"Serving the Seaway Valley"

Vol 27 No. 33 Price $1.00

On Friday, August 8, the government of Ontario announced a $2.24 million investment in the St. Lawrence Parks Commission. From left to right are Pat Macdonald (General Manager of the SLPC), Jim Brownell (MPP), the Honourable Peter Fonseca (Minister of Tourism), and Peter Watson (Chair of the SLPC). All of them are working hard to make the Parks of the St. Lawrence a better tourist attraction.

St. Lawrence Parks to get $2.24M upgrades

Minister Fonseca calls region a 'tourist's paradise' of important attractions

On Friday, Aug. 8, Ontario's Minister of Tourism, Peter Fonseca, announced a $2.24 million investment in the St. Lawrence Parks Commission during a presentation at the Ontario Power Generation Community Pavilion.

The presentation featured three key speakers: Peter Fonseca, Jim Brownell and Pat Macdonald. Peter Watson, the chair of the St. Lawrence Parks Commission, was also present to introduce and thank each of the speakers.

The Honourable Peter Fonseca was the first speaker at the event. He talked about the importance of the attractions along the St. Lawrence River, including Upper Canada Village, Fort Henry, and the Chrysler Park Marina, for the tourism industry in Ontario - even going so far as to call the region "a tourist's paradise".

He also touched upon the region's world-wide recognition, especially regarding the recent designation of Fort Henry, the Rideau Canal, and the Kingston Fortifications as UNESCO World Heritage Sites. He then announced a $2.24 million investment in the SLPC, and went into detail about how the money will be spent: repairing the heritage buildings at Upper Canada Village, updating Fort Henry, and fixing up parks along the St. Lawrence River were just a few of the projects mentioned.

of his ties to the Minister of Tourism, and discussed in length the Minister's visit to the riding, which

The next speaker was Jim Brownell, the MPP for Stormont-Dundas-South Glengarry and the parliamentary assistant to Peter Fonseca. Brownell spoke included a stroll through Upper Canada Village, a night at the Nightingale House, and some theatre at the Upper Canada Playhouse. He also talked about his responsibility to attract visitors to the riding, and about his visits to Upper Canada Village. His thoughts on the Parks of the St. Lawrence were summed up with an encouraging phrase: "This is a jewel in the crown of our history, our heritage, and our tourism opportunities."

The third speaker was Pat Macdonald, the general manager of the SLPC. Macdonald first talked about the accomplishments of the Parks of the St. Lawrence - including the astounding turnout at the Medieval Festival, the construction of the OPG Community Pavilion and the Marker 72 Dockside Patio, and the 1.6 per cent increase in revenues and over five per cent increase in visitors at the Parks of the St. Lawrence as of July.

She also spoke of the challenges that the Parks had to face this season, including the rainy weather, the unstable economy and the price of gas. Finally, she presented some ideas for improving tourism in the Parks, such as targeting visitors from Ottawa and Quebec and getting a VIA Rail station near the attractions.

To cap off the presentation, Bruce Fitzgibbons and Tim Robbins, who helped build the OPG Community Pavilion, presented Jim Brownell with a plaque to thank him for his contributions to the Parks of the St. Lawrence.

The bright side of the rain

On Thursday, July 24, the rain in the city of Toronto set a new record for the summer - 273 millimetres since the beginning of June. The previous record for June and July rain in Toronto was 271.3 millimetres, set in 1980.

This sort of rampant precipitation is happening all over Ontario, with record or near-record levels of rain in Peterborough, Collingwood, Picton, Thunder Bay, Sarnia, and many other parts of our province. They are certainly dampening the fields, gardens, and roads, but the constant downpours and lack of sun may very well be dampening the spirits of many people here in South Dundas too. However, there are some positive things coming out of all of the rain.

One group that is happy about the rain in Ontario is Ducks Unlimited Canada. While precipitation has diminished in the West of Canada this year, the rain in Ontario, mixed in with the warm temperatures, has created a lush and enticing habitat for waterfowl. The water level in wetlands is very much above the norm, so the birds have much bigger and higher quality habitats than usual for brood rearing and molting.

The constant rain is also delaying the harvesting of hay in southern Ontario, which benefits the waterfowl. According to a survey from Ducks Unlimited Canada, Ontario is by far the best place this summer for waterfowl to thrive.

