YOURS SINCERELY

BY MRS. WELLWOOD ADAM

I find myself wondering, sometimes, if all my readers are of the older age-group? Writing of life and its problems may not necessarily attract the younger generation or even the younger adults. It is really hard to pin-point another's interests, especially in today's kind of world, yet changes come and go, through the years, and having run the full cycle of fashions and thinking, life continues to go on much the same way.

Personally, I have found the younger generation interesting for many years now, whether they are in High School, or settling down to college or university, or in the work-a-day world for themselves. Each age group finds and brings its own problems along, and I might say these are always so very similar to the ones of the preceding age-group, too. Of course, the youngsters don't realise it, neither did those of my day so many years ago! Growing pains, as we call them, the mental ones particularly, can be very trying to the young as well as to the more settled down older ones who are in charge, whether in the home or at school.

Tremendous patience mixed with common sense is the only answer, and some patience mixed with common sense from the younger ones, as well. That is how I see it, for I know all about it, having gone through both stages with fair success, for myself.

Whichever way, the world, as a whole, does not seem to be improving as a result of each generation's efforts, such as they are and have been, and each likes to think it can do better than those who have already tried.

I am very sure, however, that each age-group as it comes along to more mature reflection does, indeed contribute something towards the ultimate good, but the offering is very small, and could be a good deal better.

Now, I read another opinion on this matter of young people and their ideas of running and ruling the world. It was given very courageously by a school teacher I met, after she had retired from 38 years of teaching, in 1971. So I quote, carefully, for your interest, young and old alike, what she said —I certainly find her words to the point and most stimulating. She says:

"I make no apologies for my generation. We inherited a far crueller world than the young people today have ever dreamed of, and we are passing on to them better one than they appreciate.

We had our dreams, our horrors our happinesses and our miseries.

What have we achieved? We may not have eliminated war, but we have taken a stand against it. We may not have eliminated poverty, but we have dealt it some powerful blows.

We have established old-age pensions, unemployment insurances, working men's compensation, government health and hospital insurance, and an educational system of which great numbers can take advantage. We did not eliminate disease, but we limited its effects.

Now, we are attacked by those who claim we do not do enough for the poor, the Indians and Eskimos, students in universities, and general education. They say we have destroyed our environment and abandoned our youth.

I say, let them take up the fight, but be sure that what they demand will not destroy the society they find so wrong. There is a limit beyond which a working society cannot be pushed.

The man who works for his daily bread is the one who nurtures this nation, pays the bills, fights the wars when necessary, and works for a better society. I feel no deep shame for my generation. We have failed greatly, but we achieved much. We can help the young to still greater achievement if they will it so." (end of quote.)

It would be interesting to hear the opinions of our young people after they have read this, and perhaps they could also add some more constructive thought to this ever interesting subject?

How Overuse of Fertilizer Adds to the Pollution Problem

Fertilizer use has played a large part in providing high-quality, low cost food for Canadians for many years. Lately, society's concern with the quality of the environment has prompted questions on the effects of fertilizers on water quality. Certainly, nitrogen and phosphorus, major components of fertilizers, can have serious effects on water quality by promoting excessive growth of algae and other aquatic plants. There are, however, many other sources of nitrogen and phosphorus, in addition to fertilizers, that can contribute to water pollution.

A study has been conducted in Kent County during the past two years to find out how much present fertilizer pratcices are contributing to surface water pollution. Tile drainage water is being sampled at twelve sites — four in the Erieau Marsh on organic soils and eight in Dover Township on mineral (clay and sandy) soils.

Although the study is not yet complete, some conclusions can be drawn from the analysis done so far. It is quite apparent that phosphorus does not leach from mineral soils to a significant extent; the only way fertilizer phosphorous applied to mineral soils can reach lakes or streams is from surface runoff. Good crop production practices, including proper fertilizer use, will reduce surface erosion to a minimum.

Nitrogen content of tile drainage water from mineral soils was low where recommended rates of nitrogen application were used. — Where rates were greater than recommended, significant amounts of nitrogen were found in the drainage water.

The data from the Erieau Marsh muck sites indicated a more serious problem. Levels of both phosphorus and nitrogen in the drainage water were much higher than from the mineral soils. While the acreage of cultivated muck soils in Ontario is small, and the total amount of nitrogen and phosphorus coming from these soils insignificant in comparison to the total amounts getting into Lake Erie or Lake Ontario from other sources, the amounts are high enough to pollute smaller local bodies of water.

