BESSIN-VETS WIN IN FIRST GAME OF SEMI-FINALS

NEXT GAME OF TOWN LEAGUE PLAY-OFFS TO-NIGHT. FORD V-8'S WILL TRY TO OVER-COME OPPONENTS' LEAD.

One of the best hockey matches of the season was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators at the arena on Monday evening, when the Ford V-8's clashed with Bessin-Vets in the first game of the semi-final round for the Town League championship and the Melvin Cup. The contest was fast from the opening bell and kept the crowd in a wild state throughout.

Both teams settled away fast and for the first two minutes there were some rapid exchanges by the forward lines. Scott broke away at top speed, stick-handled through to the defence and passed to Carmichael who fooled Williams neatly on a quick drive to the corner of the net. It was a real bit of hockey on the part of Scott and Carmichael. Fords 1; Bessin-Vets 0. The Vets appeared to be playing a cautious game and were allowing their opponents to break up their attacking plays frequently. After 8 minutes, the forwards for the Blue and White team broke loose once more. They swept down in neat combination and Blair scored when he let a sizzling shot go that caught Williams in the wrong corner of the net. Fords 2; Bets. 0. At this point it looked as though the Red Shirts were being consistently outplayed, when suddenly their forward line of Rombough, Fielding and Rombough came to life. Swinging behind their own nets the trio sailed away in smart combination that carried them through the entire Ford team. Ault had no chance to save Fielding's drive when he took A. Rombough's pass at the goal-mouth. Both squads were now working hard and nerves began to get frayed. Carmichael was banished on a trip and the other members of the teams began wielding high sticks and loose hips. McLean was banished when he rode Sutton over his hip and play began to steam up a little. Blair was given two minutes for a trip in the corner and the Fords hung on desperately. The period ended with both teams striving hard to penetrate the other's defence.

The second period opened with a bang and the squads settled down to business at once. Close-checking was in order and few rushes appeared to be dangerous until L. Rombough broke loose all by himself. He went up the right boards, drew the Ford defence over and circling fast, let a hot one go that beat beat Ault cleanly. It was just too hot to handle, for the goalie did not have time to get in front of it. Hitsman then brought the crowd up when he roared away fast, stick-handled through the defence and coasted in on Williams, only to let his stiff drive go wide of the posts. It was a real effort and looked like a sure goal. Fielding and A. Rombough retaliated almost at once with a dazzling rush that carried them through to the goal mouth. Fielding's shot struck Ault's pads and the situation was saved by the neat stop.

Bessin's took command of the play as the third period opened and the Blue and White tteam were kept busy breaking up swift rushes into their defence zone. A. Rombough put the Vets one up after 6 minutes when Fielding laid the puck on his stick directly in front of the net. It was a quick goal that gave Ault little chance to fight back. The battle was becoming hotter as time passed until Carmichael and A. Rombough spurted into the corner after a loose puck. After a few seconds of tussling, both men dropped their sticks and took to fists. After a brilliant display of how hockey should not be played, the referees landed both in the penalty box for five minutes in order to allow them to meditate on the error of their ways. Meanwhile play was resumed and Blair evened the count for the V-8's when he and Scott came down in neat combination. Fords 3; Vets. 3. Hitsman was banished for a trip and the Vets pressed hard. Ten seconds after Hitsman had returned to the play he was again sent to the cooler for suspicious tactics and the Red Shirts saw their chance. Playing with three men against four, the V-8's found the work rather heavy. Fielding flashed down the ice at top speed, passed to A. Rombough, who drove the puck into thhe nets to end the scoring. Final result: Bessin-Vets 4; Ford V-8's 3. Bessins carry a one-goal lead into the final game on Thursday evening.

The line-ups were:

Bessin-Vets—Goal, Williams; defence, McLean and Jacobs; centre, Fielding; wings, A. Rombough and L. Rombough; subs., Marcellus, Helmer and McConnell.

Ford V-8's—Goal, Ault; defence, Scott and A. Barley; centre, Carmichael; wings Sutton and Hitsman; subs., Locke, Casselman, Kenney S. Barkley and Blair.

Refrees—E. Kellogg and Bill Carkner.

SHOTS AND SAVES

It was the best game of hockey to be played in the Arena this winter. Both teams were at full strength and going great guns.

The stars of the contest were the two goalies, Williams for the B.-V's. and Ault for the V-8's. These two men saved the situation for their team on numerous occasions during the evening.

HALF LOAD REGULATIONS

"Half load" regulations for trucks using Ontario highways go into effect on March 1st, and will be effective until the end of April. As frost begins to leave the ground and pavements are often heaved and cracked, the department calls upon the owners of large transports to reduce loads by 50 per cent. Prosecutions await those who violate the regulation.

A Reminder!

The Press has not sent out the annual red ticket to those who are in arrears for their paper. This year the postage would run into a number of dollars, and we cannot afford that. The printing business like all other businesses, suffered much because of the years of depression, and this winter seems to be the worst. We have over a thousand dollars due us by delinquent subscribers, and that money we must have in order to carry on. We pay good wages, pay good rent, pay cash for our newsprint, and if those who receive the benefits of our labours, our machinery, our office expenses and news print don't pay on time it means a considerable lot of close financing and more mental trouble. We are not mincing matters. All we ask is what is due us. We must have at least $500 from delinquent subscribers in the next month. If we have to send out the red cards we intend this year adding the cost, so that the charge will be $2.00 instead of one. All we ask is fair play and considerate dealing. This appeal applies to 100 or more who have small accounts for advertisements such as "For Sale," etc., on our books. Many of you have been notified more than once. Why not play fair and come across.

WINCHESTER LOSES ESTEEMED CITIZEN

THE LATE JOHN F. CAMPBELL WAS PROMINENT RESIDENT OF THIS DISTRICT FOR 73 YEARS.

The untimely death occurred on Sunday, February 17th, 1935, of an outstanding and widely-esteemed citizen of Winchester township in the person of John Ferguson Campbell, in his 73rd year. He had been ill only a few days with bronchial pneumonia and his sudden passing came as a great shock to all who knew him.

One of the most prominent citizens of the Ormond district, the deceased was the son of the late Alexander Campbell and his wife, Janet Ferguson, pioneers of Beckwith township, and had lived practically all his life in this community.

As a young man he attended the Collegiate at Morrisburg and the Kemptville High School where he matriculated. His keen interest in the classics and history led him to extend his studies, and he attended the Ottawa Normal School, where he qualified as a school teacher. Entering the profession, the late Mr. Campbell taught at Cass Bridge, Mulloys' and later at Reids' Mills before retiring to the old homestead to engage in farming.

For the past 35 years he had lived on the farm near Ormond and had built up one of the finest establishments in the district. He was keenly interested in agriculture and spent much of his time in bringing about improvements on his property.

The late Mr. Campbell was a devoted member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and for years was a member of the board of managers. He took a keen interest in its affairs and had served as an auditor for the church.

He had played a prominent part in the educational affairs of the district, having been a member of the first board of the Winchester High School in 1914. For 35 years he had served as secretary of the public school board at Ormond and he was looked upon as a valued public servant in that position.

Keenly interested in political affairs, the deceased was recognized as one of the most widely read citizens of this district in such matters. He was a constant reader of Hansard and prided himself on his collection of clippings dealing with affairs of state. He was a lifelong follower of the Libeal party.

Following his early tendencies, the late Mr. Campbell had collected a fine library of the outstanding English masters with whose works he was particularly well-versed. He took great pleasure in reading and was poetically inclined, having composed many splendid selections as a hobby.

Reserved and unassuming in manner, the deceased was known throughout this district as a fine, cultured gentleman. His untimely death will be received with profound regret by a wide circle of friends.

The funeral was held on Wednesday at his late residence with Rev. W. D. Turner of St. Paul's, Winchester, conducting the service. He was assisted by Rev. Mr. Burns, of Ormond, and Rev. Herbert Wood of Winchester Baptist Church. Interment was made at Springhill cemetery.

Those left to mourn include three sisters, Mrs. Nehemiah Carkner, Winchester; Mrs. Robert Cinnamon, Harmony, and Miss Margaret Campbell, at home; also two brothers, Robert of Franklin, Man., and Charles, of Ormond.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Thos. and Arthur McLean, Ben Cinnamon, J. McK. Rodney, H. G. Cummings and Bert McVey.

WILL BE INDUCTED SOON

Rev. John McKay of the United Church here, who has accepted the call from MacKay United Church, Ottawa, is to be inducted during the first week in March. The Board of Session of the church will meet Friday night to arrange the exact date, and Rev. Mr. McKay will preach his first sermon in his new charge on Sunday, March 10th.

Cigarette Caused Fire

Donald Willard, young farmer of the second concession, Kenyon, died last Friday in a Cornwall hospital from burns received when a cigaret he was smoking set fire to the couch on which he was lying. The accident occurred about four o'clock in the morning. The young man's screams of agony aroused the other inmates of the house who rushed down to give him attention and move the blazing couch outside before any damage was done to the house. The young man suffered terrible burns about the body. The Willard home is about four miles from Alexandria. Dr. D. T. Dolan, of Alexandria, gave emergency treatment after which Willard was rushed to the Cornwall hospital.

FAREWELL PRESENTATION MADE

A large number of neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Erratt last evening to bid them farewell prior to their departure from the Summers' Settlement.

The evening was spent in music and games during which Mr. and Mrs. Erratt were called to occupy the seats of honor. An address was read by Mr. Ellsworth Summers after which a beautiful table lamp and electric iron were presented by Mr. Howard Summers. Mr. Erratt made a suitable reply in which he expressed regret at leaving so many good friends.

Dainty refreshments were then served by Mesdames John Carkner, Nehemiah Summers, Misses Iris Summers, Helen Steinberg, and Messrs. Cecil Strader, Howard Summers and Felix Wise.

Fine Operetta Was Presented on Friday

The Busy Health Boosters, (Jr. Red Cross) of Miss Emma Gardner's room, celebrated their 12th birthday on Friday evening last, by staging a fine operetta in the Susie Annable Memorial Hall of the School before a large and appreciative audience.

The various scenes of the presentation were executed in such a manner as to draw hearty and prolonged applause from those present.

Among the highlights of the performance were the dramatization of the old fable of "The Old Lady Who Lived in the Shoe." A realistic shoe was presented to the audience as the curtain rose for the second act, and two of the children came tumbling out of the doorway to the delight of the younger members of the audience and the enjoyment of all. The splendid way in which the various themes were staged was indicative of the training given the children in their various roles. All of which was thoroughly appreciated. Mother Goose and her realistic goose were also features that caused wide comment.

The complete program and cast are as follows:

First Scene—Miss Bright and her pupils plan a visit to Mother Goose Islad.

PRESENTATIONS TO REV. JONN McKAY

PASTOR AND HIS WIFE ARE HONOURED BY YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES

Rev. John McKay was an honoured guest at the regular meting of the Summers Young People's Society on Thursday evening last. The occassion was of special interest as it took the form of a farewell to Mr. McKay who will shortly take up his work as pastor of McKay United Church, Ottawa.

After the regular meeting, an address was read by Mr. Ellsworth Summers and the presentation of a handsome electric clock made by Mr .William Carkner.

In his remarks, Rev. Mr. McKay reviewed the history of the Society in the Settlement and expressed his pleasure at the way in which the organization was being conducted by its leaders. It was with regret that he was leaving this district, but he would be accompanied by happy memories of this and many other occasions, spent in company with the young people of Summers' Y. P. S.

