Combines, Juniors Prepare for New Hockey Season Here

A meeting of the St. Lawrence Intermediate 'A' Hockey League held at the Morrisburg Civic Centre, named M. A. Ball of Morrisburg as president and secretary-treasureer.

Entries were received from the Kemptville Royals, Cornwall Flyers, Embrun Panthers, Prescott Barons, Morrisburg Combines.

The season will open, it was decided on November 15th. A schedule is in preparation, and should be ready next week.

It is the aim of the Combines to ice a team with as many players as possible from this immediate area. All positions are open and anyone who would like a tryout with the Combines will be made welcome.

Among the members of former Combines teams reporting to camp will be Allie Cameron, Big Doug and Little Doug Casselman, Bob Carkner, Ron Quenneville, Shad St. Jean, Ron Branchaud, Gord McMillan. Rick Rushford, Paul Beckstead.

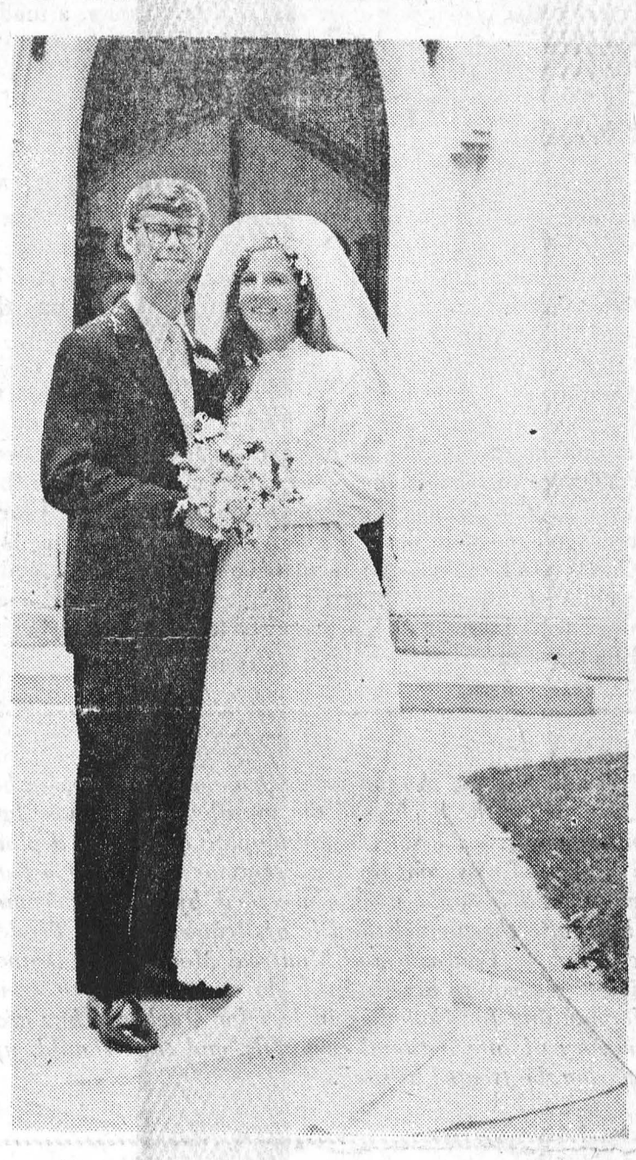
The St. Lawrence Junior B Hocyey league has been formed for the coming season with 8 teams competing for the Gill Cup. Maxville has returned after a year's leave of absence and Cornwall Juniors B. Royals has entered the league as a new entry.

The league has been split into two sections the north consisting of Metcalfe, Winchester, Maxville and Alexandria; the south consisting of Prescott, Cardinal, Morrisburg and Cornwall. Each league will play a double schedule and have inter-locking games.

The Morrisburg training camp will open about October 14, so all players of Junior age are invited to attend.

Morrisburg's opening game will be at home on Sunday, November 1st at 2:30 p.m., but at this time the opposition is not known. Prices for the Junior B games this year will be $1.00 for adults; 50c for students and 25c for children. We are hoping for a good crowd for the opening game so let's go all you fans and cheer the local boys on to victory.

Brockville Wedding Of Interest Here



Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ernest Duval (the former Doris Lenora Hall), who were married in St. Peter's Anglican Anglican Church, Brockville. Photo by Ian Innis

Flamingo and white glads formed the setting in St. Peter's Anglican church, Brockville, at 2 p.m. August 15, when Rev. J.C. Garrett united in marriage Miss Doris Lenora Hall, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall, Lyn, and Richard Ernest Duval, only son of Mrs. Jennie McColl, 61 Chislett street and the late Stanley Duval, Morrisburg. Wedding music was played by Don. S. Albery.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor - length gown of white lagoda crepe with guipure lace trimming the high neckline, bodice, long cuffs and the bottom of the dress. The detachable, cathedral-length train was of lagoda crepe and her four-tiered illusion veil was held by a band of white stephanotis. She carried pink and white baby carnations, stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Valerie Hewitt, 44 Hubbell street, as maid-of-honor, wore a floor-length gown of rose crepe, with short puffed sleeves, round neckline, A-line skirt and white short gloves. Her flowers were a basket of pink baby carnations, white shasta 'mums, stephanotis and ivy.

As bridesmaids, Miss Carol Duval, 61 Chislett street, sister of the groom, Miss Wanda Sheffield of RR1, Lyn, cousin of the bride, and Miss Carol Hess, 9 Schofield ave., were dressed identically to the maid - of - honor and carried baskets of flowers the same.

Tom McMillan, 15 Cedar place, Brockville, was groomsman and the ushers were Jim Gray and Jerry Heward of Brockville, and Everett Leeder of Kingston.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Grenville Lodge where a wedding dinner was served. Assisting in receiving the guests were the bride's mother wearing mauve crimplene dress, black patent accessories and corsage of sweetheart roses; and the groom's mother in a peach crepe dress and white accessories, with corsage of white sweetheart roses.

Travelling by motor, the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Quebec City, the bride changing to an aqua dress and sleeveless coat, with corsage of yellow orchids

They returned August 21, and have taken up residence at 40 Winters Court, Apt. 11, Brockville. The groom is employed as a public health inspector at the Leeds, Grenville and Lanark County health unit.

