Heavy Domages.

Miss Addie Aunt of Athens, who while practising her profession as trained nurse in New York a couple of years ago was run down by a train with the result that both legs had been cut off has just been awagded a verdict of $58,000 in the Supreme Court against the Long Island Rai,road Company. Soon after the accident some influential people of New York interested themselves in Miss Hunt's behalf and an action for damages was instituted against the Company. She obtained a verdict at that time of $25,000 but the Court set it aside as inadequate and ordered a new trial, with the above result. The railroad company will appeal. Miss Hunt is a graduate of the Brockville General Hospital. She has visited Smith's Falls since the accident.

Rev. Cassidy Meets With an Accident.

Rev. Mr. Cassidy, of Aultsville, had a very narrow escape from serious injury on Sunday, May 9th. He met with an accident while driving home from Farran's Point, where he had been holding service, having exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Caldwell, of Woodlands. A very heavy rain storm set in after the service and when he started for home it was so dark that it was impossible to see the road. He drove very slowly and had got along safely until he came to a point opposite the head of the canal. Here, in crossing the sluice, the horse got off the road and the front wheel of the buggy dropped suddenly, the axle striking with such force as to pitch Mr. Cassidy out head first. He was thrown about eight feet and struck on his shoulder, receiving a severe shaking up. Had he struck on his head, it is probable that he would have been instantly killed, as the sudden jolt threw him out with great force. His many friends are profoundly thankful for his escape, which was little short of miraculous.

Surprise some sufferer, by first getting from me the booklet and the test. He will appreciate your aid. W. G. Bolster.

Mrs. Richard Patterson Dead.

After an illness of over a year borne with Christian resignation Mrs. Richard Patterson of Cass Bridge passed away Thursday morning of last week at the age of 62 years. She was held in very high esteem by her neighbors and will be much missed in the community. She leaves as survivors a husband, six sons, William of Cass Bridge, Walter of Pendleton, James and Wesley of Mountain, and Armington at home, also two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Johnston of Cass Bridge and Mrs. M. J. Wilkinson of Pendleton. In terment at Maple Ridge cemetery.

Died In Her Youth.

The death occurred this morning, May 20th, 1909, of Mary Alice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Merkley, aged 13 years, 10 months and 9 days. The deceased had been ailing for over two years, but was a patient sufferer, and passed quietly away without a murmur. The funeral will leave the residence on Saturday afternoon at one o'clock for the Methodist church, where sereices will be conducted by the Rev. A. E. Rnnnells, B. D., after which interment will be made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Drowned at Martintown.

A sad drowning accident is reorted from Martintown. Sparling Warner, the young son of B. Warner, of that village, left home on Friday to fish in the river Raisin, below the mill dam. As he did not return for dinner his parents became alarmed and a search party was organized, with the result that the body was found in the river.

The deceased was a highly respected member of St. John's (Anglican) Church.

Harvey M. Brown Dead.

The death of Mr. Harvey M. Brown, of Easton's Corners, occurred on Wednesday evening, May 12th, 1909, about 8 o'clock at his residence there at the advanced age of 80 years and a few months. The late Mr. Brown was for some years one of the prominent men in the township of Wolford and was held in high esteem by an extensive acquaintance both personally and in a business way. He was municipal clerk of Wolford for several years, the duties of which responsible position he performed to the satisfaction of his immediate employers and the township at large. Deceased has been in failing health for some time, and his death was not wholly unlooked for. The funeral left his late residence at Easton's Corners, at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon and interment was made at Wolford Chapel burial ground.

Trapping has proved a profitable industry in Smith's Fall's section this season. Hundreds of muskrat skins have beensecured. At Newboro, a few miles from there, one dealer secured 6,000 skins. Upward of fifty cents is paid for each one.

RESEARCH IN FARMING

FACTS ABOUT CANADA'S EXPERIMENTS IN AGRICULTURE.

Dr. Wm. Saunders of Ottawa Is the Dean of the Government's Expert Farmers—Progress of the Barr Colonists—Story of Station at Fort Vermilion Smacks of Early Days In Canada.

Whenever practicable, farmers should visit the Government Experimental farms says The Montreal Standard. Of course the largest and most instructive is the Central Farm within sight of Parliament Hill, Ottawa; but in the Maritime Provinces and in Western Canada there are smaller experimental farms and experimental stations where, on a more limited scale, excellent work on behalf of agriculture is being done, and where agriculturalists will see much that interests, instructs and encourages. These farms are doing a great work for the people on the land who, after all our talk about manufacturing and commerce, are the greatest capitalists and the greatest producers in this country. It is from the farmers' crops that the greater part of our prosperity flows. At the head of these farms is a genial and simple gentleman of wide experience and deep knowledge—Dr. Wm. Saunders, who perhaps as much as any public servant in Canada to-day, deserves well of the people of this country.

In the annual report of the Experimental Farms is set forth the results of the year's experiments made in almost every branch of work by means of which wealth is produced from the soil—in agriculture in all its departments, in stock-raising, in horticulture, in the keeping of poultry and bees, etc. It is an ordinary looking book in the usual departmental blue cover, but it is not so dull as it looks, even to a man who never held a plough or drove a harvester; and to one interested in farming according to modern methods it is filled with valuable information.

Here and there throughout the book, scattered among the results of experiments respecting the growing of wheat and the fattening of cattle, are agreeable and sometimes surprising reminders of the extent of our country, and the rapid progress it has made in recent years. Time flies, but the development of Canada keeps pace with it.

It does not require a long memory to recall the arrival, only a few springs ago, of a band of English immigrants known as the Barr colonists. They went to a distant part of Saskatchewan, then remote from railways and almost wholly without habitants. Many of the colonists were city folk to whom country life, and especially country life on the frontier, was a thing unknown. At first they lived in tents, and most of them had a hard struggle. But British pluck was there, stout hearts, and willing hands, and the colonists got on their feet. The land began to grow wheat and a town sprung up. They gave it the name of Lloydminster.

And here comes in the report of the Experimental Farms. In this section devoted to the work of that learned entomologist and botanist, Dr. James Fletcher, who died but a few weeks ago, there is a condensed account of his last lecturing tour in the Canadian west. One of the places visited was Lloydminster where, wrote Dr. Fletcher, "a large meeting was held in the afternoon." What a change a few years had brought about on that bit of western prairie. The little handful of colonists—all-British colonists they loved to call themselves—of whom it had been predicted that their success was impossible, had developed into a thriving community, sufficiently large and progressive to make it worth while for a scientist to go there and talk to those farmers about the best varieties of grass to grow on their prairie farms and how to fight the farmers' foes in the forms of weeds and insects.

Little has been heard of late of the Barr colonists at Lloydminster, simply because they have formed a part, and after all a small one too, of the current of development and prosperity that has been flowing through the Canadian west.

This station is at Fort Vermilion, on the Lower Peace river, and, as the crow flies, 350 miles north of Edmonton. During the past few years farming had been carried on there by the Lawrence family, the pioneers of the Peace river country. Mr. F. S. Lawrence asked the Government to establish an experimental station there, and so prove to the world the agricultural worth of the country in which he had absolute faith. The request was granted, and many varieties of grain, fodder-plants, vegetables and fruit trees and shrubs were carefully packed and forwarded to Edmonton in time to go north by the first boat leaving in the spring. But navigation opened late, and fearing that the seed and plants would not reach Fort Vermilion for use that season Mr. Lawrence hauled them by team across country to Peace River Landing. The season was not favorable, for spring came late and the frost came early, and the grasshoppers destroyed many of the vegetables and grasses. In order to give certain information the experiments must be carried on for more than one year.

