Five Autos Are Damaged In Two Collisions This Week

Five automobiles were damaged and two men have been charged with being intoxicated as a result of two auto accidents this week on Chesterville streets.

Saturday evening about 10.45 two cars, a Ford coupe driven by Harold Smith, and a Chrysler sedan, driven by Wm. Perkins, both of Chesterville, met in a head-on collision on King street in front of C. F. Marshall's residence. The street was lined on both sides with parked cars and as Harold Smith saw a collision was unavoidable he pulled his car as far to the side as possible and stopped. The car driven by Perkins crashed into the Ford and the fronts of both autos were badly damaged. Police Constable Garnet McLean was on the scene immediately and as a result Perkins and a passenger in his car, Hugh Lynch, of Williamsburg, will appear before Police Magistrate John McCormick in Winchester on Monday on a charge of alleged intoxication.

Three automobiles figured in a crash on Monday afternoon at the corner of South Main street and Victoria street, just in front of McCloskey's hotel. Two Pontiac sedans, driven and owned by Duncan McElheran and Asel Merkley, of Chesterville, met head-on as they were turning the corner. McElheran's car was proceeding east from Victoria street and the force of the collision threw his car backward into Frank McCloskey's car parked in front of the hotel, and as a result the three cars were badly damaged.

McElheran's and McCloskey's cars were protected by insurance.

Chesterville Horses Winners

That Chesterville horse lovers have the right idea when they pick up potential prize winners was well demonstrated yesterday afternoon at the Ottawa Ex. when Jas. McAvoy with Pat McGregor carried off first in his class for standard bred stallions and the championship for the same breed, while M. S. Detlor got the ribbon for standard bred mare, three years or over, in harness, and the championship for standard bred mare.

SWIM ST LAWRENCE RIVER

Iroquois.—Foster Hilliard, Toronto, formerly of Japan, and his young son, Joseph, not quite nine years old, swam the river St. Lawrence Saturday, a distance somewhat over a mile. Irwin Hilliard, Jr., brother and uncle, respectively, of the swimmers, rowed with them and kept near enough to give aid should it be required on the way back. Foster Hilliard had his first experience in swimming the river when he was a lad of 14.

Company Promoter (trying to raise money for a new scheme): "But, my dear sir, it will make enormous profits eventually. It's only in its infancy."

Financier: "Maybe—but I'm not."

Threshing Returns Good

A greater part of the harvest has been garnered in this district and threshing is well under way with reports coming from those who have threshed that the yield is beyond the expectations of a few weeks ago when we were suffering from a very considerable shortage of moisture. The quality of the grain so far brought to the local mill for grinding is said to be very high. With last week's heavy rainfall the corn crop has taken on a different appearance, and verified the old saying that hay and corn in this district never fail in the same year. Athough there was a short hay crop it is likely that there will be no considerable shortage of feed during next winter.

C. F. Marselis, of Dunbar, President Dundas Liberals

The Liberals of Dundas County held their annual meeting in Hamilton's Hall, Chesterville, on Saturday afternoon. The meeting was for provincial purposes only, and there was a large attendance from all parts of the county, the spacious hall being well filled. Enthusiastic addresses were made by Senator A. C. Hardy, Brockville; H. A. Plant, President of the Eastern Ontario Liberal Associ- meeting along the line of organizer. These speakers addressed the meeting alone the line of organization, instilling into the meeting that the most important thing in any election is efficient organization, and to be ready for the next fight when the present Government saw fit to appeal to the electors.

Others who addressed the meeting were George Smith, ex-M. L. A., Rowena; Wesley Hamilton, Liberal candidate in the last provincial election, of Chesterville; C. H. Davy, Iroquois; A. Brodie, Morrisburg, and George Earle, Winchester. The executive will meet again about the middle of September to consider questions requiring further discussion and the choosing of a candidate.

The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, C. F. Marselis, Dunbar; vice-president, Miss Von Doran, Morrisburg; sec.-treas., E. E. McInnis, Iroquois.

Directors for the different municipalities who are members of the association are as follows: Iroquois, P. J. Barclay, S. A. Thompson, G. H. Davy; Morrisburg, A. Flynn, A. Clements; Chesterville, F. W. Merkley, George Servage, Jas. Masterson, Howard Fulton; Winchester, Hugh McMaster, Hy. Bessin, George Earle; ,Matilda Kenneth Tuttle, Orval Seeley, Charles McInnis; Mountain, R. Bryan, R. D. Cheney, John Render; Williamsburg, E. A. VanAllen, M. C. Beckstead; Winchester Township, R. D. Fulton, Mahlon Casselman, Morris Servage.

A Bank Failure

The children can't even escape experiencing the effects of the depression financially. We read quite often of banks failing in the neighbouring republic and of the savings lost by the depositors, but here is a story about a bank failure in Canada, and right at Chesterville. The total deposits were completely wiped out by this bank failing . . . to keep the money from a mean marauder.

When Mr. and Mrs. Asel Merkley returned home on Sunday after attending a family re-union at Farran's Point, they found the traces left by a thief or thieves who had entered their home by way of the cellar. One of the children's banks had been emptied and conditions plainly showed that the marauders had beaten a hasty retreat, leaving another bank untouched as well as other sums of money in the house.

Mrs. Margaret Ritchie Passed Away in Winchester

It was with sincere regret that the citizens of Winchester and vicinity heard on Saturday morning of the passing of Mrs. Ritchie who had not been in good health for some time but who at one time was very active in all church and community work, and was a most estimable lady in every respect.

A private funeral was hed at her late residence the home of her brother, Mr. J. D. Stewart, Winchester, on Monday at two p.m., which was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. D. Turner, assisted by Rev. .J. McKay, B. A., B. D., of the United Church.

One daughter, Miss Ritchie, of Ottawa, survives, her husband having passed on many years ago.

A profusion of flowers showed the esteem of her many friends.

Interment was made at Maple Ridge.

Chesterville Wins Game From Colton, N.Y. Team

Chesterville's baseball club crossed the border at the week end and played a snappy game against the team of Colton, N Y., defeating them by a score of 14 to 9. Chesterville stepped to the front in the first frame with three counters, duplicated it in the second, added a pair in the third, giving them a lead over Colton of five runs, the latter coming back in the first innings with three scores and added three more in the fifth, leaving them two down. Chesterville bunched their hits in the sixth for a total of three, adding four more in the final turn at bat for a total of fourteen, while the best Colton could do was a pair in the sixth and a single counter in the last leaving them short five runs to tie things up.

It is expected that Colton will play the return game here on one of the days of the fair, September 19th and 20th.

Rupert---Cameron

Monday afternoon the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Cameron, of Finch, was the scene of a delightful event when their daughter, Rose, became the bride of D. Harris Rupert, son of Mr .and Mrs. C. W. Rupert, the ceremony being performed by Rev. A. H. Sproule, of St. Andrew's, Chesterville, under an arch of evergreens on the lawn. The happy couple were supported by Miss Esther Cameron, sister of the bride, and Mr. Bernard Rupert, brother of the groom. Folowing the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast whe served in the dining-room, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion, when a large number of the friends of the contracting parties were present.

Mrs.W.N. Fulton Entertains In Honour of Her Sister

Mrs. Wesley Fulton, of Chesterville, and Miss Agnes Durant, of Ottawa, were hostesses at a charmingly arranged luncheon at Winchester in honour of their sister Mrs. G. M. Stallmeyer, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who is spending a few weeks as their guest.

Glasses of Auratum lilies and snap dragon adorned the mantels, and the tables were bright with mixed midsummer blooms. The guests included Mrs. G. M. Stallmayer, Mrs. N. W. Beach, Mrs. George Reveler, Mrs A. Sweet, Mrs. R. D. Preston, Mrs. J. J. McKendry, Miss Mary Empey, Miss Mae Rose, Mrs. J. A. McDougall, Mrs. B. F. Smith, Mrs. J. H. Ross, Miss Grace Irving, Mrs. R. Elliott, Mrs. J. C. Challies, Morrisburg; Mrs. C. W. Casselman, Mrs. Thos. Houlehan, Mrs. Geo. Reaburn, Mrs. Graham, of Chesterville. Mrs. Stallmeyer was formerly Miss Nettie Durant, of Winchester.

Fined For Drinking in Auto

After completing an evening's bowling at the greens of the Chesterville Lawn Bowling Club on Tuesday, two members of a visiting bowling club were arrested by Constable Garnet McLean in the act of drinking beer in their auto parked on Main street North. They were taken before Magistrate McCormick at Winchester that night and one of the men fined $100 and costs of $8.45. Eighteen pints of beer found in their car were confiscated.

Miss Edna Durant Becomes Bride of Mr. Claude Carr

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage at Elma on Saturday by Rev. Mr. Cochrane when Miss Edna Durant, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aden Durant, of Beckstead, became the bride of Mr. Claude Carr, son of Mr .and Mrs. Donald Carr, Grantley.

The bride looked winsome in her wedding gown of angel skin silk trimmed with radium lace with accessories to match. She carried a bridal bouquet. Miss Wilda Durant, sister of the bride, and Mr. Glenn Merkley witnessed the ceremony.

Afterwards a dainty luncheon was served at the home of the bride.

