PRESTON ELLIOTT VICTORIOUS MAJORITY OF SIXTY-ONE

After one of the longest and hardest campaigns ever fought in the county of Dundas for parliamentary honors, Preston Elliot, representing the United Farmers, was elected a member of the House of Commons on Tuesday by a majority of sixty-one votes over O. D. Casselman who held the seat since the election of 1917.

No stone had been left unturned in the efforts of the candidates and their supporters which would have a bearing on the result. Outsiders were brought into the riding by both parties. Hon. W. E. Raney, Attorney General in the Drury Government, being the big gun on the Farmers' side, while Sir George Foster practically closed the campaign for the conservatives with last Saturday's meeting in Winchester.

The length of the campaign no doubt was responsible for much of the bitterness which crept into it towards the close, caused by the misguided enthusiasm of followers of each party.

The details of the polling in each sub-division are not available yet and only the majorities of the different townships and villages are given as a whole. All the villages of the riding gave majorities for the Government, while four of the townships gave majorities for Elliott, Matilda with 74 and Mountain with 281 retaining their traditional Conservative attitude.

In Conservative ranks the results in Osnabruck and Finch townships were looked upon as a barometer of the party's chances to elect its candidate. It was believed that if not more than a majority of 400 was rolled up for the farmers in the two eastern townships that it could be easily overcome, but with the figures of 363 in Finch and 131 in Osnabruck the lead could not be overcome. Winchester village was expected to take care of the not more than 400 by at least that many for Casselman, and then leave the fight to the rest of old Dundas to produce a government victory. As results show Winchester fell down badly on their contribution to the sum total, the cause of which was probably a nausea induced locally.

Morrisburg came through with an even dozen of a majority for Casselman, which, when ciphered down, equals about one for each benefit or request granted through the efforts of the government candidate during the past four years.

In Chesterville, twenty-five was the majority conceded Casselman by the Progressives before the vote was counted, and a splendid majority of 106 is a personal tribute by home folks to him.

To Preston Elliott we extend our heartiest congratulations. He fought a good fight and won. His own township stood with him, giving him more than enough to carry him to victory. With Williamsburg township of the old riding, and the two additions making Greater Dundas, giving him very substantial majorities he was effectively supported, making the victory truly a farmers' victory. We believe Mr. Elliott will make a worthly representative of this riding, broad enough in his views for the responsible position to which the majority of the voters home elected him.

Following a the remajorities in the different municipalities:—

Thanks To The Electors

Ladies and Gentleman:—

I desire to express my sincere thanks to the electors of Dundas-Stormont, for the splendid support given me at the polls in the election contest just closed.

I know that this victory could not have been achieved had it not been for the able assistance of loyal friends in every part of the riding.

I fully realize a great responsibility rests upon me as your representative in the House of Commons. I have none but the best of feelings toward those who opposed me from conscientious motives and so long as I am your representative it is my firm purpose to serve all faithfully, and to the best of my ability.

WHY WE ADVERTISE

"Service That Satisfies"

Seven years ago we started a Battery Service Station.

We installed the finest equipment obtainable. We gathered a staff of real dependable men.

BUT MOST IMPORTANT.

We sent these men to the factory to learn the battery business from the ground up.

They learned how to make a plate, a separator, a jar, a connector—and to assemble.

They also learned how to quickly detect trouble and the short methods of repair.

They learned at our expense—not by experimenting with your battery and charging the work to you.

Since then they have frequently visited the factory, keeping constantly in touch with development and new methods.

We have always given satisfactory service—because we make battery work a business—not a side line.

It will pay you to send us your battery this winter for Dry Storage.

