John Case, sports editor of the Watertown Times, says in his column: "Lois Mallen the City women's golf champion, is back from the State Women's Tuornament at Utica The local champion had nothing but praise for the manner in which the tournament was conducted. The only complaint Miss Mallen heard was the fact that the course was too difficult for a woman's State event.

SIMPLE NEEDS

I do not need abundant wealth and fame
To bring me happiness.
I only need to hear you speak my name
With love and tenderness.

I do not need to reach the highest peak
To have my dreams come true,
The sunlit valley 'neath the heights so bleak
Holds joy for me and you.

Let others yearn for flow'rs exotic, rare
That grow in far-off lands,
Wild roses casting fragrance on the air,
Bind me with perfumed strands.

'Mid all the tumult and the warlike schemes,
I'll cling to simple ways.
With trust in God Who knows my inmost dreams,
In peace I'll live my days.

THAT'S WORTH SOMETHING

With the high cost of feed presently prevailing, many farmers will agree that the little conversation quoted below, might be more fact than fancy.

Mo: "I heard you sold your pig".
Jo: "Yep, sold him today".
Mo: "What did you get for him?"
Jo: "Eight dollars".
Mo: "What did it cost you to raise him?".
Jo: "Wal, I paid $3 the pig and his feed cost $5".
Mo: "Didn't make much, did you"
Jo: "Nope, but I had his company all fall".

Riders for the Hoot-Owl Pool

by G. H. SHARP

CHAPTER SIX

Now the Hoot-Owl Pool men came with a rush, quitting their running horses. Hank Roberts slammed the door shut and stood with his back against it, his gun in his hand. His deep, unhurried voice halted the men.

"Easy, boys, I'm Sherifff Hank Roberts. There's a hell of a fight goin' on inside, but there ain't a chance for any man here to help. I'm deputizin' every man of you, regardless. Round up them Triangle snakes and hold 'em in the bunkhouse. Webb and Tex Jones is inside attendin' to a little personal matter. I'm holdin' this door, and one of you then guard the back door. Watch the windows. I got warrants for the arrest of Ab Abbot and Joe Blake and for every Triangle cowboy. Help me serve 'em legal and proper. Git at it, cowboys."

From out there in the darkness a voice spoke in a soft Texas drawl.

"And now I'm a deputy! I'll be damned. Sheriff, the drinks is on me. Let's go, you Hoot-Owl deputies!"

Perhaps that was a chuckle that escaped from the sheriff's bandaged lips. The man who had spoken was giving quick, efficient orders.

"Take to 'em cowboys. Round up them Triangle things and corral 'em. We're a-workin' for the law and workin' hard!"

From inside the house Hank Roberts could hear Webb Winter's voice.

"All right, Tex? Are yuh all right?"

"All . . . all right, pardner. I done—paid off Ed's debt. How you fixed?"

"Got the big hunk of meat hogtied and I'm settin' on his belly. Hurt any?"

But Tex's voice did not answer. Sheriff Hank Roberts shoved open the door.

"Find Mae, Hank. Find her!"

"Mae's safe, son."

"It's Hank, Webb. I'm strikin' a light."

Then the match in the sheriff's hand flared. Its flame lighted a spare lamp and there, in the yellow light Sheriff Hank Roberts looked at the wrecked room and the men who had wrecked it.

Joe Blake lay sprawled on his face, dead. Beside him lay the lanky Texan, a gun in his hand. He was breathing heavily and blood oozed from a bullet hole in his side.

On the floor lay Ab Abbot, senseless, an ugly welt over one eye. Webb Winters, blood-smeared, sat on the heavy paunch of the unconscious cattleman.

"He's yourn, Hank," said Webb.

Then handcuffs snapped on Abbot's thick wrists. Webb was bending over Tex. The Texan's eyes opened. A slow grin spread across his scarred face.

"I'm all right, pardner. Hell, this ain't nothin'! Just a scratch. I paid Ed Young's debt. When the work is done this fall I'll be lightin' out for Texas where Ed's sister is waitin' for me. Can you loan me the use of the makin's?"

Judge Anders was wearing a new black broadcloth suit. He sat there in his chair, grave, white-haired, sober. He was once more a judge.

Yesterday he had sentenced Ab Abbot and Chino to prison for life. But today he was serving in a different capacity.

The courtroom was packed with men, women, children. There were ranchers and their wives, ranchers who represented the Scissor-Bill Pool. At the rear of the courtroom were cowboys who had ridden with the Hoot-Owl Pool. Tex Jones looked uneasy as he stood there, next to Webb Winters. Webb, holding the hand of Kathleen Mavourneen Murphy. Sheriff Hank Roberts stood beside her, his leathery face wrinkled with a faint grin.

"And so," finished Judge Anders, "I pronounce you man and wife."

Gravely his eyes bright with unshed tears, Judge Anders kissed the bride. Then he gripped the hand of the new owner of the Triangle. Sheriff Hank Roberts was next to kiss the bride.

"And now," he said, "we'll head for the schoolhouse. And if them fiddlers don't play till sun-up tomorrow, we'll hang 'em. And you Hoot-Owl Pool men, listen. The town is yourn. Take care of it. Judge, lead the way!"

