HONORED ON 25th WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On Monday evening, February 12, about two hundred neighoburs and friends gathered at the spacious home of Mr. Curtis Gallinger and Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Gallinger, to tender Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gallinger a reception, in honour of their 25th wedding anniversary. A very pleasant evening was spent in euchre and dancing, and at about eleven o'clock, to the opening bars of "Here Comes the Bride" played by Mrs. George Weagant on the piano, Mr. and Mrs. Gallinger were lead to the centre of the floor, and the following address, composed by Rev. Mr. Strange, Aultsville, was read by Mrs K.A. Wensley. Mrs. Carmi Froats made the presentation of a purse of money.

To Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Gallinger.

Dear Fred and Edith:

We are here tonight to offer you our sincere and hearty congratulations, on the 25th anniversary of your wedding. To you, probably, the time has passed all too rapidly, but time passes with us all, and the way our time is spent is more important than its duration.

Your children, some of whom have grown to maturity, have proven themselves to be a credit to you and the whole community, and we venture to say will make good Canadian citizens. It is well to remember at these times the importance of the family life, foras every individual goesto make up the family, so likewise every individual goes to make up a nation, and only insofar as the individual of today is loyal and true to the family life, so far will the next generation be a people loyal and true in all that is best in this world. Canada is taking her place amongst the great nations of the world today, and the fact is due to the loyalty of her sons, whether they are doctors, lawyers, farmers, parsons, soldiers or sailors. It is therefore doubly important at this time, when the world is looking for capable leadership, honest and sincere statesmen and politicians, that our boys and girls should be taught loyalty to God, King and country and the place to begin is in the cradle days, and the ones to instill this sense of loyalty into the children are the mothers and fathers of this great country of ours.

We feel that you have been, and are doing your duty in that direction, and that is bound to command the respect of every family in the community, and make an acceptable contribution to the great Dominion of Canada.

As a token of our appreciation of these facts, we ask you to accept this purse of silver, and may God's richest blessings be showered upon you now and for many more wedding anniversaries to come.

Signed on behalf of your friends,

Mr. and Mrs. C. Froats, Mrs. K. A. Wensley, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Weagant.

Mrs. Gallinger made a very suitable reply in a few well chosen words, after which Mr. Gallinger also expressed a few words of thanks, in his jovial manner. Mrs. John McNairn then struck up the tune on the piano, of Auld Lang Syne, everyone joining in singing.

Cake, sandwiches and coffee were served by several of the young people, after which Mr. and Mrs Gallinger treated their visitors very generously with candy and apples. Dancing was again enjoyed for a couple of hours.

The happy evening drew to a close by all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Gallinger many more years of wedded life, and thanking them for their hospitality.

WINCHESTER DELEGATION SEEKS HIGHWAY WORK

A delegation from Winchester, composed of Reeve Jas. H. Ross, Messrs T.O. Keyes, J.W. Ault, J.E. Singleton and Hart Melvin went to Toronto on Thursday last, and waited on the minister of public highways, with an urgent appeal to have the pavement on the remaining portion of highway No. 31 completed during the coming summer. This stretch of road would connect the pavement at Williamsburg to the pavment leading from the Carleton boundary to Winchester Station, thereby making a first class highway from the St. Lawrence rive to Ottawa.

Upon being asured that the greater part of the highway would be completed this summer the delegation requested that work at the quarry be started at once, in order to give the unemployed men of this district something to do. They explained that the stone could be piled up ready for the crusher, when building operations were started. This request was not approved of by the authorities, who explained that, owing to the severe weather conditions, quarrying stone would be greatly handicapped, and an expensive operation, as the men would not be able to keep at the work steadily enough to make it pay. However, they informed the delegation that quarry work would be started about the first of April.

During the past few months, several petitions have been sent to the government, urging the completion of this portion of the highway, and the assurance that [illegible] this

MORRISBURG FERRY SHOWS INCREASE

Despite frigid weather conditions and the frequent heavy snowfalls in the district, the automobile and passenger traffic this winter on the Morrisburg Ferry is again on the increase.

The constant Five Minute Service in mid-winter, while most of the other ferries are totally or partly tied up, is given as the cause of the increase in traffic records between the ports of Morrisburg, Ontario, and Waddington, N.Y.

FIRST-AID STATION OPENED

The first of a series of first-aid stations to be opened along Highway No. 2 between Montreal and Toronto, has been equipped, and is now ready for service at Mallorytown. Twenty-one such stations are to be established along the highway under the auspices of the Red Cross Society, the St. John's Ambulance Corps and the Ontario Motor League during the coming spring and summer.

It sounds like a very practical move, for traffic is becoming increasingly heavy on Highway No. 2, and numerous accidents occur each year, the victims requiring immediate medical attention and first aid. It is to be assumed that first class attendants will be in charge of the stations, with proper equipment on hand to give aid to injured motorists.

MARRIAGE BILLS GO TO COMMITTEE

The Ontario Legislature turned "thumbs down" on the two bills sponsored by Argue Martin (Cons., Hamilton West), in brief session on Wednesday, with both bills sent "to committee" and given little or no chance of emerging again.

The first bill sought to obtain power to hold marriage services for the People's Church and the open Door Evangelical Association of Hamilton.

Opposition came from Hon. Geo. Challies, provincial secretary, who declared that while not passing on the merits or demerits of the case, the Department was concerned with the permanency of the churches or ministers.

MRS. ANDREW HUMMELL

Mrs. Andrew Hummell, whose maiden name was Miss Marceline Bourrette, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Bourrette, died at her home in Morrisburg on Thursday Feb. 22nd, following a short illness.

The late Mrs. Hummell was a native of Morrisburg, born on Feb. 28th, 1854. On November 1st, 1875 (Rev. Father Meade officiating) she was united in marriage to Mr. Andrew Hummell, who predeceased her about eight years ago.

In the death of Mrs. Hummell Morrisburg loses another of its aged citizens, whose life has been a benefaction to the community. An exemplary life, in the role of a dutiful mother, is ended, which will mean an irreparable loss.

She is survived by three sons: John, Fred and George, of town; three daughters: Mrs. Andrew Barr and Mrs. John Harback, town, and Mrs. Earl Tindal, Lakewood, Ohio One daughter, Miss Eliza Hummell, predeceased her about a year ago. Also surviving are six sisters and four brothers: Mrs. Mary Strong Mrs. Agnes Guay, Mrs. Minnie Forrest, Mrs. Lucy Redmond, Mrs. Louise Jackson and Mrs. Bertha Cavalier, Messrs George and Albert Bourrette of town, also Henry and Louis Bourrette.

The funeral will be held on Saturday, Feb. 24th, at 10 a.m., in St. Mary's Church, where requiem high mass will be sung by Rev. Fr. Coyle. The remains will be placed in the vault, to await burial in the spring.

FUNERAL OF DR. JAMIESON

Attended by a large number of friends and relatives, the funeral of Dr. Thomas Jamieson, former well-known physician in the Morrisburg and Cardinal districts, was held on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 8th, at the parlors of A.E. Veitch & Son, Ottawa. Rev, Norman Coll officiated at the service, assisted by Rev. H.E. Warren. Interment was made in Rideau Vale cemetery, Kars, Ont.

The chief mourners and surviving relatives were his widow, formerly Victoria Middagh; one daughter Miss Florence A. Jamieson, B.A., of Ottawa; four sisters, Mrs. Carrie Smith, Mrs. Martha Watts, Ottawa, Mrs. S. McCallum, Chicago and Mrs. Mary Curtisan, Kars, Ont.

A large number of beautiful floral offerings received by the bereaved family from friends testified to the high regard in which Dr. Jamieson was held.

GIVEN JUDGMENT FOR $5,000

Award of $5,000 to Col. W.H. Craig and an unstated amount to Mrs. Craig were given by Mr. Justice Patrick Kerwin in supreme court in Kingston, in the action of the Craigs against W.B. Dalton, of that city and F.C. Elford of Ottawa. The action followed an automobile accident a year ago near Prescott, when the Craigs were going to Kingston in Dalton's car, which was struck by Elford's car.

A counter-claim for damages was made by Elford against Dalton. Justice Kerwin found that in the accident Elford was 60 per cent. negligent and Dalton 40 per cent. He [illegible] Dalton $600 and Elford the

Just Making Sounds.

A Toronto school teacher tells us that he had his class write out the Lord's Prayer and found that many of them didn't know what they were repeating every morning. One of the commonest mistakes was in the second clause, which several wrote as "Harold be Thy Name." Another Toronto school teacher had been telling a fairy story beginning with the usual "Once upon a time." When she asked for a synopsis, she was surprised to find one girl beginning her story with "One pound of line, there was . . ."—Fergus News-Record.

Beauty and Business.

Thanks to the admirable concern of womankind for their personal beauty, Canada has one industry which has flourished even when every other was going to ruin. The manufacturers of beauty preparations in Canada had a production of $3,873,540 in 1929. In 1932 it reached $4,771,098, which represents an expansion of 20 per cent. approximately, right in the period of general depression. This industry has a very ultilitarian side to it. It employs many hands, and distributes a million dollars a year in salaries.—La Patrie, Montreal.

From the Same Place.

"Seeing a pretty girl is as good as a tonic," says an enthusiast. And sometimes they are made up at the same druggist's.—Regina Leader-Post.

"Canada's Place."

We are interested to see the suggestion in a London evening newspaper that the Westminster City Council should give to the island site on which Canada House and the fine Sun Life of Canada building stands the name of "Canada Place."

Years ago "Canada" suggested that the short length of Cockspur Street might be advantageously changed to "Canada Street," as it contains the offices on the south side of the Canadian National Railways and the Imperial Life of Canada and on the north side the great block of the Sun Life of Canada adjoining Canada House.

Possibly our contemporary's suggestion might be more acceptable to the Westminster authorities, because it would not do away with the old street names, but would merely give a new postal direction to the few buildings on the island side which consists only of the White Star Line, Sun Life of Canada, Canada House, and the Royal College of Physicians. We can warmly commend the suggestion to the Westminster City Council. — "Canada" (London).

Living in the Present.

Halifax Harbor has had an excellent year, with tonnage considerably larger than 1932 and 1931. The Eastern port now is among the keenest bidders for ocean traffic, and has quit dwelling upon the great days of its building and sailing of wooden ships. —Toronto Globe.

Cheap Licenses for Old Cars.

An innovation by the Provincial Government in issuing cheap licenses to aged and more or less decrepit trucks and cars may not prove an unmixed blessing. Owners of old cars presumably are not affluent. Giving them a ten dollar license will win their approval. But careful inspection of aged vehicles should precede the granting of a permit to operate them on the public highway. Unless Government officials are satisfied they are roadworthy, that they are not potential menaces to other traffic, the experiment is apt to result unhappily.—Edmonton Journal.

Protect Art Treasures.

The fire at Ottawa in which a large number of valuable classical paintings were destroyed in a private house, calls attention to the necessity of protection from fire for art treasures of every description. The National Gallery at Ottawa is no exception to this rule and needs attention. There will be sympathy for Mr. John Gleeson.—Hamilton Herald.

Changing Times.

A recent item of news from Great Britain drew attention to the fact that an old family had been forced by the pressure of a changing world to give up an estate on which for 28 generations it had made its home. It was the Gresley family, one of the last families to remain in possession of an estate granted in the time of William the Conqueror.

Here is a family which has seen Britain develop from a feudal kingdom to an industrial democracy, has seen ruling dynasties come and go; and it had itself remained unchanged. But now the end has come. Economic conditions have forced the family to put the estate up for sale. It has been bought, according to the news cable, by a real estate firm for "speculative purposes."