The giant Great Lakes are also benefiting from the large amount of precipitation this summer, according to information from the U.S.

Army Corps of Engineers in Detroit. After hitting an all-time record low water level last year, the water level in Lake Huron has risen 7 inches already this summer, and is expected to rise another 10 to 15 inches before autumn. The water levels of Lakes Erie, Ontario, and Michigan have also risen over 7 inches each. Lake Superior's water level has even risen 16 inches! The high water levels in these lakes can drastically help avoid situations where dredging must be done so that boats can pass through certain areas. Dredging is an excavation operating during which sediment is removed from the bottom of an area in a lake and moved to another location, so that there will be more room between the bottom of the lake and the surface in that area. These operations can harm aquatic ecosystems, and they are very costly.

So, next time it rains, think about the positive aspects of all the water pouring down - you might just feel a bit better.

The Morrisburg Lions hosted another very successful Antiqufest in July. The show offered attendees the opportunity of having their own treasures appraised by experts in various fields. For example, specialists were on hand to appraise carnival glass, movies, coins, stamps, sports memorabilia, Christmas decorations, porcelain, silver, glassware, and artwork. The money raised by the Antiqufest is used by the Lions club to help out the community in a number of ways.

Here we are in the middle of August and fall is fast approaching, as well as all sports that resume in September as well. The Cribbage League will be starting up after the Labour Day weekend.

The pot of gold winner was Jake Trojour, who was not signed in.

The Friday meal will be Swiss steak with gravy, veggies will be peas and new potatoes. Dessert is to be chocolate pie with topping.

Chef Norma has been doing a fantastic job with her Friday meals and some times it is even hard to find a seat to partake in the meal.

At Euchre, there were eight tables. Claiming the first prize was Norma Shuman, while the second prize was shared between Andy Acelvarie and Goldie Sypes. The third prize went to Gene Durlas. Only two skunks were captured and Louise Crites grabbed one, as well as Katherine Guertous.

Although many are on vacation, a great turnout was had for our steak barbecue. I know that plans are in the process for another one!

I am not sure of the date at this time, but I'll keep you posted as to when it will be.

Don't forget the Poker Run at the Galop Canal on Aug. 23 - a steak barbecue will be available there too.

Until next week - take care.

You want me to help you de-clutter? Just let me call my chiropractor

If you are reading this, then I may very well stand a fighting chance.

I'm being held prisoner in my own home by a woman wearing rubber gloves and sporting a crazed look in her eye. As much as that may prompt some men to write a column to express their joy at such a situation, I'm sending out a plea for help.

Yes men, it is cleaning weekend at the Marshall homestead.

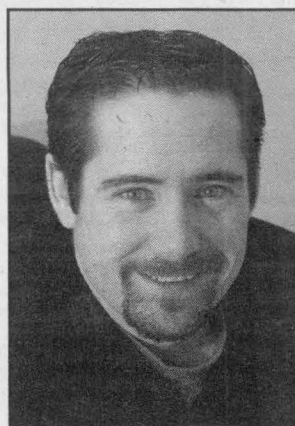

Let me clarify - it is "de-clutter weekend" at the Marshall homestead.

For those men out there who don't have cable television or a satellite dish (or you do have, but have lost control of the TV clicker), "de-clutter" is a term that you never hear while watching football, kickboxing or the Sopranos. Actually, sometimes I do hear that term while watching football on a Sunday afternoon.

JASON: Oh man! Did you see that tackle? Wow, it looks like that guy's leg was broken in three places. Look. Look. Super slow motion. You can actually see the leg snap. That was awesome.

DISINTERESTED GIRLFRIEND: Are you watching this?

JASON: Uhhhhh, yeah. It's the playoffs.

JASON MARSHALL

DG: Can you flip the channel? That show is on where they clean your house and get rid of all the clutter. You know, we really need to de-clutter this house.

JASON (Under his breath): *%^&$@#

DG: Did you say something?

JASON: Yes, dear. I said that I agree. This place is a mess. Let me turn off the football game and help you to de-clutter our beautiful home. I'm excited to get off the couch and completely gut our house. Where shall I begin?

For those who haven't de-cluttered before, trust me - you would rather be scrubbing the toilet.

