facilities, an exciting view of the Trent River, and for those who don't mind roughing it a bit, some opportunities for camping. Many will find the price is right too. No fees are being charged yet at the park.

Entry fees for operating provincial parks this year are still $3.50 per night which includes vehicle entry. An extra 50 cents is charged for a site with electrical hookup. For day use only the per diem rate is $1.50, but an annual day use permit is available for $15 for those who will be visiting provincial parks regularly this summer and fall.

All other provincial parks in Eastern Ontario — Bon Echo, Fitz roy Harbour, Carillon, Rideau, Charleston Lake, Sharbot Lake and Silver Lake — also opened May 10.

Live Bait Fish Prohibited In Algonquin Park

A new Ontario fisheries regulation now prohibits the use of live bait fish anywhere in Algonquin Park. Live bait fish whcih often escape the hook or bait bucket can ultiply and this may result in the disruption of existing fish communities.

Widowed Mom

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

At 15, I'm worried about my mother. Shortly after my father died suddenly about a year ago, she returned to work atfer years of being a housewife. Before bedtime she has two drinks which she claims help her to relax and sleep. But I'm worried. Could this lead to alcoholism? D. L.

Dear D.L.:

It's impossible to predict if two pre-bedtime drinks can lead your mother into alcoholism. But, in moderation, alcohol was recognized as a relaxant long before you were born. Your mother is probably under severe tensions with the loss of your father and the need to become a wage earner after a long absence from the labor market. During this trying period of adjustment, you can help her considerably by volunteering to run errands or doing a few of the household chores. Surprise her one night by preparing dinner and washing the dishes afterwards, to show you care.

Chronic Borrower

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I have a dear friend who habitually borrows small sums of five, but never more than ten dollars. She always forgets to repay these loans unless she is reminded. I'm embarrassed at being forced to ask her to repay. Is there any solution to this problem? H.G.

Dear H.G.:

If she borrows and fails to repay because she is in need, then as a close friend, consider the loans as a helping hand, if you can afford to. If, however, she is simply forgetful by nature, your only recourse is the embarrassment of reminding her about the unpaid loan.

I suspect you actually view her in a different light—as a chronic borrower who asks for small sums on the theory that if you don't forget the loans you'll be too ashamed to ask her to repay them. If so, tactfully refuse her requests in the future.

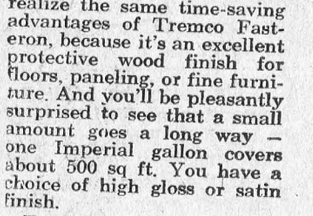
Old Roots

Dear Margaret Brookfield

We moved into a new neighborhood about four months ago, and I still haven't unpacked many of the cartons. We lived in our former house for 18 years, moving in shortly after my first child was born. Last year, the area deteriorated badly and my husband insisted we relocate elsewhere. I look around at my new house, think about our mortgage payments which have more than doubled, and I grow more and more depressed. I'm 55. Is this normal? K.E.

Dear K.E.:

Your new home into which you moved at the age of 55 symbolizes a closed chapter in your life: the old home that you entered as a young wife and where you raised your family is gone. This change and uprooting may well be the cause of your depression. But life does not end at 55. You have many years ahead of you. So unpack the cartons, and start to enjoy your new home.



BY TOM TREMFIX

Do-it-yourself boat owners who love the warmth and elegance of wood used to pay a dear price for their love. They suffered the discomfort of tedious wood refinishing during either cold, wet weather, or during good boating weather.

Fortunately, a "love of wood" need no longer be a "labour of love". Fine wood finishes can now be quickly and easily maintained with a fast-drying, polyurethane finish called Tremco Fasteron. It's clear, and yields a gloss or satin finish appearance. When applied above the water line, Fasteron stands up well in either salt or fresh water.

Tremco Fasteron wood finishes are easy to use because they can be applied directly over the old finish. Just sand any chipped, marred, or blistered areas and apply a full, rich Fasteron coating.

Being a polyurethane wood finish, Fasteron cures rapidly in a humid atmosphere. Usually, two hours' drying time is all that's needed between coats. So two or three coats can be applied in one day.

Non-boat owners can also realize the same time-saving advantages of Tremco Fasteron, because it's an excellent protective wood finish for floors, paneling, or fine furniture. And you'll be pleasantly surprised to see that a small amount goes a long way — one Imperial gallon covers about 500 sq ft. You have a choice of high gloss or satin finish.

For more information about fast-drying polyurethane wood finishes, write to Tom Fremfix, The Tremco Manufacturing Company (Canada) Ltd., 220 Wicksteed Avenue, Toronto 17, Ontario

ON THE MALL MORRISBURG

YOURS SINCERELY

BY MRS. WELLWOOD ADAM

In spite of so much rain and chilly winds, the delightful season of Spring with its fresh greenery plants and flowers, is with us at last! True we have all enjoyed, I think, a day of warmth, here and there, with its promise of more to follow later on, but farmers, as well as those who have vegetable gardens, are inclined to feel somewhat frustrated. The continual heavy rainfall we have had, prevents the usual spring planting, and there are only a few days to go before the deadline. And so, we wait on.