Former Morewnod Boy in Double Wedding at Moose Jaw

The home of the Hon. J. A. and Mrs. Maharg, 1168 Redland Ave., was the scene of a very pretty double wedding on Wednesday afternoon, November 16, when their son, Archibald George, was married to Lillian Lois Morrison, daughter of Mrs. Mertha Poach, of Doland, S. D., and their daughter, Ethel Isabel Katie, became the bride of Isaac Bert York, third son of Mrs. L. York, of Moose Jaw, formerly of Morewood. The house was beautifully arranged with flowers and ferns and the brides passed through the ribboned aisles with the Hon. J. A. Maharg to the strains of the wedding march, and took there place in a large room before a bank of flowers and ferns where the ceremony was performed By Rev. Dr. A. A, Graham, in the presence of a number of friends and relatives. The brides, who were unattended, each wore a handsome gown of ivory crepe meteor with sleeves and cascades on the skirt of throne lace embroidered in knots with seed pearls. The train was looped up and hung from the waist caught by orange blossoms. The pretty bridal veil was arranged with a band of pearls across the forehead and held with orange blossoms. Each bride wore a string of pearls, the gift of the groom, and carried a large bouquet of white chrysanthemums and pale pink carnations. Mrs. J. A. Maharg was gowned in blue canton crepe embroidered in silver and wore a corsage bouquet of chrysanthemums. Mrs. York, mother of the groom, wore a handsome gown of blue satin embroidered in rose. Mrs. W. A. Matheson was attired in taupe satin embroidered in iridescent beads.

The dinning room in which the buffet supper was served was bright with chrysanthemums and carnations with streamers of smilax. A handsome cluny lace cloth covered the table on which stood thepyramid cake amid trailers of smilax and cut flowers. Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Maharg and Mr. and Mrs. I. B. York left by the evening train amid showers of good wishes and confetti to spend a short holiday in Winnipeg.

Mrs. York travelled in a blue crepe gown with panels of clipped moire ribbon, with hat to match and beaver coat. Mrs. Maharg was in blue silk with corresponding hat and wore a seal coat. The young couples received a number of handsome and useful presents.

Could Fly to Moon in About a Second

Emile Belot, famous astronomer, suggests that if one were able to ride a light ray (which travels 185,000 miles a second), and thus voyage through space. it would take only a little more than a second to reach the moon. In four minutes and twenty seconds one would land on Mars, and in 35 minutes one could get as far as Jupiter. Saturn could be reached in seventy minutes, and if you didn't fall off, you could reach Uranus in two hours and a half, and Neptnne in four hours.

Ticket Collector (to Mrs. Juggins in train with her little son):

"Come along now, mum, you'll have to pay for the child; he's not under three."

Mrs. Juggins (hastily): "No; but if 'e wasn't in his best suit, 'e'd 'a bin under the seat."

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. Nearly Serious Fire at Russell

What nearly happened to be a most disastrous fire took place on Tuesday about noon when Mr. Wm. J. Hume who was in his cow barn applying a coat of tar to a water tank which caught fire from a coal oil stove used in heating the tar.

Mr. Hume endeavoured to extinguish the blazing tank but was unable to do so he ran to a close neighbor and gave the alarm, by this time sparks had penetrated through the loft setting fire to the hay above, by this time a crowd had gathered and proceeded to pour water on the hay, but with no perceptible results. A hay knife was used in cutting down the hay on two sides of the fire and throwing it out through an opening made in the side of the barn. The two Chemical extinguishers were hurriedly despatched from the village and with their assistance and a continuous stream of water, the fire was brought under control, several cows were badly burned but not seriously.

Mr. Hume's face and hands received severe burns, which was attended to by Dr. McDougall. The barns were erected only this summer with all modern improvements among the best in the Township.

One Cargo Equals 200 Carloads

The big lake freighter, Price McKinney, came into Collingwood last Thursday night with a cargo of 200,000 bushels of wheat. The McKinney is one of finest class steamers on the lakes, and is one of the largest to trade into this port this season. The steamer went at once to the Grand Trunk elevator, at which the cargo was discharged.

Profitable Snakes

Near Brownsville Texas, W. A. King conducts one of the largest snake farms in the world, with a hundred hatchers constantly employed. The farm supplies specimens to museums and poison to chemists and medical men. Each rattler yields about a fourth of a tumblerful of the deadly green liquid. Snake oil, as a remedy for rheumatism, brings a good price, and hides and rattles are used in the manufacture of novelties.

Shot In Far Labrador

For the first time since the institution of the method of marking wild geese on the Jack Miner farm at Kingsville, a tag has been received from Labrador. This was received by Manley Miner last week, it having been found on the leg of a goose in the far eastern district. Mr. Miner states that he has never heard of the Canadian wild goose going as far east as the Labrador peninsula.—Jack Miner who is known from coast to coast has established a private sanctuary for wild birds at Kingsville and each spring thousands of geese and ducks rest at his place on their northern flight. They seem to know that at th s place they are quite safe and no danger of a charge of shot whistling around them.

