Fined For Selling Liquor

Tuesday afternoon Magistrate Wholehan held court at his residence when John Fawcett was found not guilty on the charge of being intoxicated in a public place. The charge was laid following the conduct of the defendant at a recent hockey matcl in Chesterville. No proof was brought forth to substantiate the charge.

In the case of M. Rosenblatt charged with selling liquor, a conviction was registered and a fine of $200 and costs imposed, notwithstanding that five reputable citizens, including Rosenblatt and his wife, swore directly contrary to le evidence of one, Warner, who was the sole witness for the prosecution. County Crown Attorney Harkness, of Cornwall, had charge of the prosecution.

Morewood Institute "At Home"

The Morewood Woman's Institute held their Annual At Home in the Presbyterian Hall, Tuesday evening Jan. 10th, when they entertained about fifty.

A short programme consisting of music, readings, etc., was given. One item of especial interest was a debate "Resolved that Travelling is more Educative than Reading," given by six High School pupils. Three girls taking the affirmative won by a slight margin. A six months and two three months membership cards to the Library were given for this as a prize .

After the programme a short contest was held which was won by Mrs. C. Marcellus. The Ladies then served a dainty lunch and the evening closed by singing "O Canada."

Wm. Patrick Fataly Injured by Bull

At the home of Mr. R. Wylie at Toys Hill on Tuesday, Jany. 3rd, Mr. Wm. Patrick received injuries when attacked by a bull which resulted in his death on Wednesday of last week. Mr. Patrick was going into the shed with a pan of oats to feed the fowl when the bull rushed at him. John Patrick, the deceased's son, heard the cries for help and immediately rushed to the assistance of his father reaching him just as the bull was crushing him against the wall. Medical aid was at once summoned when it was found that two ribs had been broken and internal injuries sustained about the heart. Hope was held at first for his recovery but he passed away on Wednesday of last week about noon

The funeral took place on Friday last at Brinston, the remains being placed in the vault. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Zernie Harper, Wm. Steele, R. Peterson, O. Haggerty, J. Casselman and H. Wylie.

Lady Whitney Passed Away

Lady Alice Whitney, widow of Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, who died in December, 1914, passed away early Saturday morning at her residence 713 St. George Street, Toronto, after an illness of two weeks.

Lady Whitney was 77 years of age. She was the third daughter of the late William M. Park, of Cornwall and was born near that town. After her marriage with Mr. Whitney her home was in Morrisburg, until he became Premier and went to Toronto to reside.

She is survived by a son, Garnet Whitney, manager of the Molsons Bank branch at Aultsville and one daughter. Nora. Two grandchildren, "Pat" and Susan Thompson, of Lady Whitney's deceased elder daughter, are also living at the Whitney home.

Lady Whitney was never in the public spotlight. Above all else she was a domestic woman, who loved her husband and her home and devoted herself to them. About the only occasion when she ever got into the newspapers was when Sir James lay seriously ill in New York, and the mention made of her on that occasion was that no more faithful or tender nurse could be imagined. She spent all her time in his sick room as the Premier of Ontario hovered between life and death.

Lady Whitney was a devout member of the Anglican Church and a regular attendant at worshi th

Champions Stop the Cyclones

Last year's champion Berwick hockeyists on their own ice last night, handed Chesterville Cyclones their first defeat of the season by 3 to 2. It was a hard game for the Cyc's to lose but we don't want to take any of the glory from the champions for putting the first crimp in their record after six straight victories for the Chesterville boys. Even at that it was a lucky win for Berwick. In fact they won by a head only, the head being that above Gord Ouderkirk's shoulders, assisted materially by that old war-horse Andy Ouderkirk. The first goal was the result of Gordon Ouderkirk out-guessing the whole Chesterville bunch. The puck had been shot towards the Chesterville goal with Gordon right on top of it, but if he had touched it, it would have been off-side. Chesterville expected him to play it, but he didn't, and Andy sailed in like an airplane and scored the goal. Within five minutes Andy shot again, a high one that hit the crossbar of the goal nets and went under instead of over, making it two for the Blues, before the Cyclones got squared away after the first jolt. During the next fifty-five minutes Chesterville scored two, both in the second period from shots by Sorrell. The first from a mix-up in front of Berwick goal and the second from a pass by Bogart after the latter had carried the puck from his own goal. Andy Ouderkirk got their last after an end-to end rush, circling the nets and coming from behind to score.

A snow storm during the game prevented fast hockey, with the going heavy at all times while Chesterville was out of luck right from the toss for ends, when they lost the call and had to face the storm for two periods.

Fatal Accident

Mr. Owen Coughler, aged 36 years one of the best known, and most highly respected residents of Williamsburg Township, met accidental death while engaged in cutting wood on Tuesday of last week.

Mr. Coughler, it is said, was engaged in making some adjustments to the machine when the sleeve of his loose coat became entangled in the belt and he was drawn into the wheel of the gasoline engine, and he was whirreled around several times, his head coming in contact with the ground each time, which fractured his skull. Mr. Cougler also received terrible injuries about the body. Physicians were at once summoned, but is was quite apparent, from the first, there was no hope for recovery, and he passed away the same evening.

