Parking Problems Pester Council Copes Cautiously At February Meeting

Council took a few of the parking problems under serious consideration last Monday evening at the regular February meeting. OPP Constable Hunsburger presented his well-worn brief outlining some suggestions for implementing the present traffic by-law of the village. Council listened with a sympathetic ear and took steps to improve the situation.

Much discussion centred around the present method of warning and assessing fines for parking violations. As the present bylaw reads, if an offender is presented with a parking ticket he is liable for a fine of $5 odd. Council felt that cost was a bit steep for a parking violation and instructed the clerk to consult the town solicitor regarding amendment of the by-law to make the oense liable for a $1 fine instead.

King Street is to be declared a through street subject to departmental approval and the cross streets on King marked with the proper stop signs. Water Street where it enters Main at the square is to be marked with a "no parking" sign ten feet from the corner on both sides to clear the view of motorists and pedestrians approaching the corner. The north side of King is to receive the same treatment as will Main Street in front of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Victoria Street is to be declared ending at Main South, Mill Street will be marked as "stop" street and extended to include part of the square in front of the Community Hall. Thus the orphan bit of Main South, left hanging when the old bridge was removed, will disappear in name and Victoria and Mill will take over.

General business of council was light with the accounts and correspondence quickly taken care of. It was noted with a degree of satisfaction that the Department of Highways had reimbursed the town for the embankment and bridge approach construction. Something over $2000 had been received.

With Reeve McMillan absent on a winter vacation, Acting Reeve Carl McMillan was in the chair. All councillors were present with the exception of Mr. Marshall Page who is still in hospital.

SAYS 25 PCT. OF CHILDREN HAVE EYE DEFECTS

"Between 20 and 25 per cent of all children have visual defects," Dean E. J. Fisher of the College of Optometry, Toronto.

Dean Fisher was addressing the Ottawa meeting of the Ontario Optometrical Association at the Chateau Laurier, and said that this was revealed in school surveys which have been conducted by optometrists in Southern Ontario schools.

He stressed that children sometimes have defects about which they don't complain because they have never experienced proper vision.

Dean Fisher discussed methods of correcting visual defects with the group. He stated that proper attention at an early age may correct children's eyes.

"About 70 per cent of all knowledge comes to the person through the eyes," Dean Fisher said. Therefore much of the child's school success depends on his eyes.

Dean Fisher was introduced by Ron McPherson, chairman of the meeting.

H. W. Algate was one of the attending optometrists.

Hospital Auxiliary Presents Variety Concert In Community Hall

Vocal solos presented by the Rev. F. E. Rice, Alan Clement, Laura Mae Tupper and Frank Cox were all in fine voice. Pupils from Chesterville Public School perforemd "The Dance of the Snowflakes" very gracefully and charming dances were executed by Nancy Moore, Shirley Walker, Lynda Hutton and Ronnie Doering.

A violin solo by Mrs. Hugh McMillan, piano duet by June McMillan and Helen McPherson, vocal duets by Frank and Arthur Casselman, Barbara and Carol Merkley, Lana and Carol Marcellus and Helen and Carol Merkley were well received.

Along The Way

By Stylus

"Why Bill, whatever's the matter? You've got a face that's at least seven days long!"

"Have I, Jim? I don't wonder after what I went through last night."

"Well don't keep me in such suspense, let's have it."

"Sure, Jim, sure. But let's get under way. I'll tell you about it while we're working."

With that Bill jumped on the sleigh, and we started for the woodlot where we had been busy for the past week or moreKwhen it hasn't been raining! My mind was in a turmoil for I knew that something pretty bad must have happened. Bill always had a smile on his face but when I looked at him now I could think of nothing better than a gathering storm. But I knew I had to bide my time to find out about it, for Bill is not one to be hurried, though I was sure I'd have his confidence in his own good time.

It wasn't long before we reached the woodlot. We tied the horses in the shelter and got ready to work. Bill never uttered a word the whole time, which was quite unlike him. His tongue, usually, is always busy, a guarantee against freezing, I sometimes think. But it wasn't until we felled a couple of trees that he began to loosen up and gave me any hope that my curiousity was to be satisfied.

