Rotary Hears Dr. Hutt In Christmas Message

"The hope and faith of the people is shown in the Divine birth. The Manger became a place of Royal Bounty and Christ became the Food for the World." So said Dr. S. Hutt in his opening remarks in addressing the regular meeting of the Chesterville Rotary Club, held Monday evening.

With the Community Hall in an upset state due to the installation of the new heating system, the Rotary meeting was held at the home of President and Mrs. L. H. Doering. The festive season of the year and the Christmas meeting were much enhanced by the gracious hospitality of the host and hostess in supplying their home as a meeting place for the thirty odd members and guests. Out of town guests of the club were Rotarian W. Hubert Dixon of Niagara Falls, Cliff Butterill of Perth, and Stan Morman of Smiths Falls.

After the singing of Christmas carols, and President Lawrence's reminder to the directors of the director's meeting to be held on January 7th, Dr. Hutt was asked to address the club.

Continuing his theme of close relationship between the ma[illegible]rd its primary use to su[illegible] the [illegible] that Christ[illegible]nble [illegible]Doc-[illegible]ile [illegible]e turies old, and based on man's Christianity, Dr. Hutt said that Rotary is an ideal and lives for all that is decent and good.

In conclusion, the speaker asked if he might read the famous "Letter to Virginia," that had been printed in the New York "Sun" many years [illegible]o, but bore repeating every year. [illegible]t before Christmas, years ago, a [illegible] girl wrote to the Editor of the [illegible]ork "Sun" the following let-

[illegible]tor:

[illegible] world, [illegible]er men [illegible]ou ever [illegible]n? Of [illegible] they [illegible]al or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world. You tear apart the baby's rattle and you see what makes the noise inside. But there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest men that ever lived can tear apart. Only Faith, Fancy, Poetry, Love and Romance can push that curtain aside and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond.

Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all the world nothing else is real and abiding. No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia. Nay ten times ten thousand years from now he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

The speaker was thanked by R. C. Dillabough.

SANTA IS COMING TO POST OFFICE SQUARE

Word has just been received from the busy headquarters of Santa Claus at the North Pole, that he will be able to make a flying visit to the Public Square in Chesterville, early in the evening, Christmas Eve, in spite of his many duties for that night. He has been assured that the Firemen's Association will be on hand to give him a lift if the reindeer need a little rest and the Chesterville Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce are going to do their parts in seeing that everything goes smoothly. Candy and stuff are promised, so kids big and little, are to be on hand bright and early Christmas Eve to give Saint Nick a royal welcome.

C.G.I.T. Presents Pageant

The annual C.G.I.T. Christmas pageant was presented in Trinity United Church on Sunday evening to a large audience. The pageant, entitled "For God So Loved the World", was written by Mrs. Harry Allison.

The climax came when the evil forces of the modern world kneeled at the Manger as the lights went out. When the lights were turned on again, the evil forces had changed their dark robes for white and were, instead, all the virtues needed in the world today.

The following is the cast: Mary, Marjorie Hutt; Joseph, Ruth Simpson; Star, Patsy Durant; Wise Men, Jean MacMillan, Florence Daniels, Sheila Morris; Shepherds, Jean Hartwell, Audrey Fyke, Marlene McLean; two Polish urchins, Jean Doering, Una Merkley; War-Peace, Mildred MacIntosh; Selfishness-Unselfishness, Margaret Gilroy; Intemperance-Temperance ,Donelda McLean; Inflation-Prosperity ,Lois Turner; Intolerance-Love, Edith Baker; Hunger-Plenty, Miriam Gilroy ;Crime-Education, Vera Merkley.

The music was in charge of Mr. P. G. Hewitt, assisted by the choir, with a duet by Mrs. C. A. Graham and Miss Beryl Hewitt, and a solo by Miss Marjorie Merkley.

Margaret Daniels and Audrey Baindese took the special offering at the door, which amounted to approximately $20.00.

The pageant was directed by Mrs. Eric Casselman, Superintendent of the C.G.I.T.

SELECTING TURKEYS FOR BREEDING STOCK

Consumers are becoming more aware of desirable meat qualities in turkeys and the satisfaction of the customer should be the objective of those who raise market turkeys, or sell day-old poults to be raised as market turkeys.

The fat and finish on market turkeys is chiefly a matter of feeding and management says R. M. Blakely, Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Sask. The desirable market qualities, such as plumpness and roundness of breast fleshing, and general blockiness of body are inherited characteristics. Trukeys must be bred into a flock through rigid selection of breeding stock.