COMEDIES OF THE NORTH.

Strange Little Dramas Are Enacted In the Silver Country.

It is wonderful to see the mass up here, surging out and out in search of silver, writes A. C. Pulver of The Toronto World, from the Gowganda country.

Some are ill-equipped, others loaded down, but all have hopes and that's the reason.

The incomprehensible studies are the derelicts that roam through the bush, live on anything and sleep anywhere, sometimes fellows with splendid educations hidden behind odd pieces of clothing tied together, bewhiskered and grimy, hungry and hopeful and never whimpering.

Oftentimes they make a strike and the report urges on the rest of a forlorn-looking contingent, and at any rate there is no room for pop-eyed and cotton-mouthed hangers-on.

It's get there or get out!

I've seen men who could hardly write their names, get $500 in ten minutes on a showing of silver in samples brought. And that same day the poker table gets the "stake" and the blind pig shares it.

There is no lamenting. It's the way of it.

While in a lawyer's office the other day, I overheard an Indian giving powers of attorney to a man just about to leave for the city.

The man wanted the claim badly, so there are chances that it's worth something. The Indian didn't object and when the lawyer asked him how long he intended giving a power of attorney, he simply grunted and said "All time."

"For life?" asked the lawyer.

"Yes," said the Indian.

"But wouldn't it be better to limit it?" asked the lawyer.

"Say to 10 years."

"Alright," said the Indian, and the city man didn't appreciate the situation, and by which it's inferred that all lawyers are not half bad.

OPENING THE VISITOR'S EYES.

Briton Found That He Had Underrated Canadian Cities.

"Not bad little houses for the colonies," said Mr. James R. Motion, Inspector of the Poor and Clerk of the Parish Council of Glasgow, the other day, when Mr. George Wright of the Walker House, Toronto, met him at Halifax and took him for a drive around the city. Mr. Wright played "possum"; he lay low.

At Montreal Mr. Motion was vastly impressed by the architecture. Again did Mr. Wright bide his time.

Then Mr. Motion came on to Toronto with Mr. and Mrs. Wright as their guest, Mrs. Wright being his niece. Mr. Wright had laughed softly to himself once or twice on the way to Toronto, but Mr. Motion hadn't known the cause of the levity.

Mr. Wright ordered a carriage for Mr. Motion, and devoted several hours to showing the Glasgow gentleman the sights of colonial Toronto.

"Very pretty little city," said Mr. Motion early in the drive; but later he became as silent as Mr. Wright had been. As for Mr. Wright his triumph was at hand, and he did the talking. Mr. Motion's wonder grew rapidly, and finally when it was all over, and he had some conception of what Toronto really was, Mr. Wright enquired, if somewhat mischieviously:

"Well, how do you like the houses in this little town in the colonies?"

"We are all foolish at home about Canada, and I intend to say so when I return to Glasgow," said Mr. Motion, with the brevity of his country.

Mr. Wright had had his innings.

ANCIENT ROME.

It Could Not Compare In Splendor With Some Modern Capitals.

Rome, even in the times of its greatest splendor, was poor in comparison with the modern world. Even in the second century after Christ, when it stood as metropolis at the head of an immense empire, Rome was smaller, less wealthy, less imposing than a great metropolis of Europe or of America. Some sumptuous public edifices, beautiful private houses—that is all the splendor of the metropolis of the empire.

Moreover, the palaces of the Caesars on the Palatine are a grandiose ruin that stirs the artist and makes the philosopher think, but if one sets himself to measure them, to conjecture from the remains the proportions of the entire edifices, he does not conjure up buildings that rival large modern construction. The palace of Tiberius, for example, rose above a street only two meters wide, less than seven feet, an alley like those where today in Italian cities live only the most miserable inhabitants. We have pictured to ourselves the imperial banquets of ancient Rome as functions of unheard of splendor; if Nero or Elagabalus could came to life and see the dining room of a great hotel in Paris or New York, resplendent with light, with crystal, with silver, he would admire it as far more beautiful than the halls in which he gave his imperial feasts. Think how poor were the ancients in artificial light! They had few wines; they knew neither tea nor coffee nor cocoa, neither tobacco nor the innumerable liqueurs of which we make use. In face of our habits they were always Spartan, even when they wasted, because they lacked the means to squander.—Guglielmo Ferrero in Putnam's.

New Regulations for Cattle Ships.

More Space to be Allowed for Each Animal in Shipping Cattle From Canada.

Ottawa, May 15.—New regulations of especial interest to steamship men are gazetted regarding the shipping of live stock. These regulations cancel those established by Order-in-Council May 14, 1904. The new regulations set forth as follows:

Fat cattle carried on the upper or spar deck must be given a space of two feet six inches clear in width, by eight feet clear in length, and not less than six feet three inches in height each; and in no case shall more than four head of cattle be allowed in each pen, except at the end of a row, where five cattle may be allowed together.

In ships fitted with permanent iron fittings with alleyways not less than three feet in width, and fitted with approved and sufficient means of ventilation, fat cattle may be carried on the second deck in a space of two feet six inches in width, provided that no cattle are carried on the hatches.

United States cattle, shipped from any port in Canada, carried on the upper or spar deck, must be allowed a space of two feet six inches in width, but such United States cattle when shipped between decks must be allowed a space of two feet eight inches in width by eight feet in depth.

Pens for sheep shall not be less than seven feet in height divided into two equal compartments, and not more than eight or ten sheep will be counted equal to one fat ox, according to the discretion of the inspector.

Stops A Cough In One Night.

The Story of Sufferers from Bronchitis, Asthma and Catarrh Proves the Value of Catarrhozone.

A cough may be Catarrhal with a dry tickling in the throat, it may be accompanied by partial stoppage of the nostrils and shortage of breath. Often there is a gagging in the throat. and every cough tears and hurts.

Coughs have a hundred different causes, your's may be due to any of the following:—

Asthma	Inflamed Throat
Exposure	Bronchitis
Enlarged Tonsils	Pneumonia
Inflammation	Croup
Stomach Disorders	Pleurisy

The one remedy upon which physicians are relying to-day is Catarrhoze. It removes the cause of the cough, doesn't smother it. Catarrhozone is a soothing "direct cure" and cures the conditions that cause the cough.

Catarrhozone is infinitely superior to cough medicines, tablets, sprays and emulsions, which for the most part are of no practical value except to ease cough for the time being. Often liquid cough remedies contain opium, morphine and cocaine. With Catarrhozone you take no drugs—you employ Natures way—just inhale Catarrhozones soothing, healing vapor and relief and cure follow promptly.

It's simply wonderful to think how quickly a bad throat or catarrh can be cured with Catarrhozone. Its rich balsamic vapor is carried along with the breath to the innermost recesses of the lungs, bronchial tubes, and chest, making it impossible for the germ of any disease to live. Thus soreness in the chest is at once alleviated—phlegm is loosened and ejected from the throat, old standing boughs are removed.

REMEMBER THIS, you breathe Catarrhozone and it will cure any winter ill. Large size, guaranteed. costs $1.00, and lasts two months; smaller sizes, 25c. and 50c. Beware of imitations and insist on "CATARRHOZONE" only. By mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Gatineau River In Flood.

