No Woman should be expected to get along without an SMP Roaster

Thousands of SMP covered Roasters are already in use Thousands of women have discovered new joys in roasting and baking. Not one of these women would part with her SMP Roaster, nor go back to the old-fashioned, expensive open roast pan. How about you? How do you roast meat and fowl in your house?

IT ROASTS AND BAKES ABSOLUTELY TO PERFECTION

Open pan roasting is expensive and troublesome. It shrivels the meat badly and burns out all the delicious, health-giving juices; mother has to baste every few minutes and keep an eye on the roast all the time it's in the oven. Until you actually taste meat roasted in an SMP covered Roaster you'll never know how truly delightful meat can be.

KEEPS THE OVEN SWEET AND CLEAN

Fat and grease cannot escape from an SMP Roaster. This means a sweet, clean oven---no smoke---no cooking odors to spread through the house.

MADE IN ALL SHAPES AND SIZES---PRICES WITHIN REACH OF ALL

SMP covered Roasters are made in all shapes and sizes; fit any oven. The best ones to get are SMP Enameled Ware; other splendid SMP Roasters are made of purest aluminum or polished steel. The prices range from 70c to $3.50.

AUTO ACCIDENT

Iroquois, Nov. 17.---Monday evening, about 9.30 the Misses Annie and Susie Tindale, accompanied by Miss Fink and Mrs. Nan Moore, all of Iroquois, were driving east on Provincial Highway No. 2, in their Sedan, when they were struck by a westbound truck with the result that their left front wheel was torn off and totally demolished. The impact caused the truck to turn completely around and leap into the ditch, throwing the occupants, three men, who were under the influence of liquor, under the truck and pinning one so that it was thought he might sufficate.

Miss Tindale and Mrs Moore rushed to the neighboring house and phoned for Drs. Marcellus and Millar, and a garage man. One, only of the men was able to tell who they were and where from. They were carried to the home of Mr. Will Robertson and given first aid. Two suffered broken collar bones, the other was severely cut about the head, just how serious were their injuries, the doctors could not tell, but they were hurried to a Cornwall hospital on an ambulance.

Inspector Foster of Morrisburg was soon on the scene and liquor was found in the truck.

Miss Susie Tindale, who was driving the car, says she pulled to her right to let them pass and remarked "See them come", and again pulled out as far as she could, thus avoiding a head-on collision which she intimated would have been fatal to some, or all of them.

The front and back fenders of the Sedan were badly twisted and bent and the doors could hardly be opened. With the exception of a good shaking up and nerves unstrung, the ladies were unhurt.

BANKS—MYERS

The marriage took place on Thurs day, November 11th, at 8.30 p.m., in St. James Church, of Amy, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Banks of Liverpool, England, to John Frederick Myers, eldest son of the late G. E. Myers and Mrs. Myers of Morrisburg, Ontario, Rev. Archdeacon Chas. O. Carson officiating. Mrs. D. A. Currie played the wedding music and Miss Edna F. Pyper sang sweetly "At Dawning."

The bride was prettily gowned in amythest blue velvet trimmed with squirrel, with a large silver and grey hat, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lillies of the valley.

After the ceremony a buffet supper was served at the home of the groom's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Myers left on the 10.18 train for Buffalo N.Y.

The out-of-town guests included. Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Morin, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Myers, DeBeaujeu, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. George D. Myers, Lachine Que.; and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Becksted of Iroquois.

The groom's gift to the bride was a seal skin coat trimmed with squirrel, to the bridesmaid, sterling silver candlesticks; to the soloist, sterling silver candlesticks and to the best man, sterling silver pen knife and chain.

The ROYAL BLUE and the WHITE

Will you wear a little bit of ribbon while our Tag Drive in on? Just a little touch of the Royal Blue and the White, showing anywhere will spare you the inconvenience of a second solicitation, and it wi'l show the students of the Collegiate that you have joined hands with us in our Big Game.

We are anxious to help equip our beautiful new school, and thus prove to the citizens of Morrisburg and the Township of Williamsburg that we appreciate the fine new building they have given us But the prime object of our present endeavour is not money. We need a new piano. In time some one would donate a piano or the Board would purchase one, for it is one of the essential factors in a lively Literary Society and in the social activities of the school, and no one denies now that the chief purpose of education is to fit young men and women to take their places in the world of men and play a creditable part.

Apart from the financial objective we realize that "in unity there is strength" and in this Drive every teacher and student in our school is a big Leader. Please take sides in our Tug of War by sending us a small contribution and stating definitely upon which side your interest centres.

MISS MALISSIE WATSON

The funeral of the late Miss Malissie Watson, who passed away at at Aultsville on Wednesday the 16th inst., was held from her late home to Trinity United Church on Thursday at 2 p.m. Rev. G. W. Dustan officiating. Miss Watson was born in Williamsburg and for years was a Public School teacher and many of the older boys and girls owe some of their principals to the instruction given them in former years by her. Several friends from Winchester motored out to attend the funeral. One sister, Mrs. Garlough of East Williamsburg, and one brother Mr. Chas. Watson, are the surviving members of the family, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended.

MATILDA MAN LOSES LIFE IN FIRE

Mr. W. A. Thompson, fourth concession, Matilda, was burned to death Monday morning when his barn took fire, supposedly from his lighted lantern. He went as usual at 5 o'clock to milk and attend to his stock. Half an hour later his wife saw fire breaking out from the building and hurried to it but could not get in on account of the flames.

Supposing that her husband was safe, she succeeded in saving two horses, four cows and one calf, the greater part of the stock being burned.

From the position in which the charred remains of Mr. Thompson were found it would seem as though he attempted to remove a board in order to escape.

Besides his widow there are eight children at home.

HELPING MOTHER WITH THE CHILDREN

FOR A BABY GUEST.

Our guest room is small and so arranged there never was a place for a bassinet even if I had had one. Many of our guests had small babies and I did not know how to solve the difficulty.

A friend, who travels with her husband and who is used to being tucked into kitchenette apartments, come to my rescue in such a unique manner I believe others will be interested.

When she and Ed and Junior came to stay three days at our ranch, I had that same sinking heart I usually felt when I had no bed for the baby. I led her to the guest room and she said, "I'll just fix Junior's drawer the first thing, so that will be ready."

From her suitcase she took a cotton pad that just fitted inside the dresser drawer. Over this she had drawn, pillowcase fashion, a rubberized sheet. Then she put a soft white blanket on the top. She used the middle drawer of my dresser and pulled it out about three-quarters of the way. Under the centre she shoved the straight-back chair, which was exactly the right height. The dresser stood by the head of the bed, and here she had Junior, right by her side, in a bed he couldn't possibly roll out of.

When she left I painted the inside of that drawer plain white. I made a pad from an old blanket and put the waterproof pillowcase on it. The other blankets I made from a worn woolen one I had, and every guest with a baby who has visited us since has wondered why she hadn't thought of that arrangement before.—F. E.

