Morrisburg Lady Injured When Struck by Auto

Mrs. W. A. Dawson, of Morrisburg, received a fractured skull, severe injuries to the spine and arm, and serious bruises about the body as a result of being struck by a car on Main street in Morrisburg Saturday evening.

The car which struck her was being driven by John Gibson, a Kingston taxi driver, who was avoiding collision with another car at the time. William Appleton, of Morrisburg, had signalled for a left-hand turn at a street intersection, but had not made it and Gibson had gone to the left side of the road to go around Appleton.

On seeing that Appleton was not going to turn, he swerved to the right again, barely missing collision with a building on the corner and striking Mrs. Dawson who was crossing the side street. She was rushed to the office of Dr. C. A. Louden, and later taken to her home, where she remained.

Williamsburg People Injured In Auto Smash Sunday

Sunday morning when Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Casselman, of Williamsburg, were proceeding along the Metcalfe road about eight miles south of Ottawa a collision occured between their car and one proceeding in the opposite direction driven by J. W. Ginn, of Ottawa, in which were three passengers.

Mr. and Mrs. Casselman were alone in their car and were driving to the city when the accident occurred. They stated that their machine was on the right side of the road, on a straight stretch, and that they were travelling at a moderate rate of speed when the crash occurred.

Mrs. Caselman suffered deep cuts about the head and face, in addition to being severely shaken up by the impact, and Mr. Casselman also sustained injuries necessitating his immediate removal to the hospital. In the other machine, W. E. Ginn, a passenger, suffered severe cuts and bruises, while the remaining occupants escaped with a bad shaking-up and shock.

Battered to a shapeless mass of twisted machinery the Casselman car was wrecked almost beyond possible repair, while that driven by Mr. Ginn was damaged to the extent of several hundreds of dollars.

J. W. Ginn informed County Constable Cameron Gow that his view of the road was obstructed by another machine which was passing him.

A horse-drawn vehicle, he alleged, was a short distance in front of him, and suddenly another automobile passed him on the left and cut in sharply. Putting on his brakes and swerving to avoid what he believed would be a certain collision, Mr. Ginn swung directly into the path of the Casselman car, the two cars meeting with terrific force.

Sixty-First Anniversary Morewood Presbyterian Church

Last Sunday the congregation of Morewood Presbyterian Church celebrated the sixty-first anniversary of the founding of the church in Morewood, when Rev. W. J. Hurlow, of Kemptville, preached two very impressive and appropriate sermons to large congregations at both morning and evening services. In keeping with the enthusiasm of the occasion, the choir, perhaps, was never heard to better advantage than during these services, while the well-known generosity of the congregation in giving did not lag when the offerings amounted to $170.

Former Winchester Man Dies in California

Following a few days' illness, developing from pneumonia, the death occurred at the county hospital, Oroville, California, of Benjamin Herriman Beach, a former well-known resident of Winchester. Born in South Gower, 76 years ago, he was the eldest son of the late Philomen Beach and Harriett Hunter. His early life was spent in Winchester, but a number of years ago he became actively connected with gold prospecting.

His experience was gained in the gold mining districts of Cariboo, British Columbia, as well as the Yukon and Alaska before the days of the big rush. For some years now he had been developing in the district near Oroville, Butte County, California, where he made many friends to whom his death was a great shock.

Surviving him are two brothers, Norman W., and Edwin Beach, both of Winchester, and Mrs. James A. Devitt, of Ottawa.

The funeral will be held on the arrival of the body at Winchester, interment being made in Maple Ridge cemetery in the family plot.

ENTERTAINMENT AT ELMA

Chesterville Tax Bills Lower

The tax bills for Chesterville's municipal taxes, which were handed to the ratepayers at the beginning of the week, should cause a flutter of joy when it is noted that the rate is slightly more than ten mills lower than last year which represents quite a considerable saving to every taxpayer in Chesterville. With the payment of the taxes on September 20th a discount of one and one-half per cent on the full amount may be obtained.

Popular Finch Girl and Dunbar Young Man Wed

A very quiet but charming marriage took place at Chalmers United Church parsonage, Rinch, Wednesday afternoon, September 2nd, when Miss Freda Hope, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne McLean, of ,Finch was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Brooks, of Chesterville, Rev. G. N. Maxwell, local pastor, officiating.

The bride was unattended and wore a beautiful costume of brown and white with felt hat to match.

The newly married couple enjoyed a motor trip to Western Ontario, and while there took in a few days at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto. They returned home on Sunday and are residing on a farm at Dunbar.