As I think about the Spring, I include the many Spring birds . . . the robins, the red-winged blackbirds, and so on; and while my husband and I were both in St. Thomas last week, we were often entranced by the lovely, clear notes of the birds there. Cattle are grazing in the fields — yes, the Springtime, despite the rains and awful flooding to be found far and near, has its joys.

I am also thinking of all the strikes and stoppages of labour which have been going on, which have culminated in continuous deprivation of most essential services for the public concerned. This leaves me with another thought— I wonder what would happen if NATURE decided to follow the ways of men and women? Say for just twenty-four hours, even longer?

Just suppose the singing birds stopped singing from Friday until Monday and started a five day week. or less!

Suppose the sun stopped shining for a day and we had twenty four hours of complete blackness, or even longer than that!

And, too, the cows in the fields, if they leizurely walked towards the milking sheds and decided: "You've had enough from us. We stop work at 4 p.m. and are prepared for a walk-out!"

Take even a bed of sweet-peas, or asters, etc., in full bloom and if they, too, were to say with the rose-bushes, "we refuse to bloom for the next two days!" The same with the bees, and the resultant minus honey returns!

But, no, Nature goes on quietly as long as man does not interfere to destroy it eventually. The more we pick and enjoy our flowers, the more they grow, don't they? And the birds will continue to sing their hearts out, if we stop to listen. So the ways of Nature go on, without fail, and we are very fortunate that it does, in these wonderful ways.

I think it would be a very good thing if men and women in high places as well as in low places in life. could or would take a leaf out of Nature's book, so to speak, and learn to play their part in life with reliability and strength. To do one's share towards the common good and perhaps even a little more than that, would help a great deal to straighten out, as the days go by, much of the muddle in this present world.

I am sure you will enjoy the following few lines, as I have done since I read it. They have to do with another kind of Spring planting, and are worth reading over each Spring:

Plant 5 rows of Peas:
Promptness,
Preparedness,
Perseverance,
Politeness,
Prayer.
Next, plant 3 rows of Squash:
Squash gossip,
Squash criticism,
Squash indifference.
Then, 5 rows of Lettuce:
Let us be loyal,
Let us be faithful,
Let us be unselfish,
Let us be truthful,
Let us love one another.
And don't forget the Turnips!
Turn up for Church,
Turn up for Women's meetings,
Turn up with a smile,
Turn up with an experience to share.

Even with a minimum amount of preparation and hard work, one might expect reasonable good returns. Would you agree?

Todays Health-Tetanus

Most people know tetanus by its more common — though inaccurate — title of "lockjaw."

The word tetanus comes from the Greek for stretch, and the disease itself causes spasm and rigidity in the muscles — usually those in the neck and back.

What causes tetanus is entry of dirt (carrying tetanus germs) into the tissues; this might occur in an auto accident, or in such mishaps as a lawn-mower injury, or even by stepping on a rusty nail. Tetanus can happen only when the skin is penetrated; you can't get it from having dirt on you — or even by swallowing dirt. The injury doesn't have to be serious: a rose thorn prick is sufficient injury to allow the entrance of tetanus germs.

Fortunately, we have the means to combat tetanus: the weapon is a vaccine which became available in the 1930s. In Ontario, tetanus immunization is readily available to everyone (and is covered by OHIP). The primary series if injections is usually given to infants and young children in a combined vaccine that also immunizes against polio, diphtheria and whooping coguh.

Although cases of tetanus are uncommon in Canada, public health officials stress the importance of keeping up your immunity throughout school years and adult life with 'booster' shots every five years.

The reason for this is quite compelling. Among the handful of tetanus cases still encountered in Ontario each year, 50 percent are fatal.

So even though it's a rare disease, tetanus can be a killer.

The lesson to be learned from it is to take advantage of the protection that medical science affords us. If you do happen to cut your finger on an old can or put a pitchfork through your foot, and you've kept your tetanus immunization up-to-date, you may require only a booster dose; but for someone without previous immunity, the first dose doesn't give sufficient immediate response to prevent tetanus following the injury. In this situation an injection of tetanus immune globulin is usually given as well as the first tetanus toxoid dose. It is important to follow through with the rest of the tetanus toxoid series so this process doesn't have to be repeated with a subsequent injury.

This raises the whole question of knowing just what immunization you have, or don't have.

Certainly, keeping records represents a sensible investment in your future health — and it doesn't have to be a laborious process: a simple listing, carefully filed away, is all you need. Ask your doctor how often booster doses are required against diseases like tetanus, and then make sure that you (and your children) are taking full advantage of the available protection.