The proper selection of breeding stock is important to the individual breeder, but the responsibilities of those who maintain flocks for the sale of commercial hatching eggs is even greater. The poults resulting from eggs will be distributed to a great many growers.

Ideal breeding stock are plump bodied birds with long smooth keels, which are well rounded with fleshing throughout their entire length. Selection for this class of bird should commence as they approach maturity as only in this way can early maturing qualities be marked. To insure that the best birds of the flock are retained as breeders, final selection should be made before they are marketed. Balanced carriage, as indicated by fullness of breast, medium length of leg and neck, and blocky outline are also important characteristics. These qualities can only be noted as the birds are walking about the pen. Birds with over long necks and legs and wedge-shaped bodies should be rigidly culled.

The final selection should include the careful handling of each bird. The bird should be held over a barrel or table by an attendant, as both hands are required to determine the market type of the bird's body. The keel bone should be reasonably rocker sufficiently at the front, to eliminate any tendency to prominence or knobbiness. Good length of keel in proportion to the size of bird is desirable. Many breeding flocks at the present time are inclined to be too short in keel length. Great stress should be placed on breast thickness. This should be a broad "U" throughout the entire length of the keel bone. Large, coarse, deep keeled birds should be avoided since their offspring will not possess the compactness desirable in the dressed bird.

Careful attention to these points over a period of years has resulted in a great improvement in the market type of the turkey flock at the Experimental Station, Swift Current.

CHRISTMAS MESSAGE FROM REV. HUESTIN, MOREWOOD

The Editor of the Record has graciously complied with my request to give you a message this year at Christmas. This is a year when we approach Christmas with mixed feelings, for it is a world in which there is a great deal of perpexlity and dissatisfaction, much trouble and sorrow, suffering and need, and not a little fear. So it is a blessing to be able to read and to set before you the words of the angel spoken to men at the time Jesus was born, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city ofg David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. St. Luke 2:10,11.

But as someone has said
Though Christ a thousand times
In Bethlehem be born
If He's not born in you
Thy soul is all forlorn.

Nicodemus heard Jesus' words, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. That which is home of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again". St. John 3:5,6,7. And as our being born of woman into the world is an act of God, so our being born of the Spirit into the heavenly Kingdom is an act of God's free grace, whereby He who gave his unspeakable gift the Saviour Jesus Christ, gives to us being sinners the gift of saving or justifying faith. And, being convinced of sin and misery and that hell is our destiny, we sinners accept the truth of the gospel, we receive and rest on Christ and his righteousness for pardon of sin, and we hope in the Saviour is the one through whom we shall be accepted before God in this "Day of Christ". Philippeans 2:16.

Jesus is coming again. He has given his promise, "I will come again". St. John 14:3.

The Right Reverend T. W. Jones, D.D., Moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada in his message broadcast on November 30, Advent Sunday, told his bearers that Advent speaks of the coming or birth of Christ into the world, and it also speaks of the second advent or the second coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. And he pointed out that while all believers do not agree as to how or when He will come, it is true that the idea, the hope and the belief that Christ will come again is a part of the faith. It is written in the apostles creed, "From thence He shall come to judge the living and the dead." The King, the King of Kings is coming. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him, Even so, Amen. God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things on earth, and things under the earth: and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord ,to the glory of God the Father. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Hallelujah! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him, for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his Bride hath made herself ready. And he said to me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God. Revelation 1:7; Philippians 2:9,10,11; Revelation 19:6, 7,9.

Feasting is something which we often associate with Christmas. It may be Christmas dinner or supper: for many a Christmas dinner eaten at the close of the day when many others are having supper. Christmas is the feast of Christ. At midnight mass on one occasion a few years ago a priest finished his sermon with words which projected his hearers thoughts into the future when we shall, "Feast the eternal Christmas in heaven." I pray that you have the truth of Christmas, the truth of Good Friday, the truth of Easter Day and the truth of the day of the Lord: Christ born, crucified, risen and coming again for you, as a part of your faith as you approach Christmas this year. He said,, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." St. Matthew 11:28, St. John 6:37.

May your name soon be written. if it has not already been written, in the Lamb's Book of Life, and may you be one of those which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Amid the many vicissitudes of life and things coming to pass which speak to us that the coming of the Lord is at hand, "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth", we are a privileged people to have these words of Jesus who says, "Then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh. St. Luke 21:26,27,28.

