The Morrisburg Leader

SECOND CLASS MAIL REGISTRATION NUMBER -0842

VOLUME 108, NO. 18. MORRISBURG, ONT., FRIDAY, MAY 8th, 1970 SINGLE COPIES 10c

Dr. J. G. Scott is Can. Club Speaker

"Educator is Canada's number one enterprise" Doctor J. Glenn Scott, associate professor of Education at Ontario Institute for Studies and Education, old members of the Morrisburg and District Mens' Canadian Club at a meeting held Thursday in Morrisburg Civic Centre.

The speaker said, "The two major educational concerns of every individual are cost and the quality of education

he said, "Investment in education on the national level will remain the largest item of expenditure until 1975. The total cost on combined levels is in excess of five billion dollars per year and will be in excess of eight billion by 1875." This, he said is attributable to the number of pupils in public school having doubled, in second a r y schools having tripled and in universities quadrupled. "This population explosion is beginning to taper off," the speaker said, but total expenditures will not taper and the need for expanded facili- off because of increasing expense ties.

"Teaching-force costs have increased with emphasis on upgrading the quality of education to the place where it has become big business in our western society," the speaker said. "Expansion of the school system aims to give every person an opportunity to develop to his full potential, which is the most precious possession of our society."

Speaking of the field of secondary education, he added, "Eighty per cent of the sixteen to eighteen age group is attending school. The rest are in the labour group."

"Future Historians will look back on the sixties and seventies as the age of wholesale shift from the horse and buggy age of education to that of the high powered motor," was Doctor Scott's opinion as he continued. "The Ryerson system worked well for Ontario's first one hundred years but the time for drastic change has arrived. There has been an information explosion —this was doubled in the sixties and will double again in the seventies. One fantastic example of this changing situation is the advance in communication, travel, speed, and space.

Today's new look at education is actually an updating of the three tive and the emphasis is away R's. Old ideas are put in perspec- from the teacher doing the telling. Schools have become concerned with helping youth solve the problems of today and there is more emphasis on involvement. Teachers, board committees and students take a look at the need of the individual pupil. This is one of the major changes for the future.

Doctor Scott concluded, "Children are curious people and should develop at their own rate of speed. Every child eight years of age should not be expected to be exactly the same stage of education and knowledge. The role of the teacher is becoming less one of teaching than one of helping the child to find himself."

Emerson M. Johnston, President, chaired the meeting. William Marshall, chairman of the nominating committee introduced members of the 1970 executive: Emerson Johnston, Chesterville, President; Geo. Fisher, Kemptville, Vice-President; retary; Glen Yeyes, Morrisburg, Douglas Renkie, Morrisburg, Sec-Treasurer.

It was announced that the annual membership fee for five Canadian club banquets will be raised from eight dollars to ten dollars.

Pretty Wedding At St. Peter's

Mauve and white chrysanthemums decorated the altar of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg, for the marriage of Sandra Purl Gertrude Tindal to Kenneth Angus Orval Baker. Rev. Walter Allen, Area Farmer, Still Missing

A police tracking dog working on the past week end hasn't solved the mystery that surrounds the disappearance of area farmer Walter Allen, who has been missing for several weeks.

Mr. Allen, who is in his seventies is missing from his one and a half storey clapboard home, two miles southeast of Chesterville. A bachelor, he has been living alone on the farm for the past 35 years.

First notice police had about the man's disappearance was on last Friday, when Chesterville postmaster Stuart Allan informed them Mr. Allen hadn't collected from his rural mailbox for about 3 weeks, nor had Mr. Allen been into the village for the same period to pick up his old age pension cheques.

A search of the bush on the Allen farm by a tracking dog provided no new clues for police over the week end. The search is continuing this week.

Fire Marshall David Shorey, of Brockville, was on the scene on Sunday, sifting through the ashes of one of the farm buildings which was gutted last month, in case Mr. Allen had been a victim of the fire.

The missing man's five-room house too, has been subjected by the OPP to a search for clues of robbery or foul play.

To add to the mystery, Allen's dog hasn't been seen either for three weeks. The two were inseparable, according to Walter Allen's brother Hillary, who lives alone in a trailer, just north of Ingleside.

Another brother, John, lives on a farm two miles north of Walter's farm, and a sister, Mrs. Mary McCadden, resides in Ottawa.

The several cows and a horse on the farm were in pasture. Had they been penned, more than likely a neighbour would have noticed earlier that something was amiss.

Police described the missing man as 5 feet, 10 inches in height, approximately 155 lbs., of slight build and usually wearing a black fedora hat with a white brim.

At press time on Thursday, OPP at Long Sault district headquarters said Mr. Allen was still missing, and they have no further clues to his whereabouts.

Fire Dept. Problems Discussed with Council

Maurice Roussy of the Fire Marshall's Office Cornwall, met with Council and Fire Chief Les Bilmer at Monday night's meeting to discuss problems of the local Fire Department. The main problem, Mr. Roussy said, "is that Morrisburg equipment is inadequate for selling fire protection to adjoining townships. Basically, he said, "the equipment could service Morrisburg but because of the age of the truck and the limited amount of water carried on it is otherwise inadequate.

