NOMINATION

Bills are out calling for Nominations for Reeve and Councillors for the Village; also for three school trustees. The men on the school board, whose term of office expire this year, are Messrs. W. G. Becksted, D. C. Bush and Fred H. Meikle.

Owing to the pressure of other business, it is not likely that Reeve Brown will seek office another year, and a number from the council have intimated that their time will not be at the disposal of the citizens for 1920. Whatever seats are made vacant will have to be filled by equally good men, for Morrisburg promises to have more at stake during the coming year, owing to Hydro developments, than it has had for many years. Therefore, all those who possibly can, should become interested, attend the meeting, and see that the very best material available is put into office.

"TEACHER WANTED"

In "The Globe" want column appears an advertisement, calling for a Specialist in Physical Culture for Morrisburg Collegiate Institute. "State Wages" says the advertisement, which has been running for nearly a month.

Calling on the teachers of the Country, who know nothing of local conditions, to state their own salary, is the old "stereotyped" form of calling for teachers, which in the days when teachers were plentiful might have proved successful, but is not so inviting in times when teachers are at a premium. Testimonials or references are not called for—Nothing matters but the low salary. The tone of the advertisement is a fair indication of how much attention our school board is giving to their trust. We would direct the attention of these men, upon whom we rely to mould the future of the rising generation, that they are not offering sufficient inducement in their Ad., if they hope to secure an efficient teacher to fill the vacancy on the staff.

Members of the school board are naturally more familiar with local conditions, than the "applicant"; they should also be familiar with teaching conditions generally and salaries paid efficient teachers; and why not offer a stated salary? Salary is what counts with teachers, and if our local board will add to this salary, the money they pay out every six months, advertising for teachers, they will eliminate much of the difficulty experienced in securing a permanent staff.

HYMENEAL

COLEMAN—MARKELL
(Ottawa Citizen)

The Glebe Presbyterian Church was the scene of an interesting wedding ceremony, when Miss Eva Perle Markell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Markell, of 8 Rupert street, was married to Mr. Edward Charles Coleman, of Detroit, Mich.

Major, the Rev. T. J. Thompson, officiated, and the organ music was played by Mr. Stevenson.

Miss Martha Lamb attended the bride and Mr. Norman Scrim was best man. The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of cream satin draped with silk net and trimmed with silver lace. The gown was designed with a train, and she wore a long tulle veil and wreath of orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was composed of Ophelia rosebuds.

The bridesmaid was dressed in saxe blue charmeuse trimmed with silver, and she wore a hat of black maline with crown of black velvet and sequins. She carried sunset roses.

Following the ceremony at the church, a small reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, following which Mr. and Mrs. Coleman left for Toronto and Detroit, and later will proceed to Vancouver.

MARRIED

Casselman—Shannette—At the Lutheran Parsonage Williamsburg, on Wednesday, Dec. 10th, 1919, at 2 o'clock, by the Rev. T. Isler, Merton Isaac Casselman of Dundela, to Sadie Elizabeth Shannette of Williamsburg.

BORN

al reward on Monday, Dec. 10th, 1919, at the Ross Memorial, Montreal, where for the past two months, she had been under the most skillful medical treatment. The remains were conveyed to Morrisburg for burial, arriving at the G. T. R. station on the midnight train, Monday. The funeral services were conducted at the family residence on Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. J. Miller officiating.

The late Mrs. Smith, a daughter of the late Edmund B. Adams, was of U. E. Loyalist descent. She was born in Spencerville in 1851, and in 1876 was united in marriage to Mr. Gilbert Smith of Morrisburg where they have since resided. Mrs. Smith enjoyed the high esteem of a host of friends who learned with much regret of her passing away.

She is survived by her husband, and four children, viz.: Mrs. J. E. Craig, Ottawa; Miss Gould and Miss June at home; Mr. Douglas Smith, Montreal.

Interment was made in Fairview Cemetery. The pall-bearers were, G. D. Meikle, John H. Meikle, J. P. Gormley, Ralph Kilgour, Geo. H. Challies and Fred H. Broder.

Among relatives and friends from a distance, present at the funeral were, Dr. and Mrs. Craig, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Smith, Montreal; Mr. Ralph Kilgour, Beauharnois, Que.

MR. C. J. CASSELMAN

One by one there passes away at full years, those whose activities in days gone by contributed to the pleasures we enjoy today. As was briefly mentioned in last week's Leader the late Mr. Cephrenus J. Casselman has passed away to the Great Beyond to give an account of the deeds done in the body. Deceased succumbed after a brief illness from an attack of pneumonia. All that skilled medical aid and willing hands of loved ones could do was done, but of no avail, and at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon of December 9th, he passed peacefully over the Jordan, whither no man returns. Deceased was in his eighty-sixth year, and had spent all his life at the old home from which he has gone forever. The funeral services were conducted at the family residence, by his pastor, Rev. T. Isler. An aged wife is left to mourn; also five daughters, Mrs. Jacob Casselman of California, Mrs. Ora Willey, Brinston, Mrs. O. P. Becker, Williamsburg, Mrs. (Dr.) Simon Casselman and Miss Maud of Sault Ste Marie; and one son, Saxon, at the old home. The bereaved have the sympathy of this community.

FISHING CATS DISCOVERED IN FILMS

Cat Found in Deserted Cabin Plays Important Role in "Mickey"

Mack Sennett likes to use animals in pictures and in "Mickey" featuring Mabel Normand, to be shown at the Music Hall on Saturday, Dec. 27th, two cats are used to bring out a strikingly dramatic contrast in the story, which will attract attention not only as a picture, but as a nature study.

One is a lean, scrawny frog hunter, who rustles for his grub in the mountain cabin where little Mickey lives with her foster father. One of the "close-ups" of the picture shows this cat actually fishing for frogs in a mountain stream. If anyone were to write a magazine story about a cat that went fishing, some professor of natural history would begin to shriek nature fake! But they will have to believe what their eyes see. This old feline ragamuffin sneaks out to the water's edge. A paw suddenly flashes out with the speed of a snake striking, and the frog is hooked.

They found this cat in the California mountains, where they went to film Miss Normand in some of the scenes from "Mickey." The old miner whose cabin they used told them that the cat learned to fish from being left alone for days at a time in the cabin. He had to hustle for his food or starve. He hustled.

Nature men would probably call this a revision of type. In their jungle days, before they became domesticated, cats undoubtedly were fishers. So natural history will say that they did not learn how to fish, this cat remembered how to fish.

Afterwards the scene of "Mickey" is shifted to a luxurious home in the city, where poor little Mickey finds the going hard and sorrowful. Here there is another cat—a soft, silky Persian aristocrat, pampered like a prima donna. Nothing could more strikingly illustrate the change in Mickey's environment, and the elaborate attention to detail than the contrast in these two cats.

Her Gift—and His

Here is a brilliant and unique Christmas Story from the pen of the late O. Henry, now recognized as one of the world's greatest story-tellers. It is a charming tale, full of character, sentiment—and surprises!

