Excellent entertainment was provided this week on the stage of Community Hall by St. Mary's Dramatic Club in their two-night presentation of the three-act comedy, "Amazing Gracie." Both nights saw a well-filled auditorium whose response to the efforts of the cast was most heartening.

Members of the cast included: Mrs. Thos. Whelan, Gladys Allen, Marion Lynch, Charlotte Lynch, Christina Kelly, Margie MacMillan, Denis Hurtubise, Gerald Kearney, Ernest Faubert, Allan Clement, Louis Moriarty.

Entertainment between acts starred the voices of Rose Mary Maxwell, Ann Kelly, Joan Dacey and Irene Desormeaux. They sang "Kitty of Coleraine" and "Peggy O'Neill."

The ever-popular Gerald Faubert added to his laurels with renditions of "Molly Malone" and "Galway Piper." The pleasing tenor of George Chambers was also heard in two Irish songs.

ICE OUT OF RIVER HERE ON ST. PATRICK'S DAY AS USUAL

For many years St. Patrick's Day finds free water flowing through the village as the spring rains make their warmness felt on the river ice. This year was no excepton, and by nightfall on Tuesday, the river was running free in the village area.

The flood this year has not been worth the name. There was no snow to cause heavy run-off from the fields and the water levels have not reached any proportions. The ice has just rotted away without any excitement at the bridge whatever.

FYKE—In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Wm. J. Fyke, who passed away March 17, 1950.

It's lonesome here without you, Dad,
And sad the weary way.
For life is not the same to us
Since you have passed away.
If we had all the world to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To hear your voice, to see you smile,
And greet you at the door.

We cannot bring the old days back,
Your voice we cannot hear,
But we have treasured memories
Of the one we loved so dear.

Ever remembered by Marjorie, Vince, Gladys, Ross and girls.

Along The Way

By Stylus

"Hello, Bill, are you ready?"

"Yes, Jim, be with you in a minute."

We were on our way to look over a "new" car when this conversation took place. The car had caught my attention some time before. Of course it wasn't "new", it was a "two-year-old". It was something I could afford, I hoped, and since the one I owned was on its last legs I had to do something with it. I have always been afraid of buying a used car for there's no way of telling what worries the other fel low is trying to dispose of. Of course the same thing is true of my desire to make a change, since I want to get rid of my worries too—and that's for sure! Because I felt two heads would surely be better than one I called in my old friend Bill whose advice is always pretty sound.

"Let's go," cried Bill a moment later as he slid into the seat beside me. "How do you feel today, Jim?"

"I'm not too sure, Bill. A little excited and a little perplexed, but I can't tell you more than that."

"Yeah, I know. This is something like buying a cow, you hope for the best but are always ready for the worst."

By this time we had reached Uncle Ned's place and I turned in at the gate.

"Going to bring the Old Boy along, Jim?"

"Yes, Bill. I generally pick him up whenever I'm going to town. He enjoys the ride in spite of all he says, and also the opportunity to pass the time with some of his old cronies."

Uncle Ned was waiting for us. We'd no sooner got the car stopped than his jovial hail rolled across the ear. "Hi there, why don't you fellows get up of a morning?" We didn't reply because we knew that Uncle Ned knew that we were up a good two hours before him. His question was the usual one, so we simply ignored it and smiled a good morning.

It was a beautiful day with the sun shining warmly out of a clear sky. Uncle Ned said, as soon as he was seated: "Too bad the weather's so poor, t'ain't good for folks, thet' why thar's s'many colds."

Again Bill and I said nothing, for you can't argue with Uncle Ned and he must have been born to beef. If there's nothing else there's the weather, and regardless of how fine it may be, to him it's always poor. He kept up a continuous fire as we drove on, berating everything he could think of. He covered crops and cattle, politics and religion, beef and pork; airplanes were too fast; boats were too slow and there seemed nothing in between.

We let him steam, it saved us putting forth any effort to make conversation, and so we came to town. We let Uncle Ned off at the mill and drove away with the primise we'd pick him up again in an hour or two.

