Ship of Democracy Tried And True, Declares Speaker

Dr. W. C. Davy, Morrisburg, Spoke on "Political Isms" Before Rotarians Tuesday Evening.

While guarding against the development of "isms" from other countries, Canada and the Empire must stick to the time-tested old ship of democracy, instead of embarking in a ship with an untried helm and a compass that leads God only knows where, was the advice given by Dr. W. C. Davy, of Morrisburg, speaking to Chesterville Rotarians Tuesday evening on the subject "Political Isms."

The old ship of democracy may need caulking, a few repairs, and perhaps remodelling, but in Dr. Davy's estimation she was ahead of the two main divisions of the "isms," Socialism and Fascism. He traced the history of the three types of government to today, and found democracy or capitalism gaining hold in 1750 with the industrial revolution in England; Socialism came with the turn of the 20th century, while totalitarian states are in existence only since the War.

The aims of the three types were summed up by the speaker who stated that in the capitalistic form, industrial organization is not hindered, man is allowed open opportunity, freedom of enterprise, may develop in any way the methods of production, use of wealth, and to look after its distribution and retain whatever profit may be secured. It started really when the first fence was put around a plot of ground and the owner said "This is mine."

Socialism desires creation of freedom of opportunity, justice, liberty and brotherhood as an inheritance of the people of the nation. The produce must be given into governmental control and "exploitation of the' labourer" must not exist. Socialism is divided into several parts, the Modern Socialists, Guild and Syndicalists, the latter the most radical. The only form of Socialism in control today is the Communism of Russia.

The Totalitarian or Fascist government was the product of Mussolini who in his youth was a Syndicalist. The conditions in Italy and Germany today are the result of the Treaty of Versailles, said Dr. Davy. Italy procured a meagre share of the peace, and there had been growing even before 1914 a spirit of nationalism. Italy wanted to be regarded as a nation of the world.

Fascism says the state must come first and the individual after. Citizens are but a passing phase in the generations of nation builders and must be regarded in that light. They are the property of the state.

In Germany there is in force the most complete conscription of manpower and resources the world has ever seen, and Dr. Davy wondered how long the people could stand it. Following the Versailles pact, a group of Imperialists arose, advocating scrapping of the treaty and building Germany into the greatest nation in the world.

Italy claims to be the guardian of the Latin civilization centred in the Mediterranean.

Dr. S. H. Hutt introduced the speaker, who is a well-known dentist of Morrisburg, interested in sport, the Canadian Club and fraternal organizations. Walter Carr thanked the speaker.

Several visitors were present and a large number of the members and the Library room in the Community Hall was crowded. President P. S. Boyd announced a club will no doubt be formed at Maxville this wek. Lorne Reddick, president of the Kemptville club, returning from Maxville, stopped off for the local meeting.

ONLY HOPE IS FOR JACK POT.

IN A radio address Sunday evening in opposition to legalizing sweepstakes for the benefit of hospitals in Canada, Rev. Mr. Silcox, of Toronto, stated that but forty cents of the $2.50 paid for a sweepstakes ticket by Canadians ever reached the hospitals. The pity of it is that the average buyer of a ticket does not give a hoot whether any of it gets there.

"KEEPING UP THE MORALE"

WHEN the Ottawa Rough Riders lose, the defeat is reported like this: "It was a tough victory for the Rough Riders to lose. The crowd of 18,000 was stunned by the McPherson to Stukus heave which snatched victory from the red, white and black and turned it into a brilliant Argo victory." That is called "keeping up the morale."

AN ANCIENT MESSAGE.

THE RECORD has an original telegram written on a blank of the Grand Trunk Railway Company exactly five years before Confederation, or to be exact, on the first day of July, 1862. It is addressed to Mr. Wood, Montreal, and signed by G. Christie, sent from Lansdowne at 9.27 a.m., evidently a report of a lineman to his chief in Montreal.

The instructions on the blank asked the sender to write plainly and concisely, use no figures or abbreviations, and to sign in full.

In the days when that message was transmitted, the Morse code was indented on a narrow strip of paper passing through an instrument known as a register. The paper passed between two brass rollers kept revolving by a descending weight attached to a cord which the operator released when it was desired to receive a message. When the weight had reached the floor, it was brought back to its first position by the use of a large brass key to wind it up. The paper was closely watched by the operator as the instrument worked to read the message as it came and give the proper signal to the operator at the other end of the wire that it was okay.

Taking messages by sound alone was forbidden by the company for fear of mistakes occurring and there would be no record in case of doubt. The receiving of messages by sound eventually became the recognized procedure and speeded up the business, and is in operation at the present time in all the smaller offices outside of the larger cities where the Mokrum printer is used with good eyesight being more necessary than good hearing. In dispatching trains on railways the telephone has superseded the telegraph on most lines.

EMERGENCY APPEAL FOR NORTHERN FIRE SUFFERERS.

"THANKSGIVING DAY" this year will never be forgotten in the Rainy River District—as it marks one of the greatest catastrophes in the history of Northern Ontario.

While Canadians generally were giving , thanks for their blessings thousands of men and women in this northern district were living through hours of indescribable horror. For days and nights, they fought, heroically, to save life and property from the raging forest fires which devastated their country. Bandaged feet and eyes, bodies and faces blistered and burnt, today bear witness of that stubborn and magnificent fight against overwhelming odds.

In spite of these heroic efforts, 20 persons are dead; some 300 men, women and children are homeless, destitute; some 400 others have seen the results of their years of labour, their barns, their stock, even their seeds for planting, all swept away; over 3,000 square miles of forest and farm land are in ashes and ruins.

Requested and supported by the Provincial and Federal Governments, the Red Cross has undertaken the arduous task of relief and rehabilitation in these burned-out areas.

Remembering how generously and warm-heartedly the people of Ontario came to the rescue of the Haileybury Fire victims in 1922, the Red Cross confidently lays the plight of these present fire sufferers before you, knowing that you will do what you can to relieve their distress.

One hundred thousands dollars is urgently required. Your contribution, whether large or small, will be welcomed at any local Red Cross Branch, or may be sent direct to Red Cross Headquarters, 621 Jarvis Street, Toronto, Ontario.

THE MISUSE OF GASOLINE.

FIRES from gasoline and other petroleum products in Canada numbered 1,433 in 1937 and caused property damage of over $1,500,000 and resulted in the loss of many lives. Hundreds of millions of gallons of gasoline are consumed annually in this country but it is the misuse of a few gallons which has been responsible for the mounting toll of dead and injured and heavy property damage.

