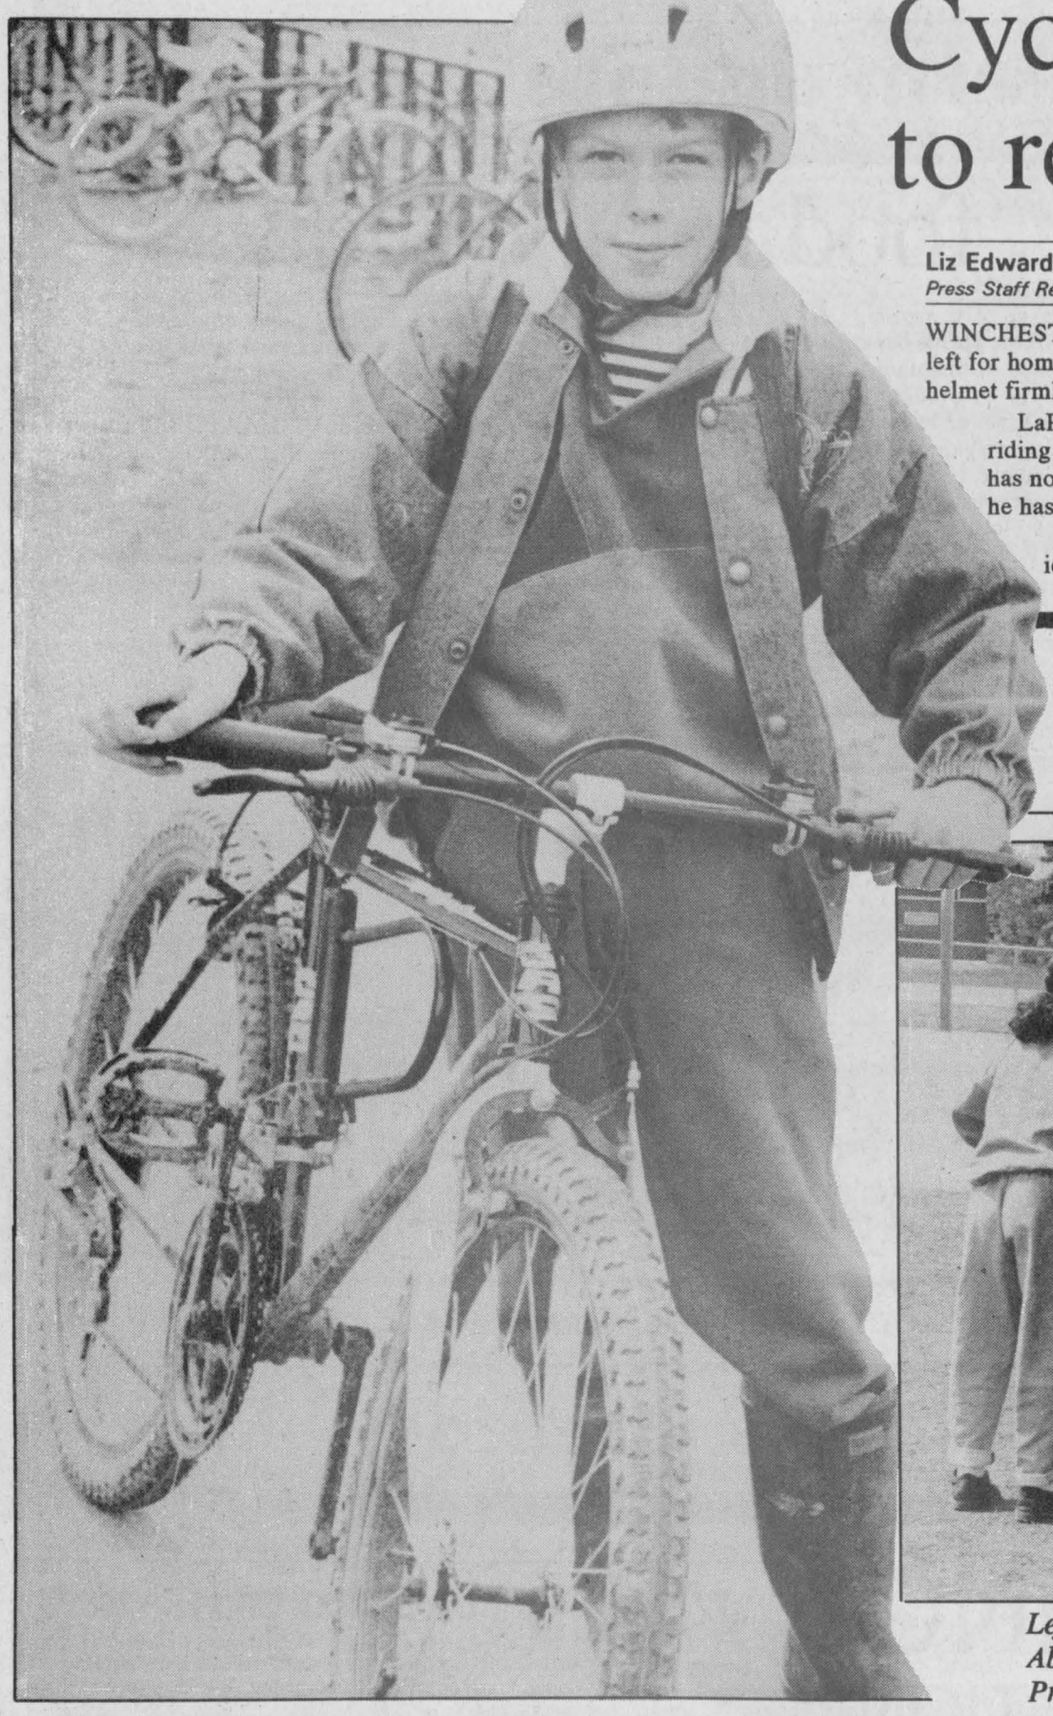
Cyclists urged to 'use your head' to reduce bike-related accidents