CALL FOR ME.

Youngsters have a sociable fashion of calling for each other on the way to school, but I have found it a habit to discourage. I now let my daughters depend for companionship on the schoolmates they chance to meet after they start off, instead of having a crony stop regularly. Some of our callers, having very early breakfasts themselves, come when we were just about to sit down to the table, and my daughters got jumpy and impatient to be off and, consequently, unable to eat a proper meal.

Another girl, with a tendency to tardiness, kept my eldest daughter nervously waiting for her in the mornings and often within a few seconds of being late with her. Other times one of my girls would linger for a friend who did not happen to be going to school that day.

Altogether, it was an upsetting practice, a constant irritation, and I had to discontinue these morning calls. --M. P. D.

PRACTICAL HOME WORK.

My school daughters are being helped in writing, spelling and arithmetic by way of our grocery-store order. Before leaving home, the girl going with me takes the order down from dictation. While I shop elsewhere, she goes to the grocer's and buys these things, affixing the prices, adding them up and counting the change to complete the transaction. Their spelling particularly has been helped, as I have caught up words like "spinage, lettice, soup erbs, cantelope, suger, maches."—M. P. D.

GETTING READY FOR COMPANY.

A busy mother in my neighborhood has learned to handle the problem of entertaining her young daughter's week-end guests in the very easiest manner — especially the "getting ready" part of it. At breakfast each child is given a slip of paper, on which is written the few small tasks allotted to them. So, while the girls are making beds, dusting and preparing vegetables, the boys are cleaning the car and the verandah. In no time the work is all done and nobody gets fussed or worried or hurried.—W. A. C.

BABY'S SCRAPBOOK.

My baby first began to enjoy her scrapbook when she was a little over a year old and now at the age of two and a half it is still a prime favorite. Instead of the usual collection of strange animals and imaginative scenes that fill the books of older children I made it up of pictures of our common household articles, animals and doings.

There are pictures of an iron, a toothbrush, a stove, a comb and of some furniture and some utensils. The animals are the dog, cat, cow and horse that baby sees every day. Pictures show ordinary people about their ordinary business of sweeping, cooking, driving and eating. I included several things to eat which baby knows well.

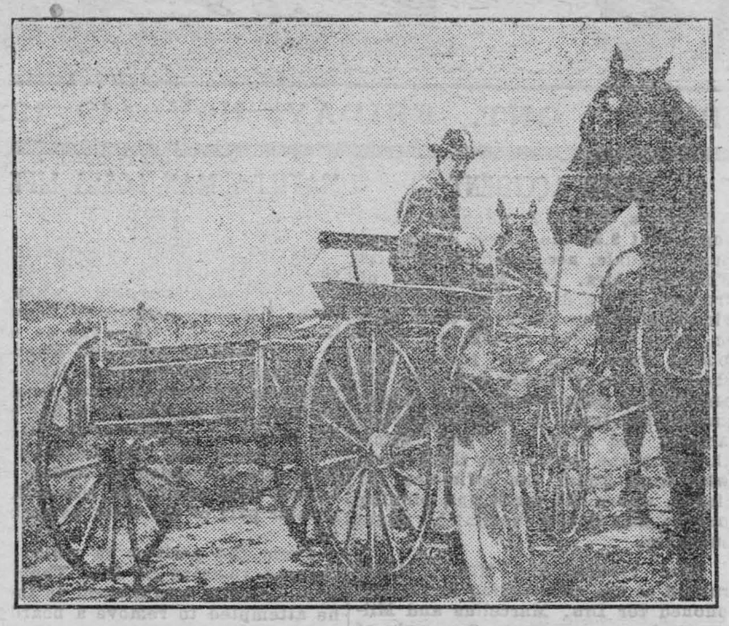

The book has helped her to learn to talk and to recognize the things in the little world in which she lives. When she is older I shall make her a book of fairies and strange scenes and unfamiliar animals with which to broaden her knowledge and stimulate her imagination, but at present her need is to know the everyday things around her.—M. I. Q.

"PINNING IN" YOUNGSTERS.

It is impossible to get a really good night's rest when you have to get up several times to cover the children. Pinning them in was suggested, but I found that it had to be done properly or they couldn't move freely and torn blankets and uncovered babies would be the result. I have found the following method to be very successful:

Use the large safety pins and pin only through the heavy blanket and sheet next on top of the child, through the lower sheet and to a light pad which rests upon the heavier pad or mattress. Do not pin through the nightgown. Use a pin over each shoulder, close enough to the neck to keep them covered well; then another at each top corner of the cover and one on each side opposite the knees. The child can move or turn easily, the corner pins keep the back covered always and the blankets are not torn. —F. L. T.

FARMER BREAKS INTO MOVIES

The $100 wagon in question with Thomas Meighan up.

After a man has used a farm wagon on the wheat ranches around Calgary for five years and has left it outdoors during the winters, it ceases to become a thing of beauty. It may still be useful but not ornamental. Traces of paint may still be found, but it takes a long search. The wheels wobble. Some of the boards are cracked, but it works.

Such a wagon figures in a number of scenes of Thomas Meighan' new picture, "The Canadian," filmed near Calgary amid prairie country traversed by the Canadian Pacific Railway. A prop man hired it and two horses from a farmer about 40 miles south of Calgary. For two weeks the farmer drove it from place to place and reported for duty when called. He received $18 a day for his services and was satisfied.

At the end of the second week the prop man decided that the wagon would be necessary to complete some of the scenes in their Long Island studio. It had to be that particular wagon, but the farmer didn't know this when he was asked if he would sell.

"What would you do with a wagon like that in New York?" he asked.

"We sometimes have to go down to the station to bring the actors' trunks up to the studio," the prop man answered without a smile.

After two days of dickering the farmer agreed to sell the wagon for $100 and the harness for $25. Later he was overheard telling a neighbor how he had sold the outfit for $125 and had received $252 for fourteen days work.

"The funny part of it," he explained, "was that they even had one of their own men drive the wagon for me. All I had to do was smoke."

The driver was Thomas Meighan.

Friend farmer will probably feel that he has had more than his money's worth when he recognizes himself in the movie film screened in his home town this winter.

POULTRY ON THE FARM

HEALTH-GIVING RAYS.

The health-giving ultra-violet rays of sunlight cannot penetrate ordinary window glass, so the birds living in a house, behind glass windows, get none of the benefits of this desirable light ray. This is also the case if the front of the poultry house is provided with muslin curtains which are closed a considerable portion of the time, or with shutters which allow ventilation but do not let in sunlight. How, then, can the birds be protected during the coming winter days and yet obtain every possible bit of these light rays?

The best solution is to use in place of the usual materials a type of wire-cloth glass. There are a number of brands on the market. They are made of fine-mesh wire cloth covered with a transparent gum or gelatinous liquid which hardens upon exposure to air but remains in a pliable condition. Ultra-violet rays pass through such wire-cloth glass readily.