If people could only realize that a gallon of gasoline properly vapourized has the explosive force of 82 pounds of dynamite, they would exercise more care in its use. Gasoline should never be used in the house for dry cleaning purposes. Wouldn't it be cheaper to send clothes out to be cleaned than to risk being burned to death in an explosion of the fumes should they come in contact with flame? Even the very act of cleaning clothes in gasoline develops static electricity which is liable to set off the fumes without warning. This has often happened too when floors are cleaned with gasoline.

It may not be generally known, but it is nevertheless a fact that in most provinces of Canada a fire insurance policy may be rendered null and void if more than one quart of gasoline is kept in a building without special permit. And even that limit must be kept in a tightly closed metal can—never in a glass bottle.

The handling of gasoline in the presence of naked lights is also a very dangerous practice. Attempts to transfer this volatile liquid from one vessel to another in the presence of lanterns has resulted in numerous deaths and injuries. Where found necessary to do this, it should be done in daylight or by electric light.

Many garage operators still insist on using gasoline for cleaning and washing engine parts in spite of the fact that there are just as efficient and safer solvents on the market. Numerous instances are on record where this practice has resulted in fire and personal injuries.

Where necessary to keep small quantities of gasoline, it should be kept only in approved safety cans and all such containers should be prominently labelled with the word "GASOLINE."

Smoking in the presence of gasoline is a hazardous pastime, and strange as it may seem in this enlightened age some people still try to see how much gasoline there is in a tank by the use of matches or lighted lanterns.

With the widespread use of gasoline there should be little excuse regarding the lack of knowledge of its explosive properties and it should command greater respect than has hitherto been shown.

CANCER QUACKS.

John W. S. McCullough, M.D.
Health League of Canada.

THE American Cancer Bulletin for October features an article on the subject of Cancer Quacks. It points out that if there be things more heartless than the exploiting of sufferers from so dreaded a disease as cancer, it is impossible to think of them. The most serious factor associated with such exploitation is the awakening of false hopes in the minds of those who are dying and of those on whom they depend for aid. The mental anguish is just as great whether the cure is fraudulent in both its invention and its exploitation or whether it is put forward by a misguided charlatan.

"The cancer quack,' 'the article goes on to say, "like all other charlatans pretends to knowledge he does not possess, and makes claims far beyond the evidence in support of them. Today there is no scientific evidence to prove that any serum, drugs or combination of drugs, will cure cancer. Nevertheless charlatans are applying caustic pastes, injecting weird mixtures of bacterial débris, and exalting useless mixtures of glands in relation to the cure of cancer."

Some years ago the American Society for the Control of Cancer offered a prize to the one who first developed a cure for cancer. There were 2,500 applicants. These submitted mixtures developed by an Indian Squaw, a blacksmith, and other equally qualified persons, with in every instance, the claim that the method had worked successfully in hundreds of cases known to the applicant. Not a single one of these cures was worth the paper it was written upon. Not one of the 2,500 applications offered even a lead toward experimentation.

The only known cures of cancer (and the American College of Surgeons has proof of cure in some 30,000 cases) are found to result from early treatment by surgery, X-ray and radium. It is most important that persons learn the very early signs of cancer and that they recognize the fact that diagnosed in its incipient stage cancer may be cured.

A HINT FOR ONTARIO.

Brandon Sun.

YUGOSLAVIA is in the news, but not always as we imagine. That country has a solution for auto speeding hazards that deserves a note. They make the traffic menace punish himself. Moreover, their method has reduced road accidents fifty per cent. Traffic officers in Yugoslavia probably figured out in advance just how it would work. When they overhaul a speeder, they manoeuvre him over onto the shoulder of the highway, or into a side road where his car will be out of the way. Then, without any bickering or arguing with the driver, they quickly let out the air of all four tires, tip their hats and leave! The rest may be imagined.

NEW VARIETY OF CORN IN KENT

A new "sweepstake" variety of corn the ears of which measure more than a foot long and have a circumference of eight or nine inches, has been developed in Kent county. The corn has been developed from a variety imported three years ago from the United States, and has now become sufficiently climatized to mature. The method of climatizing the corn, formerly grown especially in states where the summer seasons are longer, was by picking and saving the ears which matured earliest. An exceptionally long season this year has made this easier. The variety is a very large type of dent corn, especially adapted for silo-filling purposes.—Leamington Post and News.

THE HUSBANDMAN.

By Walt Mason.

THE farmer milks the lowing kine, and carries grape juice to the swine, the kind of dope they like; he starts to work ere break of day, and plugs along till dusk is gray, and hasn't time to strike. He stands in need of shorter hours, more to sleep in cozy bowers, more time to rest and read; but he can hear the horses neigh for bundles of refreshing hay, the mules for fodder plead. The old gray mare is beastly sick, the colic makes her roll and kick, and stand upon her head; and so he nurses her all night, until she's feeling well and right, instead of being dead. He has to hunt a missing sow, or saw the antlers from a cow, so she won't hook again; he has to crawl beneath a crib and spoil his tucker and his bib to find a setting hen. The farmer has more cause to strike than Jonathan and Pete and Mike, who in the cities live; but he has many chores in view, and walk-out stunts would never do—no profit would they give. But if the farmer struck, as, me! Oh, where in blitzen would we be, and where would we get off? There'd be no bacon and no beans, no flour or meal or helpful greens, no skim milk in the trough. If e'er the farmers organize, and strike as strike the other guys, there'll be a frightful dearth; and we'll fold up our weary limbs, and heave a sight and close our glims, and just fall off the earth.

14-Point Plarform Adopted By Trustees' Association

Inspector States Textbook Cost Can Be Cut Down by Bards Purchasing Direct and Distributing Free.

Representatives from county school sections were present at the annual meeting of the Dundas School Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association held in the town hall, Winchester, Monday evening, and presided over by Preston McIntosh of Winchester Springs.

Discussions took place regarding school matters, with M. A. Campbell, of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario School Trustees' Association, acting in an advisory capacity. Those who took leading parts were W. J. Stewart, Inspector of Public Schools for Dundas County; Preston McIntosh Heber McIntosh and T. Cunningham

Strong opposition was voiced by several trustees regarding the constant changing of text books in the Public schools, and the increased cost. When asked for his opinion, Inspector Stewart stated he considered the text book changes quite timely. They are superior to the old ones in every way, and the reason they cost more is because they are printed on a better grade of paper and are more strongly bound, he said.

Could Cut Costs.

Regarding the increased cost to a man of moderate means who has a large family, Mr. Stewart pointed out that if all school boards followed the example of several boards who supply the necessary text books to pupils free, this could be overcome. A saving of nearly 50 per cent is made when books are purchased by the School Board direct from the publishers, he said.