The high amounts moving through the muck soils are caused, at least partly, by applications of fertilizer in excess of recommended rates. The amount of fertilizer used on these muck soils could be reduced without reducing yield or quality of crops. Reduced rate of fertilizer auges would certainly reduce the levels of nutrients in the drainage water..

STUDY STRESSES PAIN KILLING

A five-year research project that may improve pain control, or even prevent much discomfort for patients has been undertaken by a group of dental scientists.

In this particular project, symptomatic pain such as toothaches caused from various dental diseases will be studied. Also to be analyzed are the discomfort of treatment along with the patient's anxiety while sitting in the dentist's chair.

The dental scientists will try to pin down the causes of conditions that lead to pain and how it actually develops and travels through the body.

Even though pain-killing agents, new techniques and advanced technological developments have increasingly been giving relief to dental patients, this study will go into great depth. Not only will existing agents and techniques be reviewed, but an increased emphasis on developments on the horizon will be taken.

Seek Support of Public in Area Canada Goose Census

Any day now those big Canada Geese that headed south last fall in high-flying V's will be dropping into Eastern Ontario on their way back north to their summer nesting grounds around Hudson's Bay.

They are the "migrants" of the Atlantic Flyway, the goose highway of eastern North America.

The "resident" Canada Geese of Eastern Ontario are back already. They're the birds who nest and raise young at sanctuaries like Upper Canada Village. They stay until freeze-up long after the migrants have gone south. Then during the bitterest cold they leave for a few months. They're the first ones back in the Spring.

Wildlife experts in Eastern Ontario know all about these Canada Geese.

What they don't know about are the pairs of resident Canada Geese that nest regularly in Eastern Ontario outside established sanctuaries. They are the ones who pick out a quiet pond, or secluded patch of swamp in the "back forties" of Eastern Ontario's farmland and begin raising young.

Natural resources biologists are asking the public this spring and summer to help take a census of these so-called "back forty" geese Farmers or rural dwellers who think they have a Canada Geese pair nesting in their area should phone their local office of the ministry of natural resources and give their name, phone number, address, lot and concession and, if possible, the location of the birds.

Conservation officers will investigate during their regular rounds. The information on the birds will be kept strictly confidential. The census is an attempt to find out exactly what is happening to Canada Geese in Southern Ontario and not to improve hunting. The censuswill be used to plan future geese management programs and encourage more of the big birds to take up residence in Eastern Ontario.

If you have information about nesting geese in your area, phone the Ontario ministry of natural resources office collect. Offices are located in Cornwall; Leitrim, just south of Ottawa; Brockville and Napanee.

SHORTAGES STALL DELIVERIES OF ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT TO ONARIO HYDRO

Ontario Hydro has appealed to developers and industrial customers to provide the electric utility with earlier notification of planned new developments requiring transformers and other electrical equipment.

Hydro's Winchester Area Manager George Davidson explained that a world shortage of critical materials, particularly steel, is causing severe delays in deliveries of electrical equipment. As a result, Hydro and municipal utilities have been hard-pressed to provide service when it is requested and expansion projects — such as new housing developments—are being delayed.

He also noted that farmers, particularly those who need extra electrical service and equipment during harvest time, should let Hydro know their requirements as soon as possible. Even then service connection delays with resultant inconvenience may be experienced.

Where once manufacturers were able to supply transformers within a few days of receiving an order, deliveries today may take as long as 40 weeks, said the Hydro official.

"Unless customers can give us substantially more lead time", he said, "we can't provide them with the electrical equipment they need on time."

Manufacture of transformers is being held up both by a steel shortage and a scarcity of the special oil they use. In addition, the oil shortage has reduced the supply of plastics used for electrical insulation with the result that cable and wire can take up to six months to deliver.

Wood poles are also in critically short supply. In some areas, rotten poles are being replaced by putting the stubs of the good end in the ground and lashing shorter poles to them.

To meet the shortage in transformer oils, Ontario Hydro is investigating ways of reconditioning oils salvaged from old transformers so that it can be reused in new transformers.