The official definition of "de-clutter" reads as follows:

De-clutter (Dee-kluh-tur): From Latin term Declutterusmessicus meaning "an attempt to tidy up by having the male of the house carry many heavy, awkward items of furniture from the living room to the basement or shed while the female of the house points at said items, nods and jerks her head towards the basement door as if to say, "come on chump, stop sweating all over the carpet and get your lazy rear end down those stairs with that piano."

Our house goes in cycles. After a weekend marathon of cleaning shows on television, our house becomes void of clutter. Then, within four days, it looks like a scene from Sanford and Son. Junk as far as the eye can see.

So when the word "de-clutter" is uttered, I immediately call my chiropractor and book an appointment for the following day.

Cleaning and scrubbing is scary enough at our house. For the most part, our home is quite clean. Kathy sees to that. If I were to be in charge of cleaning, our home would simply be "tidy" and not "clean." I've been dubbed a "tidier" and not a "cleaner."

This was revealed to me one Sunday morning. We were expecting a house full of company for brunch, and we had been cleaning since Saturday morning. At least I thought we were cleaning. I had scrubbed the toilet and tub, washed the dishes, and mopped the floors. I was proud of what I had accomplished. The feeling wasn't mutual.

It was pointed out to me that I was just doing the cosmetic work, that dirt was still lurking in the wake of my "cleaning." Now let me preface the following transcript by saying this: Kathy's anxiety and rage over cleaning peaks about 20 minutes before company arrives, and then diffuses four minutes after everyone removes their coats. This was about two minutes before our guests were due to arrive.

JASON (proudly): You wanted the kitchen clean - voila. Dishes are done. Floor is scrubbed. Counter is clean. I even scrubbed the sink. Look at the shine on those taps.

SEE THING GIRLFRIEND: What is THAT on the stove? Did you not see that?

JASON: See what?
SG: That. Right there. Under the ring of the stove. Is that a piece of macaroni? How did you not see that?

JASON: No.

SG: And I could bet a million dollars that you didn't pull out the stove and clean behind it. Same goes for the fridge. We have company arriving in three minutes and you haven't even pulled out the fridge or stove and scrubbed behind them. You had better hope no one notices that. Those places are cesspools for filth.

JASON (under his breath): Scrub the floor under the *%^&$@# stove. Man, why don't you just ask me to install new cupboards and put down a ceramic floor.

SG: Did you say something?

JASON: I said that your hair looks amazing. You look beautiful.

So cleaning is one thing, but de-cluttering is more physically demanding. Gentlemen, learn the difference. Better yet, go and watch your play-off football at the sports bar, and on your way to the car, stop and cut the cable that runs from the satellite dish to the TV.

If some host of a cleaning show shouts out the word "de-clutter" and your spouse isn't around to hear it - did the host really make a sound?

Letter to the editor

Heat or eat this winter?

To the editor,

This looks like it will be heat or eat for many Canadians this winter as the federal government sticks by its two per cent GST cut.

Last fall's price on oil was 84.9 and as of July 2008 heating oil sits at 125.9. That is an increase of 41 cents per litre in the last 10 months.

Six years ago heating oil was 45 to 49 cents per litre.

On Sept. 2, 2005, MP Scott Reid sent me a letter while in opposition stating the time has come to cut Canadians a tax break, Stephen Harper had proposed the Liberal government to reduce its surcharge on gasoline which was introduced in the 1990s to reduce the federal deficit and for the government to end its practice of charging GST on top of provincial taxes which amounts to double taxing the consumer at the pumps and stop charging GST on gas at 85 cents per litre. So I questioned him on this and his reply on July 14, 2008 is that was the Conservative platform for the 2004 election that called for an end to the tax on tax by capping GST at 85 cents per litre. He failed to mention why they had not reduced the surcharge on gas, so it must be for the same reason, I guess.

So now I am left wondering why he sent me the letter on Sept. 2, 2005 if that was no longer his party's policy.

He now states that an election was on the horizon and called a couple of months later and they took office in early 2006. He says the new policy was to cut the GST by two per cent and Canadians see this relief not only on gasoline prices, but on virtually all goods and services.

(Do you see the relief as I do not see it.)

The Prime Minister's Office responded to me on July 18, 2008 by stating by cutting the GST from seven to five per cent has reduced the gasoline tax burden on Canadians.