Liz Edwards
Press Staff Reporter

WINCHESTER — Before Adam LaPorte, 9, left for home, he strapped a blue cycling helmet firmly to his head.

LaPorte, one of dozens of students riding their bike to school in Winchester, has no qualms about wearing it. He says he has good reason.

"It's for your safety. It's a good idea," he says.

"You have to be careful," agrees his brother Eric, 10, wearing an identical model.

With warm weather in the air, bicycles have become part of the daily traffic once again and this week until May 8, local police detachments across Ontario are making a special effort to make sure cyclists start the season off safely.

"We will be trying to concentrate on violations like bicycles running stop signs," says Sgt. Jim Irvine of the Winchester Ontario Provincial Police Detachment.

"A lot of accidents happen with bicycles when they go whipping out in front of cars."

Wearing a helmet is one of the fundamental ways to lessen your chances of injury, says Patricia Holas of the Canada Safety Council in Ottawa.

There are about 50,000 bicycle-related injuries a year in Canada. Head injuries account for about 30 per cent of them and almost 80 per cent of bicycle-related long-term injuries or deaths. Most of these incidents can be prevented by protective head gear but nationally, only five to 10 per cent of cyclists wear helmets.

Be a role model because if the child sees you wear a helmet then he will want to wear a helmet.

Patricia Holas, Canada Safety Council

"I think in about a year and a half it will be law that you would be required to wear a helmet. Right now we're just hoping that people use common sense," says Holas.

"What I want to do is to encourage parents to wear a helmet, not just the child. Be a role model because if the child sees you wear a helmet then he will want to wear a helmet."

The Morewood School Committee held an awareness night last week to encourage cycling safety and helmet use. About 75 people attended and were told about head injuries relating to bicycle accidents, safe cycling tips as well as how to properly size a bicycle and helmet.

About 17 helmets were sold by Sports Unlimited of Winchester at a reduced price.

"It's been shown a lot of kids don't wear their helmets because of peer pressure," says Joan Davies, one of the safety night organizers.

Morewood is also challenging other schools to improve the number of students wearing helmets while riding bikes.

"We figured the more kids can wear their helmets, the easier it will be for other kids to wear them and easier for us as parents to persuade them to wear them."

Nationview students experiment with science

by Michelle Valiquet
Press News Editor

SOUTH MOUNTAIN— Hearing Nationview Public School student Laura Palmer explain the origins of her science fair experiment you might think she had taken a lesson from the book of 18th century English scientist, Sir Isaac Newton.

When an apple fell from a tree and struck Newton on the head, legend has it he used the incident to development the law of gravity. In a similar vein, Palmer was pouring a bottle of soda pop for some friends when some of the liquid spilt into the open cutlery drawer.

"I didn't notice it, but the next day when I went to get the silverware out, the cola had discolored some spoons," says Palmer. "I thought if it does that to metal then I could just imagine what it does to your teeth and stomach."

When Palmer and her 25 Grade 7 classmates were challenged last December by teacher Clayton Barkley to come up with an experiment for the school's first science fair in years, her mind returned to that simple household accident.

"I thought it would be interesting," explains Palmer. "And it was."

Fellow classmate Jason Thompson took a more ecological bent for his project. Thompson decided to investigate solar cooking as a way to save energy.

"With everybody being concerned about the environment these days, I thought it would be an idea to see if using the sun to cook food would work," says Thompson, adding he discovered the concept in a book.

"It was lots of work," he notes, "but fun to do."

Students submitted their proposed experiments for approval to Barkley and he monitored their progress helping them develop the finished product.

"The emphasis was on the process not necessarily the experiment itself," says Barkley.

The greater understanding students gained of the scientific processes has a space-age spinoff. They have recently followed the progress of space shuttle astronauts conducting their experiments while circling the earth.