The bride travelled in a dress of beige silk with radium lace coat with hat, shoes and stockings to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Carr will reside at Grantey.

LARGE POTATOES

The Record was last week presented with a bag full of potatoes, about the best potaoes we have seen in the middle of August. They were grown by Mr. Ken. Wood, of Mill street, and represent the average run of his crop from an extensive garden. Three potatoes filled the bag and weighed exactly two pounds and six ounces.

Mrs. Wm. Faith, Winchester, Honoured on 92nd Birthday

On Monday last Mrs. Wm. Faith, of Winchester, attained the age of 92 years. A number of friends and relatives sent congratulations by wire, telephone and letter as well as by personal calls.

Among those calling to see her were three nephews: Mr. Wm. Keegan, of Portland, Oregon; Mr. Joe Keegan, of Smiths Falls, and Mr. R. B. Faith, of Brantford, also her pastor, Rev. J. McKay, and Mrs. McKay.

Many beautiful bouquets were sent, showing the high esteem in which Mrs. Faith is held.

Chesterville Out of Running Governor-Gen'l's Competition

In the play downs in lawn bowling for the prizes donated by the Governor-General, Chesterville bowlers won one contest and lost another, placing them in the discard. Friday evening two rinks went to Brockville where they met a like number from Kingston in their first game which Chesterville won, being nine points up on the night's play. In the second game Saturday against two rinks from the Alexandria club they were not quite so successful, losing both games by an eight point margin on the round. The latter games were played one on the local greens with one rink from Alexandria, the other game being played in the eastern town when one local rink made the trip and took the trimming.

Continuing the competition, two rinks from Vittorias, of Ottawa, met a like number of Alexandria rinks in Chesterville Tuesday night defeating them by the wide margin of 25 points.

Without Trader's Licence For Stand at Williamsburg

George Kranchuk, 211 Third Street East, Cornwall, has been charged with operating a pop corn stand at Williamsburg contrary to the Transient Traders Act and has been ordered to appear in police court at Winchester on Monday.

It is stated by police that Kranchuk declined to give his name when questioned in regard to his having a license, and Constable Garnet McLean, of Chesterville, stopped him on the highway to examine Kranchuk's driving permit and thereby obtained the necessary information.

Scottish Atlantic Flyer Warmly Greeted in New York

Five thousand cheering Americans swept down upon Capt. James A. Mollison in a riotous welcome Sunday afternoon when the first man to accomplish a solo east-west Atlantic flight brought his little 'plane to rest at New York at 4.34 p.m.

The Scottish flyer, his 'plane dwarfed by a host of escorting and welcoming 'planes as well as two dirigibles, came in from the north at an easy pace, circled the field several times, and then landed gracefully.

Mollison began taxiing to the nearest hangar, but was forced to stop in the centre of the field where a great police escort swarmed about him and more than a score of photographers fought to get the first "shots" at his smiling face.

The first man to sight the incoming air hero was E. H. Gerald-Shepherd, acting British Consul of New York. He rushed to the 'plane as it came to a stop, extending his hands in greeting. Customs men came at his heels, prepared to examine the flyer's baggage quickly.

Police preparations for Mollison's arrival were far better than usual, and the immense crowd was kept well in order by by more than 200 Nassau County police, who cheered as lustily as the crowds.

Favoured by Tail Wind

Mollison arrived perhaps 10 minute before he was expected. He had been sighted flying low over Boston, Mass. His 190-mile trip down the New England coast line from Boston Bay, had taken less than an hour and three-quarters. He was favoured by a tail wind from Canada, and by particularly favourable winds from Boston South.

He was smiling and his hair fell in loose tangles across his forehead when he stepped from the 'plane; he appeared tired but said he hoped to start back to England in a few days, "possibly two or three,' 'although he has not yet decided definitely on that course.

After photographers had swarmed around him and he had been greeted by city and British Consular officials, Mollison said:

"I'm happy to be here and I'm glad I came by my own means of transportation by air."

First Thought of Wife

Mollison's first thought again was for his wife and he asked the United Press to inform her that he had arrived safely and was—"well, very happy about it."

Mollison said he had thought about making his present daring transatlantic venture his last hazardous flight. "But it's one of those things," he added. "I can't tell now what I'll do in the future."

Mollison was particular about assuring that his little silver-grey 'plane was being cared for, and then he turned himself over to the British Acting Consul-General, E. H. Gerald-Shepherd.

After policemen, shouting and shoving, had half-carried the little flyer to a limousine, crammed him in the door and slammed it shut, the party was whirled away behind a motorcycle escort to New York.

Mollison described his flight for the benefit of the sound cameramen. At first he had good weather and sighted at least a dozen ships, he said. After that there was nothing but fog and storm.

"Flying in this bad weather tires me greatly," he declared. "I am still tired. When I reached Pennfield Ridge it was problematical whether I had enough gas or not to get to New York. I was terribly tired, so I decided to land."

"When are you going back, Captain?"

"I can't tell the exact date," he replied, "but I'm going back soon." He paused, then added: "You know, I've just been married."

Died While Binding Grain

Thomas D. Nesbitt died Wednesday last while binding grain in a field near his home at Toye's Hill. He had been a sufferer from heart trouble for some years past.

Born in Williamsburg 79 years ago, Mr. Nesbitt lived all his life in the district where he died, a highly esteemed resident and neighbour. He was a member of the United Church.

He leaves to mourn, his widow; three brothers, Henry, of Finch; Charles, of Avonmore, and Duncan, of Kemptville; three daughters, Mrs. J. Shaver, of Toronto; Mrs. Alva Runions, of Newington; Mrs. George Myers, of Winchester, and one son, Ivan Nesbitt, of Iroquois.

At an auction sale the business was interrupted by a whispered conversation between the auctioneer and one of the prospective bidders. At the conclusion the master of ceremonies announced:

"A gentleman present tells me that since proceedings started in this room he has lost a wallet containing five hundred pounds. He authorizes me to state that he offers a reward of fifty pounds for its return."

There was a short silence, then a Jewish member of the crowd nodded his head to the auctioneer and said:

"Sixty."

CITY LIFE NOT FOR WILD COUNTRY STEER

Toronto.—Scores of persons dashed for safety, two cars were wrecked and traffic in the Sunnyside district was demoralized for half an hour on Monday when a wild steer broke loose and went on the ramapge.

The beast got out of the truck in which it was being carried and made a wild sortie along the bathing beach while swimmers and sunbathers plunged into the water for refuge. Police, responding to an alarm, chased the steer into the streets. There it crashed into two cars, fell and broke its neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Wes. Ezard, of Osnabruck Centre, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Milton Crites.

A certain battalion was lined up for inspection. With them was their mascot, a Great Dane. Something annoyed the dog and it uttered a loud "Bow-wo."

The whole battalion formed fours.

Farmers Are Chief Gainers In Results of Conference

Ottawa.—The sorely pressed Canadian farmers get the benefits coming and going in the trade agreement signed Saturday between this Dominion and the United Kingdom. They get important concessions for what they sell and hope to sell in the United Kingdom markets and may well expect to get lower prices in some of the goods they buy because of the lower Canadian tariffs against Great Britain.

In expressing satisfaction over the result of the negotiations, Hon. Robt. Weir, Minister of Agriculture, explained that from one end of the agreement to the other Canadian agriculture has yielded nothing. The advantages they will receive will be far-reaching.

The lifting of the restrictions on Canadian live cattle going into the United Kingdom marks the successful termination of a battle that had been going on for 25 years. During the past two years in spite of the restrictions Canada shipped from 25,000 to 29,000 head annually.

The present restrictions on cattle include a three-day quarantine in Canada, a 28-day quarantine for near-fats in the U. K. ports, a six-day quarantine for store cattle, and females not allowed in at all. All the restrictions are to be lifted with the exception of a one-day quarantine in Canada which is no great hindrance and the provision that females for breeding purposes must be of a certain standard before they can leave U. K. ports for the interior.

Cattle men here declared that the lifting of the restrictions would mean at least $3 a head more shippers would receive and in many cases much in excess of that figure. It would eliminate one of the great uncertainties which make the shipping of cattle hazardous for the Canadian exporter from a financial standpoint.

Canada will receive a preference of two shillings per eight bushels on wheat entering the British market. Australia gets the same. This works out at six cents a bushel at par or about five cents under present rates of exchange. Here again it marks the culmination of a long agitation although a considerable body of Western farmers have expressed the opinion that it will not help much because the two Dominions affected produce much more than the United Kingdom can absorb. They argue that accordingly the tariff will not help them any more than the tariff on wheat in the United States, a wheat exporting country helped the farmers there.

In Government circles here it is contended that the agreement will help very much. The greatest benefit of the treaty will be action to prevent Russia from breaking the wheat market.

Australia and Canada do not sell the same type of wheat so they are not in competition. With the market regulated against Russian dumping and Argentine having to meet a tariff of six cents which will more than counteract any advantage they had in exchange on wheat, it will give Canadian wheat a little the better of the competition. The combination of the curb on Russian dumping and the preference should work excellently, officials here declare.

A commission in Great Britain is studying the hog raising industry and accordingly the agreement on bacon and ham is not so definite as it otherwise would have have been. It was learned from those still here after the conference that the plan of the British Government is so to restrict importations of hams and bacons from Denmark and other countries that the price in the United Kingdom will be increased from the present 68 shillings per 112 pounds to 80 shillings in order to make it possible for United Kingdom farmers to raise hogs at a profit.