Reeve C.F. McInnis reported that there is an amount of $10,000 set aside at the rate of $2,000 per year earmarked for a new fire truck. This year will see that raised to $12,000 and Council has been aware for some time that fire equipment needed to be updated.

It was decided that a survey be made by the Fire Marshall's Office. This, Mr. Roussy said, "will give Council a report to serve as a guide for the fire department for the following five years. He said, "It will be a blueprint for basic fire fighting operations.

Mutual Aid and Mutual Agreements in fire protection were explained by Mr. Roussy. Mutual agreements involve payment. The Mutual Aid System is activated through the co-ordinator so that a department requested to give aid understands the situation. The chief, of a fire department called to give unpaid assistance calls Cornwall where a cover for home protection is arranged.

Arthur Laurin, Manager of Morrisburg Lacrosse Team approached Council regarding installation of protective screening at the Community Centre. It was agreed that this should be done on both sides of the arena. An agreement of 70-30 receipts was reached.

Wm. Marshall, Membership Chairman of Morrisburg and District Men's Canadian Club, met with council requesting that smoking be allowed in the auditorium of the Civic Centre for the five Canadian banquets held each year. He said "members of the Club from neighbouring towns are very critical and there is danger of the membership falling off". Reeve MsInnis said, "Damage from cigarettes to the hardwood floor since it was repaired four years ago was spalling. We have now spent $1260. to have it sanded and brought up to beautiful condition and, Council feels that the overwhelming cost to ratepayers of replacing the floor (which would be the next step, should be averted.

Council felt that there could be no in-between decisions. Either the signs for "NO SMOKING" stay up or come down. Exceptions could be not be made. Members had no desire to endanger Canadian Club membership since that club has been a Morrisburg institution for many years. Mr. McInnis said.—"There is no place where we can draw the line. It just didn't occur to us that anyone could feel so strongly about the rule".

The decision was set over for a special meeting to be held within the week.

Correspondence from Minister of Transport relevant to establishing a license issuing office here, informed Council that the number of car owners in the area would bring in about $600 commission, an in-

Robert Schwartzman of Ottawa sufficient amount to merit a change will conduct painting of the water tower. This was the firm that satisfactorily carried out the work under difficult sand accumulation conditions five years ago.

At the recommendation of the Recreation Committee, Delbert Jones was hired as swimming instructor at the local beach this summer. It was decided to contact Bell Telephone regarding an emergency type phone being installed at the beach during the summer months as a public service.

Reeve McInnis reported on his attendance at the Ontario Provincial Conference at the Don Mills Science Centre, hosted by Hon. John Robarts. Among subjects discussed were: Regional development regional government, provincial budgeting, education, citizenship participation and other related matters.

Hospital Day May 12th

Winchester District Memorial Hospital along with more than 1,400 other hospitals throughout the nation, will observe Canada Hospital Day May 12th.

The theme "You, Your Hospital, and Your Community" emphasizes the critical role hospitals play in providing community health services for the individual, the family and the community. Winchester District Memorial Hospital, like other Canadian Hospitals, is making great efforts to meet increased health care services demanded in this era of rising costs.

"Today hospitals are facing increased demands for additional high quality health care services for more people than ever", said Mr. H. P. Stel, Administrator of Winchester District Memorial Hospital. "Hospitals are working with their provincial and national associations, the provincial and federal governments to provide efficient quality health care at the lowest possible cost. However, the public and medical profession can assist not by straining our health care facilities in the uneconomical use of hospitals."

"In moments of crisis and need, our community hospital is here to serve the individual and his family", he added.

Local men and women serve the community as members of the Hospital Board of Trustees. They are legally and morally responsible for maintaining the high standard of patient care. They represent the community and the hospital in dealing with local and provincial government agencies.

Across Canada more than a quarter million men, women and teenagers volunteer their time and effort to serve the hospital as well as serving through patient services and fund raising.

The Winchester District Memorial Hospital Auxiliary is looking for active members; contact the President, Mrs. Colin MacGregor, R.R. 4, Crysler.

Unlike most other industries, hospitals are a round-the-clock, seven-day-a-week business dedicated to preventing illness, restoring health and saving lives On the average there are two skilled hospital workers for each patient admitted. These include doctors, nurses, technicians, therapists, medical record librarians and a host of other professional and skilled workers representing some 200 occupations.

The modern community hospital is reaching out into the community through its preventive medicine programs in its out-patient departments and working closely with other health agencies in the community. Hospitals provide home care programs and liaison with extended care and nursing home facilities.

To observe Canada Hospital Day, colourful "Canada Hospital Day" placemats are being distributed by Winchester District Memorial Hospital to local area restaurants for May 12th.

"Canada Hospital Day gives people an opportunity to learn more about hospitals in their community," said Mr. Stel.

Canadian Police Week

The Canadian Association of Police Chiefs, with the endorsement of the Government of Canada and the Attorneys General of the ten provinces, have announced that the week of May 10th to May 16th, is to be observed as Canadian Police Week. All Canadians, during this week, are invited to visit the facilities of their local police force and to familiarize themselves with the procedures and the operation of a modern police force.

