Boy is Located in Cornwall And Sent Back to Parents

Young Frank Kirkby Says Never Again After Brief Trip on His Own.—Back on Thursday.

After a brief holiday of about 32 hours, on an empty stomach, Frank Kirkby, Jr., was returned by Cornwall police to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kirkby, Thursday afternoon, a much wiser boy than when he started out on his first trip on his own. He had disappeared Wednesday morning about eight o'clock.

The 14-year-old boy was employed by his uncle Jos. Cheney, where he resided at the Doering Stock Farm, and had received six dollars on Tuesday in wages. After breakfast Wednesday morning he left the house and failed to return to the barns to work. His parents were notified and the police told of his disappearance.

A resident of Iroquois reported the youth had called at her place and asked to see a newspaper, saying he was looking for work, and notified the anxious mother. A plainclothesman recognized the boy on a Cornwall street and took him to the police station. The officers wanted to send the young traveller home by train but he ddn't want to spend his money, so he was sent on a transport truck to Morrisburg and then chanced his way home. He still had $5.50 of his wages.

Never again, said Frank, when he reached home and got a square meal, the first since before he left town. He had thought if he got to Cornwall he could get a good job and make lots of money.

Councillor Maurice Servage Resigns Township Seat

In Ill Health For Some Weeks, Forced to Retire in Second Term.—Court of Revision Held.

At the regular meeting of Winchester Township Council held in Winchester on Monday, the resignation of Maurice Servage, member of the council, was read by the clerk. Mr. Servage has been in ill health for the past two months, but action on his resignation was deferred until the July meeting.

Appeals against their assessment were heard by council sitting as a court of revision with Reeve W. J. McConnell presiding, and Jacob Steen, of Morewood, in the clerk's chair. Lorne H. McIntosh, of Winchester Springs, was also present.

Appeals were heard from Irwin Hilliard, K.C., of Morrisburg; John Fleming, of Chesterville, and others. Clarke H. Smith and Carmen Swerdfeger asked exemption on bush lots, and this was granted.

A reduction of $250 was made on the Hilliard property, $100 on the Fleming farm, and the other appeals were dismissed.

With more than $2,000 already spent on emergency repairs of the Baker and Nation Valley bridges over the Nation River, much added expenditure to other township bridges was said to be necessary.

Thomas J. Ralph, deputy reeve, and Haldane Cummings, road superintendent, were instructed to purchase additional steel and plank for further needed repairs.

A petition to have the Irving Quart drain repaired was referred to F. M. Eagleson, township engineer. A bylaw for the repair and improvement of the west branch of the Kittle Creek, at an estimated cost of $689, was read for the second time.

William Carkner, relief officer, reported no direct relief was given out and that the demand for men on projects of the municipality and seasonable labour had given employment to all.

At a joint meeting of the councils of Winchester and Finch townships in the evening, tenders for the crushing and placing on boundary roads of 1,500 yards of stone were opened and the contract awarded to John Dillabough, of Morewood. George Pollock, reeve of Finch township, presided with Reeve McConnell.

Quick Action Saves Barn Home of Garland Sharkey

Fire Started in Hay Loft and Was Well Under Way When Alarm Turned In.—Roof Bured Off.

Quick action by the volunteer fire brigade prevented serious loss at the home of Garland Sharkey, on Queen street, when a small barn was partly destroyed by fire late Friday morning. The blaze started in the loft where several loads of hay had been placed recently, but the origin is unknown.

The upper portion of the barn was blazing merrily when the alarm was sounded but two lines of hose, in all 1250 feet, were laid and the fire was brought under control before the fire spread to the lower floor. Damage was estimated at $400, covered by insurance.

The house, about 15 feet away, of stone, with an iron roof, was undamaged although the northwest wind blew the blaze directly on to it.

SUNDAY EGGS DEVOTED TO HELP ALONG THE CHURCH

There isn't much money in Kipling district in Northern Ontario, but the people have an agricultural way of helping the church, Rev. A. J. Fugelsang, minister in the district, told the Ontario and Quebec Convention of Baptists meeting at Toronto, Tuesday.

Members of the congregation decided all eggs laid on Sundays should go to the church, but, according to Mr. Fugelsang, "the hens got wise and quit laying on Sunday."

The people agreed then to plant an extra row of potatoes for the church By these means, the mission repaid its loan to the mission board.

"Since we've moved to the country," exclaimed the hostess, proudly, "we can raise nearly everything we eat. We even keep our own cow."

"Well," said the small son of the guest, setting down his glass disgustedly, "somebody stung you with a sour cow."

In a Line-Up
you are Courteous—
Try Courtesy
in the Traffic Lines

YOU, like most people, are courteous when you line up at the wicket to buy tickets. You stay in your place, do not jostle your neighbour, you respect his rights, and otherwise act towards him in a courteous manner.

But do you think and act towards your fellow-motorist in this same kind and courteous manner when you get behind the wheel of your car and roll along the highway?

Do you sound your horn when about to overtake him and then pass at a safe distance?

Do you keep to the right so that others may safely pass you?

Do you hand signal when you are about to stop, start, slow down or change direction?

