SERVICE, to Us IMPLIES MUCH

Among the things that characterize our service are personal attention to every detail of the funeral arrangement, and little acts of thoughtfulness that serve to lessen the trying strain of the hours before and during the funeral. Quiet efficiency and smoothness are the result. That, we believe, is the kind of service that wins approval.

Calls to hospitals given prompt service.

HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

HIGHLAND PARK BOWLERS VISIT CHESTERVILLE

On the regular weekly guest night of the Bowling Club, last evening three rinks from the Highland Park club were guests of the local bowlers and a friendly game enjoyed, the visitors being ten points up on the play. At the conclusion of play an adjournment was made to the Daily Cafe where refreshments were served.

Early Resident Passes Away

There passed away at his home near Chesterville, on Tuesday, August 21st, an old and highly respected resident in the person of Mr. Thomas Forward, in his eighty-ninth year. Mr. Forward was born in Sussex County, England, and came to Canada at the age of two years, moving to his late residence a short time after. During these years Mr. Forward took a deep interest in all community affairs, and was an active member of the Chesterville Methodist church, later United. He was especially talented in music, having been choir leader in the church for almost forty-five years. His beautiful home and prosperous farm testify as to the success of his chosen vocation.

Mr. Forward's wife died twelve years ago, while those surviving him are: one brother, Wesley, of California; two daughters, Mrs. W. G. Bolster and Mrs. T. S. Nash, both of Ottawa; and four sons, Herbert of Winnipeg; Edgar, of Ladysmith, B.C.; W. T. of Oregon, and A. J., who resides on the old homestead where Mr. Forward passed away.

The largely attended funeral service was held from his late residence to the Chesterville United church, Rev. Mr. Waddell of Winchester officiating in the absence of the pastor, Mr. Newman. Special music was rendered by the choir, under the direction of Mr. P. G. Hewitt, and by the Chesterville Oddfellows' quartette, Messrs. D. C. Seymour, A. Peake, George Brooks and D. G. Hutt. Interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Rev. McRae, Missionary Honored at Finch

A unique and memorable gathering was held in Chalmers United church, Finch, on Wednesday evening, August 15th, when residents of the community gathered in large numbers to spend a social evening with an old Finch boy in the person of Rev. Duncan McRae, United Church Missionary in China, who has been in Canada on furlough for some time and has been visiting with relatives for some time.

The chair was occupied by Rev. A. Wilson Stewart and an appropriate program of music and pithy addresses was given. The principal address was ,given by Rev. Duncan McRae who outlined his work in the mission fields of China and gave most encouraging reports of the work being carried on by the United Church in that particular field. Rev. Jas. Faulds of Cornwall, and Rev. G. W. Dunstan of Aultsville, also gave brief and interesting addresses which added to the enjoyment of the evening.

Mrs. Thos. Sutherland of Finch, rendered a very appropriate solo and a trio by Mrs. Shaver, Mrs. Johnstone and Miss Dorothy Casselman was very favourably received.

A very pleasing feature of the evening's entertainment was the presentation to Rev. Mr. McRae of a purse and address of welcome to his old home town which was very ably given by Mr. Geo. Pollock, while the Vice-President of the W.M.S. of Chalmers United church, Miss Hannah Stewart, presented the purse. Mr. McRae responded feelingly and eloquently expressing his pleasure in being with his old friends again, thanking the Womens Missionary Society and those present for their kindness.

At the close of the addresses refreshments were served by the members of the McRae Mission Band and a very enjoyable half hour brought to a close an evening which will long be remembered by those present.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Jerry Kearns wishes to thank his friends and neighbors for many kindnesses and expressions of sympathy during his recent bereavement.

Large Crowd Enjoys Afternoon's Sport

Yesterday afternoon the programme of races and baseball at the Driving Park attracted a good crowd which was well rewarded with spirited races and an interesting game of baseball. The races proved the best held here for some time with a good class of horses in each event. A thrill was thrown into a heat of the 2.20 when the sulky behind Mary Patch, driven by Allan Simser of Cornwall, became locked with another and Simser was thrown to the track when at first it was thought he was seriously injured, but recovered in a few moments. Mary Patch went on as if nothing had happened and despite all attempts to head her off circled the track seven times without a driver before being stopped.

The races resulted as follows:

2.30 Class.

Banquet Rex, Neville	7	1	1	1
Main King, Bean	1	2	7	4
Sugarfoot, Balfe	2	5	4	2
Aurea, McMahon	3	3	2	6

Time.....2.22½, 2.23, 2.25½, 2.27

2. 20 Class.

Harry G., Patterson	1	1	1
Darkey Jim, Parker	2	3	2
Glenmore, Elliott	3	4	3

Time.....2.20, 2.17, 2.18½

2.12 Class.

Hal Pointer, Balfe	2	1	1	1
Lenimore, Benny	1	3	2	3
Bilston, Cameron	4	2	3	2
King Hal, Benny	3	4	4	4

Time....2.16½, 2.15½, 2.17¼, 2.17.
Starter—Jas. McAvoy.
Judges—Thos. Flynn, G. H. Barkley, M. Brownlee.
Clerk—E. B. Lynch.

Chesterville Wins Ball Game.

As the races concluded, the first play-down game in the Eastern Baseball Association got under way between Chesterville, winners of the Dundas County championship, and Laurentian View, winners of Ottawa Suburban league, which was won by Chesterville 16 to 14. It was not big league ball but was at least interesting from start to finish with plenty of heavy hitting from each side. Chesterville drove two pitchers from the mound who between them fanned but five men. The West-ends got away to a four run lead in the first innings before Craig got settled down, letting them run wild on the bases after issuing a couple of passes. He was a little unsteady all through the game giving eight free trips to the first sack six of which resulted in counters. Nine Chesterville men batted in the first and eleven in the fifth innings, notching four in the opener and six in the fifth.

The batting order:

Chesterville—McAvoy 1b, Jarvis 2b, Craig p, McLean lf, Watt cf, Harper c, Gillissie s.s., W. McLean 3b, Tate rf.

Laurentian View—Brennan s.s., McCarty p, Bradford c, Sherman 2b, N. Cole 3b, Claydon 1b, J. Cole lf, Tucker cf, McKostie cf.