Barkley says students will now be able to view the work in a new light. "When you understand how an experiment works you can better grasp what the astronauts are doing too."

Pupils presented their projects to their classmates last week and then installed their experiments for viewing by the rest of the school last Friday. Staff members judged the work but no prizes were awarded.

"There were six or seven experiments that were of similar high calibre," admits Barkley. "It was too close to call."

Future science fair participants could end up competing with experiments from other schools. Barkley says Nationview may eventually participate in the tri-county science fair held annually in Cornwall.

Local dealers elected to ORFEDA positions

TORONTO — Two local equipment dealers were elected to positions with the Ontario Retail Farm Equipment Dealers' Association at the 47th annual meeting and convention held recently in Toronto.

Dave Black of Weagant Farm Supplies Ltd. west of Winchester was elected director for ORFEDA for 1993.

As well, John Bouwers of the Metcalfe Service Centre Ltd. was elected area representative for ORFEDA for the upcoming year.

The recognized voice of farm equipment dealers, ORFEDA is a non-profit voluntary provincial association founded in 1945. The association makes presentations to the provincial government, supplies trade publications and dealer bulletins, conducts training seminars, provides insurance counselling and legal representations to its members.

Through its computer division ORFEDA is selling, installing and servicing dealer in-house computer systems.

ORFEDA also operates the Outdoor Power Equipment Division (OPED) for Ontario Power Equipment Dealers' Association.

The end of an era

AVONMORE — Remember Becky Bearinger's name, because in the Ontario dairy industry, at least, it could be the answer to a trivia question someday. The 19-year-old Kitchener area native is the last Ontario Dairy Princess, currently on a tour of Eastern Ontario.

Next year the princess will be replaced by a dairy educator — a man or woman, married or single, 18 or older. That person will concentrate on educating students about agriculture.

"In some ways I feel sad because it's a tradition we've had for 37 years," said Bearinger while visiting Tagwi Secondary School on April 19.

"It has a lot of symbolism and it's been a way for a lot of young women to open a door into a traditionally male-dominated industry."

But many women today, Bearinger said, "are finding other doors."

Bearinger was never much involved in her family's dairy farm until she entered high school and began showing a calf as a 4-H club member. Then she took on more responsibilities on the farm, and eventually decided to try the dairy princess program.

At first she saw the program as a way to gain teaching experience, the career she wanted to pursue. But since she won the provincial title last August, her career goals have changed.

Bearinger hopes eventually to get involved in agriculture policy formation or trade negotiations.

Next year Bearinger will complete her high school education. As provincial dairy princess, she had to take a year off to travel around the province.

Much of her time so far has been spent at urban schools, where many students are unfamiliar with the workings of the dairy industry. Bearinger said many are simply misinformed.

She said she learned about different approaches to dairy farming in other rural areas of the province and, in urban areas, about consumer habits and attitudes.

Bearinger's term will be up at the end of August.

Plastic bales: food for thought

Dianne Fetterly
Agricultural editor

KEMPTVILLE — If a one-day pilot agricultural plastics recycling day proves successful, farmers may soon have an outlet for plastic used on round bales and haylage.

Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food Engineer, Steve Clarke, who's in charge of the project said he's very optimistic about the project's success.

There has been a lot of interest from different sources and industry has committed to the project, he said.

"A fair bit of plastic did come in and if it (program) works we can start telling farmers next fall to save their plastic, Clarke added.

Located at the Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology last Tuesday the depot accepted polyethylene plastic such as bale wrap, ag bags, long tubing, bale bags or sheets of plastic from horizontal silos. The plastic was separated into different thicknesses in case any contained different materials.

Once sorted, the plastic was baled for easier handling and transport. A half-ton truck heaped with loose plastic produced only eight small bales, Clarke explained.

The recycled plastics can be used in the making of different products, said Clarke.

Polychem is attempting to recycle some of the plastic back into tubing and sheets, while other types are pelletized to be sold to other companies for garbage bags, etc.

Randy Howanyk of Mobil Chemicals Canada Ltd. said the plastic Mobil accepts will be sent to the company's Florida plant to see if it will blend with sawdust to make lumber.

At this point, the blend of sawdust and agricultural plastics is just on a trial basis, but "definitely worth a try." And if the plastic can't be used for lumber it can still be recycled back into plastic, he added.

Mobil is currently using stretch wrap, which is a similar product to the agricultural plastic but less contaminating to blend with the sawdust, Howanyk said.

The plastic is melted to a pliable consistency, mixed with the sawdust and moulded into lumber. The lumber works and looks like wood lumber, he explained.

The project is joint venture among OMAF, industry and Kemptville College. KCAT supplied the site, baler, manpower, while Crop Sciences head, Bill Curnoe organized the collection day.

Another collection day was held in the Cobden area yesterday (May 4).

The agricultural plastic collected at last week's Collection Day at KCAT was baled with a conventional hay baler to make it more compact for transport.