Do you drive at the speed of the traffic you are in so as not to impede other drivers and cause them to "cut-in"?

When you need to sound your horn do you do so in a friendly manner or do you give it a frightening blast?

If you have not tried these courteous driving manners, I earnestly suggest that you try Courtesy when you get behind the wheel of your car or truck.

To "Try Courtesy" is to add greatly to your own pleasure and safety in driving as well as to that of your fellow motorists.

Thos. Allen is President Dundas Holstein Ass'n

Greater Dundas Association Met In Community Hall Thursday Evening.—Addresses Are Heard.

At the annual meeting of the Greater-Dundas Holstein Breeders' Association held in the Community Hall here Thursday evening, Thomas Allen, of Chesterville, was elected president of the society, with the following officers: vice-president, W. J. Fawcett; secretary, H. W. Graham; treasurer, Arthur Christie; directors, H. Durant, Allison Graham, Parnham Allison and Charles Graham, all of Chesterville; Frank Casselman, Morewood; Howard Biccum, of Irkerman; C. Smythe, Iroquois; Durham Wells, of Williamsburg; Allen McDonald, Ormond, Samuel Reid, Osgoode; Meredith McVey, Winchester; Albert E, Holmes, Winchester Springs.

Erroll Nephew, retiring president, presided, and Herbert W. Graham, of Morrisburg, Agricultural Representative of Dundas and Western Stormont, was secretary.

The secretary spoke of the progress made by the breeders since the association had been formed. A recent survey had indicated that farmers should keep fewer cows of higher producing strains. During the past four months the transfer of cattle had been higher than in many previous years and there was a marked increase in R.O.P. testing.

George Muir, Animal Husbandman of the Dominion Experimental Farm, spoke of the importance of selecting good dams, and of the need for careful consideration of blood lines before buying sires for breeding herds. He advised that the funds of the club should be used to provide literature and that round table conferences should be held during the fall and winter months. Dr. Duncan McKenzie, Assisant Animal Husbandman, spoke of the economic aspects of breeding pure breds, advising the use of record books as a means of weeding out unprofitable cattle.

R. M. Holtby, of Port Perry, Field Secretary of the Holstein Friesian Association, said that conditions generally among breeders were showing a marked improvement.

The treasurer reported a substantial balance and the directors were made responsible for the collection of the yearly fee in their respective districts.

Decision was reached to enter a Dundas County herd at Ottawa Winter Fair, but members were opposed to showing a herd at the Central Canada Exhibition, as there were so many entries, and only a few prizes for this competition. W. J. Fawcett and Howard Biccum, of Mountain township, and Frank Casselman, of Morewood, with Mr. Graham were named to select the herd for exhibition, and Allison Graham and Mr. Casselman were asked to attend the meeting of the Stormont Club at Newington to make arrangements for the annual picnic or field day of the breeders.

Thoughtlessness at Fires.

The Editor,
The Chesterville Record.

Dear Sir,—The crowds attending a fire often time impede (thoughtlessly, perhaps,) the firemen in their duties. At Friday morning's fire, the truck carrying the fire apparatus was delayed considerably by the jam of cars heading for the excitement. While the time lost was not great, every minute counts when firemen are rushing to a blaze.

As the hose lay along the streets, motorists insisted on driving up and down the street and continually crossing over the hose filled with water at considerable pressure. Common sense should tell the public that hose lines should not be driven over by autos or, worse still, by horses. The hose may be easily damaged and ,besides causing financal loss in replacing the hose, would cause serious delay as the firefighters shut off the water to replace the damaged length.

The laws of the province state clearly that no fire fighting apparatus may be followed at a distance of less than 500 feet, but the averge driver tries to crowd as closely as possible and if possible squeeze in ahead of the firemen. In so doing they can be a serious menace to the firemen as well as to their own safety.

What is there to hinder a car being left two or three blocks away from a fire and the occupants walking on to view the scene?

Surely a fire is one place where traffic should be regulated by the local police, and also a time when the motoring public should "Try Courtesy."

Thanking you for the use of this space, I am, yours trully,

A. CITIZEN.

PORCUPINE CAUSE OF EXCITEMENT AT HALLVILLE

There was much excitement in Hallville village recently when a porcupine was discovered one morning under the store of Mr. James Troy. It crawled out onto the sidewalk and went down through the village slowly, ever unconscious of the excitement it was causing. It finally went up a tree in front of the house owned by H. Wallace and some men cut the limb down and removed the porcupine to the outskirts of the village where it found its way into Mr. A. Sipe's bush.—Kemptville Advance.

HOSPITALIZATION WILL BE MADE COMPULSORY.

COMPULSORY hospitalization for persons suffering from tuberculosis who should be segregated to prevent the spread of the disease, is planned by the Ontario Government and early action will be taken, Premier Hepburn announced in an interview Saturday night after his address at the Toronto Railway Club banquet in Hamilton.

"It's got to be done," the Prime Minister said, when questioned regarding a reference he had made to hospital care for those known to have the disease.

Examinations by the travelling clinics had resulted in many cases being discovered in the incipient stage and the tragedy of it was that not half of the persons advised to take hospital treatment did so. Not only did the patient become worse, but spread the germ to many others, he said.