Laurentian View	4	0	0	1	1	1	3	0	4	—14
Chesterville	4	2	2	0	6	0	0	2	x	—16

Umpires—Robt. Case, Ottawa; F. Oshier, Chesterville.

Chesterville Boys Winners Ottawa Track Meet

(Ottawa Journal)

Bill Tate, sensational Chesterville runner, again was the leading light in the one mile open. Tate tore off the distance in the good time of 4.58 1-5 and won away off by himself. He went to the fore at the start and rapidly opened up a commanding lead over his nearest opponent. This boy looks like a comer although his performances in the past have warranted him a prominent place among district runners.

Not satisfied with his victory in the mile, Tate again was victorious over a classy field in the 440-yard dash. Bobby Simpson, well known Ottawa sprinter, took down second place in this event.

Men's Open, Mile, Final.

1, W. Tate, Chesterville; 2, J. Porter, Roamers; 3, A. Tate, Chesterville. Time, 4.58 1-5.

GIRL GUIDES GO TO CAMP

Chesterville Girl Guides are this week under canvas at Becketts Landing on the Rideau under the leadership of Miss Leila McGee. They occupy the same camp as the Scouts who came home Saturday leaving things in order for the Guides.

AIRPLANE DOES BIG BUSINESS

Yesterday afternoon as the crowd gathered for the races and baseball a bi-plane hove in sight belonging to the Leavey Bros. Airways, and landed in Mr. Thos. Allan's field near the Finch road, from which place passengers were taken aloft for a short trip in the air at three dollars per for about seven minutes ride. A rushing business was done until nightfall when there was still an extended waiting list which could not be accommodated.

ODDLY MARKED APPLE

This week Mr. A, O. Robertson of town brought to the Record office an apple picked from a Duchess tree in his garden marked in a very peculiar manner. While two-thirds of the apple was distinctively duchess the other portion was a solid red color with all the characteristic markings of the McIntosh. The apple measured nine inches and three quarters in circumference.

Curran---Connor

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Anne's church, Dixons Corners, on Wednesday, August 22nd, when Miss Annie Connor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Connor of Iroquois, became the bride of Mr. Michael J. Curran of Chesterville. The ceremony was performed by Reverend Father Ryan. They were attended by Miss Evelyn Curran, sister of the groom, and Mr. Russel Connor, brother of the bride.

The bride was charmingly attired in a model of baby blue georgette with diamente trimming. She wore a white mohair hat with kid shoes to match and carried a bouquet of tea roses.

The bridesmaid wore a dainty costume of peach georgette with blonde felt hat and shoes of blonde kid. She carried a sheaf of gladiolii.

Immediately following the wedding a sumptuous dinner was served to about fifty guests at the home of the bride's parents.

The groom's gift to the bride was a string of pearls, to the bridesmaid a sterling silver bar pin, and to the best man a cigarette lighter.

The many beautiful and costly gifts testify to the esteem in which the young couple are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Curran left by motor for Niagara and other western points. The bride travelled in a sand suit, with brown and sand velvet hat. Her shoes were in tones of sand and she wore a brown fox scarf.

On their return home they will reside near Chesterville.

Another Sure Cure--- And Easy To Take!

(By J. E. McIntosh, in Farmer's Advocate.)

Advertisements in our newspapers and magazines are generally put there by somebody who hopes to make money out of them. But I saw a short "ad" in a farm paper last week that had been put there with the intention of making money for the other fellow —that is, the farmers who might read it. Here it is: "Cut Sow Thistle Now! A little attention to cutting sow thistle immediately will prevent millions of seeds being scattered your farm and your neighbor's farm. Sow thistle is one of the most pernicious weeds in the Province. It has been on the increase. Further increase means the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Get it under control now—before it gets your farm under control."

The above was under the name of our honorable Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, and one of his Agricultural Representatives. They sure seem to be trying to do something for their fellow- farmers, and to that extent they deserve all kinds of credit. We'd all be a lot better off if the sow thislte had never been invented, and it's safe to say that the most of us would get rid of it if we knew how—and the accomplishment didn't take much work! But it seems to me that our Minister of Agriculture isn't being quite as practical as he usually is when he advises farmers to begin cutting sow thistle out of their grain fields at this time of the year. It would be a hopeless and useless task!

Take the farmer who has, say, forty acres of grain, all of which might be infested with sow thistle and growing almost as thickly as the wheat or oats. What impression could this farmer and his hired man make on a field like that in their spare time at this season of the year? Or how long would his boys and girls "stay on the farm" if he made them spend their days cutting sow thistle? And what would the field look like in the end, supposing they ever finished the job? It would be in something the same shape, I imagine, as a Saskatchewan wheat field after one of these hailstorms we read about has passed over it.

The man who has had a little practical experienc with sow thistle knows pretty well, I feel sure, that the only thing to be done with a field that is composed of equal parts, say, oats and sow thistle is to harvest the two together thresh them, swallow as little of the dust as follows—and make the best of a bad job!

Also, he may do something in regard to the matter next year. Once the grain has been sown the time has passed and the opportunity has gone for fighing sow thistle for twelve months, at least. So it seems to me, anyway.

The sow thistle seed will carry for miles on the wind, and a patch of it the size of the average farmer's garden will seed a twenty-acre field. Also the root will remain alive in the ground from year to year in cultivated land. What chance have we, then, to get rid of it by any such method as cutting individual stalks out of our grain fields? No chance whatever. It just can't be done on the average hundred-acre farm.

There are two methods that I have known good farmers to use in keeping the sow thistle in check. They are simple but pretty effective and don't require very much extra time or money. One of these is to spring-plow any badly infested land—and sow at once. The grain comes up immediately, while the thistle seems to require several weeks to get started again and so it is kept in check throughout the season. Owing to the ate seeding, last spring, I was compelled to re-plow a small field that was simply covered with the young sow thistle plants. At present the grain is doing well which I sowed there, and comparatively few sow thistle plants can be seen, and these are down in the shade so far that their growth is pretty slow.

The other and surer way of keeping ahead of this enemy of ours is what our college professors call the "short rotation" but in a little plainer English seeding down to some kind of a hay crop every third year. Sow thistle has practically disappeared from the second crop of timothy or clover, and very little of it will come up in the crop of grain that follows. What more could we want or hope for?