Out-of-town guests were present from Kingston, Toronto, Cornwall, Hamilton, Ottawa, Syracuse, N.Y., and London, Ont.

First Fall Meeting Un. Church Women

The first fall meeting of the United Church Women was held on October 1st, with Mrs. Marion Lemon presiding. As the speaker of the evening promised to be of unusual interest, an invitation had been extended to other church groups, and it was gratifying to note that several had accepted.

Mrs. James Jordan, convenor of the program called on Mrs. Whyte and Mrs. Shearing to conduct the Worship Service—it was evident that the service had been carefully planned, as the scripture readings, hymns and prayers which followed—emphasized the Thanksgiving theme. A very brief business session dispensed with the reading of the minutes and reports, but did discuss a motion that the annual bazaar should be replaced by a tea and sale of baked goods was carried and November 4th was chosen as the date on which it should be held.

At the conclusion of the business period, the guest speaker, Dr. Dienert, was introduced by Mrs. Trevor Crowder. Dr. Roger Dienert had recently joined the St. Lawrence Medical Clinic and chose as his subject "Heart disease in relation to modern Medicine". He began with a sketch of a heart, which he explained as being primarily two pumps, in which a variety of troubles might occur just as in a mechanical pump.

There are two distinct types of heart disease — congenital and acquired — in the first instance the child is born with a heart defect, which may have occurred through failure of a heart valve to function normally — or through an opening in the wall of the heart — with modern treatment such as defect can usually be easily corrected.

Acquired heart disease which occurs most often in adults — is frequently related to rheumatic fever.

A second major cause of acquired heart disease is high blood pressure, which if recognized very early can usually be prevented by drugs, thus eliminating a heart attack. Diet plays a very important role in high blood pressure—particularly when our diet contains a high percentage of fats — as in butter or eggs, this fat, known as Cholesterol often begins to build up very early in the heart muscles, and progresses very quickly. Other contributing factors may be diabetes, anemia, excess smoking of excessive use of alcohol.

Dr. Dienert spoke briefly of the techniques involved in heart transplants—also of the effective use now being made of transmitters, pacemakers and drugs—he was most generous in his replies to the many questions which followed, and were a clear indication of the interest shown by the audience.

At the conclusion of the address, refreshments were served from a most attractively decorated Thanks giving table.

Former Residents Mark Anniversary

Former residents of Morrisburg, Mr. and Mrs. Merle J. Deeks of Pembroke, Ontario, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a family dinner at the Northwood Hotel, Pembroke. 29 attended the party with Harley Deeks of Calgary acting as master of ceremonies.

The happy couple were married September 1, 1920 at the Morrisburg Methodist Church by the late Rev. J.H. Miller. Three children were born to this union, Leda, Mrs. Earle Richardson of Kemptville, Lloyd of Hamilton and Harley of Calgary, all in attendance. 15 of their 18 grandchildren also attended.

Mrs. Deeks, was the former Eva Beckstead, born at Morrisburg, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. A.H. Beckstead. Mr. Deeks ws born at Williamsburg, a son of the late Mr. Dan Deeks and Mrs. E. O. Deeks of Morrisburg.

The couple was also feted at a surprise party given by 60 of their friends at the Curling Club House, Petawawa. Rev. and Mrs. H.M. Servage of Kingston, attended and brought back memories of when the 4 of them attended Morrisburg Collegiate. Rev. S.E. Larman of Pembroke acted as master of ceremonies presenting a money tree and several gifts on behalf of their friends.

Annual Meeting Held by Hospital Auxiliary

The annual meeting of the women's Auxiliary was held in the Board Room of the District Memorial Hospital in Winchester on Oct. 1st. In Mrs. MacGregor's absence as a patient in the hospital. the vice-president, Mrs. Keith Carkner, officiated very capably, piloting the members through a lengthy agenda in record time. Chesterville, Golden Valley, Melvin - Annable, Morewood, Mountain, Ormond, Summers-Cass Bridge and Winchester units were well represented.

Mrs. R. Summers repeated her excellent breakdown of the Hospital Fair in June and reported, also, the year's financial statement which had been printed in detail in the North Dunda papers. The substantial sum thus recorded stood the auxiliary in good stead when the purchasing committee requisitioned the following; Twelve pairs of fire-resistant cubicle drapes; 4 large, 3 medium and 12 smaller fans; air conditioners for the first floor treatment room and ward 119 and for quick diagnosis in the lab, a very modern cryostat was supplied to obtain quick frozen sections to verify a diagnosis. A high-humidity Oxygen tent was purchased for Pediatrics from the memorial fund for the late Wilfred Porteous, formerly a valued member of the Board of Directors.

When the membership campaign gets under way this month, a quick estimate of what the auxiliary has just supplied to augment the equipment in the hospital should convince the potential member of the worth of the organization.

Mr. Stel, in his usual report placed emphasis on the projected budget which will cover extensions in the diagnostic areas, a Home Care program has been approved for the 5 counties of Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Prescott and Russell which should shorten the patient's stay in hospital during convalescence. Details of this program will be released later as it gets established.

The Tuck Cart will be the responsibility of Morrisburg during October, Williamsburg in November, and Winchester in December. The In-Service Volunteer program will be assisted by Morewood unit during October and November.

The October conventions were discussed and delegates appointed. Mrs. Susan Andress of Ormondwill represent the auvilliary at the mid-October convention of District No. 9 in Ottawa along with eleven volunteer observers from other units. Mrs. Max Boyd, co-ordinator of the In-Service Volunteer program, and Mrs. John Campbell of Golden Valley unit, were appointed delegates to the late October annual convention of the Ontario Hospital Auxiliary Association in Toronto.

Membership cards were supplied to the units by Mrs. Summers who emphasized the continued need for knitters with wool supplied on request to either Mrs. Summers or your own unit director.

At the close of the meeting Miss Legris welcomed the members to the cafeteria for coffee and cake.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

October 5, 1970

The Morrisburg Leader,

Dear Mr. Editor and Friend;

I find this Leader of October 2 front page just about the most wholesome and refreshing thing I have seen in any newspaper for six months and I read them from the NY Times to Vancouver.