"You know, Jim, that I was at the Road Commission meeting last night? I nodded in the affirmative.

"We all turned up as usual," he went on. "Black Alec was there from Black's Hill, Little Alec from tthe the Gulch and Jack MacIntyre and I from the Beaver Meadow and the Swamp."

He was interrupted by the saw jumping and didn't continue until we had freed it.

"Of course these meetings are public, but the public never comes." At that point he gave me a look that made me hang my head, for, to be sure I was one of the defaulters in that regard. He must have seen the look that came over me, for he continued: "Oh I'm not blaming you for not attending, Jim, but since the meetings are public it isn't out of order to talk to you about what goes on at them, you understand." I assured him I did understand. "Things went along pretty good," he went on. "Little Alec was in the chair as usual, with Jack taking the minutes. We passed the minutes of the previous meeting, heard the reports of the work each of us is responsible for, then turned our attention to the work that was to be done this summer. Everybody seemed pretty agreeable, even Black Alec; you know how he likes to be contrary." I nodded again, but he didn't continue immediately. He seemed to be puzzling over just the right way to proceed. I tried a little prompting.

"You got the summer's work pretty well laid out, Bill? What about that turn down by the Widow's, will that get some attention this year?"

The question seemed to bring him back. "Yes, yes that's to be attended to all right. In fact the summer's work is pretty well lined up. We are even going to gravel the Dead End."

He took another 'breather' while I knotched a tree. "In fact it was just after we'd agreed to that that Black Alec dropped his bombshell. We thought the meeting was over, and I was champing at the bit to get away when it came. You remember that some years ago we bought a gravel pit from him. It was understood at the time that we'd have a right of way across his land to get to the pit, although nothing was mentioned in the deed about it. Well sir, last night he presented a bill for $500 for the use of that right of way. We were so surprised we couldn't say anything for a full two minutes. Little Alec just stared at Black Alec and Jack looked at me as though he'd been hypnotised."

We got the tree down before he went on: "Somebody had to say something so I asked: 'But Alec, we were under the impression that you had granted us a right of way to that pit gratis.'"

"'Well sir,' he snapped back, and you know how snappy he can be, Bill," 'you'd better move over, 'cause ye're under the wrong impression.'"

By then Little Alec had recovered from the shock enough to say: "Well, Alec, you know well's I do that we can't afford to pay you any $500, we haven't got it and our budget is made up for the year."

"Not my affair," replied Alec. "If you don't pay up I'll take it to law. The law's clear. You fellow's bin trespassin'."

That made me mad, and I exploded. "If you think so, Alec, take it to court and we'll see how clear it is!"

This riled him, so he ploughed into me pretty heatedly: "Now listen here, you young whippersnapper, it takes more'n a year on a commission like this to learn the law. You better hightail it back home and do a little readin'. I'm aimin' to collect $500 for the use o' my road, and the law's on my side!"

I could feel my blood boil and I whipped back: "If some of the old foggies around this place were as honest and community minded as the young uns we wouldn't need any law." As soon as I said that I regreted it. Neither Alec or I knew the law to begin with, and my sweeping statement must have sounded pretty bad to Little Alec who's older than Black Alec by some ten years anyway."

"It was then that Jack stepped in and saved the day. He's pretty sane, thank goodness, and by now he'd collected his wits. He moved that the claim be laid on the table until the next meeting, and that meanwhile the chairman seek legal advice concerning it. I seconded the motion and moved adjournment, so that ended the thing for the time being. Black Alec got away without giving any of us a second look."

"The whole thing has left a taste in my mouth, Jim. It's discouraging to find there are fellows like Black Alec who have no desire to help the community at all and only think of themselves."

"I know how you feel, Bill," I assured him, "but it takes all kinds to make a world, you know."

"Yes, I guess you're right. What bothers me most of all, of course, is that I lost my temper. It didn't do any good, and actually aggravated the situation. But then, I never learned that measure of selfcontrol."

"Perhaps it would help if you would remember what the writer of Proverbs said when you feel that way," I suggested, trying vainly to be helpful: 'He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.'"

Bill's face brightened. "Say, that's pretty good," he said. "Yes, Jim, I must try to remember those words, they will be helpful."