Changing times and business depression have cut wide swaths in what is familiarly known as Britain's aristocracy. The breaking of the Gresley tie with feudal days is a symbol of the shift which that aristocracy is undergoing. — Victoria Times.

Test of Intelligence.

It is either a significant commentary on the standard of intelligence of the American people, or a commentary on the intelligence of radio announcers, or both, that when an announcer names "Washington Ave., he adds that the spelling is W A S H I N G T O N, spelling it out letter by letter.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE EMPIRE.

War As Race Suicide.

Man going to war at the present time is a man fighting with his bare hands against a ten thousand horsepower machine of his own making. He is comparable to an infant attacking a steam-roller. Logically speaking, he can do it; realistically speaking, he can't; it is beyond his nature as a human creature, and if he insists upon attempting it he can only look forward to the fate that attends a physical impossibility. It is possible to fall six feet without serious damage. That is what man did before gunpowder. It is possible to fall 12 feet and to survive. That is what Europe did a hundred years ago. It is possible for a whole family to fall from the roof of their house, and some will live to tell the tale—as in 1914. But it is not possible for human beings to jump over Beachy Head and to resolve anything except the problem of existence by so doing. And the fall from Beachy Head to the sands below is what war is to man today. It is an act of race suicide.—New English Weekly.

Business in Palestine.

There was one Bedouin woman who was approached by a kodak-in-hand tourist, while gathering herbs. The strings of coins which covered her face jingled vehemently as she made known her price—two shillings for a pose. There was some haggling. She remained obdurate. The tourist turned away, expecting to be recalled. But the "star" continued phlegmatically to pluck the herbs without a backward glance. Business must be good.—Palestine Post (Jerusalem).

An Arctic Journey

Miss Hutchinson, a young Scotswoman, who has been collecting flowers and plants for Kew Gardens, has just completed a hazardous and remarkable dog-sledge along 350 miles of the Artic coast. When winter overtook her, Miss Hutchinson was making her way by sea round Point Barrow in hopes of catching the last steamer of the season, but failed to do so. When frozen in she secured an Eskimo dog-team and started off for Herschel Island, off the coast of Yukon, where she is reported to have arrived little the worse for her long journey, during which the temperature on several occasions sank to 70 degrees below zero, representing 102 degrees of frost.—Inverness Review.

The League and the Empire

The more the situation is examined, the more difficult it becomes to see how the pre-war methods of the balance of power can work, even so long as they did before the war, in the very different conditions that prevail today. This consideration is reinforced if we turn to the Imperial aspect of the matter. As has been revealed at several Imperial conferences, and was brought out strongly at the recent unofficial Imperial Conference in Toronto, the League of Nations is an indispensable basis for reconciling the desire for independence with the need for a common policy within the British Commonwealth of Nations. If the League were to disappear and the world were to revert to the system of alliances and preparations for war, the problems of neutrality and self-defence within the Empire would become infinitely more complex and might become insoluble. —Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, in The Nineteenth Century.

The Head and the Heart.

What is known by the head only and not by the heart also, does not become really part of our life. Even if great thoughts arise most often in the heart, they must go round by the head, or if the order is reversed, at any rate both are needed. But we are only too apt to omit such superrational things as love, laughter, sorrow, anger, courage, reverence, sympathy, imagination, all elemental parts of human life. So the appeal is for a balanced collaboration of man's faculties, under the guidance of reason as the final arbiter. In this way reason, operating on experience, will become a sufficient guide to truth and controller of our destiny, without repressing the richness of our nature and its potentialities, our emotions and our arts.—Rev. Canon D. S. Guy, in The Contemporary Review.

Danger Threatens England.

After the exceptionally dry summer we have a drought in the midst of an early winter, and in most parts of the country the water supply is becoming, if it is not already, a matter of anxious consideration. London, with storage reserves for over two months, is free from all such apprehension; but unless some part of this year's missing rainfall is soon made up there may be worse privation elsewhere than could be caused by any winter.—Daily Telegraph.

THE UNITED STATES.

The English Policemen.

The average English policeman is not in the least impersonal. He smiles good-humoredly at the chaff of the crowd, which he is restraining. He will take care of a lost dog or of an old woman who cannot remember the way home. He will give a suspected offender the benefit of the doubt before arresting him. If he is in a tight corner he expects the bystander to assist him and they seldom fail. The general public feel that he is on their side, and that the rules of conduct which guides him are those of common justice—in other words, fair play.—From the Christian Science Monitor.

Two-Day Riots Oust Daladier Government

Woman Marries Three Brothers Each in Turn

Hollywood.—Visited daily by the woman who was once his wife and who is twice his sister-in-law, James De Tarr, first of three brothers to marry the same girl, is dangerously ill in a clinic here.

The woman is Harryette Post, daughter of a prominent Denver, Colo., family. She now is the wife of Beverley De Tarr.

On her visits to James in the clinic, she is accompanied by Beverley and Noble De Tarr, another brother.

James and Harryette were wed in 1918, and divorced in 1922. Two years later Harryette married Noble. In 1928 she was divorced from her second De Tarr, and in 1932 she became the wife of Beverley. No ill-feling has resulted from the two divorces.

The sick man, a writer, is suffering from a nervous breakdown. Physicians said he will recover.

Stole From Mails Gets Five Years

Quebec.—Five years in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary was the sentence imposed by Judge Arthur Fitzpatrick in Court of Sessions upon John Albertson, 36, salesman, of Lake Megantic, who was found guilty on seven charges of stealing from the mails. Albertson was sentenced to five years on each count, the sentences to run concurrently.

The amounts involved in each case were small, but accused used a scheme to secure goods mailed c.o.d. by various large department stores, without making returns to the post office.

Toronto Landlords' Protective Association

Toronto landlords have formed a protective association. Landlords should not be shouldered with the double burden of providing both free rent and most of the city's taxes, the meeting, which otherwise was far from unanimous, agreed. It was attended by about 200 people and lasted more than three hours.

H. L. Rogers, former alderman, was the principal speaker. "It is unfair," he declared, "that the landlord should be faced with the ugly alternative of having either to turn a destitute man out on the street or to give him free rent. It is dishonest to make you pay for relief through taxes and then to make you pay rent for the poor when others who own stocks and bonds have to pay no more than income.

1,500 Drivers Receive Safety League Medals

Toronto.—Having driven on Ontario highways for one year without a single accident, 1,500 truck and bus drivers have been awarded a medal by the Ontario Safety League. It is a small bronze pin, beautifully engraved and bears the inscription: "I do my part. Be careful. Avoid accidents."

It is a one-year award, and annually other awards will be made extending more medals to drivers who maintain their good records.

Departmental and Entrance Exam. Dates

The Department of Education at Toronto announces the dates of the entrance and departmental examinations for 1934.

The departmentals will start on Monday, June 25, and conclude on Wednesday, July 11, thus taking them into the second week in July, a little later than last year.

The entrance examinations will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, July 3, 4 and 5, except in the French-speaking sections, where they are a few days earlier.

Canada's War Pension Bill $43,141,138 in 1932

Ottawa.—Canada paid $43,141,138 for war pensions during 1933, according to information given in the House of Commons last week.

The total number of persons in respect of which pensions were paid was 264,840. The number of dependant pensioners was 18,745, and of disability pensioners 77,967.

329 Families Now Settled in North

To Send More Families in Open Up Area in Back-to-Land Movement

Toronto.—Carving their own homes from the Northern Ontario woods, 329 families are now settled under the province's Relief Land Settlement scheme. The present population of the settlements has reached 1,763 persons, according to a report to be submitted to the Legislature by Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests.

William Magladery, secretary of the Relief Land Settlement scheme, giving details of the scheme, declared it was planned to send 100 families from Toronto and another 100 from the head of the lakes back to the land this year.

The plan is as follows:

A prospective settler who is out of work may apply to be sent to the land. The Dominion Government, Provincial Government and municipality each contribute $600. The money is spent in this way: Transportation, $80; cost of constructing a cabin, $100; contribution to maintenance the first year, $120; contribution to maintenance the second year, $100; live stock and equipment, $200.

232 SETTLERS.

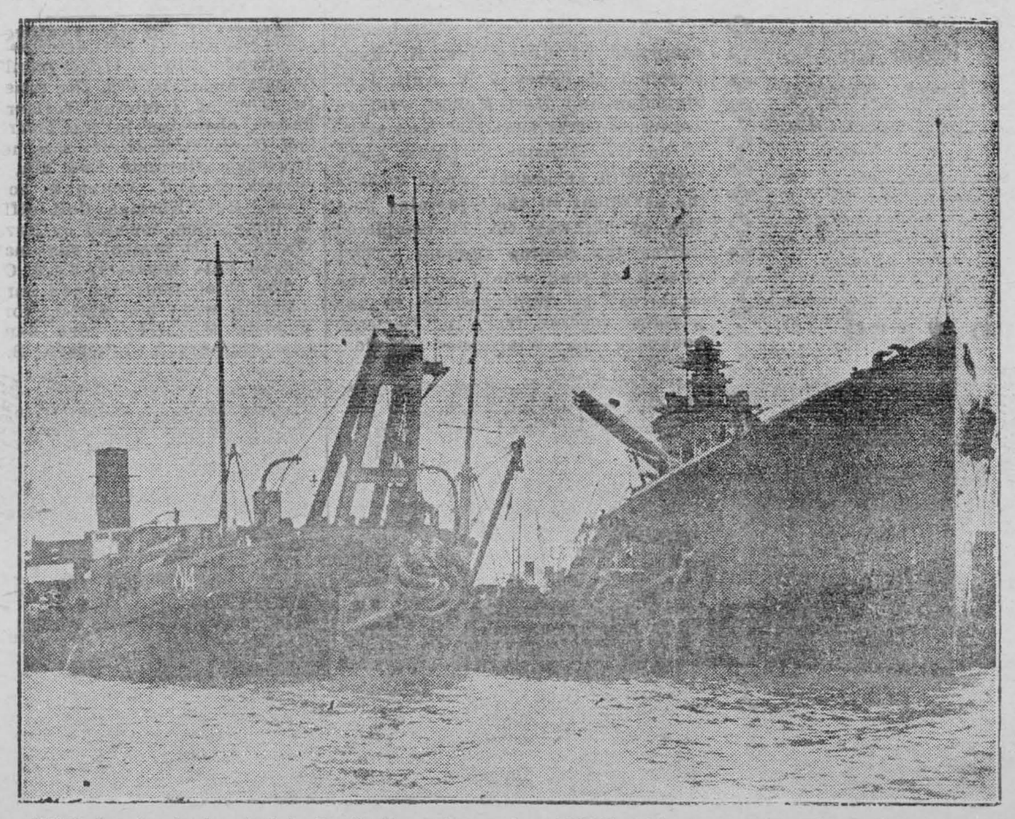

An advisory committee was set up to assist the Provincial Government in the work. The selection of land and establishment of families was assigned to the province, and supervisors appointed to carry out the work. The prospective settlers were carefully chosen. They were told what equipment was necessary. They were shown several lots in each locality and made their own choice. Many of the families were located on burned over lands about eight miles south of Cochrane. The land is readily cleared, since stumps have rotted, moss has been burned off and the fertility of the top soil restored by natural agencies.

In 1932 25 Ontario municipalities sent 232 settlers. Last year 21 municipalities sent 151 settlers, or a total of 46 centres which sent 383 families to the north. Of this number 54 have returned, leaving 329 still there.

