Frederick K. Smith, 66

A prominent Chesterville resident for many years, Frederick Knowles Smith, died suddenly at his home here Friday. He was 66.

Born on a homestead two miles north of town, he was the son of the late Ingram and Mary Cesselman Smith. He received his education in local schools. Mr Smith married Lottie Fisher in Chesterville 39 years ago.

Following his marriage, he moved to Los Angeles, Calif., where he resided for many years. Returning to Chesterville he became a business associate of the late Joseph Fisher in a meat business. On his retirement his son, Leroy, took over the business.

Mr Smith was a member of Lodge 288, A.F. and A.M., and also of the Chesterville Chamber of Commerce.

St. Lawrence Seaway Slated for Television

St. Lawrence Seaway is going on television, coast-to-coast, this spring.

The National Broadcasting Company is planning to devote a 90-minute "spectacular" to the seaway from 4 to 5.30 p.m., Sunday, May 20, on the "Wide, Wide World" programme.

The programme will not only show the seaway under construction but will undertake to tell how it will affect the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes region and some of the great cities in that region.

So far, the plans are to begin with shots of the Canadian scale model of the seaway at Islington, Ont., then fade into shots of the real thing and by May the big ditches of the canals and locks will have taken on recognizable shape.

There will be shots at Massena on the U.S. side and Cornwall on the Canadian side. From Washington, Seaway Development Corp. Administrator Lewis G. Castle is to tell the story of government participation and the co-operation with Canada.

There will be shots from "ten or twelve cities" to show what economic effects the seaway is expected to have on those cities. Another is to be from Baltimore to tell what the seaway may do to it, by attracting some of its commerce.

The production is being planned, it is understood, as an "all-live" affair, shot on the spot that Sunday with no film being used.

Know What To Do in Case of Fire

Fire insurance companies have as much interest in preventing fires as life insurance companies have in improved health standards. Therefore they study means of reducing fires, most of which are caused by some human failing, or lack of foresight.

There are a few simple things connected with fires that everyone should know. Observance of the nine rules set down by the All-Canada Insurance Federation would greatly reduce loss of property and make loss of life by fire almost unheard of.

The first rule, which applies in most urban communities, is to know where the nearest fire alarm box is. There is a fire extinguisher in most shops and industrial plants and there should be one in the home. Know where it is, the Federation counsels.

Since the telephone is now often a substitute for the fire alarm box, it is essential that the number of the fire department be known to the whole family. It should really be posted up on the wall beside the phone, because we forget strange things in an emergency.

When a fire is noticed, the first thing to do is give the alarm, then close all doors and windows except those needed for escape. No one should waste time investigating the extent of a fire before sounding the alarm. Smoke frequently is quite enough to justify calling for help.

Baby sitters should be told what to do in case of fire, the location of fire extinguishers, and so on. Even more fundamental, never stop to dress small children before taking them out of a house where a fire has been discovered, or suspected. Just bundle them up in bedding and get them out as fast as possible.

In every building, home, office, factory or place of entertainment, there must be at least one exit free. Boxes or furniture, or people standing in the aisles, must not be allowed to block the way out. If real care were taken in this one aspect of fire protection, many serious cases of loss of life would be prevented.

An Orange Is an Orange If It's Orange

Florida growers of citrus fruit have been assured they can go on using red colouring on oranges without interference from the American Food and Drug Administration. Not all oranges, of course, need it. But marketers have found that pale or greenish fruit, which may be just as ripe, sweet and juicy as its more colourful cousins, is passed over on the stands because consumers won't believe an orange is good unless it's orange.

Last fall there was a suspicion that the coal-tar dye might be injurious if used in large quantities. But now one estimate has it that it would take about nine tons of coloured orange peel to do an individual much harm. So the experts have concluded the danfer is not very immediate.

The troubles of the juice-orange growers recall an experiment made in Massachusetts some years ago concerning apples. It was found that a blindfolded person picking a favourite apple by taste would often select a green or yellow variety, but if allowed to choose "with his eyes open" would always take a red one.

Possibly taste is the most complex of the five physical senses. It has long been known to lean on the sense of smell. But apparently most people savour a flavour not only with the tongue and nostrils but also with the eyes.

Need a Naked Condor?

If you were planning to dump your red neck ostrich on the market just now, don't.

The time isn't ripe. Prices are mighty weak, too, on domestic lions and bison.

The ups and downs of the animal market were discussed at Kansas City recently by some 30 shrewd bargainers—members of the Midwest Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariams. They all came to buy, swap or sell—but the deals were limited.

