John A. "Jack" Campbell Dies In Kemptville

Residents of Winchester Township heard with regret of the sudden death at noon Wednesday of John (Jack) Alexander Campbell of Kemptville, from a heart attack. He had just recovered from pneumonia and had been out Monday.

Born at Ormond, a son of the late Alpen Campbell and his wife Grace McDonald, he was in his 65th year.

He was a Liberal in politics and twice contested the seat in Dundas, in 1911 and the byelection of 1914. He had never married.

Surviving are three brothers, Robert at Ottawa; Daniel and James of Ormond; also two sisters, Mrs. Wallace Campbell of Russell and Mrs. J. C. Murphy (Bessie), of Battleford.

Finch Red Cross Campaign Well Under Way

Under the auspices of the Finch Township Red Cross Society, the local campaign for funds is well under way, already many of the canvassers appointed by the executive have completed their duties and report the appeal for funds is being generally responded to.

The objective for the township of Finch has been set at $1000 and it is sincerely hoped that this objective will be largely oversubscribed, as yet no definite figures have been released by the treasurer, Mr. Bernard Grady.

In most sections of the township canvassers have been somewhat hampered in their work owing to the bad condition of the roads. More canvassers than usual were appointed in order that their territories would be smaller. It is expected that every home in the Township will be visited by the end of this week.

Mobile Blood Clinic Coming to Chesterville

The Canadian Red Cross has requested our local unit to make arrangements to have the Mobile Unit Clinic operate in Chesterville every six weeks. On account of the shortage of gas, tires and manpower, there are not enough blood donors going to the regular clinics and as the war progresses more and more blood will be needed.

Our local unit will need to have from 60 to 65 blood donors ready for each visit; supply trained and practical nurses, two men or two strong boys, and a bowl of soup for each patient.

A meeting of the Executive of our local unit with representatives from all the units of the district is called for the Red Cross rooms at 8 o'clock, Wednesday, April 7th, to make the necessary arrangements. Invitations to outside units have also been forwarded.

High School Students Contribute to Red Cross

In spite of the fact that we have not been able to afford time this year to give our usual open house or Commencemnet exercises, The Literary Society executive decided that what money we have been able to raise through our Annual Dance should be put to use. A donation of $20.00 was authorized for the Red Cross. In addition to this pupils gave voluntarily from pocket money $8.77 to the Junior Red Cross, and $7.14 to the Navy League. The latter collection was made some time ago. By the end of the term, we expect that the pupils will have purchased for themselves about $200.00 in War Savings stamps. Some $40.00 will have been donated through gifts of knitted and sewn articles prepared in our Home Economics room by girls of Grades IX and X, and the General Shop has undertaken to provide a large number of articles for use in Army camps and first aid stations. A project to make model aeroplanes for aircraft recognition classes is also contemplated.

A complete assembly of working parts of an automobile has been supplied by the High School Board, and is being mounted and prepared to serve as a model in teaching automobile mechanics in our shop.

Our annual oratorical contest is to be held April 1, to determine the winners of the Dr. S.H. Hutt trophy for senior oratory and the H.S. McMurray trophy for Junior oratory. Last year these were won by Arnold Barrett and Bernyce Dillabough. A good representation of pupils will take part in this year's contest. The winners will defend the Ker trophy won by this school in 1940 and again in 1942 and now held in the school. Announcement concerning this event will be made public in time for all to make plans to be present.

Obtained Coupons Illegally Local Men Fined

For obtaining gasoline ration books and loose gasoline coupons illegally, Jack Sharkey, of Chesterville was fined $100, with costs of $3 or the alternative of 30 days in jail, when he appeared in police court at Winchester on Wednesday. Sharkey was prosecuted on this charge by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board acting for the Oil Controller, Department of Munitions and Supply. Under an additional prosecution by the Attorney-General's Department, he was sentenced to serve 15 days on a charge of theft.

Appearing at the same time before Magistrate F. S. Doyle, William John Edgerton, of Morewood, was fined $50 and costs of $3 for having received stolen gasoline coupons.

Arthur Flynn, K.C., of Morrisburg represented the Department of Justice as Counsel.

Meat Rationing Planned For Early In May

Meat will join sugar, butter, tea and coffee as a rationed food commodity early in May, with Canadians restricted to two pounds a week each, one-half pound less than their average per capita consumption in the past two years.

Finance Minister Ilsley announced the new rationing program in the house of Commons Wednesday.

There had been no warning of final Government decision that rationing was necessary although such a program had been expected since the imposition of meat rationing in the United States this month.

The Minister explained that behind the rationing program was the Canadian program of exporting meat products as part of its contribution to the war program of the United Nations. Production of meats has increased, but exports and home consumption both were higher and during the past eight or nine months "spasmodic distribution shortages of meat have occurred in several parts of the country."

After allowing for export commitments, 1943 domestic supply would be no greater than in 1942, while the potential consumer demand was almost certain to be greater.

Won Many Scholarships Ordained to Ministry

The friends of the late G. F. Johnston will be pleased to hear that his grandson, Chas. F. Johnston, M.A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Johnston of Montreal was ordained into the Ministery of the United church at the annual convocation Friday, March 26, 1943. He won the following prizes and Bursaries:

Stevenson Memorial Medal, Chas. Gurd Bursary, William Brown Scholarship, Sanford Senior Year Prize, W. Henry Warriner Bursary in New Testament, William Ross scholarship in French Theology, William Lochead scholarship in Church History, James Sinclair scholarship, E.M. Taylor Prize for scripture knowledge.

Douglas Johnston, brother of the above received his wings on Saturday, March 27.

Radio Forum News

With ideal weather, the Boyne and S.S. No. 10 Forums enjoyed good attendances. Eleven from the Connaught section met with the Boyne Forum at the home of Hugh Smith and enjoyed the evening. This should materialize into a good strong Forum in Connaught School section when the Broadcasts start again in the fall.