"The Government is going to arrive at a definite conclusion to stop the spread of tuberculosis in this Province. It can be readily stamped out if we tackle the problem right away," declared Mr. Hepburn.

"The greatest enemy of all is tuberculosis, and it causes more deaths of persons over 10 years of age than all other communicable diseases in the country and constitutes a real problem."

Care of persons with tuberculosis was a state problem, the Premier thought. Mention was made of a case where a woman unable to pay for sanatorium care, was refused admission because the Reeve of the municipality in which she lived did not think the township could pay either. She remained out and several others were infected. There were many such cases, said the speaker in announcing that the Government had decided to intervene.

A BAD THREE MONTH RECORD.

THE first quarter of 1937 set up an alarming record in the number of traffic accidents in Ontario. The New Year holiday period had been passed so successfully in this respect that hope was encouraged for a better year. It was thought drivers had realized what could be done through the exercise of care and courtesy on the streets and highways. And during three months there has been in all classes of accident an increase of 33.7 per cent. Fatalities, including 20 children, totalled 114, as compared with 64 in the similar period last year, while 560 more persons suffered various degrees of injury. In all, 3.143 drivers were involved in accidents, 1,272 with property damage only.

The Motor Vehicles Branch of the Department of Highways has gone into the causes of many of these accidents. It is found that 228 drivers were travelling too fast for road or traffic conditions; 196 were on the wrong side of the road; 121 did not have the right of way; 11 were cutting in; 6 passed standing street cars; 6 met trouble while passing on curves or hills; 2 passed on wrong side; 29 failed to signal; 73 drove off the roadway.

During the three months, 62 pedestrians were killed in traffic accidents and 767 injured. Of these, 250 were struck at street intersections and 185 while crossing between intersections. Nine children were killed and 125 injured while playing in the streets. Coming from behind parked vehicles or other objects accounted for four deaths and injury to 102 others. Nine persons were fatally and 36 non-fatally injured while crossing highways, and 16 people were struck while on sidewalks. Of the drivers involved in accidents, 23 met death and 347 suffered physical damage.

This is a tragic story of traffic toll on human life and the maiming of men, women and children. And the pathos of it is that, as indicated by the Department's analysis, so many of these accidents were due either to recklessness or stupidity on the part of drivers or pedestrians. Each class must bear its share of blame.

The three-month record of killings and injuries is discouraging to those who work so consistently for the promotion of safety on streets and highways But they must persevere. No doubt, without this constant pleading and warning, conditions would have been worse. The authorities must continue strict enforcement of traffic regulations and deal vigourously with offenders. The condition is becoming too serious for leniency or laxity.

Haughty Woman: "Did any of your ancestors do things to cause posterity to remember them?"

Farmer: "I reckon they did. My grandfather put mortgages on this place that aren't paid off yet!"

"Honestly, would you think I had bought this car second-hand?"

"No; I thought you made it yourself."

"Is my hat on straight?"

"Yes."

"Then wait a minute while I alter it."

THE MILKY COCOANUT.

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

THE cocoanut palm is a native of the East Indies, but it now grows on all coasts and islands of the tropics. The tree is about 50 feet in height and the leaves are sometimes 20 feet long. The coarse fibre which covers the nut is known commercially as coir and is used extensively in making ropes, fishing nets, and in caulking boats. A characterstic of coir rope is that it will stretch 25 per cent before breaking and it is also more durable than most other fibres.

Another important product is copra, the dried kernel from which oil is extracted. This oil is used in enormous quantities in soap making as well as in some food products. The oil cake is used as a cattle food.

During the Great War, cocoanut shell was made into a high grade of charcoal, used in the manufacture of gas masks.

Canada imports tremendous quantities of cocoanuts. Last year we got 14½ million nuts, chiefly from the West Indies. Jamaica alone sent over nine million. We got over one million pounds of desiccated cocoanut, almost entirely from Ceylon. We got over four million gallons of cocoanut oil, chiefly from the same island. There were 700,000 pounds of coir from British India.

Thus we see what a great boon to mankind is the milky cocoanut.

EARLY SWEET CORN.

Early sweet corn brings the best price, hence the importance of planting as soon as possible. Successional sowing made at intervals of ten days in the same field are a good way to get early corn. Should the first planting succeed, the second or third plantings may be hoed out, or if the first plantings be killed by frost, the third or fourth planting may develop unhampered.

WEEDERS.

Possibly one of the most satisfactory implements for the control of weeds in a growing grain crop is what is known as the finger weeder. This implement consists of a series of long slender teeth which form a very light harrow. The finger weeder may be used to advantage on annual weeds, shortly after germination, both before and after the grain crop has emerged and until the crop is some two to four inches high.

CURRENT CROP REPORT.

Spring seeding is about completed in most districts, although in some areas excesive moisture has retarded the programme. This is particularly the case where the soil is low or clay in nature.

A report from Perth states that one prominent beef farmer who feeds two or more carloads of cattle, brought in Western Herefords at 4c a lb., averaging 740 lbs. in weight, and sold them at 7c a pound, weighing over an average of 1100 lbs. This shipment of cattle which brought in $4,000 was fed on the grain and hay grown on a 100-acre farm.