One dollar and ninety-four cents. That was all. And seventy-four cents of it was in coppers saved one and two at a time by bulldozing the grocer and the vegetable man and the butcher, until one's cheeks burned with the silent imputation of parsimony that such close dealing implied. Three times Della counted it. One dollar and ninety-four cents. And the next day would be Christmas.

There was clearly nothing left to do but to flop down on the shabby little couch and howl. So Della did it. Which indicates the moral reflection that life is made up of sobs, sniffles, sobs, and smiles, with sniffles predominating.

While the mistress of the home is gradually subsidizing from the first stage to the second, take a look at the home. A furnished flat at $7.50 per week. It did not exactly beggar description, but it certainly had that word on the look-out for the mendicancy squad.

In the vestibule below was a letter-box, into which no letter would go, and an electric button, from which no mortal finger could coax a ring. Also appertaining thereto was a card bearing the name of "Mr. James Dillingham Young."

The "Dillingham" had been flung to the breeze during a former period of prosperity, when its possessor was being paid thirty dollars per week. Now, when the income was shrunk to twenty dollars, the letters of "Dillingham" looked blurred, as though they were thinking seriously of contracting to a modest and unassuming "D." But whenever Mr. James Dillingham Young came home and reached his flat above he was called "Jim," and greatly hugged by Mrs. Dillingham Young, already introduced to you as Della. Which is all very good.

Della finished her cry and attended to her cheeks with the powder-rag. She stood by the window and looked out dully at a grey cat walking a grey fence in a grey back yard. To-morrow would be Christmas Day, and she had only one dollar and ninety-four cents with which to buy Jim a present. She had been saving every cent she could for months, with this result. Twenty dollars a week doesn't go far. Expenses had been greater than she had calculated; they always are. Only one dollar and ninety-four cents to buy a present for Jim! Her Jim!

Many a happy hour she had spent planning for something nice for him, something fine and rare and sterling, something just a little bit near to being worthy the honor of being owned by Jim.

There was a pier-glass between the windows of the room. Perhaps you have seen a pier-glass in a $7.50 flat? A very thin and very agile person may, by observing his reflection in a rapid sequence of longitudinal strips, obtain a fairly accurate conception of his looks. Della, being slender, had mastered the art.

Suddenly she whirled from the window and stood before the glass. Her eyes were shining brilliantly, but her face had lost its color within twenty seconds. Rapidly she pulled down her hair, and let it fall to its full length.

Now, there were two possessions of the James Dillingham Youngs in which they both took a mighty pride. One was Jim's gold watch, that had been his father's and his grandfather's; the other was Della's hair. Had the Queen of Sheba lived in the flat across the airshaft, Della would have let her hair hang out of the window some day to dry, just to depreciate her Majesty's jewels and gifts. Had King Solomon been the janitor, with all his treasures piled up in the basement, Jim would have pulled out his watch every time he passed, just to see him pluck at his beard from envy.

So now Della's beautiful hair fell about her, rippling and shining like a cascade of brown waters. It reached below her knees and made itself almost a garment for her. And then she did it up again nervously and quickly. Once she faltered for a minute and stood still, while a tear or two splashed on the worn, red carpet.

On went her old brown jacket; on went her old brown hat. With a whirl of skirts, and with the brilliant sparkle still in her eyes, she fluttered out of the door and down the stairs to the street.

Where she stopped the sign read: "Mme. Sofronie. Hair Goods of All Kinds." One flight up Della ran, and collected herself, panting. Madame, large, too white, chilly, hardly looked the "Sofronie."

"Will you buy my hair?" asked Della.

"I buy hair," said Madame. "Take your hat off, and let's have a sight at the looks of it!"

Down rippled the brown cascade.

"Twenty dollars!" said Madame, lifting the mass with a practiced hand.

"Give it to me quick!" said Della. Oh, and the next two hours tripped by on rosy wings! Forget the hashed metaphor. She was ransacking the stores for Jim's present.

She found it at last. It surely had been made for Jim and no one else. There was no other like it in any of the stores, and she had turned all of them inside out. It was a platinum fob-chain, simple and chaste in design, properly proclaiming its value by substance alone, and not by meretricious ornamentation, as all good things should do.

It was even worthy of the watch. As soon as she saw it she knew that it must be Jim's. It was like him. Quietness and value—the description applied to both. Eighteen dollars they took from her for it, and she hurried home with the two dollars. With that chain on his watch Jim might properly be anxious about the time in any company. Grand as the watch was, he sometimes looked at it on the sly, on account of the old leather strap that he used in place of a chain.

When Della reached home her intoxication gave way a little to prudence and reason. She got out her curling irons and lighted the gas, and went to work repairing the ravages made by generosity added to love. Which is always a tremendous task, dear friends—a mammoth task.

Within forty minutes her head was covered with tiny, close-lying curls, which made her look wonderfully like a truant schoolboy. She looked at her reflection in the mirror, long, carefully, and critically.

"If Jim doesn't kill me," she said to herself, "before he takes a second look at me, he'll say I look like a Coney Island chorus-girl. But what could I do? Oh, what could I do with one dollar and ninety-four cents?"

At seven o'clock the coffee was made and the frying pan was on the back of the stove, hot and ready to cook the chops.

Jim was never late. Della doubled the fob-chain in her hand and sat on the corner of the table near the door that he always entered. Then she heard his step on the stair, away down on the first flight, and she turned white for just a moment. She had a habit of saying little silent prayers about the simplest everyday things, and now she whispered:

"Please, Heaven, make him think I am still pretty!"

The door opened, and Jim stepped in and closed it. He looked thin and very serious. Poor fellow! He was only twenty-two—and to be burdened with a family! He needed a new overcoat and he was without gloves.

Jim stepped inside the door, as immovable as a setter at scent of a quail. His eyes were fixed upon Della, and there was an expression in them that she could not read, and it terrified her. It was not anger, nor surprise, nor disapproval, nor horror, nor any of the sentiments that she had been prepared for. He simply stared at her fixedly with that peculiar expression on his face.

Della wriggled off the table and went for him.

"Jim darling," she cried, "don't look at me that way. I had my hair cut off and sold it, because I couldn't have lived through Christmas without giving you a present. It'll grow again. You won't mind, will you? I just had to do it; my hair grows awfully fast. Say 'Merry Christmas,' Jim, and let's be happy! You don't know what a nice—what a beautiful, nice gift I've got for you!"

Della looked long and anxiously in the mirror.

"You've cut off your hair?" asked Jim laboriously, as if he had not arrived at that patent fact yet, even after the hardest mental labor.

"Cut it off and sold it," said Della. "Don't you like me just as well, anyhow? I'm me without my hair, aren't I?"

Jim looked about the room curiously.

"You say your hair is gone?" he said, with an air almost of idleness.

