Newsbriefs

Dispute settled

OSNABRUCK CENTRE — It's all water under the bridge. A dispute over a water extension for two Newington residents has been settled and the pipeline is now in the ground. The new line extending Newington's communal water system was installed late last week after an agreement was finally reached with one homeowner concerning retribution should future water hook-ups be granted for the line.

The water extension was requested by two residents, Leland McPhail and Russell Presley, who live on the western edge of the village. The two claimed their wells were drained by the communal well for the village water system.

But after council finally received Ontario Ministry of Environment approval for the two hook-ups, Osnabruck Council could not reach an agreement with the pair. The two first balked at the $12,000 cost, then council was stalled by a request by McPhail for a hook-up for another home. Council then couldn't get McPhail to agree on a three-year deadline for compensation should other residents tap into the line they paid for. Osnabruck Council extended the deadline to five years, an agreement was reached, and by the beginning of this week the extension was completed.

Centennial plaque

CHESTERVILLE — A plaque commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of Chesterville's incorporation is to be placed at the municipal hall next to the administrative entrance. The $400 plaque was purchased to celebrate Chesterville's incorporation as a village 100 years ago.

The Chesterville Historical Society, which had urged the purchase of the plaque, had originally intended to place the plaque on a rock at the park on Queen Street. But historical society member Jean Pierre Leguerrier asked council, last Wednesday, to consider placing the plaque at the municipal hall.

He told council there was a danger of the plaque being vandalized at the park and that it would be safer if hung at the municipal hall. Council went along with his recommendation.

Bike-a-thon

CHESTERVILLE — Cyclists will get to do their bit for charity when the Chesterville and District Lions Club will hold its first bike-a-thon this Saturday. Club member Darren Kirkwood, who is organizing the event, said the money raised will go to Winchester District Memorial Hospital. Cyclists will collect pledges and then cycle a 20 km circular route, starting and ending in Chesterville. Cyclists can get pledge sheets from local Lions Club members. Registration begins at 10 a.m. at the Nelson LaPrade Centre, Saturday.

Proposal endorsed

CHESTERVILLE — Chesterville Council endorsed a move by three Eastern Ontario MP's to propose an economic development package for Eastern Ontario at a meeting last Wednesday night. MP's Bob Kilger, Stormont-Dundas; Don Boudria, Glengarry-Prescott-Russell; and Len Hopkins, Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke, are calling on Eastern Ontario municipalities to endorse their proposal for economic aid. Reeve Jim Cook said he liked the idea pointing out that most of Eastern Ontario is wrongly associated with Ottawa, which receives the benefits of being the seat of the federal government, while the rest of the region is underdeveloped. "It won't hurt us to have a (development) plan,' he said.

United Counties cut council size to save money

Greg Kielec
Record Staff

CORNWALL — In a move to cut costs, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Council decided to cut its size to almost half.

County council made the move Monday by voting to eliminate the seats held by deputy reeves on county council, a move which will reduce the number of seats to 20 from 37 and save the council up to $100,000 annually.

The decision follows the release of an Ontario Ministry of Municipal Affairs committee report recommending the maximum size of county councils be 20 members and that only the heads of municipal councils sit on county council.

County Warden Claude Cousineau said the change is a good one. "Let's face it, our complement of 37 was bigger than the New Brunswick legislature," he said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

He was "torn" between voting for or against the proposal, but ultimately decided it would benefit the taxpayers in the three counties.

It was a close decision, 27 votes cast for the proposal and 22 against. Four votes were not cast.

And surprisingly, it was a mixed vote. Many deputy reeves voted for the elimination of their seats while many reeves voted to keep them, Cousineau said.

The decision to eliminate all deputy reeve seats came after a proposal for a less-drastic seat elimination by Williamsburg Township Reeve Johnny Whitteker.

Whitteker had proposed that only municipalities with a population greater than 2,500 have a deputy reeve sit at county council. The proposal would have eliminated five seats and saved about $25,000.

After he made his proposal, it was suggested if any seats were to be eliminated, council should go all the way and cut all 17 deputy reeve seats.

"It softens the blow a little bit," Whitteker said. "I wasn't prepared to move a motion to eliminate all deputy reeves."

But he did agree the size of county council is too large. "I was of the opinion that 37 (councillors) was too big."

Both he and Cousineau estimated the 17-seat reduction could save county council $100,000. On just conventions, $34,000 would be saved and $1,700 a day would be saved in pay for regular county council meetings, not counting committee meetings.

With the reduction in size of county council, it is likely the various committee members sit on will be reduced. Most committees will likely be reduced from the present six to seven members to three or four members, Whitteker said.

There was some concern about the government's recommendation that substitutions for reeves be prohibited. Under proposed legislation, substitutes would not be allowed. But substitutes were allowed under the Ontario Municipal Act in certain instances, Cousineau said.

Whitteker said the Ontario municipal body, Association of Municipalities of Ontario, may be able to move a motion to abolish the proposed restriction.

Deputy Reeve Carson Elliott said the elimination of deputy reeves may encourage him to run for reeve in the fall 1991 municipal election in Osnabruck Township. The elimination of deputy reeves will take place after the 1991 election and the title, "reeve" will be changed to "mayor".

Family affair

Area residents flock to trade show

Yves Cossette

CHESTERVILLE — The expected crowds did not materialize at this year's Chesterville Trade Fair, but organizers were still pleased with the outcome.

Trade fair organizer Terry Ducolon had initially hoped the event would attract 1,000 visitors. But he was still pleased with the turnout.

A steady stream of visitors to the site of the trade fair, the Chesterville arena, Friday night and all day Saturday, still ensured the biennial fair had a good turnout.

The trade fair, which was organized by the Chesterville and District Lions Club, attracted an estimated 800 people, about 150 less the estimated 1988 crowd of 950, said Ducolon.

The trade fair alternates each year between Chesterville and Winchester. Last year it was held in Winchester.

This year 64 local businesses and community and service groups set up booths at the arena to promote their wares and services. Everything was on display from tractors, to flowers, to jewelry.

"Freebies" were being handed out too; Nestle's was offering culinary samples of its food products, a representative of Durant's Flowers was handing out roses to passers-by, and two local insurance companies handed out free pens and screwdrivers sporting company logos to visitors.

Children got to horse around on tractors, collect balloons and Nestle's mascot, the Quik bunny, was handing out candy to youngsters. At one end of the arena visitors played mini-golf in support of the Junior "C" Chesterville Flyers hockey team.

There were also a number of draws including one by Heritage Homes of Morewood which featured a trip for two to Florida as the prize.

The Lions Club held a number of draws for gift certificates, Ottawa Roughrider tickets, a boat cruise on the Ottawa River and dinner for two at Louis' Restaurant in Chesterville.

The turnout at the trade fair peaked Friday night when 400 people passed through the gates.

"Friday night was the big night, you could hardly get through," Ducolon said.

The Lion's Club encountered some logistical problems when some of the exhibitors realized their allocated booth space wasn't as big as anticipated.

But some last-minute cancellations freed up some additional space. That turned out to be a blessing to organizers, Ducolon said.

Most exhibitors paid $22 to rent space on the arena floor for their displays. Corner booths were rented out for $35 a piece.

Megan Lummiss, 3, is awestruck by her surroundings at the Chesterville Trade Fair this past weekend. About 800 people visited the biennial fair at the arena which was organized by the Chesterville and District Lions Club to raise money for charity.

Any profits made from the trade fair will be donated to Winchester District Memorial Hospital for its renovations. A tally of the money made from the trade fair wasn't available at press time.

The experience of organizing this year's trade fair has left Lions Club members eager to take another crack at it two years from now, in 1992.

But Ducolon would like to see some changes. He would like to see exhibitors have demonstrations so visitors can actually see how a product works.

Ducolon said the Lions Club would also look into providing more booth space. Some exhibitors felt a five foot frontage wasn't enough, he said.

Local Terry Fox Run nets $4,700 for research

MAPLE RIDGE — The tenth annual Terry Fox Run set a new record Sunday as hundreds of thousands in Canada and around the world raised about $8,000,000 for cancer research.

Across the country, numerous runs raised 20 per cent more than in 1989 when $7.3 million was raised. And here Chesterville Rotary Club organizers report, the run exceeded the national average.

Joggers, walkers and bicyclists who started and finished their 10 km circuits at North Dundas District High School raised 30 per cent more than in 1989, says event chairman John Roosendaal.

"We had pledges totalling a little over $4,700," Roosendaal said Monday. "That's quite an increase over last year's $3,400."

"There was about 20 per cent more (money raised) in Ontario but we had about 30 per cent," he said. He calculated the approximately 50 participants raised an average $90 each.

"We had pretty good weather for it, not too hot and not too cold," Roosendaal noted. "We were pretty pleased with it."

Canada's fascination with the one-legged runner whose coast-to-coast 1980 Marathon of Hope ended in tragedy near Thunder Bay when he suffered a cancer relapse seems not to abate the time, which was reflected in the Dundas County run.

"Most fundraising events seem to die down but The Terry Fox (Run) seems to be going up," Roosendaal observed. He suggested effective promotion has kept Fox's dream of finding a cure for cancer alive.

Participants have various reasons for entering the run year after year but for some, Fox's determination to raise money for cancer research strikes close to home.

The Dixon family of Winchester, for example walked the route together Sunday and raised over $1,900 in the process. Mary Dixon explained that the family walks annually in memory of her daughter Edna Empey, who died of cancer in 1983 at age 39.