The 40 little girls in the Barkley contest gives one hope that our children are still top quality, despite the half-witted youth problems of Hourly News.

What beautiful and intelligent and very wonderful 40 little humans so obvious here. I doubt if any Community, Atlantic to Pacific can assemble 40 to equal them. May they stay as fine and as happy as this photo of yours portray.

You may print for the next 100 years but you will never go beyond the cheer and joy of this child classic. If a younger man I would try for 40 like them—But alas . . .

Borden Clark

OVERMATURE TREES

Overmature trees may decrease in useable volume each year because more rot than sound wood is being formed.

PATS STILL WINNING

Despite cold and rainy weather, Cardinal Pats continued to mow the opposition ballteams down. on Sunday afternoon, with an ever ready threat of rain, the Pats downed Woodstock 9-0 in Domville to take the best of 3 series 2 games straight. Pats defeated Maldoc 2 games to 1 in the Intermediate A. O.A.S.A. Playdowns and then downed Toronto 2 straight and now Woodstock.

The first game was 6-1 in Woodstock, with the 2nd game scheduled for 3 diamonds due to wet grounds, but the rains came again, setting the day for Sunday.

The final series is set to begin in Cardinal Saturday night, hopefully. Kapuskasing or Sudbury will be their opposition in the final series.

Ted Hoy pitched his team to victory allowing 7 hits, walking 3, hitting 1 and striking out 6. Ted hit a double in the 2nd to drive in Larry Patterson to score. In the 4th the Pats broke loose scoring 8 runs.

With 1 out, Gord Woods puts a homer over the right field fence, Ed Orzel gained 1st base on an error, Larry Peterson homered over centre. Ted Hoy singled, Ron Patterson walked with Ed. St. Louis homering over centre. Mike Skakum singled, and Big Doug Casselman brought him home on a homer over the left field fence. 2 more batters gained 1st base before the side was retired. Woodstock used 2 pitchers, striking out 9, walking 4, hitting 1 and allowing 3 singles, 2 doubles and 4 homers.

Pats are also in the Dundas Fast ball League Playoffs with Domville. Aces won the 1st game of the best of 7 finals 5-2 with Pats coming back with a 3-2 win. In the 3rd game, 19½ scoreless innings were played. Bottom of the 20th, none out, nobody on, Larry Patterson homered to give Pats a 1-0 win.

4 days later, Aces tied the series at 2 games apiece with a 1-0 10 inning win.

5th game, hopefully will be in Cardinal Wednesday night. 6th game in Domville on Friday night, if the weather man will co-operate.

If the 7th game is necessary, it will be played in Cardinal, Monday afternoon, Oct. 12th at 2 p.m.

Answer to NDP Challenge

Most people who peeked on the boob-tube at the NDP Convention held in Toronto last week end noted the conviction of the delegates there, that their party was about to replace the Robarts government at the Onario helm. And that was not to be at some time in the dim and distant future — but like tomorrow man. The convention named Stanley Lewis new leadr of their party, with the help of a very large number of labour union delegates. In the opinion of many, both within and without their party, they pulled the biggest goof in the history of the CCF-NDP, and forfeited what might have been a good chance to become the next government of Ontario. The only other serious candidate for the leadership post was Walter Pitman, a moderate, who had a wide appeal to uncommitted voters across the province, and who, informants claim, had the best chance of defeating the Robarts government at the election expected to be held in 1971.

Meanwhile, back in the Legislateure Halls at T.O., Mr. Robarts, one of the most wily politicians in Canadian history, made some historic ovations to Ontario farmers, many of whom have been backing their verbal complaints against the steadily education taxes in the province, by a blunt refusal to pay that portion of their taxes.

Beginning this year, at an estimated $20 million cost, the government will give all owners of land assessed for farming, a direct annual grant equal to 25 per cent of their property taxes. All farmers are to receive the rebate automatically unless their farms are less than 11 acres in size. Owners of such small farms will be eligible only if their gross income from farming is at least $2,000. If, however, the farm property is re-developed as commercial or residential property, the government will demand repayment with interest of the property tax rebates during the preceding ten years.

The silent, and the not-so-silent majority in Canada have had it right up to the neck with the so-called FLQ, whose latest bid for notoriety has been the kidnapping of British diplomat James Richard Cross, and their subsequent posting of a list of "demands" which could not be accepted by any government. They have also threatened the life of Prime Minister Trudeau, Quebec Premier Bourassa and Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau. The time has come to take off the gloves with these thugs who care for nothing for Canada and less for Quebec. They are in the category of international criminals, and they should, upon aprehension, be treated as such.

Bigger Not Necessarily Better

(The Renfrew Mercury-Advance)

Last week we drove out of Metropolitan Toronto into the fringes of the city. The view across the flat fields was of yellow construction machines, high rise apartment complexes, Hydro transmission lines on steel towers and dead trees.

Steady streams of cars whizzed up and down the concrete lanes of highways, ramps and underpasses.

Everywhere there were signs of Progress, Industrial Development, Growth and Expansion.

After a long drive through middle Ontario we came over the top of the big hill at Maynooth and saw the lovely green hills of Renfrew County spread before us—a different world.

It makes you think.

So many parts of Ontario have lost the quiet, the celan air and the green trees we have. By now we should know enough to hang on to what's left.

Progress is fine—as long as it means better living as well as jobs. But we get scared when we hear the promoters promise prosperity and lower taxes through industrial development. Words like expansion, growth and development mean more taxes, not less.

All industrial promoters should tour the outskirts of Toronto and memorize one phrase;

"Bigger isn't necessarily better".

"Count me out . . . my belt broke!"

Canadian Women Top Buyers of Savings Bonds

Are Canadian women becoming more investment-conscious?

Apparently so, according to Bay Street brokers and investment analysts, and the reason generally given is that women are becoming increasingly sophisticated about the financial market and the intricacies of investing in bonds and stocks.

This is particularly evident among working wives as well as single girls, with each category using their investment capital and know how towards different goals.

In the case of the working wife, whether she is employed as a production worker in a manufacturing plant or in a secretarial position in a large office operation, she usually gets her investment "baptism" through purchasing Canada Savings Bonds on the payroll savings plan at her place of work.