ALFALFA IN THE MASH.

Recent experiments conducted especially in the study of certain vitamines, more particularly Vitamine E, which is related to fertility and hatchability, have shown that alfalfa is one of the richest sources of this important vitamine.

Furthermore, alfalfa is rich in minerals, and doubtless has far greater value in the ration than that measured simply by its food nutrients, although it is equal pound for pound on the average with wheat bran. In the light of these recent investigations, it is an excellent practice to include in the mash at least 10 per cent. of alfalfa leaf meal or a good grade of ground alfalfa.

WHOLE CORN AT NIGHT.

Any method of feeding or handling birds that will enable them to lay well and retain considerable yellow pigment is desirable, for it is associated with the maintenance of weight, and especially with disease-resisting qualities.

Recent experiment station tests have shown the wisdom of feeding the laying birds at least once a day, preferably at night, yellow whole corn during November, December, January and February—the time of extremely heavy production.

The large supply of carotinoids or yellow pigment in the corn helps to retain the yellow in a bird's body. Furthermore, the corn contains more carbohydrate units than most other single feeds, and it helps to hold up body temperature and maintain weight. The birds relish it. They eat large quantities quickly and it remains in their crops longer and lasts them better through the night than does cracked corn or smaller grains.

Probably one-quarter of the total grain ration can best be fed as whole corn.

TO STOP EGG EATING.

The following suggestion for breaking up the habit of egg eating is by no means original with me, but it has been offered as being effective in nearly all cases, so I am passing it on for what it is worth.

It merely consists in putting a newspaper in the pen where the birds can eat it. It is declared that this will stop the trouble immediately.

Whether the birds think they are eating shells, or whether something in the ink supplies a substitute, I don't know.

Egg eating is frequently a matter of habit resulting from an accidental breaking of an egg in a nest; once the taste is acquired it is easy to keep it up. This habit, however, is generally confined to one or a few birds. Where it becomes general in the flock, there is evidently some deficiency in the ration—possibly some mineral deficiency.

It has been claimed that cod liver oil will correct this deficiency, as will any good mineral mixture.

Rush Work.

Teacher—"When was Rome built?"

Boy—"At night."

"Who told you that?"

"You did. You said Rome wasn't built in a day."

So she closed her —— book and hurried along the —— path toward her house.

Anna Belle's mother listened to her —— daughter's story. And all the time she listened her —— eyes were smiling and the —— dimples around her —— mouth were smiling, too.

"And, mother, those —— trees did really dance and dance, just the way we do in Miss Millar's class. Oh, how I wish you could have seen them!"

Anna Belle's mother laughed and gave the —— child a —— kiss.

"Do you feel rested, —— child, after your nap?" was all she said.

A Chick's Appetite.

That the quantity of feed which chickens consume from day to day will often vary considerably is commonly recognized, but until recently there has been little actual evidence to show just how much variation occurs.

The results of one experiment show that although there is a rather steady increase in the quantity of feed or milk that 100 chickens consume per day as they grow from one to nine weeks of age, there are frequent changes from day to day that are decidedly out of line with the average for the week in which those days occur.

As an illustration, though the average daily feed consumed by 100 chicks in the fifth week was a little over 2,400 grams, they dropped from 2,540 grams on one day to 1,450 grams on the next. Similarly the milk consumed varied in that week all the way from about 5,500 grams to 8,500 grams for 100 chicks in one day.

Variations of 25 per cent. in total feed or milk consumption from day to day were not uncommon, showing that a chicken's appetite is a distinctly variable quantity, and suggesting that perhaps one of the reasons for differences between poultrymen in their ability to grow chickens well is to be found in the success which they attain in keeping the chickens steadily at the business of consuming feed from day to day.

Fertilization of Tobacco.

A statement of considerable import is made by the officer in charge of the Tobacco Division of the Dominion Experimental farms (Mr. C. M. Slagg) when he says in his report for 1925 that the use of lime in tobacco fertilization has in all cases lowered the yield and quality of the resulting crop at Farnham, Que. The use of commercial fertilizers in conjunction with manure gave an average yield of two hundred pounds more per acre than manure alone as well as leaving a net profit of approximately twenty dollars per acre more. It is also stated that last year's comparison of various manures in tobacco fertilization gave highest yields with sheep manure, followed by cow, poultry, horse and hog manures. The statement, however, is added that since the soil used in this experiment was somewhat variable, the results secured are not considered reliable. The semi-hot bed has been found at the Farnham station well adapted to the production of vigorous, early seedlings.

A generous man doesn't give his friends away.—C. J.

Storage of Vegetables on the Farm.

STORING CABBAGE.

Danish Ballhead is a good variety for winter storage, on account of its compact, hard heads. The cabbage to be stored should be sound and free from disease and injury. A good, uniformly cool place around 33 deg. F., where a fair degree of humidity may be maintained, is desired. When cabbage is kept inside it is best piled on slatted racks not more than two heads deep. Outside, the crop is stored in various forms of pits and trenches. Sometimes, the heads are cut and stored in A-shaped pits as used for roots, or the plants, roots and all, may be pulled and stored roots down in the shallow trenches. Around the bed a frame is built and banked up with earth, while over the top straw or other material is piled. Ventilation should be provided in all pits, trenches and root cellars or store houses.

CAULIFLOWER STORAGE.

Cauliflower is not an easy crop to store. Good sound heads with the leaves left on may be kept under proper cold storage conditions for several weeks. Many market gardeners store quantities which are pulled late in the season and not fully matured. The plants are removed to a cool cellar or frame, where they are stood close together and the roots covered with moist sand or loam. When outdoor frames are used, too much covering early in the season with improper ventilation will cause heating and rotting of the heads.

STORING ONIONS.

Slatted crates are desirable, but any method which will allow free air circulation is good. The temperature of the storage room should be kept between 33 deg. F. and 40 deg. F. and a dry atmosphere maintained.

STORING POTATOES.

Potatoes may be successfully stored in cellars or pits. When cellars are used there should be provided plenty of air circulation around the potatoes. The temperature range should be between 33 deg. F. and 40 deg. F. and the atmosphere should be just medium moist. Bins should have a false, slatted bottom and, if possible, large air shafts through the pile of potatoes. Pits should be constructed in a well-drained location and made twelve to sixteen inches deep and four to five feet wide. Plenty of ventilation should be provided and yet sufficient covering as the weather grows colder to prevent freezing of the potatoes.

STORING PUMPKINS.

After becoming well-ripened, pumpkins may be carefully cut off at the stem and stored in a comparatively warm, dry room with plenty of ventilation. They should be carefully handled and not bruised.

The Tree People.

(Write in your own adjectives.)

Behind Anna Belle's house there were deep woods with a little path running through them that led to a big rock.