Canadian shippers would get the advantage of such increased price. Canada would also be on a quota. She could not ship into the United Kingdom more than 270,000,000 pounds per annum. This has to be done to insure that the quota would increase the price. Since it is seven times the quantity of hams Canada will ship into the United Kingdom this year, it is not an irksome restriction.

People who have studied the bacon trade and the great possibilities of Canada getting into this trade in a big way, say the difference between 68 shillings and 80 shillings would mean that whereas now there is no profit in shipping bacon to Britain, the higher shipping rate would prove satisfactory. So confident is the agricultural department in this development that it is planning a campaign to educate farmers in the improvement in select bacon pig breeding.

Solicitor: "You realize that, if you remarry, your late husband's fortune goes to his brother?"

Client: "Of course! It's the brother I'm marrying!"

"Why did you leave the hospital without the doctor's permission?"

'Oh, just to show there was no ill-feeling."

In the grey light of early morning the traveller faced the night clerk of the country hotel. "You gave me the worst bed in the place," he began. "If you don't change my bed before to-night, I shall go to another hotel." "There's no difference in the beds, sir," replied the clerk, respectfully.

Police Race With Serum Save Young Boy's Life

Roaring for 87 miles through the thick of holiday traffic Saturday afternoon, five motorcycle officers in relays between London and Guelph averaged a mile a minute in an effort to bring serum to save the life of a six-year-old boy who was facing death in Guelph General Hospital.

When Dr. H. O .Howitt, of Guelph, found that the life of his patient depended upon obtaining a serum which could only be obtained from the laboratories of the Victoria Hospital at London, he called in the aid of the city police, who in turn turned to the provincial police in an endeavour to make all speed in saving the child's life. From hospital to hospital the officers sped, losing no moment, and they were rewarded last night that only their effort had brought his patient to safety.

The child had been suffering from inflammation of the brain. The Victoria hospital had a diagnosis of the case, and when Dr. Howitt 'phoned the hospital that the police would call for the serum the serum was prepared with haste, and despatched immediately. From the time the aid of the police was first called until the serum reached Guelph Hospital scarcely one hour and 50 minutes had elapsed.

Theft Mystery Is Solved

Relations were recently becoming more and more strained among the occupants of a tenement building in a Paris suburb. Morning after morning one tenant or another found that the bottle of milk left outside the door of his flat had been emptied.

The whole place became invested with an atmosphere of suspicion. Accusations were loosely uttered and threats of actions for slander were made in retort. One curious point was noted. The thief, after emptying a bottle, invariably left it lying horizontally.

Early one morning the marauder was caught. He was a big black cat which, being unable to get his head into the bottle, upset it and lapped up the contents from the floor. Practice had made him perfect. It was observed that, while overturning the bottle with one paw, he eased it down with another, thus performing the whole operation noiselessly.

Youth (pointing out beauties of the neighbourhood to newcomer): "There! Isn't she a peach? She knocks all the rest of the girls down here silly!"

Friend: "Ha! A real 'flatten-'em' blonde!"

Training Camp at L'Orignal Closes Successful Session

The Young People's Leadership Training Camp, held under the auspices of the Montreal-Ottawa Conference of the United Church of Canada, concluded its sessions on Sunday, August 14th. The camp, which is an outstanding feature of the Young People's programme of the United Church, is held annually on the spacious grounds of Camp Macaulay, L'Orignal, and includes in its programme the elements of worship, study, recreation and fellowship.

Courses of study and leaders were as follows:

"The Teachings of Jesus"—Rev. C. C. Gilbert, B. A., Fort Coulonge, Que.

"Old Testament Prophecy"—Rev. D. H. MacVicar, M. A., B. D., Montreal, Que.

"Missions"—Rev. N. M. Rattee, M. A., Martintown, Ont.

"Literary Appreciation" — Rev. Foster Hilliard, B. A., Toronto.

'Musical Appreciation"—Rev. C. H. Dawes, M. A., B. D., Moulinette, Ont.

"Young People's Work"—Rev. D. T. I. Forsythe, B. A., B. D., Montreal, Que.

The camp was in charge of Mr. W. H. Scrivens, of Ottawa, as camp director, with Miss Marion Lowry, of Ottawa, as secretary. Recreation was conducted by Rev. J. C. Eastcott,

Mornings were spent in study groups, afternoons in sport and recreation, and evenings in programmes of a varied nature, usually conducted around the camp-fire In addition to the campers themselves, those contributing to evening programmes included Dr. H. C .Sutherland, B. A., of L'Orignal, who addressed the camp on "The Ice Age at L'Orignal," and Rev. R. G. Katsunoff, B. A., of Montreal, who led in a much enjoyed programme of folk songs.

Play Presented to Big Crowd By Morewood Young People

Friday evening the play, "The Eyes of Love," was presented by the Young People of Morewood United Church under the auspices of St. Andrew's Church to a large audience in the Music Hall, Chesterville. The play was highly amusing and contained many educational features which provided an entertainment of the highest class.

Judge Barry, one of the leading characters of the play, was cleverly portrayed by Mr. Thomas Reveler while his wife, Mrs. Barry, was played by Mrs. Russell Swerdfeger. Miss Anna Martin, who played the part of their adopted daughter, was very charming throughout the entire play. Reeta, the two-faced friend, was skilfully played by Mrs. Thomas Reveler. Bert Wade, Reeta's brother, was well acted by Russell Swerdfeger, while Royal Manton, Bert's rival for the hand of Gailya, was taken by Keith McConnell. Mrs. Clarke Smith in her usual capable manner portrayed the humourous part of the negro servant, Caroline. Clarke Smith, as the manacled man, also played an important rôle in this entertainment. Lora, a lively housemaid, was acted by Mrs. Jack Edgerton, and Clark, a busy butler, by Carman Swerdfeger, were worthy of comment.

During the intermission music was provided by the Morewood orchestra as well as a delightful solo by Mrs. Bert Munro, of Arvida.

Collecting Antique Watches Is This Jeweller's Hobby

John J. Lightsone, who conducts a jewelry repair business on Park Avenue, Montreal, makes a hobby of collecting odd watches and has accumulated no fewer than 400 of them during 29 years of collecting. Recently he was in Perth and Smiths Falls, and while in Smiths Falls bought an old specimen from N. H. Corbett, jeweller, a silver watch made in 1704 by James Andrews of London, which is of the old hinged type and is highly valued by the purchaser. It is of silver with the movement finished in gold. .

Mr. Lightstone's collection is attracting the attention of several national museums and he has received some splendid offers for certain watches in his possession. Included in his collection are a few heavily jewelled time-pieces which were once the property of Royalty and are valued at a high figure.

Mr. Lightstone is a student of the early period of watch-making. In the sixteenth century and to the mid-Victoria period watches were a luxury enjoyed only by the nobility and persons possessing much wealth. In those days watchmaking was classed with the arts and watchmakers were all members of the Guild. Thus when a timepiece was completed the finished product was rigidly examined by Guild officials and later by Government employees who applied the "Hallmark."

In that early period watches were made to order and required from eight months to a year's work. Fabulous sums were paid for them, ranging from £100 to £800. English watchmakers turned out the finest timepieces of all, according to Mr. Lightstone's observations, but he spoke highly of the ancient workmen of France and Switzerland.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario epartment of Agriculture

Preliminary estimate of the yield per acre of various crops over the province is as follows: Wheat, 30.1 bushels; fall rye, 17.2 bushels; hay, and clover, tons per acre, 1.37; alfalta, tons per acre, first cutting, 1.79.

Ontario's Pear Crop

Prospects are reported to be exceptionally good for a large pear crop in Ontario. The trees came through the winter with very little injury and weather conditions have been excellent for the development of the fruit. Niagara district looks for a yield double that of last year and Burlington also expects to top last year's figures. Taken as a whole, the production for the province should be far in excess of 1931. It is interesting to note that weather conditions h. been so favourable in Nova Scotia, where the crop will be about two-thirds of that of last year, while British Columbia will likely have a crop about equal to that of 1931.

New Tomato Package

A report to the Ontario Marketing Board states that a new package for hothouse tomatoes has been devised and is making a hit with the trade across the border, bringing a premium of about 15c per basket over other packages. The new package is a corrugated paper carton with a wood handle, giving it the appearance of a peck basket. Each tomato is labelled and cellophane wrapped. The cellophane of course is transparent and the buyer can easily see the tomatoes without removing the wrapper and spoiling the appearance of the package. The cellophane wrapper also has other advantages as it keeps the tomato firm and keeps out moisture.

Current Crop Report

Harvesting operations have been delayed by catchy weather in both Western and Eastern Ontario. Pastures in Western Ontario and part of Central Ontario are reported excellent. The condition of cattle and the milk flow is above normal for the time of year. In Eastern Ontario, on the other hand, the pastures are very poor and the cattle and milk flow are suffering accordingly. South Simcoe reports practically all early potatoes harvested and sold from the district. One farmer north of Alliston dug over 2,000 bags from 14 acres. He reports the demand much greater than was expected, truckers taking their supply right from the field. In Lincoln hail storms caused many thousand dollars worth of damage to peaches, pears, grapes, plums and apples. A tobacco crop of 20,000,000 pounds is expected in Norfolk and harvesting operations are now in full swing. The blueberry crop in Muskoka and Parry Sound districts has not been up to expectations.