Frank McGinnis, director of the Detroit zoo, put two red-necked ostrich yearlings and several timber wolves and chimpanzees up for sale, but couldn't find any takers.

Robert Bean, director of the Brookfield, Ill., zoo, read off a long list of offerings including a black female leopard, Indian tigers, lions, elands, llamas and prairie dogs.

Bean completed a few transactions, but he wasn't too happy.

"I can't sit on these animals forever," he said. "The price of horsemeat has gone up again. And, by the way, I've got a pair of American bison I will present to anybody who will take them.'

Jack Heusser, director of the Cincinatti zoo, said he had a "mean, Amazon parrot. Bites everybody. Anybody want him?" Nobody did. Heusser also mentioned a stork with one wing missing. More silence from other horse—er, animal traders.

Heusser then told the zoo men he had three golden condors. Unfortunately, he added, the birds were stark naked.

But Heusser said he thought he had solved condor nudeness.

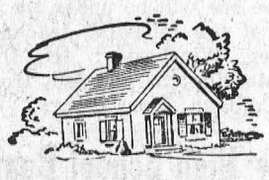
"Those birds can't be kept in a hot room," he said. "They've got to have cold air. They've got to have reason to want feathers."

Marlin Perkins, director of Chicago's Lincoln Park zoo, cast some doubt on the cold air theory.

"I've got a naked macaw," he said. "Cold air doesn't seem to put any feathers on that bird."

Apparently birds are touchy subjects with zoo men. Milton Freeman, of the Miami, Fla., Rare Bird Farm, was asked if he would guarantee them to live three months.

" I guarantee 'em to live three hours." he responded morosely. "At the prices I am quoting, what do you expect?"



Light Along The Way

"'Earth might be fair,' if men were willing to undertake the sacrifice that admits them to the life of the Master, for His is the way for men." These closing words of last week's column are strengthened and clarified in Paul's admonition: "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." (Rom. 22 : 21).

When Jesus was dying upon the Cross the soldiers mocked Him, saying: "If you are the king of the Jews, save yourself!" (Lk. 23 : 37). They did not understand, what Paul saw clearly, that the only way to overcome evil is with good. Jesus could not have saved Himself without also denying Himself. He could not have re-entered life without destroying the Message He had been sent to give.

Man is always free, in every situation, to do one of two things. He can "fight," that is, he can stand up for his "right;" he can argue with his opponent until his opponent admits defeat; he can hold up himself by the sheer force of stronger opposition, or he can quietly let the seed of truth fall in the hope that it is falling on good ground and will in time bear fruit. Jesus recommended the latter course. Indeed, for Him, there was no other way. Remember how He said: "Agree with thine adversary quickly," and "Turn the other cheek?"

But then all is lost! Is it? When we try to fight evil with evil, do we not become evil? If we meet an adversary on his ground, does not it become our ground? If we enter the boat with him, do we not descend to his level? We cannot hold two things at once, we cannot serve God and mammon. The only way to fight evil is to use the good given us. Man will only change when, seeing another way, he repents of his evil and turns to it. A reading of the New Testament reveals this as the key to the Master's life, and the way of His followers. They rebuked not, nor did they retaliate. Paul often "runs away" rather than meet evil on its own ground. This is not cowardice, for to uphold the Right is always the more difficult alternative, and the more heroic.

When we say that Lent is a time of fasting, of giving up, this is what we mean: A time of giving up evil by overcoming it with good. The world has always stood waiting for men who will pay the price of being good in the midst of evil.

Many years ago a small Christian community was severely persecuted in China, and some of the converts were cruelly ill-used by a petty official without any resistance on their part. Some time later this official, in turn, was summoned before a superior who sentenced him to severe punishment for the evil he had done his fellow countrymen. Imagine his amazement when one of those he had wronged interposed and obtained a pardon for him, and imagine the victory of the Christian way! This man became a friend and follower of those who had shown him another way, and offered him help instead of his "just desserts."

TALKED HIS WAY INTO TROUBLE

A man who claimed to be a deaf mute was arrested recently at Oklahoma City on a vagrancy complaint by officers who said he just talked himself into trouble.

Officers said the man introduced himself to several people who answered their doorbells by giving them a card explaining that he was an unemployed deaf mute and needed help to support his family.

Patrolman V. L. Connell said the scheme worked fine until one womman turned him away. The officer said the man made the mistake of voicing his indignation at people who would "turn a deaf mute down."