And we set to work with a will.

NATURALLY AMBIDEXTROUS?

The reason we are not ambidextrous medical men say, is the fact that human beings use only one side of their brain for thought and speech. People who use their left brain lobe usually favour the right side in everything and vice versa. If we use both brain lobes at the same time, one might operate a little slower than the other and the end result would be nothing but babble and confusion.

Mummy's Little Helper

A woman had taken great pains to conceal the bottle of perfume she was trying to smuggle into this country from her vacation trip to France, and all seemed to be going well. The customs official had nearly finished his search when the litlle five-year-old daughter said excitedly:

"Oh-h-h, Mummy! He's getting warm, isn't he?"

Nothing to Worry About

Summer Boarder: "Does the water always come through the roof like this?"

Farmer: "No, sir. Only when it rains."

Really Ill

Doctor: And how do you feel this morning?"

Patient: "Bad. I couldn't even eat the things you told me not to."

Knox Presbyterian Church Holds Annual Meeting At Crysler

The annual meeting of Knox Presbyterian Church, Crysler, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Begg. Rev. John Honeyman acted as chairman.

All organizations reported a very successful year. The Session report was given by C. R. Wert; the Women's Missionary Society by Mrs. J. W. Paul and the Ladies' Aid Society by Mrs. Kenzie MacGillivray. The auditor's report was given by S. L. Begg.

The Ladies' Aid Society have installed new windows in the church in the past year and a short discussion was held regarding new doors and the remodeling of the steeple.

The meeting closed by singing the Doxology after which a social time was enjoyed by all.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by the ladies of the congregation.

Public Speaking Finals Held at K.A.S.

Students in agriculture and home economics at the Kemptville Agricultural School staged their annual public speaking contest on January 28th with a record number of entries resulting in a win for Glenn Larmer, a Junior student in Agriculture, from Durham County. Speaking on the topic "The Future Influence of K.A.S.," Larmer showed excellent ability. He was closely followed by top notch efforts from Francis Jose, of Durham County, with the topic "The Revised Edition of the Bible" and Dale Cleave, Prince Edward County, who dealt with "The Need for Safer Automobiles."

Other students who competed in the finals were the following: Mildred Pringle, Lennox and Addington, Leon Martin, Wentworth County and Victor Henry, of Antigua, B.W.I. A new feature this year was the inclusion of impromptu speeches for all the candidates. Judges were G. E. Taylor, K R. Cameron and Mrs. J. R. Baker, all of Kemptville. They complimented all speakers on their originality, platform manner and ability to handle impromptu topics. Ken Rigney was student chairman for the event and was greatly assisted by Ross Tuck and John Jamieson, who arranged the setting and the timings for the impromptu speeches. Mr. A. M. Barr, principal of K.A.S., and Mr. D. A. Knapp of the staff presented trophies and prizes to the contestants. Mr. Barr noted that 40 students had entered the initial stages of the public speaking project. Doreen Young and Roger Cronk sang two duets accompanied by Mildred Pringle at the piano.

Mr. W. B. George showed two excellent films while the judges were striving for a decision. Following the contest, which evoked a hearty response from the audience all the way through, refreshments and an informal dance completed a worthwhile evening.

This is the slogan at a factory in Denmark where elderly men over seventy may work for four hours a day at the standard rate of pay in order to supplement their pensions.

F. C. ELIGH, FINCH QUALIFIES FOR MASTER BREEDER SHIELD

F. C. Eligh, Finch, Ont., has qualified for a Master Breeder Shield, the highest honour that can be bestowed by the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada.

To qualify for this honour he has bred in his Glenholm herd, six "XX" bulls, six "Very Good" cows, 15 "Good Plus" cows and two "Excellent" cows. The females have all completed ROP records at least 20 per cent above the qualifications.

In addition, Mr. Eligh has bred two "Very Good", one "Gold Medal," 19 "Good Plus" and two "Excellent" cows that have not yet filled the Master Breeder production requirements.

The shield was presented by Hon. Fletcher Thomas, Ontario's new Minister of Agriculture, at the annual meeting of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada held in Toronto.