SUMMARY OF VEGETABLE PROSPECTS

Western Ontario — Variable, cool, wet weather retarded somewhat the preparation of soil and seeding, depending upon locality and drainage facilities. As a result, growth at the present time is a week to ten days later than normal, but roots are developing well and with a few warm days top growth would be rapid. Moisture conditions are excellent. There have been several slight frosts on low lands but no damage has been reported. The acreage of canning tomatoes under contract shows an increase of 40 per cent. The acreage of asparagus, early roots, early cabbage, lettuce and early potatoes is expected to show a slight gain over last year. Commercial table stock turnip acreage will show an estimated increase of 25 percent over 1936 as a result of the improvement in export demand.

Eastern Ontario—Seeding generally has been considerarbly delayed by wet weather, although in the Ottawa district almost all of the seeding intended to be sown up to the present time has been done. In Northumberland and Prince Edward counties a considerable amount of seeding was done on light soils during four warm days at the beginning of May. On heavy soils along the lake front from Toronto east, practically no seeding of vegetables has been done. In Peel and York counties weather conditions have been favourable for seeding on sandy land but frequent rains have prevented seeding on heavy and black soils. Correspondents state that there will be a large increase in the acreage devoted to canning crops such as tomatoes, peas and corn, as there are a number of new canning factories opening in Eastern Ontario this year.

CARE OF LATE CHICKS.

It is very necessary that late chicks be raised on clean ground. Disease is more likely to hit the late ones, because of the fact that they get out on the ground younger and range farther than do the early broods.

To keep them from trouble with coccidiosis and worms, see that the chicks are kept free from the contamination of the earlier broods and also from the laying flocks. Keep the birds in clean quarters and on clean ground, and you are giving your chicks a chance to make a normal, steady growth throughout the summer.

Late chicks must be fed well; they cannot rough it during the summer if they are to make sufficient growth to bring them into lay in time to get fall or winter eggs. It takes a well-balanced diet to produce proper framework and growth.

Egg size is affected by inheritance, but it also is affected by the feeding programme. Size of egg is directly influenced by the growth the pullets make. Maximum growth must be obtained before the short days arrive. Place extra mash hoppers in the shade on the range and give the birds plenty of fresh clear drinking water.

If the chick range is covered with a crop of alfalfa, it would help materially in rounding out these growing chicks and in turning them into profitable layers. It would provide shade as well as food and would be a factor in making these chicks more comfortable during the hot weather.

FARM AND HOME WEEK AT O.A.C., JUNE 21-25

Again the Ontario Agricultural College is throwing open its doors for a special week of visits from the farm folks of the province. June 21-25, inclusive, are the days, and the number of visitors should be larger than ever since the work of the College and Experimental Farm grows in extent and in value from year to year.

Perhaps special interest will centre aound the daily live stock parade. Never before has the College had such a fine array of breeding stock, and many farmers will be anxious to see the fine offspring of such notable College sires as the Clydesdale stallion, "Craigie Realization," and the shorthorn bull, "Millhills Ransom."

The ninety acres of field crop experiment plots will include some interesting new things, and the magnificent grounds and gardens will be at their best, with hundreds of varieties of roses and other flowering shrubs and trees to be inspected and enjoyed.

Besides these there will be many educational exhibits showing the work of various departments. Visitors will have an opportunity to ask questions of the men in charge of these exhibits and to learn what is being done about mineral deficiency; about improvement of soils and the use of fertilizers; about troublesome pests such as insects and nematodes; about pullorum disease in poultry and the most efficient methods of feeding chicks; about off flavours in butter and the manufacture of blue cheese; and about many other important problems which the College is working on at the present time.

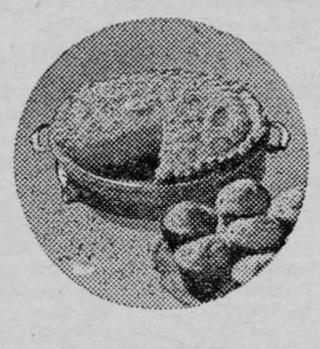

Altogether it will be a great week for the farmers of Ontario and for the College.

Last year more than 16,000 people visited the College during Farm and Home Week, and more than 16,000 others at other times during the summer. Already quite a number of groups have been at the College this year and a large number of others are booked for dates other than Farm and Home Week. Thus does the College extend its services to the people of Ontario, and thus do the people take advantage of that service. It is too good an opportunity to be missed.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

- By -

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

FIT FOR A QUEEN.

WE ALWAYS SAY peaches and cream are fit for a queen, so why not strawberries and cream for a queen? In spite of all the enticing, fussed-up strawberry desserts there are none that can lord it over a dish of fine ripe strawberries and good rich cream. However, for those of you who doubt my word, here are a few recipes to try.

STRAWERRY SHORTCAKE.

