SERVICE, to Us IMPLIES MUCH

Among the things that characterize our se vice are personal attention to every detail of the funeral arrangement, and little acts of thoughtfulness that serve to lessen the trying strain of the hours before and during the funeral. Quiet efficiency and smoothness are the result. That, we believe, is the kind of service that wins approval.

Calls to hospitals given prompt service.

HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

WILL BE DEMONSTRATED SATURDAY NIGHT

An automatic air controller for cars saves from 25 to 50 per cent. of gas.

A new invention has been discovered of giving a car more air when running fast which works automatically with the speed of the engine. This little machine has been tested a number of times and proved out very successfully, and it will be demonstrated on Main street Saturday night, so you can see for yourself how it works.

Scientists claim there is enough power in a gallon of gas to drive a car six hundred miles if it was properly developed.

Good Day's Sport But Small Crowd

Threatening clouds were no doubt responsiblbe for the rather small crowd attending the Victoria Day celebration on the Driving Park last Thursday afternoon. Those who did put in an appearance were treated to good entertainment during the afternoon when a program of athletic events, a horse race, an automobile race and a baseball game provided the bill-of-fare.

Morewood baseball club proved the victors over Chesterville in a six innings game by a score of 9 to 7 without any outstanding features.

Three horses were entered in a Classified Race which was won by Frank Parker's, Winchester, entry, with George Alguire's, Berwick, second, and H. J. McMahon's, Chesterville, third.

The automobile race against time was rather interesting on the muddy track and was won by Harry Henderson, with Sid Morris taking down second money.

A novelty race in which Ladies exhibited their skill at harnessing a horse and driving it around the track was won by Mrs. John Merkley, with Miss Laura O'Neil second.

In the athletic events the Boy Scouts of Chesterville First Troop were much in evidence, capturing the greater number of the prizes in the following events:

Half Mile Race, open—1, W. Tate; 2nd, D. B. McGee; 3, J. Morris.

Pole Vault, open—1, Jack McAvoy; 2, W. Tate; 3, R. Campderros.

During the afternoon Chesterville Citizens' band, resplendent in new uniforms, rendered a fine programme of the latest music under the direction of Bandmaster P. G. Hewitt.

AGED WOLFE ISLANDER DIES AFTER OPERATION

The death occurred of Archibald Staley, aged 83, farmer of Wolfe Island, who resided on the island all his life and always lived in the same house. Mr. Staley was operated on for appendicitis a few days ago, and created a sensation by partaking of toast and tea five minutes after being removed from the operating room.

CHURCH REOPENS AFTER RENOVATION

The re-opening of St. John the Baptist Anglican church at Iroquois took place on Whit Sunday, the day on which the church commemorates its birthday. For three Sundays the church has been closed and under-going redecoration.

The work has been beautifully carried out and the appearance indoors has been remarkably improved by artistic and emblematic treatment, indicating reverent and appropriate conception as well as a high degree of skill and taste.

The evening service was conducted by Rev. Archdeacon Carson, M.A., rector of St. James' church, Morrisburg. A number of Anglicans from South Mountain were in attendance at this service, among them the surpliced choir from that place, who took part in the music of this service.

Hotel Proprietor Dies At Iroquois

Iroquois, May 30.—The funeral of Andrew H. Hutchinson in the United Church yesterday afternoon was attended by a large number of friends. Service was conducted by Rev. M. I. Robinson.

Mr. Hutchinson, who returned from Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, a week ago after a serious operation, died at his home, King street, east, early Sunday morning.

Mr. Hutchinson was in his 43rd year was born on a farm in Mountain township. He came to Iroquois about 15 years ago, and built up a splendid hotel business, being proprietor first of the New Commercial, and latterly of the Grand Central Hotel. A man of genial and kindly manner, he was very popular with the travelling public as well as with the citizens.

In politics he was a Conservative, in religion a Methodist, now United. His health failing, he attempted farming a short distance west of the town on the highway, but finally had to retire from anything so strenuous.

Left to mourn his loss are his widow, formerly Miss Anabelle of Winchester, and a small son Gordon; five brothers, Stanley of Montreal, Oscar, Cardinal; Clarence, Flint, Mich.; Frank, Port Colborne, and Hugh of Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. John Barclay of Cardinal.

BAZAAR AT DUNBAR

ACCIDENT NARROWLY AVERTED

Friday evening a serious accident was very narrowly averted when a motor cyclist who was passing north over the bridge on Main street slipped and fell directly in front of the automobile of Mr. Laurence Doering as the latter was passing off of the bridge. It is believed the cyclist, who is a stranger here, as he tried to turn to the centre of the road at the end of the bridge struck the high planking which has been placed in the centre, his wheel skidding and throwing him to the roadway. Mr. Doering's prompt action in apply the efficient foot and emergency brakes on his Dodge car undoubtedly saved the man's life.

Chesterville Loses First League Game

The Dundas County Baseball league season was officially opened in Chesterville Tuesday evening in a game between Winchester and the home team which was won by the visitors 4 to 1 in a seven innings contest. The light rain a short time before the game made the footing slippery resulting in many spills and consequent errors. The game was played on the High school grounds on account of the Driving Park grounds not yet being in condition.