Our leaders again this year are Paul Velthuis and Brent Taylor.

At our first meeting, we had a good turnout of 21 members.

Chesterville 4-H Quilting Club

by Emily Slowey

CHESTERVILLE — The fifth meeting of the Chesterville Supreme Seams quilting club was held Thurs., April 15 in the Women's Institute room of the Chesterville Community Centre.

The focus of the meeting was finishing a project. Throughout our past meetings, we have completed three different quilting samples.

To receive recognition for completing this club, there must be at least one completely finished project such as a wall hanging, a pot holder, or a pencil case.

The club discussed the exhibit board that will be displayed on achievement night, by the group, on Wed., May 5 at Henderson Hall in Winchester, which will mark the end of this club topic.

Buck-a-Roos study consuming

by Erin McDonell

IROQUOIS — On Fri., April 23, the Brinston Budget Buck-a-Roos, a 4-H group studying consuming met at the Beginnings Store in Iroquois.

This was just the start of a fun-filled night. At Beginnings, the 4-H group was given a tour of the store by Dean Swerdfeger who later answered members' questions about the store.

After supper at the Centennial Restaurant in Morrisburg, the group moved on to the Spring Trade Show at the Morrisburg Arena.

At the trade show the 4-H members observed the exhibits to see what was displayed and how it was presented. The exhibitors were asked questions such as, had they ever been in a trade show before, and how did they think a trade show benefitted the community. The group adjourned at 8:45.

Brinston 4-H Craft Club winds up

by Kylie Adams

BRINSTON — The Brinston 4-H Craft Club has come to an end. This club was fun and creative and the crafts are beautiful.

At the first meeting we made corn husk dolls. They were challenging, along with cute and creative. Also we carved pumpkins, however we liked.

At the second meeting some girls made pinecone wreaths, others made candle holders, baler twine wreaths, and decorative fans.

At the next meeting, we finished our pinecone wreaths, which turned out beautifully and then made Christmas centrepieces.

During our fourth meeting we made decorative wreaths with dried flowers and grapevines and had lots of fun.

The fifth meeting we made Easter baskets and dyed eggs. Everything was so pretty.

At the last meeting we made cross-stitches for Mother's Day. They were kind of tricky, but very nice.

Our achievement program was held April 15 at 7:30pm at the IOOF Hall in Brinston. There was a short program followed by refreshments. All of the crafts were displayed.

Receiving a pin for completing six clubs was Karen Glaus. Receiving pen sets for completing 12 clubs were Darlene Zandbergen, Jennifer Ormond and Susanne Schraner.

Everyone received bars for completing the club and the two first year members received a pin and a plaque. These members were Tricia Kaddie and Erin MacDonnell.

Thanks to everyone who contributed to the club. A special thanks to Japke Tibben, Shelley Mason and Faye Byvelds for their leadership.

Cheryl Harkin kicked off the evening by welcoming the club's guests. Kathy Hardy said a few words to the group.

Helen McRobbie and Lilli Dietrich presented a demonstration on candlemaking and invited members of the audience to try their hand at the art.

There was free time to look at the displays of candles and apiculture manuals made by the members.

Snacks baked and prepared by members were served before the meeting ended.

The club thanked Kathy Hardy, Crerar's Honey Factory and store, Benson's candle supplies, Bill Mark, Frank Toonen, Monique Sheldrick and Debbie Merkley.

Members of the new Golden Triangle Co-operative celebrated together for the first time last Friday and Saturday during customer appreciation days. "Our directors, staff and members have worked hard over the past six months, and it's time we congratulated ourselves," said general manager Richard Graham. Graham added he hoped new investors were also attracted to experience the benefits of the Co-op. Pictured; Tony Tennant and Eileen Gannon of the Brinston store chat with customer John Dalrymple. 21 graduate from 10-steps program

by Eda Van der Linden

It is a rare opportunity when you can bring into practice what has been taught in a course, but if you attended a course called "10 steps to community action" the possibility is right there.

The task of all the participants was to put together a graduation program. After some deliberation the decision was a dinner in the Coachhouse Restaurant, Kemptville, plus entertainment. It always looks so easy from the outside, you go to a dinner, sit down and eat and entertainment will pop out of the woodwork.

But now behind the scene... 21 participants coming from a wide area... who is doing what, who is introducing whom, and who will do the thanking, etc., and who has the nerve to do the entertaining? It is difficult to mention any one in particular, all were involved one way or another, and chairman of the committee Margaret MacDonald was excellent in making sure every one had a role to play.

Thus came the evening. A "mixer" research project with the purpose of meeting every one (all spouses were invited) was prepared. A paper with 25 questions to be answered was handed at the entrance by hostess Ann Velthuis and only one positive answer from any one person was allowed. Who owns a blue car, who has more than five children, who was out of the country in the last half year, (oh, ouch, cross-border shopping??), who owns a kilt, etc., etc. Those were not too hard to get someone to initial. But there was only one man who admitted to the fact that he was wearing a night shirt to bed!!