THE END

Her System

A salesman was trying to sell the young wife an egg timer.

"Your husband's eggs will be just right if you use this," he assured her.

"But I don't need it," she answered, brightly. "Jack likes his eggs the way I do them. I just look through the window at the traffic lights and give them three reds and two greens."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Sane thinking is just about impossible this week end — or even thinking! You see we are suffering from an influx of the younger generation—and when six young people get together in one house there is never a dull moment, especially when two of them are newly engaged and become the target of all the ribbing the other four can think up. Added to that another of the party is celebrating a birthday so there had to be a "suitable" present "appropriately" wrapped. So there you have it, friends, and if anything I say appears to be without rhyme or reason you will know who is responsible. Right at this moment there is a lull in activities around the house as the young folk have, I believe, departed in quest of a swim. Partner is having his forty winks so it seemed like a good time to at least get this column started.

This is one of the few nice weekends we have had this summer—neither too hot nor too cool, and a nice breeze blowing. May it so continue for there is work aplenty that will be helped or hindered according to the whim of the weather. The wheat is ripening fast and will possibly be ready to cut sometime this week. So we are back again to that perennial worry . . . fear that hail, wind or heavy rain will knock it flat before the binder gets into it. Last Thursday, for instance, in some districts there was a short, sharp storm and wheat was flattened here and there. No extensive damage but enough black sky to create that same fear as we watched the black ominous clouds roll up . . . and then came that spirit of thankfulness after the storm when we found the wheat had not been harmed and the spring crop still bobbed and billowed in airy waves with the decreasing winds.

It was well the storm did die down because I had arranged to meet my sister-in-law at Bronte as she wanted me to go with her to hunt up an artist in that district who specializes in textile printing.

It was fine when I left home but as I waited for the bus another storm blew up—the sky got darker every minute. Finally down came the rain. All I could do was sit in the car hoping the wind would not get strong enough to carry us both away. It was an awful storm—hail, rain, thunder and lightning. Probably I have seen worse storms but never have I been out in one quite so bad. Eventually it blew over and my sister-in-law and I set out to find Mrs. Elizabeth Hoey. And what an interesting visit that was! Mrs. Hoey specializes in hand-blocked drapes, which she designs, dyes and prints herself. Her work is exquisite in both colour and design. There was a very good write-up in the Family Herald last spring featuring her work—no doubt many of you read it. But reading about it is one thing and seeing is another. Mrs. Hoey is very young to have accomplished so much in such a short time—and always there are new designs in the making. Some mothers find it hard with youngsters around to keep up with even ordinary work — but Mrs. Hoey does all this and her art work too. She has two lively, adorable little girls, two and four years old—— just another work of art you might say—although I imagine her husband contributed his share just as he also helps his wife with her block printing during the weekends.

Maybe not many of us could afford drapes such as Mrs. Hoey makes—even though her charge is actually very reasonable. However, if you really want something original and have difficulty in finding drapes that are just right for your living room Mrs. Hoey has the answer. Yes, I mean that, because you just choose any design she has on hand and she will make it up in any colour scheme you desire. Or for an additional charge she will even make you an exclusive design featuring anything you have in mind. If you are musically inclined then Mrs. Hoey could design your drapes with fiddles and bows, music scores or 'cellos. She might even throw in a few grand pianos for good measure and the effect would still be artistic. Or you may be fond of poetry and would like The Song My Paddle Sings interpreted in your drapes and slip-covers. Then Elizabeth Hoey would be the girl to do it . . . and that theme would please her because she likes to specialize in art designs that are exclusively Canadian. And for wedding presents that are different Mrs. Hoey has place mats in sets of four, or two, with table napkins to match. They wouldn't do for me because I would be inclined to shove my plate to one side rather than have the place mat hidden from view.

This, of course, isn't meant to be "sales talk." I just wanted to bring to your attention one more Canadian of whom we may well be proud.

ARE WE CANADIANS THE WORLD'S WORST CAR-DRIVERS?

Canada is in the middle of the grimmest chapter in the 1950 edition of "Highway Homicide."

It began July 1 with the holiday weekend and goes through until Labor Day. This is the period when our highways are crowded and death and injury ride with the careless, thoughtless, discourteous, the stupid and those who are just unlucky—and all their unfortunate victims.

What will the pages of this grisly chapter tell? Will it be as shocking as last year:

—An estimated 2,200 killed (1,584 in 1939).
—50,000 injured and maimed (25,104 in 1939).
—$50 millions in property damage.
—28 accidents per 1,000 cars (16.2 in 1939).
—Slightly more than 10 persons killed for every million miles travelled.

This last item is the real shocker. It makes Canadians the world's most dangerous drivers, not the Americans, as most people believe. Their ratio of deaths was 7.7 in 1948.

This years grim statistics are now in the making: in the screech of skid'ding tires; the crunch of tons of flying metal and glass coming together; the long pitiful parade to the hospital operating room.

Chances are the 1950 toll will be even greater than 1949. The record so far seems to indicate this. Accidents in Ontario, for example, are up 34 per cent over 1949 up to the end of March. Fatalities were lower in the first quarter but were up substantially in May.