16-YEAR-OLD IRISH LAD VANISHES FROM FARM

Campbellford, May 29.—Police are investigating the disappearance of Norman Malcolson, 16-year-old Irish lad, who vanished from a farm in Rawdon Township some time between Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. The youth is a native of Belfast, Ireland, and came to Canada under the immigration scheme on May 20. He was to be employed by Fred Rutherford, but later arrangements were made for him to work for another farmer. The lad was to be taken to his new place of employment Wednesday. His wallet, containing among other papers, his birth certificate, passport and $4, was found on a stump beside the road, near Bonar Law, by Isaac Lane. It was turned over to the Campbellford police, who are investigating.

Comumnication with the Montreal immigration authorities has not yet revealed any trace of the missing youth.

Cheesemakers Meet

The first meeting of the Avonmore Cheesemakers' Club was held on Tuesday evening of last week at Goldfield Produce Co., factory, with a very large attendance of both makers and patrons.

Mr. Geo. Barr of Toronto, along with Mr. Fawcett, district instructor, were the speakers of the evening.

Mr. Barr gave a very interesting address along the line of both cheese and butter, telling how the butter position of Canada had advanced in the last few years, also exceedingly good advice regarding the appearance of the maker and his assistants in a clean and neat uniform.

If factories and makers were kept in a proper state of cleanliness it would have a great influence on having the milk in a first class condition, as the farmer would do his best to keep up with the appearance of the factory.

Mr. MacArthur received many compliments on the appearance of the factory, and the plant certainly showed that he had done some work since coming to Goldfield, although a stranger, he came with an exceedingly strong recommend, and we feel sure he is worthy of such a recommendation. The factory was decorated with potted plants, which added much to the appearance of the room.

After the business of the meeting was over the ladies served lunch of cake and sandwiches with coffee, which all seemed to enjoy very much.

Mr. Thos. Foley, one of the directors, moved a vote of thanks to the ladies and especially to Mrs. MacArthur, for having taken such an interest in providing the refreshments, after Mr. Fawcett tendered the vote of thanks to the ladies, the meeting adjourned to meet next month at Strathmore factory.

The Club is for the advancement of the cheese and butter makers and will certainly be a great help to the makers and trust it will be the means of more first grade cheese for Stormont County.—One who was present.

Rate's Too Low.

Teacher: "What is the interest on $500 for one year at 2 per cent? Moses, pay attention."

Moses: "For 2 per cent. I'm not interested."

BERWICK WOMEN'S INSTITUTE ANNUAL MEETING

At the annual meeting of the Berwick Women's Institute, which was held at the home of Mrs. W. Stark, Mrs. K. Foster was elected president for the coming year, and Mrs. Alex Smith 1st vice president. Mrs. W. Henry was elected secretary and Mrs. Chas. Grey treasurer. There was also a sick and flower committee, program committee and directors appointed for the coming year. After the meeting closed with the singing of God Save the King, lunch was served by the hostess. Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. J. Rady, June 14th.

Maniac In A Plane

Ordinary hazards of flying are sufficient to keep a pilot fairly occupied, but Harry Anderson of Roseville, Mich., encountered a most unusual one a few days ago which might well have turned his brain to correspond with that of his passenger.

In his ordinary routine of taking persons on airplane flights for hire, he was engaged by one Clarence Frechett of Detroit to make a trip to Pontiac. As they neared their destination, Frechett seized a hammer and began striking Anderson over the head, knocking the pilot unconscious. After the plane had dived about 1,800 feet Anderson recovered consciousness in time to make a very rough landing in which both were injured, but not seriously.

Appropriately, the landing happened to be made in the grounds of the Pontiac insane asylum, which was a very suitable desination for Frechett, who was raving crazy.

The moral of this seems to be that when piloting a plane for a stranger it would be a wise precaution to see that he is securely shackled before taking off. Or the pilot should wear heavy armor.

Ducking A Thunderbolt.

"Who's that behind us, Fred?" asked the man at the wheel as a car hooted.

"Only a flapper in a roadster," Fred answered.

The driver hurled his wheel over, swerved the car off the road, crashed through a fence, and turned turtle.

"Thank heaven we escaped!" he muttered.

Radio Branch Work Day And Night To Reduce Interference

No other country in the world is doing for its radio listeners what Canada has been doing for the past three years. The Radio Branch of the Federal Department of Marine and Fisheries, has a permanent force with a fleet of cars hunting "interference" for the many radio listeners from Halifax to Vancouver. In addition, the radio inspectors and their men perform countless other duties to enable the listener-in to get full value from his set.

Typical of the divisions is that with headquarters at Toronto, under Divisional Inspector S. J. Ellis. On the wall of Mr. Ellis' office is a large map of Central Ontario dotted wih colored pins. These pins denote sources from which complaints have been received concerning radio reception. When these are recorded they are turned over to the nearest "radio-interference-car" which works day and night, carrying specially trained investigators.