According to Roosendaal, the Dixon contribution, submitted collectively, was the event's largest. There were some individuals who raised $500, he said.

Water system ceremony is postponed indefinitely

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — Use of the village's new $2.3 million water system, which has been delayed several times since May, has been delayed by Chesterville council again.

The village switched to its old well in May, after just 10 days on the new system, when leaks in a pipeline bringing the water to the village were discovered.

Use of the new well has been put off several times already. And the official opening of the new water works, which was set for September 22, has been postponed for a second time. No new date has been set.

Reeve Jim Cook said Monday, council and officials from the Ministry of Environment (MOE) are concerned the seals on the pipes installed between the new well and the pumping station may have a design flaw.

"In order to insure that it is the correct design (the MOE) have asked a specialist to work with the consulting firm to see what needs to be done to allay our fears," he said.

The consulting firm that has overseen the construction of the water works is Totten Sims Hubicki Associates Ltd. Alan Fok, a specialist with the firm Environmental Hydraulics Group is expected to submit a report by the end of this month. The MOE will foot the bill, said Cook.

In August, a portion of the pipeline had to be replaced because the pipes were found to have defective joints. A 300-metre section of the pipeline was replaced at the expense of the supplier, which accepted responsibility for the defective pipes.

The defective joints were responsible for a series of leaks that prompted council to postpone the official opening, which was originally scheduled for June 23, to September 22.

Cook wouldn't predict when villagers again would be tasting the water from the new well. He said the outcome of the report could possibly determine when the water from the new well begins to flow.

"At this juncture we want to make sure everything is okay," he said.

Residents got a brief taste of the water from the new well for about 10 days in May, when the leaks were discovered.

The setbacks this summer which led to delaying the use of the water from the new well followed an earlier setback last winter.

Construction on the water project began in August 1989 and work on the pipeline was completed in the late fall. But a delay arose in January, when the supplier of pumps for the pumping station was having difficulty in getting the necessary parts to put the pumps together. The setback delayed the completion of the water works by about two months.

The latest setback isn't expected to cost the village any additional money. The village's share of the water project is estimated at about $454,000.

Public school enrolment experiences big boom

Shana Saper
Staff Reporter

CORNWALL — It was happy news for SD&G public school officials and trustees last week. They learned that 1990-91 school enrolment is peaking higher than any time since the 1960s and that Dundas County is leading the area's unprecedented boom.

Figures released at the Board of Education's Sept. 12 meeting indicate a reversal of the downswing trend of the '70s and '80s. According to latest statistics, the number of children entering public elementary schools is now on a slow but steady rise into the '90s.

This year alone, 163 more children are enroled over last year's figures, Superintendent of Schools and Personnel Gerry Samson confirmed in a telephone interview. "We've been noticing an increase every year since 1985 and the profile is strongest in Dundas," he said.

Samson added, while notable increases are showing up throughout the United Counties, the rise has been particularly felt in Dixon's Corners, Elma, Long Sault, Morrisburg, and Winchester schools.

Rising birth rate is partly responsible, he says, but other factors are also contributing to the surge.

"More families have been moving into the Morrisburg-Ottawa corridor in recent years because of proximity to countryside, and the seaway," he explained. The main growth is occurring along the Highway 31 access route to Ottawa, he added.

Parts of Stormont and Glengarry counties are also experiencing significant increases but for different reasons, Samson said.

"In Lancaster, Williamstown, and Maxville we know that English-speaking families from Quebec are moving in and putting their children into the public schools." But, he concludes, the exodus of people from Ottawa to smaller towns is creating the most pressure on schools and other services in the tri-county area.

Morrisburg Public School is a case in point where grades 7 and 8 were moved to Stampville Public School this year to alleviate an over-population problem. Morrisburg principal Dick Turner says there has been a 15 per cent increase in the study body since the mid-'80s and the addition of five portables hasn't been sufficient to contain the overflow.

Turner confirms Samson's observations that much of the increase is coming from Ottawa emigres.

"Real estate values are still reasonable here and an hour's drive along the 31 is less stressful than a commute from Kanata to downtown Ottawa every day," he added.

What this means for area schools is a turnaround of the 20-year trend that saw school closures and laid-off teachers. According to school business administrator Richard Gales, future budgets will need beefing up.

The current budget is $75 million, Gales said, and Ministry of Education grants are tied to yearly enrolment and staffing projections. This year's enrolment figures will be considered "firm" after Sept. 30. "Then, we'll sit down and revise our forecasts for next September," he said.

But according to Samson, expansions are already in the works for this year. For example, Inkerman Public School is presently advertising for teachers' aides, and a junior kindergarten class (26 children) was recently split in two at Dixon's Corners' school.

Chesterville Public School has completed a $500,000 building project which will add on four new classrooms for this fall.

Williamsburg Township school board trustee Susan Adams is pleased with the new enrolment levels, saying it makes for more viable and flexible education in the counties.

"In years past, we've had borderline schools that we had to decide whether to keep open. Now, that situation seems to be plateauing out if not actually reversing,"

Local reaction mixed after election

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — The election of a New Democratic Party government in the September 6 provincial election has been given a mixed review by local business people.

Cautious optimism at the prospect of an NDP government was expressed by Jim Bancroft, the manager of the Chesterville branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, and Jim Cumming, the manager of Nestle Enterprises Limited.

Bancroft brushed aside concern NDP policies might be harmful to the economy.

"From a business point of view...I think the fresh outlook perhaps won't be as harmful as people might think," he said.

Bancroft felt the NDP government could be a refreshing change to the policies advocated by Ontario's traditional powerbrokers, the Progressive Conservative Party and the Liberal Party.

"Perhaps (the NDP) would give some opportunities to look at some other avenues, other alternatives and give a little different prospective that we've seen from the old line parties," he said.

Bancroft wouldn't say whether he believed the NDP was the answer to good government. But he said the fact Ontario has a new government offers the prospect of refreshing change.

"I'm not looking at the word NDP per se here at all. I'm looking at the thought, 'there are new faces, new ideas and perhaps it wouldn't be such a bad thing,' " he said.

Cumming agreed the election of the NDP wouldn't be such a bad thing either. He said he wasn't any more worried about Ontario's economic future the morning after the election than before the election.

"I don't believe that anyone should panic. I think we have to give (Premier-elect Bob Rae) and his party an opportunity to govern," he said.

Cumming predicted the election of an NDP government wouldn't really alter the relationship between business and government.

"We've always worked close with past governments and I don't see any change in working with the present government as it relates to business."

"I think it's business as usual. Governments have changed before," he said.

One of the key NDP campaign pledges is to raise the minimum wage level to seven dollars. But Cumming said Nestle wouldn't be affected if the NDP carries out its promise, because wage levels at Nestle are well above the proposed minimum wage.

But Martin Derks, the owner of Derks Equipment Limited, predicted NDP policies, like increasing the minimum to seven dollars will lead to higher unemployment.

"I think you're going to see a lot of unemployed youth running around the country side," he said.

Derks said small businesses such as his would not be able to afford the proposed NDP minimum wage hike. The lowest paid workers often work for small or new businesses.

"You make do with the cheapest help and hopefully you can make the big time. That's what small businesses depend on. If you can't hire someone at seven bucks, they just won't get started," he said.

Derk's forecasted a gloomy four years for Ontario's economy. He is worried an NDP government will drive out investment because of NDP promises to raise minimum wage levels and to introduce a minimum corporate tax.

"Business will probably hold back on any investments," he said.

He also predicted the NDP's social policies could worsen the province's debt, also a factor in discouraging investment, he said.

No beds

SD&G County Council turns down Williamsburg Twp. transfer request

Greg Kielec
Record Staff

CORNWALL — Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Council has turned down a request to transfer home for the aged beds from Cornwall to Dundas County.

County council turned down the request by Williamsburg Township Reeve Johnny Whitteker after being told by government officials the beds would have to be put up for bid and may go to an area other than Dundas which has more need.

The counties and the city of Cornwall are to jointly build a new 12-bed home for the aged east of Cornwall to replace the aging Glen-Stor-Dun Lodge. The city will receive 60 beds and the counties will have the remaining 60.

Whitteker had asked that 20 of the counties 60 beds be transferred to southern Dundas County because of the need there. There are no government funded extended care beds in southern Dundas and a home in Winchester in the north end of the county is full, he said.

But the province said if the counties did not want the 20 beds for the Cornwall lodge, they would be reallocated to an area with the most need, likely to Ottawa-Carleton, Whitteker said.

With the chance if it gave up the beds that Dundas may not even get them, council had to vote against the proposal, he said. "Really county council didn't have much of a choice."

Whitteker has been lobbying for extended care beds for Dundas for a number of years. He recently suggested they be allocated to a retirement home in Morrisburg, and when that was rejected, suggested an addition onto a Williamsburg seniors home, a proposal which was also rejected.

County Warden Claude Cousineau said it is disappointing beds could not be transferred to Dundas. But he is optimistic beds may be allocated to Dundas by the government in the future.

Whitteker said the setback has somewhat delayed plans for more beds. "It'll be a little while." The only thing he can do is go to the new NDP government and convince it there is a need in the county, he said.

He has lobbied for extended care beds for the counties because he says it is unfair to elderly Dundas residents to be moved from their home area to the east end of Cornwall for care in a home for the aged.