Farmers are the second-best drivers and men concerned with finance take third place.

GRADE VII ARITHMETIC —IT'S TOUGH

A Toronto mother claims cost accountants have difficulty in figuring out arithmetic problems in Grade VII text books.

Mrs Leonard Brooks said during a recent panel discussion on education by members of the West Horm Home and School council:

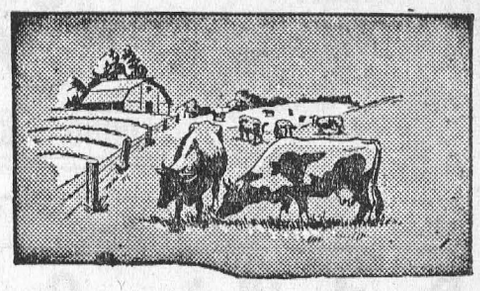
FRENDLEE FARM CHATS



By Lillian Allison

Perhaps it has never occurred to you what an important institution the school is. Perhaps you have believed that it is just a place where your child goes from nine to four each day to learn enough facts to pass the examinations that will enable him to get a decent job and make a little money. But that isnt' what education is.

It took three qualified school teachers a long time, the other night, to arrive at the definition of education. Here it is. It is the building of a philosophy of life—the understanding of whence we came, why we're here and what is our responsibility towards society.

Now the first six years of a child's education takes place in the home. But from then until he is a mature adult the home shares the responsibility with the school, the church and the people with whom he comes in contact. Since he spends as much of his day at the school as he spends at home, church and other places combined, the school has as much influence upon his outlook on life as all the other agencies together.

Surely every parent is interested in the type of person his or her child turns out to be. Then why in the name of common sense isn't he more interested in the school the child attends?

"Why don't we have a parent-teacher organization?" one mother asked.

"Why don't people attend school board meetings?" someone else inquired.

And the answer was the same for both questions. Parents aren't interested.

Now isn't that shameful? Parents are'nt interested in the place where their own children spend almost half their time for at least ten of the most important years of their lives.

What are some of the ideals you have set up for your child?

You want him to be honest, of course. You teach him at home to respect the rights and property of others and to tell the truth despite the consequences. But suppose the school is lax. It shrugs off a bit of copying or cheating. It lets the children off with work half done. It accepts alibis that are obviously untrue. What will happen to the standard of honesty that you have tried to set up for your child?

You want your child to develop a fine personality. You want him to be a better person than you are yourself. You would choose for an example for your child a person who is perfect if you possibly could do so. Then you send him to school to sit for half of those formative years beside his teachers whose traits and characteristics he is bound to copy—consciously or subconsciously.

Perhaps you have high ideals for your child. You want him to grow up with an appreciation of good literature, of music, of poetry and art. Is the school which he is attending doing anything to arouse his interest and make him curious along these lines?

Maybe you want him to continue on to university to enjoy some of the opportunities that you were denied. Are the school and his teachers making higher education look attractive? Or do the y create the impression that he would be just as well off with a pick and shovel?

These are only some of the things you might expect of your child's school. I couldn't possibly list them all, for the school is responsible for the attitudes your child develops towards race, religion, government, discipline, work, play—towards all of life.

Now of course the most important factor in the school is the teacher. And what an awful responsibility is his!

Yet you parents sit calmly back and show no apperent concern while a trustee board choses the person who will train your children. You trustingly send your youngsters five days a week to someone just out of Grade 12 who is only a child herself. Or to someone older who has decided that school hours are short and the pay isn't bad and it's as easy a way to earn a new house or a new car as there is.

Rightly school teaching should be undertaken as a mission. Teachers should be brimming over with personality, energy, understanding and a sense of the terrible responsibility that is their's. They should be the pick of the crop, so to speak. And they will be when you, the parents, and we, the public, really demand it.

Your child is your most valuable possession. You owe it to him to see to it that the schools and the teachers give him a good education—a good philosophy of life.

Civil Defence—Who Pays?

Canada's civil defence bill is big and still growing, but it would be bigger without the citizen volunteer. Under the Canadian C.D. set-up each province and municipality is responsible for adapting broad federal policies to the needs of its own people, for Ottawa exercises no administrative control over local C.D. agencies.

Civic-minded volunteers, therefore, are the backbone of civil defence. The bill is not small. It probably won't shrink so long as nuclear war is a threat. But F. F. Worthington, federal civil defence co-ordinator, has said:

"To federalize civil defence, to plan for a provincial or municipal government staff in all its ramifications, would involve a paid force numbering thousands."