In Mr. Ellis' division there are two Oakland sedans on this work. Each carries an aerial on the roof, and built inside is a complete receiving set. A portable set is also carried for use where it is impossible to take the car. The full equipment includes portable typewriter, files, despatch case and all necessary articles. A similarly equipped car, formerly used in Ontario, is doing radio duty out of St. John, N.B.

The cars work out as far as 500 miles from their headquarters cleaning up interference complaints. Although the car stationed at Toronto, has gone 14,000 miles in ten months, this gives only a small indication of the service it has rendered, for often it is necessary to stop at every telegraph or telephone or electric-light pole in search of faulty insulators, loose wires or other causes of trouble. An average of 160 complaints a month are received in the Toronto Divisional office.

As some of these come from places far up the Ferguson highway, in Northern Ontario, the radio car covers a beat extending to Cochrane, 500 miles from Toronto, cleaning up interference on the way. Northern officials of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission are instructed in the same work, since the car's far northern trips are necessarily infrequent. A number of northern radio enthusiasts also try to hunt their own trouble, and in this respect some help, of course, may be given by correspondence.

Other countries of the world, Mr. Ellis states, are becoming interested in Canada's radio intereference work and are continually making inquiries about Canadian methods. Every person in Canada owning a radio receiving set is required to pay a license fee of one dollar, which covers the above service. England, according to Mr. Ellis, charges a license fee of about $2.50, but all this goes for broadcasting and not for interference work. Germany charges $12 but does not give any service such as is provided in this country by the "radio-interference cars."

Burglars Active At Smiths Falls and Perth

The thieves who entered four business establishments in Perth on Sunday morning were evidently bent on cutting a wide swath in this district. Smith Falls police stated that four local business houses had been entered early Sunday morning and it is presumed that the entire series of robberies was the work of one gang.

Of the four Smiths Falls firms who were robbed the general store of Williams and Vanluven suffered most from the epidemic of burglaries. Members of the firm placed their loss at between $40 and $50, most of the loss being in stock taken by the burglars.

Entrance to this store was gained through a side door, the robbers breaking a pane of glass and opening the lock from the inside. Finding only small change and stamps in the till the thieves emptied several boxes of shoes, dry goods, etc., and the loss will total at least $40.

Martin Brothers service station was also entered by the burglars but they took only about $3 from this firm.

A grocery store near Williams and Vanluvens shop was also entered but the thieves were evidently disappointed for no money was available and they did not touch the stock.

Patterson's garage near the centre of the town was also visited by the burglars, who entered through a rear window and suffered to the extent of three or four dollars which was taken from a small strong box in the safe. The safe was not locked and the burglars broke into the strong box to find the small amount of money.

Police are working on the case but have little to work on. Apparently no one saw the thieves, though all of the robbed stores were situated near the heart of the town and the thieves have probably made a clean get-away.

An Irishman was told one morning by his wife that there had been a terrible thunderstorm during the night. "Well, why in the world didn't you wake me up?" he demanded. "You know I can't sleep when it thunders!"

5 of the reasons why McLAUGHLIN-BUICK will serve you Better and save you More!

NOT only does today's McLaughlin-Buick excel in smart, low, dashing lines—in vivid new color harmonies—in luxurious upholsteries and appointments—but it sweeps far ahead of its field in those vital engineering factors which mean greater comfort—greater performance—greater economy—and greater value.

In Most Cars— the springs have to serve a double function—to drive the car and to cushion the load.

In McLaughlin-Buick— the springs have only one function—to cushion the load—and naturally are designed to provide much finer riding qualities.

In Most Cars— water, mud and dust can work their way into moving parts causing excessive wear, engine stalling and other troubles.

In McLaughlin-Buick— the Sealed Chassis and Triple-Sealed Engine absolutely prevent these troubles. All vital parts are enclosed in dirt-proof, dust-proof, water-tight housings.

In Most Cars— vibration is merely dampened by means of additional bearings or other inadequate devices.

In McLaughlin-Buick— the scientifically designed Valve-in-Head Engine, counterbalanced crankshaft and finely balanced units throughout result in performance vibrationless beyond belief.

In Most Cars— quality is often sacrificed for price, or prices advanced to permit fine quality.

In McLaughlin-Buick— tremendous demand makes possible both high quality and moderate price—and therefore unrivaled value.

In Most Cars— the dealer's delivered price, including the delivery or handling charge, to the buyer—is not rigidly fixed by the factory behind the car.

In McLaughlin-Buick— the lowest possible delivered price, including the delivery or handling charge is definitely established by the McLaughlin-Buick factory. Thus McLaughlin-Buick quality is provided to McLaughlin-Buick owners everywhere at lowest cost.

Why He Went Crazy

This story with various modifications, has been doing duty for a good while, but for the benefit of the younger generation who have not chanced to run across it we tell it again.