He said three studies, two by the District Health Council and one by the counties, has shown there is a need for home for the aged beds in Dundas. So far, though, he has not been able to convince the government of the need.

Meanwhile, county council has committed itself to continuing with plans for a new home for the aged, despite an almost $15 million price tag for the project, more than double a 1988 cost estimate.

Council decided in July to form a committee to look into alternatives to the Cornwall home. But after exhausting all alternatives, it decided Monday to continue with the Glen-Stor-Dun Lodge replacement.

The lodge, on the eastern outskirts of the city, is jointly operated by the city and the United Counties. The price of the project has steadily increased since an agreement on the joint venture was reached.

When the provincial government agreed to provide half the funds for the project last summer, the cost of the project had already jumped to $10 million. The remaining half of the cost was to be covered by the counties and the city.

Parking lot owner demands rent from village

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — Chesterville could soon be faced with congested parking conditions if a Chesterville landowner carries out his threat to close a parking lot which has served the general public for the past ten years.

Erik Thompson, a Chesterville businessman who purchased the parking lot from its previous owner Stuart Byers almost two years ago, wants the village to pay a $150 monthly rent for the parking lot.

He told council last Wednesday night he would consider blocking off the parking lot, which is located behind the Seaway Valley Pharmacy in Chesterville, if his demands aren't met.

"I don't want to block it off," he said, stressing it was his right to ask for the rent. "I don't feel I should subsidize the village," he said.

The parking lot was created by Chesterville businesses in cooperation with village council about ten years ago on what was an empty lot at the time. The parking lot was created to relieve parking congestion on village streets in the downtown area.

The various businesses shared the costs of developing the parking lot, and in a gentlemen's agreement with the previous owner, the village assumed responsibility for the parking lot's maintenance and no rent was ever paid.

The parking lot is used mainly by employees of the various downtown businesses -- including the Record -- and their customers.

Council rejected Thompson's demand. Reeve Jim Cook said the renting of the property would set a bad precedent.

"If we were to go along with this, (then) wherever there is a business that provides more than the required parking spaces, then they could come to the village and say...'I'd like you to pay me rent for them,' " he said.

A village by-law requires businesses to provide a minimum number of spaces for customer parking.

Cook said council was happy with the existing arrangement that had the village maintain the parking lot in exchange for public use.

Council did make Thompson an offer to consider purchasing the parking lot. But Thompson turned it down saying the lot wasn't for sale.

He agreed the parking lot, which he said could hold up to 25 cars, helped keep cars off the streets. But he questioned why he should let the employees and customers of other businesses use the parking lot while he was paying taxes for it.

Thompson also said council should have approached him to renegotiate the agreement the village had with the previous owner. Council though never approached Thompson.

Cook said it was an oversight by council that Thompson was never contacted after he purchased the parking lot, January, 1989.

"We just felt the deal would carry on...I think it's pretty reasonable," he said. The existing agreement was a gentlemen's agreement, he said.

Cook's views were shared by other members of council.

Deputy Reeve Roger Cole also disagreed with paying rent for the parking lot. He told Thompson the parking lot benefits him too because it serves as a parking lot for the customers and employee's of his wife's business, B and E Toys.

Councillor Shirley Coons said she doesn't believe the village should pay a private property owner for parking spaces.

Councillor Mike McMahon also disagreed with paying rent for Thompson's parking lot, but warned that if the parking lot was closed, cars would be lined up on both sides of King Street.

Cook said it was likely council would meet with Thompson again to resolve the issue, but he wouldn't say when the meeting would take place.

Students learn lung protection

CORNWALL — Each September The Lung Association offers their "Lungs are for Life" school program to all schools in the three counties. Students from J.K.-high school learn that their lungs are for life and how to protect them.

In the French section of the SD&G Board of Education, students from J.K.-Gr. 2 will once again have a visit from "Octobouf". This nine minute animated video shows what happens to your lungs when you smoke and also what happens to the environment.

The Lung Association is very pleased this year to be able to offer Grades 3 and 4 an educational video called "No Show". This 14 minute video offers alternate activities and educated choices regarding life style.

In the English section of the SD&G Board of Education there is a change from previous years. This semester the aim will be to educate the asthmatic child as to what is Asthma and learning to cope with Asthma. The program is called "Air Force: and is geared to students seven years and up.

The Asthma Awareness and the Smoking Prevention programs are a 3 hour, weekly presentation funded through public financial support.

Wise decision

Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Council has made a wise move in trimming council by almost half, by eliminating deputy reeve seats after the next municipal election.

The move may save up to $100,000 annually and according to a report on county government in Ontario, may make county council a more effective political body.

The decision shows that County Warden Claude Cousineau and the majority of the other municipal reeves and deputy reeves are concerned about spending at the county level.

And at a time when there is so much cynicism where politics and politicians are concerned, a move like the one made at county council shows there is good that can come out of the political process.

Local village and township councils are responsible to their ratepayers. They must deal with their ratepayers at meetings on an individual basis, and when ratepayers are unhappy, the councils hear about it.

With county councils, the close tie with ratepayers doesn't exist. Decisions made by the politicians are made somewhat in a vacuum and do not hit as close to home because of sheer distance, the meetings which are held in Cornwall, are not as accessible to the public.

As the county system stands now, there is little opportunity for public input or public scrutiny. Even the weekly media cannot attend the meetings held once a month during the day, on Mondays and Tuesdays, because of time constraints, restricting even more the public's window in the workings of county government.

It is reassuring to see the counties following the province's county government report to lower the number of their councillors. And it was the provincial government's desire for a change in county government which brought on United Counties decision.

Politicians - federal, provincial and municipal - will have to continue to be progressive minded and keep the public's concerns at heart with the recent increase in public cynicism with politics. A better and more accountable county government certainly is a step in the right direction.

But once again, it is only public concern and pressure which will bring about change. It was concern among members of the public and politicians that prompted the changes proposed for county government.

And the fact that change has come about shows the political process in some cases does work.

As more people see there can be good wrought through the political process, they will lose their cynicism and maybe put their faith back in the system. It is up to politicians to work to regain that faith.

10 From the Record Sept. 15, 1910

Mr. Joseph Cox, of Cannamore, has a freak of nature in the possession of a colt about three months old that has not the vistage of a tail and other peculiarites, but otherwise well formed which would be a good investment for a side show as it would be genuine and no fake.

Quite suddenly, in Gallingertown, on Aug. 26, at noon, Mr. Henry Bush passed over to the silent majority. Mr. Bush was born on the fourth concession of Osnabruck Township, May 23, 1828, and was married to Rachael Wert of Osnabruck on Dec. 26, 1859. He was of kindly disposition, a staunch Christian and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Ottawa, Sept. 10 -- His Excellency Earl Grey is planning to make a trip to the West Indies by one of the Canadian government steamers, if he does not change his mind, some time after the New Year and make a tour of the Antillies, which will occupy a large portion of the winter.

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's United Church, Berwick, entertained the mother and babies of baby band at the home of Mrs. L. Montgomery on Tuesday afternoon, September 15. The President, Mrs. Foster, was in the chair. A splendid program was given on the work of the baby band and mission band by Mrs. Elliot, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Bogart, and Mrs. Alice Hutt.

The continued dry weather is having a very serious effect on the water supply throughout this village and district where many wells, never before known to be short of water have gone dry.

While attending to her household duties at the home of her son, William O'Neil, about two miles east of Chesterville, Mrs. Eliza O'Neil tripped as she was descending the steps at the rear of the house Tuesday evening and fell heavily, breaking her left wrist and sustaining cuts about her face.

West takes disturbing steps to Mid-East war

For the Record

Yves Cossette

In a hot and dry place far, far away -- the latest Middle East crisis.

Sailing to this distant part of the world are three ships belonging to the Canadian navy. Soon they will be joined by a squadron of CF-18 jet fighters which are based in Baden-Soelingen, West Germany.

Canadian military involvement in the Middle East is not new. Ever since Lester Pearson, then Canada's ambassador to the United Nations, proposed in 1956, the establishment of peacekeeping forces to separate warring antagonists, Canadian troops have served as a buffer between warring armies starting with the Suez crisis of 1956.

Canadian soldiers are still separating the armies of Syria and Israel at the Golan Heights and in Cyprus where they are part of a multi-national force keeping Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots at arms length.

Therefore it isn't all that unusual for Canadian forces to participate in a multi-national force. They are doing it to prevent Iraq from further military aggression and possibly persuade the Iraqis to get out of Kuwait, which it invaded early August.

But there is something about taking part in this multi-national force that is different from previous ones. Instead of separating armies, the multi-national force gathering in Saudi Arabia has made itself one of the antagonists, against Iraq. Not since the Korean War, 1950-53, has a multi-national force, with the U.N. Security council's blessing, been involved as an antagonist.

The Korean War, which prevented the communist north from taking over the pro-west south, was a prolonged and costly conflict, in terms of human lives and resources spent on the war.

The threat of prolonged conflict looms over the current Persian Gulf crisis. The cost of just maintaining an armed presence to deter Iraq from further aggression will run into billions of dollars, a bill that Canadian taxpayers will have to contribute to.

And more disturbing, is the potential cost in human lives. The UN anti-Iraqi alliance is gradually making itself capable of launching an attack on Iraq. This has not been sanctioned by the United Nations.