S.S. No. 10 met at the home of Geo. Beattie with 25 in attendance. H.R. Johnston was in charge of the meeting "Farming to feed the world," was the Broadcast topic. It was pointed out that, if the millions of people in Europe and Asia—especially Asia with its half-starved inhabitants of India and China—were to receive the same standard of living, as regards to food, as North Americans enjoy, then our Agricultural program would have to be stepped up enormously. According to statistics, the average anticipated life of the Chinese is the early thirties due to malnutrition and resultant disease. This feeding of the world is a challenge to the democracies of the world in the post-war period, because, if people are well fed, they do not want to fight, but fear of hunger and want will surely bring forth circumstances that will create another upheaval in world Society.

As this was the last meeting of the spring term, expressions of satisfaction over the success of the Forum were freely stated and the members are enthusiastically awaiting the opening of the fall term when they will meet again.

The Secretary, Albert Smith, seemd very pleased when the report of the meeting of March 15th, was read, and the findings of his Forum were mentioned over the radio.

Many farmers state that the first thing they look for in the Record is the Farm Forum news. Yet they will not interest themselves enough to start a Forum of their own. The officers of the County Federation of Agriculture hope, by next fall that there will be a Forum in the majority of the school sections of the county.

RAISING TEACHERS' SALARIES SLOWLY

It has long been contended that the school exercises as great an influence in moulding the character and determining the future of the young as the home. That this fact is recognized by ministers of the Gospel is evidenced by the efforts being made to introduce religious teaching into the Public Schools. In some school sections a modified form of Bible instruction obtains where Ministers are permitted to visit the schools at certain stated periods to impart such knowledge. In separate schools as a matter of course religion forms a recognized part of the curriculum. All this brings up the fact that it is important to select the right type of teachers while the minds of children are in the formative stage and this apart from anything in the nature of religious training which might properly be left in most localities to the home and the church. It must be admitted that in order to attract bright minds to the teaching profession the remuneration for such work must be comparable to that obtainable in other walks of life. The meet this situation the Ontario Minister of Education has announced that the minmum salary for teachers will be raised from $600 to $800. The Ontario Teachers' Federation urged that the minimum be placed at $1000 but the Department thought it was advisable to proceed by easy stages toward the $1000 objective. In this years' Budget the grants to public and separate schools have been enlarged by $500,000.00 which will help in this emergency. It must be granted that in the province there are many school sections poorly circumstanced to meet any additional outlays and where in many instances there are not more than four to six pupils in attendance at each school.

SOLDIERS MUST NOT BE FORCED TO PAY

A bill to protect members of the armed forces and their dependents against loss through non-payment of mortgages, taxes or rent has been introduced in the Ontario Legislature by Premier Conant and as it is a government measure it is assured of becoming law. In the opinion of many, such action is long overdue as there have been several instances of men serving overseas or in the navy encountering just such difficulties and their families suffering real hardship as the Bill is designed to protect them against. No interference with loans made under the Dominion Act is contemplated in the legislation which comes into effect on the day it received Royal assent and will remain in force until the cessation of hostilities between Canada and Germany, Italy and Japan. The Bill provides that where a judge is satisfied that the dependant's inability to pay is attributable to the fact that he is a member of the armed forces he may make such order staying or postponing proceedings as he deems proper. The privileges extended to members of the armed forces under the terms of the bill are extended to any dependent of a member whose inability to comply with the terms of a mortgage is due to military service. Relief with regard to arrears of taxes against lands is also provided and the bill prohibits any action to collect taxes from a member of the armed forces, or his dependents, without the approval of a judge. Similar provision is made in connection with arrears of rent.

BOYS AND GIRLS TO OPERATE HELICOPTERS

It is predicted that in the not far distant future the airplane will practically replace the railway, the latter being only utilized for long through freight hauls. Passenger and package traffic will be moved in the air and the automobile will take but a secondary place in mundane affairs. As a post-war rehabilitation scheme plans are underway for the development of local airports and landing facilities in every community in Ontario with a population of at least 1,500 as a means of providing employment in aviation for members of the RCAF. The scheme as outlined has the endorsation of Air Minister C. G. Power. C. R. Patterson, president of the Aeronautical Institute of Canada says that already eighteen communities have joined in the scheme, the work to be carried out by the municipalities themselves without Government support. He declares that the committee in charge has the assurance that private capital or civic funds will be made available to carry out the development of local airport facilities. Air mail, Air express and air freight for all communities with airports are envisaged by those sponsors of the scheme. While it may seem fanciful it is said that several hundred people in the 18 communities favoring the scheme have expressed a desire to own planes and in this connection an authority predicts that in the post war period Helicopters will be as common as motor cars and just as easy to operate. It is said that the helicopter will be developed for post war civilian use and will be so simply constructed that teen aged boys and girls will be able to operate them.

SUPPLYING POWER POST-WAR WORK

In the considered opinion of Principal Wallace of Queen's University further study should be given to Ontario's water resources. He claims that not one-third of the reasonably available power is yet in use and not one-eighth of the power that may one day be available for use. The flow of the rivers must be regulated, particularly when forest covers on the gathering ground have been removed. Much of the immediately necessary post-war construction work has to be done on our rivers in order that the full value of the flow may be available for power and in order that serious flooding may be avoided. After the war tremendous power resources now employed in war work will be released. As a result smaller industries will establish themselves in rural towns, equipped with cheap power. In addition practically every farm will be equipped with electrical power. This will mean much to the stability and comfort of farm life. To have the farm house and barns equipped with appliances that are availble at the service of electric power will add to the amenities of life.