If these deathly statistics are too impersonal to register, maybe you can be impressed through your pocketbook.

In these days of sudden highway death, the wise motorist has adequate insurance. And insurance rates go hand-in-hand with the frequency and seriousness of accidents.

Just a quick look shows what's happened.

If you have a popular make car and use it for pleasure, your bill for basic insurance this year will read something like this:

$31.64 for public liability ($25,000-$50,000 and property damage $2,000)
$39 for collision ($50 deductible)
$7 for fire and theft.
$1.11 for passenger hazard (in case a passenger in your car is hurt)

The total: $88.85.

Ten years ago, relatively the same protection cost $48.90..

Here's a comparison showing the increase percentagewise in each category. Note the big advance in collision rates.

	1939	1950	Increase
P.L. & P.D. (standard cover)	$27.70	$28.00	1.08%
Collision full	87.00	103.00	18.39%
Collision $25 ded.	31.60	44.00	39.24%
Collision $50 ded.	18.70	39.00	108.55%
Collision $100 ded.	8.80	23.00	161.36%
Fire and Theft ...	4.55	7.00	53.84%
Total	100%	125.4%	25.4%

This increased cost reflects two factors: more accidents and costlier ones. Everything connected with automobiles is higher; original price, repairs, taking a dent out of a crumpled fender; claims for personal injury.

Take some basic costs:

	1939	1949
Chev. Stylemaster (Toronto)	$1.100	$2.100
Replace new front fender	27.39	46.95
Replace new radiator grill	17.79	50.41

Where it really hurts is comparing these costs with 1939.

In that $50.41 to replace a bashed in grill is $41.20 for the new part. The rest is for four hours labor. The 1939 cost of $17.79 for the same job included $13.70 for the new grill and $4.09 for 1.9 hours labor.

Besides paying higher labor costs, it's taking longer to get work done. This is indicated by the increase in time to replace the grill and also a fender; from 3.6 hours in 1939 to 4.3 hours last year.

Overall, car repair costs are 65 per cent higher than they were in 1939.

But repair bills are not the only item that make accidents more costly.

The average claim for personal injury ((and property damage) is 48 per cent higher. This means higher doctor's fees, hospital costs, the amount of pay lost by an auto victim, All have risen through the years.

Then, too, the number of claims have jumped tremendously: around 350 per cent over 1939 against an increase of 200 per cent in the volume of insurance busness.

And unless Canadian motorists themselves do something about their driving habits, most of these figures will keep rising.

—From The Financial Post.

I didn't accuse anyone of cheating: I just said I hoped they would play the hands I had dealt them.

DID YOU "NUGGET" YOUR SHOES THIS MORNING?

TABLE TALKS

by Jane Andrews.

Back in June or thereabouts I passed on to you instructions for a basic biscuit mix, and one for a muffin mix, together with some recipes that made use of these time-and-work-saving preparations. These, as I told you, had been prepared by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, in the interests of better and easier home cooking.

Since then a leading packing house has developed, after four years of work in its test kitchens, a basic homemade pastry mix. Literally hundreds of recipes were analyzed to find the basic formula. Ten minutes or less spent in properly combining the four ingredients will result in a convenient "make-your-own" mix that is always fresh, and you will find a real help in preparing pastry, cream puffs, biscuits, desserts and dozens of other delicacies.

These points were found important for best results.

Combine the rich, creamy shortening with all-purpose flour and double-acting baking powder.

Use standard measuring cups and spoons.

In using the mix, spoon it into the cup. Do not sift it or pack it in.

* * *

Remove eggs and milk from refrigerator or other cool place 5 or 10 minutes before using in cakes. If the batter is at room temperature, the cake will be better.

Use the right-sized pans.

Note the right baking temperature.

If half a recipe is made, be sure to divide every ingredient in half.

These recipes are for all-purpose flour as used in the East and Mid-west. If you use soft wheat flour, popular in some parts, use less milk or other liquid—2 tablespoons less for each cup called for in the recipe.

If you use self-rising flour, omit the baking powder and salt in the Make-Your-Own Mix.

High altitude baking requires a reduction in the baking powder and sugar used in most recipes. But these recipes are low in sugar, so baking powder probably is the only ingredient which must be changed according to the altitude.

Keep the Make-Your-Own Mix in a closed canister or can in the pantry. It doesn't have to be kept in the refrigerator.

* * *

MAKE-YOUR-OWN MIX

2 cups shortening
9 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon salt*
¼ cup (4 tablespoons) double-acting baking powder

Combine sifted flour, salt and baking powder. Stir well. Sift into large bowl (or large pan or onto heavy paper.) Add shortening. Use finger tips or pastry blender to distribute shortening throughout dry ingredients until mixture resembles coarse corn meal. The Make-Your-Own Mix is now ready to use or store in a closed canister on your pantry shelf.

*1½ to 2 tablespoons salt may be used.

CHOCOLATE BROWNIES

1½ cups Make-Your-Own Mix (do not pack)
1 cup sugar
1 cup chopped pecans
2 eggs, well beaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 squares (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled

Blend mix, sugar, and pecans. Add eggs, vanilla and chocolate. Mix thoroughly. Turn into a shallow pan (7 x 11 inches), well greased. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 22 minutes. Cut into squares before removing from pan.

