Henry's Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school?

Our instruction being individual, you may start at any time.

Fatal Fall Down Stairs.

Mr. John McMillan of Dunbar, an old and esteemed resident of that place, when going down stairs yesterday morning about five o'clock, fell forward striking his head and fracturing his skull from the effects of which he died before medical assistance could be procured. He was 85 years of age and a pioneer of this district. The funeral takes place this afternoon.

St. Mary's Picnic.

St. Mary's congregation picnic Tuesday on the Driving Park attracted a good crowd and a very enjoyable time was spent, winding up with an assembly in the evening. A programme of sports and races were carried out. In the baseball match between Russell and Chesterville the former were winners by 12 to 8 in the seven innings game. Nation Valley and Connaught in a football game battled to an even finish, neither side scoring.

Mr. Clem McCloskey held the lucky ticket, winning the morris chair and R. J. Blacklock that for the carving set.

OBITUARY

George Albert Barkley, Dunbar.

There was laid to rest in North Williamsburg cemetery on Monday a familiar figure who was born and had spent his life in this section in the person of George Albert Barkley.

The late Mr. Barkley was born on the old Barkley homestead at Dunbar on the 8th of March, 1847 and was therefore 68 years and 5 months old at the time of his death last Saturday morning. He was the second son of the late Geo. H. Barkley, who was prominent farmer and shipper of cattle and sheep in the early seventies. He was married about 45 years ago and moved on the place on which he resided until his death, with the exception of five years spent in the township of Osnabruck. Always of a jovial disposition he had many friends throughout the county where he had considerable dealings having been associated with the late A. Dence in the early eighties in the handling of eggs.

The deceased was in his usual health, in fact had planned to spend Wednesday at Morrisburg fair. He retired early but about four o'clock that morning Mrs. Chas. Reddick, his adopted daughter, heard a peculiar noise and going to his bed found that he was unable to speak. Dr. Locke of Williamsburg, was quickly brought back by H. Barkley in his car but from the first the doctor held but small hopes of his recovery. He was conscious that day and spoke to his friends and the doctor until Thursday about nine o'clock when he fell in to a sleep from which he never wakened and passed peacefully away on Saturday morning.

The funeral took place on Monday from his late residence to St. Luke's Church, Dunbar, of which he had been a member for a number of years, where the service was held in the church adjoining the school grounds where the deceased spent his boyhood days. The remains were afterwards taken to the family burial plot at North Williamsburg. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife and one adopted daughter, Mrs. Chas. Reddick, who along with her husband and two daughters resided with him. Also one sister, Mrs. James Armstrong and two brothers, Nathan and Arthur, who reside on the old homestead where he was born, and a number of nieces and nephews.

Among those from a distance were Mrs, R. L. Silmser and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. N. Barkley of Newington.

The pallbearers were James Clark, A. McMillan, B. McIntosh, Ezra McMillan, H. Price and Andrew Barkley.

Many beautiful flowers covered the casket.

Hymenal Bonds.

Weddings are very often solemn occasions, but on Wednesday, July 21, when Mr. Ingram A. Smith, Loverna, Sask., and Miss Vaughn Casselman, Williamsburg, Ont., were married, there seemed to be many gladsome hearts, and gaiety was the keynote of the evening.

About 6.45 the bridal car, decorated with flowing ribbons in white, left the bride's home and carried her to the church where the groom, almost trembling, and the crowd, expectant, awaited her. The ushers, Messrs. Lyle and Garnet Casselman were in attendance, also the little flower girls carrying their pretty baskets of sweet peas, and following these, the bride, supported by her father, Mr. Reuben Casselman, slowly marched to the altar while Miss Ethel McIntosh played Mendelsohnn's march, and where the groom and Rev. Mr. Maurer, pastor of the Lutheran church, received her. The pastor very ably performed the ceremony, after which all returned to the bride's home where the newly-married couple took their place under a very prettily decorated arch. Mrs. Strader received at the door and Mrs. Frank Harrison of California received with the bride. In due course, the bride and the groom, accompanied by their relatives and friends wended their way to the lawn where tables were spread, and all partook of a sumptuous repast. There the evening was spent, but we shall add a few notes of an interesting character. The bride, in her flesh colored crepe gown, with its overdress of oriental lace and pearl trimmings, her delicate flowing veil and her bouquet of exquisite English peas, looked well worthy of the name bride. The gifts of the groom to the flower girls were pretty little necklets, and his gift to the bride a beautiful necklace set in topaz and pearls. The other gifts were costly and numerous.

Mr. Ingram Smith is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Smith, Chesterville, and for the past few years has been residing near Loverna, Sask.

Mr and Mrs. Smith left on Monday of this week for Loverna, going by way of Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul. Much future happiness is extended to them in their new life.

GREAT HISTORY OF

BLACK WATCH BATTALIONS.

Recruits from this district have an opportunity to enlist in this famous regiment now forming new companies in Montreal.

In 1760 there were two Highland Regiments in Montreal. They were the two battalions of the Black Watch, veterans who had been fighting in the West Indes for two years, and had followed the fortunes of the British in the war against the French, which culminated in the surrender of Montreal.

Over 150 years have passed, and again, in 1915, there will have been two battalions of the Black Watch in Montreal. The regimental numbers of the original units were 42nd and 73rd. A few weeks ago, after all this stretch of time, another 42nd formed in Montreal, and sailed away to undergo baptism of fire not far from where the original 42nd first saw action in 1743 in Flanders. Now a second battalion, the 73rd is to be formed, and after a time it will cross the seas to uphold those glorious and mighty traditions, the honor and the fighting fame of the ancient Black Watch.