Probably this plan of getting rid of sow thistle isn't complicated and difficult enough to be recommended by our Government and our Agricultural Representatives and others, but there's one thing to be said for it—it works!

MAY DIVIDE PLANTS SOON

September to early October is a good time to lift and divide herbaceous perennials. As soon as the great heat of summer is over and one feels that the soil is not likely to dry out again, the work may be begun. The longer the time the plants have to make roots after being moved, the better condition they will be in before blooming next year. The bearded irises may be divided and transplanted earlier than most perennials. August being a good month for this work. In replanting pieces of iris, they should be put in quite shallow, the fleshy root being barely covered with soil. If planted deeper they are liable to rot. Oriental poppies, too, may be moved in August. For peonies, it is best to wait until early September. The top buds of these plants should not be more than an inch or two below the surface of the soil. Deep planting is one of the causes of peonies not blooming well. Small pieces of perennials, if they have a few roots, will soon develop into good-sized plants if they have good soil conditions.

Settlement.

Employer (sternly)—There are two shillings missing from my desk, and you and I are the only ones who have a key. What about it?

Office Boy—Well, sir, let's pay a shilling each and say nothing more about it.

An Understanding.

"Well, good-bye son. Let us hear from you when you don't want money."

"All right. father, but let's have an understanding. When I write you and don't mention money, you'll know I'm devilish hard up."

Duncan J. McDermid, Vancouver

With the passing of Duncan J. McDermid on August 7th at 9.40 p.m., Vancouver lost one of its respected citizens. Mr. McDermid, who was in his 72nd year, was born in Finch, Ontario, the son of the late John McDermid. He was a councillor for a number of years in Finch township. He was a staunch Conservative and in religion he was a Presbyterian. He resided on the old homestead in Finch to the last few years, until coming to Vancouver to make his home with his oldest daughter, Marion, Mrs. Willie Dan McIntosh, 3438 St. Catharines st. The late Mr. McDermid lived an active life up to the last year when he took to his bed last December. He was a kind and loving husband and father. He made a host of friends and was much respected by all with whom he came in contact. Mrs. McDermid lives in her own home in Berwick. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, four daughters and three sons. Marion, Mrs. W. D. McIntosh, of Vancouver, B.C.; Libby, Mrs. Wm. Trickey of Lansdowne, Ont.; Thresa of Niagara Falls; and Tena, Mrs. Fred Russell, Mansfield, Mass.; William of Vancouver, B.C.; Millan of Canton, N.Y.; Alex. of Berwick, Ont., and Sarah who predeceased him on June 22nd, 1924. The funeral was held at Haron Bros. and Williamson chapel corner 10th avenue and Quebec street, on August 10th, at 3.30 p.m., the Rev. C. C. Owen officiating. The interment took place in the Masonic grave yard in Burnaby. The pall bearers were W. E. Blair, Geo. Empey, Wm. McLeod, Alex. McKinnon, James McIntyre, and Nelan Wert. Among relatives present were F. D. McInnis, wife and family. Among the many beautiful floral tributes sent were wreaths and sprays, Mr. and Mrs. B. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Empey, Mr. and Mrs. J. FELL DOWN CHUTE IN BARN

On Wednesday afternoon of last week, while plaling in he hay in her father's barn, Adrienne, the little 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Shaw of Melvins fell down an open chute, a distance of 22 feet, to the cement floor. It is a miracle that she was not instantly killed. As it is, the outer bones of the skull are fractured in two places, but she has been conscious the greater part of the time since and suffering at times with her head. Hopes are held out for her recovery if nothing else sets in.

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

Woodstock Sentinel-Review-A Kansas country editor has discovered that when a man finds fault with his local newspaper, ten to one he hasn't an advertisement in it, three to one he is delinquent in his subscription, and even money that he never did anything to assist the publisher to make it a good paper, and forty to one that he is anxious to see it when it comes out. To which might be added a hundred to one that he makes the biggest threats when he demands that his name be kept out of police court proceedings.

Mrs. Jerry Kearns, Berwick

Deep gloom was cast over the surrounding country when Mrs. Jerry Kearns passed away at her home on Tuesday, August 7th. The deceased lady, whose maiden name was Margaret McMahon, was born at Cannamore, July 21st, 1892. On 1918 she married Jerry Kearns and since that time has resided east of Berwick. She had been confined to her bed for more than two months but was improving slowly until a short time before her death when a change came, her death coming as a shock to all.

During the time of her illness she bore her sufferings meekly and uncomplainingly. All worldly means were procured to relieve her sufferings, she was given the most loving care but fond hopes and ardent wishes were of no avail. She was a loving wife and dear mother and will be sorely missed in her home as well as by a wide circle of friends whom she endeared to her by her cheerful disposition and who deeply sympathize with the sorrowing family.

She leaves to mourn her death a sorrowing husband, one son, Francis, aged 4 years, and one daughter, Irene, aged 10 weeks, her father, Mr. Patrick McMahon, brother, Thos. McMahon, three sisters, Mrs. Eli Lavictoire, Detroit, Mrs. Carroll Boucher, Aylmer, and also Mrs. Armedos Lavictoire, who was unable to attend the funeral. The funeral took place Thursday morning August 9th, from the family residence followed by a large cortege of friends to St. Mary's church Crysler, where requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father McPhee, after which interment was made in Crysler cemetery. The pall bearers were, Messrs. Martin McElheran, James Redmond, Eli Humes, John McIntyre, Syrus Lang, and Eddie Hunt.

Those attending the fnneral from a distance were Mrs. J. McMahon, Emmett McMahon, Mrs. J. Hughes, Mr. John Kearns, Armedos Lavictoire, Frank Stewart, Joe Kennedy, of Ottawa; Mr. Carroll Boucher, of Aylmer; Mr. and Mrs. Tallmire, Iroquois; Mr. and Mrs. John Quinn, Mr. Jim McMahon, Haileybury; Mr. W. J. Cashion, Cornwall; Misses Anna and Josie Cashion, Montreal; Den and Stella McMahon, Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs. H. McLaughlin, Ogdensburg, N.Y.; Mrs. Eli Lavictoire, Detroit.

Good Time.

"Did you have a good time at the party?" asked the fond mother, when the child returned, flushed with excitement from a birthday gathering.

"Oh, yes, mother, we had a perfectly lovely time."

"But what did you do to have such a lovely time?"