Leading British Steamship Lines Agree to Merge

Cunard and White Star Companies Complete All Plans for Amalgamation

London.—A final agreement for merger of the Cunard and White Star steamship lines has been reached with the treasury, the House of Commons was informed last week by Leslie Hore-Belisha, financial secretary to the treasury. An agreement published simultaneously revealed the new company will be called "Cunard-White Star, Limited." It will acquire from Cunard and the White Star (Oceanic Steamship Navigation Company) their North Atlantic fleets and goodwill, including company names and flags when applied to North Atlantic ships.

GOVT. PROVIDES $15,000,000.

To provide for completion of the giant Cunard liner "534," scheduled to be the world's largest, the treasury agreed to make advances not exceeding £3,000,000 (approximately $15,000,000).

The treasury also agreed to advance to the company from time to time sums not exceeding the total of $1,500,000 for working capital.

Also included is a provision that legislation to be introduced in Parliament will include authorization for the treasury at its discretion to advance to the merger company funds not exceeding £5,000,000 for the cost of an additional ship or ships.

WILL REMAIN BRITISH.

"It is regarded by all parties hereto," the agreement states, "as the cardinal principle of the merger company that it is to be and remain under British control."

Transfer of vessels to direction of the new company will be effected at the earliest possible date, the announcement said.

Noble Scottish Houses Will Be United by Marriage

Edinburgh.—Two of the noblest Scottish houses will be united by the marriage of Lord Robert Crichton-Stuart, second son of the fourth Marquess of Bute, and Lady Janet Montgomery, daughter of the 16th Earl of Eglinton and Winton.

The engagement of the couple was announced recently. Lord Crichton-Stuart is 25 years of age and Lady Janet is 23.

The Marquess of Bute is reputed to be the richest peer in the United Kingdom. The title descends from Sir Robert Crichton, created a peer in 1487 and the long roll of family lineage is inextricably woven with Scotland's history.

The family of the bride-to-be descends from the time of William the Conqueror, Robert Montgomerie, descendant of Roger of Mundegumbri who accompanied William, obtained lands in Renfrewshire in the latter half of the 12th century. He acquired the Barony of Eglinton at this time. Hugh Montgomerie was created first Earl of Eglinton in 1507.

Makes a Prophecy

(P.M.R. in Toronto Saturday Night.)

My prophecy is that Canadian business will make great strides during the next several months and by midsummer the general situation will be very much brighter.

We are going to see the construction industry spring into activity, the automobile industry enjoying a near boom, the steel plants, both heavy and light, more active, unemployment so sharply reduced that it no longer constitutes a serious community burden, manufacturers of consumer goods producing as fast as they can; retailers selling, if not as fast as they can, at least a good deal faster than they are now, and consumers happily buying and consuming.

All will be confident that happy days are here again and here to stay. The only disturbing feature for the consuming public will be the sharply rising prices.

Geologist's Widow May Get Medal

Dr. Finlay Lorimer Kitchin, F.R.S., the famous British geologist, died before the Lyell Medal, which the Geological Society recently awarded to him—one of the most coveted prizes—had been presented.

He was to have received it at the society's annual meeting next month. It will now probably be presented to his widow.

There is always something thrilling in the mysterious. For thousands of years, people have paid money to fortune tellers in return for a glimpse—sometimes accurate, if flashy, but more often, wide of the mark—of the Future. Down through the ages, people have yearned for an opportunity of peering the veil hiding To-day from To-morrow. There will always be a thrill of the mystical or occult in these foreseeings of the future.

The astrologist who looks at the stars and predicts your future from them; the soothsayer who peers into the globe and tells your fortune; the phrenologist who feels the bumps on your head; the palmist who searches your hand for the lines it shows, down to the amateur over the tea-cups, who focusses her eyes on the tea leaves—all have their followers who swear by them.

And, marching a path that is built on solid scientific deduction, the Grapho-Analyst, who has long passed the trail of the old Graphologist, is gaining an ever-increasing body of adherents who find his analyses of character less sensational but more truthful.

Grapho-Analysis, the science of character delineation from handwriting—what is it really?

Robert Saudek, the famous European cryptologist, says: "There is no such thing as HANDWRITING, but only BRAIN-WRITING." This is because the impulse and motive power come from the brain. Writing is no mere muscular act. If you think it is, try to write a letter whilst reading a book.

The Physicians' Times Magazine some time ago made the statement that "the nerves at the extreme finger tips are extraordinarily sensitive, and traces of grey matter, similar to that in the brain, may be found."

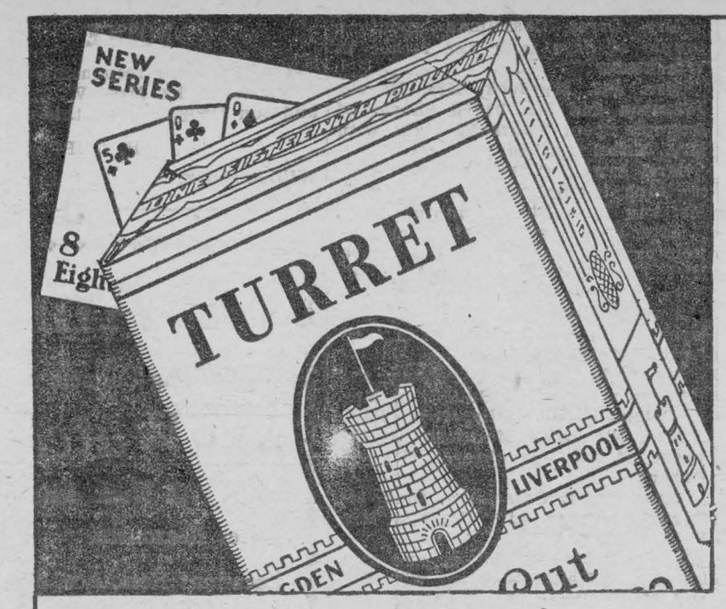

Throughout the world, Grapho-Analysis is gaining recognition as a practical science. In a number of European universities and colleges, the subject is being studied as a regular part of the curriculum. In the everyday affairs of life it is finding increasing application.

Business men, teachers and doctors are using it to supplement their own specialized knowledge. Indeed, many of the largest commercial undertakings in the world submit to grapho-analysts the handwriting of applicants for important positions; it is being used more and more frequently in criminal and civil courts, and even lovers, hesitating before stepping off the brink of matrimony, consult a grapho-analyst for an analysis of the handwriting of their intended bride or bridegroom.

In the field of crime prevention and detection, there are innumerable instances where Grapho-Analysis has been used to considerable alvantage. Recent cases include the Edward Hickman murder case, the Ric. Will case, the Starr Faithful case, the "Jake" Fleagle case, and to go back some years to the notorious Dreyfus case in France, when it was proved that Count Esterhazy had copied the document sold to a foreign country, and for which Captain Dreyfus, an innocent man, was punished by his country, and became the central figure in a "cause celebre" that will never be forgotten.

Air War on Locusts

London.—Equipped with special apparatus attached to the wings, a three-engined British airliner is to be employed in Rhodesia to spread a poison barrage before swarms of locusts as they pass over the country, in an effort to destroy them before they settle. Mechanism devised to spread a fine curtain of sodium arsenate powder has been sent out from England to Broken Hill, where it will be fitted to the airplane for a series of flights in search of the deadly insect armies.

R. F. Caspareuthus, who at one time held the record for the flight from England to Cape Town, is the pilot detailed by Imperial Airways for the experiment. His machine is a de Haviland "Hercules" biplane of the fleet that began the Cape air mail service and is now superseded by the faster four-engined Armstrong Whitworth "Italanta" craft.

Immediately locusts are reported the machine will be taken up to locate them; once the swarm is found the pilot will steer the machine along its front, spraying poison into the air in the hope that the locusts will fly into it. Three hundred pounds of the poison powder can be carried on the machine and, because the powder is fine enough to remain suspended in the air for some time, there is ground for hope that the swarms will largely be destroyed.

Airplanes have been used many times to dust crops with insecticide, especially in Canada and the United States, but this will be the first experiment in direct aerial attack on migrating insects. If successful, its use is sure to be extended; the losses caused by locusts, which strip the land where they settle of every trace of vegetation, are enormous and the cost of arial destruction is relatively insignificant. Indeed, the airplane in this new guise may transform agriculture over many thousands of square miles of Africa.

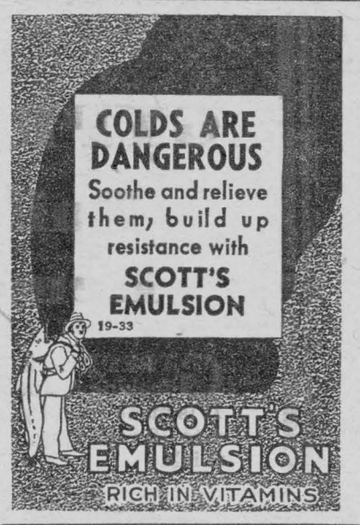

The range of the "Hercules" is well over 400 miles and Mr. Caspareuthus, who has been flying in South Africa since 1923 and knows every mile of the country over which he will fly, will be able to make long journeys in search of his prey. Though it was designed several years ago, the machine is capable of performance that must be considered good even to-day, and high safety margin is implicit in its ability to continue flight on less than the full power of any two of its 500 h.p. "Jupiter" air-cooled motors.—British Aircraft Society.

AN NEW YEAR'S THOUGHT

Hanging in a Chinese post-office is the following motto that has a message for everyone with dear ones far away, and that may suggest just one more New Year's resolution:

"As water to a thirsty soul, so are letters from home to those in a foreign land."

"The new era will not be in the hands of people who try to do things in the same old way."—Henry Ford.

Adults Require Eight Hours Sleep a Night

Plenty of sleep is necessary for clear skin. Authorities estimate that adults require approximately seven hours and fifty minuts of sleep every night and that it is better to stay up one night each week than to try and get along on six hours.

Some day when your mirror tells you that your skin has a slightly grayish tint to it, make up our mind that you will sleep nine hours that night and eight hours for the succeeding three or four nights. Then examine your skin again. The chances are that the wan look will have disappeared.

Drinking ten glasses of water a day and eating fresh fruits and vegetables help the complexion.

Circles under the eyes, small lines across the forehead or vertical ones between the eyebrows somtimes can be erased by sleep or rest.

See that your bed is comfortable and, if at all possible, don't use a pillow. Keeping your back, neck and head in a straight line while sleeping will go far toward eliminating a stiff neck.

Sleep with the windows open. There never should be a draught directly on the bed.

Back-Door Etiquette

Observes the magazine "Time"—In New York City last year 198 Consolidated Gas Co. meter-readers, repairmen and collectors on their daily rounds were bitten, nipped or chewed by dogs badly enough to need medical attention. Last week they and their 20,000 fellows were studying a pamphlet specially prepared for them by Dogman Frank F. Dole on "Dogs: How to Approach and Handle Them." Rules:

1. Make a little noise, to let the dog know you are coming.
2. Show no alarm at growls or barks. They are simply challenges.
3. Welcome the dog's acquaintance-making sniffs.
4. Make no sudden or unnatural movements.
5. Speak only in a confident, friendly voice.
6. Keep your hands off.
7. Impress the dog with the propriety of your visit.

A Possible Danger Zone

The Great War taught us conclusively that trouble originates in the most unlikely places. Not one Canadian in a thousand even knew the existence of a place named Sarajevo, but in this Serbian town was fired a shot that echoed around the world and caused untold misery, the effects of which will be with generations yet unborn.