UNRATIONED

By Mary Eversley

No coupons needed for a sunset sky
With flaming tattered banners floating by.
No coupons needed for a friendly hand,
Or for a heart of love and understand
Kind human contacts, given without measure
And friendship—these are our unrationed treasure.
No coupons for a little place called "home,"
A haven, or a heaven on earth to come.
Nor for the love that makes privations such,
We scarcely fear their all too constant touch.

"What's your idea of a true statesman?"

"A true statesman," replied Senator Sorghum, "is a man who feels the pulse of the people and then prescribes what he honestly believes is good for them instead of prescribing a patent medicine in which he is interested."

A COUNTRY EDITOR SEES Ottawa

WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS OF CANADA
by JIM GREENBLAT, Editor of the SUN
SWIFT CURRENT SASKATCHEWAN

Interview With Chairman

I was at ease just a second after being ushered into his office. Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board at 41 years of age, a big, dark man, wearing heavy glasses, but with a twinkle in his eyes and a soft Scotch accent in his speech kinda dominates the room, the big piles of papers and documents on his desk, and you like him right away.

I thought, in this last article you'd like to know something about the man who pul's the strings that juggle your living these days. But he didn't want to talk about himself. He'd just flown in from Vancouver, was busier than heck and said, after a little plain gossip, "Fire ahead, ask me questions." So I did. I had a few things on my mind that I know you have had unanswered, too. So take his answers, not mine.

"What, in a nutshell, are the benefits to citizens in general from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board?" I asked and he replied. I made actual notes. "The savings to consumers of the country can roughly be estimated at $350,000,000 and to the taxpayers as a whole a similar amount in the costs of the war to date. That is cash, but there is a much greater saving in human terms for if inflation were to rear its ugly head, money could not measure the human misery to say nothing of the effectivenesss of our part in the United Nations' war against Hitler and the Japs."

Co-operation in Switch From Peace to War

To my questions if disadvantages had cropped up, he admitted some had, but they were inherent in the switch from a peacetime to wartime economy, and none that cannot be worked out with the co-operation of primary producers, industry and consumers.

Maybe I tried to stymie him when I asked if controls, such as price ceilings would stay after the war, permanent or temporary. "That," he said, "will be a matter of government policy and in the final analysis for the people themselves." I wanted elaboration. Supposing the war lasts two or three years more?

"Insofar as price control is concerned, it is the creature of government, but it will also depend largely, upon the future form of the war itself and how Canada can best fit into an effective part in the offensive. If, for instance, parts of conquered Europe should be opened up, we would need to feed starving millions. That might be one thing. If it's tools for an offensive that's another matter. We can only take such action as may be justified by the day-to-day developments. It's obvious that all of us must be ready to give up much of what we have been used to and in even measure, if we are to be honest with ourselves in the demands for a total war effort."

"Would you mind answering me if I asked whether there is any political interference in your set-up?" Even his mustache bristled as he answered one word, "None."

What About Subsidies?

I wanted his say-so on subsidies. You know us people back in the country are liable to think they help the big shot and are designed for that purpose. He put me behind the eight-ball by saying this:

"As a matter of fact, subsidies are of relatively greater help to the little fellow than the big shot you speak of. The big fellow is generally in a stronger financial position and could weather the storms, but if subsidies were not paid to the little fellow they would be the first to fall by the wayside. Subsidies are paid and designed mainly for two purposes: one, to assure a stable cost of living and secondly to assure a supply of essential goods. These are handled in what can definitely be said in the interests of the entire population. They are paid in no case to increase profits, and the strictest accounting is made throughout."

"We have the finest co-operation imaginable from the rank and file of Canadian people," he declared. "In this connection we are the envy of our neighbours and our friends across the sea. True, some selfish interests appear from time to time, but we cannot permit any deviation in the policy laid down by the government. A few others (and a mighty few he made it plain) try to beat the game but we have one standard remedy for them and that is recourse to the courts of the land. What happens then is the responsibility of the judiciary."

"No amount of compulsion in a democratic country," Mr. Gordon pointed out, "can equal in effectiveness the co-operation of a people as ours acting of their own volition with enlightenment and understanding."

"We Have Done Our Best"

The chairman assured me he was aware that an organization like the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, run by ordinary human beings, had made mistakes and has its shortcomings; and here he pointed a really big index finger at me, "We have done our best, all of us". He was sure that the anti-inflation policy of the government has, at heart, the best long run interests of the wage earning class. To wreck this policy, or to make its administration impossible, is an act he considers one of self-destruction. Well, you readers out in the country can take it or leave it.

Mr. Gordon says Canada has made economic history by demonstrating that inflationary effects of war can be controlled. But he is determined as long as he has anything to do with it, that to prove it can be done is not sufficient. The policy must be seen through. To do so, in his opinion, there can be no weakening on any one of five points, namely: the fiscal policy (money to you) calling for maximum taxation and borrowing; the price ceiling; salary and wage stabilization; control and rationing of supplies as found necessary and the direction of manpower to essential uses.

Farmers and Inflation

And here I asked the question important to these articles. How about the belief among some that farmers constitute the one group who could benefit from inflation? Here is his answer: "Those who hold this belief seldom advocate inflation openly but we hear it argued that under inflation agricultural prices would rise faster than the prices of goods or supplies needed for farm consumption. No one can say positively whether this would happen or not, and I fervently hope we never have the opportunity of finding out. We do know, however, that the last time the experiment was tried, in 1914-20 everyone suffered eventually and farmers, I guess the most heavily of all."