Condensery Without Water; Town Without Fire Protection

The continued dry spell has created a very serious problem in Chesterville, where, owing to the unprecedently low level of the water in the Nation River, the Nestlé's plant is on the verge of materially curtailing operations at the plant, which would throw a number out of employment, while the town is practically without fire protection.

Large quantities of water are used by the condensery for cooling purposes and their pumps also supply the pressure in the mains for fire purposes throughout the town. At present the water at the river end of the pipe is considerably lower than the intake. An endeavour has been made to increase the flow by draining pools along the river, with the most important of these a ditch on the bed of the river to drain the water from the swimming hole at the rear of Thos. Houlehan's farm. This would only be a temporary makeshift as at the most it would only yield about six days' supply for condensing purposes.

An alternative plan is to have a dam built across the river opposite the driveway between W. H. Casselman's residence and barn, to a height of three and a half feet. There being one foot fall from the other dam, this would give a depth of two and a half feet at the upper dam, very materially improving sanitary conditions and the beauty of the river through town. The elimination of the sewerage is one of the first necessities, as the condensery could not use the water in its present condition. To do this it is proposed to lay a pipe line of 1010 feet to carry the sewerage below the town, to the cost of which it is understood the Nestlé's have agreed to contribute one thousand dollars of the total estimated cost of $3,500. As the scheme would come under those proposed for unemployment relief, labour being the big item in its cost, it is believed that assistance can be secured to carry it through on that basis.

If present conditions continue or are likely to recur this is a matter that vitally affects practically every citizen of Chesterville and should receive the hearty endorsation of every one.

Three rinks from the local club took part in the annual Labour Day tournament of the Kemptville club on Monday last when Hanna's rink with Tom Flyn leading, Clayton second, and Eric Casselman, vice, carried off first prize in the second competition, bringing home as their trophies fine motor rugs. Sixteen rinks were in the draw and a day of keen bowling was enjoyed before the winners were decided. Ned Connor's rink and Martin Rosenthal's, both of Ottawa, fought it out in the first event with the former carrying off premier honours. The Kemptville club is to be congratulated for the excellent prizes put up for competition.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The light honey crop in Ontario has finally turned out to be much less than was estimated and it is doubtful now whether the total crop will reach two thirds of the normal figure.

Seed Prospects Excellent

The prospect for a good seed year is very good. A fair crop of alfalfa, more than sufficient to meet a heavy home demand, is looked for; there will be sufficient sweet clover and enough alsike to supply the domestic demand though little left over for export; some timothy and probably a big crop of domestic red clover. Second growth fields, from which a bulk of the seed crop is taken, are in excellent shape, unusually clean and blooming abundantly. With a bigger duty on all clover and alfalfa this year farmers are taking more interest in saving seed.

Fresh Grapes on Market

The largest grape crop in Niagara Peninsula history, estimated to be worth $1,750,000, is now ready for harvesting. For several years the wineries have required the bulk of the grape crop for wine-making purposes, but recently the producers have catered to a growing market in different parts of Canada, and the appetizing, health-giving grape has proved popular everywhere it was sent. The growers have extended their vineyards and this year the crop is ample to meet all demands. Only the finest grapes will be exported from the Peninsula and the government-supervised packing will assure the purchaser of a high quality product. In addition to wine-making, grapes are used for delicious jelly and for making grape juice, a very popular drink.

A nation-wide advertising campaign to move this bumper crop is being sponsored by the Ontario Growers' Market Council, the Department of Trade and Commerce, and the Canadian Horticultural Council. Every basket of grapes shipped outside the province will be subject to government inspection to insure grade and quality and the whole crop will be marketed through a selected list of shippers, brokers and agents through whom the Big "O" brand of Ontario grapes, sponsored by the Markets Council, will be placed before the public, says Charles W. Bauer, secretary. Every basket of grapes going through this channel will contain inserts and buyers will be able to accept these as certificates of quality of the grapes offered for sale.

British Livestock Market

The British market has been a source of considerable strength to the Canadian live cattle industry during the present year and every effort should be made to follow the good advice contained in the following message from the Agricultural Products Representative in Great Britain: "Cattle markets weaker; our best hope is strict selection for type or quality of all weights, either fats or stores. Anything else sells indifferently. Lower prices likely." Up to the present time the type and quality of cattle shipped to Great Britain have made an excellent reputation and have been more in line with British requirements than at any other time in the history of our export trade.