A short program was presented under the leadership of Miss Annie Strader and was composed of musical selections by Messrs. Harry and Cecil Strader and Dixon Hutt, and vocal selections by Miss Effie McCooye. The balance of the evening was spent in games, after which refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mesdames Donald Strader, convenor; Ross Durant, and Misses Beatrice Cross, Annie Strader and Hazel Strader.

On Friday evening last Rev. and Mrs. McKay were the guests of honour at a special meeting of the Young Peoples' Society held in Harmony United Church and presided over by the president, Mr. Charles Rattray.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. McKay were asked to accept, on behalf of the society, an address read by Mr. Rattray, while Mrs. McKay was the recipient of a beautiful piece of china and Mr. McKay a Rolls Razor.

It was upon the arrival of Rev. John McKay in Winchester that the Young People's Societies throughout the district were formed and it was with sincere regret that the members learned of his intended departure.

The guest, numbering about 60 enjoyed a short program and social hour following the presentation, after which refreshments were served. The following took part: Messrs. Thomas Docksteader, Chas. Rattray, Thomas Reid, Frank Coby and George Dazell.

ATTENTION—ALL NURSES

Will all graduate nurses in this district who are actively engaged in the profession; graduate nurses who are non-active. undergraduate nurses (exclusive of those now in training) and practical nurses, kindly get in touch with Mrs. H. S. Gross, Reg. N., as soon as possible?

A survey is being made of the profession and the Registered Nurses Association in Ottawa is anxious to obtain a list of all those who are connected in any way with the care of the sick.

Public Health Nurse May Be Returned

Letter Received from Dr. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, Informs Women's Institute that Dundas may be included in Health Unit in near future.

Many practical ways of helping children form habits of health were given in answer to roll call at the February meeting held on Tuesday night which was presided over by Mrs. J. E. Singleton. Owing to the absence of the secretary, the minutes were read and taken by the Assistant secretary, Mrs. R. Crowder. A letter from Dr. Faulkner in reply to one sent him, was read, explaining why Dundas was not included in the Health Unit and saying that he hoped it yet may be. Mrs. Kinkaid gave a good report of relief work done by her committee since Jan. 1st. Clothing and comforts were sent to the needy. A donation of $25 was voted to the Public Library. Mrs. Crowder, in giving current events, told of links of friendship between Institutes in different countries; of the commemoration of King George's 25th anniversary; of the reduction of interest on Farm Loans in Ontario, and other interesting items.

Mr. Kinkaid was convenor of the Program and Social Committee and also chairman of a playette put on by this committtee entitled "How to save ourselves work," in which a solo: "Let's do the easiest way," was sung by Mrs. Geo. Wilson with Mrs. Wm. Lannin accompanying. A paper prepared by Mrs. Kellogg was read by Mrs. Crowder. This told of many labor-saving devices. "Time Lost," was sung as a trio by Mesdames McFarlane, H. Nesbitt and Crowder. Mrs. Geo. Wilson representing a grandmother of seventy, told of how she saved herself and lengthened her life. "Lie and sit as much as you can," is a good recipe for a ripe old age.

An amusing chorus was sung by Mesdames Wilson, Nesbitt, McFarlane and Crowder.

Mrs. Arnold Sherwood, representing a man, told of the many things a mother has to do in the home which a man does not realize until he is left to do it. "Believe Me," was sung by Mrs. Crowder. "Helping Ma" was given by Jean Nesbitt, Patti Cass and Betty Stewart. This program proved very interesting. Refreshments were served and a social time spent, after which a vote of appreciation was given the committee by Mrs. Cass on behalf of the members.

The committee was composed of Mesdames Kinkaid, Merkley, Nesbitt, McFarlane, Crowder, Kellogg and Wilson.

Winchester Seed Exchange!

A plan to make contact between the man who has seed to sell and the man who has to buy seed.

The man who has seed to sell lists what he has to offer on a form supplied for the purpose and leaves it at our office. The man who wants to buy seeds looks over the lists and selects what he needs. If he cannot find what he wants he fills in a form listing his requirements and we place it on file. Both buyers and sellers may look over the lists at any time.

NO CHARGE will be made for listing any lot of seed that has been cleaned at our plant. The seller may deal directly with the buyer and arrange handling, weighing, billing, shipping and collecting himself.

If he does not wish to take care of the seed himself, we will weigh it up and handle it for him at the rate of a quarter of a cent a pound on 100 lb. lots or over, and one half cent a pound on lots of less than 100 lbs. Where we are required to tag, ship or collect payment for the seed there will be an additional one quarter cent—this to be paid by the buyer. These charges include five days free storage and apply only to Timothy and Clover Seeds. On account of limited storage space, Seed Grain will have to be handled directly from the seller to the buyer.

Small seeds must be listed to show Grade, Test No., Approximate Weight and Price.—a sample to be supplied representing each lot offered. The seller of course, must guarantee the quality equal to the sample and grade.

All transactions through the Exchange strictly cash unless other arrangements are made between the buyer and the seller. We believe this feature will overcome one great difficulty in selling seed locally.

In listing seed there is absolutely no obligation that the seed has to be sold through the Exchange—nor do we guarantee to sell seed that is listed. However, we will do our best to place every lot if it is good seed and listed at a reasonable price.

When the seller places his seed he is to advise us at once so that we may cancel that lot from the lists.

If seed growers and seed buyers will co-operate with us and use this plan, we believe it will provide the producer with a better market for the seed he has to sell and save money for him on the seed he has to buy.

Come In And Talk It Over!

SEED MAY BE LISTED AT ONCE!

OBITUARY

THE LATE JOHN A. MELVIN

The death occurred at the Toronto General Hospital on Tuesday, February 12th, following a short illness, of a former well-known resident of this district in the person of John A. Melvin, in his 71st year.

The late Mr. Melvin was born in the Melvin Settlement, the son of the late Allen and Mary Melvin, and lived in that district until a young man. Some years ago he moved to Aurora, Ontario, where he was engaged in farming until the time of his death.

In 1919 the deceased was married to Jean Watson, of Port Perry, Ontario, who survives. He was a member of the United Church.

The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon last at the residence of his niece, Mrs. Faye Scott, with Rev. John McKay conducting the service, assisted by Rev. W. D. Turner, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. Interment was made at Maple Ridge Cemetery.

The pall bearers were four cousins, Messrs. Thomas, Lawrence, Wilburn and Roy Annable.

The late Mr. Melvin was a cousin of Mr. David Melvin and a brother-in-law of Mr. T. A. Scott.

No Blame Attached To Local Motorist

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury at Ottawa last week after hearing the evidence of 12 witnesses in the case of Cecilia Patricia Depper, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Depper, Billings Bridge, who died at the Civic Hospital on Sunday evening last after being struck by an automobile at Billings Bridge earlier in the day.

The jury in its verdict expressed the view that the driver of the car, George Barkley, of Winchester, did not exercise sufficient caution in passing through the crowd which was coming out of the church at the time of the accident, and recommended that the hill be sanded when in a slippery condition.

No charge was laid against the driver of the car after the accident by police, who then expressed the view that he was not to blame for the fatality.

Barkley in his testimony stated that he was driving about 20 miles per hour but was in a rut in the road and could not get out of it in order to avoid the accident.

POTATO MARKETING ORDERS

The Eastern Canada Potato Marketing Board has issued a list of orders governing marketing of potatoes in Ontario, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia in accordance with provisions of the natural Products Marketing Act passed at the last session of Parliament. They became effective February 1.

The rules provide, among other things, that every dealer marketing potatoes shall obtain immediately a licence from the local office of the board in his district for which he will be required to pay a fee of $1. They provide no dealer may market potatoes in the four provinces covered by the orders except through agencies established by the board and point out that under provision of the Natural Products Marketing Act, persons breaking the rules may be subject to a fine of $25 to $500, imprisonment for not more than three months or both fine and imprisonment.

The marketing agencies are authorized to collect tolls of one-half cent a bushel on potatoes marketed by dealers. The collections must be made on or before the first or 15th of each month and turned over to the local board in the district.

The rules say no dealer shall market potatoes produced in the four provinces except under contract of purchase and "at a firm price" and that no dealer shall market potatoes of the Grade E Canada No. 2 except for export and then only subject to a further ruling.

This ruling provides that potatoes destined for the Carribean market must grade at least 75 per cent. E. Canada No. 1. The ruling does not apply to potatoes sold before February 1 and actually in transit until February 15.

The order contain a list of marketing agencies in the four provinces through which potatoes produced within their borders must be marketed. They are:

Ontario, J. T. Cassin, Toronto; New Brunswick, C. C. Cunningham, Fredericton; Nova Scotia, Roy Grant, Halifax; Prince Edward Island; J. J. Trainor, Charlottetown.

Death row in New Jersey penitentiary — Electric chair

ELECTRIC CHAIR AND DEATH ROW AWAIT HAUPTMANN IF APPEAL FAILS

Here is the "death row" in New Jersey state prison at Trenton, where Bruno Hauptmann awaits execution of the death sentence imposed upon him for the murder of the Lindbergh baby. Hauptmann was sentenced to die during the week of March 18 in the electric chair, shown at the right, but his appeal will delay execution presumably some months.

A GOOD IDEA

Many churches publish a full list of contributors, with the amounts given to various funds. Many reasons are suggested, but one is most important. It pays. Editors of weekly papers might find that it also paid them to publish their list of subscribers with amounts due.

CANADIAN ATHLETES

Canada will send 40 athletes to Germany next winter to represent the Maple Leaf in the Olympic Winter Games, according to information received by sports officials from J. H. Crocker, honorary secretary of the Canadian Olympics Committee, Montreal. It is announced that 15 hockey players, members of the 1935 Dominion championship team, will defend Canada's world championship. In addition there will be 10 ski runners and jumpers, 10 figure skaters including coaches and chaperons, and five speed skaters.

NO HOSPITAL

"Indefinite postponement" of plans for the erection of a Provincial Hospital for mental cases in Smiths Falls was announced last week in despatches from Toronto.

"So long as relief payments continue to drain the Provincial treasury at the present rate, no major building operations will be undertaken in the Ontario Hospitals," Toronto reports quote Hon. Dr. J. M. Faulkner, Minister of Health, as saying.

Reports added that the hospital planned for Smiths Falls had been indefinitely postponed.

GARLOUGH—McINTOSH

A wedding of much interest took place on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 13th, at Williamsburg, when Edith Kathleen McIntosh, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac J. McIntosh, Williamsburg, was united in marriage to Cecil Merkley, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garlough, of Williamsburg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. A. Adey, pastor of the United Church there.

Following the ceremony the wedding party proceeded to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding dinner was served to about thirty guests, members and friends of the contracting parties.

Following the dinner Mr. and Mrs. Garlough left by motor on a wedding trip to Syracuse and other points in the States. Travelling, the bride wore a copen blue dress, fur trimmed black coat, black hat and accessories to match. On their return they will reside on a farm on the Nation Valley road.

A HANDY FIRE EXTINGUISHER

Some of the worst fires on farms arose from the careless use of gasoline and oil. A useful and effective home-made fire extinguisher is a large metal pail full of sand with a handy shovel in it. A heavy blanket of sand will usually smother flames quickly, and in the event of an early application may prevent serious loss. We have seen sand or dust from the side of the roadway smother incipient fires in a car.

More packages of bees were imported to Canada in 1934 than formerly, in spite of 60 per cent. increase in prices over the previous year. Many of these bees were to replace losses from the previous winter, and their purchase indicates that more interest is being taken generally in honey production, although the crops of honey had been light.

REMEMBER?

When ladies wore heavy quilted woollen petticoats called "balmorals?"

