Wife of Station Agent Instantly Killed Today

This morning about 6.45 Mrs. Cowan, wife of T.H. Cowan, station agent at this place met her death in a very tragic manner when she was hit by a westbound freight train directly in front of the station and portions of the remains scattered along the track to a point 25 or 30 feet west of the public crossing. There were no eye witnesses of the accident as far as can be learned.

The train that struck the victim was in charge of Conductor H. Rodney, Engineer Derbyshire and Fireman F. Prunner; none of whom were aware of the happening until some time later upon their arrival in Smiths Falls.

Mrs. Cowan, who has been in poor health for some time is said to have arisen about half past six, made the fire and put the kettle on preparatory to getting breakfast. Why it was necessary for her to go across the tracks is not known.

The remains were lying between the west bound rails where they were mistaken by several who thought some other object had been struck.

Dr. Hamilton of Brinston, coroner, was notified and it was not until his arrival that positive identification was made by the finding of a ring recognized as belonging to Mrs. Cowan.

The deceased was a very fine woman, very retiring and had not become as well known in the community as she deserved since coming here with her husband some five years ago.

Mr. Cowan is a veteran in C.P.R. service who will be retired from active service within a very short time. There will be no inquest.

Surviving are the husband, four sisters. Mrs. Shields (Margaret), Mrs. J. Shields, (Mary), the Misses H. and L. Carroll; and four brothers, Insp. Ed. Carroll of the RCMP, Ottawa, Bill, Chris and John, besides several nephews and nieces, Gordon Shields of the RCASC and Allan Shields, former professional hockey player.

Whitesied.

In addition to her husband there are two sons and three daughters: Leslie, Rae, Esther, Frances, Della, to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother.

Floral offerings were received from the family, Aunt Mary, Sunday School, Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Presley, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton and Arnold Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Baker and afmily, Mr. and Mrs. H W. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Baker, Neighbours and the Robert Woods family.

ONTARIO FIRE WASTE WEAKENS WAR EFFORT

Since the outbreak of the war 1,500 fires in industry have cost Ontario nearly $7,000,000 in direct destruction of buildings and their contents. In this connection, ratepayers are being urged to lessen the loss by influencing municipal councils to provide better fire protection. Last year Canada's fire loss totalled more than $31,000,000 in property with a loss in lives of 304 bringing the death toll by fire to more than 2,800 in a ten year period. Last year 15,478 fires in Ontario—industrial and dwelling—caused a loss of $10,466,000, an increase of nearly $1,500,000 over the previous year. In the past six months there has been a lessening in the fire loss and in this particular tribute is being paid to the development of the ARP fire service under the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee and the Federal Office of Civil ARP. At a Federal expenditure of about $500,000, some 360 ARP firemen have been distributed in over 100 Ontario municipalities. While this equipment has been allotted to points deemed vulnerable to air attack or particularly vital to the war effort, it will be an important and permanent contribution to Ontario's fire protection after the war. ARP firemen enrollment now totals 5,581 trained men, who act as supplements to municipal fire brigades.

OPEN WINDOW STEALS COAL

The great menace in fuel conservation would appear to be the open window although the benefits of fresh air, not to mention sunshine, has come in for warm econiums on many an occasion. Just now Canada requires roughly 47,000,000 tons of coal to tide this country over the winter and spring months and just what to do about it is worrying the officers of the National Coal Conservation Committee. To this end they have started out by devious means to save 4,000,000 tons of coal or, reckoned by miner production, 2,000,000 man days. The campaign has as its objective the saving of one ton in five. In industrial plants open windows will be taboo and in hospitals rooms will be aired at different times in the day rather than leaving open windows constantly. In respect to schools it has been agreed that rooms are kept too warm in draught from open windows. If 40 children enter a room where the temperature is 70 degrees their body heat will raise that temperature by 10 degrees in a comparatively short time, officials say. If the temperature is watched closely and radiators adjusted, the room will be kept comfortable, it will be unnecessary to open windows and coal will be saved. The committee is convinced that schools, now using 250,000 tons of coal a year, could save one ton in five this winter without affecting children's health, except perhaps for the better. The conservationists say they have high hopes for saving in hotels, which now are examining a plan for coal conservation. Under this plan temperatures may be held to 65 degrees in the daytime and 68 degrees in the evening. Maids would turn off radiators when guests are out for the day, and temperatures would be reduced after 11 p.m. to discourage guests keeping their windows open. These are a few of the plans underway for your protection and comfort. So save fuel and put the money in war bonds.