HERO OF DIEPPE

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has sent over a hundred of its members into the armed services. Several have given their lives in action, two have received awards for distinguished service — Commander W.E.S. Briggs, RCNR, and Major George Alleyne Browne of the Royal Canadian Artillery, shown herewith. Major Browne, whose home is in Ottawa, was a Captain in the raid on Dieppe. He was wounded, captured and imprisoned. He escaped in company with Lieutenant Antoine Masson, of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal. Both young Canadian officers reached England safely a few weeks ago. Major Browne has since been awarded the distinguished service order and Lieut. Masson, the military cross. Major Browne was a member of the CBC announce staff at Ottawa before joining the forces is 1939 and he was one of the CBC Royal Visit commentators.

The Treasury Department, income tax division, received the following letter from a lady: "I have received your application blank, but as I already belong to more organizations than I really should, I must decline at this time to join your income tax."

Make Canning Sugar Application In Good Time

The Local Ration Board reminds consumers that all applications for canning sugar must be received before April 15 to gain attention and that they should be directed by consumers to their Local Ration Board, Winchester, for this area, which will be responsible for issuing the special sugar coupons for use during the official canning season beginning June 1.

It is important that consumers should read very carefully the directions for applying for such canning sugar that appear in their ration books and in the "Canning Guides" that have been distributed.

Each application must show the number of ration books held by the consumer making the application, the number of pounds of sugar required, the number of quarts of canned fruit the applicant intends to make, the number of quarts of jam or jelly she intends to make and the number of people she will be feeding in her household. Applications must also be accompanied by canning sugar applications taken from the ration books of those who will be thus fed and ration book numbers must also be shown on these sheets. Finally, the application is worthless if it is not signed by the applicant.

Wherever institutions, quota users or any group other than an individual desires to apply for canning sugar the application should be made to the appropriate Ration Office, as Local Ration Boards will not deal with such applications.

There's No Future In It

The nights he was not flying they would drive back late to the station, using her car. The flare-path would be laid; the lights on the hangers would shine like red stars in the winter darkness above the flat land. Sometimes the searchlights would be up, throwing a blue-white fire that fell widely like moonlight on the dark trees and hedges and on the winding road. They would sit in the car and, holding each other, talk for a long time. Frost on the very coldest nights would form like a silver collar on the glass of the windscreen and sometimes, on very still nights he would wind down the window on the car and listen for a moment or two to the silence outside. She would lean her head on his shoulder and look upwards into the dark sky and then, listening too, hear the sound of the bombers coming home.

It did not seem to matter much that they were never likely to be married.

He was rather small and compact, with fresh gray eyes that he sometimes did not seem able to focus correctly. He had thirty-one operational trips to his credit and all that seemed to matter was that he should continue coming back.

The morning afterwards, perhaps, he would ring the office. He would simply say, "Hallo, dear, tonight." She would try to remain calm, and later perhaps, if operations were scrubbed, he would ring her again and she would find herself trembling as she put down the telephone, all her pretense of calmness gone.

She knew generally that he would be briefed in the early afternoon. He would take off about three o'clock or a little later, and according to the target, come back somewhere between eight and ten. It would often be too late to ring her after interrogation, but going to bed she would try to lie awake for the sound of the telephone. Sometimes she would fall asleep with the light still burning and would wake up in the small hours of the morning, bewildered and startled, not knowing where she was. Twice she fell half asleep and did not hear the telephone. Downstairs her father heard it, but after answering it, did not come to tell her who it was.

Her father was a rather big gray-haired man with cheeks like loose pink rubber. He rolled his own cigarettes and it seemed to her that she never saw him without a newspaper. He rolled the cigarettes very badly—the tobacco fell wastefully on his clothes. The war had developed in him the latent qualities of the amateur strategist, and he always discussed the war while waving an untidy, wasteful cigarette. "We ought to have cut the Tripoli road long ago. Long ago. You have only to look at the map. The same with the bombing of Berlin. What's gone wrong? Why aren't we over there more? Why aren't we over there night after night? Striking early and often is the decisive factor You'd suppose it (wouldn't escape our people."

"Perhaps it's the weather," she would say.

"Weather? There's another thing that beats me. Argue on simple lines, draw some obsolutely logical conclusions which ought to be apparent to the merest child, and you always get the same answer. The weather! I don't doubt the weather is sometimes bad. But far from always, far from always. It's too often a convenient excuse — like the workman blaming his tools."

"Nevertheless it nearly always is the weather."

"Oh? Then what about last night? Clear moonlight like day. And was there a single operation? A couple of bombers over Brest."

"You talk as if Brest were a seaside resort."

"Look at the weather again tonight. Magnificent. And in the morning what shall we hear? The same old story again, I suppose. A handful of bombers over Brest. Or nothing at all."

"It's probably the most heavily defended place in Europe," she said. "It's just plain hell."

"Kitty, Kitty," her mother said. She looked up from her knitting, always khaki and looked down again.

"Also I think you may find that tonight has been a big thing."

"Oh! you know, do you?"

"No. Not exactly. I've just an idea."

"Ah! Your pilot friend."

She did not speak.

"You haven't brought him in, lately."

"No, dear," her mother said.

"They spend most of their time out," her father said. "Somewhere."

Her mother spoke without looking up from her knitting.

"Were you at the Red Lion last week?" her mother said. "We heard you were there. Drinking with Air Force officers."

"I was."

"Is that the kind of place to be?" her father asked.

"Drinking," her mother said. "It's not nice. Do you think so?"

"I want to be wherever he is."

"Even there? Couldn't you give him up?" her mother said. "He struck me as being older than he said. Do you know much about him? You are only twenty. It's all so terribly unsure. Perhaps he is married. Do you know?"

She did not answer.

"He looks older than twenty-four," her mother said. "Experienced. His eyes, look old."

She got up, calmly enraged, definite. "He has done things that make him old," she said and went out of the room.