When we girls used a petal from the red rose off last summer's hat for rouge?

When soap-makers came to the door to buy the winter's accumulation of wood ashes, paying for them with tinware?

When the ladies wore leg-o'-mutton sleeves lined with a stiff fabric which held them to a full size, giving a wing effect?

When Grandmother covered round tin cans with old carpet or pants cloth, and sewed seven together and covered the top, using it for a footstool?

SILVER JUBILEE PLANS BEING MADE

His Majesty, the King will broadcast a message to his subjects of the Empire the world over on the evening of May 6th, it has been announced officially.

This will be the principal day of the great Silver Jubilee celebrations of his Majesty's accession to the Throne. It was on May 6th that his Majesty succeeded to the Throne, and the celebrations will continue to June 20th, two days before the anniversary of his Coronation at Westminister Abbey.

While celebrations will be held throughout the Empire, the principal events in which the King will participate are a grand review of the fleet at Spithead, a military review at Aldershot, and a review of the Royal Air Force at Mildenhall aerodrome.

London's principal buildings and streets will be floodlighted. Their Majesties will attend a thanksgiving service in St. Paul's Cathedral.

FANCIFUL FABLES

HINTS FOR THE HOME

Improves French Dressing

To improve the flavour of French dressing, add a little onion juice.

Improved Grapefruit

Try sprinkling a little salt on the grapefruit and see if it doesn't bring out the full flavour.

Folding Napkins

Napkins should be folded plainly and laid flat upon the table. It is no longer good form to fold them in fancy shapes.

Medicine Time

An old discarded clock is excellent to use in the sick room, setting the hands at the time the next dose of medicine is due.

Butter Spreads Easily

On cold mornings when the butter is hard, hold it under the hot water faucet a second and turn off the hot water. It will then spread easily.

The Shower Bath

After taking the shower bath, draw out the curtains along the rod to dry, otherwise the water will rot the fabric and often produce mildew.

The Silver Compartments

To clean the felt in the bottom of the silver drawer, place the drawer on the floor and clean with the attachment of the vaccum cleaner.

Brush Bristles

If the nail brush bristles have become too soft, soak the bristles for several hours in a strong solution of salt water and the stiffness will be restored.

Damask Napkins

Damask napkins will be smooth if they are ironed from hem to hem with the grain. To polish, iron from selvage to selvage. Then fold so that the under edges will not show.

Lace

When laundering lace, baste it carefully on a piece of white material and wash on that. Use lukewarm water and white soap, rinse thoroughly, then dry in the sun.

Whipped Cream Substitute

Add a thinly sliced banana to the white of an egg and beat until stiff. The banana will be entirely absorbed and you will have a delicious substitute for whipped cream.

Scorched Clothes

Clothing that is scorched while ironing should be immediately plunged into cold water. Allow it to stand for twenty-four hours and by that time the marks will have disappeared.

The Coronet Braid

The braid of real hair, worn across the head is one of the most favored notes in modern hair fashioning. It is called the coronet braid and has largely taken the place of the tiara.

Removing Adhesive Marks

An effective and pleasant way to remove marks of adhesive tape from the skin is to wet the fingertips with a bit of oil of wintergreen you ordinarily use in making candy, and rub the marks off gently.

Silk Stockings

Before wearing the new pair of silk stockings put 1-2 teaspoonful of alum in one quart of water and rinse them. Repeat this process after each wearing, and see if the stockings do not last twice as long.

Baby's Head

To get rid of that scale of dandruff on top of baby's little head wash it every day with castile soap and then rub white vaseline over the dandruff. The scale will loosen and come off within a short time.

Cooking Frankfurters

To cook frankfurters so they will not crack put them in a saucepan in cold water and simmer for about twenty minutes, being careful they do not boil rapidly. The rapid boiling is what causes them to burst.

Look At The Label Twice

Many women refuse to keep any medicines in the house that are even slightly poisonous. This may seem overly cautious to some and unprepared for emergencies to others. But the best rule of all is, look at the label twice before using.

Fruit and Nuts in Sugar

It has been pointed out that Arabs have for centuries lived on an exclusive diet of dates and goat's milk—a diet almost complete. Think of the nutriment of this: equal parts of dates, figs, dried apricots and nuts. Pitting the dates, mix them all together and run through a chopper. Cut them into squares and roll them in powdered sugar or granulated sugar.

Knitting Spring Clothes

Hand-knitted and hand-crocheted fashions are destined to be smart next spring and summer. Paris has devised new hats and sweaters with cotton the favorite material because it is coolest and most comfortable with tweed suits. These styles can be knitted at home and enable women with long winter evenings on their hands to make inexpensively a variety of gay accessories.

SANDWICH FILLINGS

1. Finely chopped pineapple, peanuts and celery.
2. Minced ham, chopped sweet pickles, chopped celery and salad dressing.
3. Grated cheese, chopped nuts, chopped celery and salad dressing.
4. Cream cheese, marmalade and salad dressing.
6. Chopped olives, nuts and celery mixed with salad dressing.
7. Orange marmalade and peanut butter.
8. Cream cheese and banana pulp.
9. Cream cheese, chopped onion and salad dressing.
10. Chopped chicken, celery and pimento mixed with salad dressing.
11. Chopped chicken and dill pickles mixed with salad dressing.

The WOMAN'S ANGLE by NANCY HART

There's a new mascara on the market that comes in stick form, and works very much like a lipstick, except that you wet the stick before applying to the lashes. It may also be used as an eyebrow pencil when it is dry.

In China last year, General Chiang Kai-shek ruled that women's sleeves must be no shorter than elbow length, dresses must not be above the ankles and legs may not be exposed—eliminating the slit skirt. Hair must be combed backward and must not be longer than the neck.

A punch that is stimulating and delicious is made with the rind of half a lemon, crushed with half a cup of sugar, a quart of cider, the juice of one lemon and a cup of sherry. When cold, pour over ice in a punch bowl and add three quarters of a cup of brandy.

Women are wearing more and more veils on their hats both formal and informal. For the informal hats, the vogue seems to be the veil without any design, but in stiff material and large mesh.

Town League Hockey

Last Friday's Games

Final games in the Town League schedule were staged at the local arena on Friday last, when the General Motors team battled the down-trodden High School sextette while the Ford V-8's fought to overcome the ambitious Bessin-Vets. Two good games resulted.

FIRST GAME

In the first game the High School worked hard in an effort to make a play-off position. Weir opened the scoring in the first minute when he beat Corry after taking Robinson's pass. Art Summers retaliated at once, when he took a pass from McLeod at the defence and scored from close in after 15 seconds of play. Davidson added another for the school when he banged in Jim McKendry's rebound. Corry had no chance to save. McLeod, however, made it 2-2 in 60 seconds when he rushed alone and beat Workman on a clean shot. Stark took James' pass at the blue line two minutes later to make it 3-2 for G. M.'s. With 3 minutes left to play Johnston once more tied the count when he came down alone and scored on a long angle shot.

The second frame saw G. M.'s taking command of the play and making the Students like it. James scored after 12 minutes when he took a short pass from Summers, while the latter put his team 2 up when he went down in combination with Carkner, took the pass and made no mistake about the shot.

In the final stanza the school team came to life and rushed four men up. Cross caught a blue-line pass from McKendry and skating around the defence drilled the rubber into the net. As the period ended, Stark scored another for G. M.'s to make the final score, G. M. 6; H. S. 4.

The line-ups were:

General Motors—Goal, Corry; defence, Blair and James; centre, Carkner; wings, Summers and McLeod; sub., Stark.

High School—Goal, Workman; defence, Cross and Dixon; centre, Weir; wings, Robinson and McKendry; alternates, Rowat, Davidson, Boyd and Johnston.

Referee—Bill Carkner.

SECOND GAME

The Bessin-Vets, assured of a play-off position, set out to demonstrate their wares at the expense of the Ford V-8's. Blair, however, started the scoring when he took Hitsman's pass from close in after 6 minutes. Marcellus evened the count on a solo rush a short time later. The balance of the period was scoreless although fine hockey was handed out for spectators.

The second session started off at a fast clip. Neither team were able to penetrate the close defence until 15 minutes had elapsed. McLean came out fast, weaved his way through to the Ford defence and let a hot one fly that caught Ault out of the corner.

The final session found Bessin-Vets playing an air-tight game to hold their lead. There was no further scoring. Final score: Bessin-Vets, 2; Fords 1.

The line-ups were:

Bessin-Vets—Goal, Williams; defence, McLean and McConnell; centre, Fielding; wings, A. Rombough and L. Rombough; alternates, Marcellus and Helmer.

Ford V-8's—Goal, Ault; defence, Barkley and Blair; centre, Carmichael; wings, Sutton and Hitsman; alternates, Locke, S. Barkley, and Casselman.

Referee—Ernest Kellogg.

BABY VALENTINE OF 1880 IS DR. M. W. LOCKE

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Locke of Williamsburg, received a chubby, gurgling little Valentine in the year 1880, but little did they realize that their Valentine, which they named Mahlon William, would some day be a God-send to the entire countryside as well as to thousands of suffering humans the world over. Dr. M. W. Locke of Williamsburg was 55 years of age on Thursday last, St. Valentine's Day.

THE POINT OF VIEW

When the other fellow is set in his way, he's obstinate; when you are, it is just firmness;

When the other fellow doesn't like your friends, he's prejudiced; when you don't like his, you are simply showing that you are a good judge of human nature.

When the other fellow tries to treat some one especially well, he's toadying; whn you try the same game, you are using tact.

When the other fellow picks flaws in things, he's cranky; when you do, you are discriminating.

When the other fellow says what he thinks, he's spiteful; when you do, you are frank.

RAMBLING 'ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY

There are 8600 licensed street vendors in New York city, and the police estimate that there must be about twice as many altogether, for many of those who are "run in" for traffic violations have no licenses at all.

Whenever a vendor is arrested for violation of traffic ordinances in New York, he goes before a magistrate who rarely fines him at all, and even more rarely fines him more than a dollar.

In addition to the licensed vendors on the streets of New York, the city has licensed over one hundred itinerant musicians and hand-organ operators.

The Family DOCTOR
by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

ARE YOURS ARTIFICIAL?

SOMETIMES I get to thinking that, almost half the people are equipped with manufactured molars. So many millions of the natural teeth are taken away because of those pesky germs; they cause rheumatism — and "sinus trouble," as well as dozens of other evils. And, tooth building has reached the pinnacle of perfection, I imagine. New, straight, perfectly-tinted teeth take the place of old, yellow, troublesome snags.

I know several people who wear their artificial teeth all the time, with perfect comfort; they sleep with them in, and seem to enjoy life fully as well as if they grew there. These people seldom mention their teeth, except to praise them.

Now and then, however, I must give advice that belongs to the dentist. I find "partial plates," that get filled underneath with positively decaying remnants of food, lending the victim a most unholy breath,— often causing ulcerated, infected gums and lips; these customers more frequently come to the family doctor with mouth troubles than they go to their dentists; I suspect the fee has something to do with the problem — they think the doctor has no right to charge for dental advice!

My object in writing this letter is to tell you to keep the artificial set of teeth CLEAN; they should be taken out, and scrubbed daily, to keep the mouth sweet and free from disgusting matter.

A prominent doctor recently told me of a case — a man with a horrible condition of the mouth — ulcers and infection; he wore a partial plate that never had been removed since he bought it. The doctor in cleaning up, found several water-melon seeds under that plate — they had been there since August the year before, and it was now February! Reader, keep your teeth CLEAN

State Medicine Is Instituted For Jobless

A venture toward State medicine was decreed in Ontario last week. It will go into effect on March 10.