"Oh, we just screamed and screamed."

MRS. (DR.) BEAN, WINCHESTER

Mrs. Bean, wife of Dr. Bean V.S., of Winchester, passed unexpectedly away in the General Hospital at Cornwall on Monday evening, Aug. 20th.

Less than a week previous she had undergone an operation for the removal of some inward growth. She was in her 59th year and was greately esteemed by all who knew her because of her kindly disposition and her unselfishness. Besides her husband she is survived by an aged step-mother of whom she had the care, and two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Leonard of Winchester, and Mrs. Harry Despard of Syracuse, N.Y.

The funeral service was well attended on Wednesday, August22nd, at 2 p.m., in Winchester United church. Rev. J. A. Waddell, assisted by Rev. J. H. Miller, conducted the service. Mrs. Hazel Hutt sang an appropriate solo.

ST. PAUL'S, BERWICK, W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the W.M.S of St. Paul's United church, Berwick, was held at the home of Mrs. Whitteker on August 21st. After the usual opening of the meeting with the Doxology, Lord's Prayer and Hymn, the President, Mrs. Foster, read a part of the thirteenth chapter of John. Several papers were read by the ladies, all giving information on the work done by the W. M. S. and results of the work.

Mrs. McEwen, of Newington, was present and gave a very nice address and some very helpful thoughts on the society's work. Miss Flexton gave a solo and an instrumental duet by Misses Ruth and Audrey McIntosh, were very much enjoyed by all the members and visitors. The roll call was answered by a verse of scripture on "Rejoicing." The meeting was closed with a hymn and prayer by Mrs. McEwen.

Lunch was served by a number of the ladies.

16-YEAR-OLD BOY SWIMS ST. LAWRENCE

Iroquois, Ont., Aug. 27.—Robert Carson Hartwell, 16, swam the St. Lawrence River this morning at this point, a distance of a mile or more being in the water only 19 minutes. He entered the water on the American shore at Hannas Point and landed at Johnston's farm, Canadian side, almost directly opposite.

Accompanying him in a boat were Irwin Hilliard and his brother Rev. Foster Hilliard of Japan, son of I. Hilliard, K.C., Morrisburg. Rev. Foster Hilliard accomplished the same feat a couple of weeks ago in about the same time.

Young Hartwell, who has been summering here with his sister, Miss Ruth Hartwell, B.A., teacher in Ingersoll Collegiate, is a son of Rev. Mr. Hartwell of Centu, China, the family having come to Canada at the outbreak of the trouble in China.

EAST WINCHESTER

Our community has deep sympathy for Mr. Asa Hart who lost his wife a couple of weeks ago. Mrs. Hart will be missed by all who knew her. She was a faithful member of the United Church where she was a good worker in the church she loved.

Miss I. McCauley of Morrisburg, spent last Sunday at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Empey and family spent last Sunday in Cornwall.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith attended the Henderson and Wilcox reunion at Antwerp on Saturday last.

Mrs. Melvin Barclay and daughter Ruth were calling on friends here.

Miss Georgie Harper of Winchester Springs, spent last week the guest of Mrs. H. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hart and family of Buffalo, are at present visiting Mr. Asa Hart of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mallory and family spent one day last week at Winchester Springs.

Mrs. William Sheldrick was calling on her sister, Mrs. Bell, of town, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Clark of Van Camps, spent one day last week at their home here.

Joshua's Distinction.

A small boy, when asked by his Sunday school teacher what he knew about Joshua, answered.

"Joshua was a man who told his son to stand still and he did."

The only comment on this, says the Christian Advocate, is that Joshua was much more successful than the modern father.

BECKSTEAD

Miss Gladys Armstrong of Elma, spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Will Wallace.

Messrs. Graham McPherson and Donald McMartin left on Tuesday last for the Western harvest fields.

FAIR MERMAIDS ENTERED FOR $50,000 SWIM

One or more of the five young women shown here should finish within the money in the third Wrigley Marathon Swim to be staged at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 29th and September 5th. The women swim first over a 10-mile course and the first five to finish may compete in the 15-mile race for men a week later. Out of fairness to spectators the distance has been shortened so that the race may start and finish during reasonable daylight hours, and the course has been changed so that all competitors will be in sight over practically the whole distance.

Chesterville Wins Play-Off Dundas County League

After winning the first of the play-off games in the Dundas County Baseball league in Winchester by a score of 12 to 5 Chesterville handed Winchester a proper trimming last Thursday evening on the Driving Park grounds when they smothered the visitors in a six innings game by 23 to 8. After spotting Winchester two in the first and one in the second, the homesters came right back in their half of the second innings and pounded out eight runs. In the third Winchester failed to score while Chesterville was still on the rampage, driving Morrow off the mound and continuing the fusilade against H. McLean, crossing the plate no less than nine times before the final out. Winchester rallied in the fifth with four counters which with one in the fourth completed their scoring. Chesterville added six more in the sixth when the game was called on account of darkness.

Chesterville—Gillissie and Plantz; Winchester—Morrow, H. McLean and A. McDonald.

Holes.

Pat was hired in a lumber office. The proprietor was a young man, and he decided to have some fun with the new hand, so Pat was left in charge of the office, with instructions to take all orders which might come. Going to a nearby store, the proprietor called up the office:

"Hello! Is this the East Side Lumber Company?"

"Yis, sorr."

"Send me up 1,000 knot holes."

"What's that?"

"One thousand knot holes."

"Well, now, an' ain't that a shame! We are just out of them. Sold them all to a brewery."

"To the brewery? What do they want with them?"

"They use them for bungholes in barrels."

Dated this 27th day of August, 1928.

Geo. Elliot,
Clerk of the Township of Winchester.

John McRae, Finch

The death of Mr. John McRae, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McRae of Finch, occurred at his home Tuesday, August 21st. The deceased, who was of a bright and cheerful disposition, was in his 55th year. For some time he was in failing health but the end came unexpectedly and with all the loving care and comforts that could be given all seemed fruitless to save his life. The funeral, which was largely attended followed his remains to Finch Pesbyterian church where the services were conducted by Rev. Sutherland of Avonmore, who chose for his text, Philippians, First Chapter, in the twenty-first verse: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.' During the service the choir sang "God Will Take Care of You." The pall bearers were Hugh McMillan, Smith McMillan, S. E. Ouderkirk, Geo. Smith, A .P. McLean, A. McDougall.