It is not a coincidence that makes the numbers of these battalions the same as those of the Black Watch regiments. The 5th Royal Highlanders of Canada are affiliated with the Black Watch. The 13th Battalion, the first active service unit to be sent abroad by the 5th, wears the tartan of the Black Watch. When the second overseas battalion from the Scots was formed it was given the number 42nd, because that was the old regimental number of the Royal Black Watch, given in in 1749. The call has now been made for a third active service battalion from the 5th Royal Highlanders. The new battalion will bear the number 73rd, a regimental number that shines in almost every epoch, making military event in the history of the Empire since the middle of the eighteenth century.

The original Black Watch Regiment was formed early in the eighteenth century, following an Act of Parliament which forbade anyone to carry arms. A number of Highland chieftans were commissioned to raise independent companies to keep order in their different districts. This was in 1725. In those days to go without arms, for a Highlander, was more or less of a disgrace, and the young men of the time "gladly availed themselves of engaging in a profession which relieved them from the sense of degradation and dishonor attached to the idea of being disarmed."

Each of these companies wore the tartan of his company commander. Most of these consisted of the dark green, blue or black tartan, and they were called colloquially "Dubh" (or black) to distinguish them from the famous "Redcoats" of the British army. Fourteen years after the formation of these companies they were formed into a regiment by George II., and were given the number "43."

John, the twentieth Earl of Crawford, was the colonel, and for some years longer the regiment was employed on detachment duties in the Highlands. Then came the first call for foreign service. In 1743 the Black Watch sailed from England for France, and for two years was stationed in different parts of the country. According to the chronicler of those days: "The regiment was regarded as a trustworthy guard of property. Seldom were any of the men drunk, and they seldom swore."

In 1745 the regiment received its baptism of fire at Fontenoy. The responsibility of covering the retreat of the British after this battle was entrusted to the regiment, and it earned the praise of Lord Crawford, who said that it had acquired as much honor as if it had gained the battle.

The next year the regiment sailed for America, but was driven back by storms. Then it went to Ireland and in 1749 the number was changed to 42nd. In 1756 the Black Watch sailed for America, and for a year fought Indians. In 1758 it won great glory at Ticonderoga, where it lost over half its number in killed and wounded. In the same year the title "Royal" was conferred on the regiment and a second battalion, known as the 73rd was raised.

Eighty Thousand Gone Overseas.

Ottawa, Aug. 9— Over 80,000 men have now been sent from Canada for service at the front. There have been about 13,000 casualties, so that there are still 67,000 fighting men in England and France.

This makes two army divisions. There are nearly 65,000 men in training at the present time at the various camps in Canada, and there is a proposal under consideration by the militia authorities to create four Canadian army divisions— two at the front and two to continue training in England and to act as reinforcements for the two in the fighting lines.

The present method of sending reinforcements from Canada has been found disadvantageous chiefly owing to the breaking up of units. It is felt more desirable to send reinforcements as complete units and this will be easier of accomplishment when the reserve troops are in England.

Germany is Hard Hit.

London, Aug. 8—The Daily Mail quotes an unnamed neutral citizen, who has just arrived from Germany, as saying that Germany's hope for a record harvest is doomed to disappointment in consequence of a severe drouth during May and June. The newspaper says its authority for this statement is a man well versed in agricultural matters, who has made a careful study of the situation in Germany.

Notwithstanding the fact that an area of unprecedented size was planted with grain, the crop will be considerably less than that of 1914. Only potatoes are unusually abundant. The observer believes that breadstuffs are going to prove a far more serious problem in Germany during the coming year than they have in the year just past, when Germany had the benefit of large reserves of supplies now exhausted.

Distructive Storm Visits Brockville District

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 9—A combination of rain, hail and electricity wrought, destruction in Brockville and surrounding districts Monday afternoon. The farming district for a wide area, according to reports coming in, was laid waste. Whole fields of corn and grain were cut down by the hail, driven by a terrific gale, and the volume of rain devasted what escaped the hail by flooding. The root crop in many instances was completely washed away on hilly lands while on the level the crops are completely submerged and will not dry out for days sufficiently to allow the farmers resume harvest operations. There was some grain cut and stocked, and this was scattered in all directions. All kinds of grains and roots looked most promising, but the elements of the past few weeks wrought more or less damage which culminated with today's storm, preceded by one yesterday, which, while it did not touch Brockville, made itself felt for miles around. It is difficult to estimate the damage, but the loss to the farmers will be heavy.

In Brockville the storm was on a par with a cloudburst, rivers of water flooding the streets and thoroughfares to such an extent that busines was pratically suspended for a couple of hours. Storm sewers were unable to carry off the flow and the water backed up into stores and dwellings, causing much damage. Lightning struck and set fire to the spire of the First Presbyterian Church, besides ripping off the slate and damaging the structure generally. The rain extinguished the blaze in a few minutes. Many other places were hit, the damage being slight.

Watched Struggle For Dardanelles

When the Canadian Pacific steamship Montreal arrived in Montreal Sunday, she brought with her men who spent twelve days in May and June watching that most engrosssing of all the struggles now being waged between the Allies and their enemies—the conflict for the Dardanelles. The Montreal herself was there, just outside the range of fire from the shore batteries for the most part, but she took her chances with the rest when she put the Derbyshire Yeomanry ashore. Luckily no shell dropped nearer her than one-quarter of a mile away, according to a man who had been on deck at a later period.