Serbia is now part of the new state of Jugoslavia. Last summer we approached it from Italy, leaving Venice in the morning, stopping for lunch at Trieste, the important Adriatic port that was captured from Austria just a few days before the Armistice was called. After lunch we proceeded to Fiume, another Austro-Hungarian port that now belongs to Italy. Here, however, we found a more or less stagnant place; nine hotels had been closed and, of the three doing business, only one had running water in the rooms. Fiume was just a stopping place for the night; there was a certain amount of life in the streets as the day was Sunday and the square was being used as a promenade. This town did not proclaim its adherence to Italy until 1918 and the annexation only became a reality in 1924.

The small river Recina separates Fiume from Susak—formerly a suburb but now in the Kingdom of Jugoslavia. This river, which is no wider than a city street, is spanned by an arched bridge, on the Italian side of which is a frontier post, where we had to stop and have our passports examined. While waiting here, I noticed a number of disquieting circumstances. The peasants coming from Susak would have their baskets rudely disturbed by the Italian soldiers. Newspapers would be removed and either be roughly torn or taken into the frontier office for examination; the peasants would shrug their shoulders and move on. On the bridge itself, Italian guards would march to the centre line, glare at the Jugoslavian soldiers, who would return the unfriendly gesture. After crossing the bridge and entering Jugoslavian territory we noticed the officials there prodding a steel rod into the peasants' backets as they returned from Fiume. At no other frontier in Europe did we see such evidences of hostility.

Our car was a modern French design and it attracted attention wherever we went. In Italy the interest of the onlooker would quickly change as soon as the French license marker was noticed; usually a scowl would be the result. On the contrary, in Jugoslavia the French marker brought smiles and, from the children, cheers.

A short time before I had been taiking to a very clever man, now an Italian but, as he came from the territory formerly belonging to the Austrian Tyrol, he was still Austrian in sympathy. He made several prophesies—one concerning Balbo, who led the great air armada from Italy to America—which have since come true. This man stated that, if a war did come, it might start in Jugoslavia—where the last one started—and it would be over the rival interests of France and Italy concerning that country.

We were detained in Susak for about an hour. The streets around the bridge and docks were busy with traffic, much of which was crossing the river. However, we soon left the town and were on a dusty mountainous road, overlooking which were lookouts manned by armed soldiers. As we got deeper into the country we passed an old woman leading a flock of milch goats, from which the customer obtained fresh milk "off the hoof." Large cars did not seem to be a common sight on those roads; people would come to their doors to see us going by and horses would shy until after we had passed. The country is primitive, but the roads are good, although not surfaced. We drove into Karlovac for lunch, dusty and hungry, and pulled up in front of the Central Hotel, where I went in to arrange for our meal. The rest of the party followed and were taken upstairs to wash. The hotel was built in the Eastern fashion, a huge courtyard in the centre with galleries around it, off which were the sleping rooms. However the place was clean; we made ourselves as presentable as possible and went down to a hot dinner, soup, veal cutlets, potatoes, beans and rye bread. I have forgotten what there was for dessert but I remember that the wine was not bad.

We spent a little time in Karlovac; some had provided themselves with some dinara which they wanted to spend— a dinar is worth about 3 cents in our money; some looked about to see if there were any places that were worth a snap-shot. Across the road from the hotel and facing a square was a large barracks. We were interested and amused to see some of the soldiers marching around the building; one of them was carrying a table—it looked very much like their idea of "pack-drill," with which our soldiers were punished.

The ladies were eager to proceed to Zagreb, about 32 miles away, where I had assured them was the finest hotel in the Balkans—one of the finest in Europe. We arrived there in good time and their expectations were realized. But that is another story.

Next week I shall tell you about our visit to Spain—three months after the revolution.

AFTER BABY CAME

Mother Put On Weight

TELLS HOW SHE GOT BACK TO NORMAL

"Before having my baby," writes a young mother, "I weighed 140 lbs. Afterwards—to my great dismay—I weighed 175 lbs., and gradually increased to 193 lbs. Then I read of Kruschen Salts (six weeks ago), and I decided to try them, at the same time dispensing with sugar, potatoes and white bread.

"To my great joy, when I weighed last Wednesday, it went 169½ lbs. I feel so jubilant in the thought that if I keep on with this, I shall regain my normal weight, and once again be able to go in for the sports and pastimes I had to discard owing to being sensitive about my fatness. I feel I have a lot of pleasure and happiness in store."—(Mrs.) L. B.

There are six vital mineral salts in Kruschen. These salts combat the cause of fat by assisting the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

Kruschen Salts do not reduce you overnight — like so many products claim to do. But taken regularly over a period of time—with a modified diet and gentle exercise, half a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast will take away unhealthy flesh and restore your figure to its normal weight.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Planting Early Cabbage

Early cabbage is a very good money crop. More value may be obtained from an acre of it than from the same area devoted to many other crops. Seed sowing should be done early in March, and the plants grown in flats or thumb pots, and later put in four inch pots. Hardening off before planting in the field is very important. This will make the plants frost hardy. As soon as the plants show signs of growth in the open field, apply a side dressing of nitrate of soda.

Time to Castrate Pigs

The early castration of market pigs has many advantages which should not be overlooked by breeders.

Young pigs are easily handled, suffer very little and heal quickly, with a small percentage of losses, if the operation is properly performed and necessary precautions are taken to prevent infection.

At the Dominion Experimental Farm, Indian Head, pigs for market purposes are castrated previous to weaning time. Pigs to be weaned at six weeks are castrated at one month of age, or if weaning is done at eight weeks, they are castrated when about six weeks old. Experience at this Farm has shown that nursing pigs suffer less set-back and heal more rapidly, with a smaller percentage of losses, than older pigs.

Cuts Hog Costs

While hogs have been climbing to the best price reached since 1931, Clark Young of Miliken, Ontario, has been busy establishing a world's record for cheap production. He reports a hundred pounds gain for every 281 pounds of feed used, which is eight pounds better than the record of the Indian State College previous holder of the record. Authorities at the Ontario Agricultural College consider the pound of pork gain for every four and one half pounds of feed decidedly above the average. Mr. Young gives his total cost per hundred pounds of pork for the entire six months feeding period as $4.78, which represents more than $13.00 net profit per 200 pound hog at present prices. Nnot only have Mr. Young's hogs been fed cheaply and quickly (they were marketed at six months) but the quality according to the grading at Toronto and the bacon reports from Great Britain, where the pork was marketed, has been the best. Mr. Young figures his costs from weaning to six months as follows: 2,050 pounds of mixed home grown grain, 400 pounds of shorts, 1,650 pounds of special concentrated feed, total cost $69.57 for one lot of eight hogs.

Hatching by Incubator

Before using the incubator check it for leaks and breakages, and test the thermometers. Place the machine in a well ventilated room or cellar which is kept at a uniform temperature. The eggs should be of normal shape and appearance, and at least 24 ounces to the dozen. Control the moisture according to the appearance of the eggs after they are set. On the seventh-day test the air cell should be about one-eighth the size of the egg, and on the eighteenth day about one quarter. The egg should be turned twice a day. Test for fertility on the seventh and eighteenth days closing the machine on the eighteenth. Above all, follow the instructions given with the machine when purchased.

Proper Finishing Will Repay Ontario Shippers

"The cattle feeder who ships only properly finished cattle," said Garnet H. Duncan, livestock investigator, Ontario Marketing Board, "is very definitely helping himself.

"The liquidation of unfinished cattle will meet a poor sale, under present conditions. This is due largely to the fact that packers have such huge quantities in storage. On the other hand, Ontario has considerably less cattle feeding than normal consumption demands.

"The rise in hog prices will reflect itself on cattle prices, and finishing cattle properly will repay the feeder, and reduce this excess storage of beef.

"The result of marketing unfinished cattle at present will be an increase in the storage supply. Further than this, feeders will find themselves with no cattle to ship when prices advance.

"In my opinion, the wise shipper will feed to finish his stock, and distribute the supply over the next few months."

The Mutton Sheep

The production of mutton has become largely a question of furnishing lambs to the markets. As in beef or pork, the demands of the market call for young meat and comparatively light weights in carcass. The premium paid for baby beef and bacon hogs applies with even greater force to sheep. Thick, fleshy, but rather light joints are what the cook calls for whether for the home table or the restaurant. The tastes of the consumer have been cultivated to discriminate in favour of the tasty, tender, lamb until we find that from 70 to 80 per cent. of the sheep that reach the market are less than one year old. The age of heavy mutton is passed—a condition most favorable to the sheep raiser, who is thus enabled to reap quick returns from his flock. The increasing demand for lamb mutton this season augurs well for the future of the industry, provided care is taken to keep up and improve the grade of the product.

Winners in Bacon Competition

In the 1933 Bacon Litter Competition, there were 135 entries, and 68 completed and qualified. The Province is divided into districts, and the highest scoring litter of the competition was owned by Grant Summers & Son, Aylmer, winner of district number 2, who marketed 11 pigs grading 10 selects and 1 bacon, and weighed 2,270 at 171 days. In district number 1, W.E. Sonley Port Perry, was first with 11 pigs grading 10 selects and 1 bacon. Winner of number 3 district was B.T. Bolton, Dublin, who had 9 pigs, all selects. Mr. Bolton as been a winner in the past 5 competitions. The 45 litters in the prize money graded 70.9 per cent. selects, and the average weight was 203.1 pounds, and the average age per litter 183 days. The previous high grading percentage was 64 per cent. selects.

In awarding the prizes, carcasses are graded on the rail, the length, back fat, character of belly and firmness of fat all being taken into consideration.

Prospects Bright for Ontario Honey Trade

"1934 should be a prosperous season for Ontario honey producers," says Dr. E.J. Dyce, head of the Dept. of Agriculture at O.A.C., and secretary of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association, and he continues:

"Canada is now a large exporter of honey, standing second in amount supplied to the British market. It is not many years since Canada's honey export was practically nil, but in recent years it has advanced to a strong position, and all signs point to still further increase in the trade.

Ontario's honey export for the past year amounted to about one-quarter of her total production, and her honey is advancing in popularity on the British market. The export demand, together with the high price of sugar, eliminated congestion on the home market and there is at present in the hands of producers and dealers less than the normal amount for this season of the year. With these small stocks on hand, it is likely that all honey will be sold before the 1934 crop comes on to the market. Then, too, recent reports of dry weather in New Zealand indicate that the honey crop at present being gathered by bees in that country is likely to be short.

For these and other reasons, Ontario beekeepers may look forward with reasonable assurance of good prices for the coming season's crop providing they give close attention to business and produce high quality honey.

SUCCESSFUL CARD PARTY

The progressive euchre party which was held under the auspices of the Williamsburg Women's Institute in the Axworthy Lunch, was a decided success, both from an enjoyable and financial standpoint. There were in the neighbourhood of fifty guests in attendance, and there were several tables of bridge for those who cared to indulge in that. Prizes were given for both events. Playing commenced at 8.30, and continued until 10 p.m., which gave all a fine evening's entertainment.

Immediately following the cards, a sumptuous lunch was served, and all appeared to be thoroughly satisfied, for they expressed themselves as such. The following were the prize winners in the various events:

Euchre—Ladies' first, Mrs. Willis Schell; Gent's first, Keith Schell. Ladies' consolation, Elva Marcellus; Gent's consolation, Dick. Macdonald.

Bridge—Ladies' first, Mrs. Hopkins; Gent's first, Mr. Wilson. Both of these prize winners are patients attending the clinic of Dr. M.W Locke. There were no consolation prizes in the bridge contest.