Then the letter says the government of Canada fully appreciates the negative effects that the rising fuel and energy prices have on Canadians, but fails to say what or if they are doing anything so Canadians can heat their homes this winter.

Jack Layton leader of the NDP, responded on July 2, 2008.

In 2007 a study released shows 15-27 cents per litre of gas is being pumped right into the pockets of big oil and gas companies.

Then he says he wants you and your family to benefit from their efforts and there is no GST on home heating fuel, reduce tuition fees, reduce the high cost of prescription drugs, eliminate ATM fees, and remove the GST from sales of books or pamphlets.

There has to be an easier way to move

BY MARY COOK

After moving six or seven times during our married life, one would think I'd have the whole business down pat. Sadly, I haven't learned a thing.

Of course, this latest move was complicated by several factors, all of which were beyond my control. First of all, we sold our home without even listing it within hours after deciding to move, and had to vacate the place in a month. The town house we were purchasing had yet to see a shovel put to the ground and we had visions of living in a park in a puppet, or worse, under some bridge with the "drug-gies."

Fortunately, our neighbour wasn't going to be using her cottage and we were invited to move in until our new home was ready. Adding to the confusion was a bit of minor surgery for me, a visit from our son who lives in Indonesia and his family, a tooth that had to be crowned, an upcoming overseas trip for Wally and me, which had been on the books for over a year, and we decided to send a pile of stuff we didn't think would fit into our new home to the auction house, all of which had to be tagged and sorted.

That meant we literally had four packings to contend with. First came the auction stuff to get rid of, then pack what we thought we would need for our 18-day trip overseas, lug what we needed for our three month stay at our neighbour's cottage and, finally, move all the rest of our belongings that would eventually go into our new home into two large storage units.

Show me one person who can pack for four different destinations, and I'll show you someone whose IQ is off the scale. What we needed next door was in some box in a storage unit. The reference books I needed have yet to surface and, naturally, I packed all the wrong things for our trip overseas.

Someone once told me, every move should be a reason to cull out, and gear down. This was certainly our intention. We sent boxes of stuff to The Exchange, and the garbage collectors, I'm sure, thought we were bringing bags in from another county.

As with every move we've made, I had to go through the heart rendering decision of what to keep and what to get rid of. It's unfortunate that I am much more sentimental than Wally is about cherished items, many of which have little or no purpose. I was sure there was going to be either a murder or a divorce before we were finished sorting and packing.

I solved part of the problem by getting a big plastic storage bin and marking it "kitchen essentials," (Wally has no idea what a kitchen essential is) and packing things our kids had given me over the years ... things they had made in Grade 1, or kindergarten, or had given as Christmas presents bought from their hard earned allowances. How could you part with a glass pickle jar covered with coloured paper cut out of a magazine? How could I justify tossing out the size 32A padded lace bras (when my size was 36 Double D) with a red plastic rose sewn to the front, which my daughter had bought at the 5 & Dime for a dollar for my Christmas present when she was six years old? Or the wood book rack our son made in Grade 5? Each and every one is a cherished memory and they took the move with everything else.

Now I sit amid 209 cartons of "stuff" to unpack. We are finally in our new town house and moving off our beloved Mississippi Lake wasn't nearly as traumatic as we thought it would be.

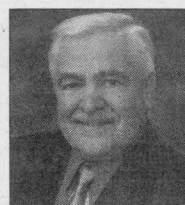

It was time to make a change. Too much property means too much work. Cutting grass, flower beds, lake front maintenance, snowblowing and shovelling becomes more of a challenge with each passing year.

It was time to gear down and make changes. As said in Owen's Epigrammata, "The times change, and we change with them."

The Accidental Farmwife

Don't Be A Chicken

Before bringing our 50 turkeys and 50 chicks home from Rooney's in May, the Farmer carefully prepared the coop. He swept out the cobwebs, removed any dangerous objects from the floor, and built a little circular enclosure, about the size of a toddler's swimming pool. He divided this structure in half with a long board, and placed food and water and a heat lamp in each section. Then he hung heavy blankets over the windows, to eliminate drafts. I had never seen him being so careful before. Just how delicate are these creatures, anyway?