When we arrived at the car lot there didn't seem to be anyone around, so we thought we'd just look over the cars ourselves. Such a conglomeration would be hard to imagine! In one corner was a dilapidated old Ford, no great credit now to its smart young mechanic inventor, Henry. Grahams and Hudsons stood side by side looking as though they had rubbed noses in the same ditch. A Chevvy looked as if it had come out of the Ark and not being able to make the door had simply left a couple of fenders behind. We found more interesting cars in another corner of the lot. There was a gray Dodge I thought I recognized, and beside it a Morris I was sure I had ridden in. The car I had in mind, a Pontiac, didn't seem to be anywhere about. Perhaps that was why my attention was caught by the Surburban. I called out to Bill, who had strayed off by himself, to come and have a look at it.

He came over, eyeing it as he came, and said: "Very nice, but you wouldn't consider it, would you?"

"I don't know," I replied. "I've rather had my mind on this kind of a thing for awhile, but I never thought I could get much of a deal on one. It has several advantages. The upholstery will take some punishment, it will carry quite a load, it's more rugged than a car and I would really like a vehicle with those advantages."

Bill didn't say much but I could see he liked the looks of it alright. "Maybe it would be a good buy at that," he muttered. "Those kids of yours would certainly have lots of room to crawl around."

"Yes," I agreed, "and plenty of windows to look through without fighting about who was to sit beside which!"

Just then the salesman came up and asked us if we would like to take the Wagon (Station Wagon, Neighbour), out for a trial run.

We decided we would. It performed beautifully. The key turned in the lock, the door opened, the engine started without a crank, the back wheels rolled frontwards and the back seat kept pace with the front one. There weren't even any queer howls or noises in the motor. "Seems pretty good, Bill," I said, very modestly.

By the time we had given the Wagon a good trial and returned to the lot, the salesman had prepared his "line." We no sooner parked than he started: "Well, gentlemen, there's a pretty fine car. Ie hasn't been driven very far or very hard. You realize, of course, in buying this machine, you are really buying two cars for the price of one. This is known as a dual purpose vehicle, so called because the back seat folds down to make a truck rack between the back of the front seat and the rear door which, of course, opens out. Thus the car can be used as an ordinary pleasure car or a light truck. It is also invaluable for hunting or fishing. I have used one for that purpose myself, and two fellows can be just as comfortable on a mattress in the back of this machine, I can assure you, as in a cabin. You notice also that the upholstery is leather, it can easily be sponged off. The air-conditioning unit is the last word for that year and model, and that motor, why it just purrs like a a kitten!"