Ottawa, May 13.—Gatineau Point today received its first baptism of flood water for the season. The Gatineau River rose over night, and this morntng two families awoke to find themselves isolated from the rest of the point. The Ottawa River has swollen ten inches since yesterday, and this makes the present height 22 feet. Only the lowest land at the point has been inundated so far, and the two houses had the misfortune to be erected thereon. They were entirely surrounded, and the occupants hastened to move their effects to the upper storey.

How To Gain In Weight.

You know you are too thin—you eat and eat, but never get an ounce fatter. Nerves are weak, color is bad, streugth seems exhausted. It's not hard to get fat. You must eat more, digest more, exercise more. Try Ferrozone and watch your appetite grow. It turns all you eat into nutriment and building material—fills your veins with rich, red blood—gives you ambition and vigor. For a tissue builder, a fattening tonic, one that restores permanently, there is nothing to compare with Ferrozone. Try it and see, 50 cts. at all dealers.

Protection of Level Crossings.

Hon. G. P. Graham's Bill Adopted by the House.

Ottawa, May 12.—Prorogation was brought a step nearer to-day by the passing of several important bills. First in order and in importance was Hon. Mr. Graham's measure for the protection of railway crossings held over from yesterday. It gives the Railway Commission large powers in ordering and apportioning the cost of protection and provides that during the next five years $200,000 yearly shall be granted out of the Dominion treasury towards aiding in the work of protecting dangerous crossings. Mr. Lancaster, who has kept up a running fight in behalf of his own bill, made a strong final appeal to have it accepted in place of the Senate compromise, and in this he received the undivided support of his own party, and of one Liberal, Mr. Miller of South Grey. The majority, however, recognized that to take such a step would be to court disaster in the upper chamber, and the third reading of the bill was carried by 100 votes to 70.

Deanery of Stormont.

The Chapter of the Deanery of Stormont held its annual spring meeting in Morrisburg on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. The proceedings began with a public service in St. James' church at 7.45 p.m., when an interesting and impressive sermon on "Missionary Work" was preached by the Rev. H. H. Bedford-Jones, M.A., of Brockville. The clergy present were the Revs. A. Quinn of Waddington. C. O. Carson of Wales, T. J. Stiles of Cornwall, R. H. Archer of Winchester, C. R. Palmer of Newington, J.L. Homer of Aultsville, T. Bailey of Iroquois, and the rector, Rev. G. S. Anderson. During the offertory Mr. Hill sang "The Holy City." At the close of the service a business meeting was held in St. James' hall, when the reports from the different parishes and missions were examined and arrangements made for the fall conference, which will be held in Wales.

The clergy elected the Rev. C. O. Carson to the office of Rural Dean, the Rev. G. S. Anderson having held the office for two terms.

The "Quiet Day," conducted by the Rev. Bedford-Jones, with the clergy, began with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 7 a.m., when the first address was delivered. After breakfast, which was served at the rectory, the servfces continned until 12 o'clock. The speaker's subject was "The Call of God to the Ministry of His Church." The points emphasized specially were that God's call is (1) a call to a life of devotion and consecration; (2) a call to prayer; (3) a call to study; (4) a call to service or work.

The clergy were deeply moved by the wise and loving words of the preacher, and in a body expressed their sincere gratitude to Mr. Jones for his very helpfull addresses.—Leader.

Brantford Burglar Captured.

Hurled Himself Through a Window. Followed by a Constable.

Brantford, May 14.—One of the hottest chases on record occurred here early this morning, when half of the local police force were out in an effort to secure a burglar who operated at no less than five residences in the North Ward during the night, and who has successfully burglarized several other houses during the week. A French-Canadian, who gave his name as Joe Smith, was arrested on Lawrence street by P. C. Borthwick, having been caught red-handed in a nearby house. The marauder and the officer fought desperately in the woodshed, the former getting away, and rushing through the parlor, hurled himself through a plate glass window. The officer followed suit, and felled his prisoner in the street, a short distance away. In the jump to the street Smith hurt his back, while Borthwick sustained a sprained ankle.

In court this morning the prisoner refused to accept the services of counsel, stating that he would take his life on his conviction. He pleaded guilty to eight charges of burglary. When arrested he had $65 in cash. At the request of the police, Magistrate Livingston granted a remand for a week, in order that Smith's record might be inquired into. He came from Montreal, and is believed to be a noted criminal.

If your stomach, heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain yet vital truth clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. It's success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by W. G. Bolster.

A Farewell to Mr. aud Mrs. Wm. Campbell.

Mr. William Campbell, the well-known cheese and butter manufacturer, who has been living among us for the last twenty-one years, having disposed of his business here and about to take his departure for his new home in Winchester, a few of his many friends took advantage of the occasion, and assembled at his residence at Cannamore, on Saturday evening, May 15th, and presented him and Mrs. Campbell with a beautiful mantle clock in a heavy sardynox case with the inscription on the dial: "To Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Campbell From Their Cannamore Friends; May 1909." Also a pearl necklace to Mrs. Campbell, accompanied with the following address, which was read by Mr. G. C. York:---

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Campbell,
Cannamore, Ont.

Dear Friends:—We are gathered here on the eve of your departure from among us to your new home in Winchester, to wish you a hearty farewell and to renew, as of yore, the happy associations which have characterized our mutual friendship during the months and years of our pleasant acquaintanceship. That the pleasure of our meeting is marred by the sincere regret that the outward manifestation of the ties that have so long bound us together is to be severed, and perhaps forever, by the separation will ensue in a few days, makes it all the more vital and necessary for each one of us to cherish the thought that the inward glow of the spark of friendship, whatever may be the distance or time that intervenes to divide us, may burn on in defiance of change and varying scenes.

Many of us here to-night can look back over the past twenty-one years during which you, Mr. Campbell, have been among us, and recall with pleasure not only acquaintanceship, the ties of which have drawn us together as the years have passed, but the outward tokens which have been a pleasing evidence of an inner bond, and which are to-night the happy memories of times spent together in mutual and social friendliness; and particularly since the building of your home and the cementing of domestlc relations, these opportunities of happy associations have been all the more endearing. Mrs. Campbell has proven a great source of social hospitality and pleasure among us, and by her kind exchange of courtesies as a hostess, has all the more strengthened and united the bonds between us.

Your going from us, therefore, is all the more to be regretted because, in your loss, there is a social element of our mutual domestic and friendly interchange which we shall ever deeply regret to lose, and which also will make vacant in our hearts a place long held by friends whom we have learned to love, as only the intimate relations of endearing friendship could have taught us to do. We rejoice to know, however, that your going will bring the same brightness and kindly intercourse to others, in the new home whither you are about to make your abode. We deplore however, even more, if possible, your loss to our little church, for in it your business ability and financial acumen have been to us a means of financial stability, the loss of which, now we are to suffer it, will be very greatly felt by minister and people. For many years you have been steadfast in every good word and work, nor can we estimate how much we have owed to your helpfulness and generous financial contributions to every worthy cause, but wish only to say that these are and have been appreciated more than would be right for us to say. It gives us some pleasure, however. to know that in our loss others, though less needy and perhaps more independent, will share the fruits of your Christian and conscientious stewardship.

Therefore our meeting, though sad, is not untinged with the halo of hope and confidence that in this step which you are now taking, though we ourselves may suffer loss, the hand of Providence still is leading, and lasting benefit may result to yourselves, and to others in our beloved church. We shall feel keenly the loss of Mrs. Campbell as president of our W. M. S., for her kindly and wise management, and undoubted loyalty, has fostered its growth from its inception to the present state of progress and strength, of which now each member is justly proud.

We trust for yourself and Mrs. Campbell not only the best of health, but increase of social and spiritual profit in your new relations; that the blessing of God may be yours and abide upon your home, will be our hope and prayer.