I approach Christmas this year with great hope, "a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead". St. Peter I, 1:3. I greet every believer in Jesus. "Peace be unto you" and the blessing of God the Father, of God the Son, who is our Lord and Saviour, our Coming King, and of God the Holy Ghost be upon you.

To the Editor and the members of his staff and to every reader of the Record, my wish is that you may know Christ, "the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints . . . . . which is Christ in you, the hope of glory." May you be one of those who are "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Titus 2:13,14. May this be a truly Christian Christmas for each one of you and may you thus be happy in the joy of the Lord.

W. H. Heustin.

A young midshipman reported for duty to the commanding officer of a battleship. The C. O. was a gruff old sailor who had worked his way up through the years. He sized up the new man with anything but pleasure.

"Well, young man," he snorted, "I suppose, as usual, they sent the fool of the family to sea?"

"Oh, no, sir," said the middie. "They changed all that since your time, sir."

The year 1947 is rapidly drawing to a close, and in this moment of retrospection, we wish, once again, to consider our many blessings, and in so doing, forget the many hardships.

Among our blessings and very close to our hearts are the cordial ellowship and understandings that exist between our house and establishment of twenty-two years standing in this community.

In the full knowledge of them we look forward with confidence to the future, well knowing that whatever difficulties arise they shall be surmounted by such mutual and proven co-opertation.

May your endeavors long flourish and may we, in all earnestness, wish to you and yours

WILL BUILD DWELLING FOR HIGH SCHOOL PRINCIPAL

A by-law authorizing the issuing of debentures for the sum of $3,000 was the main item of business at the final meeting of the Winchester Township council held Tuesday.

The money realized from the sale of the debentures will be used for the erection of a residence in Morewood, which will be occupied by the teacher of the high school. The ratepayers of Morewood school section had pressed for a modern residence to be built in Morewood, earlier this year.

The tender of Ross Hutchinson of Winchester was accepted for snow removal on certain roads in the township and the rate was quoted at $4.50 per hour. Reeve John A. Bogart of Chesterville presided at the meeting, which was also attended by Deputy Reeve Harold Durant and Councillors Basil Dawley, William Brown and E. B. McMillan.

Knew Their Brands

From her window, Jean Tennyson watched some kids playing. They weren't dive-bombing or yelling like a machine gun. One had set up a box and declared:

"This is the Far West and this box is the Last Chance Saloon!"

A second kid swaggered up, pounded the bar, and said: "I'll have a rye!"

A third (younger, and apparently less sophisticated) peeped: "I'll have a whole wheat!"

"THEY OUTSHINE THE MOUNTIES"

From The Blue Bell

The ever courteous, cool, capable and resourceful performance of telephone operators, immediately following the St. Lawrence River collision of the steamship Milverton and Translake, has added still further to the prestige of "The Voice With The Smile". In times of stress and emergency we become aware, as never before, of the important contribution made by operators to the daily life of the nation.

THERE is romance, adventure, fun and pathos to be found at a telephone switchboard. Naturally some switchboards offer more probability of excitement than others, but there is record of unusual requests and interest at every type of board—local, long distance, information. dial service assistance, private branch exchange—and in large and small centres.

If you're a telephone operator you may be called on to talk to a prince or a tramp, trace a person across the continent ,arouse the emergency services of a city—police, firemen, hospitals—report a murder, find a handbag. If you are on duty in a small centre you will know the stork's schedule and when the frantic call comes, you will be expected to summon old Doctor Macklyn and a couple of neighbour women.

If you're an operator, you may be called on at any time to do a job vital to the nation. If you're a Bell Telephone operator, you are working in one of the important territories of the United Nations. There are few telephone circuits anywhere more important than those lying between Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto and their tributaries. If you're an operator, the mere fact of providing the best possible service for the government, the armed forces, business and industry and a couple of guys named Joe, is hardley a novelty.

If you are not an operator, you will likely look upon the job the operator is doing as simply wonderful, particularly her record of service "beyond the contract". This extra service is not found so easily for it is the unwritten part of the telephone business. Unless the customer is moved to the point of commending a girl by letter, her associates in the operating room and the company-at-large seldom hear of her performance. But those letters and the occasional remark speak volumes.

Drama at Welland

For example, few telephone people outside of the Welland telephone office have heard of the important part played by the Welland operating staff in rushing aid to the victims of the worst accident in the history of that busy industrial town.

Death struck swiftly in 45 paralysing seconds at a war plant extension of Atlas Steels Ltd. in Welland early one afternoon during the war. The scaffolding and the raw concrete it held on the roof above collapsed, killing four men instantly and injuring over thirty others.