The Montreal was stationed for a time next to the Queen Elizabeth, and the men became used to the song of the monster shells she sent over sea and land to some point where the enemy was preparing or dealing out trouble for the allied forces.

As one man expressed it, "We could hear the shell singing as it went over the land, and it seemed to change the tone with each peak that it crossed until the missile found its mark, and then, instead of the singing sound, there was a convulsion of nature, everything seeming to go upwards, trees, earth, rocks, dust, everything."

Talking to some German prisoners taken in the land fighting, one of the Montreal men was told that they would never have believed that any troops in the world could have landed in the face of the preparations made for them. They were generous enough to say that only British troops could have done it, and this in spite of the fact that they were sore over the fact that Great Britain had gone into the war at all. They thought she had no business to go into it, and they had never expected it of her.

A general meeting of the stockholders of the Russell Brick and Tile Co. was held on Saturday for the purpose of winding up the business of the Company.

ERADICATING WEEDS.

Different Methods Suggested For Keeping Down the Top Growth.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

In fighting weeds it is extremely important to know how long they naturally live and their habits of reproduction. Weeds are divided into three classes, according to their length of life—annuals, biennials and perennials.

Some of the most persistent weeds are perennials—weeds which produce each year underground parts which live over to the next year and produce top growth. These underground parts may be of various kinds. They may consist of long, more or less horizontal roots, as in the bull nettle, milkweed and Canada thistle, or the underground parts may consist of root stocks or underground stems, as in the case of quack grass, Johnson grass and perennial sow thistle.

Among the ways that may be adopted for keeping down top growth of perennial weeds are the following: Clean cultivation, pasturing, growing smother crops, frequent cutting with a hand hoe, spud or mower, and smothering small patches with building paper or other material.

In most cases cultivation will have to be relied upon to destroy perennials. The work may be done either with or without a cultivated crop growing on the land. Many farmers have eradicated perennial weeds by giving thorough cultivation to a crop. Cultivation is especially effective if the crop has been planted in check rows, so as to permit working in two directions. The ordinary shovel and tooth cultivators permit many weed stems to slip through unharmed. It is often best, therefore, to use cultivators of the sweep or weed knife type. These sweeps skim along under the surface of the soil and cut off all weed stems. On many of the modern cultivators sweeps nine to eighteen inches wide may be attached in place of the shovels.

No matter how thoroughly the tops have been kept down during the period of cultivation, most well established perennials will continue to send up tops after cultivation stops. This situation may be met by frequent choppings with a hoe. Hand hoeing in such cases is not as tedious as it may seem, since most perennials do not occupy the land solidly, but occur in patches. If the top growth is thus thoroughly kept down one year is usually sufficient to eradicate even the worst of our perennials. This plan is especially effective against Canada thistle, bull nettle and bindweed.

Perennials may often be attacked most effectively by clean cultivation without growing a cultivated crop—in other words, by a bare fallow. It is seldom advisable to fallow for an entire year, since this does not permit the farmer to get any use of his land. A better plan is to use the land during the early part of the season and to fallow it the latter part. For instance, the land may be pastured up till midsummer, or a crop of hay or small grain may be taken off before starting the fallow. This plan has the additional advantage of starting the work of eradication by fallowing at a period when nearly all weeds are in their most susceptible stage. Under this plan the work of fallowing should be started as soon after harvest as possible. The land should be plowed and then harrowed or disked at frequent intervals during the remainder of the season to prevent top growth.

Thick stands and vigorous growth of smother crops may be depended on to keep down the top growth of perennials. The most commonly used smother crops are alfalfa, buckwheat, soy beans, millet, sorghum and bur clover. Some weeds are more susceptible to this treatment than others. Nut grass may be eradicated by a continuous succession of smother crops, including soy beans or cowpeas in the summer and bur clover or winter grains for a winter crop.

Cutting off repeatedly the tops of perennial weeds with a mower, scythe or other tool may sometimes be used to advantage. This is of most use on pastures, roadsides and other uncultivated places. It has been found that mowing twice a year for two years will eradicate the fern brake, one of the bad weeds of pastures in New England and New York.

THE "PUSH AND GO" MAN.

George Macauley Booth Is Kitchener's Business Expert.

"We are on the look-out for a good, strong business man, with some push and go," said Mr. Lloyd George in the British House of Commons a short time ago. The man required was one who could superintend the organization of the whole of the engineering community for the purpose of increasing the output of munitions of war.

A few days ago it was vaguely announced that Mr. George Macauley Booth had taken up his duties at the War Office, and was busily engaged conferring with manufacturers and others anxious to help in this direction. Naturally, people have jumped to the conclusion that Mr. Booth is the "push and go" man the Government have been looking for. Mr. Booth has denied the soft impeachment, but there is no doubt that in him the Government have found a particularly able lieutenant.

Son of Mr. Charles Booth, the philanthropist author whose investigations into life and labor in London and research into such questions as poverty in the big communities and old-age pensions are well-known, and grandson of Macaulay's brother, Mr. Booth is a partner in the great shipping firm of Alfred Booth and Co., a director of the Booth line, and a cousin of Mr. A. A. Booth, the Cunard chairman. Like many other giants of the commercial world, little is known of Mr. Booth personally. But those behind the scenes have long recognized him as one of the most up-to-date business men of to-day. Mr. Booth spent several years in the United States, where he absorbed all the best ideas and methods of that country and adapted them to his business interests here.