But the Americans have been deliberately ambiguous about its role. They haven't let on whether they are content to contain the Iraqis or whether they will go in and overthrow Saddam Hussein, the Iraqi dictator who ordered the invasion of Kuwait.

Canadians should encourage the federal government to lobby the United Nations to impose a limited mandate on the multi-national force, stationed in Saudi Arabia, to deter further Iraqi aggression, to enforce the economic blockade on Iraq. But the U.N. should not approve an attack on Iraq's forces.

An attack on Iraq's military forces in Kuwait and in Iraq would inflict an appalling death toll on a civilian population that has had to suffer through more than a decade of Hussein's despotic rule.

Economic sanctions, if properly enforced, should bring Iraq to its knees, it's just going to take time. The fact that Iraq's occupational army in Kuwait has no food is already a strong indicator that the Iraqis are feeling the squeeze.

Whether the federal government has the intention of standing up to the Americans and limiting the actions of the multi-national force, remains to be seen.

Canada's role, unlike previous participation in U.N. forces, has also remained ambiguous. In fact, it is disturbing that Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has not even recalled parliament to deal with the Persian Gulf crisis.

Even though Mulroney's government could easily have its decisions approved by parliament, because of the Progressive Conservative majority, there should be at least some public debate, to gauge how Canadians feel about the role of the Canadian Armed Forces in the Middle East.

Mulroney should also tell Canadians how much its going to cost taxpayers to pay for the military build-up. Whatever it is, it isn't going to be cheap.

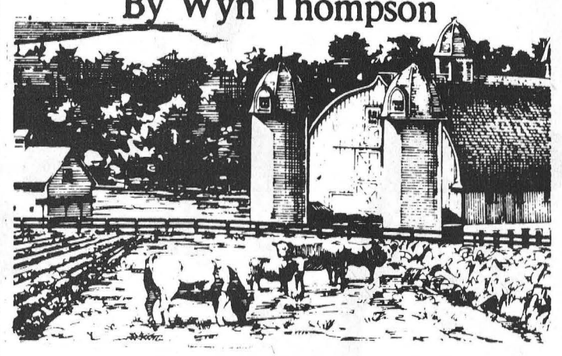
That Mulroney has pledged Canada's military help without consulting the public is typical of his authoritarian style of governing.

But this authoritarianism raises concern over whether Mulroney can keep our military from getting too deeply involved in a potentially deadly conflict.

It is, after all, not the United Nations' mandate to overthrow governments, but to protect countries from aggression. Let's hope Mulroney, and other western leaders can keep that in mind.

The Farmer's Wife

By Wyn Thompson



About mid-month our fall rains begin. Streams that were mere trickles all summer chatter again. There is a yellow tinge to the birches, which turn a deeper colour as the month progresses. The leaves of my one ash tree begin to turn and soon they will fall to the earth.

We always hope that the first frost will hold off until late September. So often it comes early in September and then we have a month of lovely weather after all the flowers have been killed.

The wild grapes ripen. I pick, simmer and bottle the juice. Birds love the grapes. So do foxes, I am told. Milkweed pods ripen daily, pop open, strew seeds to the wind. Squirrels are busy harvesting nuts and acorns. Bittersweet ripens, tan husks opening to reveal the orange berries.

The Autumn Equinox will pass scarcely noticed for the season is well ahead of the almanac. All September belongs to Autumn, it seems to me.

Mid-month sees me wrestle with the decision of what plants to bring indoors for the winter. I have been a great plant lover through the years and have had the house full of plants during all seasons, but this year I have decided that I must cut down on this hobby.

So today, I am taking inventory of the plants on the gallery and patio. I am being very firm about what is to be saved and what is not to be saved. Then I come to my fig tree. I bought this fig tree about fifteen years ago at the only plant sale I was ever invited to, and through the years I have had a good feeling about it...a sense of oneness with the earth and all the people who have written about it.

For, as you know, the fig tree has an old and respected place in the literature of the world. How would Eve have clothed herself after the disastrous sortie into understanding and sin if there had not been a fig tree in the Garden of Eden?

I looked at it. It looked back. I thought murderous thoughts, for it had grown to the rather unmanageable height of six feet, regardless of my annual prunings.

If you are to share my abode for one more year, you will have to be severely cut back, I informed it. I got my shears.

I hacked away at it and thought of poor Mother Eve, standing there in Eden with her fig leaf apron held securely in place, hearing those fateful words, "In sorrow thou shalt bring forth children...In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it was thou taken, for dust thou art and unto dust shall thou return".

And if I had any sense I'd return you to the earth in the back field of the farm right now, I told my little fig tree as I hacked away ruthlessly.

I thought a little further on the theological theory that Eve got us into our troubles, as I paused to catch my breath and wipe the sweat from my brow. Be that as it may, I like to think that maybe we inherited from her a pleasure in the earth and in growing things and the rewarding necessity of sweating to get our daily bread. Without her, we might never have known the joy of accomplishment.

I like digging in the earth; it is therapeutic as well. I bet Eve found it so also, as no doubt it helped her forget or place in proper perspective some of those troubles that descended on her.

Take those two young cut-ups, Cain and Abel. They acted like hippies or terrorists or, as we used to refer to them in a more gentle time, juvenile delinquents. Eve may have watered the fig tree with her tears during such times, dug around its roots a bit, and then felt the better for it.

"Doing a little pruning," a pleasant voice sounded behind me, "the fig trees certainly do enjoy the hot and humid summers we have been having these past few years".

I turned around and welcomed Amanda, my neighbour, and Sam's wife.

"I read recently," she said, "that there's an old theory that fig trees flourish only close to houses where they can be a part of all the comings and goings of the household, the joy of laughter, and squabbling that is part and parcel of every family situation on the face of the earth".

"Well," I laughed, "I will mend my ways for I have been mean-mouthing it a bit for growing so large. In future I will not let any unpleasant words be spoken near my fig tree. Not that I'm superstitious, mind you, but there's no need to take a chance."

Amanda sat at my invitation as I went for a pitcher of lemonade. When I returned, she was watching the swift coming and going, and listening to the comfortable hum of the bees so active on the late hollyhocks.

She handed me a brown bag containing three large ripe muskmelons. "We have a good crop, the flesh of each is a peachy golden colour and tender and sweet".

From another bag she produced a magnificent bouquet of asters, one of my favourite flowers. "Sam told me when I was picking these, that he read of a man who had an infallible cure for political disgust, and it had to do with asters," she laughed.

"Do tell!"

"I'll try to quote Sam," she replied. "Asters", he said, "are always delightful and interesting, but in a political campaign they are indispensable. When one is thoroughly disgusted reading political speeches he can always go out and look at the asters and feel better".

As we sipped our lemonade, we talked of many things, the recent election included. Then tragedy! A yellow goldfinch flew full force against the patio door and was instantly killed. A tuft of yellow down left on the glass showed where he met his death. It was a fine bird. We buried him in the sidehill east of the house.

I then told Amanda of a truly spirit-lifting letter I had recently received from a reader of my column, a Helen Turner of Brantford, Ontario.

"How wonderful it is to discover that there remains such people who take the time to say 'Thank You'...I enjoyed."

"Something we should all do more often." sighed Amanda.

Big Bucks

Students at Rothwell-Osnabruck school in Ingleside did something schools normally don't do; that is give money back to the school board. A $1,000 surplus raised through various activities last year was given Friday to the SD&G County Board of Education to help pay for the $1.6 million Lancer Community Centre addition to the school. Accepting the cheque on behalf of the public school board was trustee William Flemming, (far right). Presenting the cheque to him were: (left to centre) student councillors Sonia Salmon, Ryan Schmitz and Keri Woodside. Canadian Holsteins off to Thailand

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

AVONMORE — The dairy industry is not very big in Thailand, but three visitors to a Holstein farm north of Avonmore last week said that is about to change.

Tawatchai Indratula and two colleagues were visiting the farm of Jim MacIntyre and three others recently to see how Canadian dairy producers manage their farms. They hope to take back Canadian management practices to help boost the dairy industry back at home.

Indratula, the director of dairy with the Thailand Ministry of Agriculture said Thai dairy producers only meet 20 per cent of the domestic demand for milk. His visit to Jim MacIntyre's farm was part of a project to improve domestic production.

They have spent most of their time training in Langley, British Columbia, but came east to spend a week at the International Livestock Management School (ILMS) in Kemptville, which hosts visitors from a variety of third world countries.

But the visitors from Thailand are special. They are overseeing the import from Canada of 110 purebred Canadian Holstein cows, a first for Thailand and a first for Canada.

Dr. George Fisher, a resource person for the ILMS training program, said the export of the 110 Holsteins is a joint venture funded by the Canadian International Development Agency, Agriculture Canada, Semex Canada, the export arm of artificial breeding companies in Canada and the Thai government.

"This is really the first entry of Canadian Holsteins to this part of the world," he said.

For Semex, which operates the ILMS, the export represents new possibilities for Canadian livestock genetics. Semex wants to prove the production capabilities of Canadian Holstein cows in tropical climates.

"It could be a real door opener for future sales," he said.

For Thailand, the import of Holstein cows means a chance at boosting milk production in a country where the dairy industry is only 30 years old.

The 110 Holstein's will add to the 300 dairy cattle at Thailand's main government farm at the city of Chiang Mai which is about 700 kilometres north of the country's capital and largest city Bangkok.