The following night they drove back late to the station. With the moon rising and the searhlights up, the road shone misty white between the dark hedges. The evening lay behind them, as always, simply secure: a few rounds of light ale at the Red Lion, the boys coming in group by group, the rounds growing, the crews mixing, sergeants with squadron leaders, gunners with navigators, warm broad Canadian voices mingled with English; and then the drive home, the blue lighting of the searchlights, and the moonlight throwing into relief the black winter trees, the hangers lit by red stars, the huge solitary dispersed aircraft in the fields; and lastly the silence after the car had stopped beyond the gate of the station.

"Was it a good trip, darling?"

He did not answer.

"Bad?"

"Pretty bad."

"Did you have trouble?"

"The usual. Ten-tenths most of the way and then some hellish flak."

She thought of her father. She saw him in an armchair, rolling the cigarettes, waving a newspaper. "Always the weather!"

"I'm sorry I couldn't ring," he said. "It was late when we got in for interrogation. I didn't want to wake you."

"I was awake," she said.

They sat still, not speaking. She thought again of her father.

"Tell me about the trip."

"Nothing to tell. Routine stuff."

She did not like the sound of his voice, tired and guarded; the feeling that part of him was withheld.

„I can tell when you have trouble."

"What trouble? No trouble at all."

"Why have you got your hand in your pocket?" she said. "You've had it there all the time."

"All right," he said.

Be began suddenly to tell her something about the trip. Though she had heard so much of it before, the awful significance of it was not lessened. He told her about the weather; ten-tenths, a bad storm soon after they turned for home, a spot of ice. "They put up a hell's own flak at us. Just routine stuff, only a bloody sight worse. And they hit my hand. Took the skin off, that is all." He kept it in his pocket.

She knew that he was not telling everything, that he never did, perhaps never would. Routine stuff, hellish flak, a spot of ice, the same words, the same repeated demand on courage, on fear if you like, the same holding back. She thought once more of her father: the world of the newspaper, the protest, the old indignations. To contrast it with the world of flak and ice, the long darkness of endurance, the spell of cold and strain thirty-one times repeated, was so difficult and angrily confusing that she said only, "Does your hand hurt? Can I do anything for you?"

"Thanks, darling, I'm O.K."

She remembered something.

"What time did interrogation finish? Why were you so late?"

"It wasn't so late. Not so very late."

"If it wasn't late why didn't you ring me?"

"I didn't want to wake you."

"Tell me what happened," she said.

He looked beyond the car window and said, "We got a bit shot up. Just one of those things."

"Bad?"

"Bad enough. A lump of flak blew a hole as big as a cartwheel in the starboard wing and the transmitter was u.s. Shaky landing. But why pick on me? It happens every day."

"Not to you."

"It happens," he said.

"You hate it don't you?" she said.

"Hate what?" he said.

"You hate going, don't you, time after time? The same place. The same job. The same everything. I know you hate it."

"I hate it like hell," he said. He looked beyond the car window again. The diffused lighting of the searchlights and the cloudy moon shone on the misted windscreen. The trees were black against it. "But I hate what they're doing even more. That's what I really hate. What they do to me is half of what I mean doing to them. Not half. Not a quarter. Not a hundredth part. Is there anything wrong about hatred?"

She was thinking of her father, fussy with indignation and she did not answer.

"It's good honest downright emotion, isn't it?" he said.

"Yes."

"Sometimes I think we want more of it," he said. "God, sometimes I think we do."

When at last she drove back from the station it was later than she thought. But at the house, to her surprise, her father and mother were still up. Her mother looked up from her knitting and her father looked at his watch.

"Either my watch is fast or it's ten past twelve."

She did not speak.

"Even the Red Lion closes at ten."

"It so happens I haven't been there."

Her father coughed heavily. "Does your pilot friend realize that we sit here, waiting?"

She did not answer.

"We have a right to be considered."

She stood slowly taking off her gloves.

"You'll agree that he owes us something, won't you?"

She stood thinking of the long flight in the darkness, the hellish flak, the hole in the wing, the shell through the fuselage, the shaky landing; routine stuff; easy, nothing to tell, something done again and again. Her mind became unsteady with hatred. She looked at her mother. The clean prejudiced hands were motionless on the knitting. Her father stood with the evening newspaper folded between his fingers.

"Is he married?" her mother asked.

"Does it matter?" she said.

Her father crackled the newspaper.

"My dear child, my dear child! Does it matter? I ask you. What about the future? Is there any future in that?"

"No," she said; "there's no future in it."

She wanted to go on speaking, but her thoughts were disrupted and dispersed in the corners of her mind, and she could not gather them together. She wanted to say why there was no future. She wanted to tell them about the flak, the darkness, and the bitter cold, about the way the tracer bullets came in at you so slowly that you could watch them until suddenly they hurled with red frenzy past your face, about the hatred and the monotony and the courage that was greater because it was rarefied by terror. She wanted to tell them that if there was any future it lay through this.

She went out of the room and went upstairs instead. She felt stifled by the warmth of the room downstairs and, not putting on the light, she opened the window and stood looking out. The air was bright with frost and the coldness struck with a momentary shock on her face and hands.

She stood there for a long time looking out. The moon was going down beyond the houses. The searchlights were no longer up beyond the town. The sky was clear and calm and, as if there were no war and as it might be in the future, if there were a future, there was no sound of wings.

I must say thanks again to you all for the parcel, you have sent.

Cheerio to you all hoping to see you soon.

A Berwick soldier,

The Women' Institute:—

Received your parcel a few days ago. Many thanks for it. Everything that was sent was real nice. Only wish I was back to spend Xmas with you people.

I am getting along fine and like it here. Having a good time. Hoping to see you all soon.