New Central Marketers

A central packing and grading association has been organized by apple producers in Elgin County. The Provincial Govment will subsidize the venture to the extent of $750 providing that 10 growers with a combined acreage of 200 acres can be secured. According to the terms of the bylaws the Association will take the growers' entire crop and dispose of it. The grower must bind himself to dispose of his produce or forfeit a penalty of 50 cents a barrel. The Association will issue 200 shares of $50 each. The Oxford County Fruit Co-Operative Company, Ltd., is now ready for business with headquarters at Woodstock. The Company expects to handle 12,000 barrels of apples this season. The Government has assured a grant of $750 to install the plant and get the business moving.

The Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa has now a number of sets of lantern slides which may be secured by agricultural and horticultural organizations, schools, Women's Institues, churches ,etc., without rental charge. The subjects illustrated are: Home Beautification, New Varieties of Cereals, Selection of Live Stock, Poultry Husbandry, and Field Husbandry. These slides are proving very popular wherever used and splendid attendances are reported.

Marketing Board Active

In a recent address on the work of the Ontario Marketing Board, Mr. W. B. Somerville, Chairman, told of extensive plans for advertising, the preparation of markets and facilities to ship Ontario fruits and vegetables. "The aim of the Marketing Board," he declared, "is to take Ontario farmers out of their position of helplessness in marketing their products." New efficiency has been injected in the task of overseas exportation and as a result apple exports would be doubled this year. Ontario cabbage for the first time was being sent to the Western markets. Ontario peaches will find a large market in the West. Mr. Somerville anticipates the time when every farmer will be receiving constant advice through the Marketing Board on where and how to market his products.

An Interesting Exhibit

The O. A. C. exhibit at the C N. E. presents in a graphic way the idea that, although the present world-wide depression renders it impossible for farmers to make much money, still there is real wealth in the farms of Ontario

The exhibit consists of three sections, which are unified under the title Farm Wealth. The first section entitled "Food is Wealth," illustrates the fact that much of the food used by the farmer's family is obtained directly from the farm, and even hard times cannot affect this supply. It also calls attention to the fact that the College has produced and has given to the farmers of the Province many high producing varieties of crops which added greatly to farm wealth.

The second section with the title "Time is Wealth," sets forth the idea that though money may be scarce, the farmer still has as much time as ever, and shows how time may be utilized to the best advantage by the use of labour-saving devices.

The third section under the title of "Beauty is Wealth" presents the fact that, while farm folks may envy some of the good things of city life, they may, by a little effort and with almost no expenditure of cash, have beautiful home surroundings that would be the envy of city people.

Clean-up Time

With harvesting and threshing finished, it is not too early to start preparation for winter. If the stable is not given its annual clean-up now, it may be neglected altogether. The minimum attention should include sweeping the ceilings and walls, scraping the floors and mangers, and then thoroughly white-washing everything in sight. Lime is a great cleansing agent, and at its best when applied hot with a spraying machine. There are always odd jobs that should be attended to before the cows are stabled for the winter. The panes that have been broken from the windows should be replaced; the broken latch, the detached hinge, and broken floor should be looked after. While these are small things, their neglect for a year or two makes a slipshop stable and this is the mark of the careless dairyman.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

HON. HUGH GUTHRIE points out that although the sessional indemnity in 1903 was only $1,000 as compared with the $4,000 of to-day, M. P.'s in those days got a room and four meals a day at the old Russell House for $12 a week. Yes, and they could rent a bicycle and go for an invigourating spin of an evening.

Young Quadruplets Used To Assist Science

On Christmas Day, 1923, an unusual gift was presented to Mr. and Mrs. William T. Mahaney, of St. John N.B., in the form of four smiling babies—now famous Mahaney quadruplets—three girls and a boy. To-day these four kiddies are again getting into the headlines, but for a far different reason than their arrival eight years ago as one of the few recorded births of quadruplets in the history of the Dominion. The four little sets of fingers are now being smeared with printer's ink and impressions made on inky glass in an effort to ascertain whether or not it is possible to have two finger prints fundamentally identical.

Debate has waxed warm on this topic for many years. Scientists claim they have proved that it is impossible to have any two finger prints the same. But while the debate continues, think what this matter of finger prints means, especially as it is related to the question of lost or kidnapped children.

Sydney R. Vardon, of Chatham, N. B,. a graduate of the New York School of Applied Science of Identification, a student of the International Criminologist College in ballastics and graphology, went to St. John to substantiate the views of the scientists. He said the evidence secured from the prints of the Mahaney children would mean a lot to the world at large. In cases of kidnapping photos are useless after a few years and only fingerprints can tell, he said.