The beautiful floral tributes consisted of—wreaths, the Family, Brothers and Sisters from the West; sprays Mr. and Mrs. D. McPherson and family of Berwick; Leonard Merrills of Finch, Ford McMillan of Finch, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston of Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ouderkirk and famly of Finch; Cut Flowers, Mr. and Mrs. John Ouderkirk, Berwick; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McLeod, Crysler; Maggie and Elva Ouderkirk, Berwick; Mrs. Wm. Armstrong, Crysler; Theo Bridges, Crysler; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marcellus, Morewod; Mrs. R. Droppo, Goldfield; Mrs. D. H. D. McMillan, Finch; Mrs. C. S. Johnston, Crysler.

The chief mourners are his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Robt. Armstrong of Finch, one son, Carl, at home, and one grandson, four brothers,Rev. Duncan McRae, missionary of China, who at the time was home on furlough and attended his brother's funeral, Donald of Finch, Alex. of McDonald, Man., and Norman of Pine Creek, Man.; four sisters, Mrs. James Simpson of Cornwall, Mrs. Chisholm, Mrs. McLaughlin, and Mrs. McRae of Winnipeg.

The sympathy of a wide circle of friends is extended to the bereaved family.

Heaven retaineth now our treasure,
Earth the lonely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams long to linger
Where our darling one now sleeps.

Highway Lighting and Power In the Country

The Governments of the states of New York and Pennsylvania are planning, it is said, to light the main highways within their respective territories. In doing so they are not considering solely or even primarily the wishes and welfare of those people who travel by motor vehicles on the roads. The main object of the two Governments, it is asserted, is to benefit the farmers who live in the vicinity of the highways. The Governments would give the farmers the obvious advantage of electric illumination of the roads that they use most frequently. The principal aim of the Governments is to promote the extension of electric light and power services to farms and farm homes and this the authorities presumably have reason to believe they can do by installing electric lighting systems on the highways.

The Governments of New York and Pennsylvania, like the Government of Ontario and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of this Province, evidently believe that it is sound public policy to endeavor to extend to dwellers in rural parts of he country the advantages derived by residents of cities and towns from electric power services. The writer of a recently published article on the subject asserts that the greatest factor in creating a difference between life in a modern city and life on the farm is electric power. Whether or not electricity is the greatest factor is a debatable question, but certainly electricity is a great facor. Given a supply of electricity, the farm home can be equipped with all the appliances that add to the comfort and convenience of a home in the city. By electricity the house can be cheerfully lighted at night, supplies of water can be pumped and heated, a refrigerator can be operated, and cooking, washing, ironing, sweeping can be done. By electricity the work of the housewife can be lightened and by that form of energy, too, the farmer can be aided in labors. Barns, stables, barnyard and workshop can be lighted at night, and cream separator, grindstone, saws, feed chopper and other farm machines can be operated. Thus, by means of electric power work on the farm can be made easier and more effective by labor-saving devices, life on the farm can be made pleasanter and those who do that work and live that life have more reason than they otherwise would have to be content with their lot.

GIRL AND CIGARETTE

Barrie Examiner—While it is generally known in Barrie that the practice of cigarette smoking among women, particularly among young girls of the flapper type, is prevalent and growing so more and more, the spectacle of a young lady her favorite weed, in the most nonchalant manner and apparently unconscious of scores of almost speechless pedestrians, while walking along Dunlop and Elizabeth streets, is indeed a rare event even in Barrie. But this very thing happened not once, but several times during the past week and on each occasion the same otherwise attractive young woman was the cynosure of all eyes. Talk about your rubber necks! One woman with a perambulator wheeled right around and stood dead in her tracks. The look of scorn on her face would have made the Statue of Liberty blush.

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENTS

Kingston Whig-Standard—It is very astonishing how difficult it is to impress upon some people the ever present menace of the railroad level crossings. At practically all such crossings there are warning signs, from the proverbial, "Stop, Look and Listen," to the more modern warning signs, while we all know that almost daily the newspapers of the country are harping upon this danger. Yet, despite this, we have every week a pitiful toll of deaths at these crossings when railway trains and automobiles come together.

WE JUST MADE A FARMER OF JIM

Four brave, brawny boys—and our fond foolish hearts
Beat high in their joy and their pride;
Four treasures immortal entrusted to us
To rear, to guard and to guide.
It was ours to fathom the depths of each mind;
To study the depths of each heart,
And discern if we might the labor of life
That Dame Nature designed for their part.

We pondered it long, but 'twas settled at last,
That our Henry a preacher should be,
And our John, you should see, for a lawyer was born,
And our Joseph should make an M. D.
But the fourth was so quiet and queer in a way
That 'twas hard to decide about him,
And we needed his help, so we said with a sigh,
"We'll just make a farmer of Jim."

So the three went forth from the farmyard gate,
In the kingdom of books to toil,
To delve in scholastic lore—while Jim
He delved in his farm's rich soil.
'Twas a goodly sum we had gathered by,
For use in the hour of need;
'Twas the savings slow of the frugal years,
But 'twas spent with a reckless speed.

'Twas a goodly sum—like the wind it went,
And the three never knew how we planned,
How we worked and scrimped, and struggled and saved,
To furnish their great demand;
And Jim—how he toiled through ceaseless round,
Till each wearisome day was done;
Undaunted he by the scathing storm,
Or the noontides scorching sun.

But it was from the pages of Nature's book,
From the blossom, and bird, and skies,
From the mountain and surging sea,
That he learned of the deeper meaning of life,
Learned its scheme and scope sublime,
And in realms that brood in solitude
Learned the needs of the soul divine.

Unfettered by rule of measure or school,
His mind looked up from the sod,
And his thoughts grew broad as the universe,
And deep as the things of God.
And the people came and besought our Jim
Of his knowledge to impart,
And he taught with the simple eloquence
That thrills through the human heart.

And they bowed them down to this son of toil,
And they cried that the nation's need
Was his steady brain, and noble heart,
And his honor in word and deed,
And they came from near and they came from far,
And they wouldn't take "no' from him,
And they crowned him with title and wealth and fame,
And they made a statesman of Jim.

