THE AD. AND THE MAN

He saw an ad from day to day
And muttered : I defy it ;
Their stuff may be just what they say
But I'm not going to buy it-

As time wore on he made remarks
It would not do to mention,
For he was mad because the ad
Was forced to his attention.

But in a week, or two, or three,
He said : There's no denying
The way that ad gets hold of me—
The stuff may be worth trying.

For just about a fortnight more
He dared mere words to win him,
And then the ad completely had
Aroused the spender in him.

Next day he drifted in a store
And quietly expended
A few big iron dollars for
The stuff the ad commended.

He found it filled a long-felt need;
Its excellence surprised him.
And now he's glad because the ad
So deftly hypnotised him.

Canadian Track Record Lowered

On Wednesday and Thursday of last week the followers of harness racing in Eastern Ontario were treated to two days of the best racing ever put on in this section, when in connection with the Summer Carnival, the best class of harness horses fought gamely for the good purses offered for each event. The weather was ideal for the occasion and the events as planned by Manager T. J. Ellis and looked after by Clerk Larry Jordan were carried out to the letter. Not only were the racing enthusiasts catered to, but baseball and an extensive midway programme was supplied for those otherwise inclined.

The feature event of the two days programme proved to be the breaking of the Canadian half mile track record by James Stewart's great pacer, Romalo, going the full mile in two minutes and three seconds, the fastest mile ever paced by a horse on a Canadian half mile track Everyone was keyed up for this event, the excitement becoming intense when the half mile was reeled off in one minute and one second with the second half in one minute and two seconds, which when announced as the Canadian track record, resulted in a great burst of cheering for Romalo. The start was made with a running horse as pacemaker, but the latter could not stay with Romalo and dropped out before the first half was completed. It is just possible that a further cut in the figures would have resulted had the pacemaker been able to stay to the end of the mile as Romalo finished strong and evidently not extended to the limit.

The 2.50 class had seven starters contesting for seven heats before a winner was returned in Bernice Hal taking the fifth, sixth and seventh heats in order.

Iron Rex	6	7	4	4	dr

The 2.20 class was won in straight heats by Del Pointer with Dan Forrseter second, Ripple Audubon third, Lady Rex fourth and Don McKenney fifth.

The classified race with seven starters was left unfinished Wednesday evening on account of darkness, after four heats had been pulled off in which Steve Ayers held second position in the first three, coming back on Thursday winning out in straight heats with Chelsea Maid taking second place and Lolita third.

Steve Ayres	2	2	2	5	1	2	1
Chelsea Maid	3	1	3	1	2	2	3

Moscow	4	4	4	4	r	o
Myrtle Spring	5	6	5	dr
Jennie Patchen	6	7	6	dr

The 2.15 class produced some spectacular finishes between Ruth W. the ultimate winner and Dell Pointer. The latter won the 2.20 pace rather easily Wednesday and was looked upon an a sure winner of the 2.15 class, but Jim Stewart with Ruth W. sent Hutton's mare to the barn with second money.

Dell Pointer won the opening heat with Ripple Audubon as the contender; Ruth W. having made a break shortly after the start. In the second heat Ruth was on her good behavior and trailing Dell to the stretch, beat her to the wire in a ding-dong finish. Dell Pointer won the third heat as Stewart's entry again acted badly, but iu the next two Ruth kept pacing and that assured viciory.

Kenmore Gets Revenge

Thursday afternoon the Kenmore baseball team certainly took their revenge on the Chesterville Maple Leafs when with very little effort they carried off the game by a score of 9 to 1. Jimmy Watson for the visitors was in fine form, pitching the best game of the season for his team. Chesterville could do nothing with Watson's offerings while Kenmore touched up King pretty regularly, which coupled with several batters being hit by pitched balls kept the latter in trouble most of the time, although the good work of Oshier in centre saved the situation from developing into a slaughter.

Fire in Movie House at Cornwall

Fred Kane, machine operator in the Imperial Theatre Cornwall, was badly burned about the hands and arms, and had his hair singed in a fire which broke out in the machine room on Saturday night. He was taken to the Hotel Dieu Hospital. The fire started in one of the machines through the film clogging in the side, and the heat from the flare igniting it.