The collapse of the factory unit, 300 feet long and 70 feet wide, could be heard for some distance. There was a sound like a great weight of snow sliding off a roof; a loud rumble, then a roar. A minute later factory whistles sounded an alarm that could be heard throughout the town.

With that inherent devotion to duty for which operators are known the world over, members of the Welland switchboard staff left their unfinished lunches, their shopping and their walks and talks, sensing in the wail of the hooters that disaster had befallen.

Welland is a dial telephone centre. Immediately following the first alarm, emergency buttons were pressed placing the Atlas plant, hospitals, the police and fire departments and other services on manual operation. Two operators were assigned to handle calls from these key points exclusively.

The moment a receiver was raised at the Atlas plant ,for example, operator responded. "We need nurses," was one urgent request.

"I'll take care of it," replied operator.

"We need cots and blankets," came over a wire from the hospital.

Operator took care of that request. too. Operator continued to take care of all kinds of things from early afternoon until late at night. Doctors, nurses, clergymen, first aiders, ambulances, trucks, cots, medical supplies were summoned, relatives of the victims were traced—a thousand and one acts were performed by the busy operating staff throughout that hectic day. The girls worked on long past their regular tour of duty while the shadow of death and uncertainty hovered over many homes in Welland and outside points.

It matters not whether a particular crisis is on a national, local or individual plane, the operator tackles each new task with equal determination.

A woman arrived in the strange, big city of Toronto with her two small children. She was to have been met at the station by some friends from Newmarket. They were not there. She called them but the telephone was unanswered. Following the custom of many people in troule, she told the operator of her plight. Within a short time the stranded woman was in communication with her friends who were located by operator on the highway where their car had broken down.

Frank Calder's Tribute

The late Frank Calder, chairman of the National Hockey League for over 20 years, used to say of telephone operators that they outshone the Mounties in getting their man. Emerging from the Windsor-Detroit tunnel in a taxi one evening, Mr. Calder stopped at the Customs Office, whereupon a customs officer poked his head in the window and asked if there was a Mr. Calder aboard. "Telephone call from Los Angeles for you," he said.

It was a man on the Pacific Coast talking about post season play-offs. "How in the world did you know where I was?" Mr. Calder asked. "I've moved around so much today I hardly know where I am myself."

"The man in Los Angeles did not know where I was," Mr. Calder later recounted. "All he know was that he called my office in Montreal and he had me on the line. It was an example of the efficiency of modern communication at its best. Here is what took place!

"Journeying to Detroit from Montreal, for a presentation at the arena there, I arranged to fly to Windsor and had arranged to have dinner there with a friend. We left Montreal in the morning and I figured we had plenty of time, until the plane was grounded at Ottawa due to bad weather. It was five-thirty before we were able to leave the Capital. The operator traced me from Montreal, tried to bag me at Ottawa, got the Windsor airport, was told I had just left, so she nailed me at the other end of the tunnel. I take my hat off to those girls in profound admiration."

A Cross-Canada Search

Another instance of resourcefulness and determination in completing calls caused a continent-wide hunt for the persons wanted. Not long ago the Montreal long distance centre was asked to try and locate a brother and sister. The only information available was that one was in the vicinity of Sydney, Nova Scotia, and the other in Bathurst, New Brunswick. When operator reached these points she learned that both had left some time previously and their whereabouts were unknown. As this was a case of emergency, operator continued her efforts to locate them and, by dint of careful questioning and follow-up work, was able to trace them across the Dominion to Vancouver, back to Ontario, and finally located the brother travelling by automobile between Belleville and Toronto and the sister in Mexico City.

News Bring Fast Action

News of great international, national or even local significance, fire, flood, earthquake. invasion, storm, blackouts, explosion, all are very quickly reflected in the telephone system. When a big fire broke out in St. Catharines in the stillness of the night, two operators rushed to central office in their pyjamas, knowing they would be needed immediately. One night in the spring of 19 when German submarines shelled Florida's East Coast, there were only two girls on duty at the Jackson Beach telephone exchange, but in less than fifteen minutes after the first shot was fired, the whole force had reported in. One operator left the beach and worked all night in a bathing suit, other girls sat down at the switchboard in evening dress.

The inborn desire to get the message through, has cost most operators their lives. Two notable examples which come to mind of operators who made the supreme sacrifice to save others are the stories of Gladys Gibson and Sally Rooke.