AGRICULTURAL WINTER OUTLOOK NOT SO BAD

The outlook so far as Ontario is concerned is not so dark as at first predicted according to the report of the Agricultural Department. Supplies of roughages for winter feed requirements have been declared sufficient in every section, but there are shortages of feed grain, due to poor oat, barley and wheat crops. Milk production has been decreased and purchases of feed cattle are below those of last year. To meet shortages, Western Grain is being imported, but a large quantity will be required yet to maintain production of animal products. Potato acreage for 1943 in Ontario is reported as 116,000 acres, the lowest figure in 60 years. A frost on September 11 practically finished the flue-cured tobacco harvest in the Norfolk area, as well as much burley and dark tobacco in the Chatham-London district. Reports indicate that 20 percent of the flue-cured tobacco was frozen in the Norfok district, resulting in the loss of approximately 10,500,000 pounds of leaf. Burley losses in the Chatham area is estimated at 325,000 pounds. The report estimates the total Ontario flue-cured crop at 55,000 planted acres, expected to yield approximately 1.100 pounds per acre or a total of 50,000,000 pounds when the Norfolk losses have been deducted. The sugar beet crop escaped damage in the September frosts, and shows no sign of blight or disease. Crop estimates are nine tons per acre or a total of 83,592 tons on 9,288 acres. Final payments on the 1942 crop were made in September after the molasses was sold and brought the average factory prices of beets up to $7.89 per ton. Since the average yield in 1942 was 11.89 tons per acre, the crop value last year was $93.81 per acre. In Western Ontario, the apple production estimate is placed at a 16 percent increase over 1942, in Spy, McIntosh, Wealthy and Stark varieties. The grape crop shows indications of being 22 percent lighter and the peach crop 73 percent lighter than 1942. Pears have decreased 31 percent in yield and plums 43 percent.

Letter To The Editor

(From the Barrie Examiner of September 23, 1943).

To the Editor,
The Barrie Examiner.

Sir: I see by the Globe and Mail that the C.C.F. had a meeting in a Toronto hotel last week-end where they decided to appoint rural and urban organizers and make a determined effort to win farm support as part of an immediate campaign for four months.

The first thing that strikes me is the fact that they thus admit having got little support from the farmers.

Another thing (and one which seems new in politics) is the holding of one of their most important business meetings on Sunday. About the only reference I could see to Saturday business was a dinner where some 700 C.C.F. members took part. Choosing Sunday was utterly against the Fourth Commandment. Such a choice, made to suit the convenience of the lawyers, teachers, ex-teachers, professors, labor organizers, etc., etc. who seem to be the driving force behind the C.C.F. certainly does not appeal to the farmers. Many times a year such an amount of time as is set apart for Sunday would be immensely valuable to us, especially in uncertain weather at harvest yet very few farmers would ever think of not keeping the Lord's Day.

Another thing I notice in the report is that there is no mention made of pressing the war—even though all should realize the great need of putting forth our very best efforts to keep the enemy on the run so as to hasten the day of complete victory.

We farmers are sometimes charged with being "sot" in our ways. Maybe so. But there are a lot of old truths and beliefs that are worth holding fast to.

COUPONS TO EXPIRE ON 30TH NOVEMBER

It has been announced that all sugar and tea or coffee coupons remaining in No. 2 Ration Books will expire in the hands of consumers on November 30. Consumers having such coupons in their possession but not really requiring the rationed goods which they represent are urged, however, to destroy them rather than cash them as there is continued need for conservation of these commodities.

WHAT MAKES A NATION GREAT?
By Alexander Blackburn

Not serried ranks with flags unfurled
Not armoured ships that gird the world,
Not hoarded wealth nor busy mills,
Not cattle on a thousand hills,
Not sages wise, nor schools nor laws,
Not boasted deeds in freedom's cause
All these may be, and yet the state
In the eye of God be far from great.

That land is great which knows the Lord;
Whose songs are guided by His word;
Where justice rules 'twixt man and man,
Where love controls in art and plan;
Where, breathing in his native air,
Each soul finds joy in praise and prayer—
Thus may our country, good and great,
Be God's delight—man's best estate.

FARMS SUPPLY OIL FOR NAVY.

Rape seed oil, sometimes referred to as "Colza" oil is used in Canada chiefly in compounding high grade marine-engine lubricants. Approximately 2,000,000 pounds of the oil were imported annually from South America for use by the Canadian Navy. Although varieties of rape were tested for oil-seed products at the Dominion Experimental Farms during 1941 and 1942 and much valuable information gained as to the suitability of the seed under Canadian conditions, it was not until 1943 that rape was grown in Canada as a commercial crop as a war measure at the request of the office of Oils and Fats Administrator.

It was estimated that approximately 10,000 acres of this crop would be needed to provide sufficient oil for Canadian needs. Sufficient seed was available in 1943 to seed about 4,000 acres. Most of this seed was harvested from fields and test plots of the Dominoin Experimental Farms and Stations, supplemented by purchased seed. A total of 43,604 pounds of seed was distributed to growers. This year's yield of rape is expected to be over 2,300,000 pounds.