FROSTED CHOCOLATE DROP COOKIES

1½ cups Make-Your-Own Mix (do not pack)
½ cup sugar
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled
3 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

Blend mix and sugar. Add egg and beat well. Stir in chocolate, milk and vanilla. Drop from teaspoon on baking sheet 2 inches apart. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 10 minutes. Cool. Spread with frosting. Makes 18 to 20 large cookies.

CORNED BEEF HASH DUMPLINGS

3 cups Make-Your-Own Mix (do not pack)
¾ cup milk
2 cups (1 can) corned beef hash
Catsup

Combine mix and milk to make a biscuit dough. Turn out on waxed paper. Knead 6 times. Roll out dough on lightly floured pastry cloth or board to 12 x 18-inch rectangle. Cut into 6 squares. Place large spoonful or slice of hash in centre of each square. Top each with a teaspoon of catsup. Bring corners of dough up over hash. Press edges together and secure with a toothpick. Bake on baking sheet in hot oven, at 450 degrees F. 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings. For 3 servings, use 1½ cups mix, ⅓ cup milk, 1 cup corned beef hash and catsup.

CREAM PUFFS

1 cup Make-Your-Own Mix (do not pack)
¾ cup boiling water
2 eggs

Add mix to boiling water in saucepan. Stir over low heat about 1 minute until dough is smooth, follows the spoon, and forms into a ball. Remove from heat immediately. Add eggs one at a time, stirring and beating until mixture is blended. Beat vigorously. Drop by spoonfuls on baking sheet. Bake in hot oven 15 minutes. Then reduce heat and bake in moderate oven 20 minutes more. Let stand in warm oven (with door open) about 10 minutes to dry out. When baking temperature is at 450 degrees F., bake 15 minutes. When baking temperature is at 350 degrees F., bake 20 minutes. Makes 5 large puffs. For 5 medium puffs use ½ cup mix, ⅓ cup water and 1 egg.

Suspicious

A talkative old man was delivering quite a lecture on speedy travel to the young man whom he shared a compartment.

"Yes, we travel fast these days," he said. "But have you ever thought of the flight of time—of the fleeting hours of youth, the golden days that swiftly pass away? Have you ever counted the minutes—?"

"Look here," said the young man, suspiciously, "I don't quite get the hang of this. Are you trying to sell me a watch?"

SOLEMN THOUGHT

Rich Mr. X was showing a friend around his tremendous estate:

Visitor (murmuring): "Beautiful lawn."

Mr. X (complacently): "Ought to be. Had the whole thing brought here as sod at $100 a square foot."

Visitor: "And those trees. I've never seen more perfect specimens." Cost me $2,000 each."

Mr. X: "Had them transplanted."

Visitor (sighing meditatively): "Ah, what God could have done if He'd had all your money!"

The GREEN THUMB

by Gordon Smith

A lawn can be built up without being remade and a renovation program may often be far more practical than digging up your old turf.

The home owner who follows a careful program of seeding the lawn, feeding it and controlling weeds can have better-than-average turf at the annual cost of a couple of tankfuls of gasoline. It frequently is not necessary to dig up and rebuild the turf completely. However, the gardener cannot expect to produce this prize-winning expanse of grass in a single year; it will take three or four.

A lawn-improvement campaign should get under way about Aug. 1, rather than in spring or early summer. But first it is advisable to have the soil analyzed by an Experiment Station or testing laboratory, such as those the larger lawn seed companies operate. This will indicate the type of soil, need for lime and so on.

To obtain a sample from the lawn for a soil test, a plug of sod four inches square and five to six inches deep is dug with a sharp trowel. It is then wrapped securely so it will reach the laboratory in the form in which it was taken from the ground. Where a lawn does not exist but one is contemplated, a pint of loose soil is dug up in bulk and sent.

* * *

Early in August crabgrass should be removed from the lawn, or at least further growth stopped so that this year's crop will not produce viable seeds. This may be done by using the dry crystals of a crabgrass-control compound. A double rate application of this is recommended because the crabgrass will be rather tough at this time. Several materials, to be applied either as a dust or a spray, are now on the market for the control of crabgrass.

* * *

In ten days or so, the spreader is used again to apply a combination of fertilizer and weed-control compound. This will wither and destroy the broadleaved weeds, such as dandelion, plantain, buckthorn and chickweed.

Toward the end of August, the lawn mower is set to cut as closely as possible. In fact, the grass should be literally scalped at this time. Then the clippings are removed and the spreader used again; this time to apply lawn food at the rate of 20 pounds per 1,000 square feet. It is put on just prior to seeding any bare patches.

Before sowing seed ,the topsoil is loosened to provide a roughened surface that will catch the seed. The decaying plants of crabgrass and other weeds will help provide a lodging place for the seed and entrance channels for the fine roots that will develop on seedlings.

* * *

The soil test report will suggest the type of a seed that should be sown. For a light sandy soil that needs lime to offset its acid content (the type so often found) the seed mixture might be 65 to 70 per cent Kentucky Bluegrass, 15 to 20 per cent Poa trivialis, 10 to 15 per cent Highland Bentgrass. Such a mixture would contain about three million seeds per pound hence the economical rate of 2 pounds per 1,000 square feet would be adequate.