Rye Crop is Large But it's For Bread

Canada's rye harvest this year will be 12,000,000 bushels, representing an increase of 500 per cent in five years. This phenomenal increase is due to the Government's encouragement of rye growing.

When prohibition began sweeping the American continent some economists foresaw smaller profits in rye production through curtailment of its use in manufacture of alcoholic beverages. But these statisticians failed to reckon the increased and widespread use of rye in Europe. One third of the European population lives on rye bread. It is the principal cereal in Belguim, Holland,—Germany, Austria and Russia.

Must Have a Spite Against Plaintiff

A case causing considerable interest in the north part of Hastings county will be tried at the December sessions of the county oourt. The plaintiff is J. W. Brown, of Bancroft village, while the defendants are six residents of the village and adjacent municipality.

It appears that Brown was proceeding to a neighbor's place when he was pounupon by eight men, all of whom were masked and was taken to a lonely place, where a liberal coat of tar and feathers was applied to him.

The day following, he visited Magistrate Larmen and laid information against six of his alleged assailants. While returning from the magistrate's office he was, he alleges, attacked by 12 men, all masked and was taken away to near Mill Bridge, where he was whipped and otherwise maltreated.

An Odd Duck

When Capt. Tullock of the steamer Clinton was coming down the lakes on his last trip previous to putting his vessel in the dry dock at Cornwall for the winter, and when between the Main Ducks and Nine Mile Point, he saw a strange object on the boat, which turned out to be a duck of a kind unfamiliar to him. This was at night and the bird seemed to be bewildered and was caught easily and put in the bath tub, where it made itself quite at home. When the Clinton got to Cornwall, the strange duck was referred to the bird expert of the Freeholder, who identified it as a male specimen of the long-tailed duck or old wife, locally known as Caween or Old Squaw. It is mostly a sea duck, and on eastern coast of the United States is called South, Southerly, from the resemblance of its cry to those words. The people on those coasts say that when these ducks are very clamorous it betokens a southerly wind or storm. Living priucipally on fish, they are not usually eaten, They are not common in this, but are occasionally shot here late in the fall. They are small in size, but the plumage is handsome. The head and neck are white with grey cheeks: a ring of black round the back and breast, black wings and a black tail eight or ten inches long.

When the Landlord Raised the Rent

"I never do have any fun'" complained a young girl petulantly.

"Come with me and I'll cure your discontent," suggested a visiting nurse of the National Sanitarium Association.

They visited a humble little home. The mother was struggling to support the three children, while her husband was fighting tuberculosis at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives.

Life was not rosy. It became tragic when the rent was doubled. Hopless despair looked from her brown eyes. Three pairs of childish eyes watching. sensed semething to make even baby lips quiver.

"But there!" with a smile, and the babies smiled too, "I musn't complain. He's getting better anyway. He writes its wonderful up there—its saved his life." And the brown eyes were a prayer.

"I've just got to help," exclaimed an enthusiastic young person as she and the nurse walked down the road.

Proper Feeding is Essential To Winter Egg Production

(Experiment Farm Note)

If satisfactory profits are to be obtained from the keeping of hens, it is necessary that eggs be produced during the season of scarcity and high prices.

Eggs laid in November and December will usually fetch from two to three times the price of eggs laid in April and May. Poultrymen should, therefore, put forth every effort towards the production of winter eggs. Success depends, very largely, upon the care and feed which the flock is given. There are other feeds besides the grain and water commonly fed, that are essential, if heavy winter production is to be expected. The most important of these are the green feeds, and it cannot be too strongly emphasized that these are absolutely necessary to high production. Green feed may be supplied in the form of mangels, clover hay, sprouted oats, waste cabbage or vegetable parings, while animal feed may be given in the form of milk, green cut bones, beef scrap or digestive tankage.

The following method of feeding should give satisfactory results: Morning—a light feed of scratch grain scattered in the litter. Noon—a moist mash may be given in which is mixed table scraps or green cut bone. Night—a full feed of scratch grain.

In addition to the forementioned a constant supply of grit, oyster shell, charcoal and fresh water should be kept before the flock at all times, also a dry mash. This may be made up of different ingredients, but one that will give good results is bran, middlings, corn meal, ground oats and meat meal, equal parts. If milk is available or green cut bone is being used the percentage of meat meal may be reduced. Feed the whole grain sparingly so as to get the flock to consume a large proportion of mash as it is always noticeable that the consumption of mash is greater when production is at its highest.