When he brought the beasties home, he put the chicks on one side of the divider and the turkeys on the other. They immediately rushed the circle of heat created by the hanging red lamp, piling on top of each other. The birds on the bottom of the heap were smothering. The Farmer frowned. He raised the heat lamp a few inches, to increase the surface area of the heat circle. Suddenly everyone had room. He looked at me.

"We're going to come in here every morning and every night to check on them, but make sure you don't let in a draft. If they get chilled, they pile on each other and die."

He told me we might lose half our chicks. I couldn't believe how weak and wimpy they were.

This is really my first experience with poultry - unless, of course, you count Taiwan (and I don't). Walking to the subway in Taipei every morning, I had to pass by a street vendor who took great delight in beheading a chicken just as I was walking past. I looked straight ahead, never gratifying her antics with my attention. I didn't want to see if the chicken-with-its-head-cut-off stories were true.

Those Taiwanese chickens always seemed to be monstrous, huge and fierce, in my memory: nothing like these wimpy chicks on our farm.

I must admit I wasn't as interested in the baby chicks as I was in the baby lambs that I bottle-fed last February. They just don't have the same endearing personalities. They're soft, and fluffy, to be sure. But they are just too tiny and terrified to be cute. For the most part, I have let the Farmer look after the birds.

After a week or two, Farmer Fisher lifted the enclosure and set the chicks free to roam about the coop. Finally, he moved them to a room at the back of the barn that was open to outside for fresh air. They could escape fairly easily if they tried, but only the turkeys have been roosting on the wall and they don't seem to have the motivation to flee. They are quite content at this resort, where food and water are provided daily.

We only lost four birds in the early coop stages, when they were clustering for warmth.

We lost one more during a group attack (don't ask - it isn't pretty).

The one chicken death that I found the most interesting was the one who died of a heart attack. My husband said he just went into the coop area, perhaps a bit too abruptly, and the movement startled the chicken so much that he had a heart attack and died.

This, to me, is ridiculous. But apparently it happens, a lot.

The chickens are nearly ten pounds each, and the time is approaching when they must meet their maker.

We carefully and quietly entered the coop the other night in order to spread fresh hay over the floor. As I hauled myself over the half-wall into the coop, the chickens skittered sideways en masse, muttering to themselves in a high-pitched, gurgling whine the whole time: "ohh.... what's she doing....she's coming closer...." And then every once in a while there would be an intermittent squawk from one who just couldn't hold in the anxiety anymore. But none of them had heart attacks, thankfully. Not even when I accidentally dropped my pitchfork in their midst.

The Farmer has rented cages for transporting the chickens to the processing plant.

I can't say I will be sad to see them go, but I can at least rest easy that they had a good life while they were on the Fisher Farm Chicken Resort.

'Out of Order' offers fast-paced fun at UCP

High energy fun had the audience in stitches as the Upper Canada Playhouse held the opening of Ray Cooney's 'Out of Order.' With a cast of 10, a tricky window, and a closet, the action is fast-paced and the laughter frequent.

Richard Bauer plays the manipulative Junior Minister, Richard Willey, who starts the whole tangled plot rolling by arranging an assassination with the Leader of the Opposition's secretary, Jane Worthington (Katie Lawson). The hotel room rented for the occasion is the setting for the resultant action, and John Weir, playing the hotel's manager, is increasingly distressed with what occurs in and around the room.

With the first inkling of scandal, Willey calls on his PPS (Parliamentary Private Secretary) George Pigden (Jamie Williams) to sort matters out.

The scandal, unfortunately for poor Pigden, involves a body (Parris Greaves). Enter Walter Learning portraying an aged yet avaricious waiter who is willing to supply Willey and Pigden with whatever they need, but at a cost. Maria, the maid, pops in and out of the action, and Ronnie (Victor Cornfoot), Jane Worthington's jealous husband, really stirs up the mix.

The entrance of Willey's wife, Pamela (Debra Hale) and Pigden's mother's nurse, Gladys (AnnaMarie Lea) in the second scene creates even more hilarity as Willey and Pigden work to keep everyone apart.

This farce moves quickly, and the lies build on one another so rapidly it is astounding that the players can keep them straight. The actors are word perfect, as is always the case at the Playhouse, and the action is choreographed to make good use of the window, closet, and off-stage bedroom.

'Out of Order' is great fun and a must see for fans of fast-paced farcical humour.