Ways to Prevent Soil Washing

Soil washing or sheet erosion is the most common form of soil wastage from the sandy loam soils in Eastern Canada. Heavy rainfalls on cultivated soil cause a movement of fine particles of soil down every slope. The steeper the slope the more rapid the movement of surface water from either rain or melted snow.

By ploughing and cultivating across the slope of the land or by following contours the movement of water is delayed so that it soaks into the ground or moves more slowly to lower levels. The ridging up of land along the contours in the autumn prevents washing. On moderate slopes the sowing of fall rye immediatel- after digging potatoes will retain much soil that otherwise would have been carried away. This rye can be pastured in the spring, plowed down as green manure for another crop, or harvested for grain.

Steep slopes should be kept permanently in grass or planted to trees to retain the fertile soil. Such land when valuable enough to be retained in crop production can be terraced to retard the movement of water down hill. The spillways from terraces should remain in tough fibrous rooted grasses and be so made and kept that the soil is protected against free running water. These spillways should be graded so that the water will flow down them and avoid any steep decent, removing the surplus water by uniform slope to a stream or outlet.

Briefly: Stop soil washing by slowing up the movement of surface water. Locate contours and work along them. Use grass, grain and trees to retain the surface soil, the nation's most valuable possession. Stop all gullies in the making by diverting small streams with snow, earth and other materials or direct the water by terracing and spillways. Prevention of washing away is the cheapest method of preserving soil fertility.

Sailor Sends Thanks From Australia

Australia,
Sept., 15, 43.

Dear Mrs. Morris: Writing to thank you and your fellow workers in Chesterville for the "Red Cross" ditty bags I received on the 15th day of August. The mitts in my bag were knitted by you and they will be very much appreciated on my return to Vancouver.

The reason for the late issue of the ditty bags is that this is a new ship and is making her maiden voyage. The bags were not handed out until we were at sea so that it was impossible for any of us to send our thanks any sooner.

Perhaps I should tell you a little about myself so you will realize where your mitts have finally landed.

I was born near Wilkie, Sask. in 1908; in 1914 moved to Big River, Sask., where I lost my father in 1921. In 1923 I went to Glasgow, in Scotland to finish my education and serve my apprenticeship as an engineer. I completed the latter in 1932 and for two years I wandered the streets of Glasgow looking for work. In 1934 I quarrelled with my famiy and on getting an oppointment at sea as a jr. engineer I left home for good. Until 1942 I served in all capacities up to 2nd in the City Line of Glasgow. I left The City Line to take a commission as lieut. (E) RC NR. but the British Ministry of War Transport refused to release me and sent me away Chief. On returning to the U.K. I saw the notice inviting Canadians to return and man Canadian ships. I put forward my name and was accepted as Chief Engineer. At the moment I am second engineer because there are a lot of borrowed Chiefs and no seconds and I should have had to wait too long for an appointment. As it is I am promised promotion here after this voyage.

During my travels I have visited most parts of the world, but there has always been the longing to return to Canada and now I am happy with my own people although sometimes a bit lonely as I have no relatives here and 20 years scatters ones ones friends.

Although I am a sailor I do not drink or swear and I have not a wife in every port. (I have not been to every port yet). Needless to say my time in port is usually spent at pictures or dances and sightseeing at the week-end.

Your gift is most acceptable and doubly appreciated for it brings to me that touch of homely kindness that is so devoid in a sailor's life. Many of the ditty bags on this ship came from Chesterville so on behalf of the men under me who do not write I wish to thank your branch of the Red Cross for their kindness.

Thanking you again for giving your time and services to us unknown service men.

Yours truly,
John B. Newton,
(2nd Engineer.)

Tanning a Hide

There are those who would claim that the only raw materials needed in tanning a hide are a well chosen switch and a strong right arm. Colloquially speaking they may be right, but technically they're all wrong.

Early days of leather making in Canada saw the hardy self-sufficient pioneers fashioning their own shoes and deerskin moccasins. At the time of the first Canadian census, back in 1666, there was about a score of cobblers serving a population of some 300 inhabitants. Harness, articles of clothing and luggage were also important leather products of the day. These early artisians used oak bark and leaves, sumac leaves, and the bark of hemlock, chestnut and spruce in their simple tanning processes. The same materials are used to some extent even today. However, through the years leather has acquired such a multiplicity of uses that manufacturers have searched the world over for materials which will produce the highest qualities of finished articles. Chrome and other mineral tanning chemicals are used but the processing of by far the largest proportion of leathers depends upon tannins from plants.