China's Great Canal

It is interesting to know that China's Grand Canal, at one time one of the world's great engineering wonders, is to be put in order and used ugain as a trade route between the north and south. The parts now blocked with mud are to be excavated, and a million and a quarter pounds are to be spent immediately. The work will be carried out under the direction of American engineers, and it is hoped that in a comparatively short period a section of one hundred miles will be made ready for navigation.

This canal, the most famous in the, world, was completed in 1350, and took six hundred years to construct. It utilizes stretches of various rivers on its route and including these, is over thousand miles long. The canal proper, however, is only about eight hundred miles in length, but, as an old English writer has said, "In point of magnitude our most extensive inland navigation in England can no more be compared to the grand trunk that interests China than a park or garden fishpond to the great Lake of Windermere."

In the days of its glory the canal had a wide and deep channel, and formed a great river, on which large vessels could ply. The water was maintained by means of sluices and ships were raised and lowered by mechanical devices. Apart from navigation the Grand Canal has always done a great and valuable work by draining an enormous stretch of swampy territory.

While driving to the city one morning a short time ago Cy Petlow met a neighboring farmer and they paused to talk over the crops, each patriotically endeavouring to outdo the other. The subject changed and Cy said:

"Are you in the market for a good horse, Eb?"

"You know me Cy—always ready for a dicker," Eb. replied.

Well, here's the critter. She's quiet as a lamb, any woman could drive her, and she's yours at rockbottom price."

"Well, Cy," said Eb, as he gathered up his reins and prepared to drive on, "I'd buy her this morning, but I hate to bust a dollar."

Stamps Cover Envelope

A resident of Whitby, Louis Levina, received recently a letter from relatives in Russia, on which the postage in Russian currency amounted to $11.20. There were 56 20-kopek stamps. In ordinary times the kopek would have the same value as a Canadian cent, but it has depreciated to such an extent that it required 1,120 kopeks to equal the value of 5c. in Canadian postage. The envelope was practically covered with stamps, front and back, with just enough space left for the address.

Soldiers Learned Valne of Forests

The remarkable increase in the interest which Canadians are taking in their forests is attributed by some to the fact that members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in the War came home with a new conception of how vital forests are to any state, both in peace and war, and also how large a proportion of land in countries of dense population is devoted to forest culture. This is doubtless one reason, and the rise in the cost of forest products of all kinds has also been a contributing factor. Perhaps the chief reason has been the realization by both civilians and soldiers of the folly, amounting to criminality, of allowing a great natural resource to be destroyed by the careless handling of fire.

The Sergeant's Sermon

During the Great War some soldiers of an English regiment in France wished to have a religious meeting among themselves. They chose a tumble-down cottage for their place of worship and, screening the windows and the holes with turf and sacking so that no light should show and attract enemy aeroplanes, selected the hymns and decided who should make the prayer. Then arose the question who should preach the sermon. At last the choice fell on a sergeant known as Tubby. The nickname was a tribute to his jollity. Tubby gave careful thought to his task and after the hymns and the prayer read the story of the man on the Sea of Galilee. Then he delivered his sermon.

"I don't know," he began, "whether you chaps ever noticed that it says, There were also with him other little ships.' It's about those other little ships I want to talk. What were they doing? I don't know; their duty, I suppose, same as you and I are tryin' to do here. But, anyway, when the storm fell on the disciples' ship those other little ships got it too. They were tossed about like corks and had a reg'lar bad time of it. Then when Jesus rebuked the wind and made the sea still, and there was a great calm well, the other little ships got that too.

"Now, it's just the same in the war. The big ships are in it, but there are other little ships also. Denmark and Holland and Switzerland and Norway and Sweden—they're getting tossed about and having an anxious time. And when we win the great peace those other little ship'll have it too.

"And isn't it the same with you and me? If we get to playiu' the fool with drink and gambling and other sins, we'll not be the only ones to feel the storm. There'll be other little ships in it with us—wives, and children, and sweethearts and friends. They'll get the storm too. But then again if you let Jesus have his way in your heart—well, then those other little ships'll be as safe and happy as you are. Isn't it worth trying for boys?"