Cliff Eligh was born on the farm he now occupies. Quiet and unassuming, he has been a tower of strength in the farm organizations of his community, having given tirelessly of his time and effort. He belies the ancient adage that a "prophet is not without honour in his own country" for he is most highly esteemed by those who know him best.

For many years Cliff has been secretary of the Holstein Breeders' Club of Stormont, has been a Calf Club leader for 14 years and for the past 12 years has been a director of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada for which organization he is currently serving as a vice-president.

Cliff's father started the Glenholm herd in 1915 with animals purchased from W. P. Empey, Chesterville. At the age of 18 Cliff became a partner in the herd and took over completely in 1925 after graduating from Kemptville Agricultural School.

The entire herd was lost on the TB test in 1923 and the foundation for the present herd was laid with the purchase of four heifers, two from Kemptville Agricultural School and two from A. P. McLean, Finch, at that time.

In 1929 Cliff set up a long-term programme that envisaged building a small herd of high class cattle. Since then the average size of the herd has been 31 head and how well the quality has been built up is indicated by the winning of the Master Breeder Shield.

The Glenholm herd has been on ROP test since 1929 and in 1946, 1948, 1949, 1951 and 1952 carried off the premier exhibitor banner at the Stormont Black and White Day held in connection with Newington Fair. In 1951, Cliff Eligh showed the junior champion female at Ottawa Winter Fair.

Good herdsires have been used in building this herd, these including a son of Johanna Rag Apple Pabst, a son of Wimbledon Dean Marathon and a son of the seven times All-Canada Montvic Rag Apple Marksman. The current herdsire is MacDonald Rag Apple Elect, he by Raymondale Rag Apple Sterling.

CANE EXPLAINS THEFTS

An innocent-looking cane that can be extended into a 11-foot ladder has been placed in Scotland Yard's Black Museum.

The cane explains the long-standing mystery of the batmen burglars, who carried out seemingly impossible feats of scaling walls of buildings seven storeys high, one floor at a time.

It was found on an ex-convict who was arrested on swank Park Lane as a suspicious person and sentenced to ten year's "preventive detention."

HYNDMAN W.A. MEETS AT ROBINSON HOME

The monthly meeting of the Hyndman W.A. was held on Tuesday evening, January 20th, at the home of Mrs. Howard Robinson. Mrs. Paul Woods had the devotional part of the meeting in the absence of Mrs. McCarley.

The meeting opened with Hymn 511. A poem, "The New Year," was read by Mrs. Woods; Mrs. Ray Grant read the scripture taken from Matthew, Chapter 6, Verses 1-8. Readings were given, "Just for Today," by Mrs. Gordon Francis; "New Year Opportunity," by Mrs. Lawrence Pelton. A poem, "One Day at a Time," was given by Mrs. Hubert Robinson. Hymn 662 was sung, followed by prayer by Mrs. Howard Robinson closed this part of the meeting.

The president thanked Mrs. Woods for taking the devotional period. Hymn 354 was sung followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Minutes were read by Mrs. Gilmer and approved by the president. The roll call was answered by the paying of membership fees. Seventeen members joined.

A letter was read by the secretary from Mrs. Lattimore. Mrs. Norton presented the quilt that was just finished at her home. It was decided to have a crokinole party in the school on February 13; the admission was set at 25c. Mrs. Hubert Robinson invited the group to her home for the next meeting; Mrs. Norton will have charge of the devotional period and Mrs. Chester Gilmer, the social. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

A social hour was spent; Mrs. Hubert Robinson had a few contests after which lunch was served by the hostess and the committee in charge.

"... very beneficial to our firm"

Recently the owners of a new business wrote their bank about the way the local branch had helped:

"Having completed our first year in business, and one which we feel has been most successful, we would like to advise you of the splendid co-operation we have received from the officials of your branch. We have consulted your local manager many times, not only regarding financial problems but business problems in general, and his advice has been very beneficial to our firm."