Statistics prove that in the majority of families, the wife is the person who keeps track of the finances, pays the bills, and, in fact, is the banker.

If she is a working wife, her fam ily will earn twin pay cheques. Consequently, married women employees now provide the large num ber of prospects for Canada Savings Bonds.

Says area director David R. Dattels, Kitchener, of the CSB payroll savings campaign; "she is the one who is most likely to subscribe for a larger amount through the payroll plan. She is the one who will bring home the bonds, while her husband brings home the bacon!"

The wartime Victory Loans and the post-war Canada Savings Bonds have familiarized women with the nature of securities and the ownership of income-paying investments.

One woman investment advisor says she firmly believes that Canada Savings Bonds are a 'must' for every woman.

"They increase their value with the passage of time, they are easy to buy in small or large denominations at work, and they provide ready cash in an emergency as well as for holiday trips and even towards retirement," she says.

A woman with young children can make good use of her family allowance cheques by using them to buy Canada Savings Bonds in her children's names. This is an ideal way of providing for their future education or financial needs.

Career women usually purchase them through the Payroll Savings Plan at their place of work. Full-time homemakers can arrange with their husbands to have their bank make regular deductions for CSBs from the family account.

While the greatest value of CSBs can be obtained by holding them to maturity, the interest coupons can be cashed each year to provide some additional income.

The 1970-'71 Series currently on sale provide an annual yield of 7 3/4 per cent if held to maturity in 11 years. They pay interest of 6 3/4 per cent in the first year; 7 3/4 per cent in each of the next three years, and 8 per cent in each of the last seven years.

The new Series also has an interesting compound interest feature which provides for three extra certificates during the life of the band if annual coupons are left uncashed to earn interest on interest coupons makes each $10 CSB grow to $227.50 in 11 years' time.

Oxfam Group Aids Dwellers in Slums of Peru

When Father John Seymour was still back playing hockey for Toronto's St. Michaels College, there was no Oxfam of Canada. Now Oxfam has given Father Seymour $15,000 so that he can help the slum dwellers of Lima.

Father Seymour is involved with Young Towns of Peru, a Peruvian staffed community development organization who are trying to improve the lives of the people who live in the giant slum community in Lima. The population of these slums or "barriadas" is almost a million people — a city the size of Toronto. Most of them live in hovels without water, sewage or electricity.

The Young Towns group has organized leadership courses and greatly helped many families. The Oxfam grant will help them continue their work and to build a model housing project.

The grant to Father Seymour was only one out of the $103,620. worth of projects funded at Oxfam's last meeting of its Projects Committee. This committee meets regularly to assess the many projects submitted to Oxfam and to assign funds.

A Canadair CL-215 water bomber drops its six ton load on a blazing forest fire. In one day this summer, France's Service National de la Protection Civile dropped a total of 1,170 tons of water on forest fires near the Riviera using its fleet ofg 10 Canadair planes. Commandant Andre Lang, chief of France's fire service, said the 10 CL-215s had done the work of 30 Cansos, the CL-215 prodecessor, in fighting the worst fires France has seen in decades. The CL-215 scoops its six ton load in 18 seconds as it skims across a lake or the sea at about 75 miles per hour.

The 2nd FORTY

Hippie Usher

Dear Miss Brookfield.

In a few months my daughter will be getting married. Her fiance and all male members of the bridal party, except one, wear their hair short. But one young man wears his shoulder length, hippie style. I've told them that if he can't cut his hair for the wedding, he should not be asked to serve as usher. My daughter and her fiance disagree. They claim: 1) they can't ask him to cut his hair, and 2) the young man is really a "nice" fellow. True, I may be making a mistake in judging the fellow by his appearance, but I can't help it. That's the way I was raised. Would it be improper to ask this fellow to get a haircut for the wedding? H.L.

Dear H.L.:

Yes, it would be improper. Your daughter and her fiance are right in insisting they can't ask this young man to cut his hair. If his appearance had been disturbing to them, they wouldn't have invited him to serve as an usher.

The over-40 generation frequently uses the length of a young man's hair to categorize indiscriminately his beliefs in education and politics his sexual mores and his personal hygiene. Try your best to get to know this man before the wedding. You may be surprised to discover he is just as "nice" as your daughter and her fiance say he is. If so, you will have taken a giant step in bridging the so-called "generation gap."

Preventive Medicine

Dear Miss Brookfield:

I am 47, I take birth control pills I have been told I can soon switch to estrogen pills alone, to prevent the symptoms of menopause. When will it be safe to do this, without the possibility of my getting pregnant? J.Y.

Dear J.Y.

Talk this over with your doctor, who can tell you if and when you will require estrogen to offset menopausal symptoms. In their book, "Woman's Choice," Drs. Robert H. Glass and Nathan G. Kase, both professors at Yale University, write: "It would be safe to switch to estrogen alone at the age of 50. Pregnancy after this age is a rare occurrence and therefore contraceptive levels of hormons are not needed. Because side-effects on low dose estrogens are nil, this switch is beneficial."

Late "Fatherhood"

Dear Miss Brookfield:

I am a 66-year-old widow who married a widower, aged 77, about a year ago. My daughter recently died, leaving three young children. I would like to raise them. My daughter was divorced and the children's father, who has remarried and has children by his second wife, has agreed to this plan. He is willing to support them. The only one raising objections is my new husband. He insists we are "too old" to take on the responsibility of raising children. What do you think? K.M.

Dear K.M.:

Your willingness to assume the responsibility for raising these children is admirable, but before you do, you and your husband should discuss your doubts with an expert in child-rearing and family problems. Either contact the Family Service Association or, through your religious affiliation, another agency in the field.

Your husband's arguments, however, have some validity. At his age a man is more comfortable in the role of grandfather. He can then enjoy and spoil the children during their short visits without the responsibility of day-to-day care. So talk it over frankly and freely with a family therapist before you come to a decision.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

Weekly Report

FARM WOODLOT MANAGEMENT ASSISTANCE

by: C.F. Coons, BSc.F., R.P.F.

The success of forestry depends upon the extent to which the owner becomes the manager of his own forest.