We sat down for dinner. One motto: "Take the initiative if you don't like something and if you can change it, do it!" was also put into practice. The seating arrangement was changed with not much chaos and this time out of the woodwork popped a badly needed microphone. (Thank you Coachhouse.)

Thanks to master of ceremonies, George Innes, the program ran very smoothly; from greetings to proper introductions, enjoying a delicious dinner, to a high point: presentation of diplomas to 21 graduates, a 10 steps program logo pin plus a T-shirt.

The advisory committee members present were recognized and thanked: Dawn Runnalls, Winchester; Theresa Whalen-Ruiter, Ramsayville; and Cynthia Whetter, Chesterville. Not present were Dwayne Acres, John Dalrymple and David Kemp.

Program co-ordinator, Arlene Ross of Orleans and curriculum directors, Sandra Lawson, Nepean, and Jean Sullivan, Winchester, all received flowers and a very warm thank you for all their work.

Entertainment was by the participants. Three story tellers made everyday events look like million dollar events and a very good laugh and applause were their reward. Debby Gallagher and husband, Allen, entertained with their singing and guitar. It was superb. They even had us act out some of their songs and everybody entered into the spirit of the evening. Thanks Debby and Allen!

At the conclusion of the evening David Whetter of Winchester explained the role Local Agricultural Employment Board (LAEB) had in administering the funding for the program.

A video was shown: "Passing the Buck". It was made with Cornwall in mind by the Border Zone Advisory Committee (BZAC) for the Chamber of Commerce.

The evening was a success. All participants have a warm memory of the course. New friends were made. We will meet again in October.

Eda Van der Linden was sponsored by the Ottawa-Carleton Federation of Agriculture.

No extension on NISA deadlines

The 1991 Net Income Stabilization Account packages were mailed out March 31, 1993.

The deadline for submission is July 31, with no extension. A five-per-cent per month reduction will be applied to maximum deposit entitlements for applications submitted between Aug. 1 and Dec. 31, 1993.

The program allows you to annually deposit money into an individual account and receive a matching contribution from the federal and provincial governments. Your money grows quickly in NISA with earned interest at competitive rates on government contributions - and three per cent above competitive rates on your deposits.

Qualifying commodities are grains, oilseeds, specialty crops and eligible horticulture crops not covered by National Tripartite Stabilization agreements. Farm fed grain for cattle, hogs, sheep and lambs is covered based on a percentage (coefficient) of livestock sales that represent the average value of grain fed.

Discussions are continuing about extending NISA to other commodities.

- Applications have been simplified.

- Beginning May 1, producers will have the option of holding their NISA deposits in participating financial institutions. Contact your bank for more information.

- Applications can be filed electronically by using the Disk Direct service.

- If you choose not to deposit funds to your account for 1992, to keep your account active, you must submit a completed NISA deposit/withdrawal form, a completed NISA Statement of Farm Income and your $40 administrative cost share.

Challenges great, rewards greater for HC

LONDON — Optimism for a greater, more member- responsive, member-driven Holstein Canada was expressed at the 110th annual meeting April 20 at the Radisson Hotel in London.

Highlighting the meeting was the presentation to the members from management consultants Peat, Marwick, Stevenson and Kellogg. (All members had previously been mailed a written report). They were engaged one year ago to assess the entire Association, and recommend improvements.

Stephen Beatty, on behalf of the consultants, reviewed the key issues and concerns that surfaced from the country-wide member input sessions. He also summarized the major findings and presented principal recommendations. Included in the suggestions were improved communication with members, renewed accountability at all levels, co- operation with industry partners and concentration on core services. It was stated that "the changes the Association is proposing will require courage, commitment and leadership. It will require good communications with both the membership and the staff and will require both the support and patience of members. The challenge is great; the rewards are greater!"

The consultants had also recommended that a special renewal committee be named to implement the recommendations. It was pointed out that a committee with smaller working groups had already been appointed, had already met and was dedicated to making the association relevant and valuable to its members. Questions from the members were fielded and a lively discussion took place.

President M.M. (Mac) Logan of Woodstock, in his address, referred to dairy cattle statistics and stated that "while the number of milk producing cows is declining, purebred registratrions are holding their own. Additionally, even though dairy herds are diminishing, the count of Holstein members has increased over a ten-year period." Consequently, there is value in Holstein Canada membership and the services it offers.

Holstein Canada had a good year in 1992. Its near- record surplus resulted from fee increases in registrations and transfers, combined with an overall unchanged activity level from the previous year. Purebred registrations and transfers witnessed a slight increase while percentage and recorded registrations dropped slightly. Direct operating costs declined almost three per cent from 1991, due to lower staffing levels.