The tetanus organism is in the soil everywhere, so it's quite easily acquired. But it doesn't have to be dangerous. The means to prevent tetanus are readily available.

INCOME OPPORTUNITIES STUDIED AT K.C.A.T.

Identification and analysis of unconventional income opportunities for the rural community in Eastern Ontario was the purpose of a study recently prepared by N. Storr and R. Daniels and released by the Business Management Section at Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology. Entitled "Economic Opportunities Facing the Rural Community of Eastern Ontario", the study works from the belief that more than ever before, the urban population is looking to the rural environment as a source for recreation and a place to get "closer to nature", which has created many opportunities for rural people to increase their financial earnings and provide a much needed base for the rural community. The report identifies such opportunities as the establishment of roadside markets, pick-your-own operations and maple enterprises.

The popularity of roadside marketing is ever increasing. People are willing to travel to the producer so they may purchase top quality produce at reasonable prices. Locally grown products such as sweet corn and asparagus which lose their quality rapidly upon harvest, are items that are ideally sold in this manner. Other popular fruits and vegetables are apples, tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers and eggplants.

Some horticultural crops such as strawberries lend themselves very nicely to pick-your-own operations. Here the consumer comes into the producer's field and harvests the crop himself. This enables the purchaser to select the quality he prefers and the commodity can be sold for a reasonable price, below that at a retail outlet. Other crops such as apples, raspberries and tomatoes can be easily sold in this manner.

Eastern Ontario is naturally blessed with large stands of maples. Maple syrup and its many natural maple products are readily sought after by a large number of consumers. Opportunity exists for more sugaring-off parties, taffy pulls and pancake breakfasts served in the natural setting of a maple grove during the spring of the year.

Additional opportunities in the production and direct marketing of local commodities such as bedding plants, honey products and organic foods also exist. The opportunity to develop and expand these enterprises is virtually limited only to one's imagination.

A copy of this report as well as additional information regarding the specifics of establishing one of the above mentioned enterprises may be obtained by contacting the Business Management Section Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology, Kemptville, Ontario, K0G 1J0 (613-258-3411)

Rod Coneybeare has been in the broadcasting business for some time (remember The Rod and Charles Show?). Lately, he's been producing radio biographies of showbusiness personalities for The Entertainers. For his show on Frank Sinatra, he won an ACTRA Award as best documentary writer on radio this spring. It'll be repeated, incidentally, July 7 on The Entertainers, in case you missed it the first time around. Now he has another one coming up, Sunday, May 26, this time on Bing Crosby, "The Old Guy on the Minute Maid Commercials". It's two hours of remembrances, nostalgia and music, and should be of interest to anyone who remembers the days when Crosby was the most popular guy on records, the movies and radio.

John Kenneth Galbraith, world famous economist, was born in Elgin county in southwestern Ontario. A few years ago he wrote a book on his boyhood experiences titled The Scotch. Leslie McFarlane has dramatized the work for The Bush and the Salon, Sunday, May 26, and manages to keep all the original humor and frankness intact as Galbraith describes the life and times of the highland Scots who settled the area during the early 19th century.

Italian immigration to the States during the 19th and 20th centuries is described on They Come In Search of Bread by Angelo Pellegrini on CBC Tuesday Night, May 28. Pellegrini, himself an immigrant as a boy, is an English professor at Washington University who is also an expert on food and wine.

Three Canadian quartets will be featured on programs of Saturday, May 25 — The Orford Quartet on Music de Chez Nous, the Classical Quartet of Montreal on Canadian Concert Hall, and the Purcell String Quartet on Music Alive.

Novelist Margaret Laurence is interviewed by Robert Fulford on Anthology, Saturday, May 25. Her latest novel, The Diviners, has just been published.

On Thursday, May 30, Themes and Variations visits the CAMMAC Music Centre, a bilingual summer institution run by the Canadian Amateur Musicians - Musiciens Amateurs du Canada. Among those heard on the program are founders Carl and George Little. Carl Little is network supervisor of CBC Radio Music, and his brother George is head of the music division with the Quebec Department of Education.

Concern, Wednesday, May 29 looks at some of the legal and social issues raised by the wave of so-called political trials in North America, trials in which the defendants or their lawyers see themselves as fighting an anti-establishment battle.

TODAY'S CHILD

BY HELEN ALLEN

THE TORONTO SUN SYNDICATE

In the picture, Robby looks older than five, but you can likely see he still has all his "baby" teeth.

Robby is a tall, sturdy boy of Anglo-Saxon descent with dark eyes, unruly brown hair and fair skin. He is a shy, rather aloof child who comes from a greatly deprived background where demonstrations of affection were probably unknown. Though he is perfectly agreeable and co-operative in his foster home, he has not yet learned to relate warmly to adults. He gets on well with children his own age or younger.