There really isn't a dessert that is nicer to eat or nicer to look at than a shortcake with plenty of fresh strawberries and plenty of whipped cream.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablepoons butter
2-3 cup milk
Strawberries

Sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt together. Cut in the fat with a knife. Add milk gradually to form a soft dough with as little mixing as possible. Toss on a floured board and roll to one-third inch thickness. Cut with a cookie cutter. Place on a greased baking sheet and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. Mash the berries slightly, reserving a few perfect ones for the top. Sweeten them and let stand for a short time. When the cakes are baked, place on individual plates, and split in two. The biscuits may be buttered if desired. Spread crushed strawberries and a tablespoon of whipped cream over the lower half, replace the top and spread with more berries. Top with whipped cream and one or two whole berries.

STRAWBERRY PUNCH.

2 quarts strawberries
3 quarts water
2 lemons
2 cups sugar

Crush the strawberries and pour the cold water over them. Set in a cold place for three hours, then strain through a fine sieve lined with cheesecloth. Add the juice of the lemons and the sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved. Set in a cool place until ready to serve.

STRAWBERRY JAM.

Hull the strawberries and weigh them, allow as much granulated sugar as there are berries. Mash the berries, and put into a kettle, mashing as they heat. Add sugar, boil, skimming often. When thick, remove from heat and seal in sterilized jars.

STRAWBERRY FLOATING ISLAND

½ cup strawberries
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup milk

Separate the eggs. Beat the yolks, add ¼ cup sugar and milk. Cook in a double boiler until the mixture coats a silver spoon. While it is cooling crush the berris and mix with ¼ cup sugar. Strain the juice from the berries. Beat the egg whites until stiff, add gradually ¼ cup sugar, and then the strawberry juice. Beat till it will stand in peaks. Pour the custard mixture into a glass pudding dish. Spread with the crushed strawberries and dot with the egg-white mixture. Keep in a cold place until ready to serve.

STRAWBERRY DUMPLINGS.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teapsoon salt
4 tablespoons butter
2-3 cup milk
Mashed and hulled strawberries

Mix the first five ingredients as in the strawberry shortcake recipe. Roll in a thin sheet; cut in six rounds. Place four to six strawberries on each piece of dough. Draw dough up around berries to cover. Bake for 15 minutes. Serve hot with cream or strawberry hard sauce.

STRAWBERRY HARD SAUCE.

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup powdered or fruit sugar
¼ cup crushed strawberries

Cream the butter with the sugar. Add the crushed berries in small amounts, beating thoroughly between each addition. Let stand in a cold place to harden until ready to serve.

Add crushed strawberries to plain blanc mange as a variation.

* * * *

Try fresh strawberries and diced fresh pineappe together for a fruit dessert.

* * * *

If you are in the habit of keeping baked tart shells on hand, a quick emergency dessert can be made by mixing fresh strawberries with sweetened whipping cream and piling in the tart shells.

* * * *

Place a small mound of fruit sugar in the centre of each dessert plate. Surround with large, perfect unhulled berries, and serve for breakfast instead of the usual orange juice.

* * * *

A little lemon juice added to crushed sweetened strawberries gives an added flavour when they are to be used as a sauce for ice cream.

* * * *

Strawberries are rich in vitamins and minerals and of course are rich in flavour.

* * * *

Strawberry jam is good in baked tart shells if you haven't fresh strawberries. Top wth whipped cream.

The Gun-Runners

IF POGO, the captain's extra mount, had not worked loose his halter rope, Trooper Daley would have had a dull day in camp beside the main trail from Montevaca across the boarder. Only a sergeant and the new and old guards had been left behind when Troop X went out in three patrols to roam through barren hills and sandy desert searching for any or all of the numerous parties that were known to be running forbidden arms and ammunition into Sonora. But Pogo did break loose, and Daley saddled up in a hurry and started in pursuit.

Mounting a hill two miles from the camp, Daley saw Pogo, already tired of his escape, start circling back. Well beyond the farthest point of his flight he saw a cloud of dust. With soldierlike caution he dismounted and looked for its cause. After watching it for many minutes he learned but one thing about it: it slowly crept southward toward the border.

Daley decided that Pogo would return to camp all right, and that it was his duty to push across the plain and learn more of those travellers who were being so careful to keep off the trail.

For an hour he had travelled in the direction of a distant peak in line with which he had marked the dust, when out of the silences of the desert came the shrill neigh of a horse. Daley's mount tossed its head; but before it could trumpet its answer Daley had reached forward and closed a hand over its nostrils, shutting off its wind for the moment.

He slipped from his animal and stood at its head, prepared to stop any equine signal. The neigh had come from over the brow of the hill in front of him. The crest of this was covered with mesquite. Daley worked well into this and waited. He had, to be sure, prevented his horse from answering the other's call, but to a horseman the call itself was enough warning of the presence of other animals to warrant investigation.

And now his mount showed unmistakable signs of uneasiness. It pricked its ears, and tried impatiently to throw its head. And yet Daley heard no sound, saw no movement. Then he "froze" in his position, for up from the valley floated a hail, "See anything, Jim?"

And so near that Daley knew it must be just outside the thicket in which he stood came the answer, "No. Always knowed that cayuse of yourn was a fool."

"Knows more than some men I could mention," came the retort. "Might be a whole regiment up in that mesquite, and you'd be none the wiser."