Hydro is also making a concentrated effort to reclaim or rehabilitate worn-out equipment instead of simply selling or scrapping it.

Various reasons are given for the material shortages — among them environmental demands that diverted some production to clean up devices, inflation which created additional stimulus to demand and the excess capacity of 1970 & 1971 that discouraged the expansion that might have met today's shortfall.

No accurate predictions can be made on when the steel shortage will ease, but is expected it will continue through 1974.

Miss Gladys Bayne has returned to her home in Morrisburg after spending the winter months in Florida.

Word was received last week of the death at Anglesey, North Wales, of Mrs. Elizabeth Griffiths. A daughter, Mrs. Raymond McIntosh of Ottawa is a former resident of Williamsburg and Morrisburg. Mrs. Griffiths is also survived by four sons in North Wales.

The United Counties Bookmobile will be at the following locations in the area next week: Tuesday, April 30: Berwick, 10:00 to 11:30; Morewood C. 2:00 to 2:45; Winchester Springs 3:30 to 4:00.

GETTING INTO THE BANK . . . THE HARD WAY

The Chesterville branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia suffered approximately $7,000.00 damage on Sunday afternoon last ,when a car failed to make the turn on Main Street, and crashed into the relatively new building.

Several young people, enjoying the warm spring sunshine in the front of the building, narrowly escaped death as the auto ploughed head-on into the south-west corner of the structure.

One girl, Holly Carruthers of Morewood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hector Carruthers, was rushed to Winchester District Memorial Hospital, but later transferred to Ottawa Civic Hospital. Two other young people who were chatting with Miss Carruthers, and saw the car approaching were also taken to Winchester Hospital but were released later.

The car involved, a 1969 Dodge station wagon, owned by Danny Lebreque of Chesterville, was a write-off. Mr. Lebreque, his wife, Melody, and a passenger in their vehicle, Robert Hess, also of Chesterville, suffered injuries and were taken to Winchester Hospital. Mr. Hess was later taken to Ottawa Civic Hospital.

The crash was investingated by Chesterville Police Chief Leonard Shane, and by OPP Constables Doug Whyte of Winchester and John Burke of Long Sault.

EASY METRICS

Metric measurement made simple is the theme of a new Metric Commission Exhibit, unveiled recently at the National Home Show in Toronto.

It is designed especially to familiarize Canadians with the metric system and mtric conversion. The exhibit includes a map of Canada with distances between cities in kilometres.

Containers in different metric sizes show volumes and visitors can use scales to measure the mass of fruits, vegetables and other everyday items. Metric tape measures are available to measure life-size tailors' dummies at the exhibit. Height and weight scales are placed for visitors to measure their height and mass in metric units.

A temperature scale shows the boiling and freezing points of water in Celsius dgrees and metrically-measured footprints are painted on the exhibit floor for anyone wishing to measure his or her foot size in metric units. Pamphlets and other information on metric conversion in Canada are also available at the exhibit.

Following the National Home Show, the exhibit will be shown in Montreal at the popular Salon de la femme show at the Bonaventure Hotel, May 3rd to 12th, and at the Canadian Office Products Association Conference at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel from May 13th to 15th. The exhibit will then travel west to Calgary for the Consumers' Association of Canada annual meeting June 3-5 at the University of Calgary and then to Edmonton where it will be shown at the Purchasing Management of Canada Conference from June 9th to 11th. Plans for its use over the next three years include the Canadian National Exhibition, the Calgary Stampede, Man and his World and the Pacific National Exhibition.

HAGGLING IS NOT JUSTICE

(Reprinted from The Globe and Mail

People read about the Supreme Court of Canada. They hear precedents cited from the courts of appeal. But when it comes to the real thing, appearing in a courtroom charged with an offence, where it happens is in the provincial courts—magistrates courts, they used to be called.

That's where the system of justice stands or falls. And that's why it is important to listen to Provincial Court Judge David Vanek when he talks about bargain basement justice.

He's talking about plea bargaining, or, as some people call it, copping a plea, It's the haggling over entering a guilty plea in return for a conviction on a lesser charge.

It "makes justice dependent upon the wheeling and dealing of counsel, their ability to bargain and the deal they are able to make Judge Vanek says. "It reduces the trial judge to the administrative role of recording the bargain.