The association proposed some bylaw revisions. They were aimed primarily at fee reforms which make the registration and transfer of animals more convenient and affordable for the breeder. Classification and milk recording requirements were eliminated for the registration of Qualified Entry animals. Others allow for payment in arrears, which has recently been a controversial issue with the members. Branch levies were also removed from the bylaws.

Over 20 resolutions from the members and branches were discussed and those passed were forwarded to the board of directors and appropriate committees for consideration.

Numerous questions from the membership were posed which dealt with the association's head office building lease and its involvement in Trakit, its commercial subsidiary.

In the administration committee report it was announced that several decisions have already been implemented which streamline and improve service to members; others are reflected in the bylaw changes. The board is also committed to maintaining the turn-around time for regular registrations to less than 15 working days in January, February and March. All other months fall into the norm of 8-12 working days.

The Breed Improvement Committee Chair noted that the main objective of his team was the development of the Enhanced Type Classification Program, scheduled for implementation the beginning of May. The association continues to maintain an effective working relationship with scientists at the University of Guelph.

The third Standing Committee - Member Relations, has the important function of fostering communication between the association and its members. It took a forward step in deciding to produce its own newsletter for members, as an alternative to a breed magazine. Beginning in June, all association members will be receiving Info Holstein. The association is currently undergoing negotiations with a number of industry partners on the joint delivery of extension services.

The association's top honor, the Master Breeder award, was presented to 26 recipients by past Holstein president and master breeder, William Grieve, Dorchester. Immediate past president and interim secretary, Keith Flaman, Vibank, Saskatchewan paid tribute to outgoing president Logan with a gold watch.

A well-attended banquet and entertainment by The Leahy Family concluded Holstein Canada's 110th annual meeting of members.

Crysler school launches anti-violence campaign during Education Week

CRYSLER — Notre-Dame du St. Rosaire school is officially launching an anti-violence awareness campaign for its rural community during Education Week in May.

Starting May 7, school and community representatives, parents and children will form a human chain at the school to demonstrate their commitment to a violence-free society. The winning family will also be named in our anti-violence slogan contest.

The events will kickoff an effort to move the awareness campaign out of the school and into the community to form a partnership against violence.

While many people regard violence as largely an urban problem, events in many communities demonstrate vandalism and physical abuse among students is a growing problem in rural areas as well.

The problem may not be as severe as in large centres, but rural residents are not isolated from the many sources of violence. Prevention now is far better than waiting for it to escalate.

For the past two months, staff has been working directly with pupils at the school to inform them about the causes of social violence and the many forms it takes: verbal abuse, physical assault, vandalism etc.

Weekly workshops for pupils from pre-kindergarten to Grade 8 have used discussion groups, songs, role-playing, visual arts and analysis of various media to heighten awareness.

Guest speakers ranging from Ontario Provincial Police Const. Bernie Gadbois to a reporter for an Ottawa newspaper also spoke to the children about sources of violence, and their responsibility for curbing it.

As well, teachers engaged students and their families in a logo contest to emphasize the positive message of promoting a world free of violence.

The winning logo will appear on buttons paid for by the local Optimist Club, Knights of Columbus, the Crysler Community Centre, and the Notre-Dame du St. Rosaire parents' committee. It will also appear on T-shirts which will be sold at cost- price.

La Montee d'Elle, a resource centre to combat family violence in Alexandria, has also contributed to the prize for the winning anti-violence slogan.

For further information on the event, please contact: Linda Couture Stockland, 987-2034.

Curran Carpet Centre was established in 1978 on St. Lawrence Street, Winchester by Bernie Curran. The store moved to Chesterville in 1980, and was sold to Andy and Kaireen Cotnam in February 1984, due to the illness of Madeline Curran. After the sale of the business, Bernie remained with the Cotnams as the installer. Bernie Curran retired in April 1989, but stays in close contact in a consulting capacity, and as a close friend of the Cotnams. Andy Jr. took over the installation side of the business.

In September 1987 Curran Carpet Centre moved to a new 3,000 square foot building on Industrial Road, Chesterville, with Power by Jennifer in one part of the premises. La Leche League moved into an extension in March 1992. Kaireen Cotnam opened the Winchester store in August 1990, and moved up the street to larger premises in November 1992. Employees include Mary Ahokas, Andy Jr., Jeff Barkley, Beverley Ibbitson, Catherine Kelly, and Florence Hoople as well as Kaireen Cotnam.

Quality, Service, Dependability

Opening his ultra-modern body shop facility has been a lifelong dream for Winchester native Dennis Carkner.

More than 20 years ago he started in this business, working for Brennan Motors in Chesterville. Then, along with brother Garry, operated "Carkner's Collision" in Hallville. Always in the back of his mind, Carkner was dreaming of owning a shop in Winchester.

After a nine-year stint as a body shop manager at a local GM dealership, Carkner moved on to work as a production manager, supervising a large-volume GM repair centre in Ottawa.