"Is that so!" came the belligerent reply. "If there was a pony round here, I reckon it 'ud have answered. Your old mule smelled some coyote and didn't know the difference."

"Have it your own way," came the answer; "but you better come down hyar before you stumble on sometin'. 'Sides, it's time to be pushing along."

THERE was a movement outside the thicket, and now Daley caught a glimpse of a sombrero as the rider cantered away. Daley waited where he stood. It was evident that he had discovered the source of the dust, and it was apparent, too, that these men had something to conceal. It was reasonable to suspect that they were gun-runners. But Daley wanted more than suspicion, and he wondered how to get it. If he led his horse forward, the gregarious animal might call out to its fellows; and if he left it tied to the mesquite, it was almost sure to get lonesome and to whinny. He solved the problem as best he could by making a noose of the end of his lariat and slipping it over the horse's muzzle, holding the bight of it so that he could tighten it with a jerk. Then he mounted and rode cautiously forward until the hill drooped away suddenly, and through the thinning thicket he saw at last what he had sought. There were three Mexican carts drawn by ponies. The last was abreast of him, and on the driver's seat slouched a diminutive Mexican boy under a huge sombrero. The trooper's glance, ranging forward, took in the driver's of the other carts. These, too, he judged to be Mexicans, a man to each cart, and ahead of the wagon train roade two horsemen side by side. One of these riders was slender and under average size. The other was a large man with gray hair that were the two that he had heard. He reined back at the edge of the thicket. He had found his quarry. Now the question was, what should he do with it? It would be more discreet to return to camp and get more men. But on the other hand he was not sure of the contents of those carts. Again, if these were indeed gun-runners, they might slip into some hidden canyon and disappear, or else conceal their guns, if such they had, and give the troopers the laugh.

On the other hand, the butt of a rifle projected from its boot on the near horse, and a cartridge belt was about the waist of the younger rider. No doubt the older man was similarily armed. Would they peacefully submit to arrest if they were indeed gun-runners? Daley doubted it very much, and he wished that he had brought his rifle as well as his automatic pistol.

But he must do one thing or the other. The riders disappeared down a draw between the hill on which he stood and a smaller one that flanked it. The first cart rattled out of sight in turn. Daley was well in the rear of the train now. A short gallop brought him to the tailboard of the rear cart as it was dipping down into the draw.

"Wait a mnute!" Daley called in a low voice.

The little Mexican turned a startled face. He was only a boy. It scarcely needed the sight of Daley's gun to make him stop his ponies. He pulled them up abruptly and watched the soldier with fright in his eyes. Daley dismounted and climbed over the tailboard of the cart. The sombrero of the driver ahead was just dropping out of sight. Daley felt that he had not been seen.

He pulled aside an old blanket that covered the cargo and exclaimed in disgust. An orderly row of bales of alfalfa covered the bottom of the cart. Daley might have given up then save for what a quick glance at the Mexican boy revealed. He caught a flash of exultation and relief in the boy's eyes, but that died at once. Daley reached down and lifted one end of the bale—or rather he attempted to, for loose hay came away in his hand.

"Huh! Pretty solid alfalfa," he muttered.

He glanced at the boy again. He had turned and was looking down the draw.

"No signals, kid!" Daley cautioned. He patted his gun holster as the boy turned back. The Mexican's sullenness showed that he understood. The trooper took his automatic by the muzzle and struck one of the bale wires a sharp blow that snapped it. A few handfuls of alfalfa and his fingers closed over the sight guard of a rifle.

"SO that's the game!" exclaimed the trooper. He feit about in the hay and found two other rifles. Three rifles to a bale. How many bales? Then straightened and as he did so a voice drawled coldly from the rear of the cart.

"Seems like you're mighty cur'ous," it said. Daley turned to find himself covered by the slim young rider who had nearly discovered him in the mesquite thicket.

Daley's pistol lay within arm's reach on a nearby bale. He regarded it thoughtfully. So did the gun-runner. "Wouldn't try it," he advised with ominous quiet. "José, you take his gun," he added to the Mexican boy. "I reckon he won't need it right away." The frightened Mexican boy possessed himself of Daley's pistol.

The trooper eyed his captor steadily. "I suppose you know what you are doing?" he suggested. "You're bucking the whole United States Army."

"Yo're only a danged small part of it, and you'll jest tag along as a guest o' ourn," said the Mexican. He caught up the reins of Daley's horse and made them fast to the tailboard of the cart. Then he took Daley's automatic from the driver and thrust it in his belt.

"Move along, José," he ordered the Mexican boy, "and move lively."

The boy touched up his ponies, and the cart rattled and swayed down the draw. At the foot of it Daley saw the other two carts waiting with the second rider, rifle across the pommel of his saddle, watching their approach. He made a motion to his two drivers as the third cart drew near, and these took up the march. Then he dropped back beside Daley's guard, who rode at the rear of the third cart, eyed the prisoner sharply and presently after a word with the younger man wheeled his horse and rode back up the draw.