The committee in charge are to be congratulated upon the wonderful success of this event. Following were the committee: Mrs. Axworthy, Mrs. Claude Casselman, Miss Ruby Barkley and Miss Bogart. They certainly "worked wonders" and sold many tickets. The sum of $19.00 was realized at this event and this amount goes to the Women's Institute.

Mr. Axworthy gave the ladies the use of his building for the evening, and the Institute is most grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Axworthy for their help and co-operation on that evening.

It is hoped to hold another of these events in about a month's time.

SYNOPSIS.

Jean Graham and her brother Euan tay on the Riviera with Geoffrey Winon and his wife Doreen, who leads Euan n to gamble at the Casino. Jean coaxes im to go to Paris. On the road to Paris ean finds a string of pearls in Euan's ocket. He snatches the case from her nd the car crashes. The accident is iscovered by Jerry Grant, who takes ean back to his hostess, Helen Gorst. uan is missing. M. Rivaux, French inpector, investigates. Geoffrey Winton ells Helen that his wife's pearls are issing. Rivaux confronts Jean with his as the reason for Euan's disappearnce. Jean visits Euan's friend, de aurier, whom she dislikes and learns hat Euan is in debt to him. Meanwhile erry Grant meets M. Perichon, famous etective, who promises to help them. Having tea with de Laurier, Jean learns hat he knows Euan had the pearls with im. Rivaux produces a petrol lighter which Jean acknowledges as her brohер's. M. Perichon takes Jerry Grant nd Dan Washburn to the spot where he lighter was found and sends them n a fruitless errand to a villa nearby.

CHAPTER XVII.

It was certainly a strange spectacle hich met their eyes. M. Perichon, ith his trousers wet above the knees, is coat off, his tie awry and his shirt alf hanging out behind, was aproaching them over the rocks. There as a satisfied grin on his face nevertheless as he waved to them and calld: "Papa has been paddling!" Coming up, he asked: "Well, and what ave you discovered?"

"Nothing," jerked Grant rather rimly, "We couldn't get into the villa. We rang and rang, but—" Before he uld finish the Frenchman waved him o silence.

"I know, I know, it is the villa of Mme. Dushkin."

Grant stared. An idea had come o him that Perichon had known that hey could not get into the villa, but ad wanted to be rid of them. He ad deliberately sent them on a wild oose chase. And why?

"How did you find out?" he asked curiously.

"I have been up there," Perichon nodded at the hilside. "That is why I am so wet. But now—come. We will go."

"But what did you find out? Is Graham there?"

The Frenchman's eyes flashed. "So that is what you think?" His head shook doubtfully. "Me, I think he is dead."

Grant grabbed his arm. "You know hat? You have proof?"

"Proof? No, but I fear it. Still, who knows? Come." He gathered up his discarded coat and adjusted his tie and shirt.

But all this talk of knowing things without proof exasperated Grant. Here they had been wandering about all day, and as far as he could see, nothing definite had been arrived at.

"Oh, look here, how much longer is all this going on? What are you doing? What is Rivaux doing? Or anyone for a matter of that? If you do know anything, why don't you tell me?"

With his head slightly cocked to one side, the Frenchman looked at him. "What impatience!"

"Impatience?" cried Grant exasperatedly. "I like that! Anyhow, do you think it's fun for Miss Graham to be suspected of being connected with a theft—is it fun for her to lose her brother like this? Hang it all!"

"I know, I know, it is hard, but que voulez-vous? One cannot run out into the streets and arrest the wrong person! I tell you that we progress. That is all I can say. Now come, du courage, mon ami. I am doing my best."

"But, damn it, can't you tell us anything at all? Don't you trust us?" the young man exploded.

"Yes, yes, I trust you, but—you don't understand. It is something very dangerous that I do because it is necessary. I am jumping to conclusions—using guess work—but I must not speak about it. Only have patience. Soon—soon I will know something."

"It's all very well to say 'soon, soon,'" thouht Jerry Grant. In the meanwhile Jean was feeling the strain badly and they were all bound by an intolerable weight of mystery and suspicion.

Driving back towards Nice, the sun low behind them, the coloring was superb. The Mediterranean lay like a great stretch of pale blue grass, and everywhere along the coast the masts and russet sails of the fishing fleet were reflected in it as in a mirror. But Grant surveyed it all gloomily. Things were bad—bad; he felt it, despite old Perichon's ridiculous optimism. He thought sourly of de Laurier and of Jean's apparent preference for him. That really was the iron seering his heart. She seemed to care for him at times, and yet she could go out with that French bounder. The determination to see her that night grew in him; he must. It was impossible for him to go on like this.

When they dropped M. Perichon at his hotel, the old man placed a hand on Grant's shoulder. "Have patience, mon pauvre, have patience," he said. "I have progressed today, even if you have not."

Grant replied with a dour grunt which made the Frenchman smile.

In spite of the lovely night and open windows a fire of pine cones crackled brightly on Mrs. Gorst's pleasant hearth. Before it Jean sat with a book open on her knee, but with her eyes gazing pensively at the flames.

Helen flung her a puzzled and anxious glance, for she simply could not make her out. From being a calm, direct young person, she had become reserved and restless, aimlessly moving about the place, picking things up and putting them down again, always with an air of abstract anxiety in her lovely brown eyes. Of course she was worrying over her brother, and the mystery which involved her, but there was more in it than that. At least it seemed so to Helen. There was, for instance, her association with Max de Laurier which she considered most unnatural, and it distressed her very much. What seemed so strange about it too was that although Jean persisted in seeing him, she always seemed in a miserable and silent mood when she came back. That afternoon, for example, she had returned soon after five, but when questioned about the tennis she was supposed to have watched, she seemed astonishingly vague about it, so much so that Helen found herself doubting that the girl had ever been to the courts. And now there she sat with her book open and her thoughts—heaven knew where.

Had she known it, the girl's thoughts were not far away, hovering as they were between Grant and Max de Laurier. She had hurt Jerry. She knew it and it worried her terribly. But what could she do? That she loved him she knew without a shadow of doubt, yet as things were she could not accept him. Some day—soon even, she hoped—when this mystery was cleared up, then—yes! But meanwhile there was the Baron. Her dislike of him had turned to dread. He knew so much; how much she did not know, but certainly too much. And besides, there was his attitude to her. The memory of the covetous look which she saw so often in his eyes sent a cold shiver up her spine. Naturally restrained and fastidious, the very thought of it was repulsive.

"Hullo!" Grant's voice broke in upon her thoughts, and she looked up as he came in from the garden. In his buttonhole was a camelia which he had picked on the way over, and he flung the girl an eager smile as he crossed to the fireplace.

Helen smiled a welcome: "Well, Jerry, where have you been all day?"

He grinned: "I've been for a picnic."

"Sight-seeing?" Jean asked curiously.

Helen laughed, and gathering up some papers, moved towards the door: "Tell Jean about it whilst I write a letter for the mail," she said, going out.

Finding themselves alone, an awkward silence fell. Each remembered their angry parting of the night before and felt uncomfortable. But at length Jean asked: "Have you really been for a picnic?"

"Yes. The purpose of the picnic, though, was to trace your brother."

"Oh!" Jean leaned towards him eagerly. "Tell me."

He shrugged. "I don't think there's much to tell. Perichon wanted to see the place where Graham's lighter was found. I don't think we discovered much. At least I didn't."

"Who is Perichon?"

Grant explained how he had met the ex-detective and enaged his assistance.

"Can't he help at all, Jerry?" she asked.

The misery in the girl's face tore the young man's heart and he wished most sincerely that he could give her some kind of hope, something even faintly definite.

"My dear, he says he's doing something, but he won't tell me a thing."

"Oh!" She seemed bitterly disappointed, and making a helpless gesture said: "I feel as if I couldn't go on."

"What d'you mean, Jean?"

"I don't know, but—everything is so indefinite. I don't like staying on here and worrying Helen, yet I can't go. I don't know whether poor Euan is dead, or whether—whether something has happened to him. Doreen's pearls are still missing; some people think that I know where they are." Grant made a gesture of denial, but she broke in: "Oh, yes, they do. I know it. I can tell by the way they look at me and whisper. Then——" But she could not mention de Laurier then, though he was the greatest trouble of all. "It's just all awful!" She turned away and stared into the fire. "I'm so tired, too, of going over and over it."

It as more than Grant could bear to see her so miserable. Leaning over, he took her hand and kissed it. "Jean, my dear, won't you say you'll marry me? I do care so much and I could r——"

She broke in hastily: "Oh, don't Jerry—not now. Don't ask me now."

"But I am asking you now. I'm asking you to be my wife."

"No, no, don't please! Wait," she gasped, freeing her hand and moving away.

"But, Jean, why wait? I want to pull you out of this horror, to make you happy."

"Oh, if you could—" she sighed, walking restlessly about the room.

Shame Chart

In Manhattan, J. Robert Stout, 55, president of the International Benjamin Franklin Society, founder of Educational Thrift Service and one-time president of the New York Rotary Club, asked a dozen assorted bankers, psychologists, admen and businessmen to lunch. After lunch, Mr. Stout presented each of his guests with a booklet containing 100 exceedingly personal questions which were designed to foster sharp self-appraisal, shame the questionee to better behavior. Each answer carried with it a grade, and the final total of plus and minus ratings located the individual in society. Some questions:

Do you pay more than your equal share of common expenditures when in the company of others?

If you failed to keep a promise to repay borrowed money to a person and were ushered to a seat in the theatre next to him, would you change your seat?

How many occupants in your sleeping room?

Do you attend church only as a social or business expedient?

How often do you bathe each week?

Do you understand the conventions of contract bridge?

Do you always use a handkerchief when you sneeze or cough?

Do your eyes need attention right now?

How much do you walk, daily average?

You will now take a 10-minute recess, during which you will go in person, call on the telephone, write a letter or send a telegram, fully and frankly confessing your most recent deceit, explaining a recent negligence, apologizing for a discourtesy or keeping an overdue promise.

If you found $10,000 in currency would you make a sincere effort to find the owner? (Take five minutes to answer).

Do you of your own knowledge know how nearly your watch shows correct time at this moment?

What is your habitual form of gambling?

How many of your accounts payable for living expenses are delinquent 30 days or more?

Do you remember the place where you last saw a beautiful sunset?

Is your living standard adjusted to your present income?

Have you now in your possesison a borrowed book or umbrella you are ashamed to return?

How many times have you seriously considered suicide?

If you had a dinner engagement with an interesting person whose favor you were seeking, how long would you delay keeping the engagement to wait for the veterinary to come to see your very sick dog?

"The average seems to be somewhere around 70," said Questioner Stout. "I personally must confess that I got a terrible minus score, but since applying myself diligently I have succeeded in showing an improvement of 4.06 per cent. over the first time."—Time Magazine.

Planning Menus For the Family

Meals in Which all the Household May Partake, Even the Tiny Children, are Not Difficult to Arrange

It takes much thought and planning on the part of the homemaker to serve one meal suitable for all members of a family which is composed of "assorted sizes"—children of various ages and adults.

But this thought and planning bring good results because time and work as well as money are saved by the mother and pleasant family meals are enjoyed.

One of the simplest ways of handling the situation is to remove an individual portion of a good wholesome food before additional seasoning makes it undesirable for the youngest member at the family table.

For example, a meat loaf made savoury with green peppers is not an acceptable food for the four-year-old. But a pan-broiled meat cake lightly seasoned with salt may be made for the small person with almost no extra work. The meat of course is taken out for the patty cake before the seasoning for the meat is added.