The funeral took place Friday, from his late home to Wiliiamsburg cemetery, under the auspices of the Oddfellows.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, also his father, mother, and one sister, Mrs. Mahlon Beckstead, Mariatown.

The School Nurse Valuable

Arnprior Chronicle: There is much to be said in favor of the employment of a qualified nurse who will make regular visits to the schools. It is neither an innovation nor an experiment; it has been tried very many places. its great benefits have been proven and in most instances the nurse is almost as important a part of the staff as is the teacher. With the grouping of urban and rural schools and with the grant offered by the government the matter of engaging a school nurse is not at all an expensive undertaking.

Ordering Seed of The Best Vegetables

(Experimental Farms Note)

In order to obtain the best results from the garden, it is a well-known fact that good seed of the best varieties is one of the important features which will insure certain success. In this rsgard many of the old standard varieties are still giving satisfactory results, but it is a good policy at this seasen of the year to study the records of past years, to ascertain if the crops obtained then, compare favourably with the requirements of to-day.

Procrastination on the part of those intending to order seed may end in disappointment, because the bulk of seed orders received by houses are received late in the season. Those orders that are sent in early, are liable to receive exactly what is asked for, whereas, orders sent in later may receive substitutions.

The requirements, whether general or specific, as the case may be, will have some influence on the choice to be made. However, it is a well-known fact, and most people agree upon it, that earliness, yielding ability, uniformity and quality are the chief deciding factors when making a choice ot varieties for a garden whether commercial or for home use. It is here, that discrimination has to be applied, because, there are many novelties being offered which may prove satisfactory and may be not. Where it is desired to introduce new early varieties it is a good policy to refer to definite data dealing with this particular question, and in this way, find out from the reports of experiments the performance ot such sorts. For instance, in the case of early corn, there is Early Malcolm and Sweet Squaw, both of which are fully ten days earlier than our best early variety. Both of these are white, but possess such quality, earliness and yielding ability that they can be recommended to the public with certainty. The same performance holds in the case of tomatoes, of which there is the Alacrity. It has become quite well known as a variety of earliness, quality and yielding ability. If such varieties are added to the garden tests, or other varieties that have become known, there is little doubt, but that the results will be very satisfactory.

Buy only good seed, sow plenty of it to insure having plenty of plants, from which the most vigorous ones can be selected.

Any man can make a mistake, but only a fool will keep on making it.

Two Turkeys for a Horse

As an illustration of how turkeys have been roosting and how horses have fallen, says the Bruce Herald and Times, Sh riff Jermyn, tells ot a farmer who brought two turkeys into town and disposed of them at $10 apiece. From the proceeds he purchased a horse for $19 and returned home with the steed and a perfectly good dollar bill in his pocket. From the time that Richard III. offered half his kingdom for a horse to the day that two consumptive turkeys would buy a steed is a far call, but it illustrates how the auto has cheapened the horse and how sadly the Farmers' Govt. has failed to raise old dobbin to the pinnacle of esteem he formerly held in the community.

Appendix Theory All Wrong

The popular theory that foreign bodies in the appendix invariably cause appendicitis has just been attacked in the Lyons Academy of Medicine, France, by Prof. Pellosson, who cites the case of a sixty-year-old woman upon whom he operated recently and discovered that her appendix contained 34 small lead shot. She explained that during the war she ate quantities oi wild fowl killed on her estate, but that since the war had eliminated such food. Thus the shot must have remained in her appendix for more than three years, until lead poisoning produced pains, causing the doctor's suspicions.

Ice Supply on The Farm

(Experimental Farms Note)

One day last summer I met a farmer who had been to the station with his cream. He had just received his cheque for July and showed his account with the Company for the same month. It credited him with 52 pounds butter fat at 47 cents from first grade cream, and 524 lbs. butter fat at 37 cents from second grade cream. When I asked him how he came to have so much sour cream, he said he had no ice and that his well water wouldn't keep his cream sweet, erpecially over Sunday. Then I asked him why he hadn't put up ice, "Well", he said, "It was too much bother."

A glance at the figures in this man's account will show that he lost $22.40 that month for not having ice.

Ontside of its use in the dairy, ice is essential in the farm home for supplying the refrigerator, in which meats, butter and other perishable foods can be kept fresh for a number of days.

To know how much ice to put up the following is a safe rule to carry:—If engaged in the city milk trade the farmer should put up two tons of ice per cow, if supplying cream, one ton per cow is sufficient, and four tons for household use.

In putting up ice, one foot below the ice, one foot along each side and two feet above should be allowed for the sawdust. If the weather is cold, it is a goop plan to pack damp snow between the cakes. This prevents the air from melting the ice.

Ice may be stored in the corner of a woodshed or outbuilding, but it is better to have a building especially built for the purpose, because the dampness is apt to rot sills and walls.

In building, two things are essential, drainage and ventilation. Unless the soil is sandy, a few inches of gravel under the ice, with a drain to carry off the water is necessary. By having openings in the gables a draught can be secured which will carry away the warm air under the roof. Plans and suggestions for farm ice houses can be obtained free from the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, or at your nearest Experimental Station.