On —— days Anna Belle loved to take a —— book, walk along the —— path, and then settle herself cozily with her back against the —— rock. There she would read and read in the —— shadows of the —— trees.

One day as Anna Belle sat reading in that —— place, she had a very —— experience. First, all the words on the page of her book ran together before her —— eyes, and when she looked up the trees were moving also. Anna Belle could scarcely believe it, but the trees all had faces. She could see their —— eyes looking at her. Their —— branches were waving about like —— arms.

Anna Belle was not afraid. Even when one of the trees reached down, took hold of her firmly with its —— branch and set her high up among its —— leaves, she merely wondered what would happen next.

Waving their —— branches, with every —— leaf shaking, like drapery, the trees began to dance slowly and gracefully, and Anna Belle was carried about through the air as if she were on a slow kind of roller coaster. She liked it. She felt as if she were a —— bird flying, or a —— cloud floating in the —— sky.

Round and about the trees danced, just as if they were real, —— people having a —— time. Anna Belle just held on tight and had a —— time, too.

Then, all at once, the trees stood stock still.

Anna Belle felt herself slipping, slipping, down from the —— branch onto the ground. Then, she felt the —— rock hard against her back. She saw the pages of her —— book before her eyes and the words all coming straight so she could read them. She was more surprised now that the —— trees were still than she had been when she had seen them dancing.

"I'm going right home to tell my mother about it," she said to herself.

A TWO FAMILY BUNGALOW

By Lawson & Little, Architects.

This type for a cheaper residence has much to recommend it. Each house is about twenty-five feet by twenty feet, (exclusive of the sun porch, which is about eight by twenty), and contains six rooms and a bath room.

The exterior is French Colonial in character, a pleasing effect being gained by the broad gables and tilted eaves.

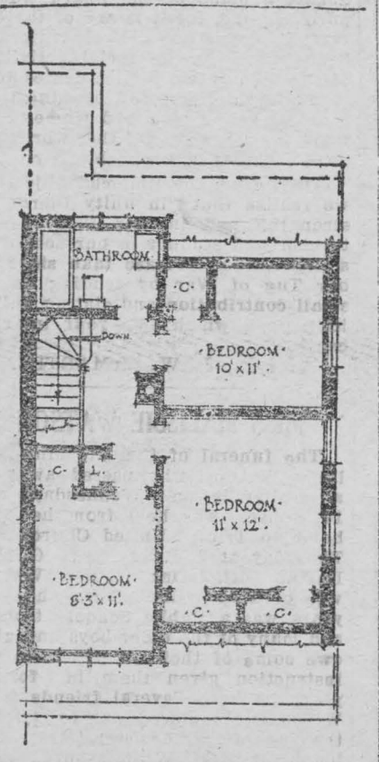

The basement walls are built of concrete, the exterior walls and party walls being of concrete blocks, and the fireplaces of pressed brick. The exterior of the walls is finished in stucco rough cast, the roofs being covered with Asbestoslates.

The ground floor on plan shows a living room and a dining room, the former being twelve by sixteen feet with a large fireplace, and with doors leading to the dining room and kitchen. The stairs lead out of the entrance side of the living room, the stairs to the basement being under them. There is a handy coat cupboard off the stair landing. Each of the three bed rooms on the first floor is provided with a cupboard and the bathroom is centrally located, and being over the kitchen is within easy reach of hot water supply and main drainage system.

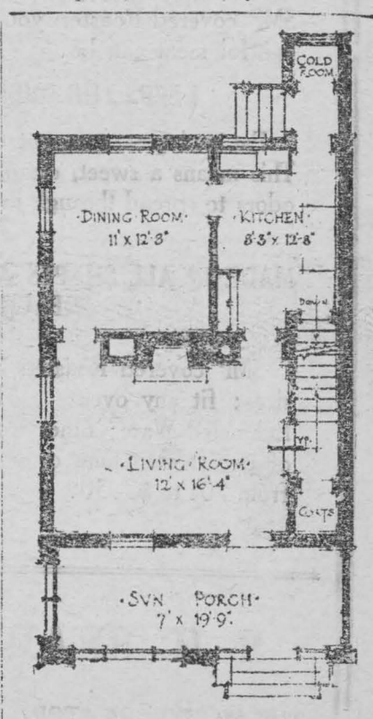

The interior woodwork and the stairs on the ground floor are of oak, the first floor of pine for paint finish.

A hot water heating system is installed, using a Standard type of boiler. The plumbing fixtures are the built-in type. The cost of each of the houses with a lot of about 40ft. frontage is $7,000.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address Lawson & Little, 374 Beaver Hall Square, Montreal, Que.

FATHER AND THREE CHILDREN KILLED WHEN CAR IS HIT BY TRAIN

Pembroke, Ont., Nov. 14.—Grim tragedy, such as has not before been known in North Renfrew County, stalked in the little village of Cobden about noon to-day, when a father and two of his children were instantly killed and another child fatally injured in a terrible level crossing fatality. A fourth child was but slightly injured.

When returning home from attending church service in an automobile owned and driven by the father, the catastrophe which has shocked the entire village and surrounding district took place. As the family party were crossing the Canadian Pacific tracks near the station they were struck by an eastbound freight train and hurtled along the tracks.

The dead and injured, all members of the same family, are Garfield Humphries, aged 38, father, killed; Edgar Humphries, aged eight, son, killed; Nina, aged six, daughter, killed; George, aged three, son, fatally injured; Mabel, daughter, aged five, slightly injured, will recover.

The family were returning from the United Church, where the father had attended service and the children Sunday school at 11.45, and had only proceeded a few blocks in their outomobile when the accident occurred. The C.P.R. tracks cross the main street of the town just at the approach to the station, and the view to the west in obscured by a grain elevator. The side curtains of the car were down, partially obstructing the view, and apparently none of the occupants of the car heard the whistle, nor the noise of the approach of the train until it was upon them. The auto was hurtled 75 feet and the father and two of his children were killed outright, the bodies being terribly mangled. Two of the children were thrown clear, one of them succumbing later to injuried received. Doctors Ritchie and Ferrill were on the scene within five minutes of the time of the accident. The injured children were removed to a neighboring home. The car is a mass of wreckage.

The level-crossing at which the fatality occurred has long been recognized as a dangerous one. For years the residents of the towns and country have forecast just such a disaster as occurred to-day. The approach of a train is hidden from both directions, an elevator on one side and a grist mill on the other. The whole community mourns the disaster which has visited the Humphries home, for the father was a deservedly popular and prosperous farmer, known to practically everybody, he having lived all his life in this section. The mother and three other children survive. The youngest members of the family are twins one year old.

FIND DETROIT CACHE OF NARCOTIC RING

Police Blow Safe Containing Drugs Valued at $181,716.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 12.—With the seizure of narcotics to the value of $181,716, police believe they have discovered the Detroit cache of the international ring, which is largely responsible for the wholesaling of drugs in the city. This is the largest Detroit haul on record.