Regulations initiating health insurance —paid for by the Province and municipalities, caring for the destitute and their familes, and compulsory in all organized municipalities—have been passed by the Queen's Park Government. No advance in medical-relief costs is anticipated.

The plan is an agreement between the Ontario Medical Association and the Provincial authority, and was sponsored and announced by Hon. David Croll. It provides for a State medicine structure for the care of relief recipients and certain war pensioners.

Details of Scheme

The Government's outline of its new program includes the following principles:

1. Medical services of the highest quality will be available whenever necessary to every indigent—man, woman or child—in all organized municipalities of Ontario.

2. The same services will be provided the war veteran with a small family, if they are receiving relief from the Federal Government.

3. The plan is compulsory upon all organized municipalities, in contrast with the present medical relief system, which is purely permissive, and in practice has been confined to the larger centres.

4. For the service, the Province and the municipality will jointly pay monthly the sum of 25 cents for every individual on relief. This amount is fixed by agreement and the Ontario Medical Association, and will be calculated on the maximum number on relief in the municipality during the month. The division as between Province and municipality will be on the same ratio as the division of direct-relief costs— in most instances, two-thirds from the Province, one-third from the municipality.

May Designate Doctor.

5. The patient will have the right to designate his own doctor, nor will he be confined to his choice to the physicians in his own municipality; and he is at liberty, on notice to the Relief Officer, to change doctors if he is not satisfied with the service he is receiving.

6. All qualified medical practitioners, whether or not they are members of the Ontario Medical Association, can participate.

7. Every member of the relief recipient's family must receive, under the new agreement, service equal to that provided by the doctor to his private patients.

8. All necessary medicines must be prescribed by the doctor and dispensed by a qualified druggist, and the cost is included in the fixed payment of 25 cents made by the Province and municipality. An exception is made in the case of outlying districts, without pharmacal facilities, where the doctor may dispense his own medicines, without increase in cost.

Administration Without Cost.

9. Administration, without cost, will be in the hands of local committees of the Ontario Medical Association and the pharmacists, on a county or city basis. The committee will distribute funds that are made available by the Province and municipality.

10. The doctor will prescribe for all the patient's needs.

11. The cost to the Province will be no greater, but the service to the indigent, until now confined to the larger centres, will extend to all parts of the Province.

12. Unorganized municipalities in Northern Ontario do not come within the scope of the new plan, because of their sparse population and problems of travelling. An effort will be made to meet their special needs through another system.

ONE WAY OF GETTING RID OF TRANSIENTS

We remember many years ago this province was afflicted with an epidemic of tramps, and depreditions by this fraternity became frequent. The result was that an agitation was started and quickly spread from town to town whereby "tramps" as they were then known, were given a term in the county jail, In a short time they had become a rarity. It's time measures such as this were taken again. Transients do not like the confinement of a county jail. Treatment such as this would soon rid the province of this gentry, and they would have to return to their home community for their livelihood rather than preying on strangers who have quite enough to do in caring for their own.

As the world grows wiser and wiser, it finds more and more ways of making a fool of itself.

Do You Want Your Daughter To Be Pretty?

Here's how one girl put roses into her cheeks and rounded out a thin face

Mothers who are anxious for their daughters to be healthy and attractive will be interested in the story of a certain young girl who was pale, run-down, underweight, when she went to a competent authority to have her blood tested. She weighed only 91½ pounds. The test revealed the trouble. Her blood was too poor in quality to keep up her strength, weight and vitality. Her blood was below normal in the number of red corpuscles and in vitally-necessary haemoglobin. She was instructed to take two of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (so called because they have a pink sugar coating) three times a day for a month and then return for another blood test.

Thirty days later a changed, happy girl came back. She had gained nine pounds. Her blood tested almost normal in its haemoglobin content and was slightly better than normal in number of red corpuscles. She felt a tremendous lot better and looked it. She had roses in her cheeks and everyone said that "her face had rounded out and she was positively pretty".

Charming color and soft clear skin depend almost entirely upon the blood, because the blood carries the vitality and nutriment that builds the complexion. The soft, clear skin of every pretty baby is proof of it. And the girl mentioned above is living evidence that good looks which have been lost through impoverished blood can be regained by taking the proper remedy.

There is no need for so many girls to endure a sallow, uninteresting complexion nor to remain listless, nervous and easily tired out. For when these are symptoms of blood that is lacking in vitality, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will restore strength and "pep" and tone up good looks, too! Equally effective for people of all ages. THE UNITED CHURCH

Taking Matt. 24:35 as a text, Rev. John McKay spoke of all the virtues arising from the word of God and pictured what might have happened if Jesus had not spoken many of the words He spoke. "We are here in this Church to-day," he said, "because of the immortal words that Jesus spoke." The words of Jesus hold in life, they hold in death. What place do we give to the word of Jesus in our lives? Do we allow it to be our guide and inspiration every day?

The evening text was I Cor. 13:11 and the subject: "We refuse to grow up." God wants to find exemplified in every one of us child-like virtues but, we must grow up. If not there are many serious dangers that face us, among them being an infantile passion to have our own way, a willingness to accept the second best, superficial thinking and adherence to a blind traditionalism. The sin of refusing to grow up carries its own punishment which is inevitable. We should aim to attain to the fullness of the stature of Christ.

A solo at each service, sung very expressively by Miss Carr, a daughter of the organist, was very much appreciated. Miss Carr is the leading soloist at St. Matthew's Anglican Church, Ottawa.

ABOUT THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS AND TIMES

A great deal has been said and published during the past couple of years on "Those Good Old Days," when the farmer made the best of conditions by making a slave of himself, growing his vegetables and grain, raising his pigs and cows, etc., and the good wife and little daughter spinning the wool to make their own clothes and bed quilts, and saving the rags from worn out garments to make mats for the floor. And there are many who would have us return to similar conditions in order to overcome the trade depression and keep the wolf of want from our door.

Of course those who so strongly advocate a return to those good old days are not personally suffering very much from present-day conditions. They have comfortable homes, good meals, and at least enough to enjoy a little extra in the way of pleasure and entertainment.

But the poor down-and-outer, the struggling farmer, should resort to primitive conditions and like the martyrs of old, quietly submit to their hardships and make the best of them.

And the young people, too, are they not living at too fast a rate? Do they not go out and enjoy themselves, instead of, like the great men of old, sitting in the attic of their cold home, and by the light of the candles seek the information and knowledge, the wisdom and heroic spirit that will make them men of power and great influence in the land?

We hear much of such talk these days, and we often wonder if those who indulge in it ever stop to think of how completely "out of date" they are.

How many of us would like to see our mothers, our sisters, or our brothers, return to domestic, as well as economic, conditions as they were sixty or seventy years ago? Some of us have a vivid recollection of what those conditions were, but how many of us would care to return to them, or have our children and grandchildren endure the hardships, the privations, the sufferings that we went through? Some will say: "It was good for us, and see how hardy and strong, how self-reliant and independent we are, compared with the youth of to-day." What conceit, what hypocrisy! The youth of to-day have more learning at fifteen than Sir John A. MacDonald or Ab. Lincoln had at thirty. It is because, years after years, decade after decade, our educational, our domestic, and social conditions have been improving, and our children are to-day reaping the benefits of the vision and the progressive spirit of our parents and grandparents.

There are too many people who are alive to the past but dead to the future. They want present day conditions of half a century ago, instead of a quarter of a century ahead of us. Not one of them would endure for a day what their parents had to endure, but they seem to begrudge to the youth of to-day the privileges they enjoyed themselves.

Particularly are conditions on the farm made irksome by the stubborn obstinacy of parents who are continually telling of how things were done and accomplished "when they were boys and girls."

Kick yourself out of the past, and try and get a vision of the future. You may delay and hinder, but you cannot stay progress. The youth of to-day will be the men and women of to-morrow, and what we give them in youth they will carry with them as they grow into manhood and womenhood. And let us be careful what we give them.

No youth has to sit in the cold attic and learn by candle light to-day. No child suffering from disease or deformity need go through life without receiving proper medical and surgical attention.

Thanks to the vision of the young people of thirty and forty years ago for their present day privileges. Let us see to it that the coming generation will be even more thankful. Take off your blue glasses and get a clearer vision of the future. It will do you and others good.

YES, THERE ARE FRAUDS

That there are frauds, schemers, and downright dishonest applicants in the Relief, Old Age Pensions and every other scheme whereby honest and praiseworthy efforts are being made to help those in want, is beyond doubt. During the past winter the Relief System has been most shamefully abused, and we have evidence that there are thousands on the Old Age Pension list who should not be there because their children are well able, by a little sacrifice, to help them all that is necessary. In obtaining relief, in many places, applicants have become so bold and brazen that they demand instead of ask for the goods they require. Investigations have revealed that many regular and persistent applicants for relief had independent incomes, and some bank accounts. In other cases parties have conspired together to get relief from different sources, and divide what they get. It is a hard thing to turn down an applicant for relief, but it is a public duty to see that all applicants are deserving. The public are being bled to an unmerciful extent in many ways, and we know of cases where families are living, almost from hand to mouth, day after day, but are too proud and independent to ask relief, yet are compelled, through our tax system, to contribute to the keep of those less worthy. We are to-day helpless in many ways because "the law" says so-and-so. It has been recently shown where a young man at Newmarket, who had steady employment at good wages, and who was able to sport about all the summer months, drive a car, smoke cigarettes and attend dances, when he was stricken with illness in the fall, entered an hospital as an indigent, and the municipality had to pay the cost. Winchester can cite a similar case, and yet is helpless in the matter. The young man had steady employment all summer at good wages. This winter he had to go to the hospital, and the municipality was billed for the cost of his keep.

The Government now proposes free medical service to all in need, and if they cannot pay, the municipality will have to pay the bill. That the new system will be abused we have no doubt, and the patient tax-payers will have to foot the bill whether they want to or not. If the paternalism on the part of our government goes much farther, the best thing the tax payer can do is to sell his property and put his money in Government bonds, or hide his wad somewhere where it will be safe.

AUTO ACCIDENTS BECOMING TOO NUMEROUS

The toll of death and physical disability throughout Canada through automobile accidents has become so appalling that it has been brought before the Federal Parliament through a resolution introduced by "Tommy" Church, of Toronto, and a whole day was spent in discussing the matters from various view points. One thing was apparent to all, however, and that is that liquor is the cause of many fatal accidents. Reckless driving, cutting in, narrow roads, not obeying road signals, and many other causes of accidents were fully discussed. All seemed agreed that no mercy should be shown the man who tries to drive a car after having taken a glass of liquor, even beer. Another point emphasized was that driving permits were issued without proper discrimination. While it seems that such regulations are within the province, it was felt that the Federal authorities had the right and power to so alter the Criminal Code that offenders who drive cars when under the influence of liquor, or recklessly, could be more severely dealt with. Another point brought out was that too many magistrates are inclined to deal too leniently with offenders. When in a city like Ottawa the death toll from automobile accidents totals several each week of the year. It is time for our lawmakers to take some action.

LEGISLATURE OPENS

The Ontario Legislature opened at Queen's Park yesterday, and if there was no "rattling of tea cups," there was, undoubtedly, considerable wagging of tongues. What a pity it is that the wives of all the members of the Legislature were denied the usual social function. After all, what a silly departure from the usual social activities of parliamentary life that really cost the people nothing. Next thing we know the annual church teas will be done away with.