Trade in Farm Products

A statement just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates the total of Canada's trade in farm products for the fiscal year 1931-32 at $308,480,201; of this amount $224,728,269 represents farm products exported while $90,751,932 represents farm products imported.

Mushroom Exploiters Busy

The unemployment situation has proved a boon to unprincipled promoters selling muchroom spawn, says the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in a warning just issued. Promoters describe mushroom growing as a new and unexploited business requiring only a small capital investment and comparatively little experience, with almost certain prospects for larger profits because of the alleged scarcity and high prices of mushrooms. These claims are for the most part misleading, says the Bureau, advising anyone who proposes to grow mushrooms to thoroughly investigate market conditions and the risks of the business.

Ontario Farm Organizations Show Large Annual Turnover

Figures reveal that during the past year 42 Ontario farmers' co-operatives embracing 280,000 members did an average yearly business per member of $587. This does not by any means represent all of the co-operative effort in the province. It does tend to show, however, that farmers are uniting in their efforts to keep in business. The sixteen million and a half dollars worth of business conducted by those included in the above figure represents sales of live stock, wool, dairy products, poultry products, fruit and vegetables, seed and grain, and miscellaneous products and the purchase for re-sale to members of such articles as machinery, feed, fertilizers, twine and many other things.

European Pine Shoot Moth

The European pine shoot moth was imported into Canada in recent years and is rapidly becoming a serious menace to many species of pine grown in this country. Scotch pine, red pine, jack pine, and mugho pine are particularly susceptible to attack. Every owner of ornamental pine trees, pine plantations or natural pine forests, especially in Southern Ontario, is urgently requested to co-operate in an attempt at an early eradication of this pest. Cut off the infested shoots and buds in the fall. A valuable service will be rendered by reporting any infestation to the Dominion Entomologist, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. No postage is required on letters sent to the above address.

Census Farm Figures

Figures released by the Bureau of Statistics in connection with the cen- B. A., B. D., of Avonmore, Ont.
sus taken last year show that the number of farms in Ontario has decreased from 198,053 in 1921 to 192,-174 in 1931, a difference of 5,779 farms. The number of Ontario farms by acre content is given as follows: 1 to 10 acres, 15,934; 11 to 50 acres, 30,605; 51 to 100 acres, 68,620; 101 to 200 acres, 58,925; 201 to 299 acres, 9,451; 300 acres and over. 9,269.,

Another report shows the number of automobiles on Canadian farms to have increased from 157,000 to 1921 to 321,300 in 1931. Ontario has by far the largest number of cars, 126,-716. It has also 14,586 motor trucks. Other farm machinery is listed as follows: Tractors, 19,000; gasoline engines, 45,000; binders, 124,000; threshing machines, 8,400; cream separators, 27,000; milking machines, 4,000; silos, 35,700; electric motors, 9,600. A total of 32,924 farms in Ontario have gas or electric light, 42,380 have radio, 103,932 have telephone, 20,154 water piped in the kitchen, and 12,179 piped in the bathroom.

Ensilage Oats, Peas and Vetches

The following excerpts from the annual report of the Dominion Field Husbandman for 1931 will be of special interest to farmers who include oats, peas and vetches for ensilage in their general crop plan:

Oats, peas and vetches in the dough stage produce a high yield of good quality ensilage and cutting at this stage is to be recommended over earlier or later cuttings.

It is not advisable to allow the oats, peas and vetch crop to wilt more than two or three hours before ensiling.

Adding water to oats, peas and vetches does not improve the quality of ensilage.

Oats, peas and vetches put into the silo without cutting will produce ensilage which is mouldy and not fit for feed.

The length of time in storage appears to have no adverse effect on oats-peas-vetch ensilage. Lots kept in separate test silos through periods of three, seven and nine months, respectively, at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, gave excellent ensilage. The length of time in storage apparently had no adverse effect on the material.

Big Time Hockey Team Will Be Back In Ottawa

Out of the National Hockey League for one season—1931-32—the Ottawa Senators, famed in the annals of Canada's winter pastime, will be back on home ice this year.

Announcement of the return of the Senators to the Capital, made at the N. H. L. meeting in Toronto Monday, was greeted with keen interest by Ottawa hockey followers. It was not a complete surprise, however, as rumours during the last few weeks have repeatedly declared the Senators would be home for the winter, and developments of the last ten days made it almost a certainty, though official silence was maintained.

Financial difficulties of the Ottawa Hockey Club, owners of the Senator players and franchise in the National loop, swept the big time game from the Capital's Auditorium at the start of the 1931-32 season. Dwindling interest on the part of local fans, and mounting deficits brought the decision from the club directors to remain out of the circuit last season.

Agreements were reached with the heads of the National Hockey League and last year practically all of the Senator's squad played with other teams in the circuit, but the ice-stars, their "rental contracts" automatically cancelled with the closing of the 1931-32 season, are heading homeward again.

All the players have been recalled, a recent announcement said, and the Senators will be re-inforced by Cooney Weiland, a former Boston Bruin star. Weiland was traded by the Bruins to Ottawa who, via, the New York Americans, turned over Joe Lamb in the deal. Lamb, so far as known, will be the only absentee.

The other members of the team are Alex. Connell and Bill Beveridge, goalers; Alex. Smith, Allan Shields, Art Smith, Harold Starr and Leo Bourgeault, defencemen; Frank Finnegan, Hec Kilrea, Wally Kilrea, Danny Cox, Bill Touhey, Syd. Howe, Art Gagne and Jack Kinsella, forwards.

T. Frank Ahearn, M. P., president of the Ottawa Hockey Club, was out of the city and whether he and others will operate the team or whether another set of interests will buy the franchise could not be learned. Tommy Gorman, who in past years held the spotlight in local hockey, and who at one time was reported to have purchased the franchise, was non-committal.

He declared he did not want to discuss hockey at the present time, but added: "I may have something to say later."

Kaye Don Makes 115 Miles In Trial Run at Detroit

The world's fastest motorboat, with her pilot, Kaye Don, British speed ace, at the wheel, cut a foaming wave over the Harmsworth course in Lake St. Claire Monday at a speed variously estimated from 110 to 115 miles an hour.

It was the first test of Miss England III., the British challenging boat, in United States waters, and at the close of a 15-mile run Don pronounced the motors satisfactory, and said the test marked the end of public appearances of the craft. He said he probably would make no further runs over the course until the marker buoys are placed over the route he and Gar Wood, veteran United States pilot, will race for the Harmsworth trophy.

Meanwhile Wood continued tests of his Miss America X., his new 48-cylinder speed giant, near his boat-well at Algonac, Mich. The two boats will not be seen together until the first day of the race.

Don and Dick Garner, his youthful mechanic, took the Miss England III. onto the course Monday. Twice Don took the boat down the course with throttles wide open, circling a press boat one time, and skimming dangerously close to the shore line another time.

Observers clocked the boat at between 110 and 115 miles an hour, and offered the general opinion that the craft performed as well as Miss America X. did in previous tests. Don recently set the world's record for speed on water—119.81 miles an hour, at Loch Lomond, Scotland, with the boat.

The speed of Wood's boat has not been revealed, although observers have clocked the craft in runs near Algonac at speeds estimated as high as 125 miles an hour.

Several thousand spectators lined the banks Monday to watch the trial run.

The first heat of the Harmsworth race will be run September 3, with successive heats on September 5 and 6.

Foot Comfort

ONCE it was the "fashion" to boast of tiny feet, to suffer agonies for the sake of appearances. But now, women go to business, engage in all kinds of sports, and sound, healthy feet are vitally necessary to the full enjoyment of life. In fact, painful feet are a decided social handicap.

Wilkie's Glove-Phit Shoes

are made to keep your feet youthful, to give your feet the support and protection they need . . . to assure you perfect ease and comfort no matter how much standing or walking you have to do.

They embody many scientific features in their construction designed to relieve all unnatural strain on the bones and muscles of the feet, and to encourage you to walk correctly. They are the most perfectly comfortable shoes made for men and women.

Young Bridal Couple Honored with Presentation

On Tuesday evening, after a short wedding trip along the St. Lawrence, Mr .and Mrs. Claude Carr, Grantley, returned home and a reception was given them at the home of Mr. and Mrs Donald Carr. An address was read and a beautiful dinner set was given in token of the respect the bride and groom are held in the community. Claude thanked the crowd in behalf of his wife and himself for the beautiful gifts. Lunch was served and a pleasant evening was brought to a close.

Last Thursday evening the bride-to-be was taken by surprise when about seventy friends and neighbours gathered at her home in Beckstead to spend one more evening with her before her approaching marriage. The evening was spent in games for the young folks while the older people had an old-time visit.

Just before the dainty lunch was served, Miss Durant was called to a place of honour and Miss Pauline McMillan read an address and Miss Edna McPherson presented Miss Durant with a table of beautiful and useful gifts. Miss Durant replied in her usual cheery manner, then all joined in singing "For She's A Jolly Good Fellow." Then the members of the gathering wished the bride-elect a bon voyage through life.