Acting on a tip from sources which they refused to reveal, detectives of the narcotic squad crashed the door of Room 15, at 28 West Warren Avenue, which, according to the inscription, is the Detroit Art Model Studio. Inside they found no trace of any artists' equipment.

In a large safe in the room, which they blew open with nitro-glycerine, the officers found 175,216 grains of opium and 2,439 grains of heroin. At current rates the find is valued at $181.716.

The raid followed the arrest on October 26 of several men. These arrests were made as a result of city-wide raids, but all the men concerned are believed to belong to a single ring, which is importing huge quantities of drugs. Presence of starch in the room indicated that the dopesters "watered" the drugs before distributing them to the peddlers.

ROWDIES IN DUBLIN MAR CELEBRATION

Street Battles Are Staged and Police Charge on Mobs.

A despatch from Dublin says:—Excitable soldiers returning from Phoenix after Armistice Day celebrations got out of hand in the city streets and the police were obliged to resort to baton charges to stop the disorders. Several persons were injured and required hospital teatment.

One body of youthful Republicans marched along Grafton Street shouting: "Down with King George." The police clubbed them severely, causing a wild stampede, and later, to avoid further disturbances, large bodies of police were ordered out, and patrolled the streets in vans, ready for emergencies.

It was for the purpose of avoiding the blocking of street traffic by crowds, with possible chances of similar disorders to those which characterized former celebrations on Armistice Day, that the authorities selected Phoenix Park. This park was the scene of the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Thomas H. Burke, Under-Secretary, in 1882.

Armistice Day ended with a series of riotous demonstrations, and the police were again called upon to disperse the fighting crowds with their batons.

Nine persons were sent to hospitals, and many others were hurt in the various melees throughout the day. Some of them were women, who were caught in the clashes between the demonstrators and police.

The worst disturbance was in the evening in O'Connell Street, where a party of poppy-wearers were intercepted by Republican rowdies. A wild scene followed, and civic guards clubbed the disturbers, felling several of them.

AIRPLANE AND BOMBS USED IN FACTION FEUD

Marion, Ill., Nov. 12.—The airplane and aerial bomb to-day were added to armored cars, machine guns and other novel weapons used in the Southern Illinois gang warfare between the rival Shelton and Birger liquor factions.

Flying low over "Shady Rest," a roadhouse operated by Charlie Birger, gang leader, 10 miles east of Marion, an unidentified aviator dropped a bomb, which failed to explode.

Seven or eight gangsters then ran out of the place and began firing at the plane with rifles and machine guns as it circled around again and dropped two more bombs. One was a dud. The other exploded in the woods 100 yards from the roadhouse.

The gunfire did not find its mark, but the aviator flew away rapidly to the north. The attacking plane bore no marks of identification and the pilot could not be seen clearly from the ground. One witness said he believed a second man was in the cockpit.

HANGING MURDERERS ONLY REMEDIAL PLAN

No Sloppy Sentimentality Condoned by Montreal Judge.

A despatch from Montreal says:—"What remedial method would you suggest in the case of murderers?" Mr. Justice Greenshields, of the Appeal Court of Quebec, was asked by a member of the Crime Commission of New York State, which is making an investigation of Canadian procedure in dealing with criminal cases.

"The only remedial method I know is to hang them," was the reply. The Justice had no sympathy for the "seeming sloppy sentimentality felt for a man because he has the distinction of being a blood-thirsty bandit. I often read how the judge with tearful eyes and choking voice sentenced some one to death. Whenever I have

ALL IN READINESS FOR ROYAL WINTER FAIR

Great Army of Patrons Will See Wonders in All Departments.

A despatch from Toronto says:—For eight days, commencing Friday, Nov. 12, the Royal Winter Fair will celebrate its fifth anniversary in the Royal Coliseum, Exhibition Park. In keeping with the records established at the four preceding exhibitions, the "1926 Royal" presents to its great army of patrons, including visitors from all parts of Canada and the United States, many new and phenomenal educational features in connection with the horse show, and the displays of live stock and products of the field and orchard. The variety and completeness of every department of the show is reported quite beyond comparison; not forgetting the light horse show, which compares, if not surpasses, the New York and London Olympic Shows. More than 1,650 horses are entered in the horse show events.

The comprehensive collection of the best that Canada and the United States produce in pure-bred live stock in poultry and pet stock of all varieties, in tropical and fancy fish, in floriculture and horticulture, in dairy products and countless other products allied with agriculture, forms an exhibition of first importance, well worth coming hundreds of miles to see.

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON DEAD AT AGE OF 90

Served in U.S. House of Representatives for Period of 44 Years.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 12.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon died here to-day at the age of 90. He had been ailing for some time, and for the first time since he voted for Lincoln in 1816 was unable to get to the polls on November 2.

Forty-four years "Uncle Joe" served in the House of Representatives, having served continuously, with the exception of one two-year term, from 1873 to 1921, when he retired at the age of 85. And in the Congressional record may be found a graphic record of his activities during those years and of his gradual climb to the Speakership where he ruled from 1903 to 1911 with a high hand, earning the appelation Czar of the House.

Distribute the Risk!

AN Investment Trust distributes the risk.

Distribution of risk for investors is the bedrock of Investment Trust policy.

THE NATIONAL DEBENTURE CORPORATION, LIMITED, is an Investment Trust — among the first Investment Trusts of Canada.

THE NATIONAL DEBENTURE CORPORATION, LIMITED, has adapted British Investment Trust methods to Canadian requirements.

National Debenture Series "A" bonds are now being offered to the public in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000. The price is 100 and the interest is 5½ per cent., payable twice a year.

The securities behind these bonds are four of the safest and best varieties — Dominion Government, Provincial Government and Municipal securities and approved first mortgages. It is expressly stipulated that the par value of such securities must always be $105 for every $100 worth of National Debenture Series "A" bonds issued. Of this $105 at least $55 par value must be in Government and Municipal securities. Up to $50, but no more, may be in approved first mortgages.

Further, it is provided that all these securities must be deposited with a Trustee, The Trusts and Guarantee Co., Limited, Toronto, whose duty it is to examine and scrutinize them and see that the required proportions are constantly maintained.

Could anything be made more secure? First, there are three kinds of first class bonds, and then first mortgages. Secondly, there is the double assurance of Trustee supervision and examination. Thirdly, there is distribution of risk.

National Debenture Bonds yield 5½ per cent. —a high yield and absolute safety for your investment. National Debenture Bonds combine the four securities named.

There are other attractive features in connection with this series "A" offering which we will be glad to explain.

Write to-day for our new booklet, "The Investment Trust". It will provide you with interesting details. It is free.