Need it be said that every heart in that little gathering so far from home and kindred, so close to danger and to death, was deeply touched by the sergeant's sermon? Some time later Tubby was killed in an attack, but his words will live after him and help to make the great sea of life safe for "those other little ships."

Marriage And Brain Power

Does marriage increase brain power, asks an editor, and receives the following answers among others:

"1.—It does. Before I married Mabel the most cutting reproof she ever uttered to me was: Oo naughty naughty man.' After five years of married life, the range of her vocabulary makes Webster's dictionary look like a first primer, if I so much as omit to punish the door mat one little once."

"2.—It does not. If it did, surely after ten years of it my husband would be able to give some better excuse when he makes a night of it, than the old one of: 'Awful busy at the office t'night; work just piled up. Couldn't get home a minute earlier."

"Willie. where did you get that black eye?"

"Johnny Smith hit me."

"I hope you remember what your Sunday school teacher said about heaping coals of fire on the head of your enemies."

"Well, ma, I didn't have any coal, so I just stuck his head in the ash barrel?."

Misdirecting Letters

Whenever delay to, or misdelivery of, a lettter occurs, the sender or the addressee is prone to adversely criticize the post office. Frequently, however, the delay or misdelivery is due to the carelessness of the public, in failing to properly address the mail matter in question.

During three days this month, 128,—300 pieces of incorrectly and insufficiently addressed mail matter were handled at 55 of the larger post offices. This is a daily average of 42,—600 for the 55 offices, or at the rate of 16,000,000 for a year of 365 days. Think of the number of postal clerks engaged in handling this misdirected mail, who could, if the general public were more careful; be used to give better service in other lines.

Much troubte is due to careless writing to the use of a pencil in writing the address, and to failure to give the proper street address or to keep mailing lists up to date.

With the Christmas season at hand, bringing immense quantities of mail to be dealt with, it will be necessary that the public adopt more careful methods in the preparation of its mail matter, if the daily average of misdirected mail is not to amount to an overwhelming figure

In this connection the following points to be observed are pointed out:

Prepay postage fully;

Address plainly and fully;

Place name and address of sender on all mail matter;

Carefully pack and wrap all articles sent by parcel post, but not seal the parcels as sealed parcels are subject to letter rate of postage;

Mail Christmas parcels early;

Insure valuable parcels.

A Bad Run-in

"The automobile gets the blame for everything. A man lay in the middle of the road one evening, surrounded by a large crowd. An old lady pushed her way into the crowd and said:

"Poor fellow! Poor young fellow! I suppose an automobile ran into him.'

"No, ma'am,' said a policeman, 'it wasn't an automobile that ran into him this time.'

"What was it, then?' said the old lady.

"It was a keg of beer, said the policeman, 'or maybe a keg and a half."

Boy Scouts' Corner

Troop News

With the inital appearance of the Boy Scouts Corner, we wish briefly to review the history of the first Chesterville Troop so that those who are not familiar with the organization may know it from the beginning.

On May 13th last, Mr. Harry Lister Field Secretary Boy Scouts Association, organized a Local Troop, at which meeting also P. S. Boyd was chosen a Scoutmaster with a Local Citizens' Committee of Messrs. Lacey, McGee and Durant Within two weeks following the organization meeting, the membership had attained such a height that the formation of four patrols was necessary unfortunately, however, owiug to certain difficulties of discipline which naturally arose after the first burst of enthusiasm, the number of patrols finally diminished to three, so that only seventeen boys remained on record as loval to the troop.

After some weeks of training and preparation the troop went into Camp at Beckett's Landing on July 18th remaining under canvas a week during which time every boy qualified for his Tenderfoot Badge. Upon returning from Camp, the troop was dismissed for the summer holidays and did not carry on any further meetings until this fall.

When activities were resumed this fall, every boy was on hand enthusiastic, and ready for further progress in Scouting. The work of the Second Class Test naturally lay ahead of the Troop, so that after some slight re-organization routine, the boys have settled down, with earnest efforts, to qualify, as early as possible, for the tests which will euable them to hold the rank of Secoud Class Scout.

In this connection, the troop has been very fortunate in securing the services of Dr. W. H. Lloyd, who volunteered to act in the Capacity of Instructor in First Aid to the Troop. During the course of training in this work, every Friday evening at Headquarters, the boys are given interesting talks, accompanied by practical demonstrations in in which the boys themselves take part. Already they have learned the Schifer method of resuscitation for reviving those apparently drowned; they have practised the art of banadging wounds on various parts of the body; and in the near fnture, every boy expects to qualify as a first aid expert.