"You needn't look for it," said Della. "It's sold, I tell you—sold and gone, too! It's Christmas Eve, boy. Be good to me, for it went for you. Maybe the hairs of my head were numbered," she went on, with a sudden serious sweetness, "but nobody could ever count my love for you. Shall I put the chops on, Jim?"

Out of his trance Jim seemed quickly to wake. He unfolded Della. For ten seconds let us regard with discreet scrutiny some inconsequential object in the other direction.

Seven dollars a week or a million a year—what is the difference? A mathematician or a wit would give you the wrong answer. The Magi brought wonderful gifts, but that was not among them. This dark assertion will be illuminated later on.

Jim drew a package from his overcoat pocket and threw it on the table. "Don't make any mistake, Dell," he said, "about me. I don't think there's anything in the way of a haircut or a shave or a shampoo that could make me like my girl any less. But if you'll unwrap that package, you may see why you had me going awhile at first."

White fingers and nimble tore at the string and paper. And then an ecstatic scream of joy, and then, alas! a quick feminine change to hysterical tears and wails, necessitating the immediate employment of all the comforting powers of the lord of the flat.

For there lay the combs—the set of combs, side and back, that Della had worshipped in a downtown window. Beautiful combs, pure tortoiseshell, with jeweled rims, just the shade to wear in the beautiful vanished hair. They were expensive combs, she knew, and her heart had simply craved and yearned over them without the least hope of possession. And now they were hers; but the tresses that should have adorned the coveted ornaments were gone.

But she hugged them to her bosom, and at length she was able to look up with the dim eyes and a smile, and say:

"My hair grows so fast, Jim." And then Della leapt up like a little singed cat and cried, "Oh, oh!"

Jim had not yet seen his beautiful present. She held it out to him eagerly upon her open palm. The dull, precious metal seemed to flash with a reflection of her bright and ardent spirit.

"Isn't it a dandy, Jim? I hunted all over the town to find it. You'll have to look at the time a hundred times a day now. Give me your watch! I want to see how it looks on it."

Instead of obeying, Jim tumbled down on the couch, and put his hands under the back of his head and smiled. "Dell," said he, "let's put our Christmas presents away and keep them awhile. They're too nice to use just at present. I sold the watch to get the money to buy your combs. And now suppose you put the chops on!"

The Magi, as you know, were wise men—wonderfully wise men—who brought gifts to the Babe in the manger. They invented the art of giving Christmas presents. Being wise, their gifts were no doubt wise ones, possibly bearing the privilege of exchange in case of duplication. And here I have lamely related to you the uneventful chronicle of two foolish children in a flat who most unwisely sacrificed for each other the greatest treasures of their house.

But, in a last word to the wise of these days, let it be said of all who give gifts, these two were the wisest. Of all who give and receive gifts, such as they are wisest. Everywhere they are wisest. They are the Magi.

Christmas, 1919.

Again, the days bring Christmas Day, The day of the Holy Story! And songs of glee are in the air, And merry bells peal everywhere For the Holy Child Who came to earth And chose a stable for His birth And stripped Himself of His glory. "Peace on earth, good-will to men!" We hear the angels singing. And our hearts rebound to the glad-some sound.

And we set the bells a-ringing! Eager, we welcome thoughts of peace, Banish our long-worn sadness: Glad that the battle's noise is dim, Glad for the thought of gladness! Anxious to spread some joy and mirth Where hearts were full of sorrow; Clear, from the star of the Baby King, Rays of the brightness borrow. Cast away care, ye sons of men! Set aside gloom and sinning; Into the stable, with the sheep. Come, with the shepherds' winning.

Ease from the pain of yesterday Strength for a brave to-morrow; Purest joy for the King's birthday. And a heart's surcease from sorrow. "Peace on earth, good-will to men!" Still, I hear them singing! "Peace on earth," 'tis come at last! "Good-will to men," as their wings brush past; And hearts have found the Christmas joy While the Christmas bells are ringing!

The Christmas Guest.

Twine the balsam boughs that hold Memories of delight Hang the garlands, as of old, Where the lamplight's ruddy gold Blossoms on the night. Gather round the Christmas fire; Place a chair for him At the call of love's desire He will quit the radiant choir—Saints and seraphim. Heaven is love, and love is here, Tender, strong and true. Lingers now his spirit near, Blest and beautiful and dear, Veiled from mortal view.

Sing the songs he loved the best— Songs of mirth and joy— Ere upon his hero-quest, Seeking service, finding rest, Went our blithe, bright boy.

Put a flower at his place— He will understand. In its sweetness love may trace Visions of a vanished face, Touch a vanished hand.

Watching the Falling Snow.

Fall, Magic snow, in great white flakes, and still; Mantle old Mother Earth in radiant white; Cover the sweeping plains, the valleys fill, Crown all the hill-tops with a hazy light, This winter's night.

Fall, kindly words, in great heart-whispers fall; Mantle the aching hearts lest they increase; Cover the wounded souls, the friendless call, Crown all the restless with a wreath of peace, Ere kind words cease.

"Dell," he said, "I sold my watch to buy the combs for you!"

the giver when he gets. Then all's well. There's an art in picking a present. Rules are—first, it should be suitable; then useful; and last, but not least, needed.

You want to sit down with a list lying before you, and study it a bit. Think of your friends' characteristics, their habits, their hobbies, their likes, their dislikes, their needs. You may be quite sure that what is suitable will certainly be useful.

Here are some hints. Of course, they do not cover all the ground. Still, they will show you the system to follow:

If you've been giving Christmas presents to children for some years, don't forget that they grow up. Your gifts must grow up, too. See?

Don't give a book to someone who is not fond of reading. And don't give a girl of ten a story of adventure solely intended for boys. It's been done!

You need to exercise a williness in some matters. If you have it in your mind that you will give a friend a tin of tobacco, remember that smokers prefer their own brand. Your choice may make him sick. If you contemplate a pipe as a gift, observe or find out whether a straight or bent one is used. It is in these little details that pleasure lies.

It is always perfectly safe to pander to a hobby, whether it be pigeons, postage stamps, or postcards. Hobbyitis is a disease which has most of us in its clutch. Your present may make things worse in one way, but you're certain to please.

Make your presents complete. Shops are shut at Christmas-time, and friends in the country may have many miles to go, after the holidays are over, before they can do what they are eager to do—use your gift. For example, don't forget the laces with a natty pair of shoes; with an acetylene lamp send a small tin of carbide; with a box of paints send a painting-book; with a lamp be careful that you also enclose some wick. You see the idea?

Scores of other examples might be given, but if you just look at your present and see that it lacks nothing, it will be all right. A postponed pleasure, involving disappointment, is not what you intended to give, so don't give it.

Lastly, let your presents be personal ones. Children, over and under twenty-one, have a strange habit of giving mother a Christmas present for the house. A new cushion, which all will use, is not a personal gift. Nor is a pair of vases for the mantelpiece. So when giving to a mother and mother remember to make the gift personal.

Finally, jot down somewhere, and keep the memory, what you gave your friends. It saves repeating your next Christmas.

Suitable, useful, needed, complete, and personal—such must be presents.