Some of the Holsteins will be cross bred with some of the native breeds and Semex will provide management assistance for the next four years, said Fisher.

The main objective of the breeding project for Thailand is to give farmers more income. But Indratula also sees the project as a means of improving his people's source of nutrition.

Based on his experience in dealing with developed countries, he has learned milk is an important source of nutrition. "We learn from other countries: Japan, Korea and your country," he said.

By turning towards more livestock produced foods, Indratula, who manages the government farm at Chiang Mai, hopes to reduce the dependence on corn and rice as the main source of nutrition for Thai people.

"Thai people should drink more milk, (eat) fish, beef, more protein," he said.

Indratula believes that by breeding Holsteins in Thailand, the country will eventually be able to meet most or all of the country's domestic demand for milk. But it will take more than 10 years, he said.

"The (Thai) farmer should pay attention in the field of livestock, step by step," he said.

Ingleside WI has a winner

INGLESIDE — A winner of the Quilt Draw was announced at Newington Fair as Ingleside Women's Institute plan for community projects to sponsor with the proceeds.

The winner was Mrs. Jessie Henry of LaSalle, Quebec.

The 4-H Homemaking Club for the fall project will be Bread Ventures. Mrs. Brenda Henderson and Mrs. Sandy Crites will lead the club and members will be contacted.

Planned as guest speaker for the September 19 meeting at the Library is Judy Roussell who is the Rural Organization Specialist with Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food for Stormont County.

IN MEMORIAMS

FYKE — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Grenville (Mike), who passed away Sept. 19, 1986.
We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own;
Like ivy on the withered oak,
When other things decay
Our love for him will still be green
And never fade away.
Sadly missed by Sharon, Allen and Chris VanBridger

IN MEMORIAM
FYKE — In loving memory of my dear husband, Grenville (Mike), who passed away Sept. 19, 1986.
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own;
And day by day I miss him more,
As I walk through life alone.

Ontario posties opposed to post office cutbacks

FINCH — Ontario postmasters and their assistants are vehemently opposed to planned cutbacks in hours of service at rural post offices, scheduled for late September.

"We want to make it very clear that Canada Post managers – not postmasters – are responsible for this reduction of service to our customers," said Mary Anne Doyle, President of the Canadian Postmasters and Assistants Association, Ontario Branch. "We have been fighting these hour cutbacks since they were announced in June."

"In our opinion, this move is not only a major step backward for postal customers, it is hypocritical of Canada Post, which constantly promises 'Better service for rural Canadians' in its advertisements and promotions."

Nearly 92,000 hours per year are being cut from post offices in 483 Ontario communities, and they strike at the busiest times of day -- lunch hour and after five p.m. These reductions will be put in place September 24, 1990, with others coming at several more Ontario offices in October.

"Canada Post is calling these cutbacks 'standardization', saying there's a need to 'streamline operations and cut costs', but when you get right down to it, this is silly double-talk," Doyle says.

"Canada Post made a $146 million profit in 1989, is projecting more for 1990, and has even admitted that savings from closing and cutting back operations at rural post offices have not been 'material'.

"At virtually all rural post offices throughout Ontario, revenue is up and mail volumes have increased substantially. Even before this round of cutbacks, our postmasters and assistants were heavily over-extended."

"Canada Post should be expanding hours, not cutting them. The only reason for this move is to accelerate the destruction of the federal rural post office system, and pave the way for total privatization of this service."

Many rural postmasters in Ontario want to defy the cutbacks, but realize they will face disciplinary action and possible firing by Canada Post if they do so. "There's even fear that openly criticizing this policy will have repercussions for our members," Doyle noted.

Customers who agree these cutbacks will reduce service should contact their Member of Parliament, plus call or write the Better Business Bureau: 1 St. John's Road, Toronto M6P 4C7, Tel. 416-766-3222.

For further information, contact: Mary Anne Doyle, President, Canadian Postmasters & Assistants Association, Ontario Branch (613-984-2460).

was a great success.

I would like to take a moment to say thank you to all those people who visited the Drewery booth. We had three terrific vehicles on display and we had a lot of compliments on them.

Steve Summers

I would especially like to thank those people who are serious about buying a new vehicle and have given me the chance to price one for them.

Sincerely,
Steve Summers

Cold weather doesn't hurt fair

MORRISBURG - Despite the cold and rain organizers of this year's Upper Canada Village Exhibition and Ploughing Match had good crowds.

Harry Pietersma said considering Saturday was such a terrible day, he was quite pleased with the turnout, which was up slightly from last year.

Just over 3,000 people enjoyed the games, livestock shows, displays and 10-cent snacks of cheese, homemade bread, fudge and apples.

In the various competitions Pietersma said about a half-dozen people participated from outside the village, mainly in the fruits and vegetable categories.

Kraft donation boosts community centre fund

Kraft grant

Osnabruck Township Council had reason to celebrate Monday with news Kraft General Foods Ltd. will donate $45,000 to the construction of the Lancer Community Centre, a facility to be jointly used by Rothwell-Osnabruck School and Osnabruck Township. INGLESIDE — Ingleside cheesemaker Kraft General Foods Ltd. has committed a slice of its profits to the construction of Lancer Community Centre.

Kraft announced Monday it will donate $45,000 to the joint Osnabruck Township-public school board project over a three-year period, starting in 1991, in $15,000 installments per year.

Work on the $1.6 addition for Rothwell-Osnabruck School, to be used by both the school and the township, is expected to start next spring. It will take seven to nine months to complete.

"Kraft General Foods Canada is delighted to join with Osnabruck Township and the community at large to build a facility which will benefit families for years to come," said Jim Franklin, Ingleside Kraft plant manager.

And he called on other businesses and individuals to support efforts to build the community centre. "It's worthy of everybody's support because the facility will enhance the quality of life for all citizens."

The money from Kraft will be used to help pay the township's $400,000 portion of the project cost. Osnabruck Township has allocated $100,000 for the project and $20,000 has been generated through fundraising. Half of the township's $800,000 portion will be paid by the province.

The addition will feature a double gymnasium, a kitchen servery, offices, a special instruction room, weight room, two new change rooms, washrooms and storage space. The addition will provide 12,000 square feet more of school space. Renovations will be done to 7,000 square feet of school space as well.

"I think it indicates Kraft has more than just a verbal commitment to this community," said Paul McAllister, Osnabruck Recreation director.

He was at a loss for words to adequately describe the township's appreciation of the donation. "I think 'thanks' falls far short of what we should be saying."

He hopes the commitment will spur others in the township to donate funding to the project. "This money will be viewed as a positive step by taxpayers in the township and I believe it will have a positive reaction in our attempts to raise money."

Osnabruck Councillor Donald McElheran said everyone will benefit from the Kraft donation. "We're very pleased that Kraft has come through for us."

"It's very unlikely it would have been a reality unless we would have gotten all these players involved," he added.

Local board trustee Bill Fleming said the projected wouldn't have come to fruition for another couple years had the board been forced to do it on its own.

He compared the co-operation among various groups to the making of a sandwich, the township and school board supplying the bread and butter and Kraft supplying the cheese.

But while he was positive about the Kraft funding announcement, he was less optimistic about the school board's chance of getting more funding for the project.

The school board has been promised $285,000 for the project, which he estimated may rise in cost to $2 million by completion. It hopes to lobby the new NDP government for more funding to help defray estimated $1.2 million it will pay for its share of the project.

The board will receive a "sizeable amount of money" from the province to pay rent for St. Joseph's School in Cornwall, which uses space at the public school board's General Vanier Secondary School. The money may be allocated toward the cost of the R-O project, he said.

But even if there is a funding shortfall, the school board is committed to go ahead with the project, he said. The board will try to "bridge the gap" however it can and "the plan is to go ahead with it."

R-O principal Doug Murray said the new gym and cafeteria are needed because the present facilities are inadequate. The gymnasium has a low ceiling, a small surface area, inadequate change rooms a leaky roof and a damaged floor.

The cafeteria is located in a window-less hallway in a 14 ft. wide hallway which students have grudingly tolerated for years. "That's a major step that they are going to get a decent cafeteria," Murray said.

He hoped the new facilities will be used extensively by Kraft employees and township residents, as well as the school's functions as well, such as the plant's annual Christmas party.

Osnabruck Reeve Stewart Hart was unable to attend a press conference announcing the grant Monday. But he said he was pleased with the announcement.

"It's wonderful. I think it's pretty generous of them (Kraft)," he said. "I think that's a wonderful gesture from them."

Deputy Reeve Carson Elliott also was pleased with the announcement. "I'm very elated at that announcement today," he said Monday. "I think it's a real boost."

Evergreen on CJOH

OTTAWA — New this fall on CJOH-TV, Evergreen premieres Sunday, October 7 at 1 p.m. Veteran broadcast journalist Ian Parker is host of this half hour, thought provoking series which addresses national concerns on the environment.

Each week viewers are given an in-depth look at various environmental problems in an attempt to find global and local solutions.

Ian meets the people who make a difference with their important contributions to the environment, and will introduce corporations that have taken an affirmative step in adopting sound policies.

Evergreen will also offer advice and tips on how you can make a positive impact on your home environment.

Viewers can contribute to the content of future programs by calling or faxing the "Green Line" at 1-800-668-7711 (available Canada wide).

Osnabruck Township drops legal action against Ingleside businessman

Greg Kielec
Record Staff

OSNABRUCK CENTRE — Osnabruck Township has dropped legal action against a businessman charged with failing to conform to a zoning bylaw.