It concerns an inmate of a lunatic asylum, who on being asked by a visitor how he got that way, replied:

"It all started when I married a widow with a grown-up daughter. Then my father, being a widower, married the daughter. That made my step-daughter my step-mother, and my father became my step-son; my wife also becoming the mother-in-law of her father-in-law.

"Then my step-mother had a son, who was my brother, being my father's son but as the boy was the grandson of my wife, he was also my grandson.

"Then my wife and I had a son. My father's wife is my son's half-sister and also his grandmother. Now, it is easy to see that my father became my step-son by marrying my step-daughter. Therefore, being my father's father, I am my own grandfather—"

The visitor stopped the lunatic at this point, thoroughly satisfied as to why he went crazy.

Training A Daughter

Among the replies received in response to a request for a brief plan for training a daughter, a magazine received the following from a successful mother:

Teach your daughter to value a man, not by wealth, looks or family, but by his character and what he himself has done.

Discourage her in looking upon men as suitors until she is at least 18.

Give her an education and keep her employed part of the time during vacation.

Make her home pleasant, so that she will not be anxious to leave it for an inferior one.

Encourage her to attend church, Sunday school, club meetings and other places where the right kind of people may be met, urging her to be particularly careful in choosing her girl associates.

These are all excellent suggestions, even though they do not always secure the desired results, and the mother who follows them will have done about all that is possible to do for her daughter.

SCRUBBING

Most of us do more scrubbing than is necessary. For instance, we constantly clean the silver with polisher, when all that is needed to keep the silver bright for weeks and weeks, is to wash it in very hot, sudsy water and dry it with a perfectly cleantowel. Many excellent housewives use towels that are slightly greasy and this smudges the silver and it never looks well.

Glass very often suffers from the same type of towel to which we have referred when speaking of silver and all sorts of powders that are none too good for the hands are used in washing it to make it bright. All that is needed is soapy water that is free from grease and a towel that is immaculate. By the way, many do not know that a tumbler, or anything that has contained milk, is best rinsed first with cold water before beginning to wash it.

There is no need for scouring nickel as we do very often. Wash it with good soapy water and take care to rub it dry.

Add a little borax or ammonia to the soapy water with which you wash the enamelled table-top and similar materials. In case there is a very hard and dirty spot, a very little fine scouring powder goes a long way. Coal oil is one of the best things for removing that apparently indelible grayness in the bathtub.

PLANT DAHLIAS IN JUNE

June is the ideal month for planting Dahlias, either tubers or green plants. Tubers should be planted six inches deep, on the side with the eye up and close to the stake. Green plants should have the first joint covered. If the soil is at all heavy it may be wise to only partially fill the whole at first, adding soil as the dahlias grow. Where the ground is very heavy or wet, shallower planting may be practiced and the plants hilled up. This is a poor plan on dry soil though, because the hills shed the water. It is advisable when possible to set out started plants on a cloudy or wet day or in the evening.

Cooks Potatoes 300 Ways.

With a model of the airship, Los Angeles, made of potato souffle, Randolphe E. Dubois, of Montreal, formerly of Vancouver, won an international chefs' contest staged last week at Ste. Anne de Beaupre. The new "king" claims 300 different ways of cooking potatoes. He faced 328 competitors.

He—"You say you are making me a necktie out of one of your old skirts?"

She—"No, silly. I'm making me a skirt out of one of your old neckties."

Business Is Business.

A priest offered 25 cents to the boy who could tell him who was the greatest man in history.

"Christopher Columbus," answered the Italian boy.

"George Washington," answered the American boy.

"St. Patrick," shouted the Jewish boy.

"The quarter is yours," said the priest, 'but why did you say' St. Patrick?"

"Right down in my heart I knew it was Moses," said the Jewish boy, "but business is business."

EGG PRICES

The official Govenment Market Report of May 8th, says: "The relative scarcity of eggs still continues in all parts of the country. Both Montreal and Toronto are finding it difficult to secure adequate supplies and competition is keen especially in Extras. While storing is going on freely stocks on hand are light compared with last year. The figures of the Montreal Board of Ttrade for May 1st showed approximately 27,000 cases of eggs in storage as compared with 55,000 on the same date last year."

This condition of the egg markets at the season when prices are naturally lowest surely means that there will be more money made from poultry next year than there ever was before.

It All Depends On Who Is Killed

Traffic accidents kill a few thousands of men, women and children annually, causing the setting up of extensive safeguards for the protection of human life. A citizen is killed by assassins in a foreign land, and diplomatic relations between two nations are strained and the indignation of millions is aroused to the point of violent outbreak. An epidemic of infantile paralysis breaks out with the resultant loss of life of children, and the nation organizes every resource to combat the disease. But the germ-carrying insects, which yearly cause the death of millions of human lives and destroys quantities of man's food supplies, attract the concern of one or two governmental departments, provoke an occasional "swat the fly" or "clean-up" campaign and disturb not the public's peace of mind. The mosquito and fly are the most destructive enemies of man. They convey malaria, sleeping sickness, typhoid and other deadly diseases. Other insects destroy some crops and contaminate food supplies, and the only defence the public makes against his most powerful and destructive enemies is to screen in his house and spray his fields and orchards.—Smiths Falls Record-News.