As ice often comes into direct contact with food and drink, it is important to secure it as clean as possible. It should never be taken from streams or ponds into which there is any drainage from houses or barns. Disease germs lying dormat in the ice may become very active if they got into a man's food.

Good, clear ice, free from snow, harvested before it begins to melt, is the best.

Ice is free for the taking and requires only a little labour in harvesting, therefore, why shouldn't it be used on every farm, when it gives such good returns, not only as cash, but in convenience to the household.

An intellgent schoolboy was asked to describe a fine caricature. He wrote in his essay as follows: "A caricature is the picture (generally insulting) of what a person is really like; not what he thinks he is like. Because it shows his character as well as his features, it is more like him than he is himself!"

A Dab Of Molasses on a stick will enable you to discover whether there is any water in gasoline. Minnesota oil inspectors used the test last year with satisfactory results. Water is heavier than gasoline and sinks to the bottom. The molasees will pass through the gasoline unaffected, but as soon as it encounters the water some of it comes off the stick and so reveals the dividing line between the water and the gasoline.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. February the Fatal Month

Beware of February! Canadians should consider carefully the order of their going during the first three months of the year for vital statistics for the Dominion just published show that the most fatal months of the year are the first three. Most deaths occur in February. March comes next in the list and January third. In practically every Province this is the order, and a correspondent thought it well to find out what enemies Canadians should prepare against during these months.

Dr. J. A. Amyot, Deputy Minister of Health, in answer to queries along this line, said that the main causes of the heavy death list in February were pneumonia and bronchitis.

"The human system becomes peculiarly susceptible to these diseases about February, because that is the month of greatest exhaustion after the hard winter. I imagine, also, that people about then are getting down to a fixed diet in which there is not enough green stuff, such as lettuce, cabbages, and so on. The cattle at that time also are probably getting less green feed than at any other time and so milk does notsupply the lack. The vital resources are getting exhausted after the hard fight against the cold."

"What can be done?" he was asked. "The best precaution to take is for a man to go home to bed as soon as he gets a cold. He will save time by doing it. A few days then will save a week later, and possibly prevent a condition that may develop into bronchitis or pneumonia. In the army we did not worry about the Spanish flu in the summer time but in the winter bronchitis or pneumonia often developed after it. The protection adopted by us was to put the men to bed where it was possible, and I am certain that many men were saved from death by pneumonia by that timely precaution. The attempt to fight it out, in cold weather, with a cold, is dangerous business.

"Professor Vaughan of Ann Arbor University Medical Faculty says that every man of over 40 years of age should have himself vaccinated against a common cold as early in the winter months as possible. I think it a protection worth recommending.

"Not especially dangerous in this regard, but things important enough to warrant every householder's attention, are the evil effects from leaky gas jets and lack of humidity. Even if the leak in a gas jet is only enough to make perceptible, it has an undoubtedly deleterious effect. The excessive dryness in houses is also bad, irritating as it is to the mucous membrane of nose and eyes. The great fault of our heating systems is the absence of humidity in the air."

Nomination of Candidates Often Haphazard

(Owen Sound Advertser)

"Oh, nominate him anyhow; maybe he'll run." And another nomination blank and another name already added to the already too long list of those who are nominated though they never had the slightest intention of running for Council or Board of Education. It's the same old thing year after year; somebody takes a look over the crowd at the nomination meeting, sees somebody else, sticks his name on the form, gets semebody else to second it, and in it goes—and very often the man nominated is blissfully ignorant of the fact that he has been nominated until he reads about it in one of the papers.

What a waste of time and energy! What's the big idea in connection with the practice? Is it, as one gentelman suggests one way of "handing a bouquet" to someone who has done something for the nominator? Or is it a desire to see his name in print. Certainly it serves no useful purpose. It is seldom indeed that any of these "maybe he'll run" nominees does stay in the contest—and if they did we wonder if their nominators would vote for them.

This hit-or-mis, mostly miss, plan of nominating municipal representatives has nothing to recommend it. It never brings out any particularly good men who have been "wasting their sweetness on the desert air;" it only clutters up the nomination list and makes useless work for the City Clerk. Before nominating a man, those who want to bring him out should see him and ascertain whether he will run. That would show him that someone wanted him, and would give him a lead in deciding whether or not he would enter the contest; and the list of those nominated would be more of a list of those who would run than a roster of those present at the nomination meeting.

Had Enough

Father—"Is the teacher satisfied with you?"

Tommy—"Oh quite.,'

Father—"Did he tell you so?"

Tommy—Yes; just the other day he said to me: 'If all my scholars were like you, I would shut up school this very day.' That shows I know enough."

A Gun-Mans Swang Song

New York World

Guarded by six detectives, each of them armed with two pistols, Luther Boddy the negro slayer of Francis J. M. Buckley and William A. Miller, Detective Seargents, arrived in this city yesterday from Philadelphia, where he was captured.

On the way Boody talked some.

"Let me tell you fellows that I found the New York detectives to be fearless men," said the slayer. "They've got more brains in their little fingers than the out-of-town detective has in his whole body. But New York detectives are careless, and let me give you boys some valuable advise. When you frisk a fellow hereafter for a gun begin at his wrists. Many criminals in New York nowadays carry guns as I carried mine on the night I killed Buckley and Miller.