Woodlots are improved by the use of the axe and the saw. They may be destroyed by the same tools.

To assist woodlot owners in making wise forest management decisions the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests offers two assistance programmes. First, the Department offers an advisory assistance programme to all woodlot owners in Ontario. Free inspection of woodlots and advice on woodlot management is offered. If thinning in the woodlot is advisable, the trees will be marked for removal by Department staff. If the trees marked are saleable the owner will be referred to a timber buyers list.

Secondly, the Department offers woodlot management assistance.— This assistance programme has been made possible by the passing of the Woodlands Improvement Act in 1966. Under the terms of a 15 year agreement the Department will mark and selectively thin wood lots showing good potential for sawlog and veneer log production. Normally this work has been done in upland hardwood woodlots consisting of a mixture of species such as: hard maple, basswood, white ash, white elm, black cherry, red oak and bitternut hickory.

It's a tough life

DEAR DORIS — I have made a terrible blunder. A young neighborhood boy used to be in this house as often as he was in his own. He helped me around the place and most of all we talked. When his family moved, he still came back once in a while.

One day I broke down and phoned him and he came. I hugged him and said how much I missed him. Two weeks later he phoned and told me in no uncertain terms he wanted me to keep my paws off him (that he was "not that hard up").

I was insulted that he was not more understanding. He is 16 now. Next time I kept 10 miles away from him. But now his mother is blabbing it all over that I should be locked up etc; and he doesn't come any more.

I fell terrible. I have lost a good friend.

Just Sick

DEAR SICK — I'm sorry. Teen years are tough when boys are discovering themselves, the other sex, and their feelings.

This childhood friendship of his now seems like foolishness, simply because of his own self-conscious look at it, and at you.

All you can do is let him go, for the present. When he grows up a little more and has some regular girlfriends he'll sort it all out. I'm betting he'll be back.

DEAR DORIS — My girlfriend and I are tired of wearing padded bras. Imagine at 18 having a bust of 32! Exercises don't seem to work.

We read this article where it guarantees to give a bigger and firmer bust in less than 25 days. It is based on the principle of the stimulation of the blood circulation by humid massages. We wonder if this gadget (and others) are just tricks.

Flat-Chested

DEAR FLAT — Save your money to buy a couple of more padded bras. Medical authorities consider such gadgets useless, even harmful. The breasts are tender and must not be abused.

Gain a little weight and this will help round you out in a few places. Want my 10-cent "Chart for Curves"?

The girls with oversized bosoms write in, too, and just as desperately. Their solution isn't nearly so simple as yours.

DEAR DORIS — Where can people in their middle years go when they are left alone? There are places for senior citizens and young people, but what about a middle-aged widower?

I go to church on Sunday and work all week, but sometimes I feel as if I am going to blow up. The summers are not so bad as I have my garden, but the winters nearly drive me to doing something desperate.

Where can I go and what is there ahead but work and loneliness?

No Future

DEAR NO FUTURE — Is there no men's association in your church? Or what about giving a hand with some boys' work?

If you mixed much and feel uncertain of yourself, the first plunge into friendly society will be the worst. Fortify yourself with a good-looking suit of clothes and careful grooming, and reach out to lend a hand.

Start a hobby. Put a bird feeder in your garden, read the book which tells you how to recognize the colorful feathered friends who will come to you for sustenance. Then join the birdwatchers' club.

Or do some pre-spring planting, in your own basement, in a flat or two, and get your plants off to an extra-early start. Then share them.

Confidential to Naive — Why split hairs? The term necking should include all of the neck. French kissing should be avoided because it's very stimulating. Certain areas of the body are extremely sensitive to caresses. The ear is one of them. But the toe? Depends what turns you on.

THANKSGIVING

We have with us today
The fall season's array
Of beauties whih we adore!
The harvest's in the making,
Or indeed is now in store.
So we set aside a day for thanksgiving
That all so blessed as to be now living
May express to God their gratitude
For the gifts of air, water and food;
For the gifts of beauty, peace and love
Which are showered on us from heaven above.
'Tis good to give thanks, as some recompense,
For the boundless blessings of Divine Providence.

—Howard Tindal, Thanksgiving, 1970

CLOSING MEETING GOLF BRIDGE CLUB

The Golf Bridge Club held its final meeting for the season with a covered dish luncheon, convened by Jean Parker.

Seven tables of bridge were played. High scores went to Lucy Foster, Maggie Bowman, Avis Patterson, Carol Riddell.

The gift table was centered with yellow mums and the luncheon table with autumn flowers. Each lady present received a prettily-wrapped gift.

On behalf of the club members, Sue MacDonald thanked the convenor for the nicely arranged closing party.

TRAGIC LOSS. The heart-attack death of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser, 52, has left the crisis of the Middle East teetering as it never has before. ORGANIZATIONS JOIN FORCES TO FIGHT HIGHER SCHOOL TAXES

Farmers, pensioners and Torontо residents have joined forces in their campaigns for the removal of education taxes from property.

Three organizations — the United Senior Citizens of Ontario, the Confederation of Residents and Ratepayers Associations and the Ontario Federation of Agriculture have agreed to co-ordinate their programmes for tax reform in Ontario.

These groups between them represent over 188.000 Ontario residents.

In a joint statement, the presidents of the three organizations, Mr. J.L. Lerette of the Senior Citizens, Mr. Derek Hayes of CORRA and Mr. Gordon Hill of the OFA, explained their positions.

"The provincial government at present pays 51 per cent of the cost of education. Property owners pay the other 49 per cent in the form of municipal taxes on property.

"Our three organizations are united in believing that the provincial government must pay the whole bill. Education taxes must come off property.

"The fact is, the property tax is a thoroughly inequitable method of raising funds for education. It may have had its place in pioneer society, but it's hopelessly antiquated today.

"Rapid population growth, increased mobility of population and higher educational standards have all combined to place enormous pressures on municipal councils. These councils have taken the only path they could take. They passed the load on to property owners.

"We believe the provincial government must distribute educational costs on a more equitable basis. We suggest that the ability-to-pay principle is the best guide.

"In other words, we are asking the provincial government to increase its contribution to education from the present 51 per cent to 100 per cent.