Kane was placing another film in the second machine and this also caught, and in an instant the whole room was ablaze. In endeavoring to extinguish the flames, the operator was badly burned. As soon as the machine door was opened the flames shot out through an open window over the street. The automatic sprinkler service worked well and this, with the aid of fire extinguishers in the theatre and others, brought across the street by L. E. Bailey and Arnold N. Smith, merchant, extinguished before the brigade reached the scene The theatre was fillen at the time, the fire breaking out near the end of the first show, with many people awaiting the second. Charlebois and St. Amand, the proprietors, assured the audience there was no danger of the fire making headway and asked them to pass out, which was done without panic.

A Trade's the Thing

Lanark Era: Very few boys of today are learning trades, and the question arises, who will take the place of the carpenters and masons and printers and plumbers and other tradesmen of the present day when in the course of a few years they retire from the field? One result will be that the public will have to put up with a great deal of indifferent work. Another will be that the young man who differing from his fellow has taken pains to learn a trade will be in a great demand and will receive splendid wages. The boy of today who sees ahead a few years has a great opportunity of making himself worth while.

Anthentic Spiritism

"Divvle a bit do I believe the message these mediums are after gettin' from the dead," declared Dougan. "Ye can't be tellin' whether they're true or not." "More fool ye. Ye can, and I can prove it," contradicted Monahan. "By mistake I was reported killed entirely in the war and one day me sister went to a medium who told her I was wishing I was back on earth. And at that very time I was on a transport in a high sea, d'ye mind?"

How the Stairs Run

A lawyer was cross-examining an old foreigner about the position of the doors, windows, and so forth, in a house in which a certain transaction had occurred.

"And now, my good man," said the lawyer, "will you be good enough to tell the court how the stairs run?"

The foreigner thought for a minute.

"How the stairs run?" he queried at length.

"Yes," repeated the lawyer, "how do the stairs run? My words are simple enough."

"Vell, sir," answered the witness, "ven I am oop ze stairs they run down, and ven I am down ze stairs they run oop!"

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Village Patrolman Murdered at Napanee

Richard A. Beard, aged 69, night policeman of Napanee for the past four years, was shot and instantly killed about 12.45 on Sunday morning. Vincent Bova, who operates a fruit store on Duncas Street Napanee, noticed three men acting suspiciously in the lane behind his store and the adjoining jeweiery store of F. W. Smith and brother. He notified Night Patrolman Beard, who at once responded. Beard accompanied by Bova and Hugh Duncan entered the lane Bova and Duncan, seeing the three suspicions men, hesitated, but Beard went on and almost instantly a shot rang out and the patrolman fell dead. A bullet entered his heart and passed through his body.

After the shot was fired the three made their esape through another lane. They were seen running east a block and then turned south where trace of them was lost, It is thought that they escaped in an Overland car belonging to J. W. Robinson, Napanee, which was stolen during the night.

The night patrolman is survived by a wife and five grown-up children, who reside in Toronto,

Red Man Enjoyed Movies

Did you ever see a man 64 years of age who never saw a picture show? Well such an unusual person attended the Empire Theatre a week ago Thursday night and "whooped" and became terrible excited and would have made mincemeat of the villian darned quick, if he could have got hold of him. This was Indian Chief John LaPoint, of Drummond's Island. The Chief came next day to tell The Advocate man all about it. He can speak good English and he made it very plain to us this was the most wonderful experience he has had in his long life, and if it was possible he'd go and see the pictures every night. John is by this time relating his experiences to the dusky braves, maidens and big-eyed papooses on the island, and we wouldn't pe surprised if the whole band would come over and attend the Empire en masse one of those days.—Thessalon Advocate.

Deny Failure of Potato Crop

That early reports regarding the failure of the potato crop in Hamilton district will be found to be incorrect is the statement of several large growers who have found their spuds to be up to normal. The early crop was not the best, but there has been an improvement in the later ones. It was added that in some districts the crops are poor, but taking the conditions throughout the whole country, there are fair returns and there is not likely to be any shortage.