Loses Control of Auto; Says Mouse Ran Up Sleeve

New Liskeard. — To Caledonia's ploughman poet, the field mouse was a "wee, sleekit, cow'rin', tim'rous beastie," but it as a moot point if a brother farmer, R. H. Booth, of Earlton, has the same tender regard for the specimen of mus sylvaticus wh is the reason for his pending appearance in police court at Englehart on Monday, charged with a breach of the Highway Traffic Act. Booth, driving alone into town from his home, got off the road at a narrow point a mile and a half north of here, and when Provincial Constable H. Allsopp, traffic officer, went to investigate as he patrolled that section of the Ferguson Highway, Booth blamed his predicament on a mouse. It appeared, he told the officer, that the "beastie" had run up his sleeve while he was driving, and that, in his efforts to dislodge it, he lost control of the machine. The constable pursued the enquiry further, discovered, he said, the brakes were practically non est, and laid a charge.

THE TIDE HAS TURNED

THE tide has definitely turned," was the cheerful message conveyed to the Toronto Star by Roger W Babson, noted United States economist, over the long distance telephone from his office in Wellesley Hills, Mass.

Gradual improvement is to be expected; present improvement has been justified by fundamentals; the ills of the world have been remedied and we are now in a period of recovery in the opinion of this economist who has made a life study of statistics as related to business.

Babson predicted the stock market crash of 1929 and subsequent depression.

Asked if the present appreciation in security values and firming of quotations for certain commodities marked the turn, Mr. Babson replied emphatically: "I do." He looks for gradual improvement rather than a meteoric rise and says people should not expect "to go through the roof all at once."

"People have come to their senses and realize that contraction and deflation had been carried too far and that the market was oversold just the same as expansion and over buying of the market was carried too far in 1929," Mr. Babson said. "The present improvement has been justified by betterment in fundamentals. Sentiment has shown a distinct change for the better."

The actress' small daughter was boasting. "My mother's just been painted by a famous artist."

"Huh," said her friend, "my mother doesn't need an artist. She can paint herself."

Mistress: "Maggie, I think I'll take one of the children to church this morning."

Maggie: "Yes, ma'am."

Mistress: "Which one do you think would go best with this dress?"

Popularity

There are two ways to become popular. One way is to tell other people all about your business; the other, keep close mouthed on your own business—don't tell anything.

The two friends were sauntering aimlessly through the park when Jackson nodded his head at an approaching figure of a man.

"It's very strange," he whispered confidingly to his friend, "but this fellow coming along here always reminds me of you."

"But he doesn't look a bit like me," put in his companion.

"No," murmured the other, 'but you both owe me a lot of money."

BEARS AND BERRIES

Smiths Fals Telegram. — The thimbleberry patch on the farm of Mr. E. M. Hayes, in North Elmsley and adjoining Otty Lake, has been a great attraction for the mother black bear and her two cubs lately. A few days ago Mrs. Ira Hayes was picking berries in the patch when she came upon the bear and two cubs. The mother bear started to growl so Mrs. Hayes left her in undisputed possession of the berries. Mr. E. M. Hayes reports that they lost two sheep lately and as no trace of them has been found he came to the conclusion that the bear had carried them off. Other neighbours in that locality have reported seeing the bear and her cubs.

THE HOME-TOWN PAPER

Kincardine Review-Reporter

THE merchant's relations to his home town paper are supposed to be those of an advertiser. This is a narrow view. The home town paper is an institution. The merchant can no more escape its influence n body else in the community, whether he advertises in it or not.

Yet, as a consistent advertiser his relation with the local newspaper becomes definitely constructive. He becomes a part of this institution without which no community can express itself. Whatever its merits or demerits, the home town paper is an expression of the community. Literally, it is the "Voice of the People" in a sense that cannot hold true for any other medium.

This institution keeps friends in touch with friends. To the best of its ability it answers Who, What, When, Where, How and Why? It brings the individual out of himself. It speaks the local language. It interprets community life. Week by week or day by day, it tells the story of the town and country.

Most of us are so accustomed to the home town paper that we take it as a matter of course. .If we think anything about it at all, we think of human beings. The wonder about the home town paper is that it contains so few mistakes, not so many.

To the merchant, especially, the home town paper is an opportunity. His business, too, is a local institution. Unless it finds some kind of expresssion in the home town paper both the paper and the business have to an important extent failed to function. Each is affected somewhat by every successive failure in this respect.

It does not cost a great deal of money to advertise in the local paper. Most advertisers are over judicious rather than extravagant. It is the continual message that counts most. Sporadic advertisements now and then are of doubtful value. Perhaps they are better than no advertising at all. Every advertisement placed by a business house should blend into every other advertisement it places. The merchant should think in terms of a campaign rather than in terms of the single insertion.

Vast progress has been made in advertising within recent years. Outstanding examples of it are to be found in the national field. Locally, however, advertising has much room for development. Aside from one or two of the big stores, the average merchant in the average small town gives too little study to the power of advertising.

But conditions are changing. More and more merchants are coming to realize that they are losing money and prestige when they are not to be found in the advertising columns of the home town paper. This is one of the healthiest signs in the field of retail merchandising.

Newspapers' Strenuous Times

The town of Pembroke in the Ottawa Valley, with a population of 9,000, found out a short time ago that it couldn't support two newspapers and a newly established one had to quit. Now, the other paper, the Standard-Observer, which has been published twice a week since September, 1929, finds that it will have to revert to a weekly as the twice-a-week paper has been a losing game. The Standard-Observer is a first-class newspaper, however, and in a recent issue states that it would keep on publishing twice-a-week, if they "could see the end of the economic upheaval." But they cannot, so decided to put the plug in now and start again when business conditions warrant. The Standard-Observer says the decision has been reached with very considerable regret as they have a plant capable of producing a daily newspaper.

CANADA'S MUSKRAT BECOMES A NUISANCE IN EUROPE

The Canadian muskrat, when in his native habitat is kept under control by his native enemies, and also by hunters who are after his hide. The situation is different in Europe. The muskrat was first introduced to that continent in 1905 by a nobleman of Bohemia and later by the Crown Prince of Germany. But the animal spread so rapidly as to become a public danger. By 1925 the circle of distribution was nearly 400 miles, and a vigourous campaign was started by the governments of Germany and Austria, at considerable expense against him. The British Government has also passed regulations providing that precautions against their escape must be taken by those permitted to farm them. A distinguished army officer was recently fined at a petty sessions for failure to comply with the regulations. The history of the muskrat in Europe illustrates once more the danger of importing foreign animals, birds or plants.

Her Suitor: "Don't trust me, sir?"

Her Father: "Yes; but will the landlord, the butcher, and the grocer do the same?"

Thomas: "What towns did you go through on your motor tour?"

Till: "I don't know. We lost our road map."

KILLED BY STARLINGS; GROVE TO BE CUT DOWN

Kingsville.—Killed by the "droppings" of millions of starling, a grove of 3,000 white and Scotch pines will be cut down on the Jack Miner bird sanctuary next week.

Planted 20 years ago, and a year ago providing one of the beauty spots of the sanctuary the trees to-day are as "dead as matchwood," Mr. Miner reported.

"It's like a forest of ghosts," he complained. "The other trees don't seem to have been affected by the birds' droppings, but the pines are wiped out. There's nothing to do but take them out."

In two years, according to Manly Miner, son of the famous naturalist, the starlings have grown so plentiful that all efforts to deplete them have failed. More than 200,000 of the birds have been trapped in nets, and thousands of shots have been fired at them. The birds netted were taken to Windsor to feed foreign unemployed.

In a statement to the Canadian Press, Mr. Miner said no efforts had been made to entice the birds to the sanctuary. "On the contrary, we did everything to keep them from coming here to invade our sanctuary."

Caught Large Sturgeon Fishing at Norway Bay

Perth Expositor. — Messrs. Bun Steel and Ernest Tysick spent the week end at Norway Bay with friends and while there Bun landed a 47½ pound sturgeon, which was a whopper even for this species of the finny tribe. The night was clear and the water calm, so they took a line along to trawl with, while rowing in a boat. At first the young man thought the hook was caught on a log, and then the line slackened. A Norway Bay man who was in the boat said it must be a fish and to pull in the slack line. Doing so Bun had the surprise of his life when he saw the "small whale" being drawn towards the boat. The Norway Bay man helped land the fish and it tipped the scales at 47½ pounds. Frequently sturgeon are caught in the St. Lawrence that weigh 25 pounds but one going double this weight is the exception. They have large mouths in which are some very formidable teeth and these are capable of inflicting a wound of no small proportions if they come in contact with the fisherman's hand in threshing about.

What Canada Gets and Gives In Agreement With Britain

Canada gets by her agreement with the United Kingdom:

Preferences in the United Kingdom market as follows: Wheat in grain, two shillings per quarter or about six cents a bushel at par. Butter, 15 shillings per cwt. (112 lbs.) or about $3.75 at par. Cheese, 15 per cent ad valorem. Raw apples, four shillings sixpence per cwt., or $1.08 par. Raw pears, four shillings sixpence per cwt., or $1.08 par. Canned apples, three shillings sixpence per cwt., or 85 cents. Dried fruits, 10 shillings sixpence per cwt., $2.52 par. Eggs in shell, from one shillings (24 cents) to on shilling ninepence (43 cents) per great hundred (10 dozen), (according to grade). Condensed milk, whole, sweetened, five shillings per cwt., or $1.20 par. Copper, unwrought, whether refined or not, in ingots, bars, blocks, slabs, cakes, and rods, twopence per lb. (4 cents). Free entry for Canadian eggs, poultry, butter, cheese, and other milk products for three years certain, with possible revision after that period.