Some years ago, the policeman on the beat was always pictured as a friend to those in trouble; a protector, a man to whom one could go for advice and direction. With our supposedly better, more sophisticated world today, we have seen this image deteriorate to a point where the police are more often than not referred to as "pigs", "dogs" and other even more uncomplimentary names. In the old days, this was common practice for the underworld characters, for thugs and hooduums, but today we hear it from our college campuses, from those privileged individuals who have a chance for higher education than the average person. Can we wonder then, that we also hear such sentiments expressed by those less fortunate.

The observance of Canadian Police Week gives to all citizens a chance to know their policement better, to know their facilities for public protection, their many, many efforts to improve the public's knowledge of their work and their respons ibilities.

The policeman is your friend. He is also a highly-trained, highly motivated, and efficient guardian of your welfare. Why not get to know him better during Canadian Police Week?

Canada Hospital Day

In recognition of the vital role hospital staff, board mem bers and volunteers play in the health and well-being of Canadians, we recognize May 12 as Canada Hospital Day.

We honour the work of the medical, nursing and paramedical personnel, all professions and workers in our hospitals who provide such a high standard of care for Canadians.

It is fitting that May 12, the 100th birthday of the innovator of good hospital practice, Florence Nightingale, is set aside to acknowledge the work of our hospital people.

Her ideals inspire the hospital community and all those in the health care field.

In the last 100 years, many new techniques and disciplines have been added to hospitals. Today the hospital is a team of highly qualified professionals and allied service people.

Canada has an impressive hospital history which dates back some 300 years when French Nursing Sisters established hospitals along the bank of the mighty St. Lawrence to serve both the colonists and the native people.

Our hospitals have provided Canadians with a rich heritage of healing and hope as the hospitals spread west and north in settling our nation.

Canadians have entered their second decade with universal Federal-Provincial hospital insurance under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act, and many milestones have been achieved by the partnership of governments and the voluntary hospital system, making it the best in North America and a leader in the world.

Hospitals are entering a new era in which they will serve as centres for comprehensive health and allied social needs.

All community health and social service will have to be integrated to give Canadians the standard of health referred to in the constitution of the World Health Organization — "A state of complete physical and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease and infirmity".

This will require renewed dedication on the part of all hospital community to help ensure the "right to health", Canadians have come to expect. There will be many new challenges during the '70s which will demand more service and greater use of health care personnel and services.

(Signed),
JOHN MUNRO,
Minister of National Health and Welfare;
B. L. P. BROSSEAU, M.D.,
Executive Director,

European telephone directors are currently looking at an American invention that could bridge the language gap between Canada's two founding nations. It's a multilingual picture-telephone that can translate one or more languages while the parties are conversing. If successful, an example of how it would work would be: An English-speaking businessman calls a French speaking manufacturer in Quebec. He views the product by videophone and speaks English, which the device immediately translates into French. The reply, given in French, is translated for the caller. Report from the Ontario Legislature

by:
Fred M. Cass, Q.C., M.P.P.

Several new Bills introduced by the Government during this week just passed have provided the basis for more work for the Legislature. The Minister of Lands and Forests presented a Bill to provide loans for lake fishermen and others who have, at least temporarily, lost their means of livelihood due to Government anti-pollution bans on Great Lakes fishing. The Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs re-introduced the Bill to separate business corporations from others and to impose stringent responsibilitise on directors on directors and officers of limited companies incorporated in Ontario with appropriate amendments to the present laws governing non-business corporations. The list of Government Legislation on the Order Paper is now rather long, and will provide much debate in the House and in the various Stan ding Committees.

Estimates continued to be debated but each Departmental Estimate debate follows this year so far the same and rather unusual pattern, viz., several days of debate on the first items, with the last and usually more numerous ones, being passed almost instantaneously as Opposition Members seem to relax in anticipation of the next round. The Departments of the Provincial Secretary and Minister of Citizenship (during which debate the problems of our Indian citizens received practically all the attention given the Estimates of the Department) and of Correcional Services (in debating which Opposition Members of both Parties decried punishment for crime as old fashioned and called for re-training, lesser penalties, and in fact almost everything which would seem required to "make crime pay"), were approved by the House, which now sits for three evenings each week.

The Attorney General announced the appointment of the new Land Compensation Board of seven members and a Chairman. One of the members is the former Assessment Commissioner for the United Counties of Prescott and Russell, Mr. Lionel Lamuppet of L'Original. This Board will take over from the Ontario Municipal Board the duty of dealing with all compensation claimed by persons subjected to expropriation procedures.

This week also a new group of twenty-two boys from all across Ontario — from Sioux Lookout in Northwestern Ontario to Sudbury and from Windsor to Inkerman — entered service as Legislative Pages at Queen's Park. Included are three boys from our Counties — Master David Guy of Inkerman Public School; Master Richard Buehler of Merrickville Public School and Master John Connell of St. Mark's Separate School, Prescott. Our boys, as with the others from Grenville-Dundas who have had the opportunity of serving as Legislative Pages, measure up to the standards required and take a back seat to none. This, of course, delights Mr. Speaker and Mrs. Cass, with whom the first two named live in Mr. Speaker's Chambers — as have previously chosen Pages from the Constituency. The boys will be on duty at Queen's Park till the House recesses in late June for the summer holiday.