So far the federal government, in various ways, has paid the lion's share. It has agreed, at conferences with provincial officials, to provide training, research, equipment and financial assistance. The provinces and municipalities are taking it from there.

Main federal assistance has been in grants established in 1952 on the basis of eight cents per capita for the whole province with another six cents per capita for target-area cities. For the first two years the grants were available on the basis of a federal dollar for every provincial dollar up to the province's population quota. In the last two years these were extended to municipalities as well, provided the province approved.

That is, for municipal projects the federal contributions now are made on the basis of 50 per cent from Ottawa, 25 per cent from the province and 25 per cent from the municipality. If the province

Stormont Cattle Breeders Hold Ninth Annaul Meeting T. H. Rutley Re-elected Head of County Organization

The Stormont unit of the Eastern Ontario Cattle Breeders Association is now the second largest of the 24 branches, the ninth annual meeting was told at Avonmore.

A report of the year's work was given by Dr R. G. Smiley. T. H. Rutley, who was re-elected president, was in charge of the meeting.

Dr Smiley reported an increase in the number of cows inseminated from 39,308 to 41,526. The Stormont unit inseminated a total of of 3,637 cows with a conception rate of 7' percent based on first services. The conception rate for Eastern Ontario was 72.2 per cent. Cows inseminated included Holstein, Ayrshire, Jersey, Guernsey, Hereford and Shorthorn breeds.

Dr Smiley stated that a holding unit for frozen semen has been installed in the new addition to the Kemptville barns. More than a thousand units of frozen semen is available to members and non-members who desire selective breeding.

A. M. Barr, principal of the Kemptville Agricultural School and a prominent member of the bull buying committee, reported on the bulls that were disposed of during the past year and commented on new replacements. Mr Barr commended the Stormont unit and the technicians on the fine work it has done since its formation nine years ago. He remarked that it was most noteworthy that the unit could increase from some 500 cows to the present total of approximately 3,700.

Mr Barr spoke briefly on a consignment sale which may be held in Kemptville this November, a sale which would feature cattle of the highest quality, including some of the best daughters of the local unit. Mr Barr expressed his belief that the sale would attract buyers from not only Ontario but the United States and Mexico.

R. R. Crozier, Stormont agricultural representative, expressed to breeders the importance of having their herd on record of performance or on the herd improvement plan. He distributed booklets on pasture improvement.

F. C. Eligh, Finch, newly elected president of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, spoke briefly. He stated that 43 per cent of the Holstein cattle that are being registered in Canada today are the offspring of artificial insemination.

Members of the nominating committee were Charles Baker, W. M. Campbell, F. C. Eligh and A. D. MacDonald.

Officers for the coming year are: President, T. H. Rutley; first vice-president Roy Shaver; second vice-president, George Baker.

Jersey directors: W. J. Duvall, Osnabruck; J. J. McKenzie, Finch.

TWO MOTORISTS ARE KILLED EVERY DAY IN RURAL ONTARIO

One in Four of These Accidents Happens on the Farmer's Doorstep

Last year nearly 800 persons were killed in motor mishaps outside urban areas. One in every four such accidents in rural Ontario occurred at a rural intersection, or farm lane connection, with a major highway.

In many cases farmers were in no way involved; in more cases farm drivers probably were innocent victims of careless highway motorists. But farmers and their families died in some of these smash-ups. Farm vehicles were destroyed. And directly or indirectly Ontario's farm population pays a share of the tremendous cost that motor accidents annually inflict in this province.

Safety is everybody's business, everybody's responsibility.

The farmer has a major stake in the safety of rural roads whether they are familiar township routes, regularly travelled county roads, or our provincial super highways. Death and injury lurk at every intersection.

The Ontario Federation of Agriculture is marking Rural Safe Driving Week on February 20 to 25th. May I urge every farmer and farm family in this province to give their attention and active support to the occasion. During this week—and every week—drive so an accident won't be yours.

Hon. F. S. Thomas,
Minister of Agriculture,
Province of Ontario.

ADDITION TO ROYAL YORK—This architect's drawing shows how the Royal York Hotel in Toronto will look when the new $10,000,000, 400-room, air-conditioned addition east of the present structure is completed by late 1958. In announcing the new wing, N. R. Crump, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said excavation was expected to start next November. It will increase total room capacity to 1,600, and the addition of several banquet rooms, one with capacity for 3,000, will enable Toronto to maintain its position as Canada's leading convention city. The addition to the famed hotel is shown on the right of the drawing.