Continued free entry to the British market under the Import Duties Act. This act imposed by the United Kingdom general tariff on a number of commodities. These duties would have become applicable to those commodities from Canada after November 15, but for the agreement.

Continuation of the present 10 per cent duty on foreign lumber, fish, both fresh and sea canned salmon, other canned fish, asbestos, zinc and lead, with Canadian products free.

Modification of restrictions against Canadian live cattle on agreed lines. This it is estimated, will mean at least $3.00 more per head to the Canadian shipper.

Bacon and ham quota up to a maximum of 2,500,000 cwt. per annum.

Existing margin of preference on Canadian tobacco to continue for 10 years.

While potatoes are not specifically mentioned, Great Britain will consider lifting the embargo against the Canadian product.

What Canada Gives

New or increased margins of preference on 220 items in the Canadian tariff. Many items which were subject to preferential rates transferred to the free list.

These changes are understood to be in the iron and steel, textile, chemical, glass and other schedules, but details are witheld for the time being.

Protection against United Kingdom products to be given only those industries which have sound opportunity for success.

United Kingdom producers to receive full opportunity of reasonable competition in Canadian markets.

Canada will appoint the Tariff Board, which will review tariffs on re quest of the United Kingdom.

Duties against United Kingdom products not to be increased except on report of the Tariff Board.

Existing surcharges on United Kingdom products to be abolished as soon as finances of Canada will permit.

Sympathetic consideration to be given to reducing and ultimately abolishing the exchange dumping duty.

Modification of regulations on the importation of pedigree stock from the United Kingdom.

SELECTING PULLETS FOR WINTER EGG PRODUCTION

Experimental Farms Note

EGG PRICES are invariably higher in winter than in summer, hence winter egg production is one of the important factors contributing to a profitable poultry enterprise. Winter egg production is influenced by breeding, feeding, health and general management of the flock.

At the Experimental Station, Fredericton, pullets are selected from high producing hens and males are used whose dams have been good winter producers as well as having a high total production. Pullets should be selected which are healthy, well developed, vigourous and typical of the breed they represent. Pullets of the heavy breeds should be hatched in April preferably about the fifteenth of the month. Pullets of light breeds should be hatched during the latter part of April or early in May. By hatching at that time the pullets will have time to develop sufficiently before being brought into production. There seems to be a correlation between body weight and size of egg so if pullets are forced into production before they are properly developed, egg-size may suffer.

Young birds should be fed on a good growing ration. More vigourous birds will be obtained if they are allowed free access to range which is abundantly supplied with green feed and provision should be made for rearing away from adult stock on ground that is not contaminated. Intestinal parasites are a very serious menace to the poultry breeder and they can best be controlled by rearing chicks away from the adult stock on ground which has not been ranged for at least a year and which in the meantime, has been ploughed and seeded. Birds should be brought in from range the latter part of September and placed in winter quarters with plenty of ventilations and also placed on a regular laying ration.

Dunbar

On Tuesday evening, August 16th, more than 200 friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Younge, Dunbar, to do honour to their son Floyd and his bride, Ruth Bowman. A large platform had been built outside where dancing was enjoyed by all. About 11.30 the bride and groom were called to the platform and presented with a handsome fibre suite, a token of friendship and goodwill. Mr. Hubert Barclay read the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Younge,—It is with great pleasure that we are gathered here to-night to express our good wishes upon your recent marriage.

The present occasion is joyous indeed,—partly because of the sacredness of the association into which you have entered. Marriage is something more than a record of the triumph of love. A man loved by a virtuous woman carries a talisman which renders him invulnerable; everyone feels that such a one's life has a higher value than that of others.

Ruth, we welcome you to our community, and may we, in the words of the poet, assure you of our sentiments:

"Had I the power to carve or print
Thy future, my dear friend,
It would be fair and ever bright,
Unclouded tothe end."

Floyd, as you have entered the enviable state of wedlock and have eluded the snares of "merry bachelorhood," we must address you in a tone of greater gravity than has been our custom. Mr. Younge, we sincerely congratulate you upon this desirable step; there is no one whom we would more ardently desire to see surrounded with all the blessings of this life. May every year of your wedded life find you happier than the last.

As a token of our best wishes we ask you to accept these gifts, trusting that this may be the beginning and not the ending of life's love song.

Signed on behalf of Dunbar friends
Ross McKenzie, Hubert Barclay.

Mr. Younge replied in a few well chosen words thanking the people for the gift received asking one and all to visit them in the future. After singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," refreshments were served and dancing continued until the wee sma' hours.

Two friends were having an indignation meeting of their own. Both had suffered domestic strife and now they were comparing notes.

"Aren't women the limit?" growled the first. "We husbands don't know anything at all and our wives know everything."

"Well," said his companion in misery, reluctantly, "there's one thing my wife admits she doesn't know."

"What on earth is that?"

'Why she married me."

By the night post a commercial traveller received a business communication in French. As he could not read it he took it to the local chemist, the only shop open at that hour. "It's Dutch to me," he said, handing him the note. "Perhaps you can make it out?" The chemist retired to the back of his shop and returned in a minute or two with a bottle wrapped and sealed. "Two shillings," he said, "and take it just before going to bed. Dr. Brown's handwriting will kill somebody one of these days."

VILLAGE CHILDREN

By Nina Moore Jamieson

THERE IS ONE CROP at least that never fails, and that is the baby crop. It may be a dry season, or a wet Spring, or a cold Winter, or a late Summer—but the babies will appear, just the same. There may be hard times or good times, high wages, crop failures in field, or tempests at sea. They don't care. They are just as purple in the face, just as emphatic in foot and arm wavings, just as lordly in their demands and just as oblivious of the clock in famine years as when years of expansion delight our hearts. Babies are an old-fashioned institution, and nobody seems to have modernized them very much.

The neighbours all take interested looks at the new citizen and say: "My, asn't she cute, and isn't she darling, and so like her father, and so like her mother, and her hands are just like her mother's side of the house, and her feet are just like her father's, and what makes her cry all the time? Is it colic or does she take that from her father's side of the house, too?"

If it is colic all the old ladies are deeply interested, and carry little brews of peppermint, and little pads of red "flannin," and perhaps a few drops of aniseed or paregoric or other reliable remedy, and bestow them on the young mother with ample advice as to their use. These old ladies take a fresh lease of life with the coming among them of a baby to work on. They feel that their ripe experience is to be of some use, and they certainly give it every chance.

So the child advances into the teething stage, with all the little heat rashes and other usual accompaniments. And in due time it learns to walk—oh, what a time for bumps and thumps, for upsettings of water pails and sugar sacks, sewing baskets and flower pots! The youngster wants to see what is in, or on, or under, or among everything else, and therefore seizes whatever part is nearest, and tugs earnestly.

All this excitement is, however, under his own vine and fig tree. But once he is able to take his walks abroad, the neighbours begin to learn his little peculiarities. He usually has a hearty yell—and when it splits the air his sisters and his mother and his aunts come pouring forth from front doors and back doors, leaving the kettle of jelly to boil over on the stove, leaving the telephone call unfinished, the floor half-scrubbed, the eggs half-fried—no matter what they may be doing, the baby's yells can make them forget everything but his immediate peril.

They rush down the street, with curling tongs, laundry soap, tooth brush or what not in hand, and rescue the sweet little innocent. Maybe somebody's dog has moved out from under a hedge and upset him. Maybe some other child has declined to let him play with some coveted toy. Maybe some busy housewife, painting her front steps, has spoken crisply to him about keeping his distance. Or maybe it is a simple bump.

Anyway, the fun has started. One child alone can be reckoned with, but as I said in the first place, this is a steady crop. There are always so many children, and each has inventive powers of his own. What they can think of—what they can do, with their limited childish strength! Let a pair of three-year-olds sit mildly in the car, to pretend they are taking a drive—and first thing you know they will have half a dozen more in with them, and the car will be coursing wildly down the street!

When you lie pleasantly on the couch after dinner, listening to the twitter of the lawn mower and feeling some what surprised that your husband should be so thoughtful in the middle of the day—get up and look. Your husband will be asleep in his verandah chair, and a raft of toddlers will be shoving the mower around, to the very grave peril of bare toes and experimental fingers.

You may warn and forbid until you are slightly blue in the face—but the next time you miss lawn mower it will be in some little person's playhouse, a prized and fearsome acquisition!

And how they love pumps. They are forever working handles, and chirping with joy over splashed feet and excellent little puddles. They take notions. Lately our tribe has gone in for water drinking. All the available bottles are gathered at some place where there is a pump—for in our village some people have water piped into the houses, so no pump is in sight, and some just use the neighbour's pump, so you see pumps are quite treasured possessions.