"The United Senior Citizens of Ontario, the Confederation of Residents and Ratepayers Associations and the Ontario Federation of Agriculture stand shoulder to shoulder on this issue, and we are inviting all other property owners— in cities, in towns and in the country — to join us in seeking the removal of education tax from property".

REPORT

Last year in Ontario, there were 21 children under the age of five killed and 1,512 more injured in traffic collisions.

There are several reasons why children are so vulnerable in automobile accidents. When parents put children into the family car to go shopping, they seldom give thought to the possibility of their being involved in a traffic accident. They feel that they will not be going far enough or driving fast enough to have an accident. They allow their children to stand on the front seat or to scamper about the car without any destraining device at all.

Parents should pay attention to the installation and use of safety restraining devices for small children, particulary if under the age of five as automobile seat belts, were not designed for this age group. What type of device then is best? Safety authorities say a sturdy restraint that is securely attached either to the car frame or to a seat belt that is anchored to the frame of the car is the most effective.

The following are some good rules for parents to follow when driving with small children.

(1) Put children in the back seat, this affords added protection as it is not so near the dash and windshield.

(2) Teach your children to use seat belts and make it a family rule to "Buckle up for Safety's Sake".

(3) Keep your car free from loose objects. Serious injuries can be inflicted by loose flying objects when a car makes a sudden stop.

(4) When children are buckled in, you can pay more attention to your driving and give less thought to what they are doing.

(5) Give infants special care.— Put them in a car bed or bassinet. Don't hold them in your arms.

By following these few rules you will be giving your child a better chance to escape from serious injury or death in the event that you become involved in a motor vehicle accident.

Ontario Provincial Police in Dundas County patrolled 10,097 miles while working 845 hours. During this time officers laid 51 charges and issued 50 warnings under the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario.

Officers from Morrisburg Detachment investigated 1 theft, 1 disturbance and 18 miscellaneous complaints.

One person was charged with assault while one other person was charged with impaired driving. 13 persons were charged under the Liquor Control Act of Ontario.

Area highways were quiet with officers investigating 2 property damage accidents and 1 personal injury accident in which 1 person received minor injuries.

Provincial Court was quite busy with officers spending 14 hours in court while registering 92 convictions.

Catholic P.T.A. Meeting Held At Iroquois

The Catholic Parent - Teacher's Association held their first general meeting on September 28th in the St. Cecilia's Separate School in Iroquois, Ontario.

Mr. Peter Van Moorsel presided as President with forty-seven in attendance. Teachers from St. Cecilia's, Iroquois and St. Mary's, Morrisburg were introduced to the parents. Miss Lapierre explained the Integrated approach in education, where each child works at his level in ability and interest. Our religion representative, Mr. Owens, and all the teachers helped the parents understand the new approach in the Catholic catechism. Each child learns and experiences religion in himself day to day with God. Concluding the programme was a film strip of St. Cecilia's highlights 69-70. A social lunch followed.

Remember, October 18, our guest speaker will be Mr. P. Beavers, Chairman of our Tri-County School Board.

A new commander's role

OTTAWA — Brand-new Defence Minister Donald Macdonald has been getting an earful at the intensive briefings he's been attending at defence headquarters ever since he moved into Leo Cadieux's office in late September.

The job is no plum at the best of times, but in the context of today's defence situation, it could be the rocky road to political ruin. Sure there's prestige, but that's been going downhill ever since Pierre Trudeau moved into the PM's office and downgraded defence.

Leo Cadieux held the fort for two years under the Trudeau dictums of economy in the Armed Forces, but now the cushions have run out and Don Macdonald is facing serious defence-money trouble.

On his first day in office, Don Macdonald pledged to keep Canada's military contribution to NATO at the level determined by the 1969 defence review. That comes out at about 6,000 troops in Germany, serving as a sort of shock reserve for the Allies in Europe.

Macdonald said the force would stay at the same strength, unless there were mutual force reductions agreed to by the West and the Russians, and I must say, the promise reassured me when I talked to him in his office.

You see, in 1969, Leo Cadieux agreed to a defence budget frozen at $1.8 billion for three years. It was part of the price of his convincing Cabinet that there should be a continuing Canadian military presence in NATO.

Mr. Cadieux felt he could go light on new equipment programs and still keep a minimum of 80,000 men in the services with the savings despite escalating costs. He was counting on the freeze being removed in 1972.

It's now doubtful that enough money can be saved by base closings and equipment postponements to keep the force at a strength of 80,000. Former defence minister Paul Hellyer says the Armed Forces scrapped the aircraft carrier HMCS Bonaventure because she was too expensive to run — not because there wasn't a use for her, and from what Mr. Cadieux had told me earlier, he's right.

Mr. Hellyer also claimed the CF-5 fighters that are rolling straight from production lines to mothballs are not being used for the same reason — we can't afford to use them. He appears to be right there, too.

So you can see the problem Don Macdonald faces. I'll bet my shirt that within a very few months in the defence portfolio he is doubly convinced that the Armed Forces of Canada are indeed an asset to this country — one we can't afford to lose.

If they've appeared less than that in the past, then much of the blame can be laid at the door of politicians who couldn't make up their minds.

Okay. Once Mr. Macdonald is sold — and he will be — then comes the fight for more funds, because it costs more and more money just to stay even in these days of inflation.

Don Macdonald, who once helped lead the Cabinet push to get Canada out of NATO militarily, will be fighting for a thaw in the budget freeze at Cabinet.

He'll be squirming to find ways of saving a buck in the operations of the forces, and he'll be scrambling to get Cabinet allies so a few more bucks can be pried out of the Treasury Board.

The fight won't be as hard for Don Macdonald as it was for Leo Cadieux, because Mr. Macdonald is a rising star in the Federal Liberal party who will doubtless move to bigger and better things in years to come.

Mr. Macdonald will have to cut some of the scanty programs left in the defence department, and from what he said, the knife is likely to fall on the North American Air Defence Command.

He wants to spend more money on the forces units designed to preserve Canadian sovereignty — particularly in the Arctic — and if he shows good faith by slashing where his priorities are lower, chances are he may be able to get the funds needed to preserve the services.