* * *

The lawn spreader is then set for the two-pound rate and the turf gone over in one direction only. The seed is stirred into the ground by using the flexible steel drag and the area kept watered until the grass is well established. A sandy soil need not be watered heavily, for the coarse particles do not hold much moisture and the excess drains away. However, it is necessary to water frequently—preferably twice a day in the early stages of growth.

* * *

For the rest of the season, whenever the lawn reaches one and a half inches, grass is cut to a height of about one inch. It is all right to let the clippings fall unless they are so heavy that they mat the young grass. Leaves should be raked up regularly so that they won't smother patches of seedlings.

* * *

A few words of caution. Don't make the mistake of thinking it necessary to remove and cart away sandy, weedy sod before embarking on a lawn-building program. There's valuable humus in old sod, poor as it may be, and this can be saved by turning it under.

* * *

This is a basic program for lawn renovation that is good for almost any part of the country. A smooth green carpet of turf is possible on sandy soil, as well as in the richer soils of more fortunate gardening areas.

HOW CAN I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove mildew?

A. If the spots are small, potassium permanganate and oxalic acid will remove them. If the entire article is mildewed, try bleaching it in one cup of Javelle to one quart of water for 10 minutes; then wash and rinse thoroughly.

Q. How can I sweeten a soured sponge?

A. Rub a fresh lemon thoroughly into the sponge and then rinse several times in lukewarm water. It will become as sweet as when new.

Q. How can I remove dandruff from the scalp?

A. A good remedy is to rub pure olive oil thoroughly into the scalp every night before retiring. Also shampoo the hair every two weeks and rinse well in cold water.

Q. How can I enclose postage stamps with a letter if there is no oiled paper at hand in which to wrap them?

A. Attach them by a small spot in the center of the stamp, leaving the glue around the edges untouched.

Q. How can I store eggs?

A. Eggs can be packed for keeping as follows: Dip the eggs in a solution of two ounces gum arabic to a pint of cold water. Let them dry, and then pack in powdered, well-burned charcoal.

Q. How can I prevent new tinware from rusting?

A. Rub the new tin vessel thoroughly with lard; the heat it in the oven, before using it, and it will never rust.

Q. How can I remove the odor of paraffin from a dish or plate?

A. By rubbing it thoroughly with vinegar.

Q. How can I remove small spots from white ties, gloves, jabots, and similar articles?

A. Keep a little French chalk on hand for this purpose. Rub a little chalk on the spot, allow it to remain for a day or two, then brush off.

Q. How can I keep gold teeth clean?

A. One of the best ways is to rub the teeth with a mixture of prepared chalk and powdered pumice, sprinkled on the toothbrush.

When Shakespeare Went To School

The Hornbook was a slab of wood on which a page full of letters had been fastened and which was covered with a thin, transparent sheet of horn to protect it from grubby small fingers. Countless generations of children had learned to read clutching the handle of a hornbook and William Shakespeare could hardly have been an exception. . . .

Shakespeare learned to form his letters in the way all the little boys in rural districts formed them. The new Italian hand, which corresponds roughly to the modern way of writing, had made great headway in court and city circles, but the medieval way of writing, the one called the secretary hand, was still being used in the country. Some of Shakespeare's fellow-dramatists, like George Peele, used the new Italian way of writing; some of them, like Thomas Kyd and George Chapman, used both fashions interchangeably, and at least one of them, Ben Jonson, worked out an efficient compromise between the two. The few signatures which are all that remain of Shakespeare's writing are done in the old-fashioned secretary hand.

As soon as he could read and write and knew his Catechism, young Wiliam Shakespeare was ready to enter Stratford grammar school. He was the son of one of the most prominent men in Stratford, but he received the same education that was democratically open to every boy in town and there was no charge for the instruction.

—Marchette Chute, in "Shakespeare of London."

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Should a man remove his hat in an elevator?

A. It is not considered necessary any more for a man to remove his hat in a business elevator. In elevators in apartments, hotels and clubs, men remove their hats, but in elevators in office buildings and stores they usually do not. These elevators are usually crowded and it is difficult for a man to put up his arm and take off his hat.

Q. Is 'Dear Sirs" considered a proper salutation to a business letter?

A. No; the term "Gentlemen" should be used. Of course, if the business letter is addressed to an individual, then "Dear Sir" is quite correct.

Q. When a man takes a woman to dinner, should he give her order to the waiter before giving his own?

A. Yes, always.

Q. Is it proper to use a piece of bread as a "pusher" in order to take up items from the plate more easily on the fork?

A. No; this is ill-mannered. It is permissible, however to hold the knife in the left hand, holding the edge down, and use it as a barrier against which the fork may pick up the articles of food more easily.

Q. Are the invitations to a home wedding usually limited?

A. Yes; usually to relatives and very close friends. Announcements are sent in place of wedding invitations to acquaintances not invited to the wedding.