A detective makes a mistake in carry- his gun in his hip pocket with his coat buttoned. He should always carry it in his pocket or on the side of his chest with the handle sticking out so that he can grab it on the instaut.

"I always carried my pistol at the bottom of my right sleeve, with the barrel resting in the palm of my hand. I tied the butt of the pistol to a string, and then sewed the other end of the string on the lining of my overcoat under the armpit.

"I have been stuck up dozens of times by New York detectives, but they never found a gun on me, although I always had it. When they would stick their guns at me and say, "Throw up your hands," I'd do so instantly, and the string would pull the pistol back into the sleeve. Then when I dropped my hands after they had frisked my pockets for a gun, my gun would drop into the palm of my right hand. And all I had to do then, if I wanted to use it, was to give the gun a quick jerk and the string would break.

"That's what I did the night I shot those two detectives. They didn't search me, though. Several times when detectives arrested me I jerked the gun from the string while on the way to the station, and when we were crossing the street I dropped the gun without them noticing it. I never was caught with a gun on me, although I simply could not go about without one. A gun has a fascination for me.

"There are a lot of criminals in New York who can beat you fellows to the draw, but you do not believe it. How long would it take you to draw your gun?" he suddenly asked Detective Sergeant England.

"Oh, about two seconds," the detective suddenly replied.

"Well, England, you'd be a second and a half too late," said Boody, as he broke into a laugh.

Prohibition Pockets

An Englishman on a recent visit to New York was being measured for a new suit.

"What about pockets?" asked the tailor.

"Oh, the usual," was the reply.

"Well, you'd better make up your mind," said the tailor. "We have pint, half-pint and quart sizes."

Cyclones Cinch First-Half Honors

The Cyclones cinched the leadership of the first half of the schedule in the Open Air Circuit on Saturday night when they put Winchester away with a 5 to 2 count. By-the-way, two has been the limit of goals against the Chesterville boys in any game so far played. Nine goals, only, have been scored against them in six straight games, while they have collected twenty-six counters from the other members of the league.

The game Saturday night was practically featureless, unless the uncalled for manner in which Kellog slashed Conley across the leg in the last minute and a half of play could be so called. Conley has been travelling with the assistance of crutch or cane most of the week as a result.

In the prelimenary practice the boys in green and white looked as if they might have something, but looking pretty don't count much after it has been chased for a few minutes by a team in condition. Winchester apparently lacked condition, even their star centre man, Guest, was glad to take a breathing spell when a sub. replaced him before the first quarter was two-thirds gone.

Not a man of Chesterville's regular line-up gave a sub. a chance to show his wares.

Bus Hummel opened the scoring for the Cyclones after thirteen minutes of play, the only counter in the first quarter.

In the second after two minutes play Casselman scored. The home crew were taking things a little too easy, depending on the defense to take care of any Winchester rushes when Jack Feader broke away, scoring the first for his team. Before the close of the period Chesterville added two more, closing with the score 4 to 1.

In the last each scored one, the visitors bulging the nets after two minutes, and Sorrell doing the trick for his side after ten minutes.

In the absence of an official referee the game was handled satisfactorily by W. O. Dixon and Jas. Larue.

Cyclones 4, Finch 2

Did you ever hear of Black Friday? When Friday fails on the thirteenth of the month it is usually the blackest kind of a Friday. Last Friday was the thirteenth of this month. It was also Black Friday in Finch. Not so fast. It wasn't all black; it was about fifty-fifty. The daylight hours were bright and fair when Finch folk were diligent in inviting their friends in from the concessions and headlines to see the slaughter they were going to hand out in the way of defeat to the Chestervville Cyclones. The balance of the day was all black. They took the "13" tag off their goalie but someone overlooked a bet when he left the jinx in the calendar. Finch fell again before the Cyclones when Chesterville doubted the score 4 to 2 in their fifth straight win in the league race.

The game was not a very brilliant set-to except in occasional flashes, but it was exciting at times. Chesterville broke in with the first score before the first period had got well under way, when Casselman put one behind McMillian. Hummel added the second, putting his team out in front with a good margin of two goals which before the period closed was reduced by Finch placing the rubber for one of their pair of counters.

The second session was more stubbornly fought with the home boys coming through on even terms with their last tally of the game.

Shortly after the opening of the last quarter Conley and Gravely had a bad spill when they crashed, accidently, into each other both having to be carried to the dressing room. With Conley apparently put out of the game for keeps the Cyclones' chances did not look any too bright. However you can't keep a good man down, and when Conley saw Gravely leave the shack for the ice, iusisted on following and to show that nothing short of being run over by a tractor could stop him, jumped into the game, and scoring the game that put his team in the lead before Finch knew what was doing. To complete the doubling of the score Sorrell shortly came through with another counter.

Wm. Servage, Crysler

The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Born of a quiet, kind disposition Wm. Servage of Crysler, Finch township, passed peacefully away to that great reward at 2 30 Friday morning, Jan 13th, 1922, at the early age of 66 years. The deceased had been in failing health for the past few months and while not always confined to his bed he bore his sickness with great patience and fortitude. Heart failure was the cause of his death.