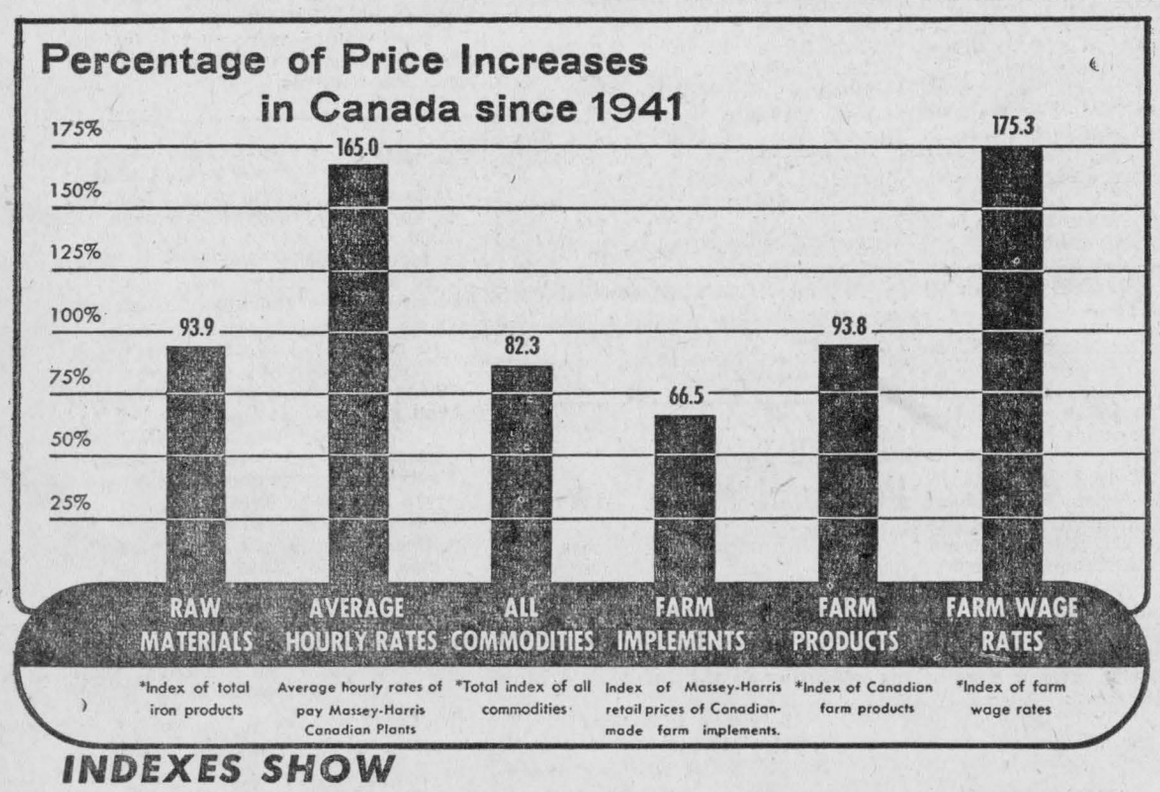

Now, Neighbour, if you can read that as fast as that fellow got it off, you"ll burn the eyes out of your head. Neither Bill or I paid much attention to him. We were closely examining everything we could think of that should be looked over when one purchases a used car. Then we got our heads together and the result of our consultation was that I'd deal under certain conditions.

To cut the story short, Neighbour, the deal was arranged, so that is that! Every time I buy a car I feel something like I did the day I got married, for this too is: "For better or for worse." I don't dare mention what Uncle Ned said when we picked him up later in the day!

A young commercial traveller set out for the first time to get orders in the West of England. At Plymouth he met an old traveller, who asked him how he got on.

"Badly," he replied. "I was insulted at every place I visited."

"That's strange," said the other. "I've been on the road for forty years; I've had my samples flung into the street; I've been taken by the scruff of the neck and pitched downstairs; I don't deny that I've been rolled in the gutter; but insulted—never!"

INDEXES SHOW

IMPLEMENT PRICES AT LOW LEVEL OF INCREASE

That implement prices have been kept at a low level is clearly shown by the comparison of Dominion Bureau of Statistics index figures, which give an increase in "all commodities" since 1941 of 82.3% as against an increase in a comparable index for Massey-Harris implements of only 66.5%. This low percentage of increase, too, is shown in the face of an increase in the index figure for materials of 93.9% and of Massey-Harris hourly rates of pay of 165% as can be seen by referring to the chart shown above.

Also, the indexes show that while farm implements have only increased 66.5% there has been an increase in the price of farm products of 93.8% and the scarcity of farm labour has caused farm wage rates to climb to 175.3%. The partial absorption of the increased costs of materials and labour has been made possible by the continued great world demand for farm mechanization giving a volume that permits a low ratio of selling expenses and high operating efficiency in manufacturing.

A FAVOURITE STORY IS FILMED

It will probably surprise you to learn that this picturization of "Ivanhoe" by M-G-M is the very first feature length filming of the famed novel by Sir Walter Scott. For fi ever there was a story of love and adventure that was meant for the screen—and for Technicolor—"Ivanhoe" is that story.

To bring the beloved book to life, M-G-M sent a company to England to film "Ivanhoe" on the actual scenes of the story. They recreated the whole medieval pageant, complete with Norman palaces and moated walls; put thousands or archers into the adjoining fields of Sherwood Forest; captured the very spirit and fire of the well-remembered characters. Its all there—as the minstrels sang about it, and the legends told about it, and Sir Walter Scott wrote about it.

The story, of course, concerns the romantic adventures of the Saxon knight, Sir Wilfred of Ivanhoe. You discover him disguised as a troubador in search of his captured king, Richard the Lion-Hearted. His quest leads him to a jousting tourney at Ashby where he is the mysterious black-armoured knight who vanquishes the best of the Norman knights.