Wishing you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Somewhere in England,
December 15, 1942

Dear Friends:—I once again take pleasure in thanking the Women's Institute for the parcel which I received in first class shape. Everything came in useful. This makes the third Christmas which I received parcels from Berwick ladies. Hoping we will have our duty done and home for next Christmas. We figure on having a good dinner Christmas. We have twelve big turkeys for about 225 men. I am going to spend New Years with my wife in Scotland. I am saving the cake for New Year's. It is quite a treat to get cake like that here. I am working in the officers' mess at present. They had me go out to-day to see if I could locate a goose and a couple of chickens. I found them but what a price—four fifty for a spring chicken and sixteen to eighteen dollars for a goose—so I guess we won't have any. The weather has been fine. We had a couple of little frosts. So thanking you once again I will bring this to a close. Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. I remain as ever,

Eddie McLeod.

Hello Ladies:—Many thanks for the lovely parcel received just before Christmas. I certainly appreciate being remembered. As you know it is impossible for us to get anything like that over here so it was welcomed by we three Canadians on this station. The three of us have a hut to ourselves—and the other two (one from Toronto and one from Winnipeg) are convinced that Berwick is a pretty nice place.

I was very fortunate in being able to get away for Christmas as I dreaded spending Christmas in camp, away from home. I went with a chum from Alberta to visit his relatives in Paignton, Devonshire, and we had a lovely time. Mrs. Trewin was one of those lucky ladies who managed to scrounge a turkey from some place or another.

We all find that the English people treat us very well—but there is no one like a Canadian, is there?

John McPherson is the only Berwick chap I have met over here but I hope to meet some of the others on my next week trip to the Beaver Club. As you all have relatives or friends over here you will konw what a wonderful organization that is!

Thanks again for remembering me. I will just take this opportunity of wishing you all a very Happy and prosperous New Year.

Lindsay Meldrum.

VOLUNTEERS TO ISSUE SPECIAL SUGAR COUPONS

Another important job has been assigned the Local Ration Boards and the volunteer workers who assisted them so readily and efficiently during the recent distribution of Ration Book No. 2. It is that of issuing special sugar coupons which are to be distributed before June 1 in return for the applications for canning sugar which must be in the hands of Local Ration Boards by April 15.

CHICKS? SURE! if...

YES—the Bray Hatcheries have chicks for sale, in spite of a deluge of orders. Not, perhaps, in the breed that's your first choice. Not, perhaps, in the Xtra-Profit grade. But Bray Chicks of the usual high Bray quality . . .

Mind you, that's not saying that the breed and grade you want aren't available. Very probably they are. But demand is uneven. In some breeds it is so heavy that the Bray Hatcheries are booked ahead—in those breeds—for weeks. In others even last minute orders can be filled, for both day-old and started chicks.

NAME YOUR SECOND CHOICE

So when you order your Bray Chicks, name your second choice . . even your THIRD choice, if possible . . . on breed, grade, and date of shipment. It may prevent delay and disappointment. All Bray breeds have the same backing of skill and care behind them, so you will probably be pleased with the results you get, even if the breed isn't the one you ordinarily order.

LANDOWSKA AND THE HARPSICHORD

World Renowned Artist Continues the Bach Concerti Premieres and Tastes the Famous Canadian Spy. Landowska Resides in Toronto During Important CBC Concert Series.

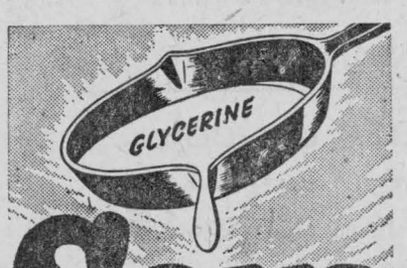

The king of instruments, which for three centuries charmed the leisure of highborn ladies and courtiers, and poured sunlit music through the aisled solitude of hidden cloisters is again being heard in all its grandeur. But today it is reaching a vaster audience, with listeners assembled across a continent. For the great Landowska, whose name spells a legend throughout the world of music, is playing the harpsichord each week over the National Network of the CBC. And the occasion of her visit is the North American radio premiere of seven Carl Philipp Emanual Bach concerti. The fourth concert in the series now being broadcast will be heard Sunday, April 4th at 10.15 p.m. EDT, when the Philipp Emanuel Concerto in A Major, for Harpsichord and Orchestra, will be the featured work.

Landowska has come from New York especially to appear in these CBC premieres. She is now ensconced amid the art treasures and the aesthetic decor of a Toronto apartment where she will reside while the series is in progress. Unable to bring her own 18th century harpsichord for her performance here, Madame is using, instead, the Pleyel instrument provided by the CBC. It is one of the finest on this continent. Now in the possession of a Toronto firm, it once was played in Landowska's fabulous chateau at Saint-Leu-le-Foret—all harpsichords were sent from the Pleyel factories to Wanda Landowska's home for her final approval.

Today Landowska reigns supreme as the modern master of the harpsichord. And in her authoritive work, "Music of the Past", she describes it as without instrumental rival for the varied wealth of its registers "with its humming, its rustling, the fluted sounds of its upper keyboard, its fine incisiveness, the beauty of its ardent cidada-like notes and the superb clashing of the coupled keyboard." Landowska has mentioned since coming to Toronto, that she is contemplating the writing of another literary work, to add to the volume of her great musical contribution. It will examine and treat of interpretation in music.

Two of the greatest joys of this famous artist undoubtedly rest in the evocation of the transcending colour of the harpsichord's music, and in giving generously of her own prodigious knowledge to all those who have come to her to learn. A joy of a different nature has recently been offered to Lanodwska and only Canada could have given it. Wanda Landowska loves Canadian apples. She has sampled the Delicious, the McIntosh Red, the Russet, and the lesser breeds. But only last week, she was introduced to the incomparable Canadian Spy. Toronto was searched for the most magnificent specimen of the Spy, that Landowska might have it in all its splendour.