Vegetables tannins have long been the basis of scientific research and the war only served to intensify this study. One of the most important is quebraca, a product of South America. Quebraco tannin is regarded as especially valuable for shoes when blended with other tannins such as chestnut, because it imparts great qualities of strength and durability. When used alone, however, it makes the leather brittle and tends to burn the feet. Quebraco is also extensively used by tanners of sheepskin leathers, for properly blended it yields a light leather well adapted to take on all varieties of dyes. In the solid form this tanning agent is reported to be the most highly astringent tanning material known.

Quebraco is not the only vegetable tannin. Mangrove and divi-divi also from Latin America are promising sources. Of much less commercial importance than quebraco, divi-divi first gained widespread recognition about 20 years ago. Now with the war having cut off usual sources of tannins such as gambier, valonia and myrobalans, divi-divi importations into North America have again increased.

Here in Canada over 4600 persons are engaged in the leather industry which is for the most part centred in Ontario. The output value of 216 plants in operation in 1941 reached almost $34 million. About six million hides weighing over 117 million pounds were used during the year. Not all the hides used in the leather industry are of domestic production. In that year about two million were imported. In the first seven months of this year leather footwear production in Canada totalled more than 20,250,000 pairs. Women's shoes comprise the bulk of production, with 1,307,000 pairs in July alone, compared with 893,000 for men, 343,240 for misses and children, 179,000 for babies and infants and 126,000 pairs for boys and youths.

No Other Difficulty.

Film Star—Think of it! Just think of it! They want to photograph me in my bath!

LEAVING OUT LOOSE COUPONS IS ILLEGAL

Cases have been reported of houses leaving out loose ration coupons, along with their money, for the delivery boy to pick up when he brings the groceries or meat. This practice is contrary to the regulations, as coupons must not be detached except in the presence of the dealer or his agent.

Mary had a little lamb—
You've heard this oft before—
And then she passed her plate again
And had a little more.

Understood.

A traveller connected with a cycle company was expecting an "interesting event" in the family, and before going away asked the nurse to wire, "Gent's model arrived" if a boy came and "Lady's model" if a girl.

The wire he received staggered him. There was one word—"Tandem."

FARMERS AND FARM WORKERS

If Your Farm Work has Slackened for the Winter, You Are Needed Elsewhere in Essential Employment

Highly essential work—very important in Canada's war effort and for the welfare of the Nation—is threatened with shortages of workers. One of the few sources of men available for other high priority jobs is those men on the farm who will not be needed at home during the Fall and Winter. Heavy needs must be met in many lines—producing fuel wood and other necessary forest products; in base metal mines, in food processing, in railway track maintenance. If you live on a farm and are not needed at home during the Fall and Winter, you are urged to answer this national appeal.

Farmers engaged in essential work during the off season will be allowed to return home when needed. Also, those on postponement under Mobilization Regulations will continue on postponement while in approved essential work during the slack on the farm.

Please answer this vital call NOW.

Christianity Modern Style

Not only in large cities do temptation and lawlessness occur. From the wide, windswept prairies of Canada's West, to the rocky, storm-ridden shores of Newfoundland, the wanton spirit of tempestuous crime and destruction appears, to shatter homes and break up human relationships. Weakness and inability to stick to the job in hand often lead youths to "kick over the traces" and try to achieve success the easy way—(or what they believe to be the way) by stealing a car and making for the nearest town; or by taking advantage of their defenceless neighbors to loot and rob.

Boredom, inactivity and lack of resourcefulness in smaller communities frequently lead to petty criminal practices being started, more for "something to do" than with viscious intent. But a youth who starts along this path finds the law on his trail, and because he is known as a "first offender" he is sometimes treated with more leniency than the older, more hard-boiled criminal.

First offenders often come from farms, from small communities or paper or mining towns. Work is often scarce, and to steal or pillage is a quicker way of making money than the long, steady grind.

When the Salvation Army comes to the help of the farm boy, or the "small town" boy who is about to serve his first term in jail, he is bitter, disillusioned and terribly hurt. He knows he has done wrong but he is also a potential enemy of all innocent persons, because he is determined to fight back, and carry off his sentence with bravado and clenched teeth. The Army is kind to him. It never condemns, and it never lectures a fellow when he is down. Of the 10,585 visits made to Canadian prisons last year, many were made in the interests of boys whose steps had led them from the byways of rural life into the highways of uniquity.

Instead of being committed to the penitentiary 1,502 men and women were remanded to The Army's care by magistrates during the same period of time. Ceaseless contact is mantained between a boy behind bars and his anxious family in the outside world, and The Army has gone out of its way many times to seek out the family of an erring boy in order to offer consolation and practical help. In this way, the boy feels he has a friend who will intercede for him when his sentence is up.

The Salvation Army is instrumental in getting many convicts' sentences reduced, by inspiring good behavior and obedience. The usual ten day a month reduction in prison time for good behavior is often due to the regular visits paid to prisoners by Salvation Army officers. 10,585 such visits were made in one year alone.