ABOUT OBITUARIES

We read last week the obituary of a man we had known for more than forty years. It told of some of his good qualities, his civic activities, and long and honourable citizenship. It was a very nice obituary, but it did not tell half of what we know of the man's life—good, and in some respects perhaps not so good as a citizen. But he is gone, and has left a good name, and a good record. How pleasant it would have been had he known in just what high esteem he was held, especially in his declining years, for he lived nearly five score years before his passing. And how he would have appreciated it had the citizens of the town in which he lived, shown in some way just how highly they regarded him. Flowers on the casket, fine obituary notices and eloquent funeral sermons may bring some sort of comfort to the bereaved, but we doubt it. How much more would they have appreciated those kindly gifts and expressions when their beloved one was with them to enjoy the flowers and the kindly words. We always speak well of the dead. How much better if we would speak more kindly of the living.

In some places the work of a faithful public servant is recognized before he has passed away, and we notice by one of our exchanges where an ex-mayor was made the principal of a community banquet, at which his "obituary" was told by those who had gathered to do him honor. That the "old man" fully appreciated and enjoyed the occasion is fully related. In a few years he too will have passed and another obituary will be written, but what a pleasure it must be to that man and his relatives, to know that during the few years left him, his labour was not in vain, and that notwithstanding the many trials and unpleasantness of public life, his efforts to advance the interests of his community were appreciated.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In Turkey they have elected seventeen lady members of Parliament. In Canada we have one, and in Quebec they won't even allow the women to vote. And yet Canada would send missionaries to Turkey.

In Canada there are about twice as many school children as there are farmers, and as many as there are men in all other occupations combined. Each year one-fourth of Canada's population appears in schoolrooms either as pupils or teachers.

Want your home town to go ahead? Then take hold and do a little pulling yourself. Want your home town business to keep your home people well employed? Then give that business your full support by buying your supplies at home. Want your business to grow? Then better demonstrate to the public, through advertising, that its good service deserves such growth.

Up at Barrie, Ont., they are using the unemployed on relief to beautify the ugly spots about the town, building rock gardens, planting shrubs and trees, and making other improvements. No better way could be used to give employment to those who require it, and are dependent to a certain extent, on relief. Much work of a similar nature could be done in Winchester.

A newspaper comments on the fact that Orangeville's tax rate has been reduced by two mills in five years, and wants to know how it is accomplished. In Winchester the tax rate was reduced seven mills in six years, and no interest in the municipality suffered thereby. Orangeville is not the only place in Ontario where municipal government has been economically looked after.

"Reckless disregard of the rights and lives of others must be punished with imprisonment, even though the person sentenced is by no means a criminal in the ordinary sense," declared Mr. Justice Henderson in a Toronto court on Friday, when pronouncing sentence in two outstanding cases in which juries had acquitted on manslaughter but convicted on criminal negligence charges.

The new Minister of Agriculture in Ontario is pledged to put a stop to horse racing at the annual agricultural fairs, if the fairs expect to receive the usual annual grant. He might as well put his foot down and put a stop to all agricultural fairs. So long as there are horses there will be horse racing. Perhaps the prizes offered are sometimes too large, but if you want a good race you will have to pay the price.

The Smiths Falls Record-News says:—"The newspaper function of carrying advertising has become as important to the people as its other function of printing the news, for, in fact, advertising IS news, store news, news of importance to those with money to spend. There never was a time in the history of Canada when the reading of the advertisements was as important as it is today, for in many homes a few dollars have to go a long ways. The advertisements help stretch the budget.

An exchange very truly remarks: "If the Ontario Government should act on its suggestion that it take over all county roads just what would be left for the county councils to do? At present their bill of fare for almost every meeting is roads and bridges. The provincial highways will be taken entirely out of the county arena when the government assumes the whole burden for these transportation arteries. Education leaves the county nothing but the examination of some bills and their disposition. In fact, should county roads get out of the hands of the county councils there would be nothing left for the counties to undertake."

There is some reason in this, taken from the Collingwood Enterprise-Bulletin: "In expressing approval of the proposal of Essex county council that it is desirable to abolish the ten per cent. penalty added to tax arrears after May 1st and replace it with a sliding scale arrangement, the percentage mounting up as long as the taxes are unpaid. The Sudbury Star says that to charge a delinquent 10 per cent. whether he pays up one month or ten months later, seems hardly fair. "It is necessary, of course, to have a penalty," it adds, "because if it were not imposed an even larger number of persons would let their bills run into arrears. Every effort should be made, however, to arrang penalties in such a way as to bring taxes in as rapidly as possible, and also to offer encouragement for rapid payment."

"The Country more interested in Reform than in its effect on Parties," is the heading of a very timely and sensible editorial in the Orillia Packet-Times. It is a pity that at the present time political personalities could not be eliminated from the picture of our national life, and the members of the House of Commons view each other, not as two or three belligerent bodies, ready to denounce and condemn any policy of reform or re-construction that is advanced by the other. If Bennett, King and Woodsworth could be forgotten; if Conservative, Liberal and C. C. F. could be blotted from view, and the House of Commons act as though they were really desiring to advance the interests of the country rather than that of the party they represent, what good might result. As the Packet-Times says: "What the public is concerned about is not the party game, but the removal of abuses in the financial system. And there will be pretty general agreement that there should first be an effort at reform, rather than that the country should enter upon revolutionary experiments."

"I DO NOT LIKE"

I do not like to hear him pray
On bended knee about an hour
For grace to spend aright the day
Who knows his neighbor has no flour

I do not like to hear her pray,
With jewelled ear and silken dress,
Whose wash-woman toils all day,
And then is asked to work for less.

ANOTHER INTERESTING LETTER

Interesting letters are still being received by residents of this district from that section of the West to which carloads of vegetables and clothing were sent last fall. The following was received by Mr. A. H. Hawkins a few days ago and contains a graphic picture of conditions in certain parts of Saskatchewan.

Antler, Sask.,
Feb. 4th, 1935.

Dear Mr. Hawkins:—

I found your card this morning while getting potatoes for dinner. No one who has never faced winter with an empty cellar knows how greatly those potatoes and vegetables were appreciated by we people of this dried-out, hopper-infested area. Our own gardens were almost complete failures. We tried watering ours and spread poison for the hoppers and then one evening the hail wiped it all out. I had a tiny plot of lettuce under a screen and that's the only green vegetables we had all summer. The hoppers couldn't get at it.

This is the first year we have had relief or anything from the cars that have been shipped in. With no crops and with practically no wages it is pretty difficult to make a living. Another year I hope will find us in a better locality. We have only one child but even for three expenses are high enough.

I wish you could see this country. You people with the nice little farms would think this is a desert. And in some spots it almost is. Some places here the snow plows were sent through every day to keep the tracks clear of sand. Crops and even fences were buried, and as for our homes, it just meant house-cleaning every day.

This has been a good district, however. This is the first year there has been no feed for stock and the good farmers have done well and even the poor ones have made a good living. For the past four years crops have been smaller and with lower prices we all began to feel the pinch of hard times. And when the farmers suffered, we others suffered as well. A great many have moved out and others plan to leave in the spring. There are some who still own their farms and naturally they are loath to leave them. Some, too, are so old they could never start over again in a new country. There is relief, of course, for which we are truly thankful. Without it most of us would starve. We had only a few potatoes from the year before, when we got it. A friend is in town to-day for his first relief. They have two little tots, one a baby too young to eat. They have no milk and due to improper food, the mother is unable to feed the child any longer herself. There are some, of course, who would abuse the relief but for those who actualy need it, it is a great help.

I hope you will extend the thanks of our community to those neighbours of yours who helped fill the car that came to Fertile. I got a sealer of pickles and believe they were made of some kind of melon. It was a sweet pickle with whole cloves. If you chance to be married, perhaps if your wife knows the recipe she would send it to me. Another year I hope to be where we can have a garden of our own.

Thanking you and your friends again for your kindness and charity, I remain,

Yours truly,
Mrs. C. O. Dean.

DANIEL McDOWELL

There passed away quite suddenly at his home near Metcalfe, a life-long resident of the community in the person of Daniel McDowell, in his 75th year.

The funeral was held from his late residence on Wednesday afternoon and was attended by a large gathering of friends and neighbours. Rev. Dr. G. C. Gaukrodger of the United Church, had charge of the services. Interment was in the Union Cemetery at Metcalfe. Left to mourn his passing are his widow, two sons, Alfred and Joseph at home, also two brothers, James and Matthew, of Metcalfe.

He pointed out the four judgments in which each person is held: 1st, by friends; 2nd, by public; 3rd, by self; 4th, by God. Our own judgment ought to be more correct than outside opinion because we know our motives. There is a possibility that one's religious experience is so sacred that it is not easy to speak glibly of it. Be slow to condemn those who have failed. Others may err or we may be mistaken, but God's judgment is absolutely correct. Self applause may be due to self deception. Self conceit may make us blind. We may have remorse which well pleases God. Which of these four judgments most concerns us?

Those who entered has pulled out all the drawers and left them on the floors; one bed at least had been stripped of its covering and even the drawers of the sewing machine had been investigated.

The house is owned by Mrs. Martha Gilroy, who, with her daughter, had been living in South Mountain since a short time before Christmas with her son. On Saturday afternoon Miss Gilroy drove to Kemptville and on going into the home found the place in disorder.

The May Day Mystery

By
Octavus Roy Cohen

Then, when he had entered the house, they looked at one another bewilderedly. The affair was too puzzling for mere conversation. Occasionally one would shake his head, but speech was not necessary. Each knew that the other was thinking in circles.

"I'll say this much," commented Gleason after a five-minute silence: "Pat Thayer has sure gotten popular with a mixed crowd."

"Yeh . . ." agreed Rube. "Or unpopular!"

For five minutes more nothing happened. Then, at ten minutes past two o'clock, Larry Welch appeared in the doorway.

He crossed the veranda with quick steps and descended to the walk in a single jump. The two boys stared after him, then directed their gazes toward each other.

"Happy lad," commented Gleason. "He looked almost scared."

"Ain't it the truth? You reckon—"

"I don't reckon anything. All I know is I'd hate to have Larry Welch get as sore at me as he seems to be at somebody right now. I never knew that bird could get real angry."

At fifteen minutes after two o'clock . . . almost before the mellow chimes of the quarter hour had died out from the tower of Old Main . . . something happened: something eerily terrible, something which jarred the two students to their feet and caused cold sweat to break out on their foreheads.

From upstairs in the fraternity house there came a wild shriek; an inhuman howl. There was an instant's pause and then the howl was repeated and there was a sound of feet running heavily down the stairway, and on the summer air certain words came to the startled ears of the two boys.

"Oh! G—d . . . oh, my G—d! . . ."

A human figure catapulted onto the veranda; a disheveled, wild-eyed figure which was making passionate gestures and struggling futilely to say something.

They recognized him instantly: Mike Carmicino, janitor of the fraternity house. He grabbed Farnum's arm. He tried to talk, but no words came; only the gibberish of terror.

Farnum grabbed Carmicino by the shoulder and glared at him.

"What's the matter?" he asked hoarsely. "Wh-what's all the yelling about?"

Carmicino gestured wildly toward the interior of the house.

"Meester Thayer!" he croaked—"Meester Thayer!"

"What about him?"

Carmicino covered his eyes with his hands.

"He is dead!" he groaned. "Somebody have murdered Meester Thayer!"

Over the bowed head of the babbling, crouching, shaken, sobbing

"Somebody Have Murdered Meester Thayer!"

janitor, the two fraternity brothers faced each other. Their eyes were distended with horror as they struggled to comprehend the message which Mike Carmicino brought to them. They led the janitor to a chair, where he bent forward, his squat, muscular body racked with dry sobs. The boys were badly shaken, but at least they tried to think clearly, and Farnum's voice, when he questioned the janitor, was almost steady.