They followed in their mother's footsteps

It happens over and over again. A daughter sees how much her mother likes her telephone job and decides she would like to follow in her footsteps. So in she comes to work at the Bell.

When daughter follows mother and brother follows sister and son follows father you can be pretty sure that people have found lots of good reasons for joining the telephone company.

Magnesium Snowshoes Prove Worth in North

Now the Indian wants to use the white man's snowshoes.

So successful have been tests on a light and strong magnesium snowshoe designed and developed by the Directorate of Inter-service Development that word has spread through the north country and several queries have been received from Indians and trappers asking where they could be secured.

Actually the snowshoe is still undergoing tests and trials but it has transformed so well that the Directorate of Inter-service Development has recommended it for Army adoption.

Snowshoes, a most necessary item for troops in northern Canada, have always been a problem for the Army. The familiar wooden type deteriorates badly in storage and the need for replacements has always been great through warping and breakage.

Development of the new snowshoe commenced some tiime ago. Since then some pairs have carried testing soldiers over 1,000 miles of rough trails and still remain in first class condition. The new snowshoe is made of a magnesium frame and stringed with aircraft fine cable steel encased in nylon.

The new snowshoes are light in weight (less than half that of the old type) and are corrosion, rot and moisture-proof. No matter where stored they will not warp nor will the strings relax under adverse weather conditions.

Their durability is many times that of the standard wooden snowshoe and breakage in the field has been reduced to a very low figure. Another obvious advantage in this country is that when not in use the magnesium snowshoes may be left upright in snow; standard shoes must be hung from trees out of reach of Arctic rodents.

Snuff Still in Use In United States

A check on a new agriculture department report shows that 39,000,000 pounds of snuff will go up the nostrils, or into the mouths, of the faithful this year.

Here's what makes the statistic unusual: With scarcely any variation, around 39,000 000 pounds of the stuff have been used annually for 35 years, and maybe longer.

By contrast, chewing tobacco, once considered an American art, has hit the skids.

There is a popular misconception about snuffers. Many people still conceive of snuff with an aristocratic tinge—the silver snuff box, the lace sleeve, the monocle, the delicate pinch of snuff before the witty remark.

That's nonsense. Those on the lower end of the economic scale are the most faithful. Usually, they don't snuffle it. They put a small bit between the lower lip of the gum and suck it. In some areas it's considered dandy for toothache.

The Southern States account for much of the snuff consumption and Scandinavians in the northwetsern lumber business and fishermen in New England also use it.

Snuff had its finest hour during the Second World War. Many defence plants had stern "no smoking" rules, and workers tried snuff as a substitute.

The United States Senate continues to have filled snuffboxes on each senator's desk. No one dips—at least not regularly—but the page boys keep the boxes filled. The demand may be small, but it's steady. Of those 39,000,000 pounds produced each year, one pound goes to the U.S. Senate.

Bell Telephone Co. Experiences Record Year Report States

With more telephones added, more money spent on new construction, more employees, more shareholders and more calls handled than ever before, The Bell Telephone Company of Canada experienced a record year in almost every way during 1955.

According to the companys 76th annual report, telephones in the Bell's Ontario-Quebec territory increased last year by 228,287, bringing the total in service at the end of 1955 to 2,522,745 The overall increase included more than 135,000 new residence telephones, over 50,000 new telephones for business purposes, and the addition of more than 40 000 telephones through the transfer of the facilities of three former subsidiary companies into the company's system.

Locally, growth in telephone service paralleled this overall expansion. Commenting on the report, N. E. Sharpe, Bell manager for this region, said that 31 telephones were added in Chesterville during 1955. The total at the end of the year was 761.

Throughout Ontario and Quebec expenditures for new construction were $128,400,000 This was $23,100,000 more than in 1954, itself the previous record year. Yet due to the strong and sustained demand, there were 47,000 orders for service not filled at the end of the year. A still larger construction activity is planned for 1956, by far the larger part of which will be devoted to equipment for local service.

A total of $116,037,106 in wages and salaries was paid to Bell employees in hundreds of Ontario and Quebec communities. At the end of 1955 the company employed 36,340 people—22,448 women and 13,892 men.

Net income for the year amounted to $2.43 a share, compared with $2 44 a share in 1954, and an amount equivalent to 43 cents a share was added to surplus. Shareholders increased by more than 10,000 and now number 125,233, over 122,000 of whom are residents of Canada.