When his sentence has been served, a young boy or an old man, no matter what his circumstances in life, can turn to The Army for help. Indicative of its lively interest in the ex-prisoner's welfare is the number of prisoners met in one year upon their discharge - - 6,715.

Through its regular contact with the boys behind bars, by visits, religious services, heart to heart talks, and distributed literature, The Salvation Army does a great deal to reclaim cast-offs and would-be foes of man. Little known is the work done by the Army of Mercy to find homes and jobs for ex-prisoners; to follow up a man's life after he has cast his prison suit aside; to help a "lifer" back into the normal ways of living.

The eighteen Industrial departments operating from coast to coast in Canada are a haven for many men who have forgotten what it's like to earn a living or how it feels to be free. These departments have a three fold function: They collect salvage, good used furniture and clothing, newsprint and bric-a-bric of all kinds, thereby avoiding waste: there men rebuild, paint, mend and renovate these articles in such a way that they have a saleable value, thereby giving poor people a chance to purchase needed things for very little money. Tin foil, bottle caps, electric light bulb tops, newspapers, magazines, metal scraps and "junk" are sold for salvage. Nothing is wasted. Everything from bird cages to baby carriages comes the way of this department.

The final and perhaps most important reason for the existence of the Industrial Departments is that it employs many men who would otherwise be unemployable. Some have one arm; others artificial limbs; some men have the sight of only one eye, and others are too old to be employed in any other way. Many ex-convicts get a fresh start in life by taking their first free steps in the direction of a job at the "Industrial".

The Salvation Army Home Front Appeal is your opportunity to lend a helping hand to those, unlike yourself, whose lives have betrayed them, and who are trying to get back their self respect and to take their place once again in the world of free men.

A Fault

"You were always a fault finder," growled the wife.

"Yes, dear," responded the husband, meekly; "I found you."

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Neil Morrison, recently appointed CBC Supervisor of Talks, is a graduate of the University of Manitoba. He joined CBC in 1940, after post-graduate work at McGuill, and was made assistant to the Supervisor of Farm Broadcast Department the following year. Having successfully developed the group listening technique which has been a notable feature of National Farm Radio Forum broadcasts, Mr. Morrison now returns to head the department with which he was first associated on joining CBC.

Bond Buyers Are Builders

Regular readers of the Press in Canada will have noted by now that the National War Finance Committee is placing a new emphasis on self-interest in the Fifth Victory Loan Campaign. This is being done of course without discounting the importance of public war bond subscriptions in the quest of victory.

Honest judgment reveals that most of the bonds sold since the start of the war have been bought by citizens for reasons indicated by self-interest. There may have been many who were not particularly anxious to secure 3 percent interest but it seems fair to say that these bought in the knowledge that they were protecting themselves from the domination of predatory nations on the loose in Europe and the far east. But at this point in the war when victory seems to be so much nearer and peace time conditions are much nearer more and more of us in Canada are realizing the tightly bound relationship between our savings in war years and our well-being in the months and years which follow the day of peace.

Of course, from the very beginning of Canada's program of public borrowing, the Minister of Finance and his colleagues who have been directing the sale of government securities have pointed to war savings as one of the salvations of post-war prosperity. Our manufacturers and other producers of consumer goods will not be able to build up staffs of employees and big payrolls unless the great mass of consumers shall have ready cash to buy what they need and want.

Happily a very large portion of Canadian people have a back-log of these savings, enough to create a tremendous market for post-war goods of all descriptions. But we should not overlook an obvious truism, that the greater the average war savings in Canada the greater will be the post-war market with all its attendant increase in jobs and wages.

Wise Canadians will put every available dollar into Fifth Victory Loan Bonds, not only for their own immediate post-war benefit, but as a good country-wide co-operative move to ensure a long term period of maximum employment and maximum prosperity.

The Last Straw

A certain couple, having been married about 10 years, lived a life made up for the most part of quarrels and bickerings. One day the husband visited a friend whose home life was entirely different.

On leaving, he said to his friend, "I've enjoyed my visit. You seem so happy: how do you do it?"

"It's quite simple," replied his friend. "I make a fuss over my wife and kiss her quite often."

The husband decided to try this method, and when, on arriving home, his wife opened the door, he kissed her. His wife burst into tears.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Oh, dear!" sobbed the wife. "Everything has gone wrong today. I fell down and broke a lot of China, the maid has given notice, and now, you come home drunk!"

ONLY EVAPORATED MILK UNDER PRIORITY SYSTEM

Condensed milk is not affected by the recent order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board which established a system of priorities with the issue of "G" coupons, to cover the distribution of evaporated milk. Neither condensed milk, fluid milk, skimmed milk, evaporated skimmed milk nor any other milk derivative is covered by the order. The "G" coupons are not in the regular ration book as only priority users are entitled to them. The object of the plan is to ensure supplies for infants and medical cases and to increase supplies in areas which normally depend upon evaporated milk.