The aims and objects of the Ontario School Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association were presented by Mr. Campbell. He pointed out the association was endeavouring to develop the school and preserve democracy, and at all times work in co-operation with the Department of Education. In order to achieve best results, it is first necessary for all school boards to link up with the association and make it an organization that will be representative of all schools throughout the province, he said.

At the conclusion of Mr. Campbell's address, the following platform was presented and adopted by the Dundas Association:

1. That equal educational opportunities be given to every child in Ontario.

2. That not less than 50 per cent of school expenditure should be borne by the state.

3. That greater co-operation between school boards should be fostered in the interest of boys and girls.

4. That a province-wide medical examination should be given at least once each year during the elementary and secondary school life of the child, paid for by the Department of Health and approved by the Department of Education.

5. That a permanent record should be kept of every school child throughout his elementary and secondary school life.

6. That a more practical course be provided for all primary and secondary schools leading to a standard diploma which would be recognized by business firms, agricultural colleges and the other practical professions.

7. That our teaching profession be assured of a great tenure of service and at least a minimum salary of $700.

8. That every effort be made to encourage a better class of moving pictures.

9. War being the greatest menace to civilization and democracy, every effort should be made by teachers to encourage international peace and to teach the truth about war.

10. That assistance be given by the Federal Government to the provincial governments for the vocational training and employment of youth.

11. That all real property be based on a provincial equalized assessment.

Study is Urged.

12. That the Department of Education make a more thorough study of the unit of administration for the purpose of securing the greatest economy and efficiency in our educational system.

13. That every effort be made to increase interest in education in order that our citizens may be well prepared in life.

14. That there continue to be the greatest possible co-operation between the association and the Department of Education.

On motion of Mr. Stewart, a vote of thanks was extended to the special speaker and to A. D. Carkner, the retiring president.

Officers elected for the new term were: President, Heber McIntosh, of Williamsburg; secretary-treasurer, Earl Tinkler, of Inkerman; directors, one to be appointed from each school section in the county by the president and secretary, assisted by the school inspector.

Simile.

The audience was as numerous as shrinking violets in Hollywood.

Not Altogether Lazy.

"No, madam," said the tramp. "I'm sorry, but it's against my principle. I can't chop wood."

"Well," said the farmer's wife, "there will be some coal here this afternoon and—"

"I'm sorry again, but I can't carry no coal. But I tell you what I'll do. I'll compromise. If you got a gas stove I'll turn on the gas for you."

Hymns in the Kitchen.

An archbishop, staying at the house of some friends was greatly impressed by the fact that each morning, before breakfast, he heard someone in the kitchen singing a hymn.

On congratulating his hostess on having such religious servants, he was told: "Oh, that's the cook's hymn for boiling eggs. Two verses, soft; five verses, hard."

World Politics Explained By Dr. Tory to Teachers' Inst.

Dundas Teachers' Institute Met at Iroquois Thursday Last and Will Continue at Ottawa Tomorrow.

Dr. Tory, of Ottawa, guest speaker at the evening banquet of the 64th annual convention of the Dundas County Teachers' Association held at Iroquois on Thursday last, impressed an attentive and receptive audience with his telling and authoritative resumé of world politics, prior to and since the Great War.

He traced the decline of the familiar old British policy of "Balance of Power" where the Old World was divided into two watchful and hostile camps.

The unfortunately brief experiment of the League of Nations marked an interlude of co-operation among the Nations which might have ushered in a new and happier regime, had the United States backed up the stand taken by President Wilson, who had caught the vision of "the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World."

Deserted by the original guarantors of her boundaries (United States and Great Britain) France embarked on her suicidal armament programme and with her frontiers bristling with guns exhausted Europe had no alternative but reliance on the mediaeval system of protective treaties—which Dr. Tory referred to as the "Revival of Power Politics."

The veteran supporter of the League (Dr. Tory is a past president of the League of Nations Society) made an eloquent appeal to the teachers present to use their powerful influence to promote and foster the principles of co-operation without which the world is headed for economic and social collapse.

He pleaded for the recreation of the League, in which this time, "common sense shall hold a fretful realm in awe and the kindly earth shall slumber, wrapt in universal law."

The Executive Committee of the convention voted the Institute en masse into the Canadian League of Nations Society in tribute to the moving arguments of Dr. Tory, who gave his services gratis in the interest of the work to which he has given so freely of his own time and talent.

R. C. Dillabough, principal of Chesterville Public school, president of the teachers' institute, gave the opening address when he traced the developments of education in Ontario from the time of the settlement of the United Empire Loyalists in various parts of Canada up to the present. He described the old type of school and told of the drastic measures used to keep discipline in the early stages of our educational system. Special mention was made of the part played by Dr. Edgerton Ryerson and Bishop Strachan in bringing the Ontario school system to the present high standard. Finally, he explained that changes in the school curriculum were necessary as times changed.

F. C. Beaupre, of Iroquois, spoke following the reading of the minutes and communications. His subject was "The Entrance Candidate."

After welcoming the teachers to Iroquois, Mr. Beaupre mentioned the folly of an age limit for Entrance candidates but stressed the need for more work being accomplished in public school. This could be more easily done through the means of options which are offered in the new course of study. Young pupils often lack suffcient development to grasp high school work and as a result drop school work. By reading portions from several entrance answer papers he showed clearly the need for more stress in the public schools in the fundamentals of English and arithmetic.

W. J. Stewart, B.A., B.Paed., Inspector of Public Schools, dealt with problems connected with the new programme of studies.

Pupils from various rural schools, under the capable direction of Miss Jean Thompson, sang three numbers. They had only one rehearsal as a body before this programme and showed what fine results may be derived from music as a subject in the school course.

Miss Etta Carson gave the report of the O.E.A. convention, and Herman Hamilton gave a talk on "Vacation Motoring." During the summer, Mr. Hamilton took a 12,000 mile trip to Vancouver and various parts of the United States. He pictured for the institute the many scenes of particular beauty he had seen and mentioned amusing and interesting experiences he had on that journey.

At the evening banquet, besides the address by Dr. Tory, a vocal solo was given by Miss Edna Towsley; reading, Miss Helen Latourell; music, Graham Hodge, and a social hour was spent in the Town Hall.

The final day of the convention is to be held in the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, this Friday, at the Ottawa Regional Convention which will be of special interest and benefit to all teachers.

Special Automobile Markers For Doctors Next Year

The 1939 car plates will be white serial numbers on a jet black background. As in the past three years, the crown occupies a prominent place in the design. Embossed and enamelled in white, the crown appears at the top centre of the plate, flanked by the numbers "1939".