Food For Children

Individual portions of vegetables also may be set aside before seasoning for the family.

Salads may be simplified and plainly dressed with lemon juice and oil.

These precautions usually make it unnecessary to supply special and entirely different foods for children. The following menu takes care of the needs of small children as well as those in their "teens."

Breakfast: Orange juice, cooked cereal, cream, poached eggs, crisp whole wheat toast, coffee, milk.

Luncheon: Noodle soup, toast sticks, cottage cheese, raisin and green pepper salad, baked apples, milk, tea.

Dinner: Baked lamb loaf, potatoes en casserole, canned lima beans, shredded leaf lettuce with chiffonade dressing, fig and orange jelly, vanilla cookies, milk, coffee.

Children under school age and persons well past middle age will not want both cereal and eggs for breakfast, but growing, older children and active adults need the extra breakfast dish.

The luncheon salad must be confined to cottage cheese and one tablespoon finely chopped seeded raisins on a nest of finely shredded lettuce for children under school age.

Mash Potatoes Well

In the dinner menu the potatoes should be well mashed with a fork, the beans rubbed through a ricer and onions and radishes in the chiffonade dressing very finely minced for small children. Children under five years of age will be much better off if a plain dressing of oil and lemon juice is used on their lettuce.

A cheap cut of lamb from the forequarter is carefully trimmed and put through the food chopper twice for the loaf. If children under school age were given an egg for breakfast, meat for dinner is not required. Otherwise save out enough lamb to make individual patty.

The dessert is suitable for all members of the family. The dry crumbly characteristics of cookies make them more desirable for children than the soft moist texture of cake.

Apparently That Country Realizes the Ever-Increasing Importance of Aids to Feminine Beauty

Moscow. — As supervisor of the manufacture of superior rouge, lipstick, powder, eyebrow pencil, perfume and other cosmetics, Comrade Paulina Semyonova Zhemchuzhina, who is at the same time Mme. Molotov, wife of the Premier of Soviet Russia, has been awarded the order of Lenin, the highest decoration at the disposal of the Soviet Government. Slender, below medium height, with light brown hair, Comrade Zhemchuzhina is head of the principal Soviet cosmetic trust, known as Tezhe. Tezhe.

Eight other employes of the trust including two women were awarded the order of the Red Banner, the second highest decoration, for their part in raising the quality of the country's beauty products. With the awards to Comrade Zhemchuzhina and the others go the heartfelt thanks of several million Soviet young women who are attaching ever increasing importance to the appearance of their faces, not to speak of the importance of pretty clothes. Many products of the cosmetics trust are put up in packages quite as highly decorated as those used by the best Parisian perfumers.

Pageboy Holds Parcel Worth $60,000 In Gold

London.—A man walked into the Savoy Hotel, Strand, recently carrying a brown-paper parcel loosely tied with string.

"Look after this while I have dinner," he said to a pageboy.

After dinner the man returned and asked for his parcel.

"I'll bet you can't guess what is in this parcel," said the man, smiling.

The pageboy made several guesses —all wrong.

"I'll show you," said the man.

He opened one end of the parcel and poured out on the counter a heap of gold—twisted gold settings that had held jewels, gold watchcases, gold bracelets and chains, sovereigns, pencil-cases, wedding rings, buckles.

"There is nearly £12,000 worth of gold here," the man said. "On Monday morning it will all be melted down."

And retying his parcel he strode away.

Electricity Used To Grow Lettuce

Bobby Robinson, in New Role Reveals Unusual Development

Toronto.—M. M. (Bobby) Robinson, of Hamilton, secretary of the Canadian Olympic committee of the British Empire games committee, appeared in a new role at the convention of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association. Mr. Robinson, who specializes in producing track and field stars, appeared at the convention as Canada's pioneer electric grower of radishes and lettuce.

Bobby told the delegates of his career as a lettuce and radish grower and announced that the Ontario Hydro Commission would consider at a meeting establishment of a special power rates which may lead to revolutionizing the growing of seedling plants.

A rate schedule for growing radishes and lettuce electrically, Mr. Robinson announced, would be presented to the commission. The schedule, he continued, would permit economical, practical use of electricity in heating hotbeds if approved by the commission.

Th sport official said he had started the electrcal growing experiment at his Burlington, Ont., farm in January last year. Three hotbeds, 126 by 11 feet, were equipped with lead-bound electric cables. These were placed on beds of cinders over which six inches of loam were placed. In this loam, the seeds of lettuce and radishes were planted. When success with lettuce and radishes followed, tomatoes and cabbage plants were grown.

EDWARDSBURG CROWN BRAND CORN SYRUP

A pure, wholesome, and economical table Syrup. Children love its delicious flavor.

THE CANADA STARCH CO. LIMITED, MONTREAL

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

Around this time of the year hot dishes full of spice and tang are always very well received by most members of the family. Here is a new recipe for those who like their curry. The ingredients—2 tablespoons chutney, 1 tablespoon curry powder, 2 onions, 1 apple, 1 tablespoon golden syrup, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup sultana raisins, 2 cups stock, salad oil and [illegible] cooked meat, such as rabbit or chicken cut into dice. Slice the onions thinly and cook until brown in the salad oil, add the chopped apple and the other ingredients. Simmer gently for 3 hours, then serve with boiled rice.

Chinese Onion Omelet

This is a tasty variation of the ever popular omelet. Ingredients—3 cups chopped raw onion, ¼ cup salad oil, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, ¾ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons golden syrup, 3 tablespoons corn starch, 4 eggs. Cook the onion with the salad oil and syrup until yellow and tender, stirring often. Add the pepper, the salt and the corn starch. Pour the onion mixture into the well-beaten eggs and fry by spoonful, like pancakes, in a slightly oiled pan. Use salad oil for the frying-pan or griddle.

White Fruit Cake

The proof of a good cake is in the eating and the rapidity with which it disappears. Try the following.—Ingredients: 1 pound white sultana raisins, ½ pound candied or preserved pineapple, 1 cup salad oil, ¼ cup corn syrup, ¼ teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup shredded citron peel, 1 cup chopped, blanched almonds, 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar, 7 egg whites. Cream the salad oil and sugar and add syrup with lemon juice. Sift flour with salt, soda and cream of tartar. Alternate sifted dry ingredients with the stiffly beaten whites of eggs and then stir in the fruits and nuts which have been washed, dried and rolled in flour. Steam the cake for 4 hours and then bake in a slow oven for half an hour. Many cooks add the prepared fruit to the mixed dry ingredients in the sifter and simply sift the flour into the batter, adding the fruit at the end.

Winter Salads

Although winter time brings us a wealth of fruits and vegetables with which to compose salads, we are prone to drop into a rut and serve head lettuce with a dressing for meal after meal.

A crisp salad accompanying a meal composed of hearty winter foods brings with it more than just its appeal of color and taste. It also brings in such a pleasant way the health-giving minerals and vitamins which we are constantly striving to get into our meals.

The following salads are very inexpensive but are inviting and easy to make.

Cabbage and Raisin Salad

Two cups finely shredded cabbage, 2 red apples, ½ cup seedless raisins, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 4 tablespoons salad oil.

Mix sugar, salt and pepper with lemon juice. Slowly add oil, beating it in with a fork or a beater. Beat until smooth. Wash apples, cut into quarters and remove cores. Cut in dice without peeling and drop at once into the dressing to prevent discoloration. Add cabbage and raisins and toss lightly with a fork until thoroughly blended. Serves four to six persons.

Baked Beans and Bacon

This makes a hearty dish for a family luncheon.

Two cups baked beans, 4 thin slices of bacon, 4 tablespoons minced sour pickle, 1-3 cup tomato catsup, French dressing.

If beans are not dry, drain thoroughly. Cook bacon until crisp and cut in small dice. Combine beans, bacon and pickle with catsup and serve on a bed of crisp curly endive. Pass French dressing. Serves four.

Lima Beans and Celery

Another nourishing salad for winter luncheons en famille is found in lima bean and celery salad.

Two cups lima beans (canned or carefully cooked dried ones), 1 cup diced celery, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 2 tablespoons shredded green pepper, 2 tablespoons grated cheese. French dressing.

The green pepper, of course, may be omitted, but it gives a pleasing touch of color. A vivid yellow cheese is attractive, too, if available.

Mix beans, celery, onion and pepper, tossing lightly to avoid crushing beans. Pour on French dressing and arrange on crisp romaine. Garnish with grated cheese and serve more French dressing in a separate sauce boat.

A good raw vegetable salad uses equal parts of minced green pepper, finely shredded cabbage and grated raw carrot. Each vegetable is mixed with enough mayonnaise to bind, and they are then arranged in layers on a lettuce leaf, making the last layer of pepper. Serve with a French dressing to which 4 tablespoons catsup have been added.

Parsnip Patty Cakes

Six parsnips, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon white pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar, 3 tablespoons butter, cracker crumbs, 1 egg.

Boil parsnips in slightly salted boiling water. When tender drain and plunge into cold water. Slip skins. Mash and season with salt, pepper, sugar and butter. Make into small flat cakes and roll in cracker crumbs. Dip in egg slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon cold water and roll again in crumbs. Saute in butter and bacon fat until a delicate brown.

Squash Croquettes

This is an excellent way to serve squash when the cook has spent an afternoon away from the house. All the preparation except the deep fat frying may be done earlier in the day.

One medium sized squash, 1 cup nut meats, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons cream, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 egg, dried bread crumbs.

Cut squash in halves and scrape out seeds. Bake until tender. Scrape from shell and rub pulp through a ricer. Mix with butter, salt, pepper, nuts and cream to make moist enough to handle. Form into small balls and let stand until cold and firm. Roll in crumbs, dip in egg slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon cold water and roll again in crumbs. Fry three minutes in deep hot fat and drain on crumbled paper. The fat should be hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread in 40 seconds or 385 degrees F.

Meat in Cabbage Leaves

Take some cabbage leaves and boil them for five minutes in salted water; then take them out and drain them. Now make a mixture of minced cold meat, chopped onion, two tablespoons chopped suet, salt, pepper, and a pinch of allspice. Shape the mixture, moistening it if necessary with a little stock or gravy, into pieces about the size of an egg, and wrap each in a cabbage leaf. Tie these up and arrange them as closely as possible in a long fireproof dish, cover them with stock or gravy and with a piece of buttered paper and cook them in the oven for half an hour or so.

If preferred, they could be braised on a bed of vegetables, but in this case it would be better to use raw meat.

Year's Taxes Omitted By Village in Virginia

Hamilton, Va.—Cities having trouble with their municipal financing might take a few lessons from the village of Hamilton.

Last year citizens paid no town taxes. Costs of sidewalks, electric lights and other municipal expenses were paid out of a surplus built up by the council for that purose. If there's any destitution among the 500 residents of the community, it's kept quiet. No help has been asked from any relief agency. Town taxes will be collected this year, but the rate is only 35c per $100 valuation of property.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson VIII. — February 25. — The Twelve Sent Forth — Matt. 9:35—10:8; 10:32, 33. Golden Text.—The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9:37, 38.

TIME—Winter of A.D. 29, the beginning of the third year of Christ's ministry.

PLACE—Galilee.

PARALLEL PASSAGES — Mark 6: 6-13; Luke 9: 1-6.

"And Jesus went about all the cities and the villages." Galilee was a very populous province, crowded with cities and villages. "Teaching in their synagogues." All of which would be open to him, the synagogue "rulers," or committee of lay managers, gladly inviting the distinguished visitor to speak his message. "And preaching the gospel of the kingdom." The good news that the reign of God had been set up on the earth. "And healing all manner of disease and all manner of sickness." Our Lord was no specialist, confining himself to one form of human misery. All bodily wretchedness met his ready sympathy and his all-powerful healing.