The years they are by, and I sit and sigh,
O'er the fate of the children three,
For the word's been unkind to the lawyer born,
And the MD. and L.L.D.;
I think of their starving, struggling lives,
And then I think of Jim
And thank the Lord that we had the sense
To make a farmer of him.

Young Bride—"Now, dearie, what will I get if I cook a dinner like that for you every day this year?"
Answer—"My life insurance."

Handling Of Orchard Fruits

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Much time is given in the care of orchards to pruning, cultivating, fertilizing, and spraying, in order to make sure of a good crop of fruit, but after the crop is grown the harvesting is too often not supervised as closely as it should be, with the result that much of the fruit shows bruises and is proportionately lessened in value.

Because of the short time between maturity and possible loss from wind or other causes the picking is rushed as rapidly as possible. It is at this time that the orchardist should be on the alert, and constantly be with the pickers to see that due care is given to the handling of the fruit so that the least possible bruising will result.

The operation of picking all orchard fruits should be done rapidly but with the utmost care. The fruit should be so placed in the picking basket that it will not drop on the fruit already there. A drop of only a few inches results not only in a bruise on the apple placed in the receptacle, but also in bruises on the fruit already there. Bruises made by careless handling may not be noticeable at the time of picking, but if one stops to consider the matter i is obvious that a bruise will ultimately detract from the appearance of the fruit and result in a lower price.

It is also important to keep the future crop in mind and so harvest the fruit that fruit spurs which should produce fruit at a later date are not destroyed when picking. It is as easy to harvest apples by giving an upward turn to separate the fruit from the spur as it is to pull the fruit from the spur, and to do the latter in many cases takes the spur as well. Pickers careless in this respect are causing a great annual loss to growers, which can be avoided toa large extent by close supervision of the picking.

In filling the barrel from the basket the fruit should be rolled into the barrel by dropping the basket into the barrel and turning it carefully so that the fruit rolls out without bruising. Careless dumping of the fruit so that one can hear the operation is a sure indication of lack of appreciation on the part of the picker as to the perishability of the product. Handle the fruit as you would eggs, and the fruit will be passed to the packing house as it should be. It is useless to say this is impracticable; it does not take more time to be careful in this operation and it returns a good profit.

The handling of the barrel is important. Here again care in loading and unloading is necessary to avoid bruising. If the barrels are headed in the orchard careful racking, with sufficient pressure on the header to keep the apples from moving in the barrel, is all that is necessary. If before heading the apples are level with th groove for the head, they will be tight enough provided care in the handling of the barrel is exercised.

THE DESTRUCTIVE RAT

Of all the pests which infest the world, the rat is undeniably one of the worst. So great has the menace of rats become that an international association for their extermination has been orgainized.

Not only do rats destroy millions of dollars worth of farm products every year, but they are a menace to health through the fleas which infest them and spread diseases of various kinds, such as bubonic plague, trichinosis and hydrophobia.

It is said that one couple of gray rats will produce 800 to 900 offspring in a year, as the young become adults in four months. If all were able to find food and shelter it can readily be seen that they would ultimately overrun a community.

The program recommended for combatting rats includes the building of rat-proof structures, the cutting off of their food supply and the poisoning of those which survive other preventive measures.

She thought it would be too expensive

The old lady had never spoken over a long distance line before — but she was so hungry for the sound of her daughter's voice!

The operator was kind and helpful and in a moment the beloved voice was sounding in her ear.

And when the telephone bill came she found the call had cost only 45 cents.

Now the Sunday evening talk is a regular thing. More — it now costs only 25 cents. Instead of asking for her daughter by name, mother gives "Long Distance" the distant number — hence the charge (after 8.30) is only 25 cents.

Many do not realize how inexpensive Long Distance really is.

OLD WHITEFACE'S GHOST

Old Whiteface, at the Wilbur farm, lived to be thirty-eight years old, and after his ghost came back he was about the place for three years more, forty-one in all, if a horse's "ghost" can be said to have a lifetime.

Forty-one was as old as we know of a horse's living in our home town in Maine, with the exception, that of "Old Pheeb" at the Darnley farm. Pheeb reached the advanced age of fifty-three. But forty-one is venerable for a horse, equivanlent to, say, ninety-eight for a man. The prolongage of man is picturesquely accounted for by an ancient fable that can be freely translated from the olden tongue in which it was once told.

At the beginning, runs the fable, a kind Demiurge gave the same length of life, forty years, to all creatures. But when this was announced there was disatisfaction all round. Not one creature was satisfied.

"Too long!" howled the Dog. "I shall be worn out barking, guarding, and wagging my tail to win a smile from my master."

So the kind Demiurge—and in the fable his name is given as Khnoum—took off ten years and asked how that would do. But still the dog whined. "Too long!" and to placate him fifteen years more were taken off, reducing the age of the Dog to fifteen. And the dog was informed as gently as possible that nothing more could be done for him.

And thereupon Khnoum turned to the Bull, hoping to find better appreciation of the great gift of earthly life that he was conferring upon his creatures. The Bull was busy. grazing. But he looked up and bellowed, "Too long!"

" But why!" questioned Khnoum.

"My hoof has been split," complained the Bull. "I have to gnaw my food off the hard earth and chew my cud all night long. The flies torment me sorely; and, worst of all, I foresee that Man is going to yoke the beasts of my kind, and plow with them, and prod their flanks with his sharp goad. In mercy, cut my span of years to the same length as that of the Dog."

And this was done; and Khnoum turned to the Ass, who at once raised his frightful "Yee-haw! Yee-haw!"

"You object as usual," said Khnoum. "You protest before anything has been done for you. Butwhy should you not desire an abundant length of life?"

"Why? Reason enough why!" brayed the Ass. "They are going to load me down with sacks. They are going towhip and flog me. I shall have to live off the thistles by the waysides. Take back, I pray you, take back twenty years."

"But you are a useful animal," urged Khnoum. "The world needs you. You ask too great a boon."

Yet the Ass continued to bray and pray vociferously, and his lifetime was shortened to twenty-five years with permission to exceed this length when he could. Which he often does.

And now Khnoum turned to the Horse, who had been neighing and prancing about, pawing the earth and snorting in remonstrance.

"Of what can you possibly complain?" Khnoum asked reproachfully. "I have done my best for you. I have clothed your neck with thunder. Among the beasts of the field I have made you the handsomest and most beautiful."