To the children it was a new and pleasant experience. They were all dressed neatly for the experiment, and, of coure, they were photograghed for the newspapers, but this is nothing new for these youngsters, and they have already been in many exhibitions and fairs. They looked on in amazement as the fingerprint man who to them appeared as somewhat of a magician, got out his plate glass, ink roller and finger print cards. Their eyes shone with the light of wonderment as they pressed their tiny fingers on the glassy surface, and to them it was just another game, rather dirty, but plenty of fun. Little did their youthful minds realize the contribution they were making to criminal science by the prints they were helping to make.

CAN ALL YOU CAN

THE FRUIT BRANCH of the Dominion Department of Agriculture is giving special support to a Dominion-wide campaign to encourage housewives to can everything they can for winter use so that no surplus may be left to go to waste in field or garden. There never was such a time in Canada when there was such a crying need for relief or assistance in one form or another than at present, and the housewife, both in the rural and urban home, has a special opportunity to make use of the simple, practical and effective methods by which so much that would otherwise go to waste may be turned to the best uses in the form of practical and appreciated relief.

Parliament Sets October 12 Date of Thanksgiving Day

Thanksgiving Day will be celebrated this year on October 12th. Official announcement of the passing of an order-in-council to this effect was made this morning. The necessary proclamation will be issued shortly. Fixing of a date by order-in-council for the observance of Thanksgiving Day separate from Armistice Day—or what is now known as Remembrance Day under a bill passed at the last session of parliament—is a departure from the former pratice. While Remembrance Day will be commemorated each year on November 11th, the separate date of observance of Thanksgiving Day will be fixed each year by order-in council.

Autoist's Arm Ripped Off By Passing Truck

Granby, Que. September 7.—When he was struck by a passing motor truck on the highway near here at noon Sunday, Emile Leduc, 25 years of age, had his left arm torn off at the shoulder. He was brought to Dr. Runnells' hospital here and his condition is reported as serious, but he may recover.

It was learned that the truck was driven by Emile Brodeur, a butcher, of Knowlton, and that it had a wide rack. As it passed Leduc's auto his arm was caught in the rack and torn off. The driver of the truck stopped a short distance away and Leduc jumped out of his automobile bleeding profusely from his wound. A passing motorist made a tourniquet which stopped the flow of blood and the victim was placed in his auto and driven here by a farmer, A. Boilvin.

The victim's arm was found inside the truck.

Premier Geo. S. Henry Catches Speeding Hockeyist

Premier George S. Henry of Ontario has devised new means of dealing with motorists who pass his car at unlawful speed on the King's Highway, and the first victim of his scheme is Charlie Conacher of the Maple Leaf Hockey team, whose license plates are now reposing under seizure on Premier Henry's desk at Parliament Buildings.

Last Friday evening Conacher, according to his own story, was motoring north on Yonge street at a good rate. Unknowingly he passed the car of Premier Henry, en route to his Oriole farm.

Next day Conacher received a visit from a highway traffic constable who, under orders of the Premier himself, commandeered the license plates with a message to report at Mr. Henry's office.

The hockey player did so and was given a little sound advice by the Premier, who intimated he felt like keeping the plates for six months, but said he would keep them for a few days. And now Conacher, who is an auto salesman, is without his car until the Prime Minister decides to return the markers. The chief executive is at Temagami with Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and members of Earl Jellicoe's party. They are not expected back until Thursday or Friday.

Bonds Stolen in 1928 Found in Hotel Bedroom

Cornwall, Ont.—Finding of two $500 Government bonds beneath a rug in a bedroom at the New Windsor Hotel here Tuesday gave city police their first real clue in a four-year investigation into a robbery committed at the Stormont county registry office in Cornwall in January of 1928. Police chief Fred Seymour stated he is convinced the bonds, which have been definitely identified as a portion of the $4,000 loot, had not been hidden under the carpet for more than a few days. With a hot trail to work upon, police are bending every effort to locating the person who placed the bonds in their hiding place.

JELLY ROLL NOVELTIES

By Etta Bitta Pye

MAKE YOUR OWN jelly rolls and surprise the family and your guests. Many women do not know how to make these delicacies, but really they are quite easy to prepare.