JOINT SURVEY IS CONDUCTED BY CANADA AND U.S.A.

The U.S. Lake Survey is making a survey jointly with Canada of a portion of the St. Lawrence River to determine the total amount of water passing Massena Point below the Barnhard Island powerhouse and the North Cornwall Channel. The Lake Survey Hydraulics Branch River Flow Section is metering the total river flow below the powerhouse while, simultaneously, the Water Survey of Canada is doing similar work in the North Cornwall Channel. The survey is being made to satisfy the needs of the Seaway Development Corporation. It is to be used to determine the flow distribution between the North Channel and the total flow passing Massena Point in order to help solve some of the problems that have arisen at the approach to the Eisenhower-Snell Locks.

The Lake Survey River Flow Survey consists of Thomas E. Ottenbaker (Chief), Robert F. Morgan and Roman R. Stack, who will be joined by three members of the Seaway Development Corporation. They are using a catamaran-type, outboard-powered vessel and will be working out of Massena, New York, from May 1 until about May 29. The Chief of the party will be happy to answer any questions about their work or that of Lake Survey.

Liberal Pollution Critic - - -

Liberal Pollution Critic Pat Reid today called on the Ontario Government to ignore the Federal Government and unilaterally ban the sale after July 1st of any detergent containing more than 15 per cent phosphate.

Mr. Reid, in a statement prepared for a meeting in Kitchener of Pollution Probe, said, "The Federal Government's announcement of a ban on the manufacture and importation of detergents containing more than 20 per cent phosphate, does not go far enough.

The Liberal Pollution Critic predicted that the three major detergent companies will work overtime to stock-pile high phosphate detergents, because the Federal amendment to the Canada Water Act does not prohibit the sale of such detergents.

Mr. Reid said, "In 1952 seven leading brands of detergents in Canada contained less than 14 per cent phosphate. I see no reason why they cannot cut back to 15 per cent now."

The Liberal Pollution Critic pointed out that he and two Liberal MPP's handed out phosphate - free detergent at Toronto City Hall Square to celebrate Earth Day and to alert the public to the fact that several such detergents exist on the market.

He added, "The decision is whether we want glistening shirts or glistening lakes and, if it's cleaner water we want, then we must have tougher provincial legislation".

The Rainy-River MPP charged, "The Provincial Government is soft on polluters. It provides a maximum fine for water pollution of only $1,000. What we need are hawks on pollution. Two weeks ago I introduced a bill providing fines of $5,000 a day for water pollution. This is the kind of stiff punishment we must have and even, in some cases, jail sentences."

Mr. Reid said, "Liberals moved an emergency debate on the mercury poisoning in the Lake St. Clair area to point out how little this government is doing to fight water pollution, and all Mr. Kerr could say is that it's industry's fault — they are thieves. Well, I say to him, the government is their accomplice. The government action has been like a police department ignoring criminal offenses. This government is letting polluters get away with murder — murdering our lakes and streams."

Pearson says: Stand firm!

OTTAWA — Not too many days ago Parliament Hill had a visit from an old friend.

Lester B. Pearson, revelling in his retirement from politics, spent more than three hours testifying for a parliamentary committee on External Affairs and Defence. It was really more like a fireside chat than formal testimony, as Mr. Pearson mixed advice and memories.

The Trudeau Government's policy to prevent pollution in the Arctic from tankers won nothing but praise from Mr. Pearson, although he warned that U.S. displeasure at the Canadian action is bound to be reflected subtly in future negotiations.

No U.S. pressure, said Mr. Pearson, should make Canada swerve from the policy, because it is an important step not only for us, but for the world.

"Sometimes something is needed to shock the international community into action," said Mr. Pearson.

He went on to suggest that Canada could perhaps provide the spark that would give the United Nations a new lease on life by promoting more concentrated action in the world forum aimed at obtaining international agreements to protect the environment.

And he talked of another area for U.N. action — "now that the day of peace-keeping forces is over."

Economic domination of Canada by the U.S. has been of continuing concern in Ottawa, and the fact has been used for political ends by more than one politician who could at least see an issue, if not a solution.

Much of the foreign ownership in Canada is through the corporate giants of the world, many of which are U.S.-based. Mr. Pearson wants Canada to spur the U.N. into the field of drafting international agreements to control the supra-national business empires.

The need for international controls over international companies was first brought to the attention of the External Affairs Committee by former U.S. undersecretary of state George Ball. Mr. Pearson mentioned with approval Mr. Ball's thoughts on the subject when he spoke to the committee.

Mr. Ball suggested that Canada was being too timid in dealing with international companies. U.S. businessmen, he said, do not invest in Canada to gain political influence at Ottawa. They invest to make a profit.