"Too beautiful!" whinnied the Horse. "They will ride to war. They will leave me wounded on the battlefield. They will run races with me until I drop from fatigue. They will nail iron to my poor feet, and lash me with whips. They will harness me to wagons and work me fifteen hours a day. I shall have spavins and ringbones. Too long! Be merciful and take off thirty!"

By this time Khnoum was both disturbed and discouraged. "I thought my works were good and my creatures grateful," he sighed. "This leaves me with many years to give to some one. Twenty-five from the ungratefful Dog, twenty-five from the Bull, fifteen from the Ass, and fifteen more from that ne'er-do-well, the Horse. Eighty years over! What's to do with them?" And he went walking in search of Man.

To his astonishment, before the question was fairly put to Man as it had been put to the beasts. Man shouted out : "Too short! Oh give me more years!"

"But, ,why?" questioned Khnoum, "Are forty not enough?"

"No, no!" cried the Man. "Not half enough. I have so much to do. I have clothes to make and food to gather. I have a house to build, and a Woman to care for. By the way, no provision was made for her support. Was that overlooked, I wonder. It should not have been, for it takes a mort of fine things to keep her going. Theres no end to her wants. And there is a large family of Children to bring up and educate. It can't be done in forty years. I must have more!"

And Khnoum said, "Very well, I will give you the twenty-five years I took from the Dog's life. That makes sixty-five in all. You will probably be sorry, but that is your lookout. After making such ambitious plans for the future, you must face life as it comes."

'In that case," Man replied hardily, "sixty-five years is still too short. Give me more!"

"Take then the fifteen years I took from the Ass," Khnoum replied. "That gives you fourscore. You will get into trouble with those years from the Ass, but I give them to you.."

"Mine be the risk!" cried the Man. "Give me more!"

"Here are fifteen I took from the Horse," conceded Khnoum, with reluctance. "That makes ninety-five. But you are mad!"

"Mad or not mad, give me the twenty five you took from the Bull," demanded Man.

But Khnoum had turned away. "I will not do it," came his voice. "If you want still more years, you must learn to be worthy of them."

So ends the fable. Yet the naturalist Buffon has hinted, and modern physicians dare to prophesy, that man will ere long get hold of the additional twenty-five years of life that he covets.

Meanwhile, there is the story of old Whiteface to tell; the patriarchal horse that exceeded the ordinary age of horses by twenty years. He had advantages; he was country bred and lived among rural surroundings, thus escaping the hard pavements, noisome stables, stale hay and unhealthful excitements and temptations of city life. He was a handsome horse, moreover, a good worker, a smart trotter, fourteen hands high, chestnut in color, with a broad white face and two white stockings; amiable of disposition, too, and hence loved by the entire Wilbur family.

This affection brought old Whiteface many a lump of sugar, many a nubbin of corn, and always a warm blanket in winter and a well-bedded stall. The horse pasture at the Wilbur farm was a breezy upland, where the grass grew fresh and sweet. There was also a spring of pure water at the foot of the hillside, and just beyond it half a dozen sugar maples offered pleasant shade on hot summer mornings.

Often and often, Ned Wilbur and sometimes his sisters, Georgie and Elsie, came riding Whiteface to call on us young folks at the Old Squire's place; and he was a favorite for picnics or evening parties near and far, since he would stand without hitching wherever he was left, either in the yard at home or at other places, even at the railway station, steam cars having no terrors for him. In short, he was that intelligent, gentle, model an owner grows immensely fond of, and never parts with if he can help it.

But tempus edax rerum, and, even as in the days of Horace, nor love nor piety can stay the onset of old age in man or beast. During the winter he was thirty-eight, Old Whiteface showed signs of growing infirmity; and then one morning in April it was discovered that he was "down" in his stall and could not get up. What was worse, he seemed indisposed to try to do so. Oats were offered him, but he declined them silently. He gave up the long battle to live and accepted helplessness with composure.

It was court week, and Farmer Wilbur was away from home, serving as juryman at the shire town fifteen miles away; but Mrs. Wilbur sent for two neighbors to assist Ned; and not without difficulty, albeit there was abundant commiseration, old Whiteface was hoisted on a dray and hauled by slowly moving oxen to the borders of the woodland. Elsie and Georgie stood resignedly weeping, and even Ned covertly shed a tear; for that slow cortège from a New England farm meant but one thing—a helpless old animal would now have to be put out of the way as painlessly and as mercilessly as possible. That is ever a sorrowful time at the farm where a faithful servitor has long endeared himself to every member of the family. No one of the household can endure the thought of administering the death stroke or firing the fatal shot, or even being present when it is done. Old Whiteface had indeed been so long and favorably known to all the neighbors that no one of them wanted to be his executioner. The grieving family therefore had recourse to a disreputable old fellow whom we may here call Robbins, living at the Corners, a mile away; and Robbins, having joined himself a crony, named Moss, took what advantage he could of sentiment by demanding the sum of ten dollars for shooting and burying the old horse stipulating, too, that he was to have the horse's skin and the horseshoes off the animal's feet.

The Wilburs, however, indignantly refused to ratify or permit this latter sacrilege, and the cronies were finally induced to take a flat ten dollars without perquisites. In fact they were so elated over the prospect of easy money that, after loading a Springfield musket, borrowing two shovels and imbibing a brace or two of drinks at the Corners grocery, they set off just at nightfall, with hilarity, on their ghoulish mission.

The Wilburs saw them pass on their way toward the borders of the woods, but afterwards refrained from so much as looking in that direction. Presently, however, the heavy report of a musket told them that but too certainly that all was over with poor old Whiteface. In further evidence of this, Robbins called on the following morning and collected the ten dollars. A few days later, too, Ned Wilbur, while gathering maple sap, steeled himself to approach and contemplate the heaped-up mound where old Whiteface was buried. In June we heard that George and Elsie carried lilacs and roses to lay on the old horse's grave, which sounds childish, perhaps, and yet what better deserves such tributes of affection than a worthy life, whether lived by human beings or our humbled fellow creatures who have served us so faithfully?

Warm weather had now come on, and according to farm custom, the long old barn at the Wilburs was set open at all its doors and windows, that the fresh breezes of summer might air out the foul odors and impurities of winter. Farmers thereabouts too, were wont to keep their barns open for some time after the hay crop was stored, from a notion that pent-up gases from not fully cured hay attract lightning, and that is the reason so many barns are struck by thunderbolts.