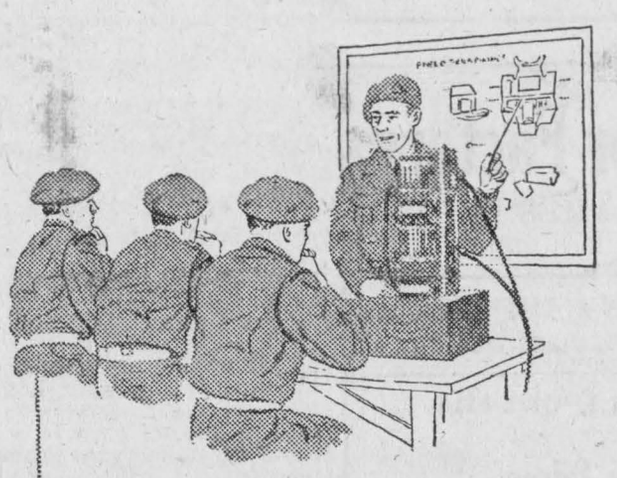

Such service is part of the job of every manager of Canada's 3700 branch banks. He must know the problems of the people he serves—whether business men or primary producers, wage earners or salaried workers. He welcomes every opportunity to make his bank useful to them—and to you.

THE SEARCH FOR GYRFALCOLNS

Geoffrey Pollard is a barrister who has been interested in falconry for many years. In his BBC talk he spoke about this mediaeval pastime which, although long extinct as a sport, still exists amongst a small body of enthusiasts which has kept and trained hawks for hundreds of years.

In nearly every war, including the last one, both sides have used trained falcons to intercept enemy carrier pigeons and in 1947 and 1948 peregrine falcons were used on some Unitof birds before aircraft took off and ed Kingdom aerodromes to clear them landed. Seagulls were the worst offenders in standing about on the airfiields and as peregrines would not chase them it was decided to get gyrfalcons from Iceland Gyrfalcons are the largest, fastest and most powerful of all the falcon family. "They are also the rarest," said Pollard. "Gyrs breed on and above the Arctic Circle and no bird that flies, not even the wild swan, is safe from them. They have a wing span of rather more than four feet and the female, called the falcon as opposed to the male or tiercel, which is smaller, weighs over four pounds. They can drive eagles with the ease of collies driving sheep." Two men brought five gyrs back from Iceland and Pollard's first sight of one was memorable, for it was twice as big as a peregrine, almost pure white and proudly erect. "Previously peregrines had been my favourites," he said, "but from that moment I knew I had seen the most perfect bird in the world."

The spring of 1949 saw the ending of the falcon scheme for aerodromes but the men who had seen gyrs knew that they must get more. Iceland was the best place for them but the gyr is Iceland's national emblem and rigidly protected and special permission was given only to the R.A.F. Pollard selected Norway as his hunting to get the five that were captured ground and went there in June, 1949, spending five hard weeks searching the mountains of the South without even seeing a gyr. Next June he went back to look for the bird that is becoming increasingly rare through the incessant persecution of man and heard that a nest with eggs had been found near Harstad, two hundred miles above the Polar Circle. He set off at once but the eggs had been smashed and the falcon shot. He found four other eyries but was too late in every case for all the young had flown.

In 1951 he went back to the eyries, but three were empty. The fourth was in a suicidal position on a sheer two-thousand-foot ciff of crumbling rock and he was unable to reach it. Just before leaving for home, utterly discouraged, he heard of an eyrie on Mageroya, an island at the most northerly tip of Norway. The birds turned out to be merlins but as the weather was glorious he decided to make an intensive search by boat, cruising up and down every fjord firing guns to scare possible gyrs. Late on the third evening he and his guide were cooking supper when he saw, high above the rocks on the mainland, two soaring birds with the unmistakable sickle-shaped wings of gyrs. They searched scrupulously next day but found nothing and fired their last shot into the crags of a little canyon they had overlooked. Two birds spiralled out. The hunters discovered a eyrie at last, and Pollard reached i and found three young ones. "It was an indescribable moment," he said, "the culmination of three years of searching. In the Middle Ages only kings or the heads of states were allowed to own gyrfalcolns. I felt like a king." He put two nestlings carefully in a sack and climbed down. "Four days later the three of us had covered the two thousand miles by sea and air to England, myself and the first nestling gyrfalcolns to come out of Norway in three and a half centuries."