What Canada should do, is make the subsidiaries of supra-national corporations behave like good corporate citizens in their Canadian operations.

One of the answers suggested to the committee — and one that will likely be included in the committee recommendations to Parliament — would exercise Canadian control handily. The major Government-foreign ownership area of conflict at the present time is created by U.S. laws passed in Washington which govern the behavior of U.S. subsidiaries out of the country.

Canada should set up a system whereby foreign-owned companies that don't behave in accordance with Canadian law can be taken over by a temporary Government trustee. Effective operation of the company could be left in the hands of regular management, but Government trusteeship would override any extra-territorial U.S. laws.

Hence we could assure good corporate behavior in the interests of Canada by most of the companies which are U.S. owned.

As far as pressure from the U.S. against such a move is concerned, Canada could handle it. As Mr. Pearson told the committee, Canada has been living with U.S. pressure all her life, and usually has come out fairly well at the bargaining table.

Most U.S. pressure during his administration, said Mr. Pearson, came from U.S. congressmen, and not from the executive arm of U.S. Government.

When the committee closed that session, George Hees drifted over and asked when the Pearson memoirs would be published.

"You find out for me when Mr. Diefenbaker's are going to be published," said Mr. Hees. "Mine will be out a week earlier."

Queen's Park Comment . .

By:
DONALD C. MacDONALD, M.P.P.,
Ontario Leader
New Democratic Party

Early last week, my colleague, Bill Ferrier, the MPP for Cochrane South, introduced a resolution in the Legislature calling on the government to extend hospital insurance coverage to persons in chronic and convalescent hospitals and in nursing homes.

Mr. Ferrier pointed out that "hardworking, thrifty responsible citizens continue to use up their life savings and lose their homes to provide nursing home care for chronically ill members of their family, or themselves, because the government refuses to accept its responsibility to provide for such coverage under the Ontario Hospital Insurance plan. Older people who have always supported themselves, and who have set aside something for burial expenses, must go through their final months and years not only broken in health but with the gnawing pain that their assets are exhausted and that an uncaring state is making them a crushing burden on their next of kin. On the other hand, it is a difficult enough experience to watch a loved one suffer a long, fatal illness without having the added burden of poverty, because of nursing home expenses, to further weigh one down."

For some years now many of us in the Legislature have been trying to get the government to move on this issue. Stories continue to appear in the newspapers describing how people are forced to mortgage, and even sell outright, their homes because of the heavy expenses involved in providing nursing home care for an elderly parent. Yet despite these facts, and despite the public outcry for some kind of insurance to cover this situation the government has refused to move.

The debate that was held last week saw some excellent speeches which clearly outlined the dimensions of the problem. Indeed, I am certain that all decent people would be moved by the story of the tragic financial loss suffered by the Boulter family in order to maintain Mrs. Boulter in a nursing home. Unless something is done quickly they will shortly lose all the equity in the home which they owned in Toronto because of these nursing home expenses.

It is my hope that after this debate, and with the facts clearly revealed, that he government will wait no longer to introduce legislation to ensure that these hardships are no longer to be borne by the citizens of this province. There is absolutely no reason for the government to refuse to extend hospital insurance to cover nursing homes, while there is every reason, in human terms, for them to do so immediately.

ANIMALS & PLANTS MAY BE HAZARD IN CLASSROOM

Raising animals and plants in the classroom can be interesting and educational. It can also be hazardous to health.

The Ontario Medical Association reported at its annual meeting in Ottawa Monday that it has advised the Ontario Government of its concern over the trend in elementary schools to have biologic and scientific exhibits in the classroom.

The recommendation arose out of representations by the O.M.A. Section on Allergy. The allergists claimed that the raising of animals and plants, fungi and flowers and even naturally growing ragweed, in the classroom can jeopardize the health of hypersensitive children. Also, constant exposure to these potent allergents may develop sensitivities in the allergic child.

The O.M.A. also pointed out that chemical sensitivity is another major threat to the health of the allergic school child. Offending chemical agents found in the school environment include waxes, wax removers, lacquers, paints, solvents, glues and "magic markers".

Allergists maintain there are alternative methods of providing biologic and scientific exhibits and alternative products which do not contain offending chemicals.

SET INTERIM GUIDLINES FOR STERLIZATION

The Ontario Medical Association has laid down guidelines for doctors requested to perform sexual sterilization.

An interim policy was approved by the O.M.A. annual meeting in Ottawa Monday, pending the presentation at next month's Canadian Medical Association annual meeting of a new national code of ethics, which will include a statement on sterilization.

The interim policy provides that sterilization of either male or female is ethical provided it is performed by a qualified medical doctor in an active treatment public hospital, or in the case of a male, in other locations with adequate facilities, and provided the patient, and if possible, the spouse or guardian, gives signed consent with the understanding that the sterility will likely pe permanent.