No Prayer Book on Canadian Trapper

During a recent voyage of the Carmania from America, request was received in the ship's wireless room from another vessel asking for the transmission to her by wireless of the words of the burial service.

The reason for this unusual request was that a fireman on board the Canadian Government steamer, Canadian Trapper, had been taken ill on the voyage and had died, and the captain discovered that there was no copy of the Prayer Book on board.

The Carmania operator telegraphed by wireless the whole of the burial service.

Keep Forests Alive

Living forests provide us with wood material of all klnds for our homes and industries, but burned forests provide no lumber for the saw-mill, no work for ihe workingman, no business for the merchant, and no freight for the railway or steamship. The moral is that everyone should be careful with fire in the woods.

Sailed for Japan

Rev. Foster Hilliard, B. A., with his bride, sailed from Vancouver, B. C. on the Empress of Asia, for Japan on the 18th inst. to which country he goes as a missionary, sent out by the Methodist Church. He will be in attendance at the language school, Tokyo for some time. Before leaving Morrisburg the Methodist Sunday School presented him with a well filled purse and gave him words of "God Speed." We believe Foster will make good. His Co-Laborer is Rev. G. E. Bott who sails with him on same steamer It might be pleasing to friends to know that an unknown man is paying, through the Missionary Society, the salaries and expenses of two men to Japan for two years. It so happens that the two men are Messrs. Hillard and Bott. These men enlisted at same time in same Corps, served throngh the war, and are now not separated in their life work.—Morrisburg Leader.

Sheep And Dogs

Last week, Pittsburg township paid out abont $100 for claims for sheep destroyed by dogs, says the Kingston Whig. The claims paid were to G. Sibbet, W. Curtis, R. H. Gates and W. Corkey. In another case the dogs were followed and caught. They were indentified, aud the owner will have to settle the damages himself. Where the dogs cannot be identified, the money must come out of the pockets of the ratepayers, and it was to protect the ratepayers that the owners of the dogs are now required to have a licen se and place an identification tag on all dogs. The penalty for not complying with the law by obtaining the iicense and tag is $25. The dogs that make raids upon flocks of sheep are not dogs that are kept on sheep farms, but are kept as watch dogs. They are sometimes ferocious from hunger, and in a savage state will kill sheep. Sometimes two or three dogs will go together after sheep and kill them out of mere sport, and they seem to prefere night-time for the work.

Better Buy at Home

Midland Free Press: One day last week a president of the Collingwood Bulletin was stopped in the street by a well-to-do town ratepaper, who wished to say something about the amount of town taxes he had to pay. He says there was nothing unusual about his complaint bnt when we noticed that he was carrying an armful of parcels from a mail order house it was wondered if he ever stopped to consider to what extent he was himself to blame for the high taxes. No town can do its trading beyond its borders without suffering a marked loss. The welfare of the community depends upon that of the individual. If the latter are not induced to do their buying at home, there should be no complaint if there is a steady increase in the cost of maintaining the local municipal institutions, schools, churches, etc.

Doris Merkley Laid to Rest

The funeral of little Doris, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Enos Merkley, whose tragic death was referred to in these columns recently took place at home of the parents on the afternoon of Friday the 19th inst. when Rev. W. T. Brown preached an eloquent and appropriate sermon to a large assemblage of sorrowing friends and relatives. During the service Miss Arlie Durant, of town, sang. Four youthful cousins of the deceased acted as bearers. Interment of the body was made in the family plot in Maple Ridge Cemetery. The parents, sisters Olive and Frances and devoted grandmother, Mrs. Fanny Merkley, have the deepest sympathy of their numerous friends.

Ontario's Lieutenant Governor Has Passed Away

His Honor, Mr. Lionel H. Clarke, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, died Monday afternoon at two o'clock at Government House.

The end was not unexpected. For several days it was generally known that his Hon. was steadily sinking and that his life was gradually passing out.