Not that he is a stranger to Government departments, for he has done a good deal of work for the Board of Trade in connection with labor problems, and in particular has made a study of the conditions of the tailoring trade.

Mr. Booth is a striking example of the pushful young man of to-day. He is only thirty-eight years of age, and some idea of the high esteem in which his business qualities are held may be gathered from the fact that shortly before he went to the War Office he was elected a director of the Bank of England in place of the late Mr. Charles Goschen.

That Mr. Booth is faced with a formidable task is evident from his remarks to an interviewer concerning his work at the War Office. "We are going," he said, "to make a special attempt to increase the labor available for munitions of war. Our work is the one problem of concentrating on the output of guns and shells. It may be we shall find an opportunity of concentrating labor which is withdrawable from other work, and we shall have to see what we can do to increase the labor available for making these things."

Bees Routed Meeting.

A swarm of bees took possession the Mayo Hall, Allahabad, the er day, and caused the sudden adment of a public meeting that being held at the time. There been similar trouble on previous asions, many people being severe sting by bees which infest the own Hall and defy all attempts to removed them.

THE FARM INVENTORY.

The Farmer Should Be Able to Tell Whether His Work Is Profitable.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

Like every business man, the farmer should be able to tell whether or not he has made money out of his operations and, if so, how much. The amount of cash at his disposal is no indication of his success. A striking instance of this is quoted by the office of farm management of the United States department of agriculture in one of its recent publications. A young New York farmer with 100 acres made two successive inventories a year apart, covering in detail his land, buildings, live stock, machinery and tools, produce on hand, supplies, bills receivable and payable and cash. At the time of the first inventory he had in cash $896, at the second only $133. Nevertheless, after all his farm expenses had been paid, all his living expenses and the interest on the money he had borrowed, he had really the equivalent of $563 to show for his year's work. At the beginning of the year his total assets had been $13,090, and these increased in the year to $13,400. In addition he had reduced the farm indebtedness by $253; thus his business was worth $563 more at the end of the year than it had been at the beginning. The increase of his investment in live stock, machinery and tools and produce held for sale amounted to $1,073, but on the other hand his cash had decreased $763.

Most energetic young farmers will find themselves in a somewhat similar position. They are naturally disposed to put back into the farm business what money they make out of it. The result is that however successful the enterprising farmer may be, he is not likely to find himself at the end of the year with much cash on hand. Unless he is scrupulous to take an accurate and thorough inventory this will be more than likely to discourage him and, moreover, there will be no way for him to tell whether or not he is managing his farm properly. To be of any service, however, the inventory must be thorough. It must be a detailed list, with values of everything that he owns, including money that is owed him; and, on the other hand, he must reckon up all of his debts and obligations. The difference between the total assets and debts is, of course, the net farm worth. It is this he wishes to increase, not the cash in hand.

The Isle of Man.

The Isle of Man, while a part of the British Empire, is not a part of England, and is not governed by the laws of England. The isle has a code of laws entirely its own. The Manx have no armed forces to maintain, no income tax, death, estate or stamp duties to pay, and their customs dues are in most cases on a lower scale than in the United Kingdom.

Manxwomen, too, have special privileges. Every female adult, widow or spinster in the Isle of Man, whether she be owner, occupier or lodger, has a vote for the House of Keys elections. Every widow enjoys half of her husband's personal estate and has a life interest in his real estate, and she cannot be deprived of this by will; whilst her written consent must be obtained to all transfers and deeds affecting her husband's property.

On the other hand, no married woman can legally possess in her own right either money or property in the Isle of Man; she can have no separate estate unless specially protected before marriage, and can make no will without the leave of her husband.

Nothing Left To Luck In Attacks Of The Italians

Rome, Aug 8.—Letters received in Rome from officers at the front agree that the fighting on the Isonzo river and on the Carso plateau may well be taken as an excellent example of the perfect realization of the plans of the Italian commanders.

Nothing in these engagements was left to a chance. Everything was worked out with mathematical precision. A lieutenant of artillery, writing from the front, say the formidable Austrian defences on Mount Podgoro and on Mount San Michaels are no longer reconizable, the Italian artillery having done its work so well. A few days saw the destruction of what cost Austria a vast sum of money to build.

Other letters relate that a large proportion of the Austrian losses were caused, not by the Italian fire, but by the hurling down of rocks. Over 10,000 men were thus crushed to death in their trenches. At San Martini no fewer than 2,500 Austrian dead were found in a group of trenches, crushed by falling rocks.

The Italians, these letters set forth, lost comparatively few men in this fighting. The reasons would appear to be two; first, the excellent use of artillery and second, frequent charges with the bayonet, a weapon which the Italians apparently handled to better advantage than do their opponents.

Old Ontario the Best Yet.

The Guelph Mercury tells a story of a man recently met, who at one time had a good farm in Bruce, but who went west with his neighbors and did fairly well, but declares it is not the place this Province is. He had 130 acres here and sacrificed it to some extent in order to make a quick sale and get away. Last year, in common with many others, he had only a fair crop, but nothing to what he expected when he went there. It was hard to market because he was some distance from an elevator or a station. Conditions were not the best for his family. Schools and churches were a long way off. He had made the trip back east for the purpose of seeing if the man who had bought his farm was tired of his bargain, and wanted to sell back to him. He was disappointed because he did not get the old place back, but he has not given up the notion of becoming a farmer again in Ontario. The wonder is that any one having a good farm in Ontario was ever enticed to go West, and no doubt there are hundreds who would now come back if they had the opportunity. Some of them will. The reaction that has set in, and that will continue, is bound, as the Murcury says, to be a benefit to Ontario. Ontario farm lands are about as solid an investmedt as there is on the market at the present time.