They are worth preserving, and all they need is a consistent policy and firm direction. There's a lot of betting that Don Macdonald is just the man to fill the bill. But if he's successful, it might not make him too popular with Pierre Trudeau.

Dingdong Denny Not Alone

Back at the turn of the century, baseball was more a sport than a business and the players were paid accordingly.

It was a time for the eccentrics, the fun-lovers and small salaries. With today's stress on profits by the owners, business has no place for the oddballs.

Dennis The Dummy, alias McLain, of the Detroit Tigers would have belonged 70 years ago, about the time George Edward (Rube) Waddell was fogging in strikes for the Philadelphia Athletics.

Waddell was a legend in his time. He had five flaming passions — fishing, drinking, tending bar, running after fires, and pitching. He never let the last one keep him from the first four.

Those who were there insist it is true that Waddell would leave the mound as soon as he heard a fire engine. And firewater often kept him from keeping his dates at the ball park.

If you think some of Denny McLain's antics today are unusual, Waddell would have made him look like a Sunday School teacher.

When Rube was having a good day, he would turn cartwheels from the mound to the bench at the end of each inning. If the As were making one of their exhibition swings through the smaller cities in order to make enough money to live through the winter, Waddell was the star. At Seelton, Pa., he called his team in and made them sit out the ninth inning. Then he had his catcher sit down and proceeded to strike out the three who faced him.

"Waddell pitched every game of a six-game series in Detroit in 1902," recalled the late Connie Mack, the only man who could handle The Rube. "I had to hang onto his uniform to stop him. In the sixth game, he called in the outfield. League rules kept the outfielders from leaving the field, so they squatted behind the infielders and watched the great man do his stuff."

For all his off-field antics, Denny McLain can hardly match Rube Waddell for showmanship. As eccentric as the Tiger righthander is, he is normal when the record is stacked against that of Waddell.

But there are many similarities. In 1967, the Tigers were heading for the American League pennant behind the pitching of McLain. Then one day in September he injured his toe, never to win again and never to start for 17 days. Detroit faded and Boston won the championship. Sports Illustrated said his toe was injured by a member of the Mafia who stomped on it to impress on McLain that his bookmaking operation owed some money to a gambler. The story, and later an investigation by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, led to McLain's half-season suspension this year.

In 1905, Waddell won 27 games to put the Athletics into the World Series against the Giants. But Rube wasn't able to pitch in the series. He hurt his shoulder falling over a pile of luggage in the railway car to New Work. He was trying to break the straw hat of a teammate at the time.

During seven years in the American League, Waddell fanned 1,801 — better than 250 per season, despite pitching only 10 times in two of the years.

But the Athletics tired of Waddell's antics. And from all accounts, the Tigers have had more than enough of Denny McLain.

His clubhouse prank of throwing ice water on two sportswriters wasn't the last straw. The truth came out at the recent hearings in New York when Commissioner Kuhn again suspended McLain for breaking his probation. For undisclosed reasons, McLain was caught carrying a gun. This, plus criticism in print of the Detroit management, meant the end for McLain in 1970.

And despite the fact that McLain won 31 games to lead Detroit to the World Series in 1968, you can be sure Dennis The Menace will be pitching in the National League next year.

Waddell's career was cut short at the age of 37 when he contracted tuberculosis after standing in icy water for several hours building a dike to save his town of Hickman, Ky. They said he had never grown up — he had control of everything but himself.

TWEEDSMUIR HISTORY BURATORS HELD WORKSHOP

The Curators of the Women's Institute Tweedsmuir Histories of North Grenville, Dundas and Stormont Counties, held a successful workshop in Williamsburg on Wednesday, September 30th, morning and afternoon. It was sponsored by the Dundas District Women's Institutes, convened by Mrs. Donald Hess, District Curator and conducted by Mrs. R.C. Walker of St. George, Ontario, Provincial Curator who was elected by the Ontario Department of Ag. and Food, Home Economics branch.

The compiling of these Histories was suggested by Lady Tweedsmuir in 1945 and now extends across Canada wherever W.I.'s are established. They are records and pictures of individuals and communities, showing achievements of rural and small town people from the early settlements of the present time. Each year more material is added to the books.

Mrs. Walker told the Curators and their assistants that material should be carefully classified under various headings, such as: W.I. officers and events, Community histories, Century farms, Industries, Family Trees, outstanding persons Schools, Churches, Organizations and clubs, Armed Forces and war work, Municipal affairs, Recreation etc.

Mrs. Walker explained that any farm that had been owned by a family for 100 or more years, at any time, qualified as a Century Farm, whether it was later sold or not.

Mrs. M.W. Locke thanked the speaker.

DENTAL -TOPICS-

Supplied by The Canadian Dental Association

Sometime between the ages of two and three years, a child should make his first visit to the dentist. It is vital that this visit should be a pleasant experience, for it will influence his attitude toward dental care for the rest of his life.

He should become familiar with the dentist, his office and equipment without fear. Parents should not talk about pain, but casually concentrate on the beneficial results to health and appearance. A child should be taught to consider the dentist a friend, not a boogyman or an instrument of punishment.

Tell the child what is to take place, but don't over-emphasize, which can arouse fear or suspicion. Do not deceive the child. Don't tell him he's going to visit Grandma, only to have him wind up wailing in the dentist's chair. Most dentists prefer to see children in early morning whey they are wide awake. Youngsters co-operate better when they are not tired. It is also the time when dentists are not too busy and more time can be spent with them.

If the dentist should invite you in the operating room, stay in the background. Don't instruct your child. The dentist knows what he wants and two voices are confusing. If the child becomes upset, the dentist may ask you to leave. If so, don't worry, children c a l m down more readily when parents are not around.

Brushing and cleaning of teeth should be taught early and be encouraged to become an accepted habit of cleanliness. As your child approaches the age of 6 years, he will be able to carry on this habit by himself. Regular visits to the dentists will result in fewer and smaller fillings, avoiding much pain for the child and higher dental bills for yourself.