Gerald Pratley, CBC radio's "man on the aisle" celebrated 22 years of broadcasting in April. Each Saturday, Pratley At The Movies features interviews with film personalities, soundtrack segments, film music, and criticism on the current cinema crop. His enthusiasm for, and involvement with the film industry has won him on international reputation; in fact, he is Canada's film authority. But despite his justly-deserved reputation, he remains a soft-spoken and friendly person with a sincere concern for the development of a national film industry. Right now he's attending the Cannes Film Festival (one of three he visits a year) where he'll tape interviews for future programs.

While Pratley headed for France, fellow broadcaster Bruno Gerussi jets to Osaka where he'll be on assignment at Expo 70 for two weeks beginning May 18. While there he'll interview tourists at the fair, Canadians resident in Japan, Canadian Pavilion officials and the like. These will be fed back to Toronto and incorporated into his weekday morning program which will be hosted by Ken Cavanaugh in Bruno's absence.

Klondike! The very name spells adventure and romance. One of those caught up under its spell was writer-broadcaster Pierre Berton who wrote a book chronicling the life and death of the last great Alaska-Yukon gold rush. To him the Klondike odyessey represented a sort of pilgrim's progress in modern dress. Berto nstars as host and guide on a five-part radio adaptation of his book, Klondike, beginning May 18 on Theatre 10:30.

One of the world's foremost interpreters of the symphonies of Beethoven celebrates his 85th birthday this month. CBC Tuesday Night pays tribute to the great German conductor Otto Klemperer, May 19, in which he is interviewed at his home in Zurich by Peter Heyworth, music correspondent for the London Observer. Differing assessments of the man will be given by several of his music colleagues, and there will also be a recording of Klemperer conducting Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

The long-running series Matinee (heard weekday mornings and after nooms) have several programs of interest slated for the week of May 18. They indicate why Matinee is so popular with listeners of all ages and sexes, not just the distaff side. Monday — photographer John Reeves talks to the aspiring photographer; and warnings of an impending summer heroin epidemic from Dr. Judianne Densen-Gerber, clinical director of Odyssey House, New York. Tuesday — The Recent Fiction series looks at the work of American novelist Bernard Malamud. Wednesday — a documentary on the conflicts between mothers and daughters. And, on Friday — the first of a two-part program on kitsch, the world of bad taste.

Dump the sparring partner

DEAR DORIS — I'm a boy 16. This girl went nuts over me, and I succumbed. She had gone out with boys since Day One and her little affectionate gestures really made an impression.

Then one weekend she swore her love. On the following Monday she two-timed me. I got mad, swore, cried. But no, she loved this punk. He drinks and keeps nudes in his locker. And knocks her around.

Every lunch-hour she eats with me, then goes to the student lounge to meet this punk and fight with him. She gets clobbered. She has picked up her gutter language again.

The reason she broke off with me is because I never hit her. I couldn't hit a girl.

How Should I Act

DEAR HOW — Turn her in on a new model. Start having lunch with a more civilized type. Girls are good companions; not sparring partners.

DEAR DORIS — When we take the children out (girl 9, boy 5) they talk all the time, interrupt people, and run all over the place. They get so wound up at times we can't get them settled down.

Our baby-sitter was sick last bowling night, so we had to take the children with us. I was really ashamed of them. The more we talk or scold or ask them to please be quiet, the worse they get.

We Have Tried

DEAR TRIED — It seems the youthful human engine has an unending head of steam! But if you don't give them limits, they are going to have a tough time developing any self-discipline.

As a unit, you two adults provide guidance; you back each other up and you exact obedience.

If you have been repeating yourselves and then not following through, they have probably turned you off. Children are brilliant when it comes to knowing whether parents mean what they say.

True, a parent doesn't easily see what he is doing; nor how to make it work better — and that is what child-care workers are for. Don't hesitate to make an appointment with a counsellor in your local agency to discuss your problem.

DEAR DORIS — Would you have any ideas on a not-too-serious type of program to honor a retiring minister Any novel idea would be greatly appreciated by the . .

Committee In Charge

DEAR COMMITTEE — What about a "Truth-or-Consequences" show, with the minister as one of the contestants He could be asked some far-out questions that couldn't possibly be answered. The consequence might require him to race across the room carrying an egg on a spoon, or to get down on all fours and bark like a dog, or sing a line from a song.

If you have a presentation to make, let him win on the last question and bring out your gift.

Or you could present brief skits suggesting your minister's retirement plans. He might run for Parliament, take up lifesaving, try out for the Olympics.

Would a member of the congregation play reporter and interview him — humorously

Confidential to Anxious Mother — Irritation in the genital region is common in young children, and seldom of real significance. See your own doctor; say what you have noticed and ask for reassurance about the possibility of infection or injury as the cause.

As far as the child goes, ignore the whole thing. A mother's anxiety is often the one thing which fixes a young childs attention on something he would completely forget without it.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

Weekly Report

TREES BY THE MILLION

On Monday, April 27th the spring tree planting programme got under way. This spring, 3,250,000 trees will be planted in the Kemptville District, which consists of the counties of Leeds, Lanark, Carleton, Grenville, Dundas, Russell, Stormont, Glengarry and Prescott.

The planting will be carried out over the next five weeks. A work force of approximately 300 has been employed to carry out the job which will reforest over 3,000 acres of land.