IT was a matter of a half-hour before he rejoined the train, and this in the meantime had pushed along at a running walk through sand and mesquite. Again the two men conferred in low tones. Daley judged the older rider had satisfied himself that there were no other troopers in the immediate vicinity. The tracks would have told that story. At last the big man took his place at the head of the train, and the younger rider held his position a few paces in the rear of Daley's cart, and they proceeded at the same pace.

And in this way the afternoon wore on. At intervals one or the other rider would mount a nearby hill and look for signs of rescue, the second man guarding Daley in the meantime. The result was always satisfactory apparently, for the train moved on at the same rate of speed.

Daley's gloom increased. He had hoped and expected that when he did not return a search party would be sent out after him and the train discovered. Indeed this was one reason that prevented him from "calling the gun-runner's bluff," as he put it. He doubted that either of his captors would shoot, but he felt that he should have the best of reasons before experimenting.

And now the sun was low. Shortly it would drop behind the western hills and night would fall quickly. His chances then of rescue would be slim, and the gun-runners' chances of escape across the border exceedingly good. From time to time he had tried without result to engage the close-lipped young gun-runner in conversation. He doubted indeed that these men would harm him, provided he did not interfere with their plans before they were safely over the border, but whenever he thought of the humiliation of returning to camp empty-handed with no story but that of calmly submitting to capture, he resolved that he would make some attempt. He lay at length on the alfalfa, his eyes closed, but very much awake. The valley was narrowing and had swung eastward, for the sun hung over the rear of the cart now, tipping the western mountains. Through his nearly closed lids Daley could see the young rider's head droop as he dozed and then fetch up with a jerk and droop again. The Mexican boy slouched in his customary manner, the reins hanging loose in his hands. The cart ahead swayed along a hundred feet or more away, with the first cart at a like interval. The advance rider was hidden from Daley's sight.

AND now fortune came to his aid. The young gun-runner's horse had long scented the fragrant alfalfa. Its rider had jerked it up from time to time to prevent it from nosing into the cart. Now the animal, its reins loose, craftily lengthened its stride, and thrust its muzzle over the tailboard of the cart. In a tense moment Daley reached for the bridle and caught it. The next he was out of the cart and on his feet. A step carried him to the rider's side, and as the fellow roused from his doze and reached instinctively for his gun, Daley caught desperately at his wrist. The pony shied off, and its rider came to ground with Daley on top of him.

Daley found he had a wildcat on his hands. For all his considerably greater weight he could not hold the other down. The pistol fell to the ground in the scuffle. The riderless horse bolted down the valley. The Mexican boy had come out of his apathy. He had stopped his cart and was shouting lustily for help. It was a matter of seconds before the other gun-runner would appear on the scene and that would end it for Daley.

The trooper shifted both hands to the other's throat and clung on like a bulldog. The gun-runner beat and kicked and tried to gouge him, but Daley's long reach saved him. He took his punishment and hung on. The gun-runner's face grew purple. His eyes bulged. His struggles grew weaker. And then he went limp in Daley's hands.

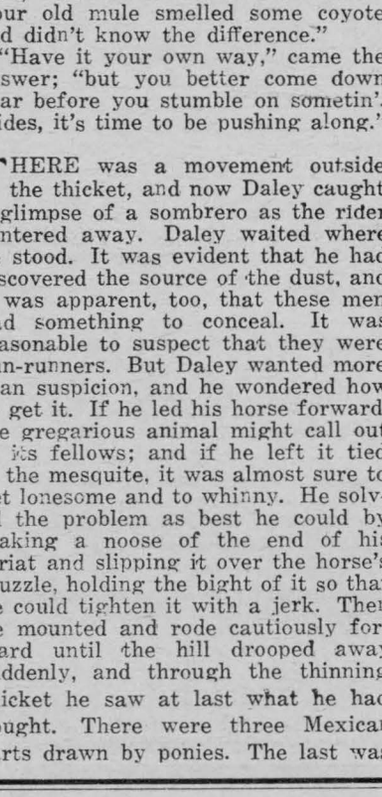

As Daley let go his hold and reached for the automatic, he saw the big man coming. He was racing his horse to the rear of the column, revolver in hand. The soldier knelt beside his fallen foe and tried to steady a hand cramped from the choking grasp he had had on the younger gun-runner's throat. He opened up fire as the rider appeared from behind the cover of the last cart. His first shot missed. He got one back that threw the sand in his face. Then the big man leaned low over his horse's neck, gave the beast the rowels viciously and came charging down on Daley like a thunderbolt.

IT was the horse or nothing now. Daley let loose a rain of lead from the big forty-five at the oncoming animal. The horse faltered in its stride, hurtled on with its own momentum, and then somersaulted, throwing its rider almost at Daley's feet.

Daley stood as in a dream. His pistol was empty, but he had no need of it. The rider lay senseless, perilously near the lashing heels of the dying horse. The younger gun runner was slowly coming back to life. The carts were halted, the drivers peering apprehensively back at the tableau. And above and about was the peace of a twilight sky and a silent desert.

All night the train retraced its steps of the day. The ponies were weary, and the Mexican drivers rebellious, but Daley gave them no let up. He was taking no chances with his capture. He rode behind the last cart, where two disgruntled gun-runners, uninjured except for the rough handling they had experienced, slept when they could, and when they could not complained profanely about the tightness of their bonds.