Q. When walking with a woman who is carrying an umbrella, should a man offer to hold it for her?

A. Yes.

Q. Is anything at all written on the inner envelope enclosing a formal wedding invitation?

A. Only the names of those to whom you are mailing the invitation—no address. This envelope is then placed in the second, or outer, envelope which is sealed and addressed.

Q. When introducing a relative, is it proper to use the possessive pronoun and mention the relationship?

A. Yes, this is perfectly proper. One may say, "My father, my mother, my sister, my uncle."

Q. If a divorcee retains her husband's surname, how should she be known?

A. By her given name, her family name and her married name, as, "Mrs. Mary Brown Williams."

Q. Is an engagement ring an absolute essential of any engagement?

A. No; the validity of an engagement is not based whatsoever on the ring. It is only the marriage service that requires a ring.

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

Swimmers of a dozen nations gathered round the palatial new pool at Wembley, England. It was the day of the Empire Games swimming meet—a day slated for its full share of surprises.

The Canadian swimmers—overlooked by the experts—first scored an upset in the women's events, taking four wins. Next the men's 100 yard free style fell to Canada . . . climaxed by four relay victories. The team of 1934 had swept the board for Canada's first Empire swimming triumph!

Close teamwork has won many firsts for Canadian sportsmen. And sportsmanship, with teamwork, can help you, too—in work and play. Together they keep your scope for opportunity in Canada . . . unlimited.

Have They No Seoul?

Now that we have to keep an ear glued to the radio again—this time to keep up with what's going on in Korea — we have become acutely conscious that military, political and ideological matters are not the only problems concerning Seoul.

Now Seoul is a nice word for writing—short, snappy, fine for headlines, easy to produce on a typewriter and generally not in the same league with a word like Pyongyang. But saying Seoul is something else again, and in the brief time thus far in which radio announcers have had to wrestle with it, it has come out See-ule, Sole, Sule, and no doubt several other things. . . .

Extensive research—in three dictionaries—only confirms our previous opinion that lexicographers aren't as authoritative as they're cracked up to be. The American College Dictionary (handy desk, or paper weight, size) recommends Sah-ool, with the oo as in book. Or, alternatively, Syoeool, which monstrosity it claims is the Korean way of pronouncing it.

However, Webster's New International (Second Ed. Unabr., Regular Style, Weight 16½ lbs.) holds out from its authoritative eminence for Se-ool, with the e as in end and the oo as in either fool or book. But proving that Webster's right hand knows not what its left is doing, Webster's Geographical Dictionary righteously advises Sole, or still another, Sah-ule, and makes no mention at all of Se-ool.

That makes six approved versions so far, and leaves the poor radio announcer with nothing to do except try to duck the issue, which is what Webster's Geographical Dictionary does anyway by hiding the whole thing under Keijo (Kajo). It adds, however, that Kyongsong is perfectly all right, too.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I feel like packing up and leaving. I see no future living with a man who doesn't want a home and children. We've been married five years, and we have neither.

"My husband doesn't stay with a job; he's always looking for another one. He never saves a nickel for the future. Everything he makes he keeps in his billfold, never makes a bank deposit. He even sold his interest in a business, and now just works there by the day.

"He gets angry at any little thing, and goes home to his mother . . . the last time, he was gone three days. When I took him back, he cried like a baby. He said he'd never do it again; that he wanted a home and children, and to prove his love he'd even join my church.

"Since that time, he has never mentioned any of these things!

"Except for these outbursts, he never fusses. He is easy to get along with, and is kind. I just don't understand him.

"When my Daddy died, he left us enough to buy a house. I still have that money.

"I am getting tired of putting up with all this uncertainty. What shall I do? We are both 25.

MRS. J. R."

* Five years ago, you married your husband because you loved him, and because you wanted a home and children. He married you because he loved you—but apparently he thought no further into the future than wanting to make sure you were his own.

* Companionship is not enough to keep most women content. They want a home and children growing up around them. They want a husband they can depend upon.

* For all this you have waited five long years, and with every renewed hope you have seen your dreams brushed aside.

* Your husband knows you want this normal life. When you took him back, he vowed it would be yours—

* Yet he has not set aside a dime to make your dreams come true. He has given up a sound investment for day-work. He does not stay long enough in one position to get ahead. He is never contented, always wishing for the moon.

* In other words, he shirks responsibility. Tell your husband that you want him to start saving regularly, a part of what he earns. And that when he has proven that he can and will, you will invest your inheritance in a home, and plan to raise a family. If he does not want this, now is the time to say so. It is time that he settled down, time he became the stable partner in your plans. If he will not, then your marriage is not the marriage you want. * * *

A man will promise anything to persuade the girl he loves to become his wife. It is HOW he keeps his word that matters . . . Tell your troubles to Anne Hirst, and get the benefit of her wisdom. Address her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

War Canoe, Maybe?

The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests says that a question often put to its rangers is: "Is there such a thing as an ideal list of groceries adequate for a two week canoe trip?"