NITROGEN FOR OATS

The results of a number of experiments conducted on different soil types in Eastern Canada by the Division of Field Husbandry, Experimental Farms Service, indicate the value of nitrogen applied for oats. A. J. MacLean reports that in 51 tests on different soil types in the vicinity of Ottawa, application of 12 to 16 pounds of nitrogen per acre resulted in increases in the yield of oats up to 14.7 bushels per acre, the average increase from applied nitrogen in all tests being 5.5 bushels. To obtain best results it will usually be necessary to provide phosphorus and in some instances potash, in addition to nitrogen in the fertilizer.

Management practices exert a pronounced influence on the nitrogen supply in the soil. Where oats are grown on land recently manured or following a legume crop such as clover or alfalfa, the soil may contain adequate nitrogen for the first crop. In fact in such cases, additional nitrogen may be harmful since excessive amounts of nitrogen in the soil tend to produce a rank-growing succulent crop which is much more prone to lodge. However, on soils relatively low to medium in fertility, oats will respond favourably to nitrogen applications.

When seeding oats as a nurse crop in establishing a legume hay crop, a relatively lower amount of nitrogen should be applied than that used for oats seeded alone. Otherwise, the heavier crop of oats resulting from nitrogen applications, may by competition for light and moisture, result in poorer stands of legumes.

MOUSE MUMMY

Honey bees have an unearthly dread of mice and usually will desert their honey-laden homes if a mouse enters and takes over. The mouse is quite aware that his odour strikes paralyzing fear into the hearts of the bees for in the autumn he will often move himself and his family into a bee tree, drive the rightful owners out and spend a pleasant winter living on the sweet fruit of the bees' long summer toil.

Occasionally, however, the bees will spring to the rescue of their queen, and falling upon the mouse by thousands, will sting him to death.

Then a new problem confronts the bees, how to get rid of the dead invader. A unique solution is effected when the bees cover the mouse's body with an airtight transparent mound of wax. This makes it possible for the bees to continue living in their home for the winter.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Sometimes it is difficult to find out the exact quantities of a new dish but we have been fortunate in obtaining numerous ones recently. They are original recipes that have been prepared on an exhibition stage in competition for a new Gurney electric range. Here are a few new dishes which we tasted during this interesting event.

Carrot and Orange Cake

1½ cups sifted flour
3 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 cup sugar
¼ cup milk
½ cup shortening
2 eggs
1½ cups grated carrot
1 tbsp. orange rind grated

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; sift again. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually until fluffy. Add eggs; beat wee. Next, add the grated carrots and orange rind and mix thoroughly. Add sifted dry ingredients, alternately with milk, stirring only until blended. Pour batter into a greased 8 inch square cake pan and bake at 350 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Cool on rack for 5 minutes. Remove from pan. Serve warm with whipper cream.

Cherry Date Squares

1½ cups dates
1 cup water
¾ cup flour
½ tsp. soda
¾ tsp. baking powder
1 tbsp. butter
1 egg
½ cup chopped cherries
½ cup chopped walnuts
¾ cup brown sugar

Cook dates with water until tender, about 20 minutes. Cream butter and sugar; add egg. Add cherries, nuts and dates. Stir in sifted dry ingredients. Bake in 8 inch square pan at 325 degrees F. for 30 minutes. When cool cut in squares or fingers.

Dutch Shortbreads

½ lb. butter
1 egg white
1 tsp. almond flavouring
f.g. salt
2 hard-boiled eggs
2¼ cups sifted cake flour
¼ cup chopped almonds

Put hard-boiled eggs through a sieve. Add butter, sifted flour and salt, flavouring and rub all together with a fork or with the fingers. Shape into rolls and put in refrigerator until hard. Slice about ¼" thick. Brush on slightly beaten egg white, dip in chopped nuts and bake at 400 degrees F. until browned, about 10 minutes.

Chop Suey

2 cups chopped cooked chicken, pork or beef
2 cups diced or sliced celery
1 cup diced or sliced onions
2 tbsps. shortening
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 can chicken noodle soup
1 can bean sprouts
2 tbsps. cornstarch
2 tbsps. soy sauce

Saute onions in shortening until golden: add celery, salt pepper and soup and cook until celery is tender (about 15 minutes). Add drained bean sprouts and meat, then stir in cornstarch blended with soy sauce. Simmer for 10 minutes. Serve on fluffy rice. Serves four.