Drive Into Store Without Leaving Car

How would you like to drive your automobile into a grocery store and make your purchases without being forced to wait for a clerk and without even leaving your seat?

Think of the pleasure of shopping minus the drawback of hunting a place to park and less the discomfort of carrying bundles!

This is what the people of Louisville, Ky., are doing at the "Automarket," the only store of its kind in the world.

The "Automarket" is to the ordinary grocery what the escalator is to the stairway.

The front much resembles any store except for the wide doors on each side. As a car moves up to the entrance, the door automatically opens.

Inside, the automobile is guided into a cement track, just wide enough for the wheels. The customer need worry no longer about his guiding—that, too, becomes automatic.

The groceries, canned goods, fresh vegetables and bakery products are displayed on large disk-shaped shelves which line the left side of the roadway. These shelves rotate slowly, allowing the customer to see everything on each shelf before he purchases.

Beneath the shelves is a roller-bearing track along which the customer drops his packages.

The drive is in the shape of a huge "U," at the bottom of which is a turntable which places the automobile in just the right position to continue its journey up the other side.

Pedestrians may walk along the inside of the row of rotary shelves and make their purchases at the same time that motorists are selecting their goods from the other side.

Washed and Dirty Eggs A Menace

The elimination of washed and dirty eggs would mean a saving of thousands of dollars annually to egg producers of Canada. This is the opinion expressed by officers of the Canadian Produce Association, and the Cooperative Marketing Association in Eastern Canada.

At this season the average is as high as 3 dozen soiled eggs to a case, which means a loss on each dozen in the case of from 1½ to 2 cents. This covers only the dirty eggs, those that have been washed are a greater menace to the egg trade. The loss from washed eggs can only be determined when eggs are removed from storage.

One prominent authority says "we have occasionally recandled eggs out of storage in which a large proportion of eggs showed black rot, this in all probability resulting from washing the eggs. If only one or two shippers washed their dirty eggs and these were placed in cold storage, they could do untold harm to the reputation of our eggs. This at once reacts on the producers in the form of lower average prices."

As a general rule "clean nest and clean houses mean clean eggs". After taking all possible precautions if dirty eggs are still found they should be used for home cooking.

Until a few years ago very little attention was paid to the production of eggs in Ireland. The hens were not properly housed and little or no proxision was made in the way of clean nests, with the result that all Irish eggs were stained or dirty. During past two or three years this condition has been changed entirely. Clean houses and clean nests have been provided, and the Irish eggs are commanding practically top prices on the English market.

Any temporary advantage in price which the individual producer may get by removing dirt from eggs by washing is more than offset by the bad effect such eggs have on markets as a whole. Individual producers should realize that they are part of a hundred million dollar industry, and that Canada's reputation as an egg exporter depends in large measure upon the care exercised by the individual in the marketing of a high grade product.

The Beauty of Spring in the Land of the Maple Leaf

Spring is a resurrection of nature, and human nature also awakens to new hopes. A story of a benign season is given when the rising of the sap signalizes the budding of the tree, when the rivers sing a song of freedom and the birds add their songs to the voices of little children in streets or country lanes.

Though Spring and beauty can be found anywhere, it is in the country that it is ideal. Here one can watch the tilling of the soil, the plowing and planting that the earth may yield for the needs of man. Nova Scotia is delightful, for there the bustle and stress of our modern era does not exist. It is a part of that ancient country of Acadia, and it is one of the most beautiful provinces in the Dominion of Canada. There is no part of Nova Scotia more permeated with poetic legend and historic lore than the Annapolis Valley, Windsor, Grand Pre and Gaspereau. They were centres of events in the early history of the North American continent, for French explorers visited this section as far back as 1604.

Quebec Province in spring is equally lovely, and especially the rural districts near the fortified Old World city of Quebec. Old Norman farm houses sprawl along country streets for miles. Wayside shrines are many in this devout province. Glimpses are had through quaint courtyards or narrow galleries of women at their spinning wheels. Here, as in sections of Nova Scotia, time is apparently not fought for as elsewhere.

Quebec is lovely in May, especially during the Canadian Folk Song and Handicraft Festival, to be held this year from May 24-28. At the Chateau Frontenac one is transported into past decades, seeing the work of the habitants as they ply their shuttles of distaffs. The musical programmes are those of the early French Canadians, habitant melodies, brought over originally by the French of early days.

It is refreshing in this age to have a little of the peace of the old world, and Quebec is impregnated with an atmosphere of romance and pastoral beauty. Spring days quicken the wanderlust, and with the first notes of the meadow lark and robin the country attracts, and "Only the call of the long white road to the far horizons wall" lures and beckons to the unknown places, beautiful in Spring.