"You say Mr. Thayer is dead?"

Carmicino shuddered.

"Si-si, signore. He is quite completely murdered. He is on the floor of hees room. There is much blood. He does not breathe. Hees heart it does not beat. I am quite sure he is dead."

"Good Lord. . . . How did you find him?"

"I see the door of Meester Thayer's room is not entirely shut. I look in and I see one foot and one leg on the floor. I theenk that is very funny that Meester Thayer should lie on the floor and not move. Perhaps he is drunk. So I think I will put him on the bed and shut the door so nobody will know he is drunk. I go in the room and then I see the blood and and—"

"And what?"

"I stand there for a minute. Two minutes. I do not understand that Meester Thayer what is so kind to me have come to a sad ending. Then I see he is dead and something grab me right here—" He touched his throat with a dramatic gesture. "I cannot breathe. I cannot move. I am scared."

"You—you mean someone really grabbed you?"

"No!" Mike's eyes rolled with terror at the very thought. "I mean I feel as bad like somebody does that. I am scared. I am frighten. And I run downstairs."

Gleason looked up. "We'd better phone the police, Rube. If we don't call the cops we'll get ourselves mixed up in this. And I guess we'd better 'phone the dean, too."

Gleason walked unsteadily into the fraternity house and called the Marland police station. Then he telephoned to the dean and returned to the porch.

It was a ghastly thing—made even more grisly by the perfect day; the sensuous, flower-scented breezes of first summer; the carefree, strolling groups of students; laughter and jollity and careless youth. And upstairs the body of a young man lying dead. Murdered. It wasn't believable. The two young men were appalled by their own knowledge of surrounding circumstances. There was so much they knew which might prove damning.

A small car jerked to a halt in front of the fraternity house and two men alighted. One of them was tall and broad and wore the uniform of the Marland police force. The other, wearing civilian clothes, was short and squat.

Students strolling on the Row or lounging on the verandas of fraternity houses, stared with sudden interest at Psi Tau Theta. There was a general movement in the direction of the house. A young man from Lambda Beta Pi addressed the uniformed policeman who stood on the lawn of Psi Tau Theta.

"What's wrong, officer?"

The cop answered tersely.

"Murder!"

"Good G—d. . . . You don't mean. . . ."

"I don't mean nothin', young feller. Somebody's been murdered in yonder and nobody's to go in or git out. That's all."

The startled young man told his companion. The news sped from lip to lip. Who was it? No, not Rube Farnum: he had been seen on the porch. Then somebody mentioned Pat Thayer. Many persons mentioned Pat Thayer. No one knew where the rumor started, but Thayer's name was on every lip. The policeman on the lawn allowed nobody to approach within hearing distance of the group on the veranda: the militant, positive figure of John Reagan, chief of the Marland plainclothes force; Mike Carmicino, the janitor, petrified with fear and trembling violently; Rube Farnum, tall and limp and frightened; Phil Gleason, reduced from his customary alertness to a shriveled miniature of his usual positive self.

Reagan was questioning Farnum. Rube was struggling to be fair and honest: to remember things and yet to avoid injustice to anyone. He was absolutely and abysmally miserable.

Then there emerged from the Main building a tall and dignified man before whom a path opened in the throng of students. Whitman Boyd, dean of Marland, turned in before the tragic fraternity house and was promptly stopped by the policeman on duty.

"No further for you," snapped the officer.

Dean Boyd spoke quietly.

"Are you in charge, Officer?"

"No. That'll be John Reagan yonder." And he gestured toward the veranda.

"Will you ask him if I may speak to him? I'm dean of the college and I'd like to find out what has happened."

The policeman called out to Reagan. "This guy is the big boss, Chief. Can he come up?"

Reagan's keen eyes surveyed the dean. He jerked his head affirmatively.

"Let him through."

The dean mounted the veranda steps, his arrival sending a glow of thanksgiving through the breasts of Rube Farnum and Phil Gleason. He spoke directly to Reagan.

"My name is Whitman Boyd," he said quietly. "I understand that someone has been killed."

"Murdered. Young feller named Thayer."

"Good G—d! Then it's true—I heard the students gossiping."

"You've heard nothing else?"

"No. That's why I came. To find out."

"Well—he's dead all right enough. Stabbed in the throat. 'Taint pleasant up in that room."

The dean shook his head.

"What do you wish done, Mr Reagan?"

"Just exactly nothing," said the detective crisply. "Right now I'm gonna 'phone headquarters for a couple more harness bulls to police the grounds. Nobody's to come in here and no one's to leave. These three fellers ain't to move from where they are."

"You mean," gasped Gleason, "that we're under arrest?"

John Reagan grinned broadly. "Not yet you ain't, young feller. But don't get impatient."

CHAPTER V

The town of Marland spread fanwise from the foot of the hill on which stand the buildings of the university. Oak street, some three miles from the University, is the chief shopping center of Marland. Archer street carries the traffic load. It runs east and west. At the four corners which mark the intersection of Oak and Archer there are two gas filling stations and two drug stores. The latter, however, open on Oak street, and next to one of them one door from the corner facing Archer street and west of Oak, is the snug little gray stone home of the Marland National bank.

The Marland National bears an enviable reputation. It is small but staunch, and on its roster of directors one will find names which carry great weight even in the city of a quarter million which exists twenty miles away. It is spoken of boastfully by natives of Marland, and Randolph Fiske, its president, is a real power in the community.

This morning—the morning of May third—Randolph Fiske sat at his desk in the office which was marked "President—Private." He was a tall, well-proportioned man, fifty-eight years of age, whose hair matched the gray of his bank building. He had a fine, broad forehead and iron gray brows from beneath which a pair of keen eyes peered in a manner which gave an impression of unimpeachable efficiency.

He was gazing attentively at a tiny bit of pasteboard. There was printing on its surface—printing, not embossing. It said simply:

James H. Hanvey
Bankers' Protective Ass'n.

Mr Fiske's eye roved to a yellow telegram which had arrived two days previously from New York. It was from headquarters of the Bankers' Protective association and was very explicit.

"Our best operative arrives Marland morning May Third."

Mr. Fiske heaved a sigh of relief as he prepared to shift a very great burden to the shoulders of another man—one professionally equipped to bear such burdens. He looked up at Miss Seward.

"Show Mr. Hanvey in, please."

Miss Seward put out a bony hand which trembled in protest.

"Surely, Mr. Fiske—not that man! The—the terrible person who gave me that card."

Fiske frowned.

"I don't understand, Miss Seward. This man is a great detective."

"There's a mistake, Mr. Fiske. This person couldn't detect anything. I'm very sure of that. Just wait until you see him."

She vanished in triumph, and Randolph Fiske stared after her. "What in the world. ?" Then he smiled. At least she had prepared him for a somewhat uncouth person. Probably a squat gentleman with a brown derby, square-toed shoes, a checkered vest and a dime's worth of chewing tobacco. Queer how these detective chaps always dressed so that there was no mistaking their profession. Randolph Fiske saw the door swing open. Then it closed and Mr. Fiske was rendered inarticulate.

Jim Hanvey was everything in the world which one is quite sure a detective should not be. His two hundred and sixty pounds of avoirdupois was distributed with heavily inartistic effect; it wabbled when he moved . . . and he seemed to move with vast reluctance.

But it was the head which rose above triple chins that filled Randolph Fiske with awe. The face was huge and round and utterly expressionless. Randolph Fiske was quite sure that never before in his life had he seen a human countenance so utterly devoid of intelligence. It was—yes, by George!—it was the eyes! Round little eyes which were as vacant and colorless as the orbs of a fish.

The mass of flesh stood in the doorway. Fiske knew he was breathing; he could tell that by the fact that a rather remarkable contraption which appeared in the neighborhood of Jim Hanvey's prodigious tummy kept moving rhythmically. Randolph Fiske kept his eyes fascinatedly on that particular apparatus. It hung from a hawserlike watch chain and was similar to nothing which the banker had ever before set eyes upon. It was long and slim and seemed to be made of gold.

Then, without warning, the silence was punctured by a sleepy, drawly voice.

"It's a toothpick, Mr. Fiske."

"Huh?" The banker jerked himself together. "Wh-what's a toothpick?"

"This," Hanvey touched the trinket affectionately and detached it from his chain. "Swellest piece of joolry I've got. A crook friend gave it to me. It's solid gold—eighteen karat. Great invention; feller don't always have to be running around hunting toothpicks when he's got one of these. Look!" He touched a spring and a wicked little blade leaped out at Randolph Fiske. That gentleman gave a perceptible jump.

"It—it's very—very remarkable," he murmured.

Hanvey reattached the toothpick to the chain. The banker was staring and wondering . . . and then the opaque eyes of Jim Hanvey were raised slowly until they met the gaze of the banker. Hanvey spoke.

"I am kind of funny-looking, ain't I, Mr Fiske?"

Mr Randolph Fiske was completely stripped of the poise upon which he prided himself. He did not answer, but picked up the slightly soiled card which lay on his desk.

"You are James H. Hanvey?"

"I'h-huh. In person. Largely, I might say."

"You're the man the B. P. A. sent down here to investigate the robbery?"

"Yes."

Mr. Fiske was getting himself under control. He sought refuge in frankness.

"I imagine my actions have been exceedingly discourteous, Mr. Hanvey. I apologize and only wish to explain that you somewhat startled me. You see, you are not—well, not exactly the sort of detective about which I've read."

"I wish I was," breathed Hanvey ecstatically. "Gosh! I love mystery stories. Them fellers sure are slick. I never could figure out how they do their tricks."

"I Am Kind of Funny-Looking, Ain't I, Mr. Fiske?"

Another shock for the banker. He blinked.

"And you don't work like the detectives in books?"

"Golly, no. I ain't slick, Mr. Fiske. I don't hardly know any dicks who are. Lemme tell you something." Hanvey leaned confidentially across the desk and his sleepy eyes held the attention of the banker. "My kind of work ain't so hard. And why? Suppose I go on a case. I start off wrong. All right, nobody's the wiser, and when I find out I'm on the wrong track—I start again. Same thing always. A detective can make all the mistakes in the world, Mr. Fiske—but if he happens to do one thing right—he lands the man he's after: see?"

"Yes—I see."

"But the crook, gosh! the poor feller hasn't got a chance. If he slips just one time, he's caught. He has to do everything right. The detective only has to do one thing right. And there you are."

Fiske had been studying his visitor. He was amazed now to find himself warming to the ungainly person. There was an almost childish simplicity about Hanvey which gave Fiske confidence—although he told himself that the man was a caricature.

"The B. P. A. wired me," he said slowly, "that you are their best operative."

"Hooey!" grinned Hanvey. "I've just been lucky—that's all. You see, it's this way: Most all the crooks are my friends, and they don't lie to me—so that makes things pretty easy."

The banker gasped. "Crooks are your friends? I—I never heard of such a thing."

"I guess not. But can't you see how much easier it makes things?"

"You say they don't lie to you?"

"Well, the high class crooks don't. Only the bums."

"Good Lord!" Fiske leaned back in his chair and regarded Hanvey with wide-eyed wonder. "You are quite the most remarkable man I've ever met."

"And the fattest?"

For the first time, Fiske smiled.

"And the fattest."

Hanvey's eyes twinkled for a moment. He fumbled in the breast pocket of his coat and produced two thin and vicious-looking projectiles. He extended these toward his companion.

"Have a cigar?"

Fiske thanked him and accepted one. Hanvey bit the end from the other, held a match to it and inhaled with vast relish. He blew a cloud of smoke across the room and Fiske turned startled eyes in his direction.