Finally in October 1988 he opened his own shop in Winchester - D's Collision Center was a reality. As a result of strong community and individual support, "D's" quickly outgrew their facilities and Carkner proceeded with plans to build that shop he had been dreaming about all those years. Carkner even went so far as travelling to Europe "to make sure he was up to specs on the new technologies of the industry", ensuring environmentally friendly, top quality repairs and services to fill his customers' needs.

"From Part-time hobby to full-time business"

Sheldon started his business on a part-time basis and as a hobby; hand painting farm and business signs. As the demand grew, it soon became a full-time operation. Trying to keep up to the demand of signs, Sheldon purchased computerized vinyl cutters. Along with the computers came a new line of business, striping vehicles.

Today, Sheldon and his wife Dianne, employ two full-time and two part-time employees to operate the three computers at Shane Signs. The business has expanded from wood signs and truck lettering; to backlite, silk-screening, coroplast signs, logo designing, billboards, and vehicle striping. Vinyl is still used in all the work, however, Sheldon still hand paints, to add a professional look.

The doors are always open at Shane Signs for all who wish to see the operation.

Peacekeepers given hero's welcome

Greg Hewitt
Special to the Press

CHESTERVILLE— Two former students returned April 26 to a hero's welcome at North Dundas District High School.

Dave de Bruijn and Ian MacLeod, reservists with the SD&G Highlanders, were honored at the school after returning earlier in April from a six-month peacekeeping tour with the United Nations in the war-torn Yugoslav republics.

The student body, packed into the gymnasium for the ceremony, gave de Bruijn and MacLeod a hearty cheer when they were introduced by vice-principal Don Fairweather.

De Bruijn told the students that the letters of support they sent over the months "boosted our spirits."

MacLeod thanked them for the ceremony, and said the letters were especially helpful around Christmas.

"We were depressed but when we got all those stacks of mail it really cheered us on," he said.

Chesterville Reeve and SD&G Warden Jim Cook told the two that everyone "breathed a collective sigh of relief" when they returned safely.

Cook encouraged them to share their experience with their friends "so that they may be prepared when they are called upon."

To illustrate the state of the former Yugoslavia to students, NDDHS "prime minister" Hazel Booth used a divided Canada as a similar scenario.

GREETING

Booth read a greeting from Stormont-Dundas MP Bob Kilger, who could not attend the ceremony.

Kilger described MacLeod and de Bruijn as two of the many Canadians who give Canada an international reputation as leaders in peacekeeping missions, which he said are an "important and admirable assignment for Canada's forces."

"For your service, we salute you and congratulations for a job well done," the message read.

NDDHS student council representative Amy Simpson presented de Bruijn and MacLeod with NDDHS caps and T-shirts, as well as "Forest Troll" dolls.

Simpson read a message from SD&G and East Grenville MPP Noble Villeneuve congratulating them on their "tremendous achievement."

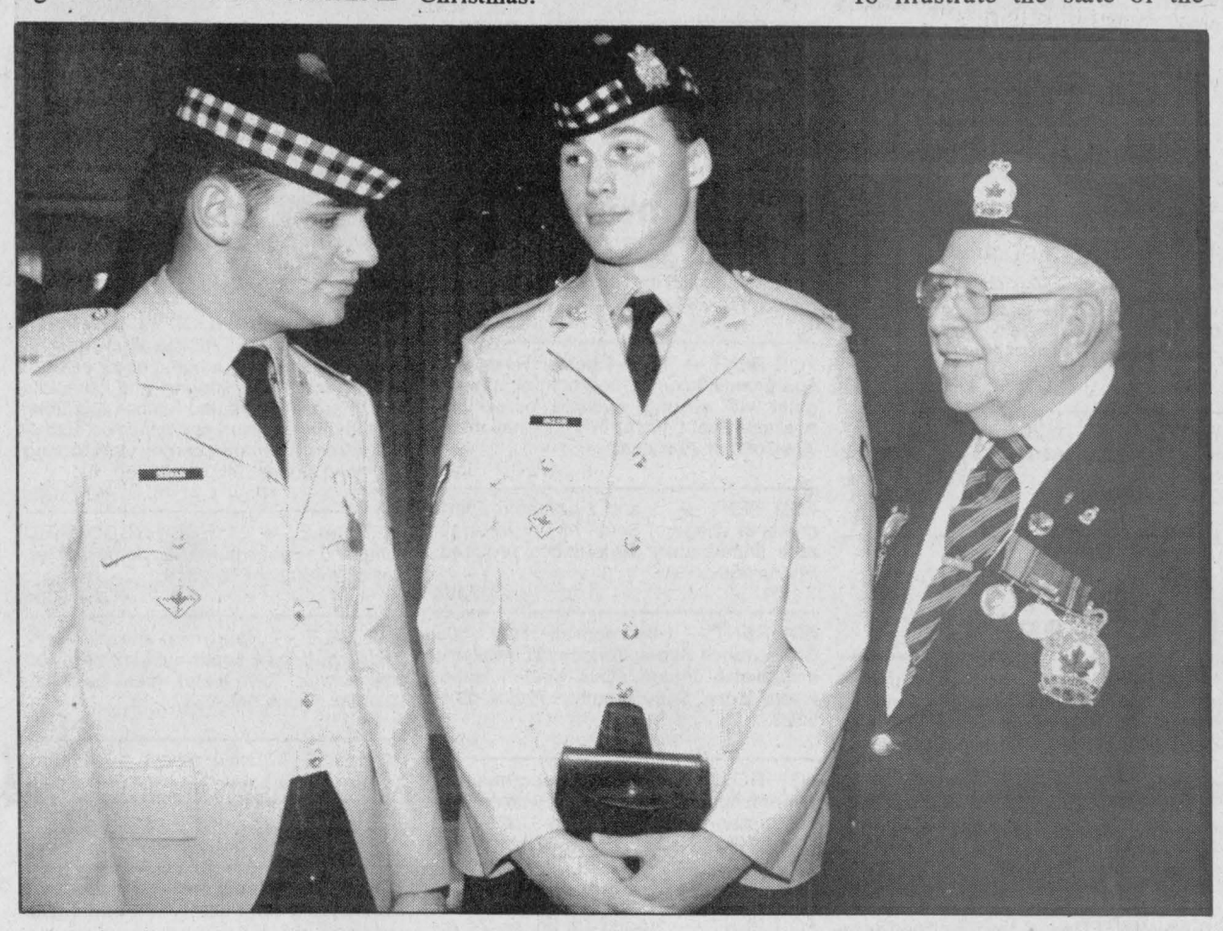
"What we see and hear through the media really makes us all reflect on how good it feels to be Canadian. Your leadership in this is commendable," the message read.