For forty-three years, no bond recommended and sold by our organization has failed to pay principal and interest. 13

Frank Stewart, MERCHANT TAILOR

MORRISBURG, : : : ONT

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY OF DUNDAS:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

I have been unanimously chosen as the Liberal-Conservative Candidate in the approaching Provincial Election. In accepting the nomination I have made it clear that I do so as a straight Conservative Candidate, in full accord with the policy of the Government.

I appreciate the honour that has thus been conferred upon me, but I realize that this honour carries with it a corresponding responsibility, and while accepting the honour I assure you I shall not disregard my responsibility.

The administration of the affairs of the province by the Liberal-Conservative Party during the last three and one half years has not been seriously assailed, in fact unbiased political critics have pronounced it an excellent administration. It is therefore with unbounded confidence that I appear before you as a candidate, in accord with the policy of the Liberal-Conservative Party.

Mr. Ferguson's temperance policy appears to be the only controversial question before the people in the present campaign. The Ontario Temperance Act has been in operation in the province for ten years and has accomplished much good, but the law has always been disregarded and held in contempt by large numbers of our people which is to a great extent responsible for lawlessness and non-observance.

Attorney Generals Lucas, Raney and Nickle, successively, have honestly, I believe, tried to enforce the law with but little success. Evils have crept into the system, such as secret drinking, hypocrisy, perjury and general lawlessness. Boot-legging has been carried on to an alarming extent, generally by the worst element of our peoples, many of whom are desparadoes who do not even regard human life in the operation of their nefarious business.

The Government, by the proposed amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act, expects to retain the good features of the law and to eliminate, as far as possible, the evils. I am persuaded that this can be done and that the act with the proposed amendments will result in a much better material, social, and moral condiiton than exists at the present time.

I have always been a consistent tempe ance man, and while I am a Conservative, proud of the achievements of the Conservative Party in the matter of Temperance Legislation in the past, and ready to trust the party for the future, I am not pledged to any man or any party. If you elect me as your representative, I shall go before the Legislature as a free man, without a muzzle of any kind, free to exercise my best judgment on all matters appertaining to the best interest of my county, my province and the welfare of the people.

I have outlined a straight course in this campaign and I shall follow that course to the end. In this course and on this policy I solicit the support of all loyal Conservatives, and all others of my fellow-citizens who are interested in the cause of true temperance, the welfare of the people and good Government.

With best wishes for your success and happiness.

I beg to remain

Yours faithfully,

JOHN McCORMICK,

WINCHESTER, ONTARIO.

The RED RAIN MYSTERY by HEADON HILL

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Samuel Honeybun, retired English countryman, startles the neighborhood with the announcement that blood is found in his rain-gauge. Right on the heels of the announcement comes news of the strange murder of—

Sir Francis Lathrop, father of Margaret, who is engaged to Sir Guy Lathrop. Sir Guy is suspected of the murder and when Margaret refuses to marry him he leaves for London and is shadowed by Inspector Roake.

Sir Guy drops a decoy in the Thames river, and Roake loses track of him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

When Margaret discovered that her lover had been as good as his word and had left the house before breakfast she bitterly regretted her bluntly expressed rejection of his suggestion for an immediate marriage. She still thought that such a proceeding would be injudicious, because Roake could have twisted it to suit his case against Guy, but she blamed herself for not having framed her refusal less bluntly.

As it was, she had put Guy's back up and he had paid her in her own coin by quitting his own home on the silly pretext that they would invite scandal if they continued to live under the same roof without the sanction of the church. And never before in her young existence had she so felt the need of masculine strength to lean on.

As the day wore on her nervousness increased and she walked down to the village inn in the hope that the landlord would have had a wire announcing the return of Klyne, or rather of "The Reverend Charles Danvers."

"No, miss," was the reply. "His Reverence said he might be gone six hours and he might be gone six days. I ain't heard from his since."

As she was leaving the inn Margaret was accosted by Adela Larkin, who was passing as though by accident.

"Hullo, Miss Lathrop!" said the Rector's daughter. "Not taken to drink, I hope, in your old age?"

Margaret could be very stately on occasion toward those she did not like, and she did not like Adela Larkin.

"One can have other business than drink at an inn," she said severely.

"Quite," rejoined Adela. "I hope your business wasn't to call on a bogus parson who is staying there. If so you had better inquire at the county gaol. He came to the Rectory yesterday on the 'false pretences' racket, and I rather think I delivered him into the jaws of the police."

"That was cruel of you; but perhaps you were cruel to be kind," retorted Margaret. "No, I haven't been to call on your bogus parson. I did not know that there was any sort of a parson staying at the inn."

The girls separated, none too amicably.

On entering the lodge gates of the Grange, Margaret was the recipient of a clumsy bow from a man coming from the direction of the mansion. His face seemed familiar and she recognized him as the egregious person who behaved so strangely at the park wall, introducing himself as Mr. Honeybun, junior. She had not forgotten his intercepted signal to the man on the wall and she instinctively swerved from him, sensing an enemy.

Yet he was as polite as he knew how to be.

"Good day to you, Miss Lathrop," he said. "I have been trying to see Sir Guy, but I find he is from home. I wanted to ask him if he would let me a few hundred acres of rough shooting. I am going to spend the autumn with my father at Latchfield, and a fellow must have some sort of an occupation in such a dead-and-alive hole, don' cher know?"

"Yes, Sir Guy went away this morning," Margaret moistened her dry lips to reply. "When he comes back I will tell him of your requirement, though I don't think he has any shooting to let."

Mr. Honeybun muttered something inaudible and sauntered out into the highway, where he started off at a brisk pace in the direction of Latchfield. Margaret proceeded along the drive, wondering why a man possessing a car should walk five miles out and five miles back. She had reached a point a hundred yards from the lodge gates when a piercing whistle shrilled on her ears—two long blasts followed by a short one—and a movement in the shrubbery on the left drew her eyes to a huge dog of the mastiff breed straining at a rope by which it was fastened to a tree. Again the whistle shrilled and Margaret saw that the rope seemed to be almost at breaking point. And the great dog's glare told her that she was his objective if he could win his freedom.

She gathered up her skirts and raced for the hall door, slamming it in the fierce beast's face as its slavering jaws snapped at her. Going to a window, she saw the balked animal tearing down the road, and once more she heard a whistle—a single, prolonged blast now. She rang the hall bell.

"Giles," she said to the footman who appeared, "I have been attacked by a dog who was tied by a rope to a tree in the east shrubbery off the avenue. The rope broke, and I want you to go and fetch what is left of it. The shorter length was carried away on the dog's collar."

When the footman returned from his errand he was laboring under obvious excitement.

"This rope didn't give way of itself, miss," he said. "Somebody must have helped it. See, four of the five strands have been hacked through—a clean cut with a sharp knife."

Margaret had expected some such evidence of intention, but she merely thanked the footman without comment and, when he was gone, verified his statement. It was as he had said. The rope was a stout one and brand new. The break was not due to decay, but to a carefully administered slash from a keen blade.