TAKE A TIP

1. The first Canadian International Hobby and Homecraft Show is being held in Toronto's Coliseum from February 6th to 14th. One of the special features will be a cooking school every afternoon where Mrs. Kate Aitken will be in charge. There will also be quilting bees and fashion shows, along with demonstrations of every hobby known to and loved by Canadians.
2. The Valentine parties may feature a party cake topped with fluffy icing and sprinkled with enough red sugar to outline a heart design.
3. A new idea for a party cake is the use of sliced gumdrops set in the frosting. Paint strings for these "balloons" with toothpick dipped in chocolate sauce.
4. The red gelatine moulds will turn out in perfect shape if you oil the mould slightly before you pour the dissolved gelatine into the pan.
5. Add a teaspoon of plain gelatine to 1 cup of whipping cream as it is being beaten if the chilled dessert is being made 2 of 3 hours before serving.

Caught

Entering a hotel, a traveller ordered a whisky and soda and was about to drink it when he noticed a painter at work on the ladder.

Immediately he went out without touching the drink. The painter climbed down and lifted the customer's glass.

"Hi!" said the barman, "you can't do that! That chap will be back in a minute, I expect!"

"Oh, no, he won't" said the painter. "You see, he's the president of our local temperance society, and I'm the secretary."

CANADIAN PLOWMEN ABROAD

by ROY SHAVER Past President
ONTARIO PLOWMEN'S ASSOCIATION

Douglas S. Reid

Algie Wallace

Editor's Note:
Roy Shaver, of Finch, Ont., past president of Ontario Plowmen's Association, accompanied Douglas S. Reid, of Brampton, Ont. and Algie Wallace, of North Gower, Ont., Canada's champion plowmen, on their trip to the British Isles, Eire and France. This is the third of a series of five weekly articles he has written as team manager about their experiences and impressions.

PLOWMEN'S NEWSLETTER

Rather than try to recount every stop we made, every town and farm we visited in Scotland, Northern Ireland, Eire and England, I thought this week I would tell you of some of the impressions we gained of farming in those countries.

"We" means Doug Reid, of Brampton, 26-year-old Canadian tractor plowing champ, Algie Wallace, of North Gower, 35, horse plowing champion, and myself, Roy Shaver, of Finch, Ont., thier team manager.

First of all I would like to make one point. I do not think it is possible to compare adequately Canadian and British farming methods or farms. Climatic differences for instance make it almost impossible to discuss cattle feeding, for in England they are able to pasture their cattle during months that in Canada it is impossible to do so.

Another reason against comparison is the many old farm buildings we saw which defy modernization and are consequently handicaps to efficiency.

One of the first things the boys noticed was the absence of barns as we know them in this country. On the majority of farms they have byres, which in essence are really only four posts with a roof on top. In these byres the cattle shelter from the weather and feed during the autumn and winter pasturing.

The factor which most impressed Doug in British farming was the weed control, and I think I agree with him. The weed control on the British farms is outstanding; there is not a weed to be seen on the majority of the farms.

While the three of us agreed that British farming could stand to be more mechanized, and were a little astonished to see the amount of heavy work that is done in the fields by women, we still had to take our ten-gallon hats off to the British farmer in the matter of yield per acre. They are still ahead of us there.

It is hard to decide why this should be. Perhaps it's because the land is richer; or maybe they look after it better or fertilize it more.

One farm we won't forget in a hurry, because there we saw something that upset all our notions of cattle breeding. It was the farm of J. O. O'Neil, just outside Belfast. Mr. O'Neil farms his 100 acres just about as intensively as 100 acres can be farmed. With a herd of more than 100 Ayreshires, he was keeping more than one cow per acre without feeding them concentrates. He feeds them only ensiloed hay, about 90 pounds per day per cow. His hay is cured in horizontal silos and was testing about 14 per cent protein.

All of which, as you will agree, was very good, and we were impressed by this performance, but then Mr. O'Neil told us that he hadn't bought a male or female in six years. He was obviously an enthusiastic supporter of inbreeding, and we were hard-pushed for something to say for to us his herd showed every sign of the need of new blood stock.