A U-Boat Kill

Squadron Leader John Strachey RAF

The crew I was going to fly with was briefed after breakfast. The Intelligence Officer pointed to a red arrow on his wall map. That arrow marked the position of the convoy—scores and scores of ships ploughing along, on their way to the Mediterranean front, no doubt. On that morning the convoy, with its sea and air escort, was just about opposite the northwest corner of Spain. We were ordered to patrol an area between the convoy and the Biscay ports, out of which U-boats come.

Our Sunderland flew out to sea in brilliant sunshine, but within an hour a cloud bank began to loom up ahead of us. We were glad to see the clouds. They gave cover. They gave cover for stalking the U-boats. And they gave us cover for avoiding the enemy's long-range fighters, the prowling Junker 88s. For these patrols off the Biscay ports are becoming complicated. They are getting a little like what the scientists call the "Balance of Nature". One species preys on another, but is itself preyed on by a third species. The weasel goes for the rabbit, but the hawk swoops on the weasel.

In the Bay of Biscay the ultimate prey, or prize, for which everyone is fighting, is some convoy of merchant ships with its cargoes of thousands of men, tanks, aircraft and guns. The U-boats are the weasels, seeking their chance to get their teeth into the soft flesh of an unprotected convoy. But the U-boat weasels must think about the Sunderlands, the Liberators, the Halifaxes and the other lond-range aircraft of Coastal Command. These are the hawks hunting them with their showers of depth charges. The hawks also have their enemies. They must beware of the Ju. 88s. which rush out from the Brittany airfields in swarms of half a dozen or a dozen, to intercept them. But not even the Ju. 88s. can feel safe. On the contrary, our own long-range Beaufighters and Mosquitoes are out hunting them. So the U-boats hunt the convoys, the Sunderlands hunt the U-boats, the Ju. 88s. hunt the Sunderlands, and the Beaufighters hunt the Ju. 88s.

Once in the twelve hours of our patrol we saw a ship's lifeboat lying derelict upon the Atlantic swell, a silent reminder of what we'd come out to prevent. But that was that. For the rest it was sky and sea; sky and sea merging into each other in combinations of grays and greens; and a shifting, wayward coming and going of mist and vapors. Some hours from home the horizon got wider and wider and a long line of open blue sky appeared to the east. I thought that our great friend, the clouds, might be going to desert us before we got home. But the sky never became bare of cover, and at length a mark on the horizon dead ahead grew into the outline of the Scilly Isles and we were virtually home.

It was the most ordinary—and therefore the most typical—patrol imaginable. The crews of that squadron, and of many others, are doing them daily and nightly, from a dozen bases round the British Isles. Nine times out of ten it is like that—but not the tenth time.

So you can imagine what I felt like when I heard that on their very next patrol my crew had killed their first U-boat. And what a kill it was!

This is what happened.