Medical doctors, who in recent years have been accorded the distinction of serial numbers beginning with the letter "D," will have an extra distinction next year for their license plates will be treated with a special sand-blasting process, small particles of glass will be blown onto the numerals until they are completely coated. Tests have indicated plates treated in this way are more easily visible at night, the glass particles serving as reflectors by catching the rays of approaching headlights.

The possibility remains that dust collected by markers during travel over country roads, might interfere with the glass coated numerals, and it was for this reason that all markers were not given the treatment this year. If the treated group stands up under use during the year, Mr. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, said it was quite possible the process would be applied to all markers in 1940.

Motorists will not likely find 1939 markers available until much later this year than last, he said, and he intimated the new plates might not be distributed until after January 1.

WHITE DEER SEEN IN HURON FARMER DESPAIRS OF ITS LIFE

Wingham. — There is one man in Huron County who hopes there won't be an open hunting season for deer this year. He has a white deer on his farm, and the colour would make an ideal target for some hunter. The animal has been seen on several occasions on the farm of William Elliott in West Wawanosh on the Twelfth Concession.

Motorists report an unusual number of deer in West Wawanosh. John Aitkens saw seven crossing the Ninth Concession on Sunday.

United Counties' Warden Dons New Robes of Office

History Made at October Session as Investment Conducted. — Records To Be Kept of Councils. Wardens.

In addition to having the distinction and honour of being the first warden of the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry to be invested with a chain of office, Warden Wallace Gallinger is also the first warden to wear the official warden's gown. Investment of the beautiful blue and white gown was made at the opening of the October sessions of council on Monday afternoon, and it was the first time in the history of the counties' council that the presiding warden wore a gown and insignia of office.

Investment of the chain of office was made at the June session, when it was felt the dignity of the council body would be heightened by such an insignia, which is to be worn by all wardens in the years to come. The robe, too, will add much dignity to sessions of council, as it is to be worn by the warden each time council assembles.

As a means of preserving the significance of county councils, and the memory of those who have served in one capacity or another in council, it was decided on Monday to hang in the corridors of the county buildings, and in the courtroom, pictures of all past wardens of the counties, along with all the available pictures of members of the body. A photo of Warden Gallinger was the first to be hung in the courtroom, and a committee was named to procure the photographs of as many past wardens as possible.

The proposal for placing photographs of members of council in the counties' building was raised by W. H. Casselman, reeve of Chesterville, who emphasized the historic value of such photographs, and the fact a similar course was adopted in the Ontario Legislature. He felt the photographs would be of distinct historic value and interest, as well as informative. Robt. McNaught, Charlottenburg, seconded Mr. Casselman's motion to have the pictures placed in the counties' building, and it was decided to do so by unanimous vote of council members.

Another idea for a permanent record of past, present and future wardens was offered by Mr. Casselman, who suggested that the marble blocks on each side of the counties' building entrance could be transformed into plaques, on which names of wardens could be inscribed.

CORRIGAN ISLAND HOTEL DESTROYED BY FIRE SUNDAY

A hotel on Corrigan's Island, opposite Morrisburg, owned by G. D. Howith and Col. R. M. Courtney, was destroyed by fire about midday Sunday. It had a big ball room. 25 double rooms with bath, 12 bathrooms and many other rooms. Firemen from Morrisburg, Canton, Waddington, Massena and Potsdam responded to the call but nothing but a few pieces of furniture, the piano and the stock of liquor was saved. The building is said to have cost the Corrigans, father and son, at least $100,000 to build. In recent years it has been operated as a summer hotel.

CAKE OR PUDDING?

MANY of our most famous puddings have as basis a plain cake mixture. If our family is small we can mix up the whole plain cake recipe, using half for dessert in one of the ways I shall suggest, and the other half for cup cakes, a small loaf cake or perhaps a jelly roll. If our family be large, we will have to use all for either the pudding or the cake.

WASHINGTON PIE.

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
3 eggs
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk

Cream the butter; add sugar gradually; add well beaten eggs and beat all until very light. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add to first mixture alternately with the milk. Blend well. Pour into greased layer tins and bake in a moderate oven 20 minutes.

On each cake when baked and cooled spread the following mixture:

1 cup brown sugar
2-3 teaspoon cocoa
2 cups milk
3 teaspoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Mix brown sugar and cocoa and melt in a frying pan, being careful not to let it burn. To this add the milk slowly and boil. Add the cornstarch mixed with a little of the cold milk. Cook until it thickens and there is no taste of raw starch. Add salt and vanilla.

This recipe will make two cakes and will cut into 16 servings.

UPSIDE-DOWN APPLE PUDDING.

In a greased baking dish place a layer of applesauce about one inch thick. Onto this pour the following cake mixture:

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Separate eggs; beat the yolks, add sugar slowly, and cold water, beating continually. Sift dry ingredients and add gradually, mixing well but not beating. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a moderate oven until cake mixture is done. Turn out on a plate and serve with whipped cream or pour cream.

Other fruit or jam may be substituted for the applesauce.

BOSTON CREAM PIE.

Use the cake mixture for Upside-down Apple Cake. Bake in a deep layer cake tin in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes. When cool, split and put layers together with vanilla cream filling or with jam, and cover top with powdered sugar.

Vanilla Cream Filling.

2 tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup scalded milk
2 teaspoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar, cornstarch, salt and beaten eggs; add scalded milk gradually; add butter; cook in a double boiler until thick and smooth, stirring constantly; add flavouring and cool.

COTTAGE PUDDING
(With Lemon Sauce.)

¼ cup butter
1-3 cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup milk
1¾ cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Cream the butter; add sugar gradually. Add egg, well beaten. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt; add alternately with the milk. Turn into a buttered baking dish; bake in a moderate oven 35 to 40 minutes.

Lemon Sauce.

1 tablespoon cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons lemon juice
grated rind of ½ lemon

Mix sugar, salt and cornstarch. Add boiling water; stir and cook until there is no taste of raw starch. Remove from heat, add butter, lemon juice and rind.

This sauce is also delicious when served with steam or plum puddings of various kinds.

When trying a new or unfamiliar recipe, always read through carefully before beginning to mix.

When cornstarch or flour is to be mixed with a hot liquid, separate the particles before they reach the hot liquid or gummy lumps with raw centres will be formed. The particles of flour or cornstarch may be separated by mixing with enough cold liquid to make a mixture as thin as cream, or by combining them with sugar or fat before mixing with the hot liquid. Lumpy gravies, sauces and puddings are caused by not observing these precautions.

* * * *

Cornstarch requires longer cooking than flour and a quickly cooked cornstarch mixture always has a raw taste.