She attempted to reconstruct the outrage directed against her. She had no doubt that Mr. James Honeybun had procured a ferocious dog and trained it to obey the signals of the whistle, especially that of straining at its leash on hearing the two long blasts followed by a short one. He had then provided himself with a rope and damaged it to suit his purpose, afterwards setting out for the Grange with the dog on the rope. His call to inquire for shooting to rent had probably been only an excuse to furnish him with a legitimate reason for entering the grounds. On his way up to the house he had tied the dog to the tree with the nearly severed rope, and after the meeting at the lodge gates on leaving had only gone a few paces along the road before blowing his whistle.

It was a terrifying surmise, but the only one that tallied with the facts revealed by her adventure.

"But that means that he must have spied upon my movements, or had someone doing it for him," she groaned. "Oh, why does he persecute me so?"

Cold reason was ready with the answer. Honeybun was punishing her for employing Klyne, having ascertained that the famous investigator was still working for her.

Out of this tangle there emerged the greater problem: were Mr. James Honeybun and Miss Larkin acting in concert or separately? To that no answer was forthcoming, though one conclusion was outstanding. An enhanced interest was attached to the "Red Rain" in the gauge of Mr. Samuel Honeybun—the theory rejected by the police from the Chief Constable downwards.

She found herself in bed at last, trembling all over.

She could not think of sleep, exhausted though she was. She dared not plunge into unconsciousness which would render her helpless. She took up a book which she had brought up and began to read. But the pages were a blur, and she soon laid the book aside.

Then, suddenly, the thing happened. A faint scraping sound, which she located as outside her window, fell upon her ears. She knew what it was. Somebody had raised a ladder against the sill and was getting it into the desired position by moving it from right to left, or vice versa. There was a brief pause and then in the stillness of a very calm night there came the pid-pad of someone swiftly ascending the rungs.

Margaret had carefully fastened the catch of the window, but that would be no obstacle to a man determined to effect an entrance. He would simply smash a pane of blass and push back the hasp. And before the terrified girl could decide on her course if he did so, he did it. There was the tinkle of glass on the floor and the lower sash was pushed up.

It was a night of rapid changes. Just as a leg appeared over the sill a new sort of sound was audible—the sound of a scuffle on the ladder, followed by a muttered oath and the dull thud of a body striking the ground below.

"Just in time, girlie," said a voice in the black void of the open window. "I will run down and see if the beggar's neck is broken, and then, if, as I think, he is well enough to have done a bolt, I will return and claim your hospitality."

It was Guy's voice. Margaret sat up in bed clasping her hands in gratitude, not only for her lover's return, but for his timely rescue of her. In a couple of minutes he reappeared and, entering, closed the window.

"He has bolted all right," Guy announced. "I guess he wasn't hurt except by the fall. I never got a proper whack at him on the ladder—only enough to shove him off."

"Was it that ugly brute who would have shot Klyne?"

Napoleon's Study of English.

When Napoleon was a prisoner on St. Helena, he tried to master the language of his jailers. But it was too much for him. He wrote to the Count Las Cases:

"Since sixt week I learn the English and I do not any progress. 6 week do fourty and two day, if I might have learn 50 words for day, I could know it 2 thousands and 2 hundred. It is in the dictionary more than fourty thousand, even if he could, must 20 bout much often for know it or 120 week, which do more 2 year. After this you shall agree that to study one tongue is a great labor, who must do it in the young aged."

He certainly had not made much progress when he wrote that letter. It is as good as a puzzle.

After Every Meal

Nervous Children.

There are some children, otherwise in apparent good health, who suffer from an over-excitable weakness of the nervous system that manifests itself in spasms of various muscles or in general convulsions. The larynx is very apt to be the seat of this trouble, which shows itself in attacks of spasmodic crop; again, sometimes associated with croup, sometimes occuring independently, there are cramp-like spasms of the hands and feet. In general all the muscles react instantly and strongly to any stimulus, such as a sharp tap with the finger.

This muscular irritability has been found to be due to a fault of nutrition, namely an inability to absorb or assimilate lime, and the medical problem is to overcome this defect, and bring about a normal lime digestion. An ample supply of lime-containing food must be given and if there are other forms of digestive trouble they must be treated. It is well to start the treatment with a dose of castor oil, to ensure the removal of any toxins or poisonous material from the digestive tract.

The dies should consist largely of milk, to which lime water may be added, and also of such foods as are rich in lime: cabbage, turnips, oatmeal, and vegetables and fruits in general. Eggs contain a fair percentage of lime, and so do most nuts, but beef and other meats have very little. Nuts should be ground and made into a puree, and, even so, should be eaten sparingly, for they contain much fat and are not always readily digested. Cod-liver oil aids in the assimilation of lime, so also do extracts of certain glands; but here we are encroaching on the province of the medical attendant, who should of course be consulted not only about the drug treatment, but also about the diet.

The attack itself may be treated and sometimes arrested before the doctor comes, by putting the child in a hot bath and applying cold compresses to the head. The severity of the croup attacks may often be reduced by applying heat to the larynx by means of a sponge or soft cloth wrung out of hot water. If it can be given without disturbing the child too much, an enema is sometimes of service.

MOTHERS PRAISE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. L. M. Brown, Walton, N.S., says:—"I cannot recommend Baby's Own Tablets too highly. I have found them invaluable for the ailments of little ones." Mrs. Brown's testimony is the same as that of thousands of other mothers who have used the Tablets. To use them once is a sure guarantee that they will always be kept in the home as long as there are babies or young children to be cared for. The Tablets are a laxative — mild but thorough in action—which never fail to regulate the stomach and bowels; relieve constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make the dreaded teething period easy. In fact you banish all the minor ills from which little ones suffer. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Prayers for Oysters.

An unusual celebration is to be held shortly by a Japanese firm of artificial pearl dealers. They are to erect a monument in memory of oysters whose lives have been sacrificed for the sake of the pearls that have enabled the firm to become so prosperous. Pearls that even the leading experts are unable to distinguish from the natural product are manufactured by this firm.

The monument is being laid out in front of the Imperial Shrine at Ise, and will take the form of a tower containing 10,000 pearls. A religious mass is to be said at the unveiling for the repose of the souls of the oysters.

Most visitors to Japan have remarked with delight on the wonderfully carved ivory statuettes that are offered for sale. A few months ago the leading Japanese ivory workers held a religious ceremony in memory of the thousands of elephants that had been killed to make these statuettes.

Somewhat similar was the ceremony held by geisha for the souls of cats slain to provide the necessary material for the Japanese musical instrument, the samisen, played by the singing girls.

"What's true?" asked the father.