The funeral, one of the largest in this district for many years, took place on Saturday, at one o'clock, from his late residence, to St. John's Anglican Church, where the deceased had been for many years a prominent figure. The services at the church were impressive and touching, conducted by Rev. S. B. Holmes of Ottawa, his former pastor.

The deceased was a member of the Orange order and was buried by that body. In his home Lodge he was a much loved, and loyal member, always at his post, and by his careful counsel proved a guiding star to the members, a worthy example set forth to his followers. Representatives of Lodges from Cornwall, Newington, Finch, Moulinette, Mille Rouche, Berwick Cannamore and other places attended the funeral in a body. It has been truly said of Wm. Servage "True to his king," "Loyal to the order in which he belonged," and he loved his church. The pallbearers were six members of the Scarlet Degree in the order, H. Armstrong, J. Ouderkirk, W. Hetherington, Wm. Armstrong, J. Ouderkirk and T. Symonds.

The deceased leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife, an aged mother, two sons, Wesley residing near the homestead and Willie on the homestead, three daughters, Mrs. T. Dillabough, Mrs. H. McLaughlin and Mrs. W. Dillabough, also three sisters. Mrs. A. Ouderkirk, Mrs. D. McPherson and Mrs. S McPherson and four brothers, Geo., James, John and Joseph residing in Finch township. The floral tributes, many and beautiful, testify to the esteem in which the deceased was held and consisted of: A wreath from the family; pillow L. O. L. 528, Crysler; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Brownridge, Cornwall; sprays, Geo. K. Johnston, Charles and sisters; the "broken tie," Mr. and Mrs. H. Hutt; sprays from Mrs. Sarah Johnston and family of Ottawa; spray, Mr. and Mrs. C. Johnston; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Servage. The body was laid to rest, by his fellow orangemen, in the family plot, beside the church there to await the resurrection morn.

The sympathy of a large circle of friends and neighbours is extended to the bereaved wife and sorrowing family in this their hour of loneliness and sorrow.

Irresponsible People

The disatvantage of bearing the reputation of being financially irresponsible is obvious, and people who are mentally incompetent do not conduct themselves in such away as to gain that reputation. Yet there are many who seem to feel that it is no discredit to be irresponsible in other respects —in the matter of fulfilling engagements, answering letters, taking care of their desks or their clothes, performing the allotted task at the appointed hour, giving hearty and whole souled effect to their work; sometimes it seems as if they thought that to be irresponsible in such ways conferred upon them a certain place and charm. Occasionally we do meet people who by reason of their whimsical and unexpected behavior are entertaining, but at least niue out of ten irresponsible persons do not charm, do not amuse; rather they annoy and irritate. For their irresponsibility is nothing more than a manifestation of selfishness; they go through the world trying to avoid trouble and bother and work, and inevitably they cause trouble and bother and work for others

Then there are people who, though generally showing a proper sense of responsibility in their actions, are given to irresponsible speech. The most careful housekeeper may be an irresponsible gossip—and so may the most prudent business man. The spreading of hearsay anecdotes is seldom harmless in result, however innocent it may be in intention. It is better to show interest in your neighbor than to excit interest about your neighbor. You can always do the first without doing the second. Too many people choose the wrong thing to do.

Why is it that to be termed a responsible member of the community carries a suggestion of dullness, of ponderousness, as well as of worthiness? And that to be termed irresponsible conveys, in spite of the criticism that the world implies, a suggestion of vivacity and brilliance? The responsible citizen is quite as likely to be vivacious and brilliant as the irresponsible; and the irresponsible may be as dull as anyone else. Responsibility merely means a sense of balance, a recognition of our duty to the community toward us. In such recognitation there is nothing incompatible with gayety or high spirits.—Youth's Companion.

Turkey Travel

Many people will hardly credit the fact that 20,000 Irish turkeys during last December made the trip from their homeland to New York, United States. A large American packing house gave the birds this trip, after paying their original owners for them at the rate of 10 cents per pound.

A special correspondent to the Westminster Gazette says, "It was anticipated that turkeys were going to be plentiful and cheap at Christmas in Great Britain, and up to a week or 10 days ago that was the case. As Christmas approached, however they became scarce, and on Friday and Saturday it was almost impossible to buy birds at any price.

Many reasons have been given for the shortage, but most of them have been wide of the mark. During December 10,000 Irish birds were bought and shipped to New York, and an even larger number in Normandy turkeys were sent across the Atlantic. This is not a new development, for in Decemher 1913, 5,000 English turkeys were purchased in London and sent to New York, while In April, 1914, about 25,000 English chickens were shipped to the same destinatiou.

Even more suggestive as to future developements is the action of one of the great Chicago meat firms in opening up buying agencies in Ireland for butter, eggs and poultry for shipment to the New England States.

It is not generally realized that the cost of transit from Ireland to New York —to say nothing of the higher quality of the produce—is less than than the cost of bringing such supplies from the middle west and southern states to New York.

THE UNHAPPY FARM WOMAN

By Nina Moore Jamieson

One of the most wonderful of our every day conveniences is the postage stamp. Just think what an obliging necessary little fellow he is! He stands in well with the Government and induces it to take charge of a stupendous amount of mail matter, for pleasure and profit. Considering the letters that are daily sent forth in this country, isn't it most amazing that so few of them fall by the wayside!