* * * *

Foods taste sweeter when hot than when cold. For this reason foods to be served cold or frozen, as ice cream, usually have larger amounts of sugar than those to be served hot.

* * * *

Too much sugar in a cake will make it tough and heavy. The correct proportion will help to make it light and tender.

TEA FROM CEYLON.

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

WHILE you are sipping a cup of tea one of these fall days, let its fragrance carry you to the place where it was grown, away to the Indian Ocean for instance.

There, lying under the tropical sun is the island of Ceylon, 270 miles long and 140 miles wide, Lake Superior would just about float it. In the warm sunshine parrots and monkeys play about in the palms and tree ferns and peacocks strut among the orchids.

Like a vast garden, this island is devoted chiefly to agriculture, but many precious gems are found there, diamonds, opals, pearls, rubies, and many others.

The population is about five million; Europeans numbering about eight thousand. A very old country whose history begins about 53 B.C., its entire sovereignty passed into British hands in 1815.

The 3,000 factories on the island are engaged chiefly in preparing the agricultural products for market. About half of them produce tea, rubber and cacao. The villagers make furniture, lave, jewellery and brassware in their homes.

In Ceylon, the tea plant reaches its full perfection due to the very fertile soil and moist cimate. Here in the wild state the tea plant grows to a height of twenty feet and over and bears leaves as large as a man's hand. Under cultivation it is kept at a height of three feet by pruning and can be picked all the year around.

Another interesting fact is that the higher the altitude of the gardens the finer the tea. The most delicate leaves are from plants grown more than 5,000 feet above sea level.

Enough tea came from this island last year to give everybody in Canada 300 cups apiece; 14 million pounds of leaves picked in Ceylon. This is about one third of all our imports of tea.

Nearing the End.

"Oh, haven't you heard about it? They've removed a brass rail that has been pressing against his foot for years."

DELIGHTFUL MUSIC PREPARED "MIDSUMER NIGHT'S DREAM"

With a ladies' choir singing fairy songs, and a large orchestra performing Mendelssohn's descriptive music under the direction of Reginald Stewart, CBC's fourth Shakesperian production in its cycle of eleven plays will be devoted to a full-hour music and drama version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Sunday, October 30, 9.00 to 10.00 p.m., over the Corporation's national network.

'A Midsummer Night's Dream" belongs to Shakespeare's first of four important periods, the youthful period characterized by plays written before 1595. ,This play," says Professor Dowden in "Primer," "is a strange and beautiful web, woven delicately by a youthful poet's fancy. What is perhaps most remarkable about the play is the harmonious blending in it of widely different elements. It is as if threads of silken splendour were run together in its texture with a yarn of hempen homespun, and both these with lines of dewy gossamer and filaments drawn from the moonbeams."

Although CBC's presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will concentrate on the musical portion, using the ful score of Felix Mendelssohn's music for this play, several of the most important dramatic scenes will be enacted. Canadian actors and actresses are now being auditioned for parts in these dramatic highlights.

Future Shakesperian plays in the CBC series will star such famous stage and screen personalities as Eva LeGallienne, Maurice Evans, Walter Hampden and Raymond Massey. Sunday, November 6, 9.00 to 10.00 p.m., CBC's national network audience will hear the famous Canadian-born actor of stage and screen, Walter Huston, starring in "Othello," supported by Nan Sunderland, who in private life is Mrs. Walter Huston.

A Series of Special Articles by
GEORGE W. CRAGG, M.D.
Superintendent, St. Lawrence Sanatorium

ARTICLE No. 6.

SANATORIUM treatment for tuberculosis, is by far preferable to any other form of treatment. It removes the patient from the family and so prevents further spread of the infection throughout the household; it removes the patient from petty worries which retard recovery; the patient learns to regulate his life by following a routine; and also educates him in preventing the spread of the disease. Sanatoria are situated where the surroundings are quiet and pleasant, and so insuring a maximum of rest.

Patients with tuberculosis must be prepared to spend a lengthy period under treatment. Six months under treatment is the minimum and often much longer periods are required.

The essentials of treatment are rest, good food and fresh air. The most important of these is rest. Absolute rest in bed is required. Every movement of the body robs that patient of energy required to combat their disease. Only those movements which are absolutely necessary should be made. Patients in sanatoria are encouraged to lie flat in bed as much as possible. They are encouraged to check their cough and are instructed that laughing, loud talking, singing, etc., throws a strain on the lung and should not be divulged in. They are encouraged to take at least 12 hours sleep daily.

All reading should be of the lightest character in order to avoid marked effort as far as possible. Anything which tends to tire a person should be avoided.

Even visitors, with the best of intentions and welcomed by the patient have an untoward effect on recovery.

There is no special diet for tuberculosis. The patient needs three well balanced meals a day except in exceptional cases. Overeating and eating between meals should be avoided. Stuffing with food may lead to upsets which may offset any advantage gained by rest in bed. A person lying in bed does not require as much food as one moving actively about. Milk and eggs have no special value, and have no special place in diets other than providing variations in the menu.

Fresh air away from towns is of value, in that the air is clean and more refreshing. Fresh air has a stimulating effect on the body. Altitude plays little part. Patients recover as well at sea level as in the mountains. Patients should be kept comfortable, by regulating the temperature of the room rather than by weighing them down with bedclothes and bundling them up in many thicknesses of clothing.

Medicines do not play an important part and when used are used mainly in keeping the patient comfortable. General tonics are of some value, and cod liver oil is useful for those patients who can take it.

Special treatments are designed to increase local rests to the parts affected. These will be discussed in the next article.

Two Shillin'

WYMAN LUTHER'S wife, glancing out of the cabin window, suddenly exclaimed "I do believe there's another pesky tramp a-comin' over the rise! Now, that's the third one this year, and this is only the middle of June — us with five small children. Wyman, I do wish you'd stop givin' them lazy louts encouragement!"

"I'll turn no hungry man away from my door," replied her husband, whose mouth seemed to close much easier than it opened. "Headin' in, is he? No, he's goin' on past, and it ain't no tramp; but it might 'ave been, and a helpin' hand don't hurt 'em any!"

Wyman Luther, the strongest man for miles around, had no fear of any tramp. He was a kindly man under his gruff, and silent exterior — too kindly, thought Mrs. Luther, who had all she could do to make both ends meet.

"There, that's done and will pay this year's taxes," said Wyman Luther as he deftly coiled a new flaxen rope, which he had recently constructed for the friendly Sheriff of Allegheny County. Ready money was very scarce in most rural sections at that time, especially during the latter part of the Civil War, and there were worse worries, which prompted such questions as, "Wyman, do you think you'll be drafted again to the service?"