Three of the larger farms we visited in Scotland and England were breeding and milking Holsteins, and some of the cattle were direct descendants from two of Ontario's best-known blood lines. But first let me tell you of a fact which struck us as rather strange. In Scotland the farmers thought very ill of the Canadian-type Holstein, both breeders and milkers, while English farmers could not say enough to the credit of the Holsteins.

On the farm of Edwin de Gray Seaman, in Huntingdonshire, we came across a son of Marksman, the animal that packed the Alliston farmhouse of J. J. E. McCague with so many blue ribbons. Mr. Seaman was farming 1,800 acres, 800 of which was reclaimed marsh. He was running 300 Canadian-bred Holsteins and would write an unsolicited testimonial for them at the drop of anyone's hat.

At Calthorpe we found our second Ontario expatriate in a flourishing son of the pride of Oxford County, Tom Dent's Sovereign. He was on the 1,200-acre dairy farm of James Alston. All of Mr. Alston's 250 Holsteins were from Canadian blood lines. He was milking 100 with an average test of 3.7 per cent. Incidentally, he also had one of the finest stables of Clydesdales that we saw in the whole of our visit.

Though he did not voice it to any of the farmers, Doug had one suggestion for improving British farms. He thinks they would be well advised to uproot the hedgerows with which the English countryside abounds. He admitted willingly that they are picturesque but his practical Canadian eye decided too much land is wasted on either side of the hedges. "If they were my farms," he said, "I'd get a bulldozer and root them all out, then replace them with an electric or stationary fence of some kind."

One question I have been asked repeatedly since our return is "How is the British farmer making out?" Though we did not have an opportunity to speak to what we can loosely refer to as the average farmer, I would say that for a long time the British farmer hasn't been as well off as he is now. Most of the farmers we met were operating fairly large farms that could be called showplaces, but all of them agreed they didn't want anything to change for a while. Though they are up against high feed prices they have guaranteed markets, with government supported prices, for everything they can produce.

That they cannot produce enough is easily demonstrated. Eggs are rationed at one two per person per week, depending upon available supplies. They cost aboutt 14 cents each, of $1.68 a dozen. If I tell you that six pounds, or $16.50, is a more than average weekly salary in the British Isles, I don't think there is much more I need tell you about the food situation.

Good manners and good morals are sworn friends and fast allies.—Bartol.

Miss Donelda McLean, of Ottawa, spent the week-end at her home here.

Swerdfeger-Casselman

The home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Casselman, Riverside, was the scene of the marriage of Edna Mae Casselman, daughter of Earl Casselman, Morrisburg, to Roscoe Johnston Swerdfeger, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Swerdfeger, of Morrisburg. Rev. F. L. Howald officiated at the double-ring ceremony, which took place on Saturday, January 24th at 2.30 p.m.

The bride ,given in marriage by her father, chose for the occasion a floor length gown of slipper satin styled with embroidered yoke of nylon net, a fitted bodice, and long tapered sleeves. A coronet of seed pearls held in place her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Colleen Canough, Massena, N.Y., cousin of the bride as bridesmaid wore a strapless gown of ice blue satin trimmed with brocaded taffeta and net overskirt, mitts and cape. Her headdress was of blue ruffled nylo nnet and taffeta and she carried a bouquet of mixed yellow roses and carnations.

Mrs. F. Howald played the Wedding March and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Stanley E. Casselman rendered "O Promise Me."

Following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served to 40 guests. For their wedding trip through New York State, the bride wore a brown ensemble with red accessories.

BROADWAY BELLE

Betty Phillips, beautiful young Vancouver songstress, takes a page out of grandma's scrapbook for her role as the belle of "Leicester Square to Broadway," a Tuesday night feature of the CBC's Trans-Canada network. She has no trouble getting into the spirit of the gay '90's with the Old Stager, Eric Vale, the Barbershop Quartet and Harry Pryce's orchestra on hand to lend moral support. Miss Phillips is also gaining recognition for her serious music by her many recitals presented for CBC audiences. Recently she appeared with violinist Cardo Smalley and pianist Phylis Dilworth in a 45-minute recital on CBC's Wednesday Night.