To-day I stood at the road, beside the mail box, and watched for the high red cart to appear just where the road stands straight up against the sky. It occurred to me not for the first time, that our mail service deserves more kind words than we ever think of giving it! Day in and day out, we get our newspapers, circulars letters, parcels, mail order catalogues, income tax forms, requests for a little assistance to various worthy causes, yeast cakes from the corner grocery, post card invitinglus to keep our milk home on a certain date, as the dairy is getting too much of it—and other treasures, such as sale bills and lawyers' letters and complexion beautifying advertisements, almanancs and Government bulletins—Selah.

Letters are always such a mystery! They may be anything. But they always alive and kicking.

There's the post-mark first of all. What a stroke of genius it was that invented the blur on them! It heightens the interest, where there is any, and creates interest where there is none. Here's a nice little envelope addressed in a nice little hand—looks as if our fatal beauty had claimed another victim. Thoughts course to distant glowing cities—crowds, fair women, brave men.

We open it. It is from a town lady who has recently established a dressmaking place of business. She would be glad of an opportunity to exhibit her skill to us, and guarantees satisfaction. A nice come down, truly!

Then here, behold a great sprawling address on a shabby and common envelope. It promises little, but it yields the nicest, friendliest bit of chat, the pleasantest message imaginable. The mailman doesn't know—he hands them out regardless of their possible effect on one's composure. If it is a wild sleety day, and the lid of the mail box is frozen down, then he has endless trouble in serving his route. People put two or three letters into their boxes, and coppers on top for the stamps, Nice idea! Why not tie the letters together and get stamps by the dollar's worth. Get the stamps in pleasant weather, not at ten below zero.

To-day letters came, as per usual. By the way, how do you like per usual? It is a winsome little expression, isn't it? I don't understand how I have managed to overlook our worthy little per, to date, when it is so popular, so genteel and so expresstve. As I was saying, letters came to-day, and it will take me some time to get my balance after their upsetting contents.

The one that dealt the shocks was innocent looking—post mark bleary, as usual. No name signed, only "An Unhappy Farm Woman." Poor, unhappy woman—I wish I knew where to find you.

"You write about country life"—thus she flings at me—"and you tell all the bright side of it. Do you really know anything about it all? Do you know what it is to have the crops fail, and lose your cattle, and can't pay your store bills and your taxes get behind, and your potatoes freeze, and your heart breaks with loneliness and discouragement? If you don't know, then you don't see anything but half of it, and you have no business to tell people that farming is the best life in the world, when it isn't.

"It is a most galling slavery—nothing but work, work all the time, and dirt and wretchedness. No food for the soul or mind, and such a dreary round for the body. I hate it. If you like farming so well, I wish you had this place, I am so lonely and so hungry for books and music.

There is more of it, but that is enough too much, in fact, for me. I shall be thinking of that unhappy farm woman to-night when every body else in the house is asleep—thinking and wondering if it did her good to tell her woes and sorrows, wondering if it would help if she knew that I really have experienced something of the same feeling of starved desperation!

It comes when the body is tired—but it came to me chiefly when our home was in the city and the children were small, and the twins were forever on the floor, scrubbing and grubbing around; and I was endless washing them and washing their clothes, and washing the floors putting children to bed, giving them their meals, mending their clothes—until sometimes at night when I should have said my prayers, I went sound asleep in the middle of them, or omitted them, knowing that the Lord would understand and excuse me, once in a while. Don't you think he would?

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

—To all of us it comes sometime—the horror of money that must be paid presently, and we don't see where it is coming from. But it usually comes from somewhere, and after all, that experience does not belong excusively to the farming fraternity! I am aware that we have been very fortunate in that we have lost very few animals during our years on the farm, and though we have shared in the poor seasons as well as anybody else, we have never been worse hit than our neighbors.

I sing the praises of farm life because I believe in it. I believe in it because it is a natural life, offering decent returns for honest labor—and this is not to hint that more labor on the part of my unhappy correspondent would have accomplished more for her I know there are times when "the luck's agin you." Then it is a question of endurance.

But even she must admit that in most cases it is safe to count on a comfortable living from the farm. At the worst we have fresh air and sunlight, and all the weather there is. As for dirt—

Yes, there is dirt. Lots of it. There is mud in the house any time when there is mud outdoors. Snow comes in on boots and coats, and melts according to its nature. The genuine dirt of the stables gets in, too, occasionally, in spite of good intentions, but still I cannot feel that our business is a filthy one. John went to buy some pigs to-day, and he said—well, never mind. The pigs were in a very dirty place, anyway. But we keep pigs, and they never get like that They do not need to be dirty. That is neglect.

I have been in grocery stores that were mussy and untidy; I have been in dentists' offices that looked grimy and uninviting; I have seen schools that looked as if the price of soap had recently gone up, and I have seen children that needed a wash behind the ears. But would you condemn all stores and offices and schools and children just for that?