So they fill their bottles, and proceed to drink 'er down, very solemnly, spilling with a liberal hand, pumping more, sliding in the wetness, and going home roaring with bumped elbows and soaking clothes. Or they play ball and lose their balls in flower beds, and ruin all sorts of petunias and fancy hollyhocks by their reckless efforts to retrieve them. Or a mother who has gone peacefully down to the grocer's for a loaf of bread will have the shock of beholding a small fat person scrambling on the roof to knock his ball out from behind a chimney, or to pluck it from the eavetrough.

There are little fights, too, you know, and the warriors are not all of the sterner sex. I have seen little girls deliver most telling smacks in the eye to some boy who displeased them. It made him more careful, thereafter! But whatever they do, they chatter like magpies, and argue and tease and cntradict, and go home to tell their mothers, over and over again, the day long.

Even their play has its ups and down. They play measles, lately, and are given some marvellous treatments by their doctors. "Do I have to be sick three times?" wails a little girl who is tired of being a patient and longs to be a physician. They take temperatures with sticks of rhubarb, administer lettuce leaves for medicine ,and re-enact to the life their own recent experiences with this fell disease.

Then all at once they fade away. Gone—silence! Vanished like a wisp of smoke. Playin~ on some other porch, children such a little while after all!

Parks, the stationmaster, was particularly keen that the men in his charge should appear the smartest on the line.

For some weeks he had noticed that Pat, the porter, was becoming slovenly in his appearance, and he decided to talk to him on the subject.

"Pat," he said very gravely, "why it that you no longer wear a clean shirt to work?"

"Sure, sorr, and it's sorry I am," the porter replied, "but my wife's too busy?"

"Too busy!" echoed the stationmaster. "What at?"

"She takes in washin' now, sorr," replied the Irishman.

Build Log Cabin Homes As In Old Pioneer Days

Sudbury.—In an effort to become self-sustaining, 120 Sudbury families have taken advantage of the "back to the land" movement instituted in this district this summer.

Already, many houses built of logs chinked with moss and plastered inside with rough lumber for gables have been completed and the new gardens are yieldin~ vegetable crops.

Dryden Township with the village of Wahnapitae in the centre and superior roads, is the most popular district. It boasts 26 new families with Falconbridge Township, recently burnt over, second in popularity.

The cost to establish a family on a farm is between $90 and $100, including the cost of building a house, starting a clearing and moving furniture and family, but not including the cost of the food, W. J. Laforest, district relief inspector, said. This expense, is borne equally by the city, the province and the Federal Government.

Surrounding towns are also joining in the movement, plans being made for several families to move from Chelmsford, Capreol and Hammer, Mr. Laforest said.

"Just look at old Phillips over there—thoroughly enjoying himself, and I've always understood he was a woman hater."

"So he is, but she's not with him to-night."

"It's lovely honey—
how much do you want?"

All her neighbors wonder how Ed. Baker's wife gets such good prices for her honey. But Mrs. Baker's secret is simple. She sells by Long Distance telephone.

"It's lovely honey this summer," she telephones to the hotel in town. "Yes — I'll deliver by the end of the week."

Long Distance is quick, easy to use — and profitable.

Wally Gets a Bird

IT was Porky Wilson's afternoon off. As he walked down the street he had on his arm a battered basket filled with useless old bottles that had been discarded at the drug store where he was employed as errand boy and bottle washer. They were just the thing to throw into the river behind Wally's house to shoot at with Wally's twenty-two calibre rifle. Porky himself was armed; the forked tips of a sling shot were sticking out of his hip pocket. Evidently he planned to have a little target practice with his own weapon.

"Say, that's a lot of bottles, Porky. Aren't they any good to put medicine in?" said Wally.

"Nixie; just junk. See, a lot of 'em have corks in, so they'll float longer."

"They won't be floatin' long when we get at 'em. What I don't pink with my old twenty-two you'll plug with your sling shot. We'll trade some of the time. You go on down to the river, and I'll go in and get the rifle. I've got a box full of cartridges —never been opened."

Wally ran into the house, and Porky continued down the garden path toward the river. He tossed one bottle into the stream and was shooting at it with the sling shot when at last Wally appeared.

"Pa's sick, and I had to get him a book and his newspaper," Wally said. "He sits up in bed and reads. I told him what we're going to do, and he said, 'If you were as good a hunter as I used to be, you'd go out and get your father a partridge to tempt his appetite. When I was your age I could pick 'em off a limb of a tree with a rifle. Many's the partridge I've shot with a rifle in the woods back of the od place.' "

"Well, he must be some shot all right, but I s'pose you can hit 'em better if they aren't flying," observed Porky.

"It isn't being a good sport to shot a bird sitting still," said Wally. "You ought to give 'em a chance. I told pa that, but he said he guessed all the partridges a feller'd get with a rifle would be fair game all right. I'd like to go and get him one. He can't eat much of anything, and he says a partridge would taste just right. The season's open to 'em now."

"Let's go then," urged Porky. "It's just one o'clock. We've got all afternoon ,and we can get over to Tanner's woods on our bikes in half an hour easy enough."

Wally slipped a cartridge into the rifle and plugged the bottle at which Porky had been vainly popping with his sling shot. "It don't seem like much of a chance to get a partridge," Wally finally replied, "but prob'bly we might go anyhow."

Half an hour later the two boys dismounted from their bicycles just where an old road from Tanner's woods came out on to the highway at the foot of the hill. They concealed their bicycles in the bushes over the fence and started up the hill.

"Oh, say, look at that!" exclaimed Porky suddenly as they came upon a notice tacked to a tree. " 'Trespassing forbidden under penalty of the low. No hunting, fishing or berry picking allowed on this farm. G. A. Tanner, owner.' What d'you know about that? The old skinflint! We wouldn't hurt his old woods."

"Porky sat down disconsolately.

"It's only a little way back down to his house," said Wally. "We'll go and ask him if we can hunt on his hill."

Mr. Tanner was mending a fence beside his house when the boys approached. "Hello, boys! Doing a little hunting to-day?"

'Well, we started to, and then we saw a sign that said no hunting allowed," Wally replied. "We wondered if you'd care if we'd go in your woods to hunt. You see, I wanted to get a partridge for pa. He's sick."

"Who's yer pa?" asked Mr. Tanner.

"He's Ellery Waldo, ' replied Wally.

"Um-hum. You don't say! Ellery Waldo and I went to school together, and we used to go hunting on this hill just like you two boys. Yes, sir, he'd hunt partridges with a rifle and get 'em too sometimes. I s'pose you think it's a kind of mean man that puts up a sign telling folks not to hunt on his land, don't you?"

Porky looked the other way, but Wally answered, "We thought—that is—it seemed sort of funny, but of course it's all right."

'Boys, I've had to do it. Hunters from town got so they didn't have any regard for my rights. You'd think they owned the woods. They'd break down fences getting over 'em, and they'd start fires in the woods any place and not put 'em out when they left; and they'd overrun the place till there wasn't any hunting for me. You see, I like to hunt a little once in a while myself. So I posted her up, and now it's better; I was out this morning for a couple of hours. The village sports think I'm a pretty mean man, but I'll let most any feller hunt if he'll be decent and ask me—except one pothunter in town that I won't let on my farm. It's that Nick Dibble, and I've warned him to keep away or I'd have him arrested. And yet he comes when he knows I ain't on the hill, and he shoots the game and then goes and sells it. He breaks the law hunting on a posted farm and he breaks it selling the game. . The law doesn't mean anything to him, and the men who buy game from him can't be much better."

"I'd think you'd hear him shoot and go get him," said Wally.

"He's too smart for me. He hunts with a rifle with a silencer on it, and he doesn't have anything else to do, so he just lies around there in the bird cover, hidden, and picks off the birds without any noise. I can't stay up there and watch all the time. Well, you boys go up and hunt all you want to, and before you go home come up to the house; I want to see what luck you have. You'll prob'bly find the birds working in the beechnuts over the hill."

The boys thanked Mr. Tanner and went back to the woods. Over the top of the hill there was some good partridge cover—scrub hemlocks and thorn apple bushes and a few beech trees, a piece of semi-cleared land.. It was there that the boys on their bikes had often seen partridges or heard them drumming.

They crept through the cover, alert for any sign of the birds, which they hoped they might see picking up beechnuts or the little red thorn apples. As they crawled along they heard the drumming of a partridge, the muffled beat of the wings that begins slowly and loudly and then comes faster and faster and ends in a low ruffling—the call of the bird to its mate, lasting as long as it might take to count to ten very rapidly.

"Say," ejaculated Porky in a whisper, "that's right under our noses!"

"It's farther away than it sounds," replied Wally. "Funny about that; you never can tell just where it is by the sound, but I guess it's over in that little clump of hemlocks. Let's crawl over that way."

They proceeded on hands and knees under some low bushes, keeping quiet, moving with great care and listening for the occasional drumming. After some time they got within thirty yards of the clump of hemlocks. They lay almost flat on their stomachs so they could see ahead under the low branches.

'I saw something move then," said Porky in a whisper. "Right in the middle of those hemlocks. It showed against the light in the clearing behind."

Wally wriggled and twisted to see the spot. Then came another drumming. So close it sounded that the boys started.

"Yes ,sir, I saw it move in there when it drummed," whispered Wally. I've got my eyes right on it too. There! It moved again. I'm going to shoot. We won't get any closer."