(At this juncture Mr. W. F. Byers presented the clock on behalf of the friends, and Mrs. G. C. York presented the necklace on behalf of the ladies.)

Please accept these tokens of our loyal friendship and sincere esteem, and as you look upon it, may it ever remind you of our loyal friendship and affectionate regard; though separated and dwelling in different environment, and amid different scenes, may it speak of pleasant and happy memories which we shall cherish long, and which shall ever bring to our minds the pleasures of our happy associations in days that may have passed forever.

Signed by the committee on behalf of friends present.

Robt. Steven,
Jas. McConnell,
Wm. F. Byers,
G. C. York,
A. W. Reveler,
E. L. Munharvey.

Cannamore, May 15th, 1909.

Mr. Campbell replied very fitting to the address, and expressed his gratitude to his many friends for the kindnesses he had received at their hands during the twenty-one years since he first came among them, and assured them that he was very sorry to leave, but circumstances had so come about that nothing else appeared expedient, and that in going he was making a great sacrifice in many ways, but which he looked upon as all for the best.

Mr. Jas. McConnell assumed the position of chairman and called upon the Rev. Mr. Peckover, Presbyterian minister, to make a few remarks. The Rev. gentleman replied and commented upon the address, and made some very logical and humorous remarks; among others he said that parsons were accustomed to farewells, more so than any other class of people, and therefore could sympathize with those that were about to sever ties of friendly intercourse with friends, and wished Mr. and Mrs. Campbell well in their new home.

Rev. Mr. Hagar, Methodist minister, was then called. He said the event was a very sad one for him to think of; he felt sad and could not feel otherwise. Losing Mr. and Mrs. Campbell from the church was a serious thing for him to think of, and the many valuable members of his church that he had lost since he came on the circuit made him sad, and, while it might be all for the best he could not see it that way at present.

R. Steven was called to say a few words. On behalf of the people, locally, he said he considered if any should regret Mr. Campbell's leaving it should be him. He said that during the last twenty-one years he had had a great lot of dealings with Mr. Campbell---more he thought than any one man in the community. He had always found him a good straight business man, and, while he was leaving the community he did not think their business relations would cease, and that he believed his going away was all for the best.

Mr. McConnell then spoke a few words and informed the friends that if they remained seated coffee and cake would be served, which was done, and after singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," Rev. Mr. Hagar closed the social event with prayer.

Young Man Is Found Shot in a Field Near Dunbar

Isaac Garlough Placed Under Arrest

On the Charge of Commiting the Deed—— The Inquest Held on Friday and Adjourned Until Tuesday——Victim Only Son of Widowed Mother——Funeral was Largely Attended on Sunday.

Ross Beckstead, 18 years of age, was shot and instantly killed at McMillan's mill, four miles from here, about nine o'clock Thursday night, and Isaac Garlough, aged 40, was arrested as being responsible for his death.

The body of young Beckstead was not discovered until about 8 o'clock the next morning, when John Lewis, when passing, found it in the corner of a field near the roadside. Garlough acknowledges having fired off his shotgun to frighten some boys who were bothering him by throwing stones at his house about nine o'clock the previous night, and it is suggested that this shot must have been the one which killed Beckstead. At any rate, the cause of his death was a buckshot wound in the head and face.

It seems that a number of young boys and men have been in the habit of annoying Garlough, who lives with his wife and family of five children at McMillan's mill, Their wont has been to gather early in the evening, and throw sticks and stones at him as he passed to his home, and also threw them at his house, of which the windows have at times been broken. Thursday night the usual gang assembled and commenced to raise a row. Suddenly a spurt of flame burst from the window of Garlough's house, and the gang decamped, not one of them being injured.

From a spirit of curiosity, a short time before this, young Beckstead, who lived close by with his grandfather, Isaiah Weegar, left the house to go out and see the fun, but was not in any way connected with the crowd. When he did not return, it was thought by his grandparents that he had gone down to his mother's farm, to which he was about to move, so no anxiety was felt about him. It is assumed that he arrived at the scene of the row just as Garlough fired his shot to scare the gang away and received the full effect of the charge of buckshot in his head.

The next morning when the body was dircovered Coroner Dr. Ellis, of Chesterville, was notified and he left at once for the scene of the shooting and took charge of the remains.

Constable Barclay was put on the case, and in a short time learned that Garlough had fired off his shotgun at a crowd the night before. Proceeding fo Garlough's house he placed him under arrest, no charge being laid, the accused being merely held to await the action of the coroner's jury. When arrested Garlough acknowledged having fired a shot the night before, but claimed to have no intention of hitting anyone. He was much affected when he learned that it was probably the shot from his gun which had ended the life of young Beckstead. He was lodged in the lockup here.

An inquest was opened Friday morning by Coroner Dr. Ellis, and after the jury had viewed the remains, an adjournment was made until Tuesday. A postmortem was made that afternoon by Drs. Ellis and Locke.

A particularly sad feature of the fatality is that young Ross Beckstead was the only son of a widowed mother, who is prostrated by the awful shock. He had been living with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Weegar, for some time past, but was just preparing to remove to another farm which his mother had recently purchased. The dead young man was of a quiet retiring disposition, and a general favorite with all his acquaintances.

The Funeral.

Followed by a large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives, the body of young Ross Beckstead, who met his death through an apparent misadventure on Thursday night last, was borne to its last resting place in the cemetery at Williamsburg Sunday afternoon. The funeral was the largest that has ever been seen in this locality, great throngs of people in conveyances and on foot accompanying the cortege to the burial ground.

The little Lutheran church at Dunbar, where the services were conducted by Rev. George Mason, Presbyterian minister, had probably never in its history held such a large congregation as that present on Sunday. The esteem in which the deceased young man was held was testified to in an eloquent sermon by the preacher, Rev. Mr. Mason, who spoke of the untimely and regrettable ending of the life of the young man.

The Verdict.

"That Ross Beckstead came to his death on the night of May 13th last by gunshot wounds at the hands of Isaac Garlough."

Such was the verdict returned at Dunbar Tuesday night by the coroner's jury called to enquire into the death of young Ross Beckstead. Garlough wes taken into custody immediately after the inquest and came up for his preliminary hearing yesterday afternoon at the town hall here before Magistrates James Clement and W. L. Hart, who committed him to Cornwall. The charge, acting County Crown Attorney Harkness of Cornwall stated, would probably be one of manslaughter, as the evidence had so far not shown that there was any intent on the part of the accused. Garlough was much affected and wept bitterly on hearing the verdict, declaring time again that he had never thought his hasty shot would have had such fatal results.

The scene at the inquest Tuesday night was a memorable one, and its impressions will likely remain long with those who were able to obtain admission. It was held in the kitchen of the large stone residence of Mr. Frank Todd, only a stone's throw from the scene of last Thursday's tragedy. Inside the roomy kitchen, about three hundred people had jammed. At the south end sat the coroner, Dr. Geo. H. Ellis; the acting crown attorney, J. S. Harkness, Cornwall; Garlough, and the jury, ranged about a circular table. Mrs. Martha Beckstead, the mother of the dead boy, was called.

The gist of the evidence as given Tuesday night went to show that there had been no actual eye-witness of the tragedy Mahlon Beckstead, a young man, was probably the closest of being so. He was passing along the road near Garlough's house, when he saw a flame and heard the report of a gun seeming to come from the house. A short distance further he saw the form of a man staggering across the field inside the fence, and just as it came to the fence it dropped. He thought it was some one hiding. Further evidence of those who discovered the body went to establish that this was the exact spot in which it had been fonnd. It was also shown that the first blood-stains started at a point 86 feet south of Garlough's house, and directly in line with a broken window, which Mrs. Garlough said her husband fired the gun through.