At the storming of the castle of Torquilstone, you follow him in flaming assault that frees the raven-haired Rebecca and the fair Rowena from the dungeon and the torture chamber. Finally, in the breathless Trila by Combat, you witness his clash with the wicked De Bois-Guilbert. All the glory and terror of the era come to a climax in this mortal conflict which called for the weapons of broadsword and battle-mace. A woman's life and a king's throne tremble on the outcome.

To all the millions in whose hearts there is the remembered joy of reading "Ivanhoe" and to the few who may have missed that unforgettable thrill, we say: "The word is GO! See 'Ivanhoe!"

This fine classic will be shown in Chesterville at Community Theatre on March 26-27-28.

Fish Story

A man tried to train a fish to live out of water. The first day he kept the fish out of the bowl for one hour. The second day, for two hours. The third, for three hours, and so on until it could live in the air for a day at a time.

One day the man was walking over a bridge, while the fish which had become fond of its master, followed close behind. But, oh, the pity of it, the fish slipped, fell off the bridge, into the river and was drowned.

Weekly Farm Report For Dundas County

The coldest weather of the winter has prevailed the past week accompanied by very high winds, with squalls of snow. There is practically no covering on the fields, with the exception of ice, which has prevailed all winter and may affect fall wheat, clover and grasses.

Cattle prices received at recent farm sales have been fair to good. American buyers are in the market for springer and fresh cows, particularly.

There seems to be an increasing interest in the production of hogs. Sows and weanling pigs are again in demand.

More inquiries for seed are prevalent. Farmers are warned that they should buy their seed on grade. Ungraded seed may be weedy, of mixed variety and poor germination. Where home grown seed is used, the precaution should be taken of having a sample tested at a seed laboratory or apply a simple home germination test. Extension circular No. 59, "Germinating Seed at Home," is available.

Projects for 1953, sponsored by the Dundas Soil and Crop Improvement Association, have been organized.

24th ANNUAL K.A.S. ROYAL

The Kemptville Agricultural School students staged their big one-day Royal on Wednesday, March 11 before 600 relatives, graduates and friends. It was a colourful display of animal showmanship, handicraft and educational exhibits.

John Seabrook of North Gower, Senior student in Agriculture was grand champion showman, with Duncan MacArthur of Lancaster the reserve champion.

A keenly fought show ring battle saw Bob Bennett, senior student from Elginburg emerge as grand champion livestock showman. This final test was to show a Holstein cow, a Percheron mare, a pig, a Shorthorn heifer, an Ayrshire and a sheep in succession. Jim Coons of Lakefield came close as reserve champion. Other champions were Bill Rattray of Consecon, champion sheep showman; Mary Jane Maunder of Ottawa, champion horse showman; Russell Ruttan of Perth, champion swine showman; Dorothy Thompson of Martintown. champion junior cattle showman and Jim Coons of Lakefield, champion beef showman.

In the pavilion upstairs the displays included wood work, welding, fancy work, halters, colourful landscape plans and photography to mention only a few.

The Farm Economics exhibit won top honours by showing that the granary door type of bookkeeping must give way to the modern farm account book.

In the Home Economics section Guelda Bolton of R.R. 5, Peterborough won the prize for handicraft with Joan Stewart of Lyn reserve champion. Joan also won reserve junior livestock showman.

ONTARIO FIELDS SUFFER FROM LACK OF SNOW

Residents in urban centres have congratulated themselves on the fact they had little snow to shovel this winter but the Ontario farmer is not so happy.

To some people snow is something we could well get along without. To others it is an excuse to pack off to warmer climes; but to the farmer it is an essential factor in field crop production that provides the food for tomorrow.

Snow, in cities and towns may slow traffic and clog driveways but on the farm it provides a white blanket of insulation for all crops against the extremes of temperature and cold, killing winds.

The open winter of this year, with its less than average snowfall, has been severe on wintering crops. As a result wheat fields and meadows are showing a weakened condition.

In an effort to combat the situation many farmers have already top dressed the most exposed areas of their wheat and grasslands with manure to afford some degree of protection and to provide added plant food when growth starts.