"I expect so."

"Can't you be excused, like you was the first time? What ever will we do without you, us with five small children; and, Wyman, you just must git rid of that critter up there in the barn."

The "critter" mentioned by Mrs. Luther was a purebred Holstein bull, which had developed such a particularly nasty temper that it was necessary to confine him in a strong box-stall, the sturdy door of which was secured by a heavy oaken bar.

Boys played an important part in farm economics, and, as the different degrees of prosperity in the country depended largely on the amount of manpower that each family could muster, sons were obviously very welcome.

No boys had ever arrived at Luther's cabin. Baby girls had put in their appearance on five different occasions. The nearest approach to a complaint Wyman Luther had ever been known to make was his half-humourous remark, many years later, that the devil must have owed him a grudge and paid him off in sons-in-law. This streak of humour, contrasted with his sternness, is really what made the man so very interesting.

Although his strength was taxed to the limit to provide for his numerous feminine dependents, he was ever generous to those more fortunate than himself, and any condition of man who knocked on Luther's door toward the close of day was sure of a share of supper, of a blanket bed on the cabin floor, and of a snack in the morning.

One morning, after having received lodging and breakfast, with Luther's hearty assurance that he was welcome a particularly dark, surly specimen unluckily remarked, "I'd like to pay ye fer it, but I only got two shillin', and I reckon on buying me some rum down to the tavern."

"Give me them two shillin'!" Luther snapped.

He was answered with an insolent oath. Then things happened, apparently without beginning. Both men were of that dead-game type that fights fast and furiously standing up, lying down, or in almost any conceivable position. The tramp had weight, strength, youth and about everything else; that is why the rumpus lasted nearly two minutes. At the end of this time, the tramp, with tongue protruding and blackening eyes, was feebly trying by signs to answer the demand, "Which pocket is them two shillin' in?" Then, his throat being released, he was yanked to his feet, full-nelsoned and somersaulted through a conveniently open door and told to "Git!"

Picking himself up and carefully feeling both legs to ascertain if the bones were broken, the tramp finally limped off down the road toward the tavern, talking to himself. Arriving at the tavern, the tramp begged for a drink, and a gossipy old bar-tender scenting news, proffered him one.

"Been blastin' up to the stun quarry?"

"No, I ain't been near the quarry, but that ornery old hound up the road a right smart has sure 'nuff got the bone of ol' Hanner in 'im. I'll never quit this here county till I don gits even."

"Figgerin' on making quite a lengthy stay in these parts?" ventured the bartender as he snailed a soiled towel along the greasy bar, "or are you calculatin' on some special act o' Providence a-coming to your assistance?"

"I gotta plan," replied the tramp, and as customers were coming in he pulled his old Stetson down over his kinky hair and slouched onto a bench in the corner.

Mrs. Luther, returning from the farmyard, where she had been attending to some newly hatched chickens, saw the disorder in the cabin caused by the fracas, and exclaimed: "Well, for heaven's sake! Is he gone? Is he hurted much?"

"Yes and no," murmured her husband, and with his powerful fingers he absent-mindedly extracted a huge bicuspid that had become loosened dur-Sheriff Jones. Howdy, Sheriff, your Sheriff Jones. Hody, Sheriff, your rope is ready."

"Howdy, Luther! Bad news for you; but I must tell you: your class has been called; so its three hundred dollars bounty for a sub, or report yourself at the clerk's office not later than next Tuesday."

"Is there no other way, Sheriff? You know how I'm fixed."

"No possible way, Luther. You see McClellen is out, Grant is in, and Secretary Stanton is demanding and will have every man that can shoulder a musket. But I must be on my way; business over to the other side of the county; and say—I'll stop on my way back and you can ride in with me this coming Tuesday."

THE tramp loafed around the tavern most of the day, sore as a boil. Toward evening, in an ugly, revengeful mood, he started out straight back toward Luther's farm. Keeping behind stump fences and the bushy growths, he made his way unseen back to the Luther place, raided the smoke-house for food, then went to the barn, climbed up into the hay and slept. Very early the following morning the tramp slid down from the hay loft to the barn floor, obtained a piece of cord and tied one end to the bar that secured the door of the bull pen. Then with a look of malicious anticipation he took the free end of the cord, clambered back up into the hay loft over the bull pen and waited.

The pawing and the bellowing from the terrible beast confined below caused the tramp's lips to part with an evil grin. An hour later Luther started doing the morning farm chores. Going through the stable in quest of a feeding bucket, he went on to the barn floor and passed the bull-pen door, when to his astonishment the oaken bar rose with a snap, the door swung open, and the vicious beast rushed from his confinement, shaking his ugly head.

Luther darted toward a tiny door which opened into the yard. Glancing backwards over his shoulders, he was astounded to behold the tramp up in the hay vainly trying to regain a lost balance. Although he clutched frantically at the loosely piled hay, he slipped head-foremost down to the floor, stunned and helpless, squarely in front of the bull. The animal aimed his horns directly at the prostrate tramp's heart, voiced a hoarse vibrant bellow, and charged. At this moment the tramp, opening his dazed eyes, beheld in the midst of a swirling blur of motion Luther's panther-like spring, saw him snap his vice-like fingers into the flesh on either jaw of the infuriated bull, and saw him sink his strong white teeth into the brute's tender nose. The terriffic impact of the self-hurled man, like a rock flung by a giant, stopped the beast's vicious charge.

The man sagged to his knees and hung on. A tiny scarlet rill trickled down the front of the homespun shirt. Silence made the deadly duel seem unreal, fantastic! There was scarcely a sound except the blubbering and hissing caused by the restricted breathing of the two combatants, face against face, eye glaring into eye, the brute's eye blood-red with concentrated hate, man's eye blood-red with the glory that only desperate courage knows when winning a fierce fair fight!

What would have been of abominable cruelty, if done in the name of "sport," or purely as an exhibition, was entirely legitimate at this moment, when Wyman Luther was fighting for his own life, and for that of the tramp.

Luther's powerful fingers slowly tightened; just one more malignant thrust from his murderous antagonist and Luther would have ripped the bull's masseter mucsle from the bones But slowly that dull animal brain began to sense the master spirit in dominant man. Gradually the huge bovine bulk yielded, first down on one knee, then on two, and finally ceased fighting altogether.

Luther sprang up, secured a pitch-fork, and drove the thoroughly chastened animal cringing into his stall. Then he turned around to look for the tramp, but the tramp was nowhere to be seen.