"Too often duplicate charges (are laid and) are merely a device to force a guilty plea on a minor charge. It is a means of exerting an undue pressure on the citizen to plead guilty on one charge under threat of being arraigned on one or more serious charges."

Plea bargaining should be roundly condemned, Judge Vanek says, and he is right.

It has nothing to do with justice. The purpose is not to apply the law equally and fairly; it is to work out a deal that suits the convenience of all parties concerned. And that's precisely what people see it to be.

They see it as a transaction and if transactions can be made with courts, why can't they be made with governments? With boards and commissions? With everyone and with every institution occupying a position of responsibility? If justice becomes a commodity which can be bargained for and traded off if the inducement is right, why can't everything else?

Why not make morality one big fish market?

Why? Because the dignity and worth of individuals is tied up with the dignity and worth of the institutions by which they govern themselves. Sully the institutions and we sully ourselves. If the system is sick, so are we.

If justice is negotiable, so is integrity. What becomes important then is only the price.

As Judge Vanek says, plea bargaining is cheap, It's demanding. And it should be stopped.

THIS WEEK FROM OTTAWA

4,000 NEW GRAIN CARS

The Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, Otto Lang, announced that the federal government has ordered 4,000 hopper cars at a cost of more than $100 million to help establish a first-class grain-moving operation in Canada.

Mr. Lang said this latest move is in keeping with a commitment made by Prime Minister Trudeau and by Transport Minister Jean Marchand last summer in Calgary at the Western Economic Opportunities Conference.

The federal government will also pay half the cost of repairing 2,400 boxcars to be returned to Western grain service.

FISHING REDUCTION

Canada will ask the Government of the Soviet Union to cut back its fishing operations in the Gulf of Alaska to prevent further depletion of already low halibut stocks.

"The halibut stocks are already in a sorry state", Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said. "The blame lies with the foreign fishing fleets especially that of the Soviet Union."

Continued concentrated fishing in the area will adversely affect the catches of Canadian fishermen when the season opens May 17.

GALLUP POLL

The latest Gallup Poll conducted at the beginning of March shows both the Liberals and the NDP parties with the same popular support obtained in 1972, while the progressive Conservatives and other parties are within one percentage point of their election standing.

UP WITH LIFE—

AUTHOR OFFERS HINTS ON "BEATING THE BLAHS"

One day six years ago, Catherine Lanham Miller stood on the doorstep of her suburban home and waved her usual boodbyes to her husband and three teenagers. They were off to challenging jobs and classes; she was suddenly wondering what she would do with the rest of her today, tomorrow and the rest of her life.

"I was really at a low point," she recalls now. "I would like to say I immediately whipped into action and said 'yes!' to life, but it took me a couple of years of dialogue with myself before I finally settled on my long-time dream to be a free-lance writer.

Numerous magazine articles and a full-length book late, she tells her story to encourage other women to get out of their doldrums and fight back. Her book, "How to say YES to Life: A Woman's Guide to Beating the Blahs" is addressed to every woman who knows she must do something about improving her life, but doesn't know how to start.

The You in the Mirror

"She may have to begin with her physical appearance, to build her self-confidence," says Mrs. Miller. "It may sound superficial to worry about hair, nails, skin and figure, but if you're a woman who looks in the mirror and says 'I'm too old, I'm too grey-haired, I'm too fat,' then you'll go right back to bed and pull the covers over your head."

Many women do just that, Mrs. Miller notes. She calls them "sleep aholics." In order to cope "they sleep 14 or 16 hours a night. It's frightening." Other women escape by watching tlevision or they become cleaning "addicts," scrubbing away at a house that's already spotless.

Four-Point Program

What does it take for a woman to come to grips with herself, to "beat the blahs?" Atuhor Miller maintains that even though each woman has her own lifestyle, there are simple guidelines that can make the going smoother. She describes them in this four-point program:

1) Dig for the dream, "the thing you've always wanted to do, that you've had hidden inside you. Get it out. Examine it." And if you don't have any buried hopes? "Set a goal for yourself. It could be as simple as losing five pounds or as complicated as getting your Master's degree or learning to play the harp."

2) Find the time to fit the goal into life. "Don't make excuses and say you're just too busy to possibly handle anything else. People who aren't the least bit busy say that. Do you really have to make the beds promptly at 9 a.m. if that's your most creative hour? Why don't they be made at 4 p.m.?