Very few, except members of the family and intimate friends, were aware that Mr. Clarke's health was unsatisfactary as far back as last March. He always was so buoyant and cheerful in the discharge of his heavy public and social duties, that no one dreamed how much effort he had to put forth lately in order to carry on. The symptoms of his trouble, at first; were those incident to a tired, nervous condition. The first public indication of this was at the formal closing of the Legislature, when his voice gave out and he was unable to read the speech from the Throne.

Immediately after prorogation he took a week's holiday in the North and that short respite gave such relief that he seemed to have quite recovered. The engagements of the late Spring and early Summer, however, were exceptionally heavy and before long he found it necessary to leave for his Summer home at Copperhead Island in the Georgian Bay, where it was expected he would soon get better. No improvment taking place, the doctors ordered a complete rest, and on the 17th of July, Sir William Mulock was appointed to act as Administrator of the Province during his illness. A consultation held by Drs. Goldie, F. N. G. Starr and C. W. Becker, associated with whom was Dr. Barker, of Baltimore confirmed the opinion that disease of a malignant type was present and of such a character that an operation was unlikely to prove of benefit. Later, however, after consultation with Dr. Wm. Mayo, of Rochester, an exploratory examination was made by the surgeons, which unfortunately only confirmed the previous diagnosis. Since then he steadily declined, suffering little or no pain and showing his usual mental grasp until the end peacefully calm.

Burial Permit for Live Child

A very unusual incident occurred Tuesday afternoon in connection with a severe thunder storm which broke over Brockville and vicinity. During the progress of the electric disturbrace a telephone message was received from Tincap, a rural section north-west of Brockville stating that the eight-year-old daughter of Harry Church a farmer, had been struck by lightning and killed. Mr. Church happened to be in Brockville at the time and, hearing the news engaged the service of an undertaker, who proceeded to the scene of the supposed fatality. The coroner had also been notified, and, after consultation with the Crown attorney, it was deemed expedient that a permit should be issued for the burial without the formality of an inquest.

The arrival of the undertaker at the Church home found the child very much alive, and the burial arrangements were called off She had been struck by a bolt of lightning, which rendered her unconscious, but the mother had succeeded in reviving her. At latest accounts the child was quite well except suffering slightly from shock.

Are The Fall Fairs Useful

Toronto Star

In a letter which appeared in The Star on Saturday Mr. W. D. Watson, of Aurora, asked and discussed the question, 'Of What Use Are the Fall Fairs?" He stated as other correspondents have, that the fall fair of to-day is nothing like that of twenty-five years ago, when local horses and other live-stock were judged in a ring, and when the handiwork of the farmers' wives and daughters was on view. To-day the people come in their motors to see each other and a few exhibitors tote the same stuff from fair to fair and collect the prizes. He tells of a judge at one of these fairs last fall who judged the same quilt and pillows that he had judged eighteen years ago. Other correspondents tell of similar cases, especially in the fine arts and fancy work departments at rural fairs, where the same articles have been exhibited year after year, far and near, and gather prizes one generation after another.

Perhaps the rural fall fair is not as bad as it is painted, although those who criticize it most live close to it. There is of course, little use in offering prizes at fifty fairs for the best quilt if the same quilt travels around and takes the fifty prizes and goes on doing it for fifty years. The object in view in offering such prizes would be to encourage good quilt-making, and to encourage it locally.

No doubt much can still be said for the fall fairs, Even if certain breeders of live stock carry off the prizes in their respective classes at a whole string of these fairs, it can at least be claimed that the local public in each place may view these prize-winners and observe their good points. Even if the farmers' families motor to the fair as specators and not as exhibitors, yet they gather there, meet each other, see what is to be seen, and discuss what they want to talk about. The fact that they attend is the proof that the fall fair has its uses. But of course, it does not prove that the fall fair of today is the best that could be produced for what it costs, nor does it prove that something better of the kind, or something wholly different could not be set up. It is up to those who criticize to suggest ways and means by which better value can be got for the money and effort expended.