A. H. Martin, director, Crops Branch and secretary, Advisory Fertilizer Board of Ontario, suggests that another good precaution is to apply a nitrogenous fertilizer at the time or just after growth starts. Nitrogen stimulates plant growth and often will nurse a sick crop back to health and profitable production.

For wheat and grasslands ammonium nitrate at 75 to 100 lbs. of ammophos (16-20-0) at 100 to 150 lbs. per acre applied at the time growth commences should be helpful. Cyanamid is slower acting than ammonium nitrate and if used should be applied well before growth starts at about 100 lbs. per acre.

If the soil is known to be low in fertility and a spring application of mixed fertilizer has been planned, then it would be advantageous to use a mixture high in nitrogen such as 4-12-6, 5-10-13, 8-8-8 or 10,10,10 at the rate of 200 to 300 lbs. per acre.

Winter injured crops need a quick acting readily available plant food material to give them an added boost in the early stages of spring growth.

ALFALFA YIELDS WELL ALL SUMMER

Alfalfa is one of the most productive legumes used for hay and pasture crops in Eastern Canada. It is sometimes called the "Queen of the Forage Crops" because it has many excellent qualities. In common with other legumes, it possesses the power to increase the nitrogen of the soil. It produces a high quantity of hay which has high feeding value per acre when compared with other farm crops used for that purpose. The production of high quality feed and the ability to yield well, however, are not the only desirable characteristics of this crop. From the standpoint of seasonal distribution of herbage, alfalfa leads all other hay plants and rivals many species which are commonly used for pasture in Eastern Canada.

The Division of Forage Plants, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, has conducted tests to determine the production of various species throughout the growing period each year. It was found that under pasture conditions alfalfa is able to yield well during prolonged hot, dry periods of mid-summer when other species, and particularly grasses, usually produce very little.

Tests conducted at Ottawa showed that during the months of July and August alfalfa mixtures produced over four times as much as timothy, Kentucky bluegrass, Canada bluegrass or red top pastures. The monthly contribution of alfalfa mixtures never exceeded 27 per cent of the total seasonal production and this was during June when as much as 45 per cent of the total seasonal production was obtained.

The value of alfalfa as a hay and pasture crop is also shown by the fact that in areas where it is adapted its total annual production is 25 to 40 per cent better than any other legume grown in similar mixtures for hay or pasture.

This year there are good supplies of Canadian-grown alfalfa seed. The cost of alfalfa is comparatively low. Its wide use in new seedings of hay and pastures mixtures is anticipated.

Saving Up

Little John's mother had just presented the family with twins. "If you tell your teacher, I'm sure she'll give you a holiday," advised the father.

Johnny did and returned home radiant. "No school for me tomorrow," he said proudly.

"You told your teacher about the twins?" asked father.

"I told her about one," said Johnny. "I'm saving the other 'til next week."

"When I see you I think of Brown."

"But I'm not like Brown."

"Yes, you are—you both owe me ten dollars."

Of Age

It was long after midnight. The author looked haggard and worn. He had been working on his novel.

"Darling," called his wife, "are you coming to bed?"

"No," muttered the author. "I've got the pretty girl in the clutches of the villain and I want to get her out."

"How old is the girl," asked the wife.

"Twenty-two," informed the writer.

"Then come to bed," snapped the wife. "She's old enough to take care of herself."

Make money your god and it will plague you like the devil.—Felding.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! The flattering spring clothes attract a magic feeling of femininity. Advertisers state that you will look taller and you will feel slimmer with unpinching suppleness. That's for us!

In contrast with such enticing remarks we found an old advertisement on fashions for clothes in which the illustration was a drawing of a new spring dress and the message read: "The following will be found neat and easy to imitate." That was 80 years ago.

What a difference today! We covet clothes that are fashionable yet never the same as everyone else's. As for fashions in food we wish to prepare the same as that which is news and copy the method of serving.