"But when he saw the multitudes." He was always attended by a crowd. "He was moved with compassion for them." Compassion is a combination of sorrow, sympathy and love. "Because they were distressed and scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd." The Jews of Christ's time were led by religious teachers whose only gospel was dead formalism. The Good Shepherd grieved when he saw his sheep left to the wolves.

"Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few." It is the love of Christ and the love of men that alone can send us out to garner souls for him.

"Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest." It is only in the spirit of prayer, the spirit of communion with Christ, that we can really join in this work and get others to join in it.

"And he called unto him his twelve disciples." Twelve, in thought of the twelve tribes of Israel. Disciples means learners; apostles, as they were called when evangelizing, means men sent forth. "And gave them authority over unclean spirits, to cast them out." Named first among their powers of miracle-working, as dealing with the mysterious agencies of Satan, then especially violent and prevalent in the world. "And to heal all manner of disease and all manner of sickness." We have in the Gospels only glimpses of this healing power of the Twelve, for the four evangelists were wholly occupied with setting forth the supreme character and life of the Saviour; we see more of it in the Acts, after the Lord had left them to work alone.

"Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: The first, Simon, who is called Peter." He was a fisherman of Bethsaida, then living in Capernaum. "And Andrew his brother." Both Andrew and Peter were sons of a John or Jonah, probably dead at this time. Andrew had one specialty. He was an expert in the gentle art of bringing other people to Jesus. "James the son of Zebedee." Also a fisherman, as were all of the first four named; for Christ found his helpers among the poor and lowly, being poor and humble himself. "And John his brother." The writer of the greatest book in the world, the Fourth Gospel. He referred to himself in his Gospel only as the disciple whom Jesus loved. Tradition says that John was the youngest of the Twelve.

"Philip." This apostle is seldom mentioned, but he was the one who found Nathanael and led him to Jesus. "And Bartholomew." The son of Tolmai. He was manifestly a devout Jew, a student of the written Word, a man of thoughtful disposition and prayerful habits. "Thomas." He does not deserve to be called doubting Thomas in the usual sense of the phrase; he was desponding, slow to believe what he ardently desired (as he had been ready to believe the worst, John 11: 16), but when convinced, uttering the noblest confession in the Gospels, John 20: 28. "And Matthew the publican." Levi the tax-gatherer for the Romans, the writer of the Gospel we are studying, whose conversion and great feast we have already discussed this quarter. "James the son of Alphæus." James the Less, as he is often called. "And Thaddæus." Probably the same as the Lebbæus and Jude of the other lists, and probably the writer of the Epistle of Jude.

"Simon the Canaanean." The Canaanæans or Zealots were a party of fierre Jewish nationalists, bitterly hating the Romans and striving to throw off their yoke. "And Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him." Judas of Kerioth in Judah, the only disciple, probably, who was not a Galilean. Jesus said of him the most terrible thing that could be said of any man—"It had been good for that man if he had not been born."

"These twelve Jesus sent forth." They were promoted by that act from discipleship to apostleship. "And charged them, saying, Go not into any way of the Gentiles." They were not, for instance, to turn northward to Syria, preaching in Tyre and Sidon. The time was not ripe for it and they were not experienced enough. "And enter not into any city of the Samaritans." Not because Christ shared the common Jewish antipathy to the half-foreign people who inhabited central Palestine, for we know he was far from this, and Samaria was expressly included in the apostolic field by Christ's final instructions (Acts 1:8); but Galilee would be all they could manage at the time.

"But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Though lost, they could most easily be reclaimed.

"And as we go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." By the kingdom of heaven our Lord meant the reign of universal righteousness, love and peace, which he came to earth to establish.

"Heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse the lepers, cast out demons." Christ gave them his own supernatural power, which they were to use as proof that they were from the Messiah. "Freely ye received, freely give." This does not mean that any of the Twelve had been miraculously healed. It means that the power to heal was given them for nothing, and that they must not take payment for healing.

"Every one therefore who shall confess me before men." Discipleship in the service and kingdom of Jesus Christ asks a man to profess nothing about himself. But it does ask him to confess a great deal about the name, the law, and service of his Master. "Him will I also confess before my Father who is in heaven." What an eternal joy if one can hear Christ say on the great day of judgment, "This soul is mine forever."

"But whosoever shall deny me before men." By repudiating Christ's spiritual authority, by denying his divine Sonship, by refusing to accept the atonement he made for sin, by living a life contrary to his teachings. "Him will I also deny before my Father who is in heaven." This is no threat, no angry condemnation, it is the sorrowful assertion of an inevitable consequence.

Husband Not Forced To Pay Rent to Wife

Did Any Male Judge Ever Frown on a Wife's Generosity?

New York.—Justice Henry G. Wenzel, Jr., denied in the Supreme Court, Queens, an application by Alvin M. Dunham, receiver of rents for a dwelling, for an order directing Ralph Ricardi, whose wife owns the property, to pay $150 a month rent for the house.

"The house in which a man and wife live," said Justice Wenzel, "is, in addition to being a dwelling, a home. The house may belong to either but as long as love and amity prevail, the house belongs to both.

"I am quite aware that a similar motion has been granted by one of my learned brothers whose opinions are worthy of the deepest consideration. His determination of the matter rested upon the duty of the husband to provide food and shelter for his wife. This has been a natural law since the cave man seized a wife and carried her to his cave. In these enlightened days many wives furnish shelter for their husbands, and where they have the means and inclination to do so the law does not frown upon their generosity."

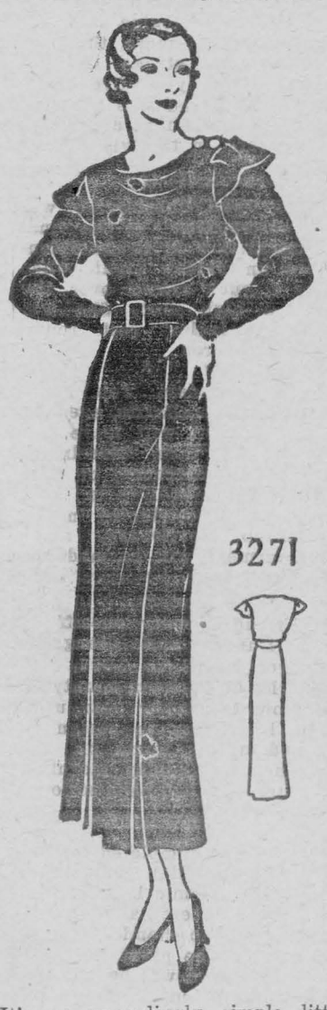

Blind Niece of Truro Woman in Movies

Mrs. A. S. Murphy, of Truro, N.S., has received word that her niece, pretty Mary Flinn, aged 23, of Prescott, Arizona, blind since she was two years of age, has gone to Pasadena, California, where she has an important role in a theatrical production now being rehearsed in which the entire cast of seven is sightless. Her selection as a member of the unique cast followed a reply to a newspaper advertisement for "the prettiest blind girl in California who does not wear glasses."

Good's Motor Car Was Not So Good

Williamsport, Pa.—A tire went flat on Edwin J. Good's automobile during the wee, sma' hours.

While he was inflating the tire his lights went out.

As he cranked the car the engine "kicked" and almost bowled him over.

When he closed the door the glass broke.

Finally, on the way again, a wheel blithely rolled off into a vacant lot.

Good called a taxicab.

Men are qualified for civil liberty in exact proportion to their disposition to put moral chains upon their own appetites.—Burke.

Grouchiness In Families

Call the Members of Your Household Together for a Council and Discuss the State of Affairs

Members of the average family aren't always nice to each other. So often it happens that father, mother and children seem to be waiting for someone's hat to drop, or the chip to fall off a shoulder, or the fat to jump into the fire.

This habit of grouchiness in families grows so subtly and so swiftly that no one suspects it. If their friends, relatives or neighbors were to hint that all was not serene in their daily life they would be hurt and resentful.

Family Irritability Growing

Yet if one appeared unexpectedly on the threshold at any minute of almost any day when this family is together, the chances are there would be a ruckus going on about something, or someone yelling, or someone quietly sulking to himself. If the family in question disdains such plebian tactics and considers verbal fencing a higher form of combative art than the cleaver or the broad sword of noisy quarreling, things may be quite as uncomfortable.

Wealth, culture, or social position makes little difference. The family in which the habit of quarreling has taken root will go about it in its own way. One may go into a house as quietly serene, seemingly, as a dewy dell on a May morning yet feel instantly the brittle strain of unfriendliness in every word and gesture.

This irritability and impatience is growing rapidly in a number of homes. It was almost inevitable for this to happen as individual interests have drifted apart with the years. Moreover, there are too few common ties. Each one comes in tired and the family meets at a time when nerves are not at their best. And there is plenty today to unnerve the best of us.

Talk the Matter Over

What would be wrong with calling the family together for a council, passing the pipe of peace, and discussing the state of affairs.

A mother might say, "Children, and you too, Dad, and I myself, have become careless of each other's feelings. We are short temperd and fly off without reason at the slightest thing. We offend where we don't really mean to, we accuse or get suspicious where we should know better, we are disobliging, selfish and sour. In fact we often treat each other far less courteously than we would treat complete strangers.

"Let us all try to be kinder, to help each other. We might try to smile and be merry instead of looking like thunder clouds half the time."

And any family that is worth its salt will give three cheers and agree to adopt new rules for the home team in the future.

Modern Women Are Not Pioneer Type

Secretary of Settlement Committee Complains of Difficulty in Placing Families on Land

Peterboro, Ont.—W. Magladery, secretary on the Ontario Land Settlement Committee, says women have been the committee's greatest difficulty in placing families on the land in Northern Ontario.