This is however, only part of their necessary qualificatlons, as in addition, some six or seven tests must be passed before they attain the Second Class Rank. Then comes first class tests, King's Scout and lastly the Silver Wolf, the highest honour that can be conferred upon any Scout.

Several new applications have been received for membership in the Troop and, in each case, the name of the applicant is placed on the "waiting list." This is brought before the Court of Honour which is made up of the Scoutmaster and other officer of the Troop. When the decision is rendered, the boy is immediately assigned to a Patrol and the work of training the new recruit is assigned to or voluntarily given by a member of that Patrol.

In this way the troop increased in strength not only of numbers, but of spirit, as each boy has a definite part to play—a part he aloue must take—which places the responsibility of success on the shoulders of the boys themselves.

Do You Know

That Chesterville Troop has four or five members who are musicians?

That one of the members can speak in five languages?

That Canada's new chief Scout is Sir Julian Byng—of Vimy? He is a "Silver Wolf," too!

The meaning of The Tenderfoot Button? If not ask any Scout who wears one.

That Scouts are always available for public service? Patronize them if you want any help.

That our mottoes are "Be Prepared" and "Do a Good Turn Every Day"?

That the three aims of Scouting are: Character-building, Citizenship-training, and Canadianization?

That any person is welcome at our weekly meetings? They are not held in secret. Parents and friends, come up some night!

That the boys are planning a real, lively, scout concert in the near future?

That the Scouting movement takes the mind and soul of boyhood and trains it into a character which is a treasure for life?

Lecture on Citizenship

Last meeting night, the boys were given a short talk on "Civics and Citizenship." by the Scoutmaster. This included an explanation of our various forms of government from the King and Imperial down to the Board of Trustees and even to the home. After explaining the composition of the Imperial, Federal, Provincial, County and Municipal governments, the Scoutmaster gave a brief outline of the purpose and method of conducting Elections and concluded his remarks by explaining the duties of Citizenship and their relation to Boy Scouts.

(Concluded from last week.)

The dog pushed through the snow-clogged undergrowth and Arthur kept on the outer edges so that he could see better. On up the canon they went, and at last Arthur saw footprints in the heavy frost that topped the frozen crust. The dog veered up the side of the canon, occasionally pausing with red tongue lolling to await his master's approach. They climbed to the summit, and the dog nosed along the ridge, which curved in a semicircle high above Rock Lake. At the end of the crescent the trail dipped toward the lake again. Constantly on the alert, dog and boy went down, slipping quietly over the snow. The tracks that showed in the now sun-softened surface were fresh, and they were those of a big fellow. Tom Sanford had not exaggerated.

A light breeze had sprung up and was soughing mournfully through the pines. Fortunately, it was blowing directly into Arthur's face; there was no danger of the lion's getting wind of its pursurers. The trail now led over a shoulder of the mountain that terminated in a narrow point of volcanic cliffs jutting into the lake. There were no large trees growing on that rocky promontory, and the thickets of manzanita and buckbush were almost covered with snow. Arthur's keen eyes swept the point, but he could detect no sign of the lion. He knew that owing to the action of wind and sun the cliffs that fronted the lake were free from snow It might be that the lion had sought a spot there to bask in the sunshine. Arthur ordered Captain to heel, and the pair silently followed the plainly marked course of the mountain lion.

About halfway to the end of the promontory the fresh tracks merged into a well-beaten trail that wound along the shore line of Rock Lake. Arthur studied the footprints in the new trail and observed that they appeared to have been made by the same animal that he was following—a sign that the lion had a den somewhere in the volcanic cliff. The dog whimpersd nervously, but Arthur shook a finger at him and then sat down to remove his snowshoes, for the trail had slanted across a face of the cliff that the wind had swept clean of snow. It was no more than a ledge curving in and out along the cliff, and it was so irregular that he could gain only a slight idea of what lay in the trail twenty feet ahead of him. He dropped to his hands and knees and cautiously crept along, breathlessiy peering round each turn.