The programme that Madame will play this week includes a group of Sonatas by Girolamo Scarlatti in which the harpsichord will solo. Scarlatti was the most celebrated harpsidchordist of his time, and defeated Handel in a contest on this instrument. The string orchestra, conducted by Adolf Koldofsky, will open the programme with the overture to Mozart's opera "Lucio Silla," and Landowska and orchestra will be heard together in the featured Phillip Emanuel Concerto in A Major.

Save THAT Fat!

HERE'S WHAT TO DO

1 You can take your fat drippings, scrap fat and bones to your meat dealer. He will pay you the established price for the dripping and the scrap fat. If you wish, you can turn this money over to your local Voluntary Salvage Committee or Registered Local War Charity, or—

2 You can donate your fat dripping, scrap fat and bones to your local Voluntary Salvage Committee if they collect them in your community, or—

3 You can continue to place out your Fats and Bones for collection by your Street Cleaning Department where such a system is in effect.

SUGAR PURCHASE VOUCHERS REPLACED BY COUPONS

Another important piece of work awaits volunteer workers in every community where a Local Ration Board is in existence.

This work is to be performed during the month of May in connection with the issue of canning sugar coupons to cover applications for such sugar which are being received by Local Ration Boards until April 15.

In place of the sugar purchase vouchers which were issued for that purpose last year, special canning sugar coupons will be given applicants this year and the distribution of these is to be carried out by volunteers who will be recruited by the Local Ration Boards.

Each sugar canning coupon will be good for the purchase of five pounds of sugar. It will be good on and after June 1 and will become void in the hands of the consumer on September 30, although the official canning season will extend to November 30. Should any canning sugar so obtained remain in the hands of the consumer on the latter date, it will have to be declared and coupons from the household ration books representing the amount of sugar declared will haev to be surrendered.

It is emphasized by the Local Ration Board that extra sugar obtained for home canning must not be used for any other purpose, since special arrangements will have to be made to stock sufficient supplies to meet home canning demand.

Sam Cooper, an elderly negro, seemingly did not care about his freedom after the Civil War, and he occupied a hut in the rear of our home refusing to leave. Sam was quite a church-goer and often bragged about the preacher. One day noticing Sam unusually dressed up, I asked him where he had been. He said that he had been to church and that they had a new preacher. I reminded him about his bragging about the old preacher and he replied, "Mr. Willie, that preacher this morning asked the Lord for things the other preacher didn't know He had."

Canada's Fighting Farmers

Canada's rural army works for victory as never before—While contending with Greater Handicaps and a Labour shortage.

"Last year we used up our energy, so this year we'll have to work on nerve alone." That's the way one farmer expressed his feelings about the coming year's Battle For Food when he was requested by Harry J. Boyle CBC Farm Broadcast Commentator, at the recent Middlesex County Seed and Bacon Show, at London, Ontario.

Harry made a flying trip to the farm to help out with a little preseeding work but he managed to spend two days at the show and what he learned there confirmed the opinions expressed in the daily Farm Broadcast mailbag. Farmers are working with less help than ever before. New machinery is hard to get as the proverbial hen's teeth because all farm machinery is rationed and manufactured under a very small quota. There's plenty to grumble about but few of our rural citizens are grumbling. They're getting set for one of the most difficult years in the whole history of Canadian farming. And here's how they are going about it.

First of all, they're co-operating as never before. They're going to help each other more and more. They're improvising. After a winter of preparation, repairing machinery, adapting labour-saving methods, and planning for the seeding and harvesting, they're determined to do their best. They realize—as never before—that the food which they grow and send to market is as important as the munitions of war.

Farmers last year worked long hours without thought of wage rates or a forty-hour week. Their womenfolk helped them; older men who thought their days of service were over, joined in using up carefully hoarded energy. They did their best and it was a good "best" because, besides standing as one of the great food providers for our allies, Canada remains one of the best-fed nations in this year of war, 1943. During the coming year Canadian farmers will do their best again with the realization that the Battle For Food is not alone a farmer's job, but a real, war job for Canadians—town and country people alike. They're looking to their city and town cousins to help them so that Britain, our armed forces continue to enjoy and be sustained by the fruits of a bountiful land.

Farmers are heartened by the fact that the town and city people are recognizing the need for all-out effort in the Battle For Food. All approved, according to Mr. Boyle, the idea for the "Help Wanted" series of programmes, presented each Wednesday evening at 7.30 EDT, by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, in co-operation with the Ontario Farm Service Force, for the purpose of acquainting urban people with the necessity for their help on the farm during this summer.

SUGAR ALLOWED FOR CANNING RHUBARB

The Local Ration Board brings glad tidings to the housewives of Chesterville with the announcement that, contrary to last year's ruling, extra sugar is to be allowed during the approaching official canning season (from June 1 to November 30) for the home preserving of rhubarb. For the purposes of the home canning regulations, rhubarb will this year be considered a "perishable fresh fruit" and housewives wishing to preserve it will apply for extra sugar for that purpose along with other fresh fruits. These applications, prepared in accordance with instructions contained in the current ration books and the 'Canning Guide' which has been distributed by the post office, must be in the hands of Local Ration Boards by April 15.

The Board points out that no extra sugar obtained in this manner may be used for making jam from dried fruits such as prunes, dates or figs, nor may it be used for pickles, marrow, pumpkins or tomatoes. If housewives desire to preserve any of these, they must use sugar from their ordinary rations. Similarly, no home canning sugar will be allowed for home-made wines. An exception, is however, made in the case of citron, since it is only with the use of sugar that that vegetable—classed as a "fruit" under canning sugar regulations—can be consumed.

At a local concert for the troops, an amateur soprano "obliged." She sang a song in the Italian method: that is she wabbled and warbled all over the notes.

At the finish there was a short silence, broken by one or two handclaps, then a husky voice came from the back seats: "Now, give us the 'All Clear', missus!"