The two main species being planted are white spruce and red pine. The nursery stock planted this spring will be from one to three years old depending on the species and will be supplied by the Department's own tree nursery at Kemptville.

Fires burned 1,800,000 acres in Canada during 1969.

MAN AND HIS FOREST ENVIRONMENT

Increased interest is being shown in Man's environment. Concern about pollution of air, land and water is particularly great at present. Of no less importance is the role the forest plays. It produces oxygen for the atmosphere, uses carbon dioxide, takes part in the hydrologic cycle, the stabilization of soil and production of organic matter, and feeds and shelters myriad forms of wildlife which play their part in making the planet Earth habitable for man.

During the week of May 3-9 members of the Ontario Forestry Association will be encouraging us to take a greater interest in the forest resource. It is the supplier of essentials for life as outlined above and provides fibre, fun and funds to permit our high standard of living. The Association urges us to do more for our forests which do so much for us. By learning more about our forests and their use, by encouraging their care and wise use, and by supporting effective legislation aimed at maintaining and improving them while using them wisely, we can all play a part. All natural resources are improving them while using them wisely, we cn all play a part. All natural resources are important but none plays a more dominant part in our affairs than our forests. Their care is in the best interest of all Ontario citizens.

We support National Forest Week May 3-9.

The above newsletter was prepared by the Ontario Forestry Association.

WATERFOWL NEST ANDALISM

Since its beginning in 1960, the Upper Canada Migratory Bird Sanctuary 9 miles east of Morrisburg has been beset with many problems; fluctuating water levels, lack of natural nesting sites, scarcity of acquatic food and cover, severe ice damage to artificial nesting structures, and a good share of human activity since it is within a park.

This department in co-operation with the St. Lawrence Parks Commission has provided artificial nesting structures for Canada geese and wood ducks and maintained these through the nesting season with the result that these species have increased and become well established. Last year, however, we experienced a sharp increase in the number of goose nests robbed by vandals. Out of 59 goose nests in the sanctuary, 7 were robbed by vandals. 1 was abandoned, 3 contained bad eggs, and 2 were destroyed by predators. The 59 nests represent an increase of 19 nests over the year before but 13 of these were lost with only 1 renest in evidence. The abandoned nest and possibly some of the nests with rotten eggs might also be attributed to human disturbances.

Since the sanctuary contains cottages, campsites, a golf course nature trails, etc., it is difficult to curtail human activity. At this time of year bullhead fishermen are also in abundance, particularly in shoreline areas near nest sites.—Like the Commission, we wish to see people enjoy the outdoors and this is an excellent place to do it. The average person seeking the outdoors poses little threat to existing programs at the present time but vandals are another matter.

The RCMP, OPP, and Consevation Officers of this Department are stepping up patrols of this rea and anyone caught pursuing these acts of vandalism can expect to receive stiff penalties.

To Much For Air Mail

If the post office has been paying too much to Air Canada for hauling the mail from coast to coast and internationally, it has only itself to blame. Years have gone by since the government ended the Crown corporation's monopoly, and once it permitted private companies to compete for passengers and freight there was no reason for not opening mail carriage to tender. The post office should get the best deal it can. That is the only criterion — a criterion which does not provide for the sort of patronage which has marked recent air franchise decisions.

It is a mystery how it could be decided in advance of calling for tenders that under Mr. Kierans' latest efficiency proposals, as revealed a few days ago, CP Air hereafter will become the mainline mail carrier while negotiations go on with smaller lines to find other alternatives to the Crown company. It looks as though a determined effort were under way to downgrade even further the company which is owned by the people of Canada. In addition to CP Air, it must be assumed that Transair will now be able to do quite nicely on its new and otherwise probably unprofitable Winnipeg-Toronto route structure.

We hold no brief for Air Canada on the rates it has been charging for handling the mail. Perhaps it has been charging too much at 48 cents per mile—one third of the going rate 20 years ago, according to a staff memo by President John Baldwin, who added that secondary domestic carriers actually charge far more. If the others are now able and willing to provide the existing standard of service, and for less, they should undoubtedly have an opportunity to tender along with the Crown company. Arbitrary awarding of contracts, however, is a backward step.

Life in the San

Went for a chest X-ray today and had quite a reminisce with the doctor who examined me. It turned out that he was the second-in-command at a sanatorium where I spent one of the most dreary years of my life.

He's retired now and does this work as a part-time thing. He told me I wouldn't believe what has happened to the San. When I was there, it held about 1,500 patients. It now has 300. Average length of stay then was 18 months. Today it is three months.

T.B. wasn't a comparatively simple thing when I was there. Three people died in three months in one ward I was in, because their lungs were so rotten they couldn't breathe. Two of them were in their 20s.

The tensions, frustrations and monotony of life in a sanatorium have been described often enough. It was like being in jail, except you couldn't walk around. And always, hovering in the air, like a couple of vultures, were two things: Surgery and your "culture".

Surgery meant hacking out most of your ribs on one side, to collapse a lung that was too far gone, or removal of the lung.