When day broke over the desert a thrill of pride and relief gave new life to the trooper. The hill above the camp from which he had first seen the train was in sight. Upon its crest he saw a watching horseman. The watcher was signalling to the camp below, and Daley knew the joy of the victor returning safely with his spoils—the joy of a man who had set out to capture a mere runaway pony and had brought back a pair of desperate crooks.

RURAL PUBLIC HEALTH CONTEST.

RURAL PUBLIC HEALTH has never received enough consideration in Canada. Some provinces have done better than others. Most of the counties in the Province of Quebec have Health Units. In other provinces there are few full-time Medical Officers of Health and how can we hope to have good Public Health work without good Public Health workers? The salaries paid to full-time or part-time Medical Officers of Health are nothing to be proud of, either.

However, the Canadian Public Association, which is "living and doing well, is not forgetting about the importance of Rural Public Health. It has arranged in co-operation with its nearest international neighbour, the American Public Health Association, to organize an Annual Rural Health Conservation Contest in Canada. This seems a good idea. It is a modern idea. It cannot do any harm and cannot very well help doing good. Its success depends on you. This means you, who are reading this article. The contest will be open to all rural areas in the Dominion of Canada which have a full-time health service. The object of the contest is to encourage and promote the development of good, practical, satisfactory Public Health Rural Services and keep all the people well all the time. It is evident that such a contest will help to awaken interest, spread information, and develop enthusiasm and support for such services—to show what they can do and how they can do it. Prizes and awards—perhaps trophies—will be given to the winners.

The work will be under the general direction of the Canadian Public Health Association's Committee on Rural Health Conservation. Further informaton may be obtained by writing to the Secretary of the Canadian Public Health Association, 105 Bond street, Toronto. The first contest is to be held in the spring of 1938 and the whole matter wil be fully discussed at the annual meeting of the Canadian Public Health Association at Ottawa, June 17th-19th.

The success of such a contest depends on the co-operation of everybody concerned, perhaps most of all in the Local Lay Committee. That committee should be an outstanding one. There are "Key-Men" and "Key-Women" in every rural district—farmers, manufacturers, business men. The teacher will help. The postmaster will help. So will the Women's Institutes. The clergy and the doctors will help. If everybody helps, we shall succeed. If everybody helps—why not you?

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

THE RECENT FLOODS.

Fergus News-Record.

Every drop of Thames water was carrying some mud with it. Where did it come from? The answer is obvious; it came from some farmer's field. It was the soil he needed this year and for generations to come, to grow crops. He hasn't a very large supply of it—a few inches at most—and it takes years to add an inch on impoverished grounds. That is the loss that hasn't been counted in the newspapers, but it is the worst loss of all.

LET SLEEPING SKUNKS LIE!

Boston Globe.

A prominent Bangor, Me., physician, making a call just outside the city, swerved his car to avoid hitting the body of a skunk, lying in the middle of the road. Returning an hour later and noticing the body undisturbed, the doctor stopped his car and started to walk back to remove the offensive object from the road.

"Better leave that feller be," shouted a nearby workman. "He's been there sound asleep for a couple of hours and not a car's touched him." A well-aimed pebble quickly convinced the doctor that there was life in "the body" still, as without any disturbance the skunk got up and walked away.

The death of Jean Harlow, the blonde screen star, in Hollywood, has evoked a wonderful expression of sympathy from the public in general. It seems wonderful how intimately the public knows their favourites whom they have seen only on the silver screen.

When you find a man finding fault with a local newspaper, open it up, and ten to one he hasn't an advertisement in it; five to one he never does anything to assist the publisher to run a good paper; and forty to one that if the paper is a good one, and full of life, he is the most eager to see the paper when it comes out.

The usual routine of business was transacted, and the different departments heard from. The supply secretary, Mrs. Saucier, reported an exceptionally fine bale packed and sent to the west. This was valued at something over $100.

Mrs. Ingram Cross was in charge of the programme and related many interesting things about the Oriental work in Canada. A very pleasing solo by Mrs. Allison Graham was acceptably rendered. After extending her manifold thanks to all for help so cheerfully given, Mrs. Dixon brought the meeting to a close with the Mizpah benediction.

Former Winchester Couple Celebrate Golden Wedding

Were Married at Home of the Bride's Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Gray, Nation Valley.

Fifty years ago on Tuesday, Charles Asa Beach and Martha Doretta Gray were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gray, of Nation Valley. This week in their palatial home, "Beachview," at Cornwall, they celebrated the golden anniversary of that event surrounded by their family and among the many friends who called to offer their congratulations to the well-known couple and extend best wishes for many more years of life together.

For 21 years, they lived in Winchester, where Mr. Beach had succeeded to the furniture business of his father, Mahlon Ford Beach, after graduating from Albert College, Belleville. Here, their family of two sons and one daughter was born to them, J. Clifford Beach, Claude Beach and Leila Beach. The sons are now manager and superintendent, respectively, of the Beach Furniture Limited, Cornwall, of which their father is the president. The daughter died 11 years ago.