TWENTY-EIGHT GOLD EAGLES

The first settlers of Maine found plenty of salmon both in the Kennebec and Penobscot rivers. During the spring and early summer vast schools of them came up from the sea. The old squire has told me that in his young days he used to drive across country to the "Fork" of the Kennebec for a load of salmon, which afforded the whole neighborhood a very agreeable change from the ordinary winter fare. A young neighbor, Jonathan Edwards, went with him. They hitched two strong, long-legged horses that they owned, one ahead of the other, to a thorough-brace wagon with the sides boxed up so as to hold eight or ten hundredweight of fish.

They did not have to angle for the salmon. Their fishing outfit consisted briefly of a four pronged fork and a bushel basket. As the water of Salmon Stream, a tributary of the Kennebec, fell in May the pools at the foot of the shallow rapids would be packed with salmon that were unable to ascend the stream farther. While Jock would enter the foot of a pool and beat about with a pole to keep the fish from escaping downstream, Joe would wade into the water with a fork and throw the fish out on the bank. Though it sounds to me like a fish story, the old squire has told me that sometimes and at some pools he could throw out enough salmon in half an hour to fill the wagon!

While the salmon were running bears were very numerous at the Forks. All the bears of the surrounding wilderness seemed to congregate there to feast off the fish. By stealing up quietly at any of the pools, a hunter could easily get a shot at them. At that season, however, a bearskin was not worth much; nor was their flesh in favor so soon after they had left their winter dens.

For six or seven successive years with the same two horses hitched tandem—Jack and Jill, they called them—the two boys, Joe and Jock, made the trip for salmon. Two days were required for the drive over to the Forks, and the same number was required for the return. Only once did the boys have any trouble or anything like a serious adventure, and that was on the last trip that they made. Then they brought back no salmon and indeed had to walk home.

The time was the period of the famous northeastern boundary controversy between the United States and Great Britain, a dispute that had been going on for some years. When Andrew Jackson was President for a wonder the warlike old personage was in favor of accepting the decision of the King of the Netherlands, who had been appointed as arbitrator, and of relinquishing a large slice of Maine territory to New Brunswick. But the people stood out against the decision. Their legislature voted a war credit of eight hundred thousand dollars and ordered a draft of ten thousand men from the Militia to defened the frontier. Volunteers also were numerous, for the war spirit was rampant. People talked freely of a force of fifty thousand men.

Meanwhile the heads of government both at Washington and at London were doing what they could to calm the tempest and arrange a peaceful settlement. Both sides appointed agents and commissioners to proceed to the region in dispute and investigate the opposing claims and determine where the boundary ought to be as stated in the treaty of 1783. The difficulty was that the makers of the treaty had known almost nothing of the country described in it and had made use of terms liable to misunderstanding.

The President finally sent Winifield Scott, the hero of Lundy's Lane, to take command of the military forces in Maine and if possible to act as mediator. Soon afterwards the two countries effected a settlement and averted bloodshed. Later it became the fashion to make light of the controversy and to ridicule it as the "bloody Aroostook war." But it is a fact that for a time the two countries were periously near a third war, a war that probably would have devastated all of Maine and have laid her coast towns in ashes.

It was while the boundary dispute was at its height that the then young old squire and his neighbor Jock made their last trip to the Forks for salmon. They had filled their wagon and shot a bear, which they had lashed on top of the load, and with Jack and Jill trotting smartly down the river road toward Waterville were on their way home, when at a roadside tavern they fell in with an official party consisting of a government land agent and two assistants, who were travelling in great haste to the Aroostook region. At the tavern there were also a sheriff and his posse who had come along in pursuit of a man who had shot a neighbor in a dispute over a line fence.

With the agent, whose name the boys heard was Greenlaw, was a recruiting sergeant who was enlisting river drivers for the expected war on the eastern frontier. Eighteen of the wild rough fellows had just come down the Kennebec, and were cock-a-whoop to fight the redcoats. Others also were joining the party, and there were more men than the teams could carry; the agent was making efforts to purchase horses. Noticing that Jack and Jill were good roadsters, he promptly asked the boys to sell them.

"No, sir-ee," Jock replied with promptness. "We have seventy miles to go. How would we get home with our load of salmon?"

"I will give you two hundred dollars for those horses," the agent replied. "I am in a great hurry to get on from here. I will buy your wagon and the fish and that bear too."

Now from thirty to forty dollars was the price of a likely young horse at that time; and Jack and Jill were twelve or thirteen years old. Therefore when Greenlaw offered thirty dollars for the wagon, thirty more for the salmon and the bear and ten dollars apiece for the harnesses the boys were a good deal astounded.

"I guess it's government money all right," Joe whispered, "or he wouldn't be so mighty flush with it."

They accepted the agent's offer, and he made out a bill of sale for them and then paid them in new, bright gold eagles,—twenty-eight of them,—the first gold money that the boys had ever seen. They had to read the words "ten dollars" on the coins before they really knew what they were.

The tavern keeper and his wife stood looking on. "Oh, ain't those pretty!" the woman exclaimed.

The boys tied the gold in Joe's pocket handkerchief and put it at the bottom of his inside coat pocket.

"You are rich!" the tavern keeper's wife said and laughed. "See that you don't let any of those river drivers get that away from you. They are a rough gang."