BUT, as neither grief nor joy may arrest the flight of time, the much-dreaded Tuesday arrived all too soon. Of course considerable business had been accomplished in a few busy days, small details arranged and various homely affairs attended to. The little girls had been told that their daddy, their own dear daddy, was to be marched off to war. They wanted to know where soldiers slept. They guessed that being left without their strong provider, they might starve. The time had nearly arrived to say good-bye, perhaps forever!

The little girls clung close to their daddy for a last caress from his dear strong hands. A hail from the Sheriff as he drove into the yard sent a chill like death through the sad-eyed group by the cabin door. Even the Sheriff's eyes started to fill, but quickly opened in surprise, as he beheld the tramp, all rumpled and cobwebby, crawl out from under the corn crib, stride toward them and say, "I've seen and heard a heap around here the past few days."

Then he turned to the Sheriff. "My name is Sam Johnson," he said. "I am eligible and am going to sub in Luther's place."

With an air of finality, he climbed into the Sheriff's wagon. Then, as a generous smile illumined the dark face, he turned to Luther and said. "I told an old party down the road a right smart that I allowed to get even with ye, and now I reckon I've done it!"

Luther drawing his great hand from his breeches pocket, held out a small bright object and said huskily, "Sam, here's them two shillin' that I borried of you a few days past."

Mother Goose And Her Family

Condensed From Natural History

A modern example of the authentic interpretation of Nature through the medium of imaginative literature, in which the trials and triumphs of a pair of Canada geese observed by the author during their mating season symbolize the world's mightiest drama—the never-ending battle of life.

FOR over an hour the giant gander had led the flock and now he was weary of the wind's buffeting. The rush of air struck him full force at the head of the wedge-shaped formation, where his 16-pound body broke the shock for the 30 Canada geese slanting out in two lines behind him. Flying sometimes nearly a mile a minute and staying on the wing 10 to 15 hours a day, the birds were all showing signs of fatigue as they neared the end of their 3,000-mile journey from the south.

Smoothly the flock changed formation, the apex of the V shifting with precision. Every bird in the flock had to serve time as flight leader, sharing hardship. A plump goose forged to the front now, and the gander bugled his pleasure at the restful change.

Later that day the geese reached the parklands close to the Canadian Rockies, and at once the big gander's mate started an excited, low-pitched cackling. During the four years of their mating they had nested somewhere in this territory, and perhaps memory stirred. The gander uttered reassuring answer, as the flock slanted down to a well-earned rest on a broad lake.

Next morning the gander and his mate did not leave the water when the flock continued its flight. All that day the pair stayed on the lake, the restless goose leading the gander on long swims, exploring every bay. For days, until April was almost gone, they investigated the waterways of the region, returning each night to the safety of the lake.

The home they finally chose was on a wooded island: a nest platform left by red-tailed hawks 40 feet above the ground, in the highest tree on the island. She and the gander spent a whole day collecting dry grass; then they plucked loose feathers from their breasts for the nest lining.

When the nest was finished, silence settled on the pair. Notes became low pitched for each other's ears alone, and they seemingly gave up the use of their wings — their yard-long bodies attracted too much attention in flight. The goose took her throne on the nest, while the gander stayed alert but hidden in the willows below.

Her lone chore came to an end when the five-egg clutch was complete. Now the patient mystery of incubation started, work that the two birds shared. Never for more than the brief moment necessary to change turns were the eggs uncovered.

One hot day in June, small yellow bills drove through the now brittle shells to release four goslings. Both adults gabbled in excitement. The fifth egg was slow to hatch, and when it did, a feeble youngster emerged.

Only a short time elapsed after the last gosling's appearance and the nest-leaving. The gander stationed himself near the trunk below. Then with gentle but relentless bill, the goose pushed and hoisted one of the noisy goslings out of the nest. For a teetering moment the youngster clung to the edge; the small, unformed wings threshed instinctively as the baby bird tumbled to the ground. The gosling bounced on the ground, but promptly raised itself on sturdy webs, comically shaking its head as it waddled to the shelter of the gander's flanks. The other three early-born goslings safely travelled the same route, but the fifth bird dropped like a plummet. Not once did it move its wings, and when it struck the earth it lay still. Nature has little use for weaklings.

From the first the goslings needed no lessons in swimming. They rolled into the water fearlessly, their bodies buoyant as cork. The goose took the lead, and tiny webs worked vigourously as the babies tried to keep close, the watchful gander behind to nuge on the stragglers. His vigilance relaxed for a costly moment on the third day after the hatching. Waiting on the shore near by, he failed to notice when one of the goslings was caught by a river current and borne swiftly downstream.

When he heard the gosling's shrill peepings, he plunged into the water, his wings churning the surface to add to his frantic speed. But before he could get close to the struggling youngster, there was a violent upheaval and the giant jaws of a pike gaped from the depths. An agonized last note, then the gosling was jerked from sight.

Another time, danger in the form of a cat came stealthily toward the clearing where the goslings were relaxed in a dust bath, and streaked toward them from the bushes with claws unsheathed. Squawking madly, the young birds managed to flop clear of the cat's rush, and quickly the goose slapped the animal off its feet with her wings and rolled it in the dust. As the cat came up snarling the gander advanced, beak held close to earth, hissing loudly. Swiftly the cat launched at his head, reckoning not on the upraised wings. The giant five and a half foot pinions flashed in mid-air; there came a sharp cracking of bone, and the cat's screech of hate sirened to silence.

Such dangers taught the young birds the need of ceaseless vigilance. A hawk's shadow brought a low gabble from them; the presence of a skunk sent them out to mid-stream. They learned to discriminate, too. The quill-rattling porcupine could be ignored with safety, and the dainty deer was no menace to their kind.

And there were many ways of knowing when surroundings were safe or not. In the shadows where the tall blue heron, sharp of sight and hearing, waited on patient stilts for unwary frogs and fish, a goose could be sure of momentary peace. The friendly sandpipers, on the other hand, were unreliable sentinels trusting overmuch to their small size and quiet colours to save them from predators. The beavers up the river could scent and hear evil from afar, and a resounding tail slap on the water was a danger signal for all to heed. Crows, too, were always wise, so when a flock rose in sudden flight there was reason for caution.

All this the growing goslings came to learn, and a canny, proud wildness was brewed in their blood.

As the hot days of August passed, the goslings began to stretch and flex their rapidly maturing wings, flapping them in slow, experimental strokes that sent the blood coursing through the dormant muscles. At first the old birds led them a cautious course above the river, and gradually the youngsters mastered higher altitudes. Gander and goose never failed to utter the brief alarm note every time they sighted man, and soon the young ones followed this example, forging higher without realizing the reason for their wariness.