Needs Rich, Red Blood to Regain Health and Strength.

Many children start school in excellent health, but after a short time home work, examinations, hurried meals and crowded school rooms cause their blood to become weak and thin, their nerves over wrought and their color and spirits lost. It is a great mistake to let matters drift when boys and girls show symptoms of nervousness or weak blood. They are almost sure to be victims of St. Vitus dance, or drift into debility that leads to other troubles. Regular meals, outdoor exercise and plenty of sleep are necessary to combat the nervous wear of school life. But it is still more important that parents should pay strict attention to the school child's blood supply. Keep this rich and red by giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills according to directions and the boy or girl will be sturdy and fit for school. The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. Pearl G. Harrington, Kingsville, Ont., who says:—"I have often felt that I should write you and let you know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me. At the age of thirteen I was afflicted with St. Vitus dance. The trouble became so severe that I had to be taken from school. I was given medical treatment but it did not help me, in fact I was steadily growing worse. Then a friend advised my mother to give me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which she did, with the happiest results, as the pills completely cured me and I was again able to take up my studies and attend school. Again about three years ago I was attacked with nervous prostration and once more took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using five boxes was fully restored. I cannot praise these pills too highly as I believe they will cure any case of St. Vitus dance, or restore anyone who is weak, nervous or run down.

You can safely give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the most delicate child, or take them yourself with equally good results when you need a blood tonic. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Many of the old sayings contain much of truth, but do not go far enough. Time is money—only if we are wise enough to turn it into money. The new covenants of civilization demand that wrongs be righted and misunderstandings cleared away by constructive action.

Hospital for Sick Children

Upkeep of Big Charity Requires Fifty Cents a Minute.

DEAR Mr. Editor:

The 44th annual report of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, shows a notable advance in every department of its service to the suffering and crippled youngsters of this province. The ward accommodation has been taxed to its capacity, and the summer annex, the Lakeside Home, was opened for the first time since the outbreak of war.

The daily average of cot patients has increased during the year from 192 to 223, including children from practically every county in Ontario. Even had the cost of supplies and labor remained stationary, the substantial increase in the number of patients would alone account for the addition to the charity's debt, which at the close of the fiscal year was $109,000. This debt has become an embarrassing burden. Further increase must threaten impairment of an enviable efficiency.

The Hospital is in the forefront of all institutions upon this continent devoted to the care of sick children. It cost $335,399 to maintain last year. This great sum not only puts at the service of the children of Ontario all the resources of medical science, but, in addition, provides for a training school for 120 nurses and for unsurpassed clinical facilities for the University students who are preparing to engage in their profession throughout the province.

The income which must be forthcoming to finance this absolutely essential work figures out at seven hundred dollars a day; and, as there is no endowment fund, all but a fraction of that amount has to be derived from individual benevolence. Therefore the Trustees are making a Christmas appeal to every lover of children to foot the bills for some period of time, no matter how short it may be. A minute of mercy costs fifty cents.

For churches, societies, lodges, etc., who have more ample funds wherewith to assist the youngsters to a fair start in life, the naming of cots is suggested. A number of memorial cots have been thus dedicated in honor of the overseas service of fellow-members. This privilege is extended in recognition of gifts of $2,000 to the Main Hospital or $500 to the Lakeside Home, which can be paid in annual instalments if so desired.

Literature, illustrative of all branches of the past year's work, to gather with any other information desired, will be gladly furnished on application to the Secretary, the Hospital for Sick Children, College street, Toronto. Contributions should also be addressed to the secretary.

IRVING E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman of Appeal Committee

I have spent most of my life studying about farming. I have carried on line after line of experiments trying to solve important problems, and I have a few times succeeded in solving them in this way. But I have come firmly to the conclusion that the best way to study farm problems is to study them on farms of the men who have worked them out in a practical way.

I have found that most of the practical problems which experimenters are working their lives away trying to solve have already been solved by some farmer, and that these experimenters could save a lot of time and bother if they would go round and see what the farmers have already found out, and publish this. There is always a large group of farmers who would profit highly by such information.—J. S. C.

Straw for the Wheat.

We have always depended upon snow to protect the winter wheat crop from sudden weather changes. Snow is, of course, a very efficient covering for all winter growing crops, including rye, alfalfa, clovers, etc., but it frequently happens that when the covering is most needed the snow is not there. Progressive farmers have learned out of practical experience that a very light covering of strawy manure or straw is of the greatest value to these winter crops when the snow is off the ground. This straw stays after the spring opens and protects the plants against the excessive action of freezing and thawing on the root system. Neither is the time required for the application of the straw wasted since the fertilizing element contained therein and the effect upon the physical condition of the soil are just as apparent as if the material had been applied to any other crop and at a time of the year when labor may be more urgently required at seasonable work.

NOTHING TO EQUAL BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Alfred Naud, Natagan River, Que., writes:—"I do not think there is any other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets for little ones. I have used them for my baby and would use nothing else." What Mrs. Naud says thousands of other mothers say. They have found by trial that the Tablets always do just what is claimed for them. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus banish indigestion, constipation, colic, colds, etc. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Time and tide wait for no man, but time and care applied to farm tasks pay any man.

John W. Lucas, who won prizes for white oats, bromo grass seed, barley and rye, had never been a farmer until he settled on his homestead in Cayley, Alberta, sixteen years ago. However, he has set to work to learn all he could about this noble profession and nobody can say that he has made a bad job of it.

Mr. Lucas was born in one of the cities of Eastern Canada. Like many other boys whose parents are in moderate circumstances he earned money after school hours delivering newspapers and in various other odd jobs. Leaving school, he says, he got a real job at six dollars a week and later came West and worked in Winnipeg for a year. He had always felt a desire to become a farmer, however, and it is not surprising that the call of the Canadian Government for settlers for free homesteads at once appealed to him. He came to Alberta in 1903 and located on his homestead in Cayley, in the southern part of the province, the same year.

He is now the owner of eight hundred acres of land in a block, and is interested, besides, in six and a half sections of land—4,160. On his farm he has produced as much as 139 bushels of oats to the acre and 66 bushels of wheat to the acre. The quality of his oats may be judged from the fact that for five years he won the premier honors for this crop at the Alberta Provincial Seed Fair. He has also been a regular exhibitor and prize winner at the International Soil Products Exposition and other exhibitions held in the United States.

It has been Mr. Lucas' ambition to become a good farmer and he has spared no efforts to learn all he could about his profession. He spent the winters of 1912 and 1913 in Iowa as part of his agricultural education. Here he visited some of the best farms in the State, asked lots of questions, saw a good deal and came away with as much knowledge as he could gather. He considers these two winters spent in Iowa among the best investments he ever made. He learned much about horses, cattle and hogs, and also how good farmers select the ears of corn, how in this way they increase the yield, producing ears true to type and uniform in size. He figured that if corn could be so much improved by selection the same thing could be done with the heads of wheat, oats, barley and hills of potatoes. He came back to Alberta and began to use this knowledge. Not only has he increased the yield of these crops, but has improved the quality and type as well. Instead of fields of oats, barley and other crops with heads of all sizes he has now fields of these grains with heads nearly all alike. By hand selection of potatoes, saving only the prolific hills true to type, he has been able to produce as high as thirty-seven marketable potatoes from one hill, and from one potato planted a yield of seventy-three pounds of potatoes. This is a record difficult to beat anywhere.