The Bank and the Ham

The sight of a juicy-looking brown ham hanging near the main entrance of the Commercial bank at Live Oak, Fla., not long ago brought up the question as to what the bank had to do with the ham—whether it was there as one of the visible tangible assets of the bank. The ham was a part of a hog grown in that county, cured and made ready by a packing company which had been recently added to the enterprises of Live Oak and while that particular ham did not represent any material asset, the industries suggested by it mean prosperity for the community and enlarged deposits for the bank. The bank is making public announcement that if farmers in the neighborhood are unable to buy pure-bred hogs the bank will loan them the money. These bankers are looking into the future and seeing what it will mean to their town to become industrially interested in hog raising on a large and profitable scale. So the ham, typical of millions of dollars of new wealth that will come to the county in the years to come, from the new industry, has a place along with the stocks and bonds among the visible, tangible assets of the bank.

Strike Affects School Books

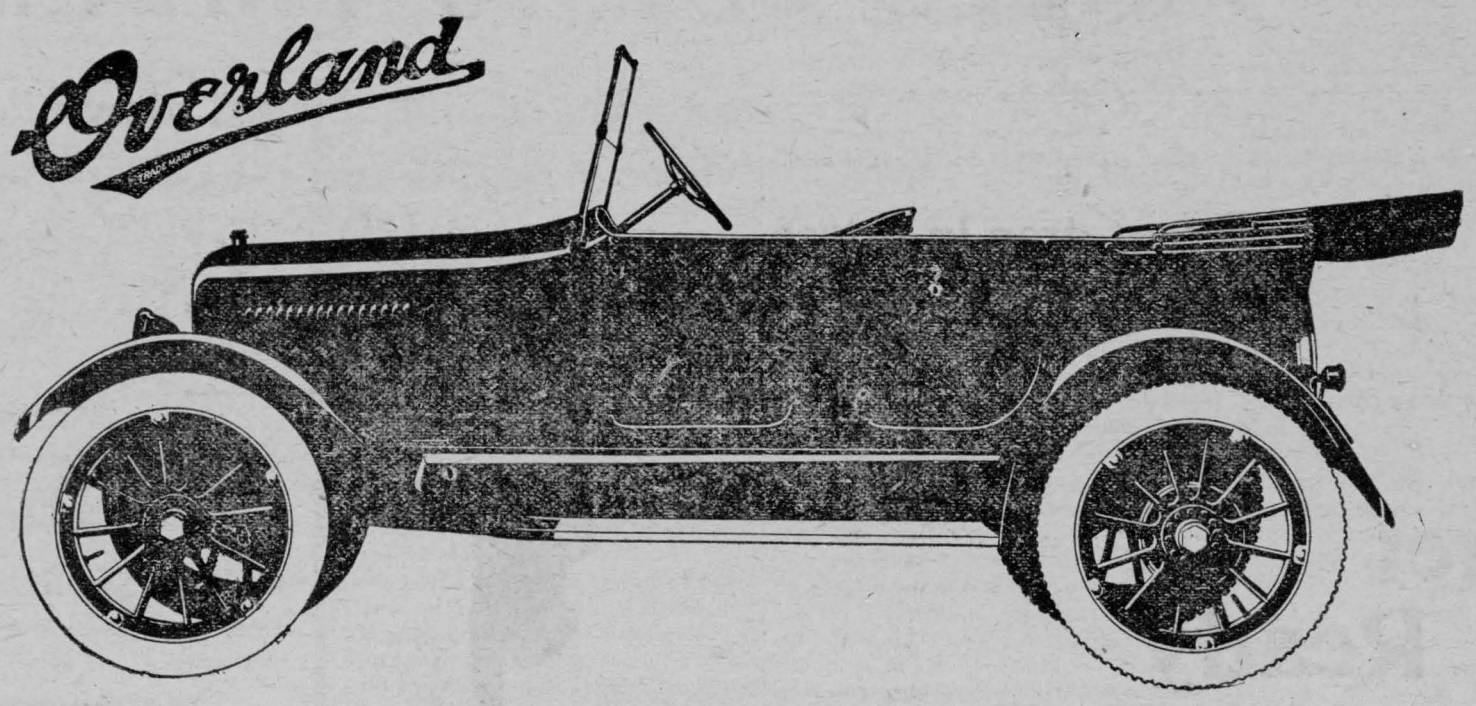

Hon. R. H. Grant, Provincial Minister of Education, stated that, owing to the fact that the printers' strike had not yet been settled, the delivery of a supply of text books for the schools may be held up temporarily. While the publishers of Ontario School books are affected by the strike he said, they had meet the department in an obliging and enterprising spirit. Some months ago efforts were made by the department to secure as large stock as possible of the text books most essential to the work of the schools. From the figures by the publishers within the last few days, the Minister of Education made it clear there would be sufficent school readers on hand to meet the requirements at the opening of the school term. It has been found impossible to complete the new geography for September term, and arrangements have been made to continue the old book for another year," the Minister explained. "The new Public school histories and arithmetics will be somewhat delayed by the strike. but arrangements will be made to furnish adequate supplies of both Public and High School books." Hon. Mr. Grant stated the new issue of the French reader and composition book for the High Schools will be ready for distribution in the schools early in the Autumn term.

Avoiding the Rush

"Any trouble getting a drink in your town?" asked the farmer.

"Not a bit," replied the city man. "Why the bootleggers are so thick that they have to wear badges to keep from selling booze to one another."

How Can We Meet The Shortage of Hay and Straw in Eastern Canada

(Experimental Farm Note)

The Experimental Farms Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa fully appreciates the very serious condition of affairs likely to result from crop shortage, realizing that live stock of Eastern Canada are in danger of depletion.