3) Plan a schedule of how you're going to accomplish your goals. "Even if it's just one thing at a time, figure out today's activities, tomorrow's, next week's and so on. And put it down on paper. It gives you a sense of order.

4) Start right now, "Don't wait til Fall or when the kids are away or after the house gets painted—really begin this minute. Just going to the library and reading through a few books on a subject that interests you perks up your mind and it's a wonderful way to start."

"Wake up," Catherine Miller writes in the preface to her book, "there's a great big world out there! Goodbye yesterday. Hello today!"

Tax Tips

Q. I've heard a lot about the registration of charitable organizations for income tax purposes. As a donor to some charities, what should I know about this?

A. Canadian charitable organizations issuing receipts for income tax purposes must be registered with the Department, and all receipts issued for donations must show the registration number of the organization. If you have received a receipt which doesn't show this number, you should get in touch with the organization and obtain a proper receipt.

Q. I have agreed to work in the United Stated for my employer for a period of three years. Can Canada Pension contributions to continued on my behalf?

A. Under certain circumstances employment outside of Canada by a Canadian employer can be covered. Your employer should contact the nearest District Taxation Office with the full particulars for further information.

Q. I arrived in Canada in August last year and am told that when filing my income tax return I have to prorate my personal exemptions. What does this mean?

A. It means that you are allowed to claim exemptions for only that portion o fthe year you were a resident of Canada. For instance, if you were a resident for 200 days you would be allowed your exemptions multiplied by 200/365

Q. If I work for a salary, can I make my own arrangements for paying my income tax?

A. If the salary you receive is sufficient to warrant tax deductions at the source, then the employer is required by law to withhold income tax deductions.