It will run at the Upper Canada Playhouse until Aug. 31.

Lucas Oil Canadian DIRT Series show postponed to Oct. 18

The Brockville Ontario Speedway was hosting the fourth race of the Lucas Oil Canadian DIRT Series as a great field of 49 cars were in the pits for the 100-lap finale, this amounts is a record for the series. Mother Nature put a stop to the night on Aug. 2.

Veterans Laurent

Ladouceur and Dave Heaslip were in front of the field of 34 cars in the 100-lap feature race. Ladouceur led the first lap when Alan Therrien lost the control of his car. On the restart, Ladouceur stays in front when Dany Bilodeau was now in second when the red flag was thrown on the field of an accident that blocked all the racing lanes in turn 1 on lap 2. Dany Bilodeau had a strong start and takes the lead and he his followed by Perry Francis in second when Michel Chicoine stops in turn 1 and 2 and yellow is out again on the third lap.

Bilodeau is still the leader when Yan Bussière has issues on the fourth lap. The rain started to fall on the speedway and it became too slippery to continue and officials decided to postponed the series to Saturday, Oct. 18.

The feature race will have 96 laps left because only four laps were already in the books. Only the 34 cars that took the feature will be able to race. The time trials were cancelled because of the bad weather and the officials wanted the show to speed up.

A lot of actions in the heat races as many accidents occurred as the drivers wanted the coveted spots for the 100-lap event.

The series will continue tomorrow at Cornwall Motor Speedway for the fifth race of the series.

Time trials are scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m. and the heats at 7 p.m.

Cornwall Speedway cancels show

The Cornwall Motor Speedway had the Race for the Children plus a complete race program on the schedule for Aug. 3 but the program was cancelled because of bad weather.

Some heavy thunderstorms during the afternoon have hit the Cornwall region and they did not give any chance to promoter Ron Morin and he was forced to cancel his race night.

A big program is scheduled for next week with the Advance Auto Parts Super DIRT Series for big-blocs will be in town for a 100-lap feature event, the biggest names on the circuit will be in town.

This was originally scheduled for July 13 but was postponed because of rain. Also on the schedule, the Empire Super Sprints who will make their second visit of the season along with the final race of the Mohawk Race Parts and Accessories for Pro-Stock, a 50-lap feature race is on the schedule for them. The rookies will also be in action and the Semi-Pro will be off on this night.

Fans who bought their ticket for July 13 will be able to exchange them next week. The admission cost will be $30 for adults, $20 for students from 13 to 17 and also seniors of 65 years and plus and kids 12 years and under will get in for free.

The pit gates will open at 3:30 p.m. with general admission opening at 4 p.m. We suggest people to arrive early because it is one of the biggest shows of the year at Cornwall.

Be there!

The Iroquois Swim Team was swimming for towels last week as they took part in a fundraising event to buy beach towels for the Stingray Swim Team. The afternoon was perfect for some swimming and fun.

Be sun safe this summer

With summer here, many of us will spend more time outside enjoying the warm weather and outdoor activities, providing us with many health benefits. And while natural sunlight is important to maintain good health, too much exposure to the sun's rays can cause skin cancer and eye problems.

Here are some tips on how to be sun safe this summer:

REDUCE YOUR EXPOSURE

Reduce your exposure to the sun between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. when the sun's rays are at their strongest, or any time of the day when the UV Index is three or more. Ultraviolet rays (UVA and UVB) cause skin damage and can get through clouds, fog and haze. As well, water, sand and concrete can reflect, and even increase the sun's burning rays.

COVER UP

If you want or need to stay outside, seek shade or create your own. For instance, why not make a personal fashion statement by using an attractive umbrella! A wide-brimmed hat (in your favourite colour, of course) will also go a long way in protecting your head, face, neck and ears.

Carry your fashion statement a little further with clothing that covers your bare skin. It will be most effective if it is loose, tightly woven and lightweight.

Sunscreen should have a sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or higher, and an SPF of 30 if you work outdoors or if you will be outside for most of the day. To protect yourself against both UVA and UVB rays, look for "broad spectrum" on the label. Apply sunscreen generously, at least 20 minutes before going outdoors. Use a waterproof sunscreen if you'll be in or near water.