Stand upon the peak of some isolated mountain at daybreak, when the night-mists first rise from off the plains, and watch their white and lake-like fields as they float in level bays and winding gulphs about the islanded summits of the lower hills, untouched yet by more than dawn, colder and more quiet than a windless sea under the moon of midnight. Watch when the first sunbeam is sent upon the silver channels, how the foam of their undulating surface parts and passes away; and down under their depths the glittering city and green pasture lie like Atlantis, between the white paths of winding rivers; the flakes of light falling every moment faster and broader among the starry spires, as the wreathed surges break and vanish above them, and the confused crests and ridges of the dark hills shorten their gray shadows upon the plains.

Wait a little longer and you shall see those scattered mists rallying in the ravines and floating valleys, till they couch in quiet masses, iridescent with the morning light, upon the broad breasts of the higher hills, whose leagues of massy undulation will melt back and back into that robe of material light, until they fade away, lost in its lustre, to appear again above, in the serene heaven, like a wild, bright, impossible dream, foundationless and inaccessible, their very bases vanishing in the unsubstantial and mocking blue of the deep lake below.—John Ruskin.

Upon this dear old Earth, the haunting days
Of springtime's coming; all the browns and grays
Of English autumns? Or shall we forget
Will there be sunsets in the Western skies,
And great big silent seas for us to sail
Beneath a crescent moon, all silver-pale?
Will she be there with laughter in her eyes?
And shall we smell the heather wet with rain,
Or see the yellow daffodils again?

The Heritage.

James Russell Lowell wrote much serious verse, but his "Biglow Papers," written during the American Civil War, are perhaps his most distinctive work.

O, rich man's son! there is a toil
That with all others level stands;
Large charity doth never soil,
But only whitens soft white hands.
This is the best crop from thy lands;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being rich to hold in fee.

O, poor man's son! scorn not thy state;
There is worse weariness than thine
In merely being rich and great:
Toil only gives the soul to shine,
And makes rest fragrant and benign;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being poor to hold in fee.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
Are equal in the earth at last;
Both, children of the same dear God,
Prove title to your heirship vast
By record of a well-filled past;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Well worth a life to hold in fee.

The Best Reward—

—For good work is the consciousness that we have done it.

—Our children can give us is to merit our sacrifices.

—Is not the bonus, but the apreciation the bonus implies.

—For a good sermon is in the improved living of the hearers.

—Of thrift is the mastery we establish over impetuous desires.

—Of hospitallty is in witnessing the pleasure of our guests.

—Of industry is the sense of self-respect that follows.

After Shaving—Minard's Liniment.

November Cornfield.

The long, rasping whisper
Of scattered cornstalks
In November wind
Is like the hard breathing of old soldiers
Retreating through a strange country
The wind harries them,
And they strain forward,
Tugging at hard, gnarled roots,
Swinging tattered leaves
Like rusted swords,
Beating weakly, vainly,
At a quick rush of sleet;
Bending, struggling on,
With their shifting, tottering banners
Of dusty yellow and torn gray.

—Arthur Saxe.

REGAINED HEALTH IS NOW HAPPY

The Experience of a Quebec Woman With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. L. D. Bernier, 89 D'Arguillon Street, Quebec, is one of the thousands of women who, when she found her health failing, resorted at once to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and now finds herself in perfect health. Mrs. Bernier says:—"I was very weak, subject to headaches and was unable to sleep well. Testimonials in the newspapers persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and the result has been most satisfactory. I have regained my health, the headaches have left me; I sleep well at night, and I have gained in weight. Naturally I am feeling happy. I strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all weak people."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. If you will send us your name and address a little book, "Building Up the Blood," will be mailed you prepaid. This little book contains many useful health hints.

You can get these pills through any dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Way Out.

The new bride was in tears on the evening of her first supper for friends. "My cottage pudding wouldn't rise," she sobbed.

"That's all right, dear," replied the husband, "we'll just tell them it's a flat pudding."

We derive greater benefit from the criticism of our enemies than from the flattery of our friends.—J. B.

Rolling Stones.

It is wise, it is well
That stones should roll
Nor smother in bracken and moss.
Does a stone grow more whole
Being striped across
With parasite lichen?
But it enters experience
And sees a new world
If it rolls—if it rolls—
After petard, or toss.

Let it roll—
Roll when it's scuffed out soundly
From cluttered-up rut, or hole.
Let it adventure
Beyond the straight fence.
Even let it go
Like a meteor, hurled—
Even land in another world!

Moss is a parasite.
A parasite, rust.
Let a stone roll off its rough;
Let it chip,
Let it wear off old crust.
Even a rare thing might spring from its heart
If its strictures were broken wholly apart.

—Martha Webster Merriehew.

Long-Service Eyries.

Golden eagles are still to be found in the western and central Scottish Highlands, where the same nests, or eyries, have been used regularly for half a century.

Explained.

"Isn't that a new piece?"

"Oh, no! The piano has just been tuned."

WARNING!
Beware of Counterfeits

There is only one genuine "ASPIRIN" tablet. If a tablet is offered as "ASPIRIN" and is not stamped with the "Bayer Cross"—refuse it with contempt—it is not "ASPIRIN" at all! Don't take chances!

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions.
Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets
Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid (Acetyl Salicylic Acid, "A. S. A."). While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

Little Things.

Lest anyone think that the little things don't count, naturalists estimate that insects comprise four-fifths of the animal kingdom.

Physicians Use Minard's Liniment.

Queen Mary was the first English ruler to date her coins, and Edward the Sixth first used a value mark when he put Roman numerals on the twelvepence piece. Oliver Cromwell is accredited with introducing inscriptions on the edges of coins to prevent chipping off the silver pieces of his day.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION FOR MRS. PENN

She Escaped It by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Windsor, Ont.—"After the birth of my first baby I was very much run-down in health and the doctor said I must have an operation as I was suffering from a displacement. A friend wanted me to try your medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and I took it steadily for a year. During this time I was carrying my second baby and I felt real well all the time and did not have a hard confinement. I feel sure the Vegetable Compound did me a lot of good, and all my people do, too. One sister in Leamington, Ontario, takes it, and both sisters praise it as a good medicine. I am more than pleased with the result."—Mrs. W. PENN, Windsor, Ontario.

Mrs. Corbin Relieved from Pain

Stewiacke, N. S.—"I had pains across my back and in my side for two years after my first baby was born. My mother had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I read about it in the papers, so I tried it and the pains all left me. I have a family of three children now, and the medicine helped me during the months before they were born. I recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. CARY W. CORBIN, Main Street, Stewiacke, Nova Scotia. C

"Father thought something serious had happened!"

"—When I telephoned home last evening," Father got a mild shock," said a school teacher to her friend.

"His first question was — 'Are you well, Jean?' When I replied 'Fine,' he explained how surprised he was to hear the Long Distance operator say 'Blankville calling, please hold the line.'

"You know my home is ninety miles away and I haven't paid Father a visit since the winter, but in future I intend to talk to him frequently."

Instead of using Long Distance only in emergencies, many telephone users are making it a habit to call friends in far-away places on pre-arranged nights and at frequent intervals.