These are some of the things a city

PIMPLES ITCHED AND BURNED

Face Was Badly Disfigured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

"Small red pimples and blackheads began on my face and my face was badly disfigured. Some of the pimples festered while others scaled over and there were places where the pimples were in blotches. They used to itch and burn terribly. I saw an advertisement for Cuticura and I tried them. They stopped the itching and burning and I used four cakes of Soap and three boxes of Ointment which healed me." (Signed) Miss V. A. Hayne, Stormont, N. S., Dec. 25, '18.

Soap 25c, Ointment 25c and 50c. Sold throughout the Dominion. Canadian Depot: Lyman, Limited, St. Paul St., Montreal.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" CHILD'S LAXATIVE

Look at tongue! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver and bowels

Accept "California" Syrup of Figs only—look for the name California on the package, then you are sure your child is having the best and most harmless laxative or physic for the little stomach, liver and bowels. Children love its delicious fruity taste. Full directions for child's dose on each bottle. Give it without fear. Mother! You must say "California."

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"

The name "Bayer" on Aspirin is like 14 Karat on gold. It positively identifies the only genuine Aspirin—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada.

Always buy an unbroken package. There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Mono-acetic acid of Salicylic acid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross"

THEY do not fear coughs, colds and allied complaints. For over 60 years they have relied on GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM for prompt results. ## DON'T WHIP!

Stop Lashing Your Bowels with Harsh Cathartics but take "Cascarets."

Everyone must occasionally give to the bowels some regular help or else suffer from constipation, bilious attacks, stomach disorders, and sick headache. But do not whip the bowels into activity with harsh cathartics.

What the liver and bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic, one that can constantly be used without harm. The gentlest liver and bowel tonic is "Cascarets." They put the liver to work and cleanse the colon and bowels of all waste, toxins and poisons, without griping—they never sicken or inconvenience you like Calomel, Salts, Oil, or Purgatives.

Twenty-five million boxes of Cascarets are sold each year. They work while you sleep. Cascarets cost so little too.

Miss Shane made a charming hostess, and made her young friends feel free to enjoy themselves in music and games.

Before serving lunch, Miss Shane's attention was called, and the following address was read by Miss Evelyn Merkley:

Dear friend,—It is with deep regret that we, the young people of Nation Valley have learned of your intended departure from our midst, and we felt we could not permit of your leaving us without gathering to bid you a kind au-revoir, and showing in some tangible way, our appreciation of your kind, amiable disposition and your genial hospitality.

As a friend and neighbor you have endeared yourself to us in your sojourn here, by your readiness and willingness to assist in all enterprises of the community, whether social or otherwise, and we have learned to respect and appreciate your sterling worth and character.

In leaving us you leave behind a host of friends who will be ever ready and eager to welcome you back to a warm place in our hearts and homes.

In token of our esteem and good fellowship we beg of you to accept this little gift, and we trust that as you use it, your thoughts will often times revert to your old friends in Nation Valley.

Signed on behalf of the young people.

JOCK'S TERMS

A Tale of the Malta Hospitals.

By ALBERT G. MACKINNON.

CHAP. I.—HIS TASK.

"Jock, we have a case for you in Ward 10," said the surgeon cheerily as he drew up at McGowan's bed. "The man is in the dumps and he will not give us a chance to make him well. Try your hand on him, like a good fellow, and find out what is the matter."

It was not the first time Jock McGowan had been entrusted with such commissions. He had a wonderful way with him, and no probing of the surgeon's knife could go so deep as Jock's artful questions and tactful sympathy. Few secrets could defy his methods.

"Ay, weel, I'll do my best. I'll find out what the matter is, onyway," he replied in tones of confidence. "His name is Roderick Macpherson. He has been seriously wounded, and unless you can buck up his spirits a bit, it may go hard with him. He has got something on his mind that is troubling him. His moaning and groaning are caused by mental distress, not physical. You must draw out his worry."

"Like a poultice," Jock interrupted with a laugh. "Weel, I'll get it out, never fear; an' maybe that'll relieve him."

"Thank you, Jock," said the surgeon as he turned away. "You are working your passage in this hospital. I think we shall have to get you put on the permanent staff. You are the most useful man in the place."

Jock smiled. He never seemed to need encouragement, but a word of well-merited praise is always a stimulant. Getting into his invalid's chair, he began to wheedle himself through the ward, greeting the various patients with a cheery salutation as he passed along. Out into the corridor and the adjoining ward he steered his way, and pulled up at a bed above which hung a Scotch bonnet.

"Hae they gien' ye easter-oil, mon?" he asked in his quizzical way.

A face that was like a map of Scotland, or, rather, a photo of its mountains on one of those cloudy days when its scenery is a study of shadows, looked up at him from the pillow. Rugged, weather-beaten, darkened by a perpetual frown, it was that of a man with a grievance, or something worse. The heavy eyebrows intensified its sombre aspect, though they did not hide the keen scrutiny of eyes very much alert.

"I hae been dosin' myself—wi' car-bolic," was the glum response, though it did not lack just a bit of humor. Macpherson had caught the mood of his questioner.

"Gey strong stuff, that. It'll burn ye, mon," said Jock, feeling for a clue to the patient's real malady.

"Ay, it does that; but it canna burn a' the rottenness that's in here," and the wounded man pointed tragically to his heart.

It was evident that Jock had won his confidence.

"Tell me hoo ye got yer wound," asked Jock.

"Which?"

"Weel, we'll begin wi' the are in yer leg, an' then ye can tell me: boot the deeper are in the hairt."

"There's a connection between the twa," began Macpherson. "It was durin' the attack on the Bulgar lines that I got knocked out. We had ta'en the third trench, an' then had to retire. A shrapnel burst beside me, an' emptied itself intil my legs. The doctor has lost count o' the bits he has extracted. I lay there unable to move, juist lookin' up at the sky. I watched the day breakin', for our attack had been at night. Never afore had I observed sae intently the sun risin'."