Dr. Locke, Williamsburg stated that it would be possibie for a man in young Beckstead's condition to have walked some distance before being overcome by coma. The direct cause of death was a carebral hemmorhage caused by shot piercing the brain in three places. Five other pieces of shot had pierced the head and face in different places, but not in sufficiently vital spots to have caused death.

The reasons for the firing of the shot were brought out in the evidence of Mrs. Isaac Garlough, wife of the accused, although it was unsupported. She stated that several times during the past weeks they had been annoyed by a gang of men or boys who rotten-egged and stoned their house. She and her husband were in bed on Thursday night last when the disturbance occurred about 9.10 or 9.30. Two boys were seen by them to the east of the house, but were not recognized. Asked why her husband had the gun loaded in the house, she said she did not know. He had borrowed it from John Lewis, a neighbor, a few days before.

The gun, which is a breech-loading shot-gun, was put in as evidence, as was a bottle of B. B. shot, found in the Garlough home.

In summing up, Coroner Ellis told the jury that one of the main questions for them to consider was whether a man could be seen 86 feet from the house, and whether Garlough's demeanor since then had been that of a man guilty of murder. He had not attempted to run away. Mr. Harkness for the crown said that all he desired was that justice be done. He had placed the evidence in as fair and impartial a manner as possible before them, and it was their duty to arrive at a verdict.

The jury, which was composed of Lemuel Dillabough, foreman; Kenneth Lennox, Enos Alllson, William Elliott, George A. Fetterly, Wilbur Edgerton, James A. Cunningham, James Wallace, Thomas Loucks, A. Henderson, Frank Todd, and George Merkley, then retired and after an hour's deliberation brought in the foregoing verdict.

The witnesses were Mrs. Martha Beckstead, mother of the deceased; Mrs. Isaac Garlough, Maylon Beckstead, Isaiah Weegar, William Barclay, Mrs. Joseph Young, Mackenzie Barclay, William Dillabough, Edward Ouderkirk, and Dr. Locke, who made the post mortem.

On advice of the crown attorney, Garlough, who was unrepresented by counsel did not give evidence.

Notable Educationists Retiring.

The announcement that Dr. Bryce and Prof. Hart of Manitoba College, Winnipeg, are about to retire marks the close of an interesting chapter of education in the West. When the college was founded the Presbyterian Church in Canada was not united, and these two gentlemen were the representatives of the two sections. The union followed soon after.

Two men more different could scarcely be imagined. Dr. Bryce is a big robust, aggressive man, keenly interested in the public questions of the day and always mixing with the life of the people. Dr. Hart is a small, modest, retiring man, studious and chiefly concerned with educational and theological questions. Dr. Bryce has written a history of Manitoba, a history of the Hudson Bay Co., and innumerable pamphlets on all conceivable subjects relating to the West. Dr. Hart has stuck to the classroom, varied with occasional Sunday duty in some pulpit.

Dr. Bryce is a native of Brant County and a brother of Dr. P. H. Bryce, Dominion Government medical superintendent of immigration. Dr. Hart is a native of Paisley, Scotland, and at the time of the union was the only representative minister of the Church of Scotland in Manitoba.

Old Emblem Found.

Joseph Houghton, sexton of St. Mark's Church, Niagara-on-the-Lake, while digging a grave in the cemetery adjoining the church, made an interesting find in the character of a Masonic emblem supposed to have belonged to a British soldier who was killed in the war of 1812.

The emblem is a little larger than an American silver dollar, is of solid silver and surmounted by a square and compass. On one side is the following inscription: "Abram Genung, St. John's Lodge No. 21," and beneath this are the figures "5798"; on the other side is the figure of an angel blowing a trumpet and holding a level in the left hand and surrounded by the letters "Keshtwil."

In the grave was also found the complete skeleton of a human being, minus the head.

Order Is Spreading.

Mrs. James Bryce, wife of the British Ambassador at Washington, Lady Pudon Clarke, and Mrs. Courtenay Walter Bennett have been among those who have taken a leading part in establishing a new chapter of the Daughters of the Empire in New York. The order is of Canadian inspiration originally, but is being extended to all parts of the continent.

Passenger Traffic to Halifax.

The spring rush of the passenger trains to Halifax (N.S.) has now set in in real earnest. Although the number of passengers to arrive this year has not so far been as large as in the past few years, this is explained by the fact that the Salvation Army is not sending out immigrants in shiploads as formerly, and also that the Government agents are more particular as to the class of people they send out. The class of immigrants this season has been exceptionally good, being mostly from the British Isles.

GOT THE WHOLE VOTE.

A Pledge That Was Freely Given and That Was Easily Kept.

It is related of a certain candidate for office in a certain Kansas campaign that he billed himself for a speech in a southern Kansas town on a certain October day and wrote ahead to a number of friends there to give him "tips."

One of them told him to see a certain colored man upon his arrival in the town. "If you can get the vote of this negro," wrote the friend, "you can get the vote of the whole negro population in this town. Don't fail to see him and get him to your way of thinking."

About the first thing the candidate did after registering at the hotel was to look up this negro. It was only a little while after the introduction that he was calling the negro by his given name, filling his pockets with cigars, passing him compliments and generally "giving him the taffy." The negro took it all and enjoyed the occasion immensely. The candidate spent several hours in the negro's company and after he thought the proper degree of warmth had been obtained broached the real object of his friendship:

"Say, John, I want the negro vote of this town."

"All right," replied John. "I'll vote fo' you, sah. I'll vote fo' you. I'm fo' you, sah."

"That's all right," said the candidate. "That's all right. I'm sure you will. I'm sure you will. But I want to have the whole negro vote of this town. I want to get all."

"Dat's all right," responded the negro. "I done said I'd vote fo' you. I'm yo' friend. I'll suttinly cast my vote fo' you."

"But, say, John, I know that," said the candidate. "See here, I'll be frank. The fellows told me that you are a big man among the colored folks down here and that if I got your vote I'd get the whole negro vote in this place. Do you catch on?"

"Sho," replied John. "Sho I do. You'll git de whole niggah vote, all right. Dey won't be trouble 'bout dat, sah. You see, I'm de only niggah in dis here whole town."—Mobile Register.

FEATS OF STRENGTH.

A Blacksmith Who Fairly Outdid Augustus the Strong.

Not all the world's strong men have been performers on the public stage. Indeed, instances might be multiplied in which the feats of professionals have been equaled or excelled.

Charles Louvier, a carpenter of Paris, found it child's play to roll a tin basin between his fingers into a cylinder. On one occasion he carried off a soldier on guard who had gone to sleep in the sentry box and deposited both the box and the soldier on a low churchyard wall near by.

Another man who sometimes found his great strength a source of amusement was a Danish locksmith, Knut Knudson. While standing in a window on the ground floor he lifted with one hand half a bullock from the shoulder of a butcher who was toiling past with his load.

Augustus the Strong, the elector of Saxony, once entered a blacksmith's shop to have his horse shod. To show his suit how strong he was he picked up several horseshoes and broke one after the other, asking the blacksmith as he did so if he had no better. When it came to paying the bill the elector threw a silver piece on the anvil. It was a very thick coin. The blacksmith took it up and broke it in half, saying, "Pardon me, but I have given you a good horseshoe, and I expect a good coin in return." Another piece was offered him. He broke that and five or six others. Then the humiliated elector handed him a louis d'or, saying, "The others were probably made of bad metal, but this gold piece is good, I hope."