If your "culture", a sputum test, broke down within 12 weeks, you had another three or six months added to your sentence.

I was lucky. All I had was a shadow on my lung. I felt fine. I never had a "positive" result from tests, and I couldn't even muster enough sputum for a culture. But it still wasn't much fun.

Perhaps I acclimatized better than most. I'd had a year in prison camp, not too long before — good training for life in the San. I had learned that time does pass, however snail-like, in such circumstances.

But I was dreadfully lonely at first, and pretty resentful toward the gods. I had been married six weeks when the shadow on the lung was discovered. About a week later, something else was discovered. My wife was pregnant. We were about 200 miles apart, with no money for train trips to visit. This was the worst period.

Now times change. Nowadays my wife thinks nothing of spending $10 on a long-distance call to one of the kids, for no particular reason. In those days, I was on full pension. I think it was $55 a month, and the government kept back $15 of it to help pay for my keep.

So it was letters, one a day. There's still a bushel basket of them in the attic, full of purple prose: what we'd call the baby, and stuff. I feel like an old fool when I read them now, and my wife weeps and wonders why I don't write poems and gooey stuff to her nowadays.

But I shook down into life at the San, and as always in retrospect, remember mostly the good things, and the funny things.

I began a writing course and won a prize. I wrote scripts for the San radio station. I played chess for hours a day with the guy in the next bed and became a tolerable, though erratic, player.

Most of us were young veterans, and we had a certain esprit de corps, which meant beating the establishment. For example, the food was nourishing, but lousy, like all institution food. One chap had a wife who smuggled in bacon and eggs and onions. Every night, about an hour after the nurses had snuggled us down, and while the night nurse smoked and drank coffee, the action would begin.

Out would come the illicit hot plate, and the forbidden frying pan. The spryest, usually I, would whack up a great, reeking feed. And with one lamp, carefully screened, we'd play poker until 4 a.m. No wonder they had trouble rousing us at five for our morning wash.

If it was a special occasion, maybe a birthday, we'd chip in and buy a mickey. Oh, yes. We had a bootlegger — who was also a bookmaker — among the patients. He was tubercular and also diabetic, dying on his feet, but he staggered around the wards each day, taking bets and orders.

You'd be surprised how far a mickey goes among four T.B. cases, when they haven't had anything stronger than milk for a month. Like most of life, it wasn't all bad.

(A Forum About Mature Women)

By: Margaret Brookfield

Oh Dad, Poor Dad

Dear Miss Brookfield:

Until a year ago, my parents lived in another state and we saw them infrequently. Dad was retired but he was always busy, puttering around the house, making minor repairs or gardening. He was reluctant to sell the house, but mom eventually convinced him and they moved here, where they rent a small apartment. Mom is a big help and she is involved with my children to a great extent. But we're worried about dad. He has no friends. We tried to involve him in community activities but without success. He is fond of the grand children but doesn't take the interest in them that mom does. Lately, he sleeps most of the day. Can you offer any suggestions?

J. L.

Dear J. L.

Yes. First have him checked by a doctor to rule out a health problem as a cause of his lethargy.— Once this is done, you, but more important, your mother should talk to a skilled counselor.

The move closer to you has buoyed your mother with a new role as grandmother because you need her and the grandchildren need her. But your dad, who has been reluctantly uprooted, has been left out in the emotional cold. Before, he had a role as "man of the house." Now, no one really "needs" him. His message is loud and clear: he has been put into limbo. So he feigns this state with the closest thing to it: sleep.

Trying to involve him in community activities or "make-work" chores and errands will not solve the problem. He needs to return to the emotional mainstream, where his life will have meaning and purpose. His present problem may be the culmination of a long standing one. A skilled counselor can determine this and offer some insight into the problem and its ultimate solution. Good Luck.

Weight Problem

Dear Miss Brookfield:

I am 49 and have read a lot about "growing old gracefully." But how can one be graceful with fat accumulating around the waistline and hips? I have tried dieting without success. Is this hopeless "middle-age spread?"

M. G.

Dear M.G.:

A visit to your doctor will answer part of your question. He can recommend a sensible and helpful diet. Stick to it. Nothing is that hopeless.

Your weight problem may also be menopausal. While about 15 to 20 percent of all women go through menopause with virtually no symptoms, and a small number experience severe ones, the majority of women may be troubled intermittently by one symptom or another, according to Dr. Elizabeth Connell, associate professor of Obsterics and Gynecology at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. These include weight gain and weight redistribution, along with hot flushes abnormally profuse or irregular menstruation, headaches, crying spells and palpitations. Not all women, of course, suffer all these problems.

Dr. Connell defines the menopause as a bilogical change that requires social and psychological adaptability. And, according to another medical authority: "It couldn't happen at a worse time in a woman's life. She is often raising teenagers; her husband is too busy to give her emotional support; she is just beginning to have health problems."

Both point out that estrogen replacement therapy (to restore hormonal balance) as well as other palliative therapy may be helpful to some women for some of their problems. Your doctor is the best one to advise you about this. Once you feel better, you may even feel like looking better — and start dieting in earnest.