An over-the-horizon radio relay chain was completed in the north of the country and good progress was made with engineering and construction of the Mid-Canada Line, the report states. This defence network is being built under the supervision of the members of the Trans-Canada Telephone System, with the Bell company acting as project agent.

Further progress is reported on the construction of the 4,000-mile radio relay network now being built across Canada by members of the Trans-Canada System to meet requirements for long distance telephone service and to carry network television programmes for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The Toronto-North Bay-Winnipeg section is due to go into service towards the of of 1956 and the entire network—from Sydney, N.S., to Vancouver, B.C.—in 1958.

Civil Defence—

doesn't participate financially, the federal contribution is 25 per cent direct to the municipality.

In the 1952-53 fiscal year the federal government matched these provincial C.D. expenditures, British Columbia, $114,964; Alberta, $85,545; Saskatchewan, $25 206; Manitoba, -15,899; Newfoundland, $5.244. In 1953-54: B.C., $107,714; Alta., $85 545; Sask., $34,020; Man., fi25,158; Nova Scotia, $4,020; Newfoundland, $3,015.

It was in 1953-54 that B.C. municipalities led the way in civil defence, financially at least, by putting up $145,782. They led the next year, too, shelling out $225,000. Ontario municipalities entered directly into the C.D. financial picture then, too, with $48,366 to Ottawa's $18,122.

That year, 1954-55, federal grants matched in: B.C., $158,350; Alta., $118 922; Sask., $42,087; Man.. $25,892; New Brunswick, $12,433; N.S., $17,925; Nfld., $21,373.

Figures were not in for 1955-56 but were expected to show a big jump in Ontario's direction as that province accepted the federal grant for the first time.

Administrative officers at federal civil defence headquarters in Ottawa have estimated that of the $4,800,000 available through grants in the first three years of the programme, the provinces took up about $1,000,000. Ontario's participation was expected to make the bite larger in last year's grants.

The grants, however, are only one side of the federal C.D. assistance programme. Its direct C.D. expenditures from 1950-55 totalled some $9,000,000 and its estimates for the 1955-5 fiscal year were $7,000,000.

It set up the Canadian Civil Defence College at Arnprior, Ont., and pays expenses for training persons from all provinces. It has put aside $9,000,000 for stockpiling emergency medical supplies. It has supplied warning sirens to major cities, fire pumpers, stretchers, training manuals and other equipment wherever there was a need.

And these costs do not include such projects as the multimillion-dollar radar warning screens going up around the continent, telecommunications, the ground observer corps and others closely related to the defence of Canada. The federal government also agreed to pay one-third the cost of standardizing fire hose coupling sizes. Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta have taken advantage of this offer.

EVERYBODY EATS-- TRY THESE!

GIVE A LIFT TO SUPPER WITH HOT BREADS

ARE YOU GETTING into that late winter slump when you cook or do you think of a thing that is either new or interesting to serve for supper? Why not try a variety of quick breads instead of the usual sort? You can serve them with the main course instead of bread or with jam or honey for dessert.

Petal Biscuits

The layers break off like petals. They are easy to make and are so good with jam or honey.

2 cups flour
½ tsp. salt
4 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. cream of tartar
3 tbsps. sugar
½ cup shortening
2-3 cup milk
¼ cup melted butter
¼ cup sugar
1 tbsp. cinnamon

Sift dry ingredients; cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk all at once and stir until dough follows the fork around the bowl. Turn onto floured board and knead gently 15 or 20 times. Roll dough ¼ inch thick. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with ¼ cup of sugar mixed with 1 tbsp. cinnamon. Cut 2-inch trips. BALDHEADED CLUB DUCKS COLD WEATHER

American baldheaded men can't change the weather, but they can arrange to hold their annual convention at a comfortable time of the year.

Tradition holds that the National Baldheaded Club meets each year in Minnesota, where it was founded in 1938. Usually the conventions have been held in October, but the 1955 meeting was postponed three months until January. As anyone knows, a Minnesota January is not ideal for a baldpate. So the 1956 convention again will be held in October.

Head man of the Baldheads is Swen G. Swenson, of Minneapolis. His title is Front Row Sitter, the club's equivalent to national president. Club members won't comment on whether the title derives from the traditional "baldheaded row" of the burlesque theatre.

Swenson an d the more than 350 other members of the organization, which extends as far as Japan, are no prospects for the hair restorer people. They insist they are proud of the lack of hair on their heads. They're good natured about it, too —call their fellow members "curlies."

The club members contend that their "special dispensation' has marked "the majority of the great men of the world from the time of the Saints and Julius Caeser to the present."