Osnabruck dropped court action against Girard Piche of Girard's Used Furniture and Appliances on the corner of Wales Road and Highway 2 east of Ingleside, before a planned Sept. 4 court appearance.

Hilton Cryderman, Osnabruck bylaw enforcement officer, said Piche met the requirements set by council by the morning of Sept. 4, thus allowing the township to drop legal action.

Council had Piche charged with contravening a zoning bylaw early this year after he failed to rid his property of used appliances, storage trailers and truck bins littering the site.

Piche has said council had not given him enough time to clean up his property. Council has said Piche has plenty of time to meet zoning requirements and legal action was the only recourse.

Piche said Monday he is happy the issue has been resolved. But he still maintained that legal action was unnecessary.

"It's one thing to push, but I think they went overboard," he said.

He believes he was singled out by the township and used as an example. "I was the only one they ever picked at," he said.

Reeve Stewart Hart denied the township was making an example of Piche. He said the township had complaints about the Piche property and had to act.

One thing that Hart and Piche did agree on is that neither one of them wanted the case to go to trial. Both the township and Piche would have been the losers had it gone to trial. The only winners would have been the lawyers, who would have been a little more richer for the ordeal, Hart said.

Piche admitted he would have lost if he pursued the issue any further. He said he would have lost business from bad publicity, wasted his own money and taxpayers' dollars.

"In business, nobody needs (bad) publicity. It's very damaging and harmful," he said.

"It's a no-win situation. It doesn't matter how."

Deputy Reeve Carson Elliott, who visited Piche three times throughout the ordeal to look over his property, said he was concerned that council may be perceived as being heavy-handed with Piche had the court action continued.

He said Piche has a viable business and he doesn't want council to force businesses out of the township. Had the case gone to trial, it may have created bad publicity for Piche and caused problems for his business.

Piche said he will watch to ensure the township pursues other zoning infringements in the municipality with equal zeal. Elliott said he also will be watching.

He said Piche has a valid point. The township should be fair with the enforcement of all its bylaws. "I try to be fair with ratepayers all over the township," he said.

Piche said there are many properties in worse condition in the township than his property. He said he could take pictures of numerous properties in worse condition than his.

But he is willing to let the issue drop. As for now, he says: "I'm just glad they are off my case."

Police end Chesterville crime spree

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — Police believe they have put an end to a crime spree which plagued Chesterville residents for most of the summer and last spring.

Two youths, one aged 14, the other 13, have been charged in connection with break and enter, theft and trespassing offenses. Under the Young Offenders Act, the youths cannot be identified.

Winchester OPP Constable Bryan Helmer, said the two boys will appear before the Young Offenders Court in Cornwall, 9:30 a.m. October 3.

The 14-year-old has been charged with two counts of break and enter, and theft, one count of theft, and 12 counts of trespassing by night under the criminal code.

The 13-year-old youth was charged with four counts of trespassing by night under the criminal code.

The OPP believes its investigation will end the rash of break-ins and trespassing complaints that have occurred over the summer and spring.

"We shouldn't have any trouble with anybody for a while in Chesterville," Helmer said.

The charges cap a lengthy investigation into trespassing and break and enter complaints going as far back as late March. "It was a big pain in our butt," Helmer said.

A couple of female residents, whose homes were broken into, were surprised to find a stranger at their bedroom doors in the middle of the night.

"It's quite a startle when you wake up at 12:30 (a.m.) and find someone standing in your bedroom door. Both...woke up and found this guy standing in the bedroom door. It startled them quite a bit," he said.

The police were able to identify the youths after a trespassing incident Aug. 22, when an off duty OPP officer with the Rockland detachment, and a few other Chesterville residents who were not identified, recognized the two boys as they were running through the streets.

The OPP were able to beat them to their respective homes and were waiting for them as they arrived home.

"We went to their residences and had their parents check in their bedrooms and neither one was in their bedrooms and when we were at one young lad's place he came home while we were at the house and snuck back in through the bedroom window," Helmer said.

The 14-year-old is alleged to have broken into homes on March 21 and March 30. In the March 30 break-in an undisclosed amount of money and cigarette lighters were taken.

The trespassing incidents consisted of one or both youths peering through the windows of residences, Helmer said.

The charges laid against the two youths doesn't account for all complaints within that time period. Helmer said police believe they are connected because of the similarity of the offenses, but are unable to link all the offences to the two youths.

Flyers sign seven players after three days of training

METCALFE — The Chesterville Junior "C" Flyers head coach Jerrold Boulanger took steps toward building the 1990-91 hockey club last Sunday.

Seven players were signed, while eight team hopefuls were told not to return for the final day of the tryout camp at the Metcalfe Arena, this Saturday.

All players signed, after the one hour of ice time on Sunday, were veterans in the Eastern Ontario Jr. "C" Hockey League.

Dan Dubois, Ray Sherrer and Chris Holmes, all Flyers' vets, were signed to the front line.

The defensive squad will see Scott Gibson, Don Marcellus, Tim Holmes and Shawn Beckstead fit into a Flyers jersey.

Beckstead is the only players signed that has not seen action fighting for the Flyers' cause.

Beckstead found his experience in Jr. "C" play, working against the Flyers squad in the 1989-90 season. He suited up for the Finch 86ers last season.

Boulanger is confident with the players that have been signed, but he is still looking at the talent in the camp for the vacant positions.

Boulanger said his greatest concern is the lack of goalies in the Flyers camp. Boulanger was expecting a third man to tryout for the goalie position, but in his absence he will be left without a choice for the slot.

"It's a problem that most teams have been faced with this year," he said. Boulanger referred to the Junior "B" Hawks goalie search.

Although the lack of an experienced goalie is a concern to Boulanger, he said that the defensive squad will be a powerful force during this season. Therefore, relieving pressure on the goaltender.

"Our defence is probably the best in the league," Boulanger said.

Boulanger came to this conclusion, based on last year's defensive teams. He has not seen any other team this season.

"We have a strong defence," Boulanger stresses.

On the front line, Boulanger is looking to vet Dan Dubois to net the points for the Flyers team.

"He scored 41 goals in 26 games" last season, Boulanger said. And, "he can easily score over 50 goals" this season.

Dubois netted the highest amount of goals for the Flyers last season, but teammate and this year's assistant coach, Kevin Byers, led the team in total with 81 points. After assists Dubois ended the season with 74 points to be the Flyers second highest point's player.

Byers collected his point total with 36 goals and 45 assists in 35 games. Dubois missed nine games of the 35 game schedule, last season due to his working engagements.

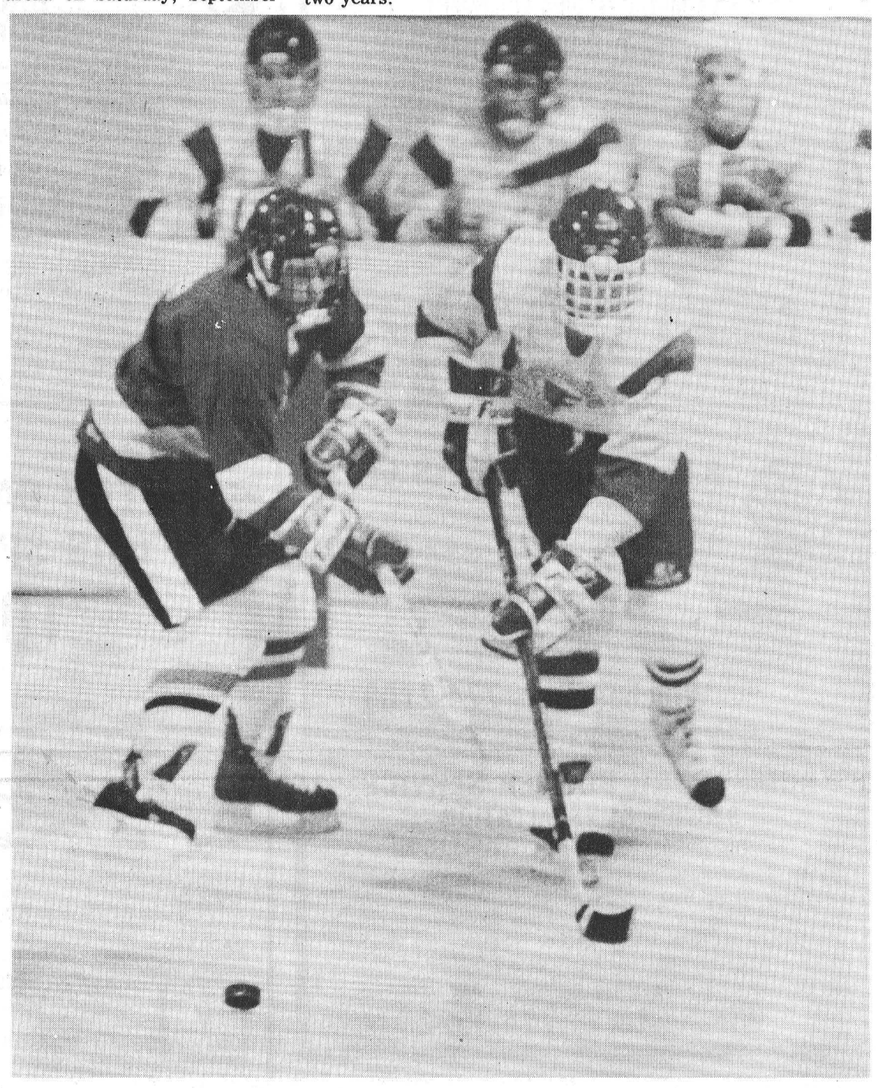
Boulanger said the difference between the 1989-90 fourth place team, and this year squad is that they have "a lot more experience."