"There's a fire here in the hotel—a terrible explosion—call the fire department, the police, ambulances—it's awful—and—".

The voice of the hospital switchboard operator, Miss Gladys I. Gibson, choking and gasping for breath as the fumes from the fire surrounded her, sounded a warning, at the cost of her own life, which beyond doubt prevented the loss of life in the disaster from mounting still higher.

The story of Sally Rooke is also one of heroism and a magnificent devotion to duty.

In a cottage in a little village on the banks of a stream called the Dry Cimarron, Mrs. Sarah J. Rooke was attending the switchboard of the little telephone exchange. It was raining. About ten o'clock in the evening, up from a ranch house ten miles cloudburst valley informed her that a tremendous had occurred and that a rushing volume of water was Realizing the river.

began caching the danger, Mrs. Rooke began calling the villagers, warning them of the advancing flood. She knew houses above the village would be in the path of the then those further down the Valley. Repeatedly, then the villagers, was urged to save herself. But the young operator steadily she refused. Duty and repeatedly she must warn the people, shouting out that down the valley. still farther

The flood struck. water carried everything Seven months later, one wall of miles below the village before it. beneath the debris far eight stream's normal banks, Sauried the body was found.

A good telephone operator's qualities quickly acquires, the courage of a commando. the dogged determination of Winston Churchill. the deductive powers of Sherlock Holmes, the compassion of the Good Samaritan, the patience of Job. the resourcefulness of a weed and the coolness of a cantaloupe.

For all that, operator is not infallible. She too makes a mistake now and then. But she is a good pal to have in a jam. She's at her best in an emergency.

there now?" asked the stranger, are you just going in?"

"No, sir. I've just come out," farmer answered ."Congressman low is talking in there."

"What about?"

"Well," continued the countryman passing a knotted hand across forehead, "he didn't say!"

THE BELLS AT CHRISTMAS

Once again the message of the bells will peal forth and the hushed wonderful feeling that Christ is born will pervade the hearts of mankind.

Each in his own way will interpret Christmas.

To the wide-eyed child, the visit of Santa Claus, the tree, the presents will hold paramount place.

The youth and maiden having put away childish things will perhaps share the delight of Christmas and be planning for Christmas celebrations in their own home in later years.

Young parents are having the joy of sharing the first Christmas with their baby and by reason of this, the beauty and wonder of the birth of the Child Jesus is more poignant and real.

To the older parents it will mean the home coming of their children, accompanied by their children.

Others will have memories of happier Christmas. Memory strays at this season so much to childhood scenes. I have memory of the yule log, Christmas carols sung in the misty English twilight, Christmas pudding alight with blue flame and a small brother chanting "Who will ride before McBride to fetch the Christmas Pud?" Of bells chiming on Christmas Day and service in the grey church hoary with age.

For some the family circle may have been broken and a loved one gone to be with God—and because of aching hearts the happy sounds will be muffled.

The bells will ring over a Holy Land torn by strife, where the crack-[le] of gun fire, sudden death, fire and destruction is as common as the [breath]ing hate.

[Some]thing about the Christmas [spir]its Peace. The Gentle Mo-[ther], [kind]ly Father, the Babe, [in] [man]ger which the Sa-[viour] [was] born that day. The [bells] [will] ring to man-[kind] [of] [peace] and the For-[give]ness.

[The] bells will ring over our peace-[ful] [land] and happy family ga-[ther]ings around tables and [in] [our] churches we hear the [story] [of] the Child Jesus [and] [the] Christmas.

eign Ministers' Conference has ended in failure—but the bells will ring out and we must listen, even if it seems there is little we can do, the ordinary person seems to be unable to understand the juggling of the politicians.

The bells will tell us we must give all year, not just on Christmas Day to hand over a tinsel bedecked package.

We must give love to our children, make a sincere effort to give them companionship and guidance.

We must give to our neighbours our affection and regard.

We must give to the sick and afflicted, the extra visit, the little letter, the cheerful word of encouragement.

We must give to the youth opportunity for knowledge and leadership, remembering always that in war it is the young who are offered up as sacrifice.

We must give training for leisure, showing people that hobbies and time spent in constructive devices. is so very soul satisfying. We must give to our family circle courtesy and respect, knowing that any nation takes its tone from the type of family life usually in it.

We must not forget the bereaved and try in our own way as best we can to give comfort and understanding.

We must give to the aged a chance to talk over their memories, which is all some of them have to cherish.

We must give to our community interests any talents which can further the general good.