Simpson said a care package sent to the two was heartfelt, although late. It arrived nine hours before they were to come back to Canada.

Chesterville Legion member Jim Behan was on hand to bring greetings from those who have served before.

"I hope their future endeavors are good and if they keep in the army, I hope they go all the way," he said.

MacLeod and de Bruijn were treated to a musical salute from the NDDHS concert band, as well as vocal presentations.



Dave de Bruijn and Ian MacLeod were honored recently at North Dundas District High School. Legionnaire Jim Behan, right, also attended. The two young soldiers were part of Canadian peacekeeping efforts abroad.

Mountain musings

by Shirley Mills

For those spouses (and sometimes kids too) who are asking, "when is Mother's Day?", it's this weekend, Sun., May 9. A good way to start the day is to take in the breakfast in South Mountain. Sponsored by St. Peter's Anglican Church, it is held in the IOOF Hall in South Mountain from 9am until noon. The whole family would enjoy it.

Surprising as it seems, Rideau Hill Camp will be opening for business in about three weeks. To get the camp ready, there will be a clean-up day on Sat., May 8. If you can help you are invited to turn up at the camp (on River Road, just south of Osgoode) at 1pm, complete with rakes or shovels. You will receive a warm welcome.

Have you ever been to Lazarus House in South Mountain? It's a fascinating place. Open Monday to Friday from 9am until noon, do take in those things you no longer need. And while you're there look around. It's like a great yard sale and among the clothes, household goods, etc., they have (dare I say it) used books. If you find something you like you can pay by making a donation. It's well worth a visit.

But you had passed away.
Although we have each other,
We all still miss you so,
The hardest part of losing you,
Is learning to let go.

They'll be ours to keep forever,
They're treasuries of the heart.

Residents buy 900 composters

ST. ANDREWS — Nine hundred new composters will soon begin operating in SD&G backyards.

The composters were ordered April 28 in the co- operative composter distribution program between Cornwall and the SD&G Waste Study.

"I have received a lot of calls about composting since the co-operative distribution program was announced," says Bill de Wit, Cornwall's waste reduction co-ordinator.

Anne MacGillivray, SD&G waste study co-ordinator says, "SD&G municipal clerks have told me there's been a good response to the co-operative composter distribution program. I'm glad we could do it this way - it's a lot cheaper and faster than everybody having to work it out on their own."

Backyard composting is one of the cheapest ways to get rid of almost a third of a household's garbage - about $23.18 per tonne according to the Recycling Council of Ontario.

MacGillivray has also received inquiries from SD&G residents who want to build their own composters. She provides the information to anyone who's interested. She also notes that just because someone doesn't have a composter in their backyard doesn't mean they're not composting.

"Lots of our rural residents knew about composting a long time ago," she says. "Those piles of vegetable peelings, grass and leaves in the backyard near the gardens have been doing the trick for a long time, pretty sensibly too. Some have pointed out to me that a composter just makes it a bit neater for those who may not have as much space."

For information on composter pickup day residents are asked to check with their local municipal office. Municipalities have also been supplied with information sheets on the "dos and don'ts" of composting.