It's when you get discouraged with fighting the dirt that the trouble really comes. I'd just like to get that unhappy farm woman away from home for a few days into some new smart clothes, and trot her about to an afternoon tea, or a real old-fashioned, spoony play or two, or even a circus, if it happened to be circus time!

There is no need to have the kindly uncle or other benevolent person step in and pay the taxes and the store bill; my desperate correspondent would go home after her round of dissipation, and be a new woman! She would wash the curtains and put a clean drape on the lamp shelf, and buy a new broom and a mouth organ, and forget that she ever felt discouraged! Meanwhile, since I cannot do these things with her, I hope she will just ask herself if she would really be any more content away from the farm, and facing the present situation in town? And if she would just tell me who she is, and where she lives, I would be glad to get her opinion of some of my books. They are a shabby lot, but friendly, and they talk sense. I like to have them go on their travels for that is what they were intended for. My poor unhappy farm woman, eating your heart out in loneliness! Have you no hills, no trees to pass you a cheerful Howdy! now and then? Seize what you have, do not ignore the gifts that lie at your throat—the greatest treasure of all may be there now, waiting for you to discover it.

How Mrs. Brown Saved the Bread

When I was first married, writes a contributor, I went to live on a large farm. Mr. Brown, who owned the farm and the creamery of which my husband was foreman, boarded nearly all the help, and his wife cooked for them. It was her boast that she never threw away a slice of bread.

One day at dinner we had a big plateful of steamed bread. As it was passed to me I noticed little flecks of mould on the top slices and did not take any; nor did anyone else except Mrs. Brown, who was nearsighted.

After dinner, while I was helping to clear the table, Mrs. Brown's sister asked, "What shall I do with the bread? It was a little mouldy."

"My slice wasn't," Mrs. Brown replied. "I'll take care of it."

That afternoon as I was going home I passed one of the hired men. "Aren't you eating bread any more?" he asked me.

"I notice you aren't eating bread either," I replied, but I warn you you'll eat it yet. You'll have a delicious pudding to-morrow."

"I am glad you mentioned pudding," he said, grinning. "I bet you we'll never eat that bread!"

In the evening he called on us. "We had bread in milk gravy for supper," he said, "but we all asked for crackers and milk. I suppose it's pudding to-morrow.

The next forenoon Mrs. Brown ran in for a minute's chat. She said she had a pudding in the oven. "Just think," she added, "I put a whole quart of cream into milk gravy last night, and every one of those boys called for crackers and milk. But I don't mind. I just added three eggs and a little nutmeg; it will make a delicious pudding. Now don't tell the boys."

I felt rather guilty. Really I began to hope she would win.

That afternoon my husband came in laughing. He had just been talking with one of the boys. They had all gone without dessert for dinner, and they believed she would give up trying to save the bread now.

"Give up!" I said. "I guess not! There are three eggs added to that quart of cream, to say nothing of the bread she never throws away."

The next forenoon I saw one of the boys and asked him whether they had had pudding for breakfast.

"Oh, no," he replied. "But we are wondering what we'll have for dinner. What could she make that pudding into?

"What did you have for breakfast?" I asked.

"Oh, just potatoes and bacon and johnnycake. She makes awfully good johnnycake; this was the best ever."

I had my suspicions then. Before the forenoon was over Mrs. Brown came in. "I heard that you had some extra good johnnycake for breakfast," I said. "Is the receipe a secret?"

How she laughed! "Those boys," she declared as soon as she could overcome her merriment "never ate a bit of pudding, so I just added some corn meal and baking powder and made my big dripping pan full of johnnycake. They ate every crumb!"

Comforting

"So you loved and lost?"

"Well, no I didn't lose exactly. You see when she returned my presents, she accidently put in some of the other fellow's."

BURIED TREASURE

Chap. II--The Quack Doctor

Billy's dream made more of an impression on me than I was willing to admit openly, and I had no intention of declining to go with him.

"We'll go halves on anything we find," he said.

The next day was Saturday and we planned to start for the island soon after breakfast. The lake was smooth and Billy had a little skiff in which we could row out to the island in a short time. We managed to get a pick and shovel down to the landing after dark on Friday evening.

"We must keep this a secret, you know," Billy had said, "If we don't find anything no one will be any wiser and if we do find the buried treasure, we won t want half of the town down to the shore to see us land and to try to grab it away from us."

"I hope there won't be any other boys running over to the island to-day.

"Oh, there will not," Billy said, "No one else except Hugh Rice has a skiff and he and a lot of other boys are going over to town to the ball game to-day, so I guess we'll find the coast clear."

But when we reached the island, we were surprised to see a column of smoke rising from the vicinity of the old cabin.

"I know whose camp-fire that is" said Billy, "My brother was over here two days ago and he said that there was an old fellow on the island gathering roots and herbs for medicine—some sort of quack doctor, I guess—. He is probably away over to the side of the island in search of roots and herbs by this time."

"But the camp-fire may belong to someone else," I advised, "so we'd better approach cautiously, There's a trail I know leading through the woods to that black boulder, and we'd better steal quietly up to the boulder and peep out to see if the coast is really clear around those plum trees."

"Quite true, Dick," said Billy.