TAKE A TIP

Fashions in Food

1. Individual casseroles (porcelain or heat-proof glass) are being used for the main dish such as tuna and noodle, macaroni and cheese, creamed chicken, etc.
2. Tossed salads prepared from packaged ready-to-toss greens are economical for small families. Most culinary artists use French dressing into which bits of cheese are blended as a salad dressing for raw vegetables.
3. Homemakers no longer try and vie with canned soup manufacturers. The canned soup is heated according to directions on the can. Otherwise the modern housewife makes something new such as creamed onion and cheese soup or a chicken and parsley broth.
4. A company luncheon dish is often a jellied casserole in which is mixed diced cooked meat, scraped onion, grated carrot and shredded lettuce. It is served on a platter garnished with relishes and accompanied by a dish of mayonnaise dressing.
5. The majority of requests for desserts this month require recipes for a tortoni. This frozen cream or ice cream with diced fruit in it is prepared for serving in waxed paper cups or in new coloured metal freezing trays.
6. Cheese is being packaged so attractively that it can be placed on the table for snacks at any hour and returned to the cheese jar if not used.
7. Cobblers as dessert are the economical type. The modern method of preparation is tea biscuit dough rolled 1 8 inch thick, cut in 1-2 inch strips and placed over the cooked fruit in a lattice design. Then it is cooked the usual 20 minutes in a hot oven.
8. Packaged mixes for pastry dough, rolls, cakes, cookies, muffins gives the homemaker more time in preparing more attractive food.
9. Leftover foods are being prepared directly after a meal and packaged for freezing several days later. Frozen foods are not being appreciated since time or expense for proper packaging is not being considered wisely.
10. Two kinds of ready-to mix coffee are being used extensively for the club and church refreshment hour.

THE QUESTION BOX

Miss M. T. asks for a frozen dessert recipe containing biscuits and cream.

Answer: We presume you refer to Biscuit Tortoni or Macaroon Bombe.

¾ cup crushed macaroons
¾ cup milk
¼ cup icing sugar
1 cup thick cream
¼ tsp almond extract
maraschino cherries
browned almonds

Combine the macaroons, milk, icing sugar and a few grains of salt and let stand for 1 hour. Whip 1 cup thick cream and fold into above mixture.

Add flavouring & a few cut cherries Place mixture in paper muffin cups in a refrigerator tray. Decorate with nuts and chill 3 hours with electric refrigerator set at extra cold.

Mrs. C. K. asks: How do you make Maple Toast?

Answer: Slice hard rolls or bread about 1-4 inch thick. Siak in maple syrup. Saute in salad oil in a skillet till brown on both sides.

Seed Story

John Mair looked out of the window of a London train during a drought last summer in South-East England and saw that the flowers and vegetables on a famous British seed firm's grounds were unaffected by the prolonged dry weather. He wondered why this should be and when he visited the place later to broadcast about it in the BBC's European Service he found that the reason for the freshness of the plants was that the soil on which the nursery stands was formerly part of the Thames' bed. The river is now only about three hundred yards wide for much of its length but long ago it was much wider and as it shrank it left behind stretches of alluvial soil of great richness which cannot lose their moisture in a few weeks' drought.

The well-nourished plants that Mair saw are grown purely from seed by a firm that has been in existance for nearly one hundred and fifty years. Long experience has taught them that seed growing is a highly specialized and highly complicated job. Apart from the routine extermination of pests and uprooting weeds, every weak or diseased plant must be ruthlessly eliminated. The harvested seed is sifted and cleaned, a tricky job with some seed as fine as sand, and dried sufficiently to ensure keeping but not enough to destroy its germinating power, a process that needs careful gauging. Germination tests are made on all seed before it is packaged for sale to the public both at home and abroad. Customers are widely dispersed in a hundred and twenty different countries and the sixty acres Mair saw cannot produce nearly enough to cope with this huge demand. The Thamesside gardens produce the "mother-seed", which is then distributed to the firm's own growers and from it they raise plants to produce the seed that is sold. Their growers are not all in England, as might be supposed. The climate there is not suitable for producing cauliflower seed, for instance, and for many years now the firm's suppliers of this popular vegetable seed have been grown on the slopes of a famous volcano—Mount Vesuvius in Italy.

Right Side

Two chorus girls were having tea together.

"Do you know,' 'said one, "when the manager asked me my age, I couldn't for the life of me remember whether I was 27 or 28."

"And what did you say?"

"Oh, I split the difference and said 26."