Toronto writer Hugh Garner reads one of his own short stories, Step-And-A-Half, on Anthology, Oct. 10. It's been a while since Garner has had anything new on the bookshelves, but recently he's published two novels, The Sin Sniper, and A Nice Place To Visit. The Sin Sniper was dramatized for Theatre 10:30 and repeated on that series not too long ago. The week of Oct. 19, A Nice Place To Visit will be presented on Theatre 10:30, adopted and produced by actor-director Robert Christie. It's the story of a magazine writer who re-opens an old criminal case, only to find that he should have let well enough alone.

Sports fans may find themselves wondering which dial to turn on the week of Oct. 10 when the World Series begin. (They continue at least until Oct. 15.) On Oct. 11, the NRL season begins on CBC radio with two games going on. On the national net, the Montreal Canadiens meet the Philadelphia Flyers at Montreal; in Ontario only, The Toronto Maple Leafs play the newest entry into the NHL, the Vancouver Canucks, in Vancouver.

Vancouver crops up in two upcoming programs. On Soundings, Oct. 14, a program on mayor Tom Campbell and his war with the hippies, who have swarmed into the city this past summer. On Between Ourselves, Oct. 15, Granville Street: Main Street Canada West, zeroes in on the ten blocks of urban confusion known as Granville Street, haunt of businessmen, shoppers, street vendors and junkies.

A successor to the late James Bannerman, who introduced CBC Tuesday Night for so many years, has been named. He's Harry Adaskin, brother of John, and Murray, the composer. Adaskin is a violinist and professor emeritus of music at UBC. He's been both a performer and host on various music programs on radio. His first Tuesday Night program is Oct. 6.

Of all his works, his only opera Fidelio was Beethoven's favorite. It was written partly out of his disappointment over Napoleon's pursuit of power, and partly because of a large gap in his own personal life. The opera, in which a wife tries to save her husband from certain death, is Beethoven's special monument to humanitarian ideals. This rarely-performed work is being presented this season by the Canadian Opera Company, starring Anja Silja, soprano, Glade Peterson, tenor, and Chester Ludgin, baritone. One of the O'Keefe Centre performances has been taped for broadcast on CBC Tuesday Night, Oct. 13.

Because of the gradual withdrawal of Canadian Forces from NATO bases in West Germany, Radio CAE in Soest, operated by the Department of National Defence, will be closed down Oct. 18. For some years, the Armed Forces Service has provided radio and TV programs in French and English for Canadian servicemen and their dependents abroad, in the Canadian north and in Forces' ships at sea. Overseas stations are staffed in part by CBC employees on loan to the Dept. of Defence and their schedules include many CBC programs.

Canada Savings Bonds

An investment that grows and grows

7¾%
average annual interest to maturity

Canada Savings Bonds help you plan ahead—look to the future without worry. They're Canada's most popular personal investment.

Canada Savings Bonds are easy to buy for cash or on instalments, in amounts ranging from $50 up to $25,000.

Canada Savings Bonds are cold, hard cash—instantly. They can be redeemed any time at their full face value plus earned interest.

Canada Savings Bonds are safe—backed by all the resources of Canada. They're a very special security.

New Canada Savings Bonds yield an average of 7¾% a year when held to maturity.

Each $100 Bond begins with $6.75 interest for the first year, pays $7.75 interest for each of the next three years, and then pays $8.00 interest for each of the last seven years.

On top of this you can earn interest on your interest. You can make each $100 grow to $227.50 in just eleven years.

That's why we say, Canada Savings Bonds are good today, better tomorrow; an investment that grows and grows.

Right-hand repercussions

I am afraid that I have fallen back yet another step in my life work of trying to make a reputation as a big planner around the home.

The latest defeat involved a combination screen and storm door that we badly needed after the old-timer we had got broken last winter.

A few times when I'd be looking at them in stores, salesmen would lead me to displays which read: "Handymen! Install your own self-storing doors, and save $6.88!"

I'd mumble and scuff my feet. "Nothing to it!" the salesman would say. "All the directions are printed on the box!" But I'd just shake my head. I have installed enough wall brackets upside down in my time that although I'm not noticeably a modest man, I know one thing — that around the home, anything more complicated than digging post holes isn't really my line.

So eventually I went to the aluminum-door man in our community and asked him to come and have a look. He did. First we sat down and had a cup of coffee. We are both baseball fans. In the ensuing discussion I fired off so many opinions that I must have been over-confident of my own thinking powers by the time he asked, "By the way, do you want a left-hand or a right-hand door here?"

At first I thought he was kidding. Then I remembered hearing somewhere before about left-hand and right-hand doors on refrigerators, so why not on back doors, too?

"Better let me show you what I mean," he said.

So we went around to the door, which is in rather close quarters because of our garage. Narrow steps lead to a landing from which other steps lead down the other side and out into the back yard. The whole thing is so narrow that when a door is opened outward, no one more than three inches wide could stand on the landing safely.

"Depends on which way you get the most traffic," he said. "If you want it to be easier to get in or out from the front of the house, you'll want a right-hand door. If you want it to be easier to get in or out of the back yard, you'll want a left-hander."

This was in the spring. The backyard didn't seem terribly important then. For some reason I opted for making it easier to get in from the front, like when I carry parcels from the car.

"Better make it a right-hand," I said.

The first time I noticed a slight inconvenience in the new door was a day when the phone rang while I was in the back yard. I trotted up the steps, wrenched open the new door — and hit myself in the face.

I tried to squeeze around it, but I couldn't.

So I closed the door again, walked across the landing, down one step, turned around, opened the door and went in. By that time the phone had stopped ringing.

But the full stupidity of what I had done didn't hit me until the summer came, and the back-yard barbecuing and just-plain-sitting season began in earnest. I'm sure glad it's over now.

At first we just treated the door like a door. That is, when we'd be barbecuing there would be people trotting in and out more or less at random. People would meet on that little back landing, both with their hands full, and try to figure out how to cope with the door.

Finally we realized we needed a system. From then on, we would all assemble in the kitchen. Everyone had something to carry: Trays, food, plates, drinks, etc. We would form up in single file by the stove and walk out of the back door and down the steps toward the front of the house — until everyone was out and the last one let the door go shut.

Then, with a word from me, all hands would about turn. We would march back up the steps, across the landing, and into the back yard.

The only trouble was that while we were doing that, everyone would look once at the door, and then back at me. All I ever figured out to do was not meet their eyes.