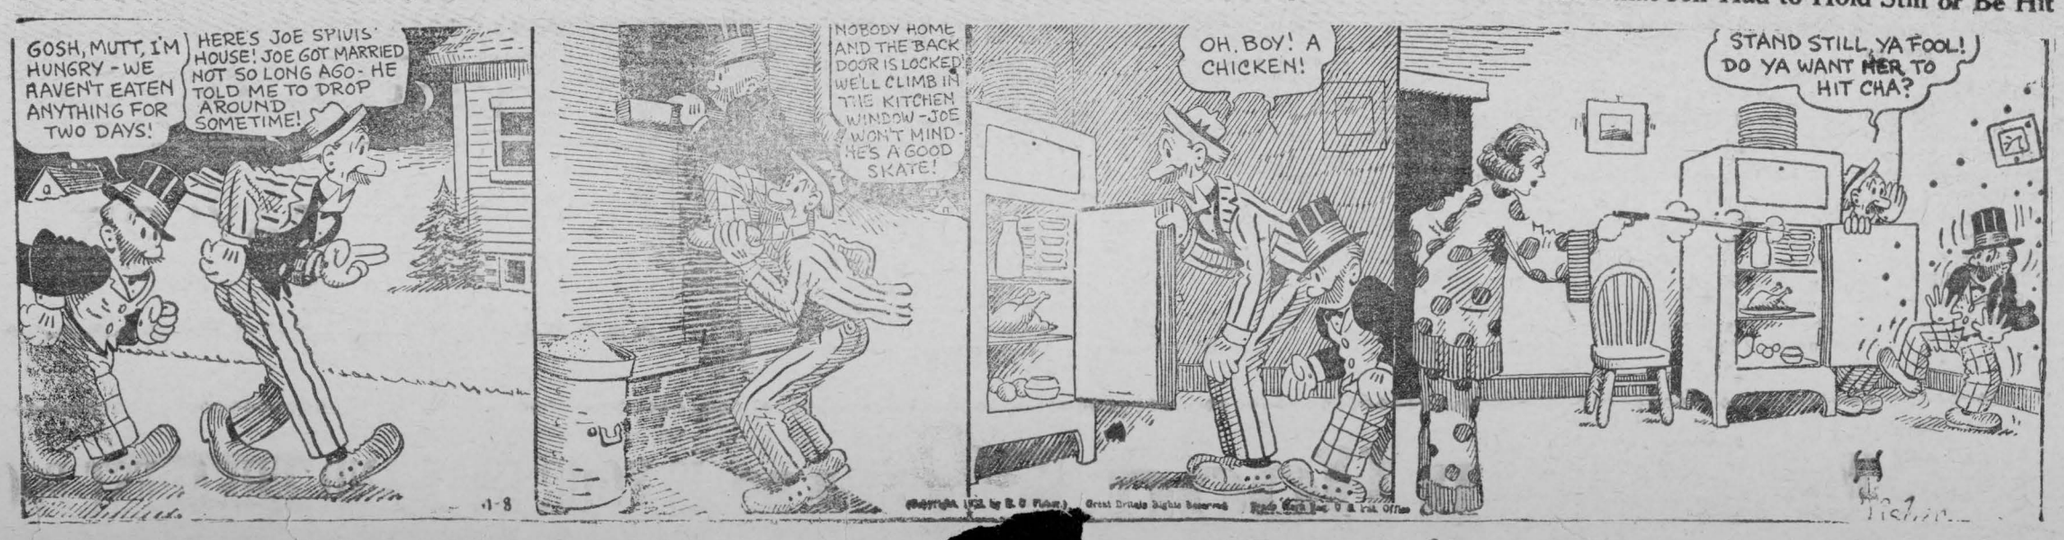

"We found," he says, "that less than 15 per cent. of the women could sew, knit, or bake their own bread. They were not the type for pioneers. We have learned our lesson and now we make certain that the woman is properly fitted to do her part before the family is permitted to go into the land in Northern Ontario."

Railways Handle 125,000 Grain Cars

Fort William, Ont.—According to figures announced by the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, enough grain poured into lakehead railway and elevator terminals in 1933 to make up a grain train whose engine would be in Montreal and whose caboose would be in West Fort William. Grain cars numbering 125,000 were unloaded, and by rough calculation they would stretch nearly 1,000 miles.

Failure to observe these points has led to innumerable summonses being issued to car owners during past years. Be sure that you are not among those fined during 1934.

Thus, despite the clever ruse of the neighbour, Parent was arrested on a charge of keeping alcohol for sale.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL HOCKEY SEASON CLOSES

Saturday of last week saw the curtain drop, and another hockey season pass into oblivion in Morrisburg.

While the attendance was not up to what it has been in previous years, it surpassed that of practically all other towns in the league this year. The excellent sportsmanship and fine spirit prevailing throughout the season reflects much credit upon the officers in charge, as well as the players, and has done much to promote the popular winter sport, as well as to sow the seed for a successful season in 1935.

Perhaps the biggest surprise package among the players was "Tiny" Jones, who dropped into the nets early in the season. Elwood Jones hailed from Saskatchewan. He is the type of sportsman that would be made welcome in any town. Apart from outstanding ability as a goalie, he possesses the essentials that go to popularize the sport—he is a gentleman in and out of the game.

CARDINAL OUSTS TIGERS, 4-2

Cardinal's fast, furious drive to make the St. Lawrence League finals gave them a 4-2 victory over the Morrisburg Tigers in the local arena on Saturday evening last. The victory was well deserved, as the Cardinal team outskated, outplayed and out-shot the Tigers in every period but the last. The brunt of the work was borne by the Tigers' first line of Robinson, McCallum and Chuck Lapierre, who played the entire third period without relief. The game was fairly clean throughout, although several penalties were handed out for minor infractions of the rules.

A play by Robinson in the first period provided the first serious threat of the game. Sweeney, however, came out of the net to rob him of a sure-looking goal. Still rushing the play, Tigers had two more chances spoiled, Mike O'Malley and Sam McCallum getting shots. Cardinal then jumped into the fray with a bang. Little and Dixon combined to beat Tiny Jones, Morrisburg net-guardian, after five minutes of play. Little did the scoring, Dixon drawing the assist. One minute later, Tiny, sprawled on the ice in front of the net, reached up and caught Dixon's shot, almost out of the net. Loughridge scored Cardinal's second goal with twelve minutes to go in the first period. Tiny had very poor defence on this goal. Only his sensational stopping saved a larger score. Morrisburg managed to hold their own for the balance of the period, the score at the end being 2-0 for Cardinal. Sorrell, of Cardinal, drew the only penalty in the first frame, for tripping. Tiny stopped twelve hard shots to Sweeney's eight. Sweeney's, however, were mostly long, easy loopers from near the blue line.

At the beginning of the second period, Sweeney saved an easy one by Robinson, but Sam McCallum almost fooled him on the rebound. Dixon, Cardinal left wing, drew a penalty, and Chuck Lapierre and Robinson both missed an empty net when Sweeney, the visitor's goalie, fell to the ice. Then Thompson also of Cardinal, got a penalty, and Tigers bombarded the Cardinal net. The steady grilling fire they kept up on Sweeney had its effect. John Cross scored on a well-placed shot, with two minutes left of the second stanza. This ended the scoring for this period, in which Tiny handled 14 shots, to 10 for Sweeney.

In the third period, Thompson of Cardinal, lessened the Tiger's chances after one minute of play when he boosted the score to 3-1, while Robinson, of Morrisburg, was in the cooler. Sam McCallum, leading the Tigers' attack as he had been all evening, stick-handled his way through the Cardinal team but could not get a shot away Sweeney checking him. Dixon, of Cardinal, was handed a penalty and Chuck Lapierre, in his anxiety to score, batted the puck over the fence. Dixon was barely out of the penalty box when he went back in again. He was followed by Lapierre and John Cross, both of Morrisburg Dixon came back on the ice, and with Tigers' still two men short Robinson scored, on a perfect pass from Sam McCallum. A minute and a half later, Little, flashy forward of the Cardinal team, scored on a solo rush. Robinson drew his second penalty ofthe night. Sam McCallum rushed from his own defence, stickhandled dizzily through the Cardinal team, faked a shot at the right-hand corner of the net, circled it and almost scored on the other side. He was still trying to centre out the puck when the bell rang, giving Cardinal the game 4-2, and the round 8-6. During this period, Tiny had only 15 shots, and Sweeney 16.

Two men on the Tigers' team outshone any of the rest on the ice, on either team. One was "Tiny" Jones, Morrisburg's giant goalie who time and again rose to the heights to beat the fast-stepping Cardinal front line. Tiny had a loose defence in front of him, but he was right there every shot, and could not possibly have saved any of the goals he let in. The only wonder is that there were not more goals scored.

The other outstanding star was Sam McCallum, stellar centre player. Time after time, Sam got thru' the Cardinal team, with little help from the wings, only to have them miss his passes or to be robbed by Sweeney.

Besides these two stars, the Morrisburg second line of Ray James and the Smith boys played very nice combination, but did not see much work.

For Cardinal, Gamble and Thompson stood out on the defence. Sorell, centre of Cardinal's first front line, was the pick of the forwards.

The game was handled by referees Happy Hooper and Roger Smith, both of Ottawa.

The teams:

Cardinal—Goal, Sweeney; defence Gamble and Thompson; centre, Sorell; wings, Little and Dixon; subs, Loughridge, Mathieu, Kinchen and Andrews.

Morrisburg—Goal, Jones; defense O'Malley and Cross; centre, McCallum; wings, Robertson and Lapierre; subs, Hay, James, H. Smith and G. Smith.

BROCKVILLE JUNIORS SMOTHER HOLY NAME, 12-4

Brockville Juniors came from behind to wipe out a two-goal lead, and then to fairly smother Whitford, of Cornwall, rubber, in a fast game played in the Morrisburg Arena on Thursday night. This was the first of the two-game series in the O.D.H.A. amateur playoffs.

Each team scored twice in the first period.

Cornwall, scoring two quick ones near the start of the second, shot into a 2-goal lead, which disappeared as the Brockville marksmen found the net. This period ended with the score 5-4 for Brockville.

In the third period, the Brocks scored seven times, while shutting out their opponents.

Starring for Brockville was Ronald Ryan, at right wing, of last year's Morrisburg Juniors. Ronald collected six goals during the evening, the other scorers for Brocks being Carter, 3; McMahon, 2; Foster 1. Cornwall's goals came from the sticks of DeGray, Gault, Lalonde and Andrews.

The second period was featured by a fist fight between Ryan, of the Brocks, and Payette, of Cornwall. Both drew 5-minute majors.

The game was handled by referee

Cushion Comments

This little column is what the shoemaker threw at his wife—the last.

* * *

It was "some" season; we had a good team, good ice and good support.

I think that everyone had an idea that the "Tigers" would go through the series "aflyin' ": The team you saw play last Saturday, here, when Cardinal defeated them 4-2, was not the same team that took Cardinal the week before 5-2. Sickness had taken its toll of the Tigers.

* * *

Cornwall won by two victories, 3-2 and 2-1, and retain the Benson Trophy.

* * *

It took time and financial worries aplenty to put the Tigers through the 1933-34 season, and so far as I am concerned, it was well worth the effort, and on behalf of the team and their executive, I want to thank the people of Morrisburg and vicinity for their support.

There wasn't much trouble in getting things we needed such as cars for the games away from home, etc. To these car owners the club is thankful.

* * *

I wonder what next year will bring? After all, we must have a hockey team; we would be a nice bunch of dead-heads if we didn't. And what about a baseball team this summer? Must we wait till we are wearing overcoats and fur hats till we have some athletic entertainment?

* * *

Monday night, the Chesterville C.O.V.L. champions, meet Cornwall, St. Lawrence League champions, here in the Arena.

I, too, want to thank the Editor of "The Leader" for granting me space in the paper to publish my "Cushion Comment" column.

CORNWALL CANADIENS WIN BENSON TROPHY

One of this year's many reinstated professionals, Joe Contant, led Cornwall to a 2-1 victory over Cardinal at Cardinal Memorial rink on Tuesday night, to give his team the St. Lawrence Senior League championship in two straight games. Cornwall won the first game in Morrisburg Monday night. Tuesday's game, played before a large crowd, produced the fastest hockey that has been witnessed in the St. Lawrence League this season.

Both teams played wide-open hockey from start to finish. After many scoring chances had been lost, Contant opened the scoring with a back-hand shot, after 19 minutes of play in the first period. Cardinal started out in the second period to tie the score, and, after five minutes of play, Sorrell was successful, taking Dixon's pass. At this stage of the game, Thomson got hooked in the face by a visiting player's stick and was forced out of the game.

The two teams fought hard to break the tie, and it was only after 15 minutes of play in the third period that Contant, assisted by Bus. Cameron, scored his second goal of the evening, and gave his team a victory and the championship for the second year in succession.

Iroquois Juniors defeated Cardinal Juniors 5-4 in ten minutes overtime at Cardinal last night, before a large crowd, to give them the odd game in three, and the St. Lawrence Junior Hockey League championship. Both teams played an exceptionally fine brand of hockey.