"They are kind of strong," said the detective genially. "Some folks like 'em."

Fiske struggled heroically against the asphyxiating effect of the violent fumes. Then they got the better of him.

"May I open another window?" he inquired weakly.

"Sure. That'll be fine." Hanvey eyed the second cigar which lay unlighted on the desk. "Ain't you going to smoke yours?"

"I'll try one of my own, if you don't mind."

As the banker moved toward the window, Jim sighed relievedly. He rescued the unused cigar and tucked it back in his breast pocket with real affection. Jim's cigars were a source of perpetual worry: he was always afraid that some day some one would smoke one of them.

Fiske seated himself again. "You'd like to hear about the robbery?" he asked.

"Yeh—if you want."

"Isn't that what you came for?"

"Reckon so."

"Then why don't you ask me some questions?"

"Gosh! Mr Fiske—how do I know what to ask? I'm waiting for you to tell me, and you're waiting until you're sure I didn't escape from some zoo."

Randolph Fiske threw back his head and laughed. "You win, Hanvey. Now—shoot!"

Jim's face did not change.

"When?"

"Day before yesterday—May first—at ten minutes after two o'clock."

"How much?"

"The robber got away with approximately one hundred thousand dollars in currency."

Hanvey blinked. "Lot of cash for a little bank like this."

"Plenty. We were making up the pay roll for the Marland mills. They pay on the third."

"Stick up?" queried the detective.

"Yes."

"Tell me all about it."

Fiske rose and invited Hanvey to follow him. They passed from his private office into the bank proper. Under the amazed eyes of Miss Helen Seward, Fiske conducted Hanvey to the front door and gestured to the broad thoroughfare passing east and west.

"That is Archer street," said Fiske. "The north and south street is Oak. Oak is a shopping street but Archer is the main traffic artery. Lots of cars going by here all the time. You will notice that this bank is the only commercial establishment on Archer street. Do you follow me?"

"Easy," grunted Jim. "You sure do talk explicit."

Fiske stepped back into the bank. "Our banking business starts at nine in the morning and stops at two. At two o'clock daily—and on Saturday at twelve—we get rid of our last customer. Then we conceal the interior of the bank by pulling the shades so."

He stepped behind the open door and pulled a shade which rose up from the bottom of the door. The heavy green shade rose along the glass surface until it was higher than a man's head.

"There are similar curtains on both windows," he went on. As soon as we get the last customer out, we pull the curtains up, and then all of the employees except two or three go out for a bite of lunch. They invariably go out the back door. That door, which is behind my office, opens onto a little alley through which you can pass into Oak street. Day before yesterday the bank was free of customers at two o'clock. We drew the curtains and shut the front doors."

"Were they locked?"

"No. They never are. We have safety vaults in the basement and they are open until five o'clock. There has to be some way for clients to get into the building. We merely shut the doors and draw the curtains to keep our banking clients out.'

Back in Fiske's office, the banker resumed his story.

'May first was a perfect day," said Fiske. 'Warm and sunshiny and almost like summer. As I said, we shut the door and drew the curtains at two o'clock sharp, so that the interior of the bank was effectually concealed from anyone on the street. At the same time everybody went out to lunch except Miss Seward and myself. Miss Seward is my secretary. She was the one who brought you in here."

"Oh," said Hanvey. And then—"Nice young lady!"

There was no hint of humor in his heavy face, but Fiske chuckled delightedly.

"Efficient—and sour," he explained. "But mighty loyal."

"I knew she must be something."

"She was behind her desk and I had just gone out to speak with her. About ten minutes after two o'clock the front door opened. I didn't think anything of it—a box holder, most likely. The man—"

"Remember what he looked like?"

"Only vaguely. He was slim and quietly dressed. He didn't look like a crook."

"Crooks never do."

"He walked straight up to the cage where I was talking to Miss Seward. First thing I knew about anything being wrong was when Miss Seward uttered a little shriek. I turned around and saw the man was pointing a gun at us.

"The robber was polite, but very positive. He told us to back into the vault which we have on this floor. Then he saw me looking toward the electric buttons which we have all over the place—they are police signals—and he warned me that if I made a move to touch one, he'd kill me. I believed him."

"Wise man," murmured Jim.

"He herded us into the safe and followed us. I noticed then for the first time that he carried a little black satchel. He stuffed it with all the currency we had in the safe—about one hundred thousand dollars—and then started back into the bank. Of course, I knew he intended locking Miss Seward and myself in.

"This happened quickly—but it didn't seem quick to us. Miss Seward was crying, but he had warned her not to scream and she didn't. The robber moved into the main part of the bank. And then—"

He paused and Hanvey prompted. "Then—what?"

"Harmon Burke came back from lunch. He's the cashier and teller. He came in the back way."

"What happened when he came in?"

"Plenty,'' said Fiske grimly. 'First thing I knew of Burke's return was when he and the robber started shooting at each other."

Hanvey made a chuckling sound with his lips.

"This Burke must be a real fightin' piece of furniture."

"He is. Though I never suspected it before."

"Is he here?"

"Yes. They had him at the hospital until yesterday evening. He was hit in the fleshy part of the leg. He came back this morning."

Fiske touched the buzzer on his desk and Miss Seward answered the summons.

"Ask Mr. Burke if he'd mind stepping in here."

A few seconds later the door opened and a figure entered. Harmon Burke, having seen Hanvey enter the bank, exhibited no surprise at the grotesque appearance of the Gargantuan detective.

But Hanvey blinked several times. So this was the man who leaped into battle with a bank robber! He inspected the cashier with keen interest.

Harmon Burke was a little bit of a man, scarcely more than five feet in height and of a weight which could not have been greater than a hundred pounds. He had roving gray eyes which seemed rather bright; wrists of amazing thinness and hands which seemed too large for his body.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By JOHN HIX

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Strange as it seems, the airmail stamp used by the Greek government has on it a picture representing one of the most famous of all aviation accidents—the flight of the fabled Icarus, son of Daedalus, who flew too close to the sun on wings joined with wax, so close that the wax melted, letting Icarus fall into the sea.

According to Greek mythology, Icarus was put in prison with his father when the latter offended the king. As a means of escape, Daedalus made two sets of wings, one for his son and one for himself. These they fastened on their body and flew from prison. Icarus flew so high that his wings melted, but Daedalus landed safely in Sicily where he continued his work as an architect.

Willam H. Lucas is now in his fifty-fourth consecutive year as city clerk of Cadiz, Ohio—and he has become so permanent a fixture in the city government that for the past twenty-five years no candidate has opposed his election to that office. Mr. Lucas was born 84 years ago, a free man in the then slave state of Virginia. His parents brought him to Ohio for an education.

In addition to holding public office, he is also a minister and an able educator. He has been pensioned by the Carnegie Foundation for his service in the state schools.

MODEL CALIFORNIA JAIL HAS A GARDEN FOR ITS INMATES

This layout shows two views of the new San Mateo County Jail, a $700,000 edifice, which is located about 14 miles from San Francisco. Rated one of the most modern institutions of its kind, the building has three distinct sections—one for men, one for women, and a third for propagating small vegetables, the latter to be raised by the prisoners. There are no cells in the women's section, each prisoner having a room without bars, and there is no mess hall in the men's building, each man being served with a tray in his cell.

THE BOOK

. . . . . the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Four Great Treasures . . . . . .

by BRUCE BARTON

DAVID

AS LONG as the nature of boys remains what it always has been David will have a fresh army of admirers with each new generation, for he is the original of all Jack-the-giant-killer stories and has been the hero of boyhood for three thousand years.

Bruce Barton

With the exception of St. Paul no human character occupies so large a place in the Bible; of none are we given so vivid and compelling a picture. The most minute traits and characteristics are set forth in such a way as to make certain that the portrait was drawn from life. What a portrait and what a life! A red-headed shepherd boy, tending his flocks and playing his tunes in the lonesome fields, he is sent up to the army at the critical moment when its forces are paralyzed by the menace of the giant Goliath. What the swords of the stoutest warriors have been powerless to accomplish, he achieves by a well directed shot from his shepherd's sling and becomes immediately a national idol. Triumphantly he is carried to the court while the bands play and the pretty girls sing and dance.

And the women answered one another as they played, and said, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands.

Small wonder that Michal, the king's daughter, loved him and became his wife; small wonder that Jonathan, the king's son, formed a friendship with him which is one of the most beautiful in all history. Small wonder either that the king himself was jealous and resentful.

And Saul was very wroth, and the saying displeased him; and he said, They have ascribed unto David ten thousands, and to me they have ascribed but thousands: and what can he have more but the kingdom?

And Saul eyed David from that day and forward.

The jealous eyes of Saul, who was in a place too big for him and finally went mad trying to fill it, drove David out of the court and into the wilderness where soldiers of fortune rallied to him from various motives, and built up a lusty young army which, to his credit, he kept well disciplined and free from the grosser crimes of guerrilla warfare. Neither the king's forces nor his plots could prevail against the young man's destiny.

In a previous chapter we have referred to his conquests, his qualities as an administrator, the sin which forms the one black spot upon his reputation, a sin, by the way, which was not so extraordinary in a king of that period and would perhaps have been forgotten but for the magnificent humility of his repentance, and the Psalms that are his eternal claim to remembrance.

RECOMPENSE

What you give to others
Comes back in double measure;
There is true possession,
When you share your treasures.

Money closely hoarded
Has no means of growing;
Share your life with others,
Reaping as you're sowing.

What you give to others—
Service, friendship, pleasure—
Will be true possession,
If you share your treasure.

—Grenville Kleiser.

KNEW WHAT SHE WANTED

Mrs. McGoolty, who lives over the back road, rushed into the milliner's at Blue Springs greatly excited.

"My new hat has been trimmed on the wrong side," she said, "and it has to be altered."

"The trimming is on the left side where it should be this season," replied the milliner.

"It makes no difference where it ought to be," continued Mrs. McGoolty, "I must have it on the church side."

"Church side?" asked the milliner.

"Yes, church side. I sit next to the left wall, and I'm not going to pay for a lot of trimmings that can't be seen. I want it on the other side where all my friends in the congregation can see it."

FORGETTING

Now you say, forget you....
Why would that be wise?
Should the blind forget the
Look of starry skies?

Must the lark, in winter,
Seek no meadow's green.
Cherish not one longing
For glad April's scene?

Does age count its treasures
By joys passed from mind,
Or do youth's bright memories,
Only, make life kind?

Now, you say, forget you....
Even if they could,
Would the deaf forget the
Larks above the wood?

We are faced with a dilemma: either the group to which we belong does something worthwhile or it does not. If it does not, we had better leave it, as an idle assembly of men or women is worse than useless. If it does, we owe it a debt, and that debt we can pay off, in the most economical way, by making ourselves valuable to the community.—Abbe Ernest Dimnet.

A LITTLE LIFE

"Every day is a little life," was an old thinker's wise epigram. If each day gets the better of us, how are we going to conquer in life as a whole? Only as we make each day a victorious battleground where selfishness and shirking and disobedience and discontent are overcome, can we make life a victory in the end. Lavater, the old philosopher, laid down the rule that "each day should be distinguished by at least one particular act of love." It is a rule which makes life happier for the doer, and for everybody else.—Anon.

NOT WORTH WHILE

The night of death will soon descend;
A few short years and then the end,
And perfect rest is ours;
Forgotten by the busy throng,
We'll sleep, while seasons roll along,
Beneath the grass and flowers.