A clergyman had taught an old man in his congregation to read, and found him an apt pupil. Calling at the house some time after, he found only the wife at home.

"How's John?" asked he.

"How does he get on with his reading?"

"Nicely, sir."

"Ah, I suppose he can read his Bible comfortably now?"

"Bible, sir! Bless you, he was out of the Bible and into the sporting pages long ago!"—Chicago Herald.

UNPROVOKED WAR.

Rotterdam, Tuesday, July 20.

The following manifesto has been issued by the Committee of the German Humanity League to its associates and to friends in Europe and America :—

Dear Comrades,—Although by base treachery Ernst Schuster was betrayed at Madgeburg and met a hero's death, his work has not perished, and we shall not cease to oppose by propaganda the iniquitous policy of the Imperial Government. By false declarations the press is compelled to deceive the Fatherland, and our compatriots continue to be slaughtered in the trenches. By golden gifts the members of the Reichstag and publicists have been seduced to betray the people's cause they had sworn to defend. We ask all our associates to enforce in their towns and communes the truth which every wage earner and toiler must be able to grasp. We must not be downhearted by the knowledge of the internal oppression which holds down by force a restless and indignant nation. It should spur us to proclaim with renewed vigor that true patriots are those who, loving and defending their own homes and kinfolk, respect and maintain inviolate the rights of all peoples to a common measure of freedom and justice. We are convinced therefore that there has been no conspiracy by any Government or nation against Germany, and that, on the contrary, it is only by the victory of the Allied armies as the guardians of humanity that we ourselves shall be emancipated from the accursed yoke of Prussian militarism. It is this yoke which crushes us to slavery. Enlightened democrats in all countries must assist us in breaking that before the German States can regain the pathway of peace.

We desire outraged Belgium, Luxembourg, and France to be restored to tranquility and the liberation of Poland and Bohemia from the fetters of servitude. For nearly a year a devastating conflict has shattered our homes, darkened our lives, robbed us of our bravest sons, and set the whole civilized world against us. Our Government has by foul corruption deceived the Turkish nation and compassed its ruin. Let us look facts plainly in the face. No state coveted our land or menaced German integrity. Our ships were free to sail, and were welcomed in every ocean. Our citizens enjoyed fullest citizen rights in all parts of the world. Our industrial output found ready sale in every quarter of the globe. Commerce was increasing year by year. Everywhere the German flag was respected. To-day it is the badge of infamy. To their last hours the Kaiser, von Tirpitz, and Bethman-Hollweg will carry upon them the brand of shame for the unparalleled ruin they have wrought and the misery into which they have plunged the world by their barbarism on land and sea. Fortified by these reasons, we earnestly appeal to every democratic Saxon, Bavarian, Hanoverian and Wurtemberger to join hands with all who realize the unspeakable crime of unprovoked war, and to persevere in demanding the evacuation of Brabant Flanders, and Luxembourg, and the cessation of bloody outrage in Alsace and Lorraine.

(The above manifesto is signed by twelve Germans who evidently were so anxious that it should be known to the allies that it was forwarded to "The Glasgow Herald" for publication the next day and through the courtesy of Mr. John Fleming of Morewood, was given to The Record.)

A brand new piano may be purchased for $195. Particulars of which may be had at The Record Office.

DAFFY DANIEL

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mrs. Tweedy peered from the window.

Abner, her husband, had also heard the creak of wagon wheels.

"Who be it, Marthy?" he asked.

"Nobody but Daffy Daniel," she replied, resuming her mending.

"Humph!" muttered Abner. "Wish he'd sell me that south lot."

"He ought to be made to," agreed his wife. "Any one as simple as Daffy ought to have a guardeen. I should think you'd speak to the selectmen about it, Abner."

"I've a mind to," grumbled Abner.

"The lot don't do him any good," argued Mrs. Tweedy. "I've said for a long time that Daffy ain't got common sense."

Miss Blake, the new schoolteacher, who boarded at the Tweedys', looked up from her book.

"Why do they call him that?" she asked.

"Call who—what?" demanded Mrs. Tweedy, startled by the sudden question.

"Daffy Daniel."

"Oh! Because he is daffy."

"In what way especially?" insisted Frances Blake. She was a small, clear eyed woman, intrepid of speech and action. "Is he insane?"

"Land, no!" protested Mrs. Tweedy. "Daniel ain't really crazy, but he's simple minded. Folks have called him 'Daffy Daniel' ever since the fire at the Ford place. Daniel was only seventeen, and his pa and ma and his sister was burned to death. Daniel had been spending the night with his cousin at Overbrook. In the night he saw the flames and came running five miles. And when he reached home it was too late. There wan't any home or any folks left.

"He was sick for weeks afterward and since then he's always been queer. Some say he blames himself because he wasn't home that night. He said, 'If I'd been there I might have saved them.'"

"Poor fellow," murmured Miss Blake. "And where does he live now?"

"Built himself a cottage on the old cellar. He loves the farm like a leech, won't part with an inch of land, tho' Abner 'd like that south lot. It joins our prop'ty, you know."

"And so he is queer," went on Frances Blake. "Is he married?"