The advice seemed good. The drivers, several of whom were intoxicated, were roistering about the They had taken the bear from the load and, setting the carcass astride a pole, began to race up and down with it, thrusting it in at the tavern door and whooping like Indians and making a great uproar.

Though the land agent and the sheriff had asked for lodging in the tavern, Jock and Joe determined to walk on after supper. There was a bright, full moon just rising, and they hoped to get as far as Waterville. They did not at all like the noisy, drunken crowd at the tavern.

While the boys were at supper, however, the landlord's wife came and whispered to them that she had saved a room for them. "I'm going to put you in my best room," she said. "It is the one next my own. You will be safe and comfortable there."

She sat down beside them while they ate, and talked constantly about herself and her husband and her little boy, Sim, whom she called in to show them. "Sim is just getting over the whooping cough," she said. "He still whoops like an Injun every morning. Show them how you can whoop, Sim." Whereupon the little fellow stood off and began to whoop and cough till he almost lost his breath altogether.

The boys set the woman down as queer and loquacious, but nevertheless they decided to pass the night at the tavern. In the course of an hour or so they retired to the room that she had assigned to them, and Joe hung his coat with the gold in it on the bedpost close beside his pillow. Although there was no lock on the door, he thought that the money would be safe enough there. Few house doors had locks in those days. Despite the racket that was going on outside Joe and Jock were soon asleep.

They slept soundly, but a while after midnight Jock, who was sleeping on the far side of the bed, wakened suddenly. He thought he had heard some one in the room. The night was quiet, and the moonlight was shining brightly in the window. He peeped over Joe, who was snoring comfortably, and saw some one standing beside the bed. It was a woman, the tavern keeper's wife! For a few moments she stood there, then stole out.

Suddenly Jock thought of the gold. He slid out of bed and, going on tiptoe round to the opposite side, felt in Joe's coat pocket. The gold was gone! He hastened to the door and looked out. The light of a candle was shining through a crack in the door of the next room. He went softly to the door and peeped in at the crack. The woman was crouched on the brick hearth of a fireplace beside which she had set the candle. Jock was only a boy and so did not open the door and speak to her as he should of done; instead he tiptoed back and waked Joe.

When Joe had searched his pocket he was as confused and nonplused as Jock. They stole softly out to peep through the crack of the door together, but by that time the light had disappeared.

Older and more experienced men no doubt would have made a stir at once. But Jock and Joe felt reluctant to raise an alarm. It was hard for them to believe that the tavern keeper's wife, who had seemed so kind and friendly, had really stolen their money. They sat on the side of the bed, whispering about the matter in great anxiety till daybreak, when they began to hear people stirring in the house. Then they went out, and as soon as Greenlaw appeared they told him of their loss and of what Jock had seen.

The agent was incredulous at first, but, after hearing the particulars and going to see how the rooms were situated, he began to believe that the tavern keeper's wife was the culprit. "I thought she looked like a queer piece," he said. "We shall inform the sheriff, and then we'll talk with her husband and see if he knows anything about it. I don't believe he does," the agent added "He seems like a rather good sort of man."

They found the tavern keeper at the barn and told him that they suspected his wife of stealing. The man did not appear so indignant or surprised as they had expected he would. He listened without speaking to all they had to say. Then, "It may be that she took it," he replied, and he admitted that she had taken things before. "I don't think she can help it," he said. "But come into the house, and we shall see what we can find out.'

They went into the room where Jock had seen the woman with the candle; it proved to be the room in which the tavern keeper and his wife slept. The woman was in the kitchen at the time. After glancing about, her husband called her. She rushed in, looking a good deal flurried. First her husband, then the sheriff, bade her give up the money that she had stolen from the boys. "They saw you take it," the sheriff said sternly. "No use for you to deny it."

But deny it the woman did most vehemently and tearfully. "I never touched it!" she cried. "It was some of those river drivers!"

"You may as well own up," the sheriff said. "Tell us where it is."

"Yes, Pheomy, you had better tell us where you put it," the tavern keeper said to her in a sober tone.

Still she stoutly denied any knowledge of the money.

But another much-interested spectator had now joined the group—little Sim, whom the talk had wakened in his cot near the bed. He had heard what his father had said to his mother and now, slipping out of bed, toddled forward. "I know where 'tis, daddy," he said. "'Tis down there." He pointed a chubby finger at the brick hearth of the fireplace.

Before he could say more his mother was upon him. She caught him up, shook him, and boxed his ears. But they had all seen where the little fellow pointed and now noticed that one of the bricks was loose. They pried it up, and there in the cavity beneath it lay the gold in Joe's handkerchief. Nor was that all which the cache contained. Below the gold lay a watch and chain, a purse with silver money, two silver spoons and a little case containing gold-bowed spectacles. Former travellers stopping at the tavern as well as Joe and Jock had suffered losses.

The woman was quick with an excuse, a lame one. "I only took it to keep the river drivers from getting it away from them,' she said. "I was going to give it back to them after breakfast."