It certainly is true that whatever we give we keep, and the bells will tell us the Babe was born in order to follow a pattern that He must give, for us, His Life.

Over the harassed old world, the chimes will echo, in some lands starvation stalks, many people are without a country, others are far from their homeland, some hearts are ravaged with grief, we pray they will hear the message of the bells and be comforted.

Over the vast Majesty of Canada the peals will resound from the hills and vales. This blessed land of opportunity, plenty, freedom and hap-

Our teacher, Mrs. Isobel Darling and her pupils held their annual Christmas Concert on Friday evening. An appreciative audience greeted the children, few in number but big n coming talent. A feature of the evening was the tap-dancing of Mr. Cornelius Kearns of Orchardside, to the violin accompaniment of Piper Willie Munro of Apple Hill who also played for dancing by the pupils. All numbers were well taken but special mention of the Carbino sisters' singing must be made. We hope some day to hear these young artists on on Singing Stars of Tomorrow. Mr. Jos. Poirier also favored the audience with his violin. Mr. Harold Merkley made a splendid Santa and last but not least Mr. Frank Darling was master of ceremonies.

The local school board came in for praise for their interest in having an up-to-date school. The school is all wired ready for a transformer.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Raymond, Miss Raymond, Piper Willie Munro and other friends from Apple Hill attended the concert.

Mr. and Mrs. Salmon and family of Morrisburg, came back for the concert on Friday evening.

Alex Gordon, Queen's, came home Saturday for the Yuletide season.

MacKenzie Gordon spent a few days last week in Western Ontario.

Mrs. John Kittle spent a few days last week in Aultsville with her aunt, Mrs. W. Reddick.

Mr. and Mrs. Vic Hemmings spent a day in Picton, last week.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

Merry Christmas one and all! Everything looks bright and new and everyone looks happy and gay. It's Christmas! We believe the origin of this greeting stemmed from the land so long known as Merry England, whose people naturally celebrated a Merry Christmas. The Scots and French tend to reserve their excitement for New Years. Probably we owe much of the tradition to such writers as Herrick, Dickens and Shakespeare and to all those singers and players who have performed their works through the centuries.

FESTIVE BUFFET IDEAS

Mixed Fruit Cocktails: 4 cups grapefruit juice and 1 cup orange juice; 2 cups sweet cranberry juice and 3 cups pineapple juice; 1 cup prune juice, ½ cup lemon juice and 4 cups apple juice.

Relish Tray Suggestions: Cheese crackers spread with olive mixture salted soda biscuits spread with cheese and nuts: caraway bread sticks: tiny spice biscuits.

Buffet Main Course: A light party lunch served attractively will be a credit to the hostess after the Christmas Day meals. Select several of the following: Chicken a la King in toasted bread cups: feather-fire cabbage and nut salad: escalloped potatoes, jellied-star turkey salad with diced celery; potato and turkey dressing salad; pork parcels of sau[sage] meat inside tea biscuits; yuleti[de] ad of orange, grapefruit a[nd] gra grapes; dou[ble] deck[er] wiches; grated carrot, diced [beet] and raisin salad.

Garnish Tray: Gherkins, [pi]ple wedges dipped in pickle [re]celery stuffed with cheese; p[rune] stuffed with peanut butter; [ce]sticks and olives.

Yuletide Desserts: Baked a[pple] red sauce and scones; Orange [pie] and cookies; Bavarian cream [pie] mits; Chocolate-mint layer [cake]

FESTIVE DECORATIO[NS]

1. To conserve electricit[y] minimum amount of ornam[ents] Christmas tree lighting.

2. To prevent candles fr[om] ping, chill them in the ref[rig]for a few hours.

3. Do not place candles [on] sue paper, evergreen bows, [cel]phane, or anything inflammable.

4. To keep balloons from break-ing, fasten with twisted elastic band instead of thread.

5. To add a last minute festive decoration, hang a large calendar in the front hall and use Christmas tape to stick the Christmas cards on the back of it.

If you make a border of Christmas cards on the back of the calendar, use a red crayon to print Merry Christmas in the centre.

COVERING
MERCANTILE, MANUFACTURING, RESIDENTIAL AND FARM PROPERTY
WINDSTORM & AUTOMOBILE RISKS ALSO

Prices of Farm Products have advanced but the rates for Fire Insurance in our Companies remain the same and are the lowest in the Province for this class. No fees asked nor premium notes or other obligations required, as our securities—as sound companies—are on deposit with the Dominion Government, Department of Insurance.