"Law, no! Wouldn't look at a girl Awful queer!"

"Is he disagreeable?"

"No-o-o, not exactly," admitted Mrs. Tweedy. "He's very short in his manner, don't stop to talk with neighbors and reads most all the time. He's queer. He's downright daffy, Miss Blake. It all happened twenty years ago."

Miss Blake made no comment. She returned to her book, but for nearly an hour she did not turn a leaf.

Presently Mrs. Tweedy arose to prepare the evening meal. Abner got up and lighted the big reading lamp.

But Frances Blake had lost interest in her book. She got up and went bareheaded into the April sunset.

The garden was fragrant with the smell of growing things. The odor of earth was pleasant.

From the woods at the north came a vagrant breeze. It bore a whiff of sassafras and violets and new leaves and springing grass.

"Oh!" cried Frances Blake, throwing her arms to the rosy clouds. "I must breathe this before it goes away."

So she wandered down the back path, through the orchard where robins were calling in low thrilling tones, where insects chirruped in the grasses.

Out of the orchard she wandered into the rolling pastures. Once or twice she crossed a fence.

She heard the distant clamor of the Tweedys' supper bell and scorned it.

It was a magic world, bathed in a rosy light. Bird songs, flower life and smell of springtime Frances closed her eyes and leaned against the fence.

"Are you sick?" asked a man's quiet voice.

Frances looked up, startled. She saw a tall, broad shouldered man in a rough gray suit. His cleanly cut features were bronzed with sun and weather. There was a boyish look about him in spite of his gravity. He had good brown eyes and white, even teeth.

"Thank you, I am quite well," said Frances. "I was only enjoying the evening. It is so beautiful."

"You like it too?" he asked eagerly. "I love it, but I don't dare mention those things. My neighbors believe one should take the beauties of nature as a matter of course."

"Like daily bread, and water, and turnips, I suppose," laughed Frances

FRUIT, THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

Healing Powers of Fruit Proved by "Fruit-a-tives"

The simple juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, when transformed into 'Fruit-a-tives' will relieve diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Skin.

The truth of this statement has been proved in thousands of cases of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Chronic Headaches.

The enormous sales of 'Fruit-a-tives,' are the best proofs of the value of this fruit medicine.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

He nodded.

"But one is supposed to enjoy bread and turnips and be thankful for them. God made sunshine and flowers and birds, and why not be grateful for those too?"

"I am," said Miss Blake quietly. "And so should you."

"I am doubly so, since I have discovered another one who thinks as I do. Listen!"

From the orchard came the throbbing, haunting song of the first whippoorwill.

"I am Frances Blake, the new schoolteacher," she said impulsively. "Who are you?"

He took her hand in his and clasped it in a friendly way.

"I?" he repeated in an altered tone. "Why, they call me 'Daffy Daniel.'"

"Daffy Daniel!" Frances was startled. "How absurd of them! I meant your real name," she added.

"Daniel Ford," he said dazedly.

"Good night, Mr. Ford," said Frances. "Mrs. Tweedy is ringing the bell so desperately I must go."

He watched her cross the fields until she disappeared in the shadowy orchard.

That night Daffy Daniel startled Pond village folks by coming to prayer meeting, a place he had avoided for twenty years.

Perhaps he hoped the schoolteacher would be there. Perhaps it was a sudden whim. Anyway, old friends nodded at him, and women smiled, and the minister shook hands and called him "Mr. Ford."

Miss Blake did not go to prayer meeting. She sat alone in the sitting room and corrected exercises until the Tweedys came home from the church.

Mrs. Tweedy was filled with mild excitement.

"Daffy Daniel was at meeting!" she announced as she sank into a chair.

"Is that an unusual event?" smiled Miss Blake.

"Once in twenty years. Kinder unusual," remarked Abner dryly.

"It's queer!" ejaculated Mrs. Tweedy, and then she went on to tell about the forthcoming fair and carnival which was to be held in Firemen's hall.

"And the decorations are all crape paper and pink cheesecloth," ended Mrs. Tweedy. "Suppose it got afire?"

"That would be dreadful," shuddered Miss Blake as she went up to her room.

That night the schoolteacher dreamed that she attended the carnival in Firemen's hall and that suddenly the whole place was ablaze. Some one picked her up and bore her through fire and smoke to cool safety.

And she opened her eyes and saw that her heroic rescuer was Daffy Daniel.

"Why," she had said to him in wild surprise, "you are a man!"

And he had answered:

"A man asleep. You have awakened me."

She continued to think of Daniel Ford far more often than was necessary or required by mere pity for his lonely condition.

She knew now that many of his eccentricities were due to his habit of living alone with his grief. She knew that through systematic reading he had educated himself above his neighbors. Daffy Daniel was a gentleman and a scholar, and the attitude of his neighbors was incomprehensible.

* * * * * * *

The night of the carnival!

Firemen's hall was a bower of beauty, according to the Pond Point Bugle. "Flowers, festoons and fair femininity crowded the floors," it said enthusiastically before it went on to describe the tragedy that followed.

In the middle of the festivities some one cried "Fire!"

There was a stampede for the single exit, but a man impeded the way, a big man with arms stretched across the doorway, who cried authoritatively:

"One at a time, one at a time! Women and children first!"

The man was Daffy Daniel, who had not attended a festival in twenty years.

While the firemen threw a feeble stream on the flimsy wooden structure Daniel Ford kept the crowd from panic until there remained a mere handful of people, who, frightened at the volumes of smoke pouring up the stairs, declined to go and huddled near the windows.