The following paragraphs contain certain general recommendations which it is proposed to deal with more in detail in the immediate future.

The general crop situation in Eastern Canada during the present season indicates the necessity of radical changes in the feeding of roughage this winter. How may roughage be saved? What are the substitutes, if any? It has been shown that live stock may be maintained on a ration of concentrates. This is neither pratical, economical, nor necessary, however. In very brief form the situation may be approached under the following headings.

Care in Feeding--Possibly in 75 per cent of our live stock farms hay and straw have been over fed. With the mows full and hay cheap, our live stock have been asked to obtain the nutrients necessary for their maintenance and growth by handling large quantities of crude fibre with a comparatively small percentage of nutrients. Under these particular conditions they have come through the winter at least fairly well. With hay and straw at a premium, how ever, the question rises to what extent can roughage be cut off the ration of the horse and cow and substituted with other feeds which are procurable. Very few feeders have ever had the occasion to weigh the hay which they are feeding to their live stock. The manger is filled and the operation repeated. When it is considered that the standard recomendation for the feeding of hay to horses is at the rate of 1 lb. to every 100 lbs. of live weight it will be appreciated that many horses in the past have, eaten hay for their own amusement only. When it is realized that 8 or 9 lbs of good clover hay and 4 or 5 lbs of oat straw is all the roughage needed for the milking cow supplied with a well balanced meal mixture and ensilage it will be evident that hay is in the very great majority of cases overfed to cattle. Even for the producing diary herd where no other roughage appears in the ration and where it is supplemented only by concentrates the very limit of hay that would be required would be 20 lbs. daily with say 8 or 9 lbs. of oat straw and this for the that is producing. It is safe to say that for the herd that is being held over for better times, and this will describe the situation in a great many districts, that cutting down the quantities used in past feeding practice a full 50 per cent and substituting with a few pounds of meal would not only effect a great saving in roughage, but incidentally would bring the cattle in question through in as good or better shape than had been the case where roughage was fed in unlimited quantities

More Silage and Roots—In many sections of Ontario particularly, hay may be substituted by the use of more ensilage and roots. Where succulent feed may be cut to the very minimum. These feeds will, however, not be available to any great extent in many parts of Quebec and the greater part of the Maritime Provinces, according to present indications.