Our sojourn in this world is brief,
So why go hunting care and grief,
Why have a troubled mind?
And what's the use of getting mad,
And making folks around us sad,
By saying words unkind?

Why not adjure the base and mean.
Why not be sunny and serene,
From spite and envy free?
Why not be happy while we may,
And make our little earthly stay,
A joyous jamboree?

We're here for such a little while;
And then we go and leave the pile
For which we strive and strain;
Worn out and broken by the grind,
We go, and leave our wads behind—
Such efforts all in vain.

We break our hearts and twist our souls,
Acquiring large and useless rolls
Of coins and kindred things,
And when we reach St. Peter's town,
They'll not buy a sheet-iron crown,
Or cast-off pair of wings.

THE HOME TOWN PAPER

When the evenin' meal is over an' the dishes put away,
An' a feller in his slippered feet loads up his Henry Clay.
There's nothin' does him so much good, be fortune up or down,
As the little country paper from his ol' home town.

It ain't a thing of beauty an' it's print ain't always clean.
But it straightens out his temper when a feller's feelin' mean;
It takes the wrinkles off his face an' brushes off the frown,
That little country paper from his ol' home town.

I read the daily papers and religious papers too,
An' sometimes ancient school books when I've nothin' else to do;
But when I want some real live news from all the country roun'
Give me the little paper from my ol' home town.

They say our good and bad deeds are recorded up on high,
So that God can classify us when it comes our time to die;
If that be true I know a chap who's goin' to wear a crown—
The man who runs the paper in my ol' home town.

All have a share in the beauty,
All have a part in the plan;
What does it matter what duty
Falls to the lot of man?
Some one has blended the plaster,
Some one has carried the stone;
Neither the man nor the master,
Ever has builded alone.
Building a house for the King;
Making a roof from the weather,
Men have accomplished a thing.
Only by working together

WHAT KIND ARE YOU?

Are you a stationary sort of person, or do you reach out for better things? The business man, the farmer, the worker, who just stands still in his tracks, satisfied with what he had yesterday, and trying merely to keep that has no reason to feel any great confidence in the future. The world moves too fast for him. The business concern in particular, must constantly reach out for new trade. Old customers move away, some of them pass away, and people's habits change and they go around from place to place to buy things. A concern needs to advertise, to hold its own in the changing world, and it must advertise more and more to make gains.

Advertising is the life of any business. The Press is your best medium

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Rev Charles E. Dunn

Peter Heals a Lame Man
Lesson for February 24th. Acts 3: 1-10.
Golden Text: Acts 3:6.

There is something very appealing about "the Beautiful Gate of the Temple" where the cripple of our lesson begged for alms. It is a symbol of the highly important fact that one of the surest paths to God is beauty. To be sure, there are other equally significant avenues to the divine life. There is, for example, the highway of truth. There is also that exacting course we call righteousness.

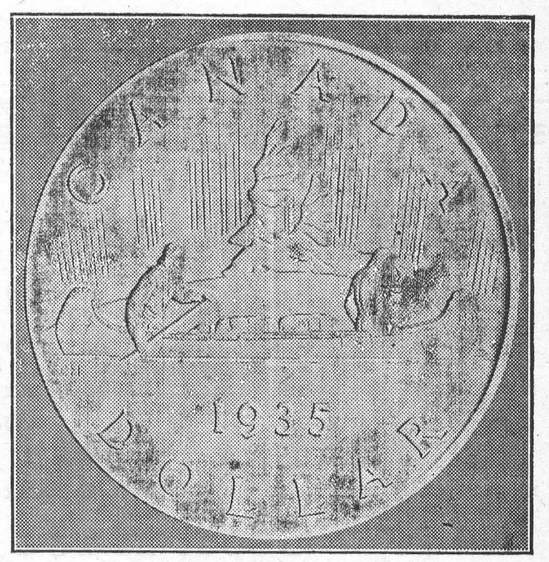
Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

But the approach to God through beauty must not be ignored. Consider nature. How lovely is this fair world! No wonder the author of the first chapter of the Bible wrote that "God saw everything that he has made, and, behold, it was very good." Think of art. The world's greatest music, its finest paintings, its most inspired poetry are saturated with a sense of divine radiance. Remember man himself. Is he not, at his best, united to his Creator in what the psalmist calls "the beauty of holiness?"

The lame beggar, too, is suggestive. He represents the sickness, the frustration, the poverty of which the world is so full. Despite all that organized science and philanthropy have done to mitigate the hard lot of humanity, it still remains true that this world is "a vale of tears" for many handicapped lives. And now that we are in the grip of severe depression the sufferings of men have assumed fresh vitality.

But the major emphasis of the lesson is to be found in our Golden Text "I have no silver or gold," said Peter, "but I will give you what I have." Peter was poor in what the world calls wealth, but he was rich in soul-force. He had such extraordinary healing ability that folk brought their sick into the streets that at least his shadow might fall upon them. (see Acts 5:15).

And note that Peter attributes his success not only to the power of God but to the faith of the cripple. (vs. 16) Every physician knows how indispensable is faith. If he can arouse the confidence of his patient he can achieve wonders.



CANADA'S FIRST SILVER DOLLAR

Here is the reverse side of Canada's first silver dollar, which will be ready for circulation on May 6th, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the accession of King George. The design is a canoe laden with pelts, paddled by an Indian and a "voyageur," passing through a rocky islet on which are two jack-pines. The word "Canada" is set above with northern lights, and, below, the word "dollar" appears with the year "1935." The obverse side of the dollar will carry a crowned effigy of His Majesty, with the inscription, "Georgius V Rex Imperator, Anno Regeni XXV." The design was executed by Emanuel Hahn, R. C. A.

Mr. Dick Preston played a prominent part in the flight of seventeen aeroplanes over the city of Toronto on Saturday, February 9th, in the interest of the crippled children's fund of that city.

Taking off from the Toronto Flying Club field, the planes flew over the city, dropped half a million valentines calling the attention of the citizens to the campaign and returned to the field half an hour later.

Dick was at the controls of one of the machines and had as his passengers, John David Eaton and C. E. Reid. The campaign proved to be very successful, with the citizens making a hearty response to the appeal from the air.

POLITICAL AXE FALLS AGAIN IN THIS COUNTY

HEN LAYS PECULIAR EGG

Talking about eggs, a hen from the flock of Mr. William Leslie has been influenced by latest designs of stream lining and has turned to producing eggs of that variety. On Tuesday Mr. Leslie brought to this office a soft-shelled egg of ordinary size with a three inch tail projecting from the small end. The appendage, which is filled with fluid, is about a quarter of an inch in diameter and curves off gracefully near the end.

It is too bad the hen had to spoil a unique bit of work by overlooking to put a shell over the egg. If Mr. Leslie can cultivate this trait in the bird he might make a fortune, for this one effort was a remarkable one.

SPLENDID MEETING HELD

An enjoyable evening was spent by the members of St. Paul's Y. P. S. at their regular meeting held in the Sunday School Hall on Thursday evening last, which took the form of a Valentine Party. Miss Clara Anderson acted as chairman.

Following devotional exercises, the evening was spent in games and music. The Farmer's Love Letter Contest was very amusing and was won by Mrs. Geo. Wilson and Mr. Hugh Edgerton. In the Valentine contest Miss Maude Edgerton's group was successful in winning, while W. H. Workman led his group to a victory in the Jelly Bean hunt.

Interspersed between the various games and contests, Mr. George Angus gave several impersonations that were much enjoyed by those present. Other vocal numbers included a quartette sing-song with Mesdames Geo .Wilson, R. Empey, L. Kinkaid and Miss Clara Irving acting as leaders. A game, Cupid's Air Mail, was entered into heartily by the guests after which dainty refreshments brought the evening to a close.

DELIGHTFUL SHOWER HELD

Misses Frances Utman, Beatrice Jackson and Lois Jackson were hostesses at a very delightful kitchen shower, given in honor of Mrs. Robert Barkley (nee Hazel Lewis) at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Matthew Reid, on Tuesday evening. About twenty-five guests were present and were received by Miss Lois Jackson.

Shortly after Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barkley arrived and were received by Mrs. James Jackson, and ushered to the seats of honor. An address was then read by Miss May Wyatt and the presentation of a basket beautifully trimmed with pink and white crepe paper and filled with lovely kitchen utensils, mostly of cream enamel with green trimmings, was made by Misses Frances Utman, Lois and Beatrice Jackson, who then assisted the young bride in opening the gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Barkley expressed their thanks in a most suitable manner, after which the guests registered their names in the "Bride's Book," which had been artistically prepared. The hostesses passed candy and the very happy occasion was brought to a close with the singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

5000 FACTS ABOUT CANADA FOR 1935

The public will again welcome the annual issue of "5000 Facts About Canada," now in its 32nd year, compiled by the well known Canadian writer, Frank Yeigh and which has won a well deserved popularity for the conciseness and value of its information. It is truly a tabloid cyclopedia of the Dominion—Canada in a Nutshell—"or two," as Andy would say. Here within brief compass are all the salient features of the country for the current year, arranged under fifty chapter heads ranging from Agriculture to Yukon. This handy little volume—"as full of meat as a cocoanut"—is a revelation of the progressive story of the Dominion in a single year, and should prove a source of encouragement to all and a revelation as well of the favorable trends of recent months. It "sells Canada" most effectually, and its wide circulation is good national business. Copies at 35c each, or three for a dollar may be had from 588 Huron Street Toronto, or from leading newsdealers.

LATE MRS. AGNES TRIPP

The funeral of the late Mrs. Agnes Tripp, wife of the late James Tripp who died on Feb. 3rd in her 89th year, was held from her late residence, Bridge Street, on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 5th, to St. John's United Church, Cardinal. Service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, assisted by Rev. Fred Tripp, of Montreal, brother-in-law of the deceased.

The late Mrs. Tripp was born in Mountain Township in 1847, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Albrant, of Inkerman. Mrs. Tripp had resided in Cardinal for the past 18 years, where she had a wide circle of friends. Floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The late Mrs. Tripp had enjoyed good health until she suffered a fall early in December which resulted in a fractured hip.

In January she was seized with a stroke and about a week later she took a change which told friends and loved ones that the end was approaching. Here again the life she lived bore fruit as in the hours of death there was the same pleasant smile. She left words of comfort and cheer to those at her bedside, as she was ready to go when the Lord willed, and she passed peacefully away on Sunday night, Feb. 3rd.

In 1872 she was married to Alonzo Aldrich who died in the same year. In 1875 she was married to John Barriger of Winchester and to this union was born two daughters and three sons: Lilly, who died at the age of seven; and Katie, (Mrs. J. D. Boyce) of Kemptville; William of Smiths Falls; Frederick of South Mountain, and Mahlon, of North Gower. Following the demise of Mr. Barriger, the deceased was married to James Tripp in 1917. Mr. Tripp died in 1928. Three dauhters survive this union: Ruby, (Mrs. A. C. Phoenix, of Erie, Pa.;) Flossie, of Jersey City, and Bessie at home in Cardinal.

Pall bearers were James Bush, Walter Kingston, Thomas McRobie, Marcus Riddell and Rae Anderson, of Cardinal, and Richard Wallace, of Prescott. Remains were placed in the vault at Cardinal to await burial at Shanly cemetery.

The floral tributes were as follows: Wreath—Mr. and Mrs. William Barriger and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Edgers.

Sprays—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Barriger and daughter, Gladys; Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Barriger, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Boyce, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. McRobie, Miss Flossie Tripp; Office staff of C. S. Co.; Pillow, Mrs. A. C. Phoenix, Miss Bessie Tripp; Cut Flowers—Mr. and Mrs. F. Gaylord.