Among these Frances Blake lingered, encouraging, soothing and helping one and another.

Then Daniel Ford suddenly broke loose upon them, grasped a woman in his arms and rushed down the burning stairs to safety.

Again and again he made the perilous journey, until the room was in flames and there remained only the schoolteacher, pale and calm.

"You?" he groaned. "I must save you!"

"You have saved twenty lives or more, Daniel Ford," she smiled at him.

"Thank God!" he said reverently, "those will atone for the lives I could not save twenty years ago."

As he spoke the burning stairs fell with a crash.

A cry of horror went up from the waiting crowd.

Daniel Ford caught Frances in his arms even as she had dreamed.

"There is one chance. Will you trust me?"

"Yes," she said.

A large window opened on the roof of the square entrance porch. The corner of the porch jutted against the trunk of a huge tree.

Daniel stepped from the window to the roof and swung himself among the branches of the tree, Frances held in one strong arm.

The crowd cheered wildly, and a hundred hands leaped up to help him as he slid down to the ground.

But he gave the girl to no other hands. He stood there, dazed. A scorched, blackened figure, with the fire of manhood in his eyes.

"Three cheers for Daniel Ford!" yelled his neighbors, and as they gave it he knew that with the acclaim were the love and admiration of his friends. Never again would they call him "Daffy Daniel."

Then the roof fell in, and as the crowd ran toward the building Frances looked up into Daniel's face.

"Ah!" she breathed. "You are a man and a hero!"

His face glowed.

"I am glad for your sake," he said and their eyes met and understood.

Value of White Oilcloth.

White oilcloth can work a transformation in the darkest, dingiest kitchen and add to the charm of the brightest. A yard will save you from facing the indifferent or worn out paint at the base of the dish closet shelving, and besides, make cleaning easy and gratifying. The inside window ledge of the kitchen and the bathroom treated in this way will be conducive to beauty and cleanliness.

A strip along the wall beside the sink will catch spattered drops of dish water or drainings and may be readily cleaned with a lightly soaped cloth rubbed over the surface.

A stretch of oilcloth above the japanning about the range will catch any spattering grease, the vapor of steam or the blackest of escaping smoke, which can then be washed off, though here one of the coarse cleansers may be necessary to restore the pristine whiteness.

A yard of white oilcloth will cover the top of a kitchen table, with some to spare. A length of a few inches more of the scalloped kind will render the tops of the washtubs sightly and convertible to table uses. The top of the refrigerator covered in this way will be taken as a pledge of the sweet, clean interior below.

Porch Rugs.

Rag rugs for your porch can be bought anywhere at from $1.50 to $10, depending on the size and style. These rag rugs are much the best for porch use, as they are washable.

Keep plenty of flowers on the porch table, also all the new magazines, arranging them neatly on the top. If afternoon tea is to be served there daily, the tea tray can be kept on the table, too. These alterations will cost but very little and will transform your porch.

Milking Records of Pure Bred Cows.

Nine years ago the Live Stock Branch of the federal Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with certain record associations representing breeds of dairy cattle, began to record the performance of pure bred milking cows. Each record association agreed upon a standard of yield for cows of its respective breed to qualify for registration, while the Live Stock Commissioner formulated regulations under which the tests were to be carried out. At the end of each year a report of the work has been issued, containing a list of the animals that qualified for registration during the year, their breed, age, ownership, milking period, production of milk and fat and such other information as might reasonably be looked for in an official report. Each year the work has increased until the seventh report, just issued, contains no less than 152 pages of information. During the year 413 cows qualified for registration, including 196 holsteins, 123 Ayrshires, 35 Jerseys, 9 Guernseys, 14 French Canadians and 36 Shorthorns. The highest records made were:— Shorthorn, 15,535 lbs. milk, 540 lbs. fat; French Canadian, 10,767 lbs. milk, 453 lbs. fat; Guernsey, 11,445 lbs. milk, 520 lbs. fat; Holstein, 23,717 lbs. milk, 834 lbs. fat; Jersey, 15,211 lbs. milk, 754 lbs. fat; Ayrshire, 16,696 lbs. milk, 720 lbs. fat.

This report for the second time contains an appendix containing the records of cows which produced sufficient milk and fat to qualify for registration but failed to calve within fifteen months after the commencement of the test, as required by the registrations. This report is of special interest to dairy farmers who are anxious to build up the milking qualities of their herds. Copies will be sent to those who apply for them to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Wanted a Shot at the Germans.

Kingston Whig: On Thursday, W. H. Whylie received a letter from the authorities of a home in Brockville, having the custody of the Scotch boy who ran away from a farmer and came to Kingston to enlist for service at the front. If the farmer does not want to take the boy back he will be sent to the home in Brockville. This is the youngster who wanted to get to the front to have a shot at the Germans, in order to avenge the death of his brother, who was wounded.

Advantages of the Safety Silo

Filling doors have glass windows which light the inside and form part of the roof when closed without wind obstruction.

Cone shaped roof with Galvanized iron ventilator on peak to let out the gas and steam as they accumulate.

Our fasteners being entirely on the door, doors can be left in the opening at any height merely pushed up out of the way and always where they belong.

Easiest to get feed out of. Unobstructed continuous opening, 22 inches wide, makes it possible to shove ensilage out instead of having to threw it up three or four feet in the air to an opening.