Meal Substitutes—To replace one half of the ration where dry roughage has been calculated to form the whole ration of the cow, oats bran and oil cake are particularly to be recommended. Oats in itself is from 10 to 12 per cent, more valuable than bran from milk producing standpoint. In itself it has a fairly high fibre content. All through Eastern Canada, however, oats is a light crop and we will be forced to depend upon Western production. Wheat by-products should be fairly readily procurable. Oil cake and linseed by-products will be high in price, but will apparently be available fairly generally. Even at this high price it is doubtful if the feeder whose main desire is to cut down on roughage cannot afford to be without some linseed oil meal in the ration. With 10 lbs. of hay of fair quality, 4 or 5 lbs of straw and depending on the age and condition of the animal, a few pounds of a mixture of bran, 2 parts. oats, 2 parts, linseed oil meal, 1 part, production need not be looked for, but the animal will be well maintained. Corn from all indications will be one of the heaviest crops ever recorded in the United States. This means that ground corn may enter quite largely into our Canadian rations. A mixture of 4 parts bran, 2 parts corn, 2 parts oats and one part oil meal would be an excellent concentrated substitute for a roughage. Even bran and corn, as these concentrates are likely to be the most easily procured, could be fed, 4 parts bran, 2 parts corn.

The Use of Straw—Where roughage is scarce, straw cannot be afforded as a bedding material, particularly oat straw. It must practically all be fed. The practice of feeding cattle entirely on straw is of course not economical, but the ruminant must have a certain amount of crude fibre. They should not, however, be asked to obtain their energy from the comparatively low percentage of nutrients contained in straw. Nevertheless with some grain or concentrates supplied, straw forms an excellent crude fibre filler and in order that the digestive and excretory organs may function properly, straw may be made to take the place of much more valuable forms of roughage. It is safe to say that there will be very little bedding wasted this winter in many parts of the East. Sawdust and shavings are available in many places. There is no reason why considerable bedding material might not be gathered in the form of leaves in the fall. They have been utilized in the past.

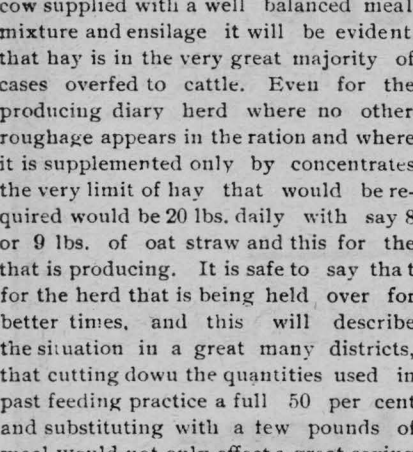

The Advisability of Cutting Hay and Straw and of Mixed Feeds.—By increasing the labor of feeding the cutting of roughage and by mixing say cut hay, cut straw, and whatever meal is being fed, there is little doubt that a considerable saving of roughage may be secured. Less energy is required to masticate. digest and assimilate this cut feed and where it is mixed the palatability is bettered or at least averaged. Under normal feeding practice the advisability of cutting roughage is doubtful in that the cow is fitted by nature to do this work herself. However, this winter the object is to save ronghage and the farmer who has facilities for cutting the roughage will find a result in saving. Can the feeding value of such a mixture be further improved?

Molasses.—A straight comparison of molasses with such feeds as bran, oats, shorts, corn meal, etc., shows the fact that molasses has a comparatively low feeding value. It is true that the sugars are of considerable value from their carbohydrate nature. However, as a conditioner or as an agent to render other feeds more palatable and on top of this with the very fair feeding value in the feed itself, molasses could be highly recommended to feed either mixed with cut feeds, distributed in the undiluted form over hay or straw, or diluted with water and sprinkled by the use of a watering can over the feed in the mangers. It is a wonderful relish and the use of comparatively small quantites of it is easily seen in the better condition of cattle. Apparently the feeding grades of molasses will be fairly readily procurable, particularly in the Maritime Provinces. Prices will be very considerably lower than have applied within the last few years and the comparatively small quantity that would be required would be such as to force the use of this material on the consideration of live stock feeders wherever it may be procured.

The Value of Chaff and Leaves.—In the past considerable quantities of the most valuable part of the plant have been wasted in the form of chaff, leaves, etc. These accumulate on the barn floor and too often find their way to the manure pile or barnyard direct. They must, of course, reach the barnyard by way of of the manger.