Potato Chips To be Candy Coated

Potato chips are providing an important outlet for increased sales of potatoes. The magazine "Canadian Food Industries" reports that as early as 1950 factory sales of potato chips and flakes, in Canada, totalled 3¼ million dollars. In the United States the cash value of chips produced in 1951 was almost 185 million dollars. A survey of what "Teen-agers" there prefer for snacks, revealed that potato chips were among the top ten snack foods.

Recently methods have been developed experimentally to give chips candy, chocolate or cheese coatings to further increase their popularity.

Tthel Dixon and P. M. Townsley, Fruit and Vegetable Processing, Division of Horticulture, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, have tested a wide variety of coatings and candy recipes. These were: white powdered sugar; caramel, molasses, molasses and peppermint, peanut taffy, spice, corn syrup candies; nut brittle, maple and lemon candy glazes.

It was found that candied coatings had to be applied at temperatures above 180 degrees F. or transfer of moisture from the candy to the chip resulted in a soggy confection.

Candies were applied by cooking the candy mixes in double boilers with oil used as a heating medium. The cooked candy was poured into greased trays to cool and harden. Pouring was done at 310 degrees F. The candy was then ground to a fine powder until the chips were given a thorough coating. These can be used as powdered or further treated to give them a glazed, candied surface. Glazing consists of exposing the powdered coated chips 1,0to an instantaneous flash heat of 1,000 to 1,300 degrees F. which spreads the powder in an even thin glaze over the chips.

Chocolate coated chips are made simply by dipping the unsalted potato chip in a semi-sweet baker's chocolate at 80 to 85 degrees F.

Should flavours such as peppermint, maple, lemon, various spice oils, or ground spice be desired, the flavour should be added to the candy either after it is concentrated to the desired temperature, and immediately before the candy hardens, or, if the flavour is a powder, it may be added to the ground candy.

Cheese coated chips, a more recent development, have also proved popular with a tasting panel to whom they were submitted. Powdered skimmilk cheese, dusted on the chips and heated about three minutes at 350 to 400 degrees F., proved the most satisfactory. Skimmilk cheese adhered to the surface of the chip whereas fatty cheese did not. Chips coated with liquid cheese were unattractive in appearance and taste. The cheese flavour combined well with the flavour of the potato chip and in the case of the skimmilk cheese coating the chips were attractive in appearance, particularly when toasted.

FISH TALE

Amongst the BBC's entertainment and educational programmes are those of a purely useful nature and one of these was a talk on fish cookery that was recently rebroadcast. The speaker,Dorothy Thursby-Pelham, was not just a housewife giving advice to her colleagues on fish cookery merely from her own experiences in the kitchen; she really knows a lot about fish for before the war she was a sea-going naturalist, the only woman who went to sea in a trawler for research work. The vessel was fitted out for the job but even so was no luxury ship and even in good weather Miss Thursby-Pelham found the life a hard one. Lack of rest was the chief drawback for everyone had to be on board each time the trawl net was hauled aboard, which was every three to five hours all round the clock. Her job was to measure or mark the fish or to take out the little ear bones which tell the age of plaice. These form alternate light and dark rings each year which can be counted just like the annual rings of a tree.

She was often asked what was the object of fishery research and said that in the main it was to get enough knowledge to be able to make regulations to prevent the over-fishing of the seas around Britain's coasts. Nearly every maritime nation had this problem to face but before such regulations can be made the life story of each kind of food fish has to be known from the time the eggs are spawned until the fish is on the plate.

Miss Thursby-Pelham, having described life on a trawler and the basic reason for fishery research, then turned to telling British housewives how to cook their fish so it was not the soggy, tasteless mess that is often served to defenseless families. Simple hint on how to cook it and the invaluable hint that if fishy dishes and utensils were rinsed in cold water before washing in hot they would have no fishy smell concluded her most comprehensive piscatorial discourse.

Stars Donble-Crossed Hitler

Russian dispatches have given the birthday of Stalin and Malenkov, notes Napier Moore in the Financial Post. It's interesting, because it seems to be the first time they have been made public.

The probable reason is the Russians didn't want to take any chances with having astrologers plotting what signs of the Zodiac might do to them. They were well aware of how the British used such information against Hitler, in psychological warfare.