Refitting doors unnecessary, a few turns of nuts here and door front is adjusted perfectly to fit doors, making them air tight.

Takes man or boy only one hour instead of a day to tighten or adjust every hoop on Silo while standing on ladder formed by fasteners. No dangerous slipping separate ladder needed as on other Silos.

Our safe fastener makes a substantial ladder right under opening rungs 15 inches apart, stands out 6 inches from the door and is 14 inches wide.

From the above points we leave you to judge as to its superiority over all others.

For a Long Life.

In summing up the rules for producing longevity Sir Herman Weber, M.D., lays down the following regime:

Avoid discontentment and worry. Worry is one of the surest life shorteners known.

Rise early and retire early. This is important, for it was practiced for long ages by the ancestors of civilized men and is a natural habit.

Practice moderation in everything, especially in eating.

Breathe pure air, getting plenty of oxygen with every inhalation.

Take regular daily exercise.

Do not sleep more than six, or at most more than seven hours.

Exercise the brain every day.

Bathe daily.

Practice deliberate and careful control over all passions, especially over anger, which destroys more tissue than any other passion.

Control nervous fear. Learn to be as unafraid as possible.

Must Label Poor Boots.

Boots containing shoddy have had to declare themselves in New Zealand since 1st January, by bearing a legible label or stamp setting forth the materials by which they are made, the genuine leather sole and upper and other parts of the boot not being required to be branded with the fact. The penalty for the breach of the regulation is a fine not exceeding $50 so far as stamping is concerned, but to sell boots with shoddy soles unstamped and as leather soles the retailer runs the risk of being fined $100.

MANY USES FOR POTATO.

To clean a vinegar cruet fill the cruet with finely chopped potato skin, cork tightly and let stand in a warm place three days, then turn the skins out and rinse the cruet with warm water and borax.

To clean rusty knives use a raw potato dipped in brick dust.

To kindle fires potato parings dried in the oven are good, as they light easily.

To clean carpets grate a raw potato and rub over the surface of the carpet and finish off with a clean cloth wrung out in warm water.

To clean dresses grate two raw potatoes into a pint of cold water, strain through a sieve, add another pint of water and let it settle. Dip a sponge into the water and rub the soiled garment carefully, afterward rinsing with clear water.

To clarify drippings slice a raw potato into the fat while rendering. It will absorb all impurities.

To clean silk from mud spots, after washing thoroughly rub soiled places with a raw potato.

When a fern turns yellow slice a raw potato and put it on top of the soil, This will draw out the worms.

RED CROSS WORK

The Canadian Foresters Good Example.

The social given by the Canadian Order of Foresters on Mr. W. B. Lawson's lawn, for the purpose of raising funds for the Red Cross work was another evidence of the growing sympathy with, and interest in the movement.

Despite rather threatening weather during the afternoon the work of decorating and arranging for the affair was carried out with the greatest energy. The spacious verandah, which was beautifully decorated with flags, and hung with electric lights, served for a stage.

Mr. W. B. Lawson acted as chairman, and he took occasion during the evening to speak of the necessity of everyone's helping along the good work, which would languish and fail unless enthusiasm and patriotism were behind it.

The Chesterville String Orchestra, with the assistance of Mr. A. E. Bolster and Master T. Carpenter, put on a musical programme which was warmly appreciated by all.

At the close of the concert refreshments were served at tables on the lawn, and afterwards many of those present repaired to the Music Hall, when an assembly was held, the music being furnished by the C.O.F. orchestra.. Everyone there was enraptured by the beautiful step dancing of Little Miss Virginia Hughes of Chicago, niece of Mr. Jas. Hughes.

It was particularly gratifying to the Red Cross workers that an organization such as the C. O. F. should show their interest by such a splendid effort, and the Red Cross Society desire to place on record their warmest thanks, not alone for the fine sum of money raised ($62.67) but much more for the encouragement and backing which the action of the C.O.F. stands for.

The Red Cross Society and the Foresters are very grateful to Mrs. Levi Sorrel for her assistance in preparing for the social and afterwards.

Messrs. Herman Hummel and Wesley Reveler left yesterday for Stratford to attend the sessions of the I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge, the former representing Chesterville Lodge No. 285 and the latter Morewood Lodge No. 288.

With $500 hung up as purses for four races on Aug. 27th on the Chesterville Driving Park, a high class of horses should be attracted. The track is in grand shape and pronounced by competent judges the best in Eastern Ontario.

Rev. E. F. Fox, a native of Winchester Township, now of Toronto, who is renewing acquaintances in Eastern Ontario, after a trip abroad in company with his cousin, Mr. J. F. Cass, Misses Jessie Preston and Mabel Cass of Winchester called upon W. J. Cass here yesterday.

Recruits for overseas service have not been over plentiful lately from this district. An excellent opportunity is given now to join the 73rd of Montreal, the famous Black Watch regiment. Chesterville is in the recruiting district for it.

A number of the members of the A F & A M Order from town attended the funeral in Russell Sunday of the late Wm. McKay, who passed away at his home in that town on Tuesday morning of last week after an illness of several months. The deceased was well known throughout this section, having lived a greater portion of his sixty-six years at Morewood.

Gunner William Chester, of Gananoque, whose death of wounds was reported a few days ago, died as a result of a souvenir-hunting craze. Chester carried a German shell into a trench with the idea of preserving it as a memento. He was ordered by an officer to throw it out, and while in the act of obeying this command the shell exploded, wounding him severely in the abdomen, from the effects of which he died.