In general it is difficult to offer a recommendation where such a wide variety of cases and conditions arise. The main advice to be given, in conclusion, is after all extreme economy in feeding hay and straw. Weights and quantities are difficult matters to juggle with when speaking in a general way. The eye of the feeder is after all of proverbial merit. More or less experimentation will be required by the individual feeders accustomed to feed and replacing it by minimum quantities of concentrated or grain rations. If hay continues to increase in price and if grains and concentrates do not rise too quickly, it would actually be cheaper to cut down roughage 50 per cent. and replace with some of the grain mixtures recommended.

The man who does not take every step possible to hold over his stock, and who sacrifices his assets, will make an unqualified mistake. True it were distinctly better to dispose of, practically give away, a judiciously culled few, and winter the balance fairly well, than to stint all. Such a loss though immediate, may prove a blessing in disguise. After all the problem resolves itself into one of distribution and control of supply a question which may have to be handled by the provinces most affected. In Ontario, with not more than 10% of last years crop held over in the form of low grade hay and with a 60 to 65% normal crop this year there is no "bullish" movement to the hay market as yet.

The Sunset Signs

Shall we have rain? Will it be fine? Holiday questions, and important ones these. And as the barometer does not always answer as definetly as we would wish, why not study the sunsets, Nature's infallible weather indicators, and beat the barometer?

A yellow sunset is a sure sign of wet. The colour is there because condensed vapour refracts yellow. Such vapour may hold itself for a time, but it is bound to let itself out within twelve hours, or less, as rain.

A red sunset indicates, as most of us know, a fine day on the morrow. The vapours have not been condensed even by the cold of sunset, and except in extremely abnormal circumstance no condensation will occur for twenty-four hours at least, and so—no rain.

On the other hand a red sunrise means rain Vapour in the upper air is just on the point of being condensed. An hour or two and it will, because it must fall as rain.

A grey sunrise indicates a fine day. The grey—diluted white, really—shows that the higher regions of the air are free of moisture, and thus the feeble white light can pass through.

A grey sunset is more of an indication of the night's weather than the morrow's Rain will probably fall after midnight, and the sky tint at sunrise will show whether the condensation is finished. Red, more rain; grey, a fine day, yellow rain after midday.

A sunrise with no definite colouring shows unstable conditions. There may be local showers, varied with bursts of sunshine.

A copper sky, night or morning, is a bad sign. Thunderstorms, with heavy rain, will come.

Useless Change

A woebegone traveler in a small Georgia town approached the ancient colored man who operated the one-oar ferry across a dinky stream, and accosted him with:

"Uncle, I'm broke, and I got to get across the river. Will you trust me for it?"

"Fare's only 3 cents, boss."

"I know, but I haven't got the 3 cents. Uncle Mose placidly resumed his pipe.

"Boss," he decided, "if yo ain't got 3 cents you won't be no better off on dat side de ribber dan yo' is on dis."

A farmer whose orchard is near a school for boys was annoyed by the depredations of the youngsters. Finding two boys helping themselves to his apples, he escorted them off his premises, giving each a parting kick at the gateway. Next day the boys were loitering near the orchard again.

"What are you scamps hanging 'round here for?" he cried. "I told you yesterday what you would get if I caught you here again."

"Yes, sir, we remember," said the spokesman, "We haven't come for apples this time. We came to ask you to join our football team!"

Dwellings Badly Needed

The lack of dwellings in Chesterville at the present time is causing very serious inconvience, to say the least. Several dwellings are very badly needed right now. The change of ownership of two properties last week, which the new purchasers will occupy at once, leaves two households without homes. Mr. D. H. Jackson has bought from Mr. Howard Fulton the dwelling on Albert Street occupied by Mr. P. S. Boyd, principal of the Public School, and Mrs. Gibbons has sold her dwelling on Joseph street which it was hoped to secure for Mr. Harrison, the new principal of the High school. Two or three others are equally anxious to rent or buy homes here.