Long before the news became public property, British Intelligence knew that Hitler believed in astrology; that he followed the advice of astrologers as to when, because of the conjunction of stars and planets, the time would be propitious for this or that move.

So the British enlisted the services of a well-known European astrologer, Louis de Wohl, who had fled from Nazism. De Wohl would figure out what the German astrologers were telling Hitler as to the "aspects" for this or that venture, and the British were alerted to the possibility of Hitler taking some important action within a certain period of time. Whether or not you believe that the heavenly bodies affect human traits, character and destiny, the fact remains that de Wohl was right much more often than he was wrong, reports Moore.

Animal Entertainers

Two animal trainers appeared recently on a radio program in England, the only difference being in size of the animals they trained, for Alfred Testo works with fleas and Gusta Kruse with elephants. Professor Testo has fifty fleas in his circus and has to be constantly training new recruits for no flea has a working life of more than three months. Kruse's animals take longer to train but once in harness they go on indefinitely. When the interviewer asked Testo how he managed to get replacements he said: "Travelling around you get to know the towns that have got fleas. And people often bring them along or send them to me by post. But out of every twenty I get, only about six make performers and out of them you're lucky if you get one star." His versatile insects appear in a twenty-four inch ring drawing chariots, riding bicycles, walking the tight rope and swinging on the trapeze. Female fleas in dainty dresses perform ballet and one hefty flea juggles valiantly with a wooden ball ten times his own weight. The finale is an impressive sword fight between two star fleas of whom Professor Testo is very proud. "All done by kindness", he says, and also the skill of his daughter who, with perfect eyesight, unlimited patience and sympathetic fingers, now does most of the difficult work.

Gusta Kruse agreed about the kindness needed in training animals which he started with as a boy. He was born in the circus where his father was a horse trainer, and he himself began work with horses. He finds elephants even more intelligent and very childlike and insists that tears come into their eyes if anyone shouts at them. They are faithful friends and very brave about big things but disproportionately frightened of small things like dogs and mice. And Gusta Kruse was quite postive that they would dislike fleas heartily.

GREAT SNAKES

Nora Swinburne, the well-known British actress, has just returned to London from Bermuda, where she and her husband, Esmond Knight, played in five different plays in ten weeks. They broadcast about their tour in a radio programme and recalled odd experiences in other places too, Nora Swinburne saying that nothing has ever made her laugh so much as a love scene she once played with the famous English actor, Ronald Squire. In case this should seem callous she explained that just before this scene someone had been putting golf balls into a glass and one of them had split and lodged against the footlights where it had become extremely hot. During the tender love scene the golf ball exploded, and rubber stuffing shot out and waved like snake charmers' snakes. Everyone began to laugh except the passionate lover, who had his back to the footlights, and turned around to discover the cause of the merriment just as a second set of snakes came out of the ball. "It was rather difficult to get the audience back into a serious mood," said Miss Swinburne—surely an understatement in the circumstances.

EARTH IN A HURRY

Our solid old earth expanded itself by about ten inches toward the end of the last century, and twenty years later shrank back again.

This is the explanation put forward by the Astronomer Royal, Dr. Spencer Jones, for the otherwise unexplained changes in the earth's timekeeping. As a timekeeper it is our highest referee, more absolutely accurate than the finest clock in any astronomical observatory. But from time to time it runs faster or slower than it should.

If the earth shrinks by one part in a million it spins faster, in the way a pendulum swings faster when shortened. The earth about 1898 was running fast by about four-fifths of a second a year. Then it changed to running slow by about half a second a year, and went on losing for twenty years till it changed once more and began to run fast again.

These fragments of seconds accumulate till at the present time the earth is about twenty-nine seconds ahead and seems to be still gaining, here was a time (in 1785) when it was twenty-seven seconds slow.

Mrs. W. J. Jenkins

THE DOG

I'VE NEVER KNOWN a dog to wag
His tail in glee he did not feel,
Nor quit his old-time friend to tag
At some more influential heel.
The yellowest cur I ever knew
Was to the boy who loved him, true.

And I have known a dog to bear
Starvation's pangs from day to day,
With him who had been glad to share
His bread and meat along the way.
No dog, however mean or rude,
Is guilty of ingratitude.