An Italian, Luigi Bertini of Milan, performed a similar feat. Besides horseshoes, he broke nails a finger thick.

The Duke of Grammont, the minister of Napoleon III. frequently astonished the women at court by bending a twenty franc piece in his hand.

Early Italian Surgery.

Benvenuto Cellini (1500-1571) tells of early Italian surgery. He had got a bit of chipped steel in his eye, "so far into the pupil that it was impossible to get it out, so that I was in very great danger of losing that eye. But the surgeon came to the rescue with the pigeons. The surgeon, making me lie upon my back, with a little knife opened a vein in each of their wings, so that the blood ran into my eye, and I was thereby greatly relieved. In the space of two days the bit of steel issued from my eye, and I found that I had received considerable ease and in a great measure recovered my sight."

Live and Learn.

Among the words given out for analysis recently by a district school teacher in Pennsylvania was "banknote." The instructor's astonishment may be imagined when one male pupil turned in the following unique paper:

"Bank-note is a compound, primitive word, composed of 'bank' and 'note.' 'Bank' is a simple word, meaning the side of a stream; 'note,' to set down. 'Bank-note,' to set down by the side of a stream."—Lippincott's.

THE BUSY BEES.

How the Insects Work When They Are Collecting Honey.

Upon the approach of a bee to any flower it flies around the calyx almost always before alighting upon the flower itself. This is a cursory examination, and with its antennae outstretched and quivering it is evidently scenting the honey contained within.

Should this prove a fruitful flower and of the flavor required the bee settles on the center of the stamen and, clutching it with its four front legs, steadies itself with its longer outstretched two hindermost ones and withdraws the nectar by its proboscis, the wings of the body assuming a vibratory motion the while.

The bee's proboscis is a most important instrument. It is composed of about forty cartilaginous rings, each of which is fringed with minute hairs, having also a small tuft of hair at its extremity, where it is somewhat serrated. Its movement is like the trunk of an elephant and is susceptible of extension and contraction, bending and twisting in all directions. Thus, by rolling it about, it searches out the calyx, pistil and stamen of every flower and deposits its nectar upon the tongue, whence it passes into the gullet at the base.

The gullet, or first stomach, is the honey bag. No digestion takes place here. In shape it is like an oil flask and when full contains about one grain. It is susceptible of contraction and is so arranged as to enable the insect to disgorge its contents into the cells of the hive.

Menu of an African Hunting Party.

In addition to the groceries and canned provisions carried in their outfits the hunters in East Africa depend for fresh provisions on their guns. Water buck, zebra and elephant are said to be tough eating and are mostly partaken of by the native porters, who keep elephant meat till it is quite high and gamy. Eland tastes like the best American beef; orynx, impala and all gazelles are edible and tender, but the delicacies of the East African Protectorate are the klipspringer and the dikdik gazelles. [illegible] except the prime [illegible] backbone. An ordinary [illegible] safari consists of marrow soup, dikdik cutlets, roast guinea fowl, curried venison and cornflower pudding, with jam, washed down with tea or coffee.—London Letter.

His Success.

"John," said a Glasgow minister to his beadle one morning, "I would seem to have been more than usually successful in pleasing the congregation on Sabbath. To which of the three heads of my sermon would you attribute my success?"

"Weel, sir," replied the beadle, with something like a leer in his eye, "to tell ye the truth, congregations nooadays concern themsel's less about the heids than the tails o' sermons. The ane you preached on Sabbath was considerably shorter than the general rin o' yer discoorses, and therefore a body was weel pleased wi't."

Hopelessly Out of Style.

"When we take charge of the government," says the wise old suffragette, "we will make some changes in the naval bureau."

"I should hope so!" agrees the enthusiastic young suffragette. "Why, bureaus are hopelessly out of style! We will have a combination wardrobe and chiffonier."

MARSHALL SAUNDERS

The Popular Canadian Author.

If the temperature of an author's popularity can be measured by the thermometer of sales, then surely the most popular writer in Canada is Miss Marshall Saunders, whose "Beautiful Joe" has sold 400,000 copies, and been translated into Swedish, German and Japanese.

At her grandfather's house in Milton, Nova Scotia, Miss Saunders was born in 1861, the daughter of a clergyman, and a descendant of the John Alden immortalized in verse by Longfellow. Her early days were spent in the beautiful land of Evangeline where the very air seems redolent of romance and historic memories. When she was six the family moved to Halifax, and there she received the foundation of her education in private and public schools until fifteen, when she was sent to a boarding school in Scotland and thence to France to put some finishing touches to her education.

On her return to Nova Scotia she taught school for a time and then drifted into literature. Her first short story brought forty dollars, but she soon realized that real success could not be plucked like a rose in a garden; she must pay the price in years of observation, study, training and practice. She spent several years in foreign travel, as a post-graduate course in experience, and then returned to Nova Scotia, ready for the serious work of her life.

In 1894 the American Humane Educational Society offered a prize of $200 for the best story illustrating kindness to dumb animals. Miss Saunders determined to compete for it. She spent six months in writing a story, the background of which was largely autobiographic and the spirit pervading it her own intense love for animals, the silent appeal of their helplessness finding ever a sympathetic echo in her heart. The committee of award in giving the prize to her book "Beautiful Joe," said: "the author has genius, heart and insight. It is an admirable story and should have an immense sale and become a standard for all libraries," and yet this sweet, sympathetic study of dog life, despite its splendid endorsement, went begging among the publishers for six months before it was accepted, Miss Saunders having availed herself of the privilege of forfeiting the prize money and retaining her manuscript.

When published, it gave her a place in the very front rank of writers of animal stories. Her "Tilda Jane," a simple, natural, pathetic yet humorous story, added a new character to the charming literature of childhood. In her ambitious novel "Rose à Charlitte," she gives a delightful portrayal of the life of the Acadians in the historic country around St. Mary's Bay, a realm of idyllic romance, where trials and sorrows seemed to sanctify and purify the people to higher things.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR

BY ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

COPYRIGHT, 1907 BY GEORGE H. BROADHURST

With all the advantages of youth, education and good looks and no vocation other than the enjoyment of wealth, the hero of our present story chose rather to sacrifice his ease and comfort on the altar of his duty as a citizen. His city called him to save her from spoliation and corruption, and he responded to the call. To lure him from the path of right came the seduc[illegible] and the claims of a[illegible] revered parent's memory, allied with the mighty forces at the command of political and financial malefactors. The firmness with which "the man of the hour," singled out for the highest post in a great municipality by those who saw in him only a weakling and a tool, resisted the very forces that had elevated him for their own purposes to official power will be an inspiration to the reader, as it has been an uplifting force in the minds of thousands who have witnessed its theatrical representation.

"My husband," prattled Mrs. Bennett complacently, "always said that the men who rose highest in the money world reached their lofty places over the despoiled bodies of hundreds of victims. Thank God, my boy has no such parental record to look back on. My husband was one man in a million—the soul of honor both in business and in private life. You've read of his splendid civil war record. Then he went into business as a contractor and engineer and earned a fortune, every dollar of which was honest. That's something to be proud of in these money loving times."

"What was the name of the financier who ruined Mr. Garrison?" asked Dallas, still haunted by the narrative she had just heard.