Having anchored our boat, we took our basket of lunch, our pick and shovel, and a stout canvas bag we had brought for the treasure, and started for the boulder. The silence and secrecy we felt it necessary to maintain gave a fascinating flavour to our adventure, and Billy said in an undertone as we started:

"We're in for it now, Dick, my boy. Did you see that frog hop across our path just now? That's a sure sign of gold, they say, when a frog hops across one's path. I tell you, Dick, things are certainly going our way now."

It took us about ten minutes to get to the boulder. Billy was several yards in advance of me when he cautiously approached the black boulder. He peeped around it and turned quickly toward me with one finger held up warningly. When I was near enough, he said in a whisper: "Too late! Look around the boulder—look!"

I peeped slyly around the boulder. A man was digging under the plum trees! He was an old, ragged, uncouth man. His hat was off, and his hair hung in a tangled black and gray mass around his shoulders. I drew back and turned toward Billy. "I guess its the old quack-doctor," I said in a whisper.

"He's no quack-doctor," said Billy angrily and excitedly. He's here on purpose to rob us of that treasure. I suspect he's had a dream, too. I call it a downright shame! He ought to divide with us. Hadn't we better march out and tell him so?"

"I scarcely think he would divide," I whispered, "and we could not make him. See what a big strong, surly-looking fellow he is!"

"Evil-looking, too," said Billy almost gritting his teeth and shaking his head.

Then he took another peep and drew back his head, more excited then before.

"Why, Dick," he said, so loudly that I feared the old man would hear him. "The old fellow isn't digging up a treasure. He's burying one!"

"No!"

"He is!"

"Let me see!"

I pulled Billy back and took his place by the boulder.

A Lesson In Spelling

Contributed by Scout Bruce McMillan.

We'll begin with box, and the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen not oxes;
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese,
Yet the plural of mouse should never be meese;
You may find a lone mouse or a whole lot of mice
But the plural of house is houses, not hice.
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be cows or kine.
But a bow that's repeated is never called bine,
And the plural of vow is vows, not vine.

And if I speak of a foot and you show me your feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is a tooth and a whole set are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular's this and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
Then one would be that and three would be those,
Yet hat in the plural would never be hose.
And the plural of cat is cats not cose.
We speak of a brother, and also of brethren,
But though we say mother, we never say mathren.
Then masculine pronouns are he, his, and him,
But imagine the feminine, she, shis, and shim,
So English, I think you all will agree,
Is the wonderfullest language you ever did see.

Nuts To Crack

Contributed by Scout Jack Sanders. P. L.

If ten pens and one penholder cost ten-tenpence, and ten pen holders without any pens cost ten-tenpence; what will ten pens without any penholders cost?

A milk man's cart having broken down, he hailed three farmers who were passing by in their wagons, and said that if they would carry his cans home for him they might have all the milk that was in them. The milkman had 21 cans, and each farmer agreed to take 7 cans if an equal division of milk could also be made. Upon examination, it was found that 7 cans were full, 7 half-full and 7 empty. The equal division was effected without pouring any milk from one can to another. How was it done?

Wanted!--A Boy Scout

The above words are what, we believe, should appear on all notices requesting the services of a boy. If business men were to adopt this plan, they would find that it pays. Why?--Just because Boy Scouts are not "clock-watchers!" they are always prompt and obedient! their training makes them physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight!

Business men of Chesterville, if you have any occasion to require the services of a boy, pick out one who wears the fleur-de-lis badge. Give our boys a chance to show their Scout training—you'll not be disappointed!

Going Into Debt

It was a commonplace of the thrifty economists of an earlier day that debt was something to be avoided in all circumstances and at all costs. Capital to lend was then scarce and mostly in the hands of the usurers. The man who borrowed put himself into the power of the "money changers" and was likely in the end to lose everything in the hopeless struggle to lift the burden he had assumed.

To-day debt is not necessarily a bad thing. When it is incurred in order to find the money for ordinary living expenses, extravagant or otherwise, it is wholly bad; it then becomes the worst of misfortunes or, the most foolish of blunders. But when the borrower is merely in search of additional capital, which he expects to turn to such advantage that he can soon repay the loan, it is a different matter. There are few business men, especially among those who are conducting healthy and growing business, who do not find frequent occasion, and so ample are the resources of the banks that such men can usually borrow without paying unreasonable rates of interest.

But there s one thing to be remembered. Borrowing, especially on a mortgage and for a rather long period of time, is likely to be profitable when prices are rising but disastrous when they are falling. In the one instance the borrower is getting a costly dollar and repaying with a cheaper one. In the other he gets a cheap dollar and has to pay back one that is worth a good deal more.

From the reconstruction period in the sixties to the end of the industrial depression in 1896 prices fell, not without intermission, but on the whole steadily. That was not a good time to go into debt. A good many men who tried it— business men and farmers alike—ended by going into bankruptcy. On the other hand, the years from 1896 to 1920 were a time of generally rising prices. Business men made money, and farmers found that the land and stock they bought with borrowed money became more valuable every year They prospered even while they went into debt.

Apparently we have entered upon a period of falling prices. How long it will last or how far prices fall no one knows; but for the present it is the part of wisdom to be cautious about borrowing money. Be reasonably sure you can see your way out before you go into debt.