There are so many complications that the rangers, accustomed to making long wilderness treks, hesitate to answer it. But the department says that one list suggested for two persons on a two week canoe trip—provided that fish will provide the bulk of at least one of each three meals a day—is:

"Flour, 20 pounds; baking powder half pound; cereals, 10 pounds; granulated sugar, 10 pounds; table salt, two pounds; pepper, one can; whole milk powder, three pounds; white navy beans, seven pounds; bacon, seven pounds; tea, one pound; coffee (concentrated), two jars; dried fruit, 10 pounds; shortening or lard, three pounds; canned butter, three pounds; sweet chocolate, three pounds; maple syrup, one quart; potatoes, onions or fresh fruit, as desired."

Essential cooking utensils are:

"'Medium sized double boiler; frying pan; coffee pot; saucepan; light wire broiler; can opener; folding reflecting baker; large spoon; cake or egg turner; butcher knife; kettle; deep pot with swinging wire handle; plates, cups, cutlery, etc."

Did you say two people?

Did you say a canoe?

SPORTS
by A SIXBIT CRITIC

This is a world of disillusion, and somebody is always coming along and kicking the living whey out of our pet beliefs. First thing we know we're going to lose faith in Santa Claus.

* * *

We knew, on the evidence of James L. Sutherland and other residents of the beautiful Limestone City, that Kingston was the birthplace of hockey, and the only fitting place for a shrine dedicated to the world's fastest sport. Then, somebody ups and proves that the sport was invented in some entirely different spot—the leading contestants for the honor, at present writing being Montreal, Quebec, Halifax, Nova Scotia, and Nijni Novgorod, Russia, with several polling-places still to be heard from.

* * *

That Abner Doubleday and his playmates down in Cooperstown, N.Y. were responsible for the boon of the world's greatest sport—to wit, baseball (as if you had to be told). But, as reported here recently, some iconoclast has gone and discovered that the beastly English were even CALLING it "baseball" long before we folks on this side of the pond had any sport outside of trying to save our scalps.

* * *

And so it goes. Up to a week or so ago we innocently thought that gambling was gambling, no matter whether it was shooting crap in an alley or plunging on the Red at Monte Carlo, or if you did it at nine a.m. or 11 p.m. But live and learn; so we discover, on the authority of Mr. George McCullagh's esteemed Globe and Mail that the Pari Mutuel machines, that are quite O.K. at Woodbine, Dufferin and other tracks where Mr. McC. races his Thoroughbreds, would turn into "iron pickpockets" if they were in operation under floodlights at Thorncliffe Raceway. (Railway claims agents used to say the quickest way to improve the breed of cattle was to cross a common cow with a C.P.R. freight. Some sort of reverse action seems to be the case here—the quickest way to turn The Sport of Kings into a "sucker game" is to cross a Mutuel Machine with a Trotter or Pacer.)

* * *

All of which is a lead-up to our latest piece of disillusionment, and it is, if we may be pardoned for using such an expression, a honey. In all probability everybody in the English-speaking world that can read words of more than two letters knows that, back on an October afternoon in 1932, the great Babe Ruth, in a World Series game vs. the Chicago Cubs, pointed to the exact spot on the outfield fence where he was going to park a four-bagger, and then did just exactly that very thing.

* * *

In fact there's a High School history book entitled THE MAKING OF MODERN AMERICA that has already been adopted as a basic textbook in certain Academies of Learning south of the border. And as the students avidly pore through the textbook, accepting it as Gospel we hope, one of the "historic" pictures shows The Babe making that gesture, before gaping thousands.

* * *

But, according to a certain Mr. Root, the only drawback to this pretty tale is that it didn't happen. And Charley Root should know, if anybody living does, because he was the Chicago pitcher off whose servings The Bambino took his helping. From now on the tale is Charley Root's, as reported by Bill Bryson in the Des Moines Register.

* * *

Charley gritted his teeth so hard you could hear them grating upon his cigar holder.

* * *

"All right," he snapped. "I'll answer that once more — just once. But the next time anybody asks me about it, I'm going to turn and walk away. I'm sick and tired of it.

* * *

"So, once and for all—Ruth did not point at the fence before he swung. If he'd made a gesture like that—well, anybody who knows me knows that Babe would have wound up on his posterior.

* * *

"Sure, he was making gestures at our bench. We were really riding the Yankees that series—and they were digging the spurs into us, too. We called each other everything we could think of.

* * *

"With Babe up, our bench was giving him the business. They razzed him about that first strike and then about the second.

"He held up one finger and then two to show 'em he knew what the count was.

* * *

"You know, Babe had a habit of swinging his bat out at full length with his right hand before every pitch. He'd pull it back and take his two-handed grip.

* * *

"Maybe that's what gave somebody the idea he'd motioned toward the fence. But he certainly didn't point.

* * *

"There wasn't a single newspaper account next day saying Ruth had pointed. The legend didn't get started till sometime later. And it's sure got twisted around.

* * *

"Another thing — if Babe had 'called' that shot, they certainly would have used it in the movie of his life. But they couldn't find anybody to verify it—not even Ruth —and they didn't dare use it."

* * *

Charley removed the ash from his cigar with a vicious jab.

* * *

"And that," he said grimly, "is the last time I'm going through that. The book is closed."

Parting Shot

The steps up to the railway platform were steep, and this, added to the weight of the bag, caused the fat man to pant.

"Carry your bag, sir?" asked a small boy.