Beyond the last bent, on a shelving platform of rock several feet above the level of the trail, he caught a glimpse of the tawny body of the mountain lion. He ducked his head behind the projection of rock and took a long breath to quiet his jumping nerves. Then he looked again and carefully studied the situation. The lion was perhaps fifty yards away. Captain, tense and trustworthy, crouched at his master's heels.

"If I shoot him where he lies, he'll fall plump into the lake," thought Arthur. "That means good-by to scalp number three!"

The surface of the lake was fully sixty feet below the ledge on which the lion lay. Good swimmer though Arthur was he knew that it would be an impossible feat for him to retrieve the carcass of the lion from the deep, dark waters.

Again he craned his neck, and noticed a dark spot on the cliff just behind the spot where the lion was sunniug himself.

"His den!" Arthur's hand stole forth to caress the dog's head. "Captain, old pal, if we wait here till the lion goes into his hole we can sneak up and nail him for sure. What say, will we take a chanc ?

Captain wagged his stump of a tail and blinked his eyes. Boy and dog waited. It seemed to Arthur that he sat there on the narrow trail for hours, scarcely daring to move his cramped limbs, and with his eyes fairly glued on the recumbent mountain lion.

Finally he sat back and rested a moment from the strain of watching. When he looked again the lion had gone. He waited five minutes; it did not reappear. He took off his moccasins, uns rapped his kit bag and placed it on the trail beside them. Gripping his rifle and crouching low, he stole swiftly along the ledge He reached the base of the shelving perch of the lion, where a pile of tumbled moulders made rude steps that ascended the shelf. Arthur's stockinged feet stealthily padded up those jagged steps until he was able to peep over the edge. The opening of the cave loomed black against the gray cliff. It is not more than ten feet from the brink of the precipice, which dropped in a perpendicular line to the water. He felt a sudden qualm as to the wisdom of his act; then his heart took a leap, and his fingers tightened on his rifle

There was a rasping snarl, and two speels of fire glowed in the blackness of the cavern. As quick as a flash Arthur aimed directly between the gleaming eyes, but as his finger pressed the trigger he cringed involuntarily. for he had thrust his stockinged foot upon a sharp splinter of stone. A terrific scream deaded the report of the rifle, and a yellow body came hurling out of the cavern. Arthur standing on one foot, fired a second shot, lost his balance and sprawled forward, clutching desperately at the ragged edge of the shelving rock.

Just as he drew himself clear of the edge the lion was upon him. He felt the steel-like claws rip through the left shoulder of his hunting coat and tear into his flesh. He reached for his knife and as he strove to fight his way back from the yawniug brink of the cliff he lunged viciously at the breast of the lion. There was a spasmodic quiver, a choking snarl, and the lion whirled away. Captain succeeded in scrambling up the difficult stone steps and now charged full into the fray. His fangs sank deep into the lions flank, and Arthur was able to seize his rifle. This time his aim was true. The lion sprang high into the air, dragging the dog off his feet. With a mighty thud they came down upon the gritty rocks, and the lion rebounding in a frightful convulsion, landed perilously near the brink. Another convulsion would send the lion over the cliff and into the water—the very thing that Athrur had tried so hard to avoid.

Intent upon saving his third scalp, he leaped toward the writhing beast and seized his tail just in time. Throwihg his whole weight backward, he dragged the lion toward the cave. With a wheezy growl the beast sprang for the boy. It was the last death struggle, but the force of the blow knocked Arthur hard against the wall of the cliff. Dazed as he was, he clubbed his rifle for a final stand.

But the lion was dead. The great tawny body lay stretched full-length across the mouth of the cave. The dog with his fangs still buried in the liou's flank, growled ferociously, Arthur dropped to the ground, rested his back against the cliff and looked at his prize. "Some lion, Cap, old pal," he managed to gasp. "Now we can fetch in the third scalp, and the job is ours!"

Chairman Lasker of the U. S. Shipping Board said in an tnterview:

"Those men are taking needless offence where none is intended.

"A tall, gaunt, vinegar faced woman walked into Wawa station one day, and said to the ticket agent:

"Gimme a ticket for Chester Heights."

"Single" said the agent.

"The woman's eye flashed steely sparks.

"None o' yer darn business," she hissed. Gosh knows, though, I might have married a dozen times over if I'd been willin' to grubstake some shiftless putty-faced monkey like yourself."

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. Catarral Deafness requires constitutional treatmeat. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is a constitutional remedy. Catarral Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the muscous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely olosed Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.