I had naethin' else to dae, an' strange to say, I didna feel any pain, but only a numbness. I cudna move my legs, and sae I lay on my back. Sune I got mair o' the sun than I wanted. It had the range o' me a' richt, an' it didna miss its mark. My lips got parched, an' then my tongue began to swell. It felt juist as if I had a piece o' red-hot iron in my mouth. There was only ae thocht in my mind, an' that was water. I thocht o' a' the drinks I had ever drunk. The vision o' the well in my mither's back-gairden cam' afore me. Aince or twice as I dozed off I imagined myself workin' as hard as I cud at the handie, but the water didna come. I tried to turn over on my side, but the moment I attempted to move a hundred spikes seemed driven intil my legs, an' sae I had to gie that up. I longed for night. I prayed for it, but it looked as if my prayers wud never be answered, an' the sun had forgotten to move on, as it did i' the days o' Joshua. I got tired o' my thochts, but I cudna get awa' frae them. Then at last it began to get cooler, an' never hae I blessed a sunset mair. I didna ken that there was waur in store. For a while I felt cool an' contented. The stars cam' out, an' it was night, an' wi' my head on the grund I lay gazin' up at them wi' mair a queer fancy in my mind."

"Ye didna feel feary?" interrupted Jock.

"No at the time," answered Macpherson. "But it wasna long afore I got a start that set my hairt thumpin'."

When it was quite dark I began to see figures movin' about i' the night. At first I thocht that maybe I was dreamin', but ane o' them cam' quite close, an' that I cud mak' him out."

They were Bulgars prowlin' about like ghouls, robbin the deid an' wounded. I was lyin' in a hollow, an' sae weel hidden. The mon had his back ta'e me, an' passed on without turnin'. I saw the shadows o' several efter that, an' I heard gasps an' cries, an' kenneed fine what they were up tae; sae I kept verra quiet. Then the pain began in my throat an' legs, an' I cudna re-main silent any langer. I gied twa three cries, though my voice didna seem like my ain. I thocht the Bulgars wud hear an' search for me, but I was in that state that I didna care what happened. Weel, I kept up my shouts an' groans every noo an' then. It was gey lonesome, I can tell ye, to feel that there was nane to heed. It wud be i' the sma' oors o' the mornin' that I pricked up my ears. I heard an' answerin' ca' frae the direction o' the British lines. It wasna lood, but mair like a whisper, an' had a note o' caution about it."

"It wud pit fresh courage intil ye," said Jock.

"Ay, I'll never forget the music o' that ca' i' the night. Mony's the time I hae heard the human voice in song an' speech, but never did it sound sae welcome as then. I forgot a' about the Bulgars, an' shouted back. Nearer an' nearer cam' the answerin' voice. Then a' o' a sudden it ceased, juist when I thocht relief was at hand. I called again an' again, but there was nae response. Then day began to dawn, an' I kent the chance was lost. I dinna like to think o' the awful horror o' the next day. The sun was mair peevish than afore, an' my tongue seemed to burn the inside o' my mouth. I prayed for daith to end my misery. Then as night cam' on again, an' darkness gathered round me, a new fear seized me. I feared then I was gaein to dee, an' a' o' an instant the thocht gripped me that I wasna ready. The sin o' my past rose up afore me. Whiles I think my mind wandered, for I thocht I saw the deid bodies round me movin' an' crawlin' up tae me, an' their deid eyes lookin' intil mine, an' remindin' me o' the evil I had done. I began to realize hoo wicked I had been. Then ae sin stood out frae the rest."

"What was that?" asked Jock with intense interest.

Poise.

There are certain traits that people are unwilling to admit they lack—even though they secretly suspect a deficiency. Courage, generosity, sympathy are some of the most obvious of these; few persons will acknowledge even to themselves that they are cowardly, ungenerous, or hard-hearted. So, too, with humor. What man was ever heard to deny that he had a sense of humor?

But the quality of poise is one that some persons covet quite openly. Excitable people realize as clearly as those with whom they have to deal the disadvantages attendant upon their excitability. When they are indignant, they sputter and lose effectiveness. When they are confronted by a situation that demands their best efforts, their intensity of feeling, which ought to stimulate them, throws them a little out of gear; their mental machinery does not respond to the most urgent cranking. Afterwards they lament the poor showing that they made under stress and attribute it, rightly enough, to lack of poise.

Even though they covet poise, they like to console themselves by thinking that no one can have poise and humor both; but they derive consolation from a fallacy. Some excitable people lack humor as well as poise; some humorous people have poise. After all, poise is not a solemn ponderosity. It comes from self-control; and often a sense of humor is invaluable in assisting one to maintain or to regain self-control. The people who show poise in the ordinary relations and transactions of life are those who do not put an exaggerated value upon themselves or upon others rather than those who overvalue themselves and undervalue others. Egotism and self-depreciation alike prevent the acquisition of poise; one leads to sulkeness, the other to facile surrender.

Employer's Time.

A plumber and a painter were working in the same house. One morning the painter arrived late and the plumber said to him:

"You are late this morning."

"Yes," said the painter. "I had to stop and have my hair cut."

"You did not do it on your employer's time, did you?" said the plumber.

"Sure I did," said the painter: "it grew on his time."

Hints for Home Nursing.

In the care of the sick as in everything else in the world, there are two methods—the difficult and the simple. So much depends upon the care of the sick, that the average housekeeper, with her increased work, responsibility and anxiety, is prone to forget how much she owes to herself both in care and consideration. She owes this care for her own sake and the sake of those depending on her.

One cannot care for the sick unless one is physically fit. The woman who sits up night after night with her patient is doing herself a grave injustice. She is also being unfair to the patient. A nurse, however thoroughly trained, must have a regular amount of sleep, fresh air and nourishment. This assertion is contrary to very current ideas on the subject of nurses who are "trained" and therefore—some suppose—do not require sleep. Only cases of the gravest and most unlooked-for emergency should cut a nurse off from her rest.

Every person requires enough sleep to keep the brain from becoming befogged. The danger that may result by a person who is half asleep and utterly weary, measuring and administering a medicine containing poison, cannot be over-estimated. The gravest results have followed such mistakes, all because physical endurance was overtaxed.

It is a well-known fact that patients who should know better, have a way of imposing upon mothers or others whom they love and who are trying to care for them. They refuse medicines and nourishment; they will not follow the doctor's instructions. The doctor is constantly discouraged—oftentimes unkindly criticized.

But let a nurse who is an absolute stranger come into a sick room and the patient obediently sits up and swallows medicines and egg-nogs! The very gruel which was refused after a weary mother had climbed the stairs with it for the fortieth—or fiftieth—time that day is cheerfully drained—when the hand that holds it is a stranger's. This is unfair all around and nurses realize exactly how the loss of sleep, aching feet and tired backs can undermine one's nervous system until the poor, over-wrought body is "too tired to sleep." But if one plans one's work, observes punctuality and insists gently but firmly, that the patient observe punctuality—in receiving medicines and treatment—there would be time for the home-nurse to rest. She should understand how simple it is to do one's work the easy way and thereby obtain better and greater results.

In almost every home there is a medicine chest. Just how carefully or carelessly it is stocked never occurs to one until the moment of emergency comes.

If the contents of our medicine cupboard were checked up occasionally there would be less confusion in the household when accidents occur.

First, place your medicine chest where you can reach it quickly—and keep it locked, or, at least, place it beyond the reach of childish hands.