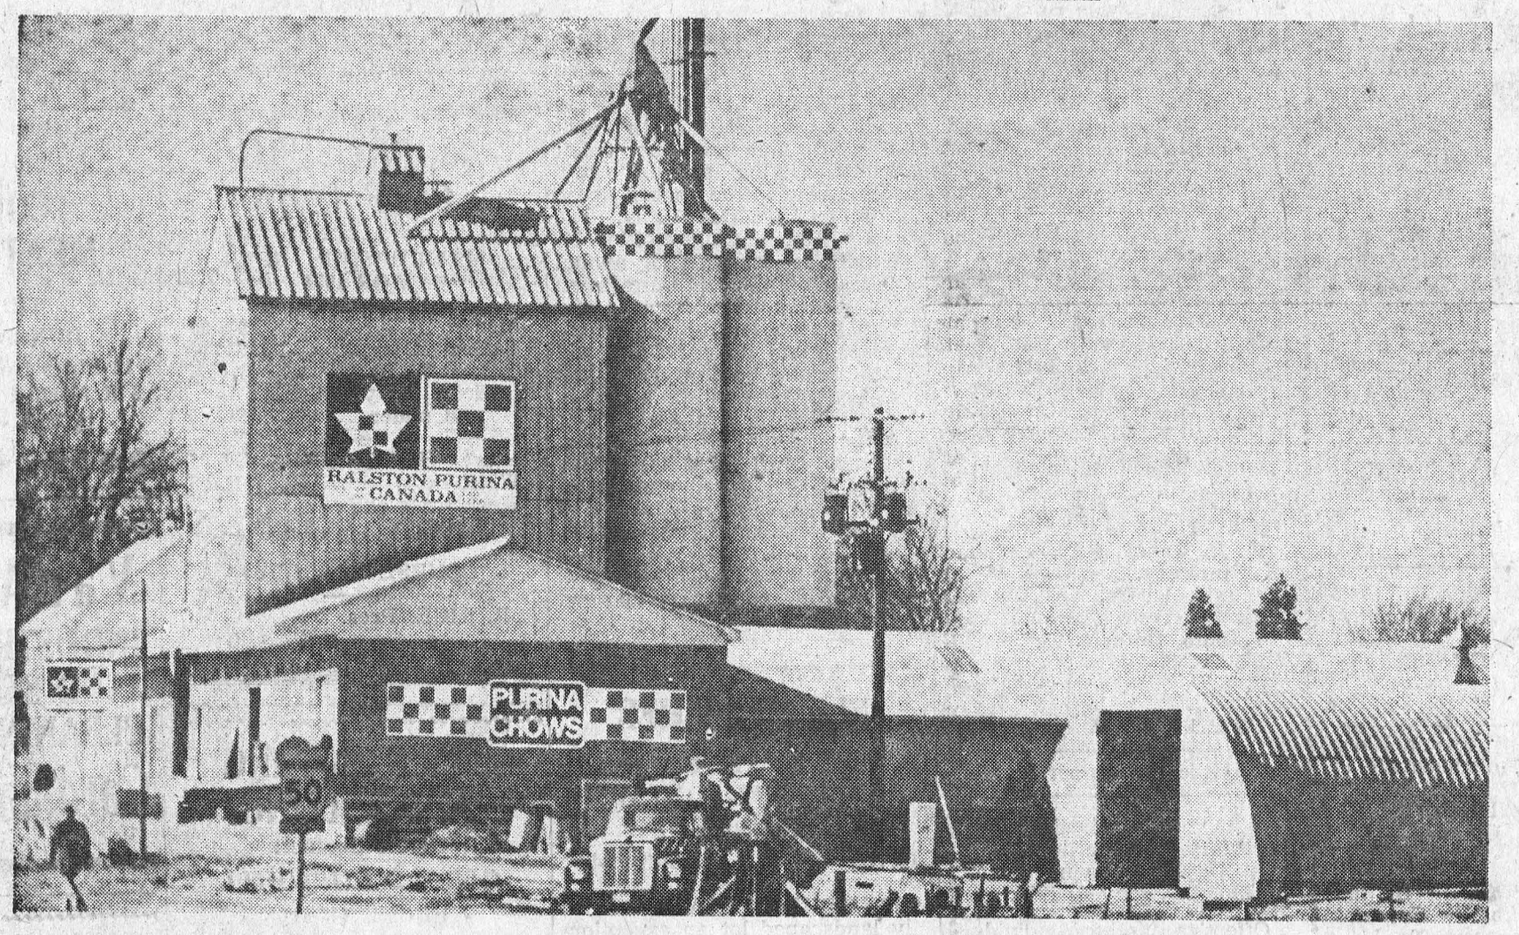
Q. During the year, I worked for two employers, one during the days and one during the evenings. My day job earned me $3,400 for the year and the evening job, $1,800. However, both employers allowed the $600 basic exemption when calculating my Canada Pension .Plan .contributions. This means I have contributed to the plan for only $4,000 where I could have contributed on my total earnings minus the $600 basic basic examption had I worked for only one employer. How do I go about making contributions on the extra $600.

A. You may make contributions on the $600 at a rate of 3.6 percent. It will be necessary for you to make this calculation on page 3 of the tax return.

Q. During the year I worked for two employers and each employer paid me more than $5,600 in the year. Consequently I have paid double Canada Pension contributions. Can I get this money back?

A. An employee may claim a refund of any overdeductions or contributions when he files his tax return. Be sure to complete the Canada Pension Plan overpayment section of your tax return.

The only things we couldn't improve on were the people.



When Purina purchased the manufacturing facilities of Dixie and Egan Limited at Addison, there were quite a number of things we brought with us to improve the products and services—as only a large, world-wide organization can.

We brought the newest modern day expertise in feed technology. We provided the scope and know-how of a national organization to meet the more sophisticated needs of livestock and poultry producers of this area.

We brought in new product lines, developed and backed up by our world-wide research facilities.

Here at Addison, we manufacture and supply a complete line of bulk and bagged feeds. If we don't supply it, chances are your stock doesn't need it. We can take all the guesswork out of stock feeding, too, because we'll design an exact kind of feeding programme for your stock, taking into consideration all your problems and profit expectations. That's the kind of thing we could improve on at the Addison mill.

Your local Purina dealer is now able to serve you even better under the famous Purina checkerboard.

Feeding programs by Purina.
The best thing that can happen to your stock.

DUVALL — In fond and loving memory of a dear son, Clayton H. Duvall, who passed away April 27, 1973.
His last farewell kiss was never given,
His last goodbye was never said.
None could know that death lay waiting for him
When he went to bed.
And though grief was sharp and lasting,
I thanked God then, and do today
That by our Father's love and boundless mercy,
In painless sleep he passed away.