"No one knows. It was suppressed at the time. The facts in the written confession left by Mr. Garrison became public property; but, through political influence, the name of the man responsible for the tragedy was suppressed. Here I sit chatting on doleful topics, while those two young people are running all over the place unchaperoned. Excuse me, won't you, and I'll look them up?"

She smiled at Alwyn as she left the room, and his answering smile showed how fully he understood and appreciated her motive in leaving him alone with Dallas Wainwright. Perhaps Dallas, too, understood, for she made as though to follow Mrs. Bennett out into the lawn. But Alwyn stepped between her and the window.

"Don't go just yet," he begged. "I've so much to talk over with you. When they came in we were speaking of that paragraph about Gibbs and yourself. You don't love him, do you, Dallas? Tell me you don't!"

"What right have you to ask me such a question?"

"Only the right that my love for you gives me, dear heart. You must have known I loved you even though I've never said it before. I love you, Dallas, though till today, I think, I never realized how much. Tell me it isn't true that you're going to marry Gibbs."

"Even if it weren't true I should not marry you, Alwyn."

"Ah!"

The exclamation was wrung unconsciously from his whitening lips. It was as though a pang of physical pain had pierced him.

"I wouldn't marry you," went on Dallas, though more gently, "because you don't really love me."

"I do! I do! With my whole heart, I"—

"Oh, Alwyn!" she exclaimed with almost mother-like tolerance, "what a child you are! What a mere child! Some one tries to take away from you a plaything you've grown used to having. You never cared especially about the plaything before; but, now that you're in danger of losing it, you cry out: 'Oh, I love it! I love it!' You'll soon find another toy that'll make you forget"—

"Dallas, you are unfair! You have no right to treat my love for you as if"—

"As if it were a mere whim? Isn't it? Now, don't say 'No,' but look me in the eyes and answer one question. If Scott Gibbs hadn't proposed to me—if that paragraph had not appeared in the paper—would you have come here today and told me you loved me? No, you know you wouldn't!"

"Don't talk like that, dear!" implored Bennett. "I tell you I love you! More than I ever dreamed a woman could be loved. I love you! I"—

"There's an easy way to prove it, then."

"What way? Anything"—

"By doing something to make me feel proud of you. I don't feel so now. I could not marry a man who loiters his life away—a man who sits idle while others are thronging past him in the upward climb. You are rich, thanks to your father's efforts. What have you done with that wealth? If you've done no harm with it you've at least put it to no good use. You are young, talented, highly educated. What have you done with your youth, your talents, your education? How have you used them for your own betterment or for your fellow men's? What have you to offer me? Money? Social position? I have plenty of both. What else can you offer me? Nothing—absolutely nothing."

"My love, for one thing. I can offer you that."

"In what is your love better than any other man's? Behind it is not a record of hard work, of self sacrifice, of achievement—of any of the things that go toward making love strong and enduring and beautiful—to make it a support that a woman can lean on for life? What have you to offer me or any other woman?"

There was a silence. Then Bennett spoke there was a new [illegible] his voice—a ring of awakening strength that impressed Dallas in spite of herself—that sent a wholly strange thrill through her and set her heart to beating with unwonted quickness.

"You are right," said he. "I have done nothing. I've been content to be a rich man's son, and I've nothing to offer that is worthy your acceptance, but that does not mean I never shall have. And by the grace of God I shall! You've put things in a new light. I see them as I never did. It isn't a wholly pleasant experience, but it's good for me. There's nothing yet that I'm fitted to do, but I'll find something, never fear. And when I do"—

"Don't say there's nothing you're fit for," protested Dallas. "There's nothing you couldn't accomplish if once you set yourself to it. Why, just think of those speeches you made for Mr. Lorimer last campaign. They were fine. I was so"—

"Oh, those amounted to nothing. I just did it to oblige him. And, besides, it was fun to sway the crowds."

"That's just it. You did it for fun and for a friend. Why not do something in earnest and for yourself? The world is fairly bristling with opportunities for such a man as you. Grasp those opportunities. Won't you?"

"Yes! And when I do—is there any hope that you will?"

"I have given Mr. Gibbs no promise. I told him to wait."

"Then my chance is as good as his. From now on I am going to drop the role of rich man's son and be something on my own account. If you have faith in me—if you believe in me—if there is a ghost of a chance that you can some day love me"—

"I have faith in you, Alwyn," she answered softly, letting her hand lie passive in his grasp. Then, withdrawing it with a pretty gesture of petulance, she added:

"Only I wish it didn't always require a blow to rouse you to action. Did you ever happen to notice that trait in yourself?"

"Why, no. I don't quite understand."

"Then here's an instance that will show you what I mean: In your senior year at Yale when you were playing halfback on the varsity eleven I saw my first football game. It was against Princeton. You were the only man on either team I knew, so I watched you from first to last. Little as I understood football, I could see you were playing a clever, hard, conscientious game. But it wasn't a fighting game—not the sort of game that carries everything before it. Then, in the second half, in one of the scrimmages I saw a Princeton man strike you. Oh, it was a dastardly, cowardly blow! Hestruck you when your head was turned away. You saw who it was, and you made no appeal to the referee, but in the next scrimmage you broke that man's collar bone and stunned him. He was carried senseless from the field, and you kept on. You had begun to play a fighting game, and it carried you through the Princeton line for the only touchdown of the day. You won the game for Yale. You were the college hero—the man of the hour. But it took a blow to rouse you. Now do you understand?"

"You were the college hero—the man of the hour."

"Yes, I think I do. Perhaps you're right. I certainly remember the blow well enough. Do you happen to know who it was that struck me that day on the football field?"

"No. I knew none of the players except you. Who"—

"It was Gibbs."

"No!"

"I'm not likely to have forgotten. Ask him yourself. He will remember it, I fancy. It was a week before he left the infirmary."

"But I can't realize that Mr. Gibbs would do such a thing! It was so cowardly, so"—

"Oh, don't hold it against him. He was excited and"—

"Tell Mr. Phelan I'll see him in the library," called Wainwright from the hall.

"More [illegible]" exclaimed Dallas. "Come, shall [illegible] to the tennis court?"

They passed through the open French window as Wainwright and Gibbs entered the library from the opposite door.

"The alderman's a little behind time," said Wainwright. "He's a character in his way. You'll be interested in meeting him, Gibbs."

"Mr. Phelan," announced the butler.

"I know my own name, son," remarked a voice behind him. "You needn't go hollerin' it at me like I was bein' ratified at an east side meeting. Mornin', Mr. Wainwright. Maybe it was you he was hollerin' at."

"You're a little late, alderman," said the financier.

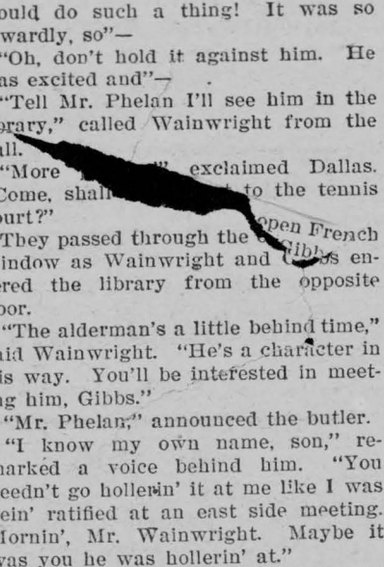

"I always am. Let the other feller do the waitin'. That's my motto, and many a good hour's time I've saved by it. Who's your friend?"

"Mr. Gibbs of Gibbs & Norton. Mr. Gibbs, this is Alderman Phelan."