Cheddar Cheese, Flavourful and Nutritious

Hello Homemakers! For centuries the nomadic tribes of Asia and Africa made different kinds of cheese but it was an enterprising English farmer in the village of Cheddar, near Bristol, who systematized the former crude method of processing. Cheese made according to his method is called Cheddar and has become the model of cheesemaking the world over.

In Canada, Cheddar cheese is both plentiful and cheap, and for quality—did you know that the cheesemakers of Ontario have won many prizes for their products? There's high nutrition value, too, in cheese: it is made from milk—that wonderful food. A small quantity (¼ lb.) supplies ¼ of the calories needed per day by the average adult. It's a grand meat substitute and, being a cooked product, it requires only a small amount of electricity to blend flavours together —both important facts today.

NUTRI-THRIFT MENU

Breakfast: Orange juice cooked cereal with wheat germ and milk, French toast, coffee.

Dinner: Potatoes (to be mashed) and steamed ciscoes—on one element—coddled apples and tomatoes (heated)—on one element.

Supper: Cheese ring with creamed peas, baked potatoes, cottage pudding (electric oven).

RECIPES

Cheese Ring

4 eggs slightly beaten, 1 cup milk, 2½ tbs. melted butter, ½ cup grated cheese, ½ tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, few grains cayenne, few drops onion juice.

Combine ingredients in order given. Turn into buttered ring mold or timbale molds, set in pan of hot water, and bake until brown in slow electric oven (325 degrees). Turn onto hot serving dish and fill centre with creamed peas. Serves 4.

Luncheon Cheese Dish

2 eggs slightly beaten, 1 cup thin cream, 1 tb. butter, 1 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. mustard, ¼ tsp. paprika, few grains cayenne, ½ lb. mild cheese cut in small pieces stale bread cut in finger-shaped pieces 1-3 inch thick.

Spread bread with butter. Arrange close together around sides of buttered baking dish, having bread extend about 1 inch above dish; also line bottom of dish. Combine other ingredients, pour into dish and bake 30 minutes in electric oven (350 degrees). Serves 4.

Cottage Pudding (Requested)

¼ cup baking fat, 2-3 cup sugar, 1 egg beaten, 1 cup milk, 2¼ cups flour, 4 tsps. baking powder, ½ tsp salt

Cream fat; mix in sugar gradually beat in egg. Sift flour, measure and add baking powder and salt. Add alternately with milk to first mixture. Pour into cake pan or muffin tins. Bake in electric oven at 375 degrees. Serve with left-over fruit or pudding sauce.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. C.D. says: "Tried cleaning Washable Wallpaper with soap and water and it turned very brown. What should I have used?"

Answer: A cloth wrung dry, out of lukewarm suds. Water softeners, harsh soaps, alkalis and hot water must be avoided.

Mrs. J.M. asks: "Recipe for a cake called 'Burnt Leather'?"

Answer:

Burnt Leather Cake

½ cup brown sugar, ¼ cup boiling water, ½ cup baking fat, 1 cup white sugar, 2 cups household flour, 2 eggs, 3 tsps. baking powder, 1 tsp. vanilla, 1 cup cold water.

Syrup: Heat brown sugar in pan over fire until dark brown; then add boiling water. Method: Cream fat, add sugar and beaten egg yolks; cream well. Sift flour with baking powder and add, alternately with water to fat mixture. Add syrup (there should be about 5 tbs.) and vanilla. Lastly, add stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in layer cake tins in electric oven at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

MAKE OVER YOUR BEAUTIFUL EVENING DRESS

Because the wearing of evening dresses is no longer considered fashionable, women possessing them need not consider that they have lost all utility.

A part of the "re-make" hints which the Consumer Branch is being given by women who have become interested in its conservation programme and who are anxious to share such suggestions with their fellow-Canadians so that materials and labor may be conserved for essential uses.

"I made a little coat and hat for a child from a useless white coat," one woman reports. "The material was of good quality but the coat was out of shape, out of date and worn in places. The coat was lined with white material from an old slip."

"Women should get all their discarded clothes out of their cupboards and put them back into use after alteration," this woman thinks.

ICE GOES OUT OF RIVER

Early Sunday afternoon the first move of the ice out of the river through the village took place with the usual jam down about the grove. The water rose rapidly and in a short time was at the top of the south side retaining wall, at which height it remained until yesterday around noon when it began to lower and is now down four feet. With the accumulation of snow it was anticipated that there would be an old time flood but with freezing at nights the water has been able to get away without threat of flood.

SALE OF SALVAGED FATS FACILITATED

Following a recent order making compulsory the removal of pelvic fats, kidney fats and other internal fats from beef carcasses at the time of slaughter, information has been released by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board regarding disposal of the salvaged fats. Prices authorized for the salvaged fats and bones are at least five cents a pound net weight for rendered fats and two cents a pound net for unrendered fats, and a quarter of a cent a pound for bones.

Friends of Mr. Frank Carr, a former resident, now living at Black Lake, N.Y., will regret to hear he is a patient in Hepburn hospital, Ogdensburg, having undergone a serious operation.

NO AMMUNITION FOR THE CASUAL HUNTERS

Casual hunters are out-of-luck for ammunition unless they can show special circumstances placing them in the class of essential users, rationing officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced.

The announcement followed publication of an order which rations small arms ammunition and restricts its use to those who can show essential needs, such classes as police, hunters and trappers who depend on game for their livelihood and those who need guns and ammunition for protecting livestock.

To clarify the situation for casual hunters, officials said that the order stipulates that persons who rely on hunting for their food are authorized purchasers. "Of course," they added, "all hunters shoot for food but a large percentage of them don't rely on game for their food. They are so located that food may normally be acquired otherwise than by the shooting of game. They, accordingly, will not be considered authorized purchasers."