The agent and the sheriff laughed. "Madam, you ought to answer to law for this," the sheriff said to her. "If you two boys," he added, "will go back to Skowhegan and appear against this woman, I will take her in custody.

But Jock and Joe wished to hasten home and, now that they had recovered the money were not so desirious as they should have been perhaps of having their queer hostess punished. Besides, the land agent declared that he was in far too great a hurry to stop.

As for the tavern keeper, he said very little; he looked sad as well as ashamed of what had occurred at his house. It may be that his wife was what psychologists call a kleptomaniac That view of the matter seems to be the most charitable.

The boys went on from the tavern afoot and reached home two days later with their twenty-eight gold eagles—but with no salmon.

"A LITTLE BIT OF LOVE"

Do you know the world is dying for a little bit of love?
Everywhere we hear the sighing of
a little bit of love;
For the love that rights a wrong, fills the heart with hope and song;
They have waited, oh, so long, for—a little bit of love.

From the poor of every city for a
little bit of love,
Hands are reaching out in pity, for a
little bit of love;
Some have burdens hard to bear, some have sorrows we should share;
Shall they falter and despair, for a little bit of love?

Down before their idols falling for a
little bit of love,
Many souls in vain are calling for a
little bit of love;
If they die in sin and shame, someone
surely is to blame,
For not going in His name with a
little bit of love.

While the souls of men are dying for a
little bit of love,
While the children, too, are crying for a little bit of love.
Stand no longer idly by; we can help them if we try;
Just by saying "Here am I," with a little bit of love.

Nesting Season.

"Mama and Papa think we ought to wait at least a month before getting married."

"Aw, I hate these long engagements."

"So do I—but we have to give them enough time to find a larger apartment."

The recent installation of Mack Tractors and Lapeer Trailers by the Dominion Transport Company Limited, for the transfer of l.c.l. freight between the Canadian Pacific Place Viger freight sheds and their outlying terminals in this city, was demonstrated before E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President, and other executives of the railway outside the Windsor Street Station.

Mr. Beatty was specially interested in the mechanism by which the trailer is connected up with the tractor. This is done by the simple operation of backing the tractor slowly into the trailer. Uncoupling is actuated from the tractor by the simple moving of a lever. The President had these operations performed several times and expressed his appreciation of their simplicity.

Coupling and uncoupling of the trailer is operated by means of a mechanism known as a fifth wheel which is bolted to the tractor frame and upon which the front end of the trailer rides, interlocks itself mechanically with the trailer through the use of railroad type double locking jaw couplers. Brakes of both the tractor and trailer are applied individually and separately by the driver and are at all times under his control. Were it possible for a trailer to become disconnected from a tractor at any time when in motion, the brakes of the former are automatically applied bringing it almost immediately to a stop.

Through the use of a "Dolly" which consists of a fifth wheel mounted on a pair of road wheels, two or more attendant trailers may be attached to one tractor thereby forming a tractor train and by so doing much increasing the total load capacity. With the addition of the extra trailer wheels the total weight of the vehicle and load is divided over a greater road surface tire area, thus overcoming the deteriorating effect of heavily loaded trucks on the highways and city streets.

The capacity of the trailers used is 10,000 to 15,000 pounds with an inside dimension of approximately 16 feet long, 6½ feet wide and 7 feet high. The tractor is of the internationally known "Bull Dog" type and its draw-bar pull is far in excess of anything that will be required of it, but was deemed advisable to use in view of the heavy road conditions prevailing in Montreal during the winter months.

While the tractor is of standard Mack design, only the chassis is so in the case of the trailer, the body being built and finished in the Transport company's plant in Montreal. The body is of oak throughout with a sheet metal covering and the whole equipment is highly finished in dark blue with red wheels and undergear, the standard colors of the company, making a very handsome appearance. The centre side panels or sliding doors of the trailer as well as the rear doors and front panel are decorated with the Maple Leaf and Beaver, insignia of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The doors of the tractor bear the same crest. The Dominion Transport Company have at present nine trailers in operation and will increase this number to twelve in the next few weeks. Similar automotive equipment has been ordered for use in Toronto by the company.

Mack Tractors and Lapeer trailers represent the latest and most efficient method of handling freight. It consists of spotting one or more trailers at strategic points where freight is to be picked up. When the trailer is loaded the tractor calls for each in turn, taking them to their respective destinations under what is known as the Shuttle System. By this method no time is lost by full trailers waiting to be moved, as they are operated on an hourly schedule between each of the outlying freight depots and the central station, thereby giving the merchants and manufacturers of these outlying districts the same despatch with their freight as those who are more centrally located.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. J. A. MacLean, who departed this life on May 31st, 1925.

What would we give to clasp her hand,
Her happy face to see,
To hear her voice and see her smile,
Which meant so much to us.

We think of her so much,
Her name we oft recall,
But there is nothing left to answer
But her picture on the wall.

When days are dark and friends are few,
Dear mother how we long for you.
Friends are friends if they are true,
But we lost our dearest and best friend,
When we lost you.