Keep a supply of perfectly clean, soft old linen and flannel on hand; tear the linen into long strips and roll it up tightly; pin it securely. Thus you are provided with bandages. A few narrow ones for cut fingers; some wider ones for arms and legs. The pieces of old flannel are useful for compresses or fomentations. Fold them neatly; keep them in a small box with the bandages and some oiled muslin or oiled silk, which will be necessary in the event of fomentations.

Get a bottle of antiseptic lotion from your druggist, for cuts and scratches. Tell him what it is for and he will give you the right thing, for that is his business. Keep vaseline, olive or sweet oil on hand and a simple liniment for sprains or to rub on rheumatic limbs. These your doctor will be glad to prescribe or advise you about when you tell him what you wish. Absorbent cotton in a little packet is necessary too.

A corked bottle or covered tin of sodium bi-carbonate (ordinary baking soda); a bottle of castor oil; fruit salts; a bottle of Carron oil for burns (this is prepared by any chemist, being a mixture of limewater and linseed oil); all these are useful. A can of mustard and one of flour, a large spoon and a bowl, if kept in a medicine cupboard, will greatly facilitate the preparation of a mustard plaster.

Linseed meal for poultices, a little camphor, smelling salts and a bottle of toothache drops should complete the list.

Do not keep aspirin tablets or any "headache tablets" or other drugs on hand as they should only be taken when prescribed by a trustworthy physician.

A paper of safety pins, a roll of adhesive bandage and a pair of sharp scissors are good to add to your list.

A wise woman will provide herself with an ice bag and a hot-water bag.

Even though a woman living in the country cannot always get ice, there is bound to be very cold water in the well or the spring. Fill your hot-water bag with it and wrap it with a thin towel or cloth, as cold rubber is moist and unpleasant to the touch. Renew this often and in a similar effect to the use of ice. Or, even a towel, frequently wrung out of cold water, answers for a cold application. Only, be sure to wring it very dry for the sake of the patient's comfort.

Tack up, just inside the door of your medicine chest or cabinet or emergency cupboard, whatever you wish to call it, the name of the doctor or hospital to which you turn in case of need and any telephone numbers that would be used in case of emergency. It is wise to be prepared.

When Little Tad Will Not Eat.

The statement is often made that children should learn to eat whatever is set before them.

In the case of the two-year-old baby just learning to partake of solid food, this may be true. Take his milk away and leave him with his dish of egg or baked potato or milk toast, and when he finds the milk is not forthcoming, in nine cases out of ten he will eat the new food and like it. But with an older child such a practice is more apt to be harmful than helpful.

Let me speak of my own case. I do not like bread. As a child I did not care especially for it and at mealtimes I much preferred potato. From mother, father, brothers, aunts and cousins it was drilled into me—that I must eat it, that it was good for me, that it would make me strong. In the end I grew rebellious and did not eat as much bread as I formerly had eaten, and ever since I have had to force myself to eat it.

I knew two children who had long been the despair of their mother because they would not eat oatmeal. She coaxed and pleaded, but to no avail. Finally she stopped mentioning the cereal they so disliked. Then one morning at breakfast the children found around each of their plates three dainty new dishes—a deep cereal dish filled with steaming oatmeal, a tiny pitcher full of cream and a small pretty sugar bowl containing sugar. It was great fun for each to prepare his own cereal from his own individual bowl and pitcher! They had not done this before. Neither child thought of expressing dislike. They ate with relish. Mother, wise as she was, appeared to take no notice. The next morning she placed another food before them and they set up a clamor for their oatmeal set—they wanted oatmeal!

My oldest little lad decided that he did not like baked custard, and so, of course, baby brother refused to eat it.

One day while baking, my eye rested on a row of small egg cups, attractive with their simple gold stripe decoration. I had an inspiration! Every child loves tiny things, so, I thought, if I bake the custards in those wee egg cups, the little lads will eat them without a question. And that is exactly what they did.

Three Favorite Salad Dressings.

Salad dressing, well made, is a secret every housewife should master. These recipes are first class in every regard.

Boiled Dressing—½ tsp. salts, 1 tsp. mustard, speck of red pepper, ½ tsp. flour, 2 egg yolks or 1 egg, 2 tsp. melted butter, 1-3 cup milk, ¼ cup vinegar. Mix dry ingredients, add slightly-beaten eggs and mix well. Add butter, then mix gradually, and add vinegar very slowly. Cook over boiling water until the mixture slightly thickens or coats the spoon. Strain if needed and use cold. If the mixture should curdle from cooking too long, it can be made smooth by beating with an egg beater.

Thousand Island Dressing—1 cup bottled salad dressing, 2 tsp. chopped parsley, 2 tsp. chili sauce, 2 tsp. chopped sweet pickles, 2 tsp. chopped pimento. Chill all ingredients, mix and serve over lettuce, or other salad greens.

Tartar Sauce—½ cup bottled mayonnaise dressing, 1 tsp. chopped onion, 1 tsp. chopped pickle, 1 tsp. chopped olives. Chill and mix all ingredients. Serve with canned or fresh fish.

Wet Rubber Cuts.

Wet rubber cuts much more easily than dry rubber, and this suggests the need for extra careful driving of the motor truck during the winter months when the roads are in bad condition. Sharp stones, car tracks, stray bits of metal or what not, will inflict serious cuts on wet rubber, when they might not bother the same tire at all if it were dry. Drive carefully over wet roads.

If the little daughter's winter set of white fur has turned dingy from wear it is easily cleaned at home. Put a gallon of cornmeal into a deep pan and set in the oven to get very hot; put the furs into this and rub just as if washing in soap and water, keep the meal hot while doing this; then with several good shakings the fur will be clean.

The first woman to travel in an aeroplane was Madame Paltier, who ascended with a male pilot at Turin in 1908.

Misard's Linctment Cures Colds, etc.

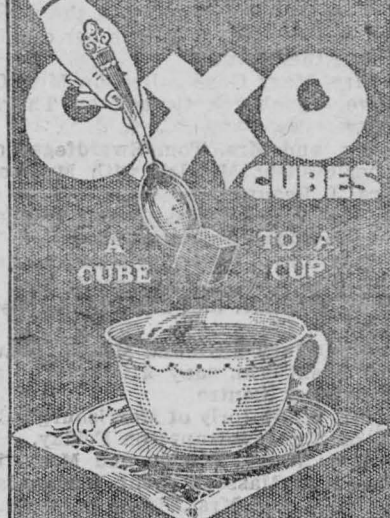

The aim of ventilation should be to achieve a circulation of air, without causing cold draught. There must be a means of egress for the foul air. Circulation is rapidly accomplished by the difference in temperature between the inside and the outside air. The greater the difference, the stronger is the current, so that a very small aperture in winter may secure as much ventilation as a wide-open window in summer.

In English houses, with their open fire grates, the chimney serves as an excellent channel for the removal of foul air. In Canada, where we have a furnace in the cellar and cook by gas, we have, while immensely improving the efficiency of our heating systems, not generally provided any means by which ventilation is combined therewith. Every furnace ought to have a pipe connecting with the outside air, which would bring in fresh air and warm it for distribution through the house. Then, if exits for the foul air were also provided, we should have an ideal ventilation system.