And don't forget the most stylish of fashion items, your sunglasses. They can help prevent damage to your eyes by blocking a large amount of UV rays. Choose sunglasses with even shading, medium to dark lenses and both UVA and UVB protection.

PROTECTING BABIES AND YOUNG CHILDREN

It's best to keep babies and young children out of direct sunlight. Use clothing that covers their arms and legs, add a hat and apply a little sunscreen (if over six months). Put the stroller, playpen or carriage in the shade - under trees or an umbrella.

CHECK YOUR SKIN REGULARLY

You can never be completely safe from the sun. Over time, exposure to UV rays may cause skin cancer. Report any changes to your skin to your doctor.

AVOID TANNING BEDS

Just like the sun, tanning beds and sun lamps release UV rays that can cause sunburn, damage skin and increase the risk of skin cancer.

To learn more about how to reduce your risk of skin cancer, visit www.cancer.ca or call the Canadian Cancer Society Cancer at 1-888-939-3333.

IJC to debate water levels

The Commissioners of the International Joint Commission (IJC) of Canada and the United States wish to thank the public, elected officials and the state and provincial governments for their participation in the IJC's comment period, which ended on July 11, 2008. Commissioners believe that the comment period was productive in clarifying the views of the different stakeholders in the basin.

The IJC will meet in mid August to consider these comments and deliberate on the future regulation of Lake Ontario and St. Lawrence River water levels and flows.

The August meeting will also include a session with representatives of the federal governments of Canada and the United States to discuss the process for consulting with them, and through them, with the provinces of Ontario and Quebec and the state of New York.

The IJC will seek the concurrence of the two federal governments before making a final decision.

The IJC held 10 information meetings in communities around Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River in April and May, followed by 10 public hearings in June. All six Commissioners attended the public hearings.

Over 1,200 written submissions were received and over 200 organizations and individuals provided comments at the public hearings. More than 1450 people attended the public hearings.

The record of comments is available on the IJC's website at www.ijc.org.

The information meetings and public hearings were held to provide information and receive comment on a proposed new Order of Approval and regulation plan, released on March 28, 2008, for regulating the outflows from Lake Ontario through the Moses-Saunders Dam in the St. Lawrence River between Cornwall, Ontario and Massena, New York.

The Order of Approval provides the legal framework and the regulation plan provides the operational framework for regulating the outflows.

DEATHS

Entered into rest at Bayfield Manor on Sunday July 27, 2008, Jean Smith (nee Wright) of Kemptville, age 90. Predeceased by her husband Orville Smith (1967). Mother of Marion Bethune (Gordon) of Braeside, Percy Smith of Treherne Manitoba, and Margaret Mohr (Lionel) of Oxford Station. Grandmother of Sharon Cooke (Rick) of Bellville, Robert Bethune of Toronto, Shannon Smith-Holmes (Rick) of Bonnyville Alberta, Bridie Willows (Jason) and Callie Summers (Ian) of Vancouver BC, Brittany Smith (Tim Pollock) of Franktown, Karen Curtis (David) of Oakville, and Larry Mohr (Jennifer Saunders) of Kemptville. Great-Grandmother of Jennifer and Alison Cooke, Michael Smith, Madelyn and Gavin Willows, Nathan, Donovan and Caleb Summers, Alex, Emma and Matthew Curtis, and Jodie and Corie-Lynne Mohr. Predeceased by her brothers Art and Frank and her sisters Mae, Doris, and Winnifred all of Alberta.

Jean had been able to enjoy visits with family and friends with wit and wisdom until she suffered a stroke nine days before her death. She died peacefully under the careful care and watch of Bayfield Manor staff.

Visitation was held August 1, and a celebration of Jean's life was held August 2. Her daughter Marion Bethune officiated, with her husband Gordon assisting. Tributes were presented by her daughters Margaret and Marion, Isabel Wilson, and Anne Raina. Marion presented the message. Jean's parents were Irish immigrants from Ballymena. The organist, Janet Kerr (nee Mohr), played Irish melodies before the service to honour Jean's heritage. Nora Whaley sang "Because He Lives". Interment took place at South Gower Cemetery following the service. Pallbearers were Robert Bethune, Larry Mohr, David Curtis, Rick Cooke, Keith Wilson, and Bill Green. A reception followed at Heckston United Church.