The Wilburs indeed did not close up their barn that season till as late as the first hard frosts of October; the aperture at the far end leading into the cellar still gaped, and on the backside the door leading to the horse stalls was still propped back. Both stalls were as yet unoccupied, no successor to Whiteface having yet been procured.

Then on one of those chilly October mornings Georgie Wilbur, going out to feed an untimely coset lamb, was astonished to hear a familiar low whicker and to see old Whiteface's head protruding from the orifice in front of his manger—quite as he had formerly called to them to be fed of a morning !

The light was still dim, but that was surely Whiteface, or his ghost! For an instant she stared; then, dropping the bottle of milk, she fled into the house, crying, "Old Whiteface is out in the barn!"

"Oh, no," her mother said. "That cannot me!"

"But he is! I saw him!" Georgie insisted. "He is in his stall." She sat down, weak from agitation.

Thereupon Ned and Elsie ran to the barn, followed by their mother. But Whiteface was no longer in his stall, and after looking about they came back to laugh at Georgie, as did farmer Wilbur, who had just risen and now came to the kitchen for the milk pails. "Guess our little girl hasn't waked up yet," he jocosely observed to Georgie, and then went with Ned to milk the cows at the barn.

While thus employed they heard a noise in the barn cellar, and, thinking that some animal belonging to a neighbor had strayed in there through the open door, the farmer presently went round to investigate. The cellar was a dark place, yet not so dark but that Wilbur discerned the outline of a horse with a white face, peering at him from out the obscurity. As he stood looking, the animal gave a low whicker as of recognition and moved toward him—and then Farmer Wilbur made for the house, ostensibly to fetch a lantern!

"Martha, Martha!" he exclaimed to his wife. "I do believe old Whiteface is out there! I saw him in the barn cellar. Light the lantern!"

But when they all went out with the lantern, the place was empty; and all the farmer could say in turn was, "I certainly saw him or thought I did—and heard him too!"

"And so did I!" declared Georgie.

The Wilburs were not superstitious people. But one has to believe one's ears and eyes; and immediately they began a more thorough search of the barn and other outbuildings.

Nothing was found; but while questing about, just as the sun was peeping up, Ned discerned tracks in the white frost on the grass behind the barn tracks like those of a horse, leading up to the back door, thence around to the cellar, and thence again leading off across the whitened field in the direction of the woods: it adds a touch of reality to its presence, as proving at least that the phantom has feet.

The whole Wilbur family followed fast on those tracks and at length sighted their old horse or the semblance of him in the edge of the woods, pottering about among the maples near the mound where Robbins and Moss had buried him, or said they had.

"Oh, mother, he's going back into his grave!" Elsie whispered in an awed whisper.

Gruesome thought! Belief in ghosts dies hard! The Wilburs paused at a distance, bewildered for the moment. Such a strange thing!

Of course, there have been plenty of ghosts up in the Old Farm country, and half the ghosts stories about that region had never been set down in black and white. Exactly how many of these are authentic, it would be unsafe to say. Nevertheless, as long as there are young people, and dark nights, and good yarn-spinners, there will always be ghost stories. But not many of them had a basis in fact. They are usually the result of someone's vivid imagination. I never knew the Old Squire to tell one, however, just for the sake of scaring the young people. He always said it wasn't worth while scaring them, when what they needed most in the world was not to be frightened, but to be brave.

I must return to old Whiteface, before I diverge too long!

Then, observing that old Whiteface had gone on past his mound and was disappearing among the trees, Ned and his father followed slowly after, keeping the animal in sight, for a mile or so to an open tract on Lurvey's Stream. Here at length they came upon him grazing quietly in the frosted grasses. Marking their approach, he whinnied reassuringly and came timidly to meet them. His general appearance had changed; his coat apeared to have grown longer, his mane and tail were a tangle of wild burrs; and a bit of his left ear was gone; but there was no doubt it was old Whiteface; and only a word of welcome and encouragement was needed to induce him to accompany them home to his stall.

Where he had been, or why, was a mystery. Nevertheless Neighbor Wilbur went to look up Robbins and Moss and demand an explanation. He found them at Tibbett's grocery; and, not being at par, morally, with the illustrious George Washington, both the cronies denied at first all knowledge of the phenomenon.

"But the horse is back in my barn!" exclaimed Wilbur with rising indignation.

Moss now looked at Robbins, Robbins at Moss, then both burst out hawhawing boisterously.

"You would better hand back that ten dollars!" quoth Wilbur irately.

"Sure we will, neighbor. Sure we will jest as soon as we can make a raise on the money," both promised exuberantly; yet everyone thereabouts knew but too well what their promises were worth.

Urged to tell the truth concerning the matter, they haw-hawed again; when each proceeded to do so after his own fashion, from which it transpired that after mercifully bandaging old Whiteface's eyes and digging his grave Robbins, now visibly exhilarated, fired the heavily charged musket point blank at the whorl of hair on the horse's forhead, and made a clean miss of it but clipped off the tip of one ear. Whereat the hitherto helpless animal suddenly bounded to his feet and galloped madly off into the woods. Perhaps the concussion had galvanized his brain and muscles and filled him with a fresh desire of life, or with eagerness to get away from his would-be executioners.

Fearful of losing the ten dollars, the cronies reloaded the musket and gave chase for a mile or more, when the approach of night led them to abandon the pursuit. They did not believe the horse would ever come back; at least they hoped he wouldn't. So, returning, they filled the grave and rounded the mound naturally. Waiting till next day, they collected the fee and kept quiet.

What Whiteface's ideas of it were, if he had any, there is of course no means of ascertainmg. Perhaps he felt that he had been abandoned and outraged by all those he had loved and served.

What he did was to take himself to those natural meadows in the wilderness, far up Lurvey's Stream, and there to sojourn throughout the warm season till the onset of chilly nights in October filled him with a desire for his warm stall and daily provender. Timidly he then made his way to the barn.

Apparently the summer of wild grasses and leisure from farm work had wrought a happy change in the old horse's health and spirits. He seemed quite well again and in point of fact did a fair stroke of business at the Wilburs' for nearly three years longer.