He worked his rifle into position, laying the barrel over a stone and putting his chin down into the dirt to get low enough to sight. There was a moment of suspense, then the sharp snap of the cartridge followed by a yell from the hemlocks. Porky tried to get to his feet, but the branches prevented him, and he came down in a heap. Both boys were scared, but Wally took time to put a new cartridge into the rifle.

They made their way out of the tangle of brush that came into the open just as a man emerged from the hemlocks; he was bareheaded, and his left hand was holding his right, from which blood was trickling. "You've killed me!" he screamed when he saw the boys.

"It's Nick Dibble!" said Wally.

'O my!" exclaimed Wally. "What'll we do?"

"You're pretty near being a doctor; you work in a drug store," said Wally. "Fix up his hand. He ain't killed." To the man Wally said as they approached him, "We'll fix you up all right. It's my fault. I thought I saw a partridge."

"Fool kids like you got no business around with a gun anyhow," replied Dibble. 'This'll cost you something. My hand's a goner, and, even if it gets better, I'll be knocked out of work for months. Your fathers'll have to settle. I know you both, and I'll have the law on you."

From being frightened Wally grew angry as he realized that the poacher caught in the act was trying to make capital of the accident. But he said nothing as he and Porky bound up the man's hand with their handkerchiefs, stopping the bleeding of what was apparently only a flesh wound.

As Porky was putting on the finishing touches Wally stepped back from the two and gripped his rifle.

"You boys be on your way," said Nick. "I'll get myself home best I can if I don't bleed to death on the way. You've no business here hunting on posted land anyhow."

"Just a minute," said Wally, a little nervously but with sufficient determination. "You stand right there, Mr. Dibble."

"Well, I guess not! What d'you mean?" demanded the man. "Don't pull any of that stuff on me. Put that toy gun down!"

"It's only a twenty-two," Wally admitted, "but it shoots awful strong. If you don't stand right there, it may go off in your direction. Now, Porky, you go in the bushes there and get his gun and anything else he left there."

"I didn't have any gun," protested Nick. "I ain't left anything. Come on out of there. Who d'you kids think you are anyhow? Jesse James? Put that gun down! Point it the other way!"

But Porky was already in the hemlocks, an soon he came out, dragging a rifle with a silencer on the end of the barrel, and a small wooden box about the size of a bootblack's kit with something like a drumhead stretched over one side. Porky thumped the drumhead, and it told the story how the poacher had been poaching; he had been using the contrivance for imitating drumming in order to bring the partridges to him.

Nick's language became suddenly violent, and at last Wally said, "You have got to stop talking, Mr. Dibble. Your language ain't fit ti hear. Now, you go right ahead of us down the hill. March!"

Nick hesitated as if inclined to attack the boys, but the muzzle of the twenty-two did not waver, and he could see that the hammer was drawn back. He started on ahead of the boys and Wally soon directed him to an open road that led down to the highway, where they emerged after a slow journey. There Nick was about to turn to the left and go into town, but Wally ordered him to the right. The trio went up the road to where Mr. Tanner was still mending fence.

As he saw the group approaching he dropoped his hammer and stood open-mouthed. "Well. I'll be teetotally dingbusted!" said he. "You got him, didn't you? Some bird you got!"

Wally told the story, and Porky gave Mr. Tanner the poacher's rifle and box.

"Drive him over into the corncrib there by the wagon house," said Tanner. "We'll stick him in there, and you boys just send out the constable when you get to town. I'll take care of the rest of this deal."

"Now take that toy gun away from that baby before he hurts himself with it," said Nick through the bars of the corncrib.

The farmer grinned as he looked at the rifle Wally was still holding ready.

"You don't need to worry about it," said Wally. "There ain't any load in it."

"I thought you put another cartridge in after you shot him?" exclaimed Porky.

"I did," replied Wally, "but while you were fixing his hand I took it out. I was afraid I might shoot him again. I was nervous."

The farmer roared with laughter. Pretty soon Wally and Porky joined him, but Nick raved until the farmer picked up the fellow's own gun and said, "You quiet down, old sox, or I'll show you how your gun works!"

'Boys," he continued, "you didn't exactly get the bird you went after, but I'll admit you got a bird all right. Now come into the house and get a piece of my wife's chocolate cake. And I've got a pair of partridges I shot this morning; I want you to take 'em home to your folks. And you, young Waldo, tell you pa I ain't forgot the time he got two partridges with one shot, and I want him and you boys to come out when he gets around, and we'll all have a good day together."

A WEAVER OF FRIENDSHIPS

"ARE YOU GOING with us tonight?" an acquaintance of mine inquired of her husband — a man famed for his love of his own front porch.

"Where?" he inquired.

"Mrs. Henderson has asked us over," replied the wife timidly.

"Certainly I'll go," said Mr. Stay-At-Home, and forthwith he started for the dressing room.

"Nine times out of ten he says 'NO," explained his wife. "But somehow or other he never refuses an invitation from old Mrs. Henderson."

That evening I learned the reason. Mrs. Henderson was far from handsome. Her home was no more attractive than the average home. She played a wretched game of bridge. Her food was ordinary.

But her coffee was excellent. She had mastered the art of coffee brewing and, although she may not have realized it, she had thereby become a hostess who would never want for guests.

Coffee, say what you will, is a brewer of friendships. So few make the most out of their coffee-brewing, that those who do have discovered veritable acres of diamonds at their doors.

It is hard to understand why all women cannot make a good cup of coffee, yet all men know to their sorrow that it is so. After all, good coffee is easy to make. . If the boiling method is employed, use one heaping teaspoon of medium ground coffee for each cup of cold water with an extra tablespoon for the pot. Put the coffee in the bottom of the pot, pour in the water, and bring slowly to a boil. Allow it to boil for only a few seconds and then to simmer for about three or four minutes. Pour in a quarter cup of cold water to settle, strain and serve immediately.

Anyone should be able to follow such simple directions. Perhaps most fail because they are economical with their coffee and attempt to cover this trait by lengthy boiling. This will never cause guests to ask for that "second cup" which is an assurance of success on the part of the hostess.

CONTACTS

IN DISCUSSING the communicable diseases the term "contacts" is frequently used, and it is desirable that there should be a general understanding of the meaning of the term.

The communicable diseases are caused by germs. Each disease has its own particular germ. Most of the communicable diseases are spread in a fairly direct manner, by transfer of such secretions as saliva, from the sick to the well. The spread of the disease requires that there be sufficiently intimate contact between the sick person and others to allow for the transference of germ laden secretions. Those who have been close to the sick person, such as the members of the family, are known as "contacts."

Because contacts have been exposed to the disease, they are as a rule quarantined for the period of time which the disease takes to develop. This period is the "incubation" of the disease, and varies for the different communicable diseases; therfore the period of quarantine of contacts varies according to the disease. The contacts are quarantined because, if they the developing the diseases, they may pass it on to others before the appearance of such typical symptoms as a rash. A notable example of this is measles. Before the rash appears the patient has what seems to be a cold in the head. During the time the nose is running and the patient is coughing and sneezing, he spreads the disease; indeed, the disease is spread most frequently at this time—before the rash appears.

Tuberculosis is a disease in which the contacts receive a great deal of attention. It is amongst the contacts —the children and adults who have been living with the case—that one looks for new and unsuspected cases. Tuberculosis is a chronic disease, and usually develops slowly; so it is that the contacts of tuberculosis should be under medical supervision for several years.

Obviously one should avoid becoming a "contact;" this is another way of saying that one should avoid exposure to disease. The contact is practically free from danger if proper precautions are taken. It is carelessness , or ignorance, or contact with unknown cases that is chiefly responsible for the spread of the communicable diseases.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

A little boy surprised his parents by refusing to be scared into being good. "It's no use telling me the angels will write down in their books if I'm naughty, mamma," he said: "I might as well tell you they think up in heaven that I'm dead."

"But why should they think that?"

"Because I haven't said my prayers for two weeks."

BISCUITS FOR SUMMER

BY Etta Bitta Pye

REALLY, these biscuits are all-year-around biscuits, but at this particular season they seem to be particularly enjoyable — especially when served hot with a cold luncheon or supper.

Pin Wheel Biscuits

2 cups special cake flour, sifted
4 teaspoons baking powder
2-3 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter, creamed
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup pecan meats, chopped

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually until soft dough is formed. Roll ¼ inch thick on slightly floured board. with creamed butter; sprinkle with brown sugar and nuts. Roll as for jelly roll and cut in 1-inch pieces. Place in greased muffin pans cut-sides up. Bake in moderate oven (375 deg. F..) 30 minutes. Makes 12 biscuits.

Cheese Biscuits

1 cup special cake flour, sifted
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter or other shortening
½ cup grated cheese
⅜ cup milk and water, equal parts

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, sift again. Cut in shortening and cheese. . Add liquid gradually until soft dough is formed. Roll 1-3 inch thick on slightly floured board. Cut with floured biscuit cutter. Bake in hot oven (450 deg. F.) 15 minutes. Makes 12 biscuits.

"What's happened, George?" she asked her husband, who had got out of the car to investigate. "Puncture," he said briefly. "You ought to have been on the lookout for this," was the helpful remark. "You remember the guide warned you there was a fork in the road."