Information on Robby's family tree is limited but there is no knowledge of any hereditary illnesses. He is healthy and energetic, keen on the outdoors. His foster home is on a farm and he likes all the animals, especially the dog which is his constant companion.

Robby's attention span is short but he has enough imagination to play happily alone if no other children are around. Since he is just five, Robby has not started school but is looking forward to going in the fall.

This laddie needs parents who will give him love without expecting an immediate return and who will understand that at this time his ability is unknown. It will be best if there are other children in the family with Robby the youngest.

To inquire about adopting Robby, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2. For general adoption information, please contact your local Children's Aid Society.

Former Volunteer Builds Sucessful Real Estate Career

By Alison Goddard

In a town where "who do you know" is the official password, real estate agent Virginia Chew does very well with the help of her friends.

"Our business is almost strictly referral," explains this tall, good-looking blonde, relaxing in her own gracious livingroom. "We do advertise. But most of our clients are friends, or friends off friends"

Friendship nurtured her small, but growing agency. Arnold, Brad ley, Sargent, Davy and Chew, Inc. ("our last names in order of longevity in real estate — the way law firms do it") are five women who formerly worked for a large local firm. "We all thought it would be fun to do something small, with friends. We're all equal partners, and we haven't regretted it one minute. We're going into our third year, and we're just sorry we didn't do it earlier."

As mother of three — now teenagers — Virginia Chew had done "the usual things — charity work, serving on a hospital board," until private school tuition made her decide "if I do things outside the home maybe I ought to get paid for it!" A friend in real estate convinced her that with her 19 years of living in the capital and her ease with people, she'd be very good at it. Apprenticed to a firm, she took a course, observed sales technique, and passed her exam.

Kissinger A Client

"My first sale — a beautiful New England house — was to a friend who really sold it to himself!" But among her clients that first year was Dr. Henry Kissinger, newly appointed as special presidential assistant. Mrs. Chew and a Kissinger aide first weeded out the possibilities. "He wanted a rental house with an extra bedroom so the children could visit. And a library with strong floors so it could support a safe." Then she toured with the now Secretary of State—in a White House limousine.

"He was utterly charming," she recalls. "He told me 'I'm not afraid of my new job. But I'm terribly nervous about finding a house. You must help me.'" She helped him rent a brick townhouse overlooking the park. At present, his bride, Nancy Maginnes Kissinger, is house-hunting for larger quarters.

Almost all moves in Washington are super sensitive, and a good real estate agent knows when to keep her mouth shut. Virginia Chew speaks candidly about herself ("I'm 43 years old") but cautiously when it comes to clients. "We have to be very careful because the columnists will call the agents, and we consider it very unprofessional to say what houses we have sold, for how much, or to whom. We just don't release that information until it's long, long gone. I don't even tell Peter Chew about business!"

A Understanding Husband

Virginia Chew's husband is a reporter for The National Observer and author of "The Kentucky Derby: The First 100 Years." "I have a very understanding husband," she says fondly, "I don't think it would work otherwise in my kind of business." Constant phone calls, weekend work and broken engagements are a rule of thumb in a real estate career. The rewards can be great — a five or six percent commission on houses selling in the $150,000 range. "But it's feast or famine, and I would hate to have to support a family solely on my income."

The Connecticut banker's daughter now has a keen appreciation of the need for knowledge about financing, a practical grasp of contracts, and a mind-reader's knack for knowing whether Mr. and Mrs. Smith are really serious about buying that house in George town.

"You must listen carefully to what they say and sometimes rethink it because they don't really tell you what they mean. And you learn to double-check everybody because some people, no matter how nice, or," she smiles, "how famous, sometimes say one thing and do another."

"It helps to have friends," confides Virginia Chew, "but real estate is a lot more complicated than showing a pretty house to a pal".

DENTAL TOPICS

Supplied by The Canadian Dental Association

TENSION AFFECTS DENTURE FITTING

Often the nervousness of a patient can affect the fit of dentures.

The dentist will help the patient to relax while impressions are being taken, but the more faith a patient has in his dentist, the easier to relax. Many potential denture wearers have great expectancies when acquiring a full set of dentures and are upset over the loss of their teeth. They should be aware that no set of dentures — no matter how well made and comfortable — is as efficient as a healthy set of natural teeth.

Physical factors in fitting include the shape and size of the ridges, tongue and palate. Then there are the patient's biological factors to consider such as age, general health, muscle and soft tissue condition, tongue position, neuro-muscular skill or co-ordination and the character and amount of saliva.

Once the dentures have been made, regular checkups are needed, because mouth contours change over the years and the plates can become loose. The dentist cleans and makes changes in the dentures when necessary on these routine visits, but he also looks for any inflammation or wearing away of mouth tissues.