The Flyers will have their final ice time at the Metcalfe arena on Saturday, September 22, from 2-4 p.m., before moving practices to the Winchester Arena.

The first scrimmage in Winchester will be on Tuesday, September 25 from 9-11 p.m. and again on Saturday, September 29 from 2-4 p.m.

Boulanger said he hopes to set up an exhibition game against Finch on Monday, October 8, before their first contest of the season.

The Flyers first game is on Friday, October 12 in Russell. Russell has been the basement team in the league for the past two years.



Step by step

The Junior 'C' Flyers' head coach Jerrold Boulanger signed seven players for the 1990-91 hockey season last Sunday night. Saturday, September 22 will be the Flyers' last tryout date at the Metcalfe Arena.

Larose is a major part of hockey leagues

CHESTERVILLE — Bob Larose is wearing two hats this hockey season.

The Chesterville resident is president of both the North Dundas Minor Hockey Association and the Upper Canada Minor Hockey League.

Larose isn't the only local voice on the Upper Canada league level. Ed Fields of Mountain Township is the Level III atom and midget director and Larose's wife Wendy is the new treasurer.

The new UCMHL president was elected in May, but says things are just starting to heat up now.

He is proud to point out three members of the North Dundas Minor Hockey Association have been elected to the league slate.

"I think that speaks very highly of our people," he said.

He reports the UCMHL is on sound finanical ground and is ready for another hockey season.

One change in membership sees Russell moving to the Gloucester system on an experimental basis.

"We as a league are certainly sorry to see Russell go. They are one of our original members. But that was their decision."

North Dundas, Metcalfe, Athens, North Leeds, Brockville, South Grenville, Morrisburg, Kemptville, Smiths Falls, Ogdensburg, New York and Carleton Place (midget only) will form the Upper Canada chain this season.

Teams will skate through a 20-game schedule in 1990-91.

Skating season to begin

CHESTERVILLE — On Monday, October 15 the Chesterville District Skating Club will begin another season.

The club's president, Kim Simms, hopes this season will be even better than the last.

Simms said there will be two professional coaches and four amateur coaches, to help the enrolled skaters. Winchester native Tracy Rennison will be half of the professional coaching team.

Several programs will be offered to different levels of skaters, Simms said. The younger groups will spend 45 minutes on the ice surface, while the other skaters will have classes that are an hour and a half long.

The number of children registered in the program equals that of last year's total, but Simms expects the amount to grow before the opening night on Monday, October 15.

"We have 85 (children) registered right at the moment, but we usually get a few more (participants) on the opening night," Simms said.

"We'll probably have about ninety (skaters) because usually people forget about it, (registration night). It was the same night as registration for Beavers and Girl Guides."

Simms said that the younger groups have a larger number of skaters, beginners and elementary are the most popular.

Anyone over the age of four can sign-up for the class that runs from Monday, October 12 to Monday, March 25.

Simms said the reason that children under the age of four are not expected is because "they don't want to be on the ice, they would rather be with their mother or father."

During the last class, Simms said the figure skaters will put on "a little ice show for the parents."

Reflecting on last year's club, Simms said she would like to have a few improvements, but she adds that the last season was very successful.

"It worked out very well. The parents were quite pleased, and we didn't have any complaints. So hopefully this year we can do just as good a job or even better," she said.

For further information call Kim Simms at 448-2852, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., or 448-3664, from 5 to 9 p.m.

North Dundas Devils blank St. Joseph's 1-0

CORNWALL — The North Dundas Devils junior boys soccer team travelled to St. Joseph's for a one point shutout victory against their hosts, last Friday.

It was the season opener for both teams in the SD&G eight game schedule.

The Jr. Devils' coach Murray Shane was very pleased with the team's performance in the young season.

Shane said the team played "very, very well," in their first match-up.

Denis Desormeaux booted in the Devils' only point of the contest, to give the team the advantage point.

Although the Devils had the lead, Shane said the game was not an easy win.

St. Joseph's turned up the heat, quickening the pace of the game to make the squad work for the win.

"They gave us quite a go in the last eight or nine minutes. They were pressuring us for the tie," Shane said.

The Devils' goalie Cory VanDelst made sure that the St. Joseph's squad had no opportunity to mark the tying point.

VanDelst's performance allowed the point that Desormeaux made to stand as the Devils' winning goal.

Shane said a key to the Devils' win was their attitude. The players were "positive" throughout the game.

"They played well, and I am pleasantly surprised with their attitude," he said.

The team is playing as a unit, Shane said. The older team members are eager to help the younger players. "They help them out a great deal."

The Jr. Devils will be playing back-to-back games on Wednesday, September 19 at Char-Lan District High School in Williamstown.

The youthful team will be up against Char-Lan and St. Lawrence.

Char-Lan was known as the best team in the past season, but it is a completely different season, anything can happen.

"We'll find out just how good they are," after we play them, Shane said.

Senior Boys

The Senior Devils defensive squad got off to a shaky start in the SD&G opener at St. Joseph's last Friday.

Too many defensive mistakes caused the 2-1 down-fall of the Devils squad, the Sr. Devils' coach, Doug Carroll, said.

Jamie Savary missed several scoring opportunities, Carroll said. One of Savary's missed chances was a penalty kick.

Carroll said both of St. Joseph's goals were made on the mistakes of the Devils' members.

St. Joseph's took an early advantage over the Devils, but Willy O'Connor hit St. Joseph's webbing to even things up before the half. O'Connor scored on a corner pass from Matt Vermermililyea.

An error by the Devils defence allowed St. Joseph's to score their second goal of the contest, with only four minutes left in the game.

The Devils couldn't fight back to win their first game of the season.

The Sr. Devils will accompany the Jr. team to Char-Lan District High School in Williamstown on Wednesday, September 19.

They will be playing a double header. Their opponents will be St. Lawrence High School and Char-Lan.

Jackets force deciding game

CHESTERVILLE — The Red Wings took a two game lead in the best of five finals in the Chesterville-Winchester District Men's Ball Hockey League, just to have the Yellow Jackets relinquish their efforts.

After four games of play the Wings and the Jackets are in a two game tie, with the fifth and deciding game scheduled for this Thursday at 8 p.m.

The Wings upset the Jackets, by a score of 5-3, in their first encounter of the series on Thursday, September 11.

The Wings were one game from the play-off championship after they played to a 4-1 victory over the league's top ranked team.

An excellent game between the pipes for the Wings' Richard Gauthier, and a strong showing by the front line led the Wings to the two game lead over their opponents.

Kevin Boyce was the first Wings' player to slide the ball past the Jackets' netminder Paul Bjerso. Boyce netted the shot that John Hale and Doug Armstrong set up with only 2:57 played in the opening frame.

With just 11:26 played in the second period, the Wings' Junior Hamelin connected for the major with help from Scot Ball and Ricky Nelson.

Nelson marked a goal of his own with 2:58 remaining in the period. Boyce and Dave VanDelst fed Nelson the ball that gave the Wings a 3-0 lead.

Darrell Shelp destroyed any thoughts of a Gauthier shut-out when he netted the pass from Sean O'Connor and Denis Ouellette. Shelp hit the net with 11:20 left in the final period.

It only took VanDelst 10 seconds to get back the Jackets first point of the contest. VanDelst tallied the Wings third goal off a pass from Boyce and Rene Boulanger to ensure a victory for the squad.

Game Three

It was a game that the Yellow Jackets had to win if they wanted a chance at the playoff title. And that's exactly what they did.

The Jackets' netminder Paul Bjerso played a perfect game in nets, to shut-out the Wings for the first time in the series. While his teammates marked three points against the Wings' goalie Richard Gauthier.

The first period of play was scoreless for both teams, but Sean O'Connor counted the first point of the encounter early in the second frame.

With only 3:17 played in the period, O'Connor went to the net to mark the point off a pass from Jerrold Boulanger.

Mike VanDelst gave the Jackets a two point lead with 1:33 left to play in the period. VanDelst took advantage of a pass from Bernard Grady.

Denis Ouellette went to Gauthier's net to count the Jackets third point. Ouellette found net with 10:35 left in the closing period, ending the games scoring list.

Two Apiece

It was another win or die situation for the Yellow Jackets. And again they kept their chances for the playoff title alive when they shut-out the Wings 5-0.

The Jackets' goaltender Paul Bjerso counted his second shut-out performance of the series on Monday, September 17.

The Jackets' forward Darrell Shelp had an easy time with the Wings' netminder Richard Gauthier.

Shelp played a part in all five of the Jackets' points. He netted three and assisted the other two.

Sean O'Connor was the first to mark a point for the victorious Jackets. O'Connor took advantage of a pass from Shelp and Jerrold Boulanger in the opening frame.

Shelp counted two points in the first. His first goal was assisted by O'Connor and Boulanger. Rob Steele helped Shelp on the Jackets third goal.

Both goalkeepers kept the net empty during the second frame, only giving the Wings 15:00 to attempt an unfounded comeback.