Their first lesson came one day when they settled on some wheat sheaves to raid the ripening grain. It was the gander who noticed the human leave the distant buildings and cross the stubble toward them. His summons sent the birds aloft.

Suddenly there was a puff of smoke and the thudding boom of a gun, and the gander was pushed upward as if by a blast of wind. The goose and two goslings obeyed his shrill cry, putting power into their wing strokes to lift them high and sideways. But the third gosling was curious, ogling at the willows below. He ventured closer. Smoke streamed from a gun a second time and a terrible pain wrenched a last despairing call from the young bird as his body crumpled and dropped.

The farmer did not notice the stiff, slow flight of the gander, lagging behind the other birds. He did not see the faithful goose circle back, calling to her mate. Blood was dripping from his breast and the island home seemed far away.

The short September days sped by and still the gander could not leave the island. Under the feathers rankled deep wounds. His beak had explored the injuries, seeking the leaden pellets that festered. Then followed the tedious healing.

At first the goose and goslings were content to stay near the leader, foraging in the nearby weeds. But as the zestful days went by, the wings of the healthy birds yearned for the broad sky. The goslings yielded first, launching aloft one morning. Protesting, the goose flapped after them. Frenziedly the gander sought to send power into his pinions. He raced the length of the island and then plunged into the water, seeking to swim as fast as the fliers. All the while his angry and plaintive notes called them. The three birds finally wheeled back and slanted down to the water. The gander's pleasure was unmistakable as he swam among them.

But there came a day when a wedged flock was sighted, whose spaced honking told they were in long flight. They settled near the island for the night. The next morning the two goslings were in the ranks as the flock arose. Despairingly came the gander's plea, the goose noisy at his side. It was not the loss of their young that hurt, for the parent instinct was finished for that year. But they mourned desertion by the flock.

The first snow fell, and the goose became uneasy, honking intermittently throughout the day, forecasting the blizzard that was soon to wrap the land in winter. The gander made valiant efforts. Daily his wings lifted, at first beating hesitantly against the stiffness of the injured muscles. Gradually the soreness worked off and his strokes lengthened, but still he would not leave the island.

Then one day, driving ahead of a mid-November storm came a hundred-bird flock. And at last the big male sprang into the air, his great wings labouring. Gladly the goose hurried to his side.

The two birds called urgently as they strove to mount the roaring wind. The leader above heard their desperate clamour, sighted them, and slacked the flock's speed. There was an eager chatter of welcome, and in another moment they had gained positions in the V and the migration music resumed its rhythm.

Crump—Steward.

The United Church Manse, at Morewood, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, when Winnifred Vera, youngest daughter of Mrs. Alfred Bowhill and the late Mr. James W. Steward, of Hamilton, became the bride of Mr. Leslie W. Crump, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Crump of Chesterville. Rev. J. Macaskill performed the ceremony.

The bride looked charming in a blue wool crêpe dress trimmed in white and she wore a rust felt hat with accessories to match.

The bridesmaid was Miss Edna L. Swerdfeger, of Mountain. The best man was Mr. Charles W. Crump, brother of the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony, the wedding party proceeded to the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Stanton Helmer, where a wedding tea was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Crump will reside at Cornwall.

Reception For Newlyweds.

An enjoyable evening was spent on Thursday last when a reception was held in the Community Hall for Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Whitteker. Dancing and music was enjoyed until 1.30 o'clock when the gathering was called to order and Mr. and Mrs. Whittaker were presented with a studio couch and a sum of money. The address was read by Mr. Donald McMartin.

—And now Lawrence and Edith, we have come to the most interesting moment of this festivity. There is always something pleasurable in the gathering together of friends whether it be the re-union of old friendships or the making of new ones. But our gathering tonight is of a much deeper nature since it is to pay our highest tribute of respect to one of our own boys and to his girl-bride. There is an old adage which tells us, that while we can live without our relations, we would in many cases have a desperate struggle were we called upon to live without our neighbours. It has also been said that a good neighbour is a gift from God. And so, Lawrence, because of all the years you have lived among us, and through which you have proved yourself to be one with your community, as a trustworthy neighbour, we, your old friends wish to convey to Edith and yourself the sincerity of our good wishes at this the most important time of your lives. We are glad you are not leaving our community, that you will both be here in our midst to carry on with us through the years as you have in the past. We would especially like tonight to welcome you, Edith, to our immediate neighbourhood. We trust in the years that stretch out before you and Lawrence, you will both find that great comradeship which makes for happiness.

And now, we would ask you to accept these gifts as a tangible remembrance of this night, and of your friends who are gathered here.

Mr. Whittaker made a reply thanking on behalf of his bride and himself the friends for the gifts an extended an invitation to visit them.

The guests joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," and lunch was served.

Remembrance Service Held For Faithful W.M.S. Member

St. Andrew's Society Met at Home of Mrs. A. Harradine When Plans Made for Thankoffering.

The Woman's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's church met for the October gathering at the home of Mrs. A. Harradine. The meeting opened with the Apostles' Creed in unison and the hymn, "Hark, the Voice of Jesus Crying." Mrs. Harradine read the first scripture lesson from Psalm 100, and Mrs. Lorne Marcellus offered prayer of Thanksgiving.

The secretary, Mrs. J. A. Munro, read the minutes of the September meeting which were approved. The roll call was answered with a verse of scripture containing the word "Thanksgiving," then the roll was called for the Welcome and Welfare department. The second scripture lesson was taken from Phillip. iv.

Mrs. Campbell sang as a solo "The Garden of Prayer." Mrs. McIntosh gave a fine paper on Paul's conversion on the Damascus road, and Mrs. Geo. Crawford offered prayer.

"O Where Are the Reapers" was sung. Special items of business were discussed, including the Thankoffering service. The treasurer reported for September and several of the secretaries for their departments. The last two verses of hymn 588 were sung and Miss Jamieson closed the meeting with prayer.

A short service of Remembrance was held which opened with silent prayer in memory of the late Mrs. Mary Marcellus, an active member of the society since she moved to Chesterville several years ago and the past few years a faithful member of the Home Helpers department. "Peace, Perfect Peace" was sung, and a very fine memorial minute was composed and read by Mrs. J. A. Munro, while Mrs. K. K. Wood took charge of the candle service and Mrs. Smirle sang "No Night There."

Miss Jamieson spoke very kindly of Mrs. Marcellus' work in St. Andrew's church since her coming to Chesterville and her donations to the church and the society. "Take Comfort, Christians" was sung and the president offered the closing prayer.

Mrs. Harradine served lunch and was assisted by Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Lorne Marcellus. Mrs. Geo. Crawford and Mrs. J. A. Munro voiced the thanks of the auxiliary.