"Of the Eighth," amended Phelan. "Only man to carry his ward last election runnin' independent. Pleased to meet you. Yes, sir, I ran independent, and I win, as Wainwright here can tell you. Horrigan's out against me this year, and he's got carried away by some fool idea that he can down me next campaign."

"Can he?" asked Gibbs politely, bored.

"Can he?" roared Phelan, his close clipped hair a-bristle. "Can he? Can Jimmy Phelan? Well! Nothin' to it, son. When I'm through with Dick Horrigan he'll have worried himself so thin they'll have to wear glasses to shave him. I'll bury him so deep this fall that they'll never find him till they start diggin' a subway to China."

Alderman Phelan.

"You seem pretty confident," observed Gibbs.

"Confident? Why not? Why not, I ask you? Why wouldn't I be confident? Is there a voter in the ward—black, white, yellow or greenhorn—that I can't call by his first name and ask after all his children by name? Is there a voter in the ward I haven't staked to coal or outings or bail or booze? Is there? If so, name him to me. Put a name to him. They're my friends twelve months of every year, not just at election time. Horrigan, indeed! Say, if he starts runnin' any man in my ward he'll have to sight him by a tree to see if he's makin' any progress or not. Horrigan, hey?"

"Come, come, alderman," interposed Wainwright. "Why don't you and Horrigan smoke the pipe of peace? Why"—

"The only pipe me an' Dick Horrigan will ever come together over will be a yard of lead pipe, an' my fist will be at one end of that an' his thick head at th' other."

"But," remonstrated Wainwright, "he is a strong man. Is it safe to fight him?"

"Why isn't it? He's got to come into the Eighth to lick me, and he'll be about as strong there as a barkeep's influence with the Prohibition party. Besides, I like a fight. I'm the original 'Stop, look and listen' signal at Trouble station. I"—

"As a personal favor to me, alderman," wheedled Mr. Wainwright in his most persuasive manner, "won't you make a friend of Horrigan?"

"I'd gladly oblige you by makin' a fine, fashionable, rollickin' funeral of him, but friends—friends"—

"But if I asked him here to meet you wouldn't you try to be cordial to him?"

"I sure would—as cordial as a bankrupt to a rent collector. He'd be as pretty near as welcome as a broken leg."

"I'm sorry you look at it that way, alderman, because I've asked him today."

"To come here? Quit your joshin'!"

"But he doesn't know he'll meet you."

"An' he'll never find it out, for I'm on my way. I'd sooner meet a p'rade from th' contagion hospital."

"Of course, if you're really afraid of him"—

"Afraid of him!" snorted Phelan, coming to a full stop at the door and then returning to the middle of the room. "Afraid of Dick Horrigan! Show me the man I'm afraid to meet and I'll meet him with pleasure just to show you it's a lie. As for"—

"Mr. Horrigan!" came the butler's announcement from the threshold.

The man who followed the announcement was one who carried in his bearing the chief reasons for his success. Tall, stout, square of jaw, square of brow, hard of mouth, he seemed to dominate his very surroundings and to exhale a rough forcefulness that carried all before it. His physiognomy was essentially that of the born fighter as well as leader—the man that neither gives nor asks quarter. From the days when as a ferry ticket seller he had laid the foundations of his later fortunes by "knocking down fares," up through his varied career as policeman, contractor, politician and boss, he had fought his way ever to the front by that same force, backed by a bulldog pluck, a genius for organization and a mentality wholly devoid of scruple and conscience.

For a moment the enemies faced each other.

It could not be said of Richard Horrigan that his morals were bad. He simply had no morals at all. By contact with men of higher culture than his own he had lost his early incorrectness and vulgarity of speech. His domineering roughness of manner he had no wish to lose. It was by far too valuable an asset.

"Good morning, Mr. Wainwright," began Horrigan, with a breezy familiarity, as he strode into the library, quite unabashed at finding himself in the presence of the dreaded finance king. "I'm a bit ahead of time, but"—

He stopped short, with a grunt of rage. His eyes had fallen on Phelan. Bristling like a plucky terrier at the onset of a mastiff, the alderman stood his ground, giving the boss glare for glare.

And so for a moment the enemies faced each other.

CHAPTER III.

HORRIGAN was first to break the tense silence.

"What's this here for?" he growled, indicating Phelan with a contemptuous jerk of the head and addressing no one in particular.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Brights or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommend and sell

Presentation at Avonmore.

A large number of the many friends of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Maclean assembled in the Manse recently to bid them farewell and wish them God-speed in the new work to which Dr. Maclean has been called in the city of Ottawa. A very pleasant time was spent by both old and young. A short programme was rendered, Mr. W. J. McCart, M.P.P., occupying the chair. Mrs. (Dr.) Robb delighted the audience by favoring them with two solos. A number of the elders, deacons, and others expressed their appreciation of Dr. Maclean's work in Avonmore for the past few years, and their regret at his removal from our midst.

Mr. McCart then asked Dr. and Mrs. Maclean to come forward. He said he knew he voiced the sentiments of all present when he said he was sorry we were losing our pastor. He had not only been a pastor, but a man in the truest sense of the word. He had done his duty as he saw it and was not afraid to declare the word of truth. It was gratifying to see the large number assembled to show that the congregation was in sympathy with him and his work. All would agree that Dr. Maclean had done great good in the congregation. Mr. McCart then read an address setting forth in strong terms the appreciation of Dr. and Mrs. Maclean's friends and expressing the prayerful hope that in the larger service to which the doctor has been called he may have much of the presence and power of God's Holy Spirit in uplifting the fallen among men.

On behalf of the congregation Mr. McCart then presented them with a purse as a small token of love and appreciation.

Dr. Maclean, in replying, said it would be impossible to express their appreciation of this token of the people's kindness and devotion. They had had proof of the loyalty and love of the congregation since coming to Avonmore. Judging by the number present, they were leaving many friends, and he knew he had not sacrificed right or principle to make or keep these friends. If we "trust in God and do the right," we shall have friends worthy of the name. Among those present were those most devoted to the service of God, and those who had shewn zeal and enthusiasm in soul-winning. Tney had been under fire with him, they had fought and labored together and returned from the conflict with the banner of the cross unsullied. He went elsewhere to lead another battalion, bnt the army was not disbanded. They would fight under another leader, and he prayed that he might be another Wellington and that God would make them more than conquerors and in due time give them a crown of life.

Light refreshments were served and the company dispersed after singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Why Liquid Catarrh Remedies Fail

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the linings of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it, you send th richest pine balsams right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, 25c.

Obituary.

On April 27th, gone to the gentle Shepherd's arms, little Mabel, aged 2 weeks and 6 days, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Ball, of Chesterville.

Our little rosebud faded,
Fell fromt he parent stem,
And oft our weary hearts compare
The days of now and then.

We miss the joyous happy face,
The merry sparkling eye,
Our baby! Ah! We little thought
Our darling girl would die,

Would die—no; Jesus took her home,
To a happier life than here,
He calls them parents, come to me,
Look! be ye of good cheer.

Th' little crib is empty now,
And Mabel needs no more
Th' fond caress of mother's arm,
She's on the other shore.

Though there's a short aud narrow bed,
A little lonely grave,
Upon the hillside's quiet breast,
Mabel passed in the wave.

That bathed her feet, then stilled the breast
And faded the rosy cheeks,
Mabel went up to rest for aye
With the Saviour, loving, meek.

Look up! Papa, and mamma, too,
Hark, hear the gentle call,
I'm waiting on the other shore,
I'm waiting for you all.