With only 15 seconds played in the closing frame, Doug Newman connected on a pass from Shelp to give the Jackets a 4-0 lead.

Shelp was the last player to score on Gauthier in the encounter which split the series at two games apiece. Mike VanDelst assisted on the play.

"A" Pool Champions

The Chesterville Selects took the "A" Pool, best of five games championship in an easy three games against the Morewood Vikings. This is the first season that the Chesterville team won the Winchester Lob Ball League championship. The winning team members are: (front left) Wayne Edgerton, Neil Beckstead, Bobby Dellevey, John Chambers (bat boy), Tony Fraser and Brent Fawcett. (Back left) Shawn Chambers, Mark Shay, Greg Beckstead, Donnie Imrie, Pat Imrie, Gary Beckstead, Sean Boulerice and Shawn Beckstead.

Thirty-nine fewer register for hockey

WINCHESTER — A $50 increase in registration fees didn't have the adverse effect expected.

A $10 increase in ice time here at the Winchester and District Arena (to $75 per hour) and no increase in municipal funding forced the North Dundas Minor Hockey Association to up players' fees by as much as $50 this fall.

Minor executives feared the worse. A drastic decline in children playing hockey in their association.

But the numbers are in and 39 skaters have disappeared from the players list.

Approximately 250 have registered for the upcoming season, down from 289 last winter.

Carolyn Hedge, 1st vice-president (in charge of NDMHA finance), said, "the increase in price was definitely a factor. It (registration) went up $50 (average) a player."

But she was quick to add, "it certainly is not as bad as we thought it might be."

She also added that the conditioning camp and other extra programs would still be offered, but with a registration fee.

"Other years these programs have been free, but we can't afford that anymore."

She said that the hockey school, with a $30 per player fee, was completely booked. That situation will institute a separate school for 7- and 8-year-old novices.

Director of registrations, Kathy Hardy, explained that the total was "around 250" because players were still trying out for the St. Lawrence Kings "AA" organization.

She agreed with Hedge saying, "price is a factor in the decline, but we would have lost some through graduation and other circumstances."

"I just hope there wasn't anyone who wanted to play hockey and couldn't afford it. I would feel bad if that were the case," Hardy added.

North Dundas' 1990-91 fees were set at $90 for junior and intermediate novice, $150 for senior novice, atom, pee wee and girls and $180 for bantam and midget.

NDMHA president Bob Larose said, "overall we were predicting a bleak picture, but it didn't materialize."

In fact Larose reported that the feeling among parents seemed to be cut down on fundraising, they were willing to pay higher fees to keep their children in hockey, "but, that does deprive some people of playing and being involved in the community."

"Some kids do lose out because of the $50 increase and that is too bad."

Larose pointed out that the registration also decreases through changing interests, moving up to the "AA" level and graduation because of age.

"Cost is definitely moving to the user. We are subsidized (municipalily) on an average of $65 per player. Other associations in the area are up to and over $100 a player and in Smiths Falls minor hockey gets its ice time for half price," Larose explained.

"I believe we are the most expensive (fees) in the Upper Canada Minor Hockey Association."

"For instance the ice in Winchester is $75 per hour. It's $72 in the Brockville Memorial Centre, but they (BMHA) have a huge fundraising program in place and a bigger population. We have just so many fund dollars in our area. So we have to pass increases along."

Larose said overall the picture was reasonable, the association was on solid ground and the overall impact wasn't as severe as expected. He said the NDMHA would rent ice as wisely as possible, and put two novice teams on the ice surface at a time for practices to save extra rental time.

"But people said they would rather pay higher fees than practice on half of the ice surface because the kids wouldn't get the full benefit of the drills. And that is the attitude we have run into."

Larose and Hedge agreed that more municipal support is needed and that the search for such funding is an ongoing process.

"Why we in North Dundas can't afford to subsidize our children on an average as our neighbours do, is a big question," Larose said.

"After all what minor hockey takes with one hand they give back with the other," he added.

Larose reports that there will be 18 teams in the North Dundas Demons' family this year including two junior novice (down from three), five intermediate novice (remains at five), three atom (down from four), three pee wee (same), two bantam (same), one midget (down from two) and one girls' team (same).

The president says ice scheduling will be done with the membership in mind, while still trying to take advantage of the cheaper price ($65 per hour) in Chesterville.

"We are responsible enough to spend the people's money wisely. We must take advantage of cheaper ice, but not at the cost of convenience for our members. But it is a fact neither arena can fully supply all of our ice. We will have to use both."

With players about to hit the ice vice-president Carolyn Hedge stress that, "minor hockey is important in our rural community. Minor hockey is alive and well."

Fitness Forum

by Jennifer Gregoire, Reg. N., N.D.

Rx: EXERCISE

1. Should I warm-up?

In order to prepare the body for exercise of any sort, a good warm-up is highly recommended. A combination of rhythmical, stimulating, yet sensible movements will increase circulation and raise body temperature, thereby, warming the muscles in preparation for the stretching to follow. This aspect, combined with stretching of ligaments and mobilization of joints, is helpful in the prevention of muscle soreness or injury during heavier exercises.

The length of the warm-up depends on the type of activity to follow, but five to eight minutes should be considered the minimum. I personally feel that for an aerobic, or any other structured exercise class routine, that the absolute minimum for the warm-up should be twelve minutes.

2. How often should I exercise?

The ideal situation for improving overall fitness would be to exercise every day for thirty minutes or more. However, the minimum exercise requirement to show a significant increase in fitness is three times a week for thirty minutes each time. Of this thirty minutes, about fifteen minutes should be relatively high intensity exertion, this is based on target heart rate zones. This portion should always be preceded by the adequate warm-up, and followed by a "cooling down" period of at least five minutes of lessened activity.

The exercising should be continuous for the entire half hour or more, and provisions should have been made to build over the following weeks. One common misconception is that an extra-long bout of heavy exercise once a week can take the place of the three-times-a-week program. However, the effects of an exercise period are lost within a few days, unless the exercise is repeated.

3. Am I exercising hard enough?

It is relatively simple to assess whether or not your are working hard enough to improve your cardio-vascular fitness. You should be checking your resting pulse rate (the pulse before you begin exercising) at the start, and your Strenuous Pulse Rate (your pulse rate just after you finish exercising, and just before you cool down) at the end.

4. What are the main benefits to exercising?

You don't just wake up one day and become fit. It takes patience, perseverance and an increase in your training program. Once you are into your program, you will enjoy the benefits of regular aerobic exercise, which can:

a) Increase the efficiency and capability of your heart and lungs.
b) Help control weight, with proper diet.
c) Give you more energy and increase resistance to fatigue.
d) Improve self-image.
e) Relieve tension and help you relax and sleep.
f) Tone muscles.
g) Increase stamina.
h) Reduce your risk of heart attack.

When combined with overeating, lack of exercise can cause obesity, which places a burden on the heart. Exercise alone won't reduce your chance of heart attack. High blood pressure, blood cholesterol levels, and cigarette smoking must also be controlled. But a regular exercise program is a positive step toward a happier, healthier life.

My Silent Achievers this week are Terry and his entire team who worked so hard to accomplish a successful and very professional Chesterville Trade Fair. Congratulations!

We are so very lucky to be able to do it for ourselves.

Larose forest announces plans for a controlled moose hunt in the 1990 fall season

LAROSE FOREST — The Ministry of Natural Resources has announced that there will be a controlled moose hunt in Larose Forest this fall.

Larose Forest, situated 40 km east of Ottawa, is home to the southernmost moose herd in Ontario. The 1990 controlled hunt will be the second consecutive year in which such a hunt has been held, and the fourth controlled hunt in Larose Forest.

"The hunt is necessary to keep moose numbers at a level where they can maintain a healthy population," Ed McGregor, the Ministry's Fish and Wildlife Supervisor for Cornwall District.

"In recent surveys we have seen the moose population increase significantly," McGregor said. This has resulted in higher levels of moose tick populations causing health problems and increased moose-vehicle accidents."

There will be two separate hunts, a six day hunt in the main forest block, and a twelve day archery only hunt in the 1300 hectare Lemieux block in South Plantagenet Township. The dates for the hunt will be October 22 to October 27 for the regular hunt and October 22 to November 2 for the archery only hunt.

Applications are available from Ministry offices in Bourget, Brockville, Carleton Place, Carillon Park, Cornwall and Kemptville.

To enter the special draw for the controlled hunt, applications must be submitted to any of the above offices by 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, October 9. The special draw will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, October 13, 1990 at the Larose Forest Headquarters south of Bourget.

The following rules will apply:

- only Ontario residents with a valid 1990 moose hunting licence are eligible.
- hunters selected in the special draw must be present with their licence, or represented by a proxy who has a copy of the hunter's 1990 moose licence.
- all other hunting within the moose hunt area will be prohibited during the moose hunt to prevent hunter conflicts.
- harvested moose must be registered and brought to the Larose Forest headquarters for examination.
- hunters selected for the regular area will be granted a free daily permit for the one day they are eligible to hunt.
- hunters selected for the archery only hunt will be permitted to hunt for four consecutive days during the twelve day hunt.
- all hunters will be allowed to be accompanied by one partner.
- all other provincial hunting laws will apply.

For further information regarding the hunt, please contact the Cornwall District Office of the Ministry of Natural Resources, 113 Amelia Street, Cornwall, Ontario, K6H 5V7 or telephone (613) 933-1774.