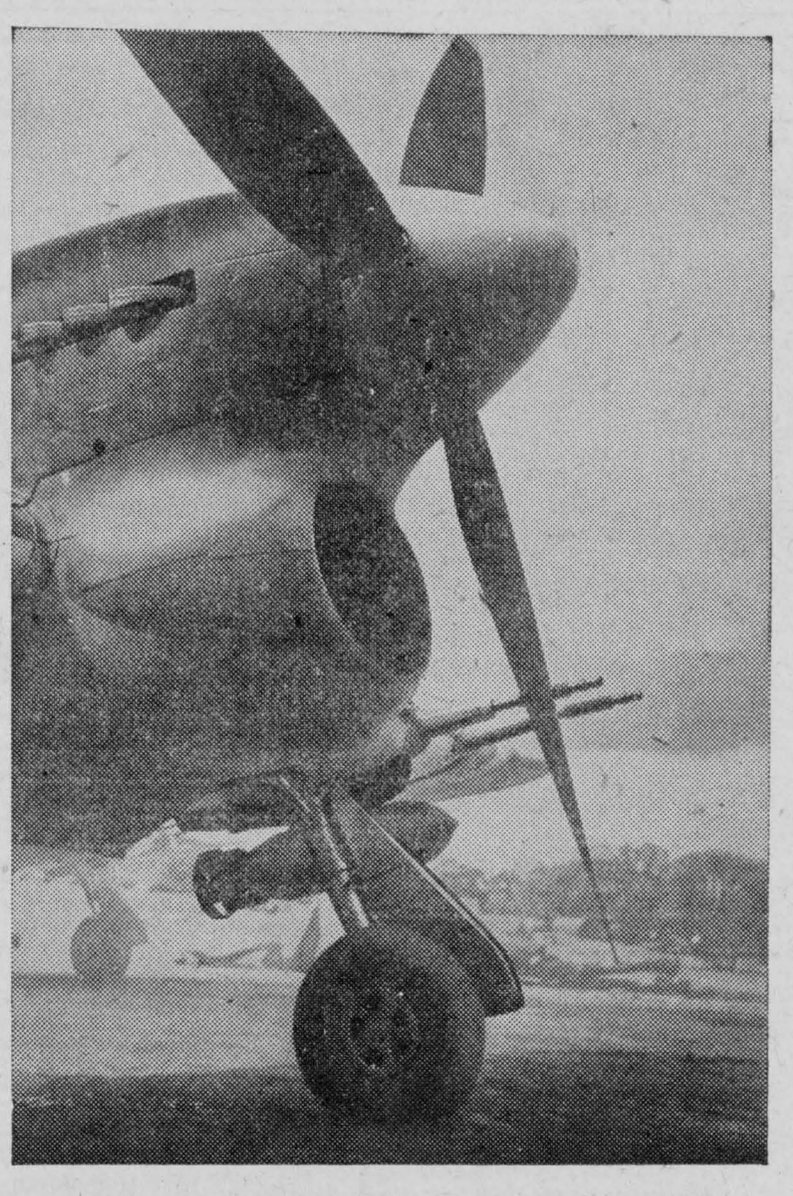
A Halifax from another Coastal Command station sighted the white wake of a surfaced U-boat somewhere out in the bay—just about where we'd been three days before. The Captain of that Halifax moved quickly. He saw the U-boat at 3:50 o'clock six miles away. By 3:52 he was directly over it, letting go his first stick of depth charges from eighty feet and blazing at it with all his guns. Plumes of water towered up two hundred feet into the air, as the depth charges went off—the first two to port and the rest to starboard, abreast of the conning tower. As the waters fell back they saw the U-boat rocking from stem to stern, wallowing in the queer sort of pool of still water at the centre where the charges had blown.

Back came the Halifax and another volley of charges fell around the submarine. But these U-boats are tough. She was obviously badly damaged and unable to dive but was not necessarily sinking. And the Halifax had no more depth charges. She steep-turned round the U-boat firing all her machine-guns at her. For now they saw the Germans running along the decks to man their own guns, and soon bursts of cannon fire came up at them. But they were not hit.

After a while all fire ceased from the now stopped U-boat. The Halifax went on circling. But she could do little more. Long before this however, she had reported by wireless what had happened. At 7.15 she saw—and no doubt the U-boat crew saw it too—another Halifax coming up. Within a minute first one then another shower of depth charges were tumbling down, and again the U-boat was lost in vast fountains of water. These attacks too were not conclusive. Indeed they saw the U-boat begin very slowly to get under way again. And now neither Halifax had any more depth charges left.

But at 7:25 the circling Halifaxes saw first one and then a second Sunderland come droning up. They weren't sure if the first one had seen the U-boat and flew very anxiously after it to guide it in to the attack. But the Sunderlands had seen it all right. In the second Sunderland were my friends Flying Officers French and Fox and their crew. They saw the first Sunderland twice attack the slowly zig-zagging U-boat. Then they had their turn. First they let go four depth charges. That stopped the U-boat. Then ran back over her using their machine-guns. Finally they came over again and let go their last charges. They had to make certain this time; and they did. Their report read:—"Second depth charge of stick entered water forward of conning tower, close to side of U-boat. U-boat shuddered as this depth charge exploded. After spray subsided thirty or forty members of crew seen in water."

That was how it was for my friends in the Sunderland. But what must it have been like for that U-boat crew? Poor devils. No one wants to gloat over their deaths. But in this war as in the last the breaking of their spirit may prove to be the first crack in German morale. And imagine what this action must have been like for them—four huge four-engined aircraft circling them for an hour and a half as they lay crippled. If they tried to come on deck to man their guns, one or other of the aircraft would dive to rake their decks with machine-gun fire. And every ten minutes or so would come the horrible, rending crash of stick after stick of depth charges detonating round them. At last a final crash, and their hull split sickeningly under the hammer of water which the underwater explosion drove at them.



A NEW JOB FOR THE DEADLY R. A. F. TYPHOON FIGHTER: TWO BOMBS INCREASE HER "NUISANCE VALUE"

The R.A.F. Typhoon fighter which has shown itself master of any fighter the Luftwaffe can produce both in attack and defence has added to its armoury two 250 lb. bombs slung on racks fitted under the wings. With this added "nuisance value" Hawker Typhoon as fighter-bomber is continuing its already distinguished career of destruction among the transport sytsem of occupied Europe.