Unfortunately, we must, in the majority of existing houses, fall back on the windows to let in clean air. Although they are, at best, unsatisfactory, they can very often be improved. To begin with, the type of double window which has no aperture except three little holes or a slit, invariably choked with snow and ice, should be discarded. A sliding or hinged pane should always be provided. Then, if the upper inside window be opened, the air must circulate between the two windows before entering the room and thus a direct draught is avoided, while the volume of new air is readily regulated to suit the coldness of the day and the strength and direction of the wind.

Herbert Samuel, former British Postmaster General, believes that a great emigration to Canada will take place in the near future.

The "Silver City" is the name given to Algiers, the capital of Algeria, in North Africa. This city, which rises in terrace form from the sea, is built of stone and the buildings are white-washed. Seen from the ocean in the brilliant tropical sunshine, it gleams like silver.

Christmas is for everybody; so is The New Edison.

Christmas brings happiness to young and old; so does The New Edison.

Christmas comes but once a year, however, while The New Edison is ready every day—every hour—to charm you, entertain you, uplift you and satisfy your craving for good music.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

RE-CREATES the entire world of music. It brings to your home all that the most famous singers, instrumentalists and musical organizations could bring, except only their physical presence.

If you have never heard The New Edison, you have never heard RE-CREATED music. An Edison RE-CREATION means something entirely different from talking machines and ordinary phonographic records.

For your pleasure; for the pleasure and education of your children; for the enjoyment of your friends; let the New Edison be your Christmas gift this year.

Come in and examine the beautiful models—hear the art of your favorite singers and instrumentalists RE-CREATED—or, better yet, let us send The New Edison to your home to test at your leisure. No obligation, of course.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Comfort—The Mother's Friend.

HEATERS and RANGES MORASH FOUNDRY

Don't forget the Commencement Exercises at the Music Hall to-night (Friday) under the auspices of the Literary Society. Principal O'Neil, who is in charge, has been with us but a short time, and has proven himself a painstaking, progressive head of the efficient Collegiate staff. Evidence of our appreciation of their efforts should not be found wanting on this occasion. The Minister of Education will be present. Admission 35 and 50 cents.

All kinds of Christmas Goods at F. J. Wood's.

There will be no services in St. Johns, nor St. Paul's Lutheran church on Sunday the 21st. Sunday school will be held at the usual time, both at Riverside and Morrisburg. There will be no services in St. Johns on Christmas Eve, but there will be a distribution of gifts to the scholars of the Sunday School on Sunday, December 28th.

Perhaps you are figuring on something very special in Christmas cakes. If so, you will find just what you want at Geo. Cameron's.

It is announced that the midsummer examinations next year will be held in J. N. in order to have the examinations over before the hot weather begins.

Public School teachers in Ontario will demand a minimum salary of $1,000 a year. This was decided by a committee of the Ontario Educational Association at a special meeting in Toronto on Saturday last, and a deputation was appointed to wait on the Minister of Education with regard to the salary question.

Stationery and Envelopes; Neilson's Chocolates, and Neilson's Ice Cream for Christmas, at F. J. Wood's. Advice given by Hon. Mackenzie King to his party to place candidates in the field with as little delay as possible, does not indicate an early dissolution of parliament. It is regarded merely as the preliminary statement of a policy to be followed by the Liberals preceding the inauguration of a plan calling for more active preparation for a Federal contest whenever it comes.

Buy your Christmas Records and Victor Victrolas—the only real victrola on the market, and the best toned records made. Over 3000 selections to choose from at Marsh & Son, the big furniture store, Morrisburg, Ont.

Mr. Sam Agulnick, of the Dominion Upholstering Company, Ottawa, on his way to Toronto, stopped off in Morrisburg and spent Tuesday with relatives.

Mrs. J. A. MacLean, nee Eleanor Wickware, of Rosedale, Alta., arrived home on Friday last and expects to spend the winter with her parents here. Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Wickware.

We have been asked to announce that the ice will be in good condition for curling on Saturday night; also on the same night, a meeting of the skippers will be held in Dr. Gorrell's office at 8 p.m.

Send in the name of your holiday visitors. We will be glad to receive them, and your friends will be glad to know about them.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson has filed in court in Brockville, a counter petition against the return of G. Arthur Payne. The usual charges of bribery, etc., by agents are made. Mr. Payne filed a protest against the return of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson some time ago.

Sticks of dynamite were exploded in the St. Lawrence river on Tuesday in the vicinity of the place where Stephen Dennen of Ogdensburg, lost his life last week, but they failed to bring the body to the surface.

What about a Kodak or Camera for Christmas. A most acceptable and inexpensive gift that can be used the year round. A fine variety to select from.—R. H. Bradfield, The Hardware Store.

The embargo imposed by the Montreal Health Officials on passengers from Ontario went into effect last week, health officers boarding all trains from Toronto on the Grand Trunk at Coteau Junction and holding those unvaccinated within the last seven years for vaccination at Bonaventure station.

It is absolutely sure that you do not want anything stale for Christmas. Our assortment of Christmas candy is fresh and sweet.—George Cameron, The Old Reliable Bakery.

Mr. F. A. Wiggins was in town on Thursday.

Mr. Stuart Meikle arrived home last night from Montreal to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Meikle.

Now is the time to buy pop corn for Christmas. We have delicious pop corn that will pop, pop and pop some more.—R. H. Bradfield & Co., The Hardware Store.

"Mickey" at the Music Hall, Saturday, December 27th, matinee and evening—is the stellar attraction in the Movies this year. The matinee arranged to give the children the pleasure of seeing this clean play of humor and pathos at 15 cts. is a veritable banana. The price for adults, 50 cents, is cheaper than this picture has been shown in neighboring cities. This is the original company. They carry their own ma-

OPENING OF ONTARIO LEGISLATURE TO BE SIMPLE AFFAIR

The frills, pomp and display which age-old customs have fastened upon the ceremony that marks the opening of the Ontario Legislature are to be done away with by the United Farmer-Labor Government. At the next session of the Government most of the tinsel and show, and the atmosphere of social exclusiveness, which in the past has been characteristic of ceremonial attendant upon the opening day of the House will be disregarded. Instead, a simpler ceremony, from which the social element will in a sense be lacking, and which will be more in keeping with the democratic ideals of the people of this province, which carried them to power will mark the first session of each legislature.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO U. S. MUST BE PAID IN ADVANCE

Does the label on this paper tell a story? Does it convince or remind you that your subscription is paid to date or in advance? Or does it bring to your mind the fact that you have forgotten to step in and pay the arrears? If in the latter category we would appreciate your coming in very much.

Positively no papers will be forwarded to the United States after January 1st, 1920, unless paid in advance. American subscribers who wish to have their paper continued after this date, would do well to look up their label and see that the renewal is not neglected.