"No; get out of my way," came the answer, between gasps.

The lad persisted, however, and made the stout one so angry that he snapped his second refusal with a force that was not to be questioned.

"Well, can I hold your breath, sir?" jeered the lad as he bolted.

CIGARETTE TOBACCO

WITH ROD & GUN

By C. E. W.

Ontario anglers - and visitors too, are passing up a fishing thrille by ignoring the possibilities of panfish such as the rockbass, sunfish, crappies and others which are plentiful in the sun-warmed waters of the Province's lakes and streams.

Caught on a light line and slender rod, the panfish, especially when full grown, can often put up as good a battle as game fish of an equal size and "taste just as good in a frying pan".

More than that, when a sportsman spends time fishing for sunfish, crappies or rockbass he is giving the game fish a better chance for survival by removing competitors for food. Some lakes and streams, like farm pastures, can only accomodate so much stock, therefore by cleaning out the coarse fish, we provide just that much more food for the game fish. Of course, it is impossible, because of the size of Ontario and the tremendous number of lakes in the Province, to do the same thing in all of them.

In the meantime anglers could assist to keep fish populations more evenly balanced by trying, or rediscovering the sport of panfishing.

Your local Fish and Game Association was instrumental recently in the releasing of 50 pheasants. These birds, if unmolested, will greatly increase in number over a period of years. Prior and during the recleasing of these birds your association received splendid co-operaation from the Fish and Wildlife Division, Department of Lands and Forests.

Just a note to non-members of the Morrisburg Fish and Game Protective Assocation. The above paragraph is just one of our many aims that have been accomplished. Even though we have a good membership there is always room for you, to assist us in our attempts to make the hunting and fishing better in this area.

Last week, it was suggested that anyone willing to accomodate visiting hunters and their dogs in the open season for hungarian partridge should get intouch with the secretary of the Morrisburg Fish and Game Protective Association. To date only one person has communicated with him. This open season is expected this fall, and it is also expected that there will be quite an influx of hunters, particularly in the area between Williamsburg, Chesterville and Winchester.

Field officers of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests who are stationed along Lake Huron and the North Channel have been requested to be on the lookout for sea lampreys bearing celluloid tags.

Tagging of the eel-like creatures is being undertaken by the United States Department of the Interior, Fish and Wildlife Service as an experiment to obtain further information on the sea lamprey which destroys game and commercial fish in Canadian and U. S. waters.

The tags are described as being small celluloid buttons, red on one side and white on the other and bearing numbers and other printing. They are inserted below and ahead of the lamprey's dorsal fins. Later on the experimenters may be using other type tags which will appear on the front edge of the first dorsal fin.

Around the Home...

TOM GARD'S NOTE BOOK

One of the most distressing scenes at this time of year is a lawn burned to a crisp. True, some home owners are able to keep their lawns green throughout the summer but they are in the minority. Soil fertility is as important in this struggle to keep grass green as the amount of water applied. People who make a lawn on a two-inch layer of good soil are only asking for trouble. Money spent to prepare a deep seed bed before the seed is sown will save heavy annual payments for fertilizers in the years to come. A friend of mine placed a two-inch layer of peat under six inches of rich top soil and has never had to worry about watering his lawn. In case you are struggling with a poor lawn, you will find the lawn spike illustrated a valuable asset.

Garden Tables

I visited a classmate of mine last week who had just moved out to the wide open spaces. I envy all the room he will have to employ his gardening skill. The thing that really caught my eye was a huge mill stone he plans to mount on a cement base for a garden table. This relic of the past will still be giving service generations hence. Much smaller stones can be procured and used equally well. Also illustrated is a wooden table built on a barrel; you will find it easy to make. One of the most effective garden tables I have ever seen was made from the marble top of an old-fashioned tea-room table placed on a 12 inch cement drainage tile, partially buried in the ground to make it solid. The whole thing had not cost a cent to assemble as the table top was rescued from a dump and, unbeknown to the proper authorities, the township contributed the tile.

Garden Fences

A fence can be a friendly thing as I have just found out. My neighbour and I have finally taken time to sit down and plan the building of a new one between us. Now that we have progressed past the nodding acquaintance stage, I'm certain we will be spending many hours together.

FARMERS - ATTENTION

WANTED: A limited number of progressive farmers in Eastern districts who would like to set out a commercial block of Red Raspberries, either for your local trade or for shipping to an olld established Montreal dealer.

To encourage a limited planting of new high yielding patches, a well known nursery is sending a special representative of many years experience in commercial production, to personally interview and educate interested farmers in raspberry culture. This should result in higher unit yields, longer patch life, less hand labour and when translated into dollars at normal prices, a relatively high ratio of profit is assured.

Because of the extreme shortage of good planting material, bookings can be made only for FALL PLANTING 1950, limited to one acre.

If genuinely interested in berry growing as a sideline to farming, write Box 457, Campbellford, Ontario, on or before Augst 15th, giving location of your farm. Our specialist will call later and completely analyze the business, soil requirements and preparation, up-to-date cultural practices, home markets and surplus shipping, cost of planting, estimated yield and profits per acre.

Late replies cannot be covered.