Poultry Comfort Has Wide Meaning

Whether the poultry house is permanent or temporary, comfort for poultry is necessary at all times in order that the highest egg production may be obtained. So far as poultry are concerned, the meaning of the word comfort has a wide application and includes many essentials such as housing, insulation, ventilation, feeding, warmth and the avoidance of overcrowding. In the matter of housing the first principals are insulation and ventilation—insulation to conserve the natural heat from the birds and ventilation to insure pure air and the removal of excess moisture. A cold house is apt to be a damp house and poultry particularly require a degree of warmth in order to do well. The birds have a high body temperature—106 degrees—and an accompanying rapid respiration. Much of the water they drink—and clean fresh water is an important item—is exhaled from the lungs.

Overcrowding is a common danger, and in the arrangement of the poultry house yearlings and pullets of different ages should be penned separately. While any room or outbuilding that is dry, tight-walled and well lighted can be adapted for poultry, the same care has to be exercised as in any specially designed house. Windows of the house should face south. Pens of good depth are preferable, whether the house is a two or three-storey house or not.

MAXIMUM PRICES FOR ONIONS FIXED

Maximum prices at which onions may be sold by growers, shippers, wholesalers and retailers have been established by the Prices Board. The shipping-point prices fixed for Canadian-grown onions are uniform for all part of the Dominion, varied only by transportation costs from production areas, and percentage mark-ups are listed for sales by wholesalers and retailers. Specified price adjustments are permitted on sales between December 1 and June 30 to cover storage costs and to promote uniformity of supply throughout the year. Green onions with tops and having a diameter of 1⅜ inches or less are not affected. When a grower or shipper sells to a retailer, he may add a mark-up of not more than 12½ percent. of his selling price. If he sells direct to a consumer he is permitted to take an additional mark-up of 25 percent. of his selling price, the same as that allowed a retailer.

Saving For Bonds

Hello Homemakers! Do you sometimes feel that you are handicapped in buying a Victory Bond at the time of issue out of your savings. Canning and preserving have probably depleted your budget but you too are conscious of the great investment your country needs to take care of your girl or boy in the services.

A suggestion is to plan plain Nutri-thrift menus and have a bank box on the table labelled "Mess Fees". From these donations you will make the special pie or cake. From your savings you will put away a monthly contribution towards a Victory Bond. A few saving suggestions;

1. Use oven for complete meals.
2. Use a collander for a steamer when certain products are being reheated.
3. Cook sufficient staple products for a meal during the next day.
4. Old fashioned stews and skillet meals also save fuel.
5. Serve combination luncheon dishes, for example: cooked corn and stewed tomatoes and cheese.
6. Measure carefully.
7. Reduce electricity when product is boiling; turn switches off a few minutes before end of cooking period to save fuel.
8. Store all left-overs wisely: cool, then place in a covered container in refrigerator.

Nutri-thrift supper suggestions:

1. Hamburger with gravy, fried potatoes, steamed tomatoes, rice dessert.
2. Savory spaghetti with vegetables, brown bread, applesauce, doughnuts.
3. Pumpkin soup, cottage cheese, sliced tomatoes, toast, stewed pears.
4. Meat loaf, browned potatoes, oven-steamed onions, shortcake
5. Braised short ribs, cornflake potatoes, oven-cooked turnips, baked pears in maple syrup.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. C.M. asks: Recipe for quince jelly and why did my mixture not jell last year?

Answer:

Quince Jelly

Quinces require long cooking to become tender. They may be cooked in the fireless cooker under steam pressure; in both cases they acquire a rich dark red colour. Quinces have too little acid and too much pectin to make a desirable jelly when the juice alone is used. An equal amount or twice as much tart apple improves the flavour. Equal parts of cranberry quince and apple juice give a jelly of rich red colour and delicious flavour. Cut the quinces in small pieces, add sufficient water to float them and cook them until they are tender. Drain off the juice. Use two-thirds as much sugar as fruit juice. Proceed according to the directions for jelly making. The pulp may be used for conserve or butter.

Quince Preserves.

3 quarts sugar, 3 cups water, 4 quarts prepared fruit.

Never cook quinces in syrup before steaming or boiling them in water until tender, as sugar hardens the uncooked fruit. Scrub the quinces with a stiff brush, wash, pare, core and quarter, dropping the pieces into cold water to prevent discolouration. Save all the good parings and cores for jelly. Measure the prepared fruit put it into a preserving kettle, cover with cold water and cook until the fruit is soft, then skim out and drain. Save the water to be used with parings, cores and gnarly fruit for jelly. Make a syrup of ¾ cup sugar to 1 cup water and boil for five minutes. Add the drained quince quarters and cook rapidly until the fruit is clear. Pour into clean, hot jars and seal. Many persons prefer quince preserves made with an equal measure of sweet apples or firm pears. The method of making is the same as for quinces alone.