Grape Jelly Roll
(4 eggs)

¾ cup special cake flour, sifted
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs, unbeaten
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Grape jelly

Sift flour once; measure. Combine baking powder, salt, and eggs in bowl. Place over small bowl of hot water, and beat with rotary egg beater, adding sugar gradually, until the mixture becomes thick and light-coloured. Remove bowl from over hot water. Fold in flour and vanilla. Pour into pan 13½ x 8½ inches, lined with greased paper. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 13 minutes. Turn from pan at once onto cloth covered with powdered sugar. Remove paper. Quickly cut off crisp edges of cake. Spread with jelly and roll. Wrap in cloth until cool.

Try and Stop 'Em

A group of American Legionnaires were cutting capers during their last national convention.

"They will do some damage," remarked an elderly lady to a policeman. "Can't you stop them?"

"Lady," remarked the cop, "five million Germans and a whole lot of other foreigners tried that once. Far be it from me to butt in."

Ten-Inch Rattlesnake Found In Brockville Mail

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 8th.—No postage was paid on an unwanted package which came through the Royal Mail to-day to the G. T. Fulford Company in the shape of a very much alive eight or ten inch rattlesnake of unknown origin, which poked its nose from the morning newspapers of the company as they were being borne to its office by Roy Frazer, an employée.

The newspapers had been sorted at the post office and were placed in the rack, whence they were removed by Frazer, who received the surprise of his life as the head of the snake emerged from the bundle as he was bearing it along the street. How the snake entered the mail matter is a mystery. The newspapers were from points as widely separated as British Columbia and Nova Scotia and were brought here in various mail sacks. The snake must thus have been handled over and over again by postal clerks in the course of its travels. It has been pronounced a genuine, if very youthful rattler.

Barley Scarce in District; Farmers Miss Fine Chance

Notwithstanding that the information was passed out from the Ontario Department of Agriculture through the columns of The Record last spring in plenty of time to arrange seeding, that a market had been secured for a large quantity of barley, very few farmers took advantave of that information locally and thereby lost an opportunity to make some good money out of this season's crop. Mr. Stobo, of the Winchester Egg Grading Station, was in town this week offering 46 cents per bushel for clear barley, which is almost a cent a pound and approximating 60 cents per bushel for wheat, which price would lift the West out of the doldrums right now. The farmers who hearken to the good advice from the experts of the Department of Agriculture always stand to make some extra money.

MACHINE PULLS FEATHERS

THESE DAYS one hears a lot about the "machine age" and about what machines will do but is certainly interesting to note that a machine has been developed which will pull the feathers off a hen faster than it can be done by hand and do a better job. By the simple process of using sets of aluminum disks, each revolving at a slightly different plane than the other, an efficient plucker is produced. The disks are lined with rubber, eliminating noise and giving a better grip. They operate at a speed of fifty plucks per second.

On easy birds the plucking can be completed in two minutes, which on young roosters about three and a half minutes are required. The saving effected by this machine is better appreciated when it is considered that an average speed for hand plucking is around six birds an hour.

This is one of the interesting items gleaned from the International Review of Poultry Science, official organ of the World's Poultry Science Association under the auspices of the Fifth World's Poultry Congress which is being held in Rome in 1933.

Crow Crashes Windshield

A big crow, being chased by an infuriated kingbird from the latter's nest, caused a peculiar accident to Mrs. W. M. Croskery, wife of the agricultural representative for North Ontario, as Mr. and Mrs. Croskery were driving alon- the road. Fighting as they swept out of the sky the two birds shattered Croskery's windshield, the crow falling dead in the lap of Mrs. Croskery and his pursuer dropping dead on the floor of the car.

Six stitches were required to close the wound below the eye and across the nose of Mrs. Croskery, cut by the flying glass.

Dundas-Grenvllle Presbytery Met at South Mountain

Assembled in the commodious United Church at South Mountain, the Dundas-Grenville Presbytery of the United Church, held the September meeting yesterday, under the chairmanship of Rev. D. N. Coburn of Prescott. The attendance included the ministers of Presbytery, and a large delegation of laymen.

The agenda had been well prepared by Rev. A. M. Russell, of Williamsburg, secretary of Presbytery and the buiness requiring attention was transacted during the day and a large gathering was present in the evening to listen to an address from a returned missionary Rev. J. A. Stead, of South Africa.

Pass Usefulness

The following resolution was presented to the Presbytery, and referred to a special committee for consideration and report.

That the pastoral term be five years, unless the official board or congregation, at a regularly called meeting, record their desire for a change of pastor, in a vote by ballot, where 75 per cent of those present so express themselves. At the expiration of five years, the pastoral term snall automatically cease, unless in like manner the same vote is taken from year to year with the same result.

That all calls and invitations be lodged with the settlement committee of conference not later than February 1, in each year.

That all changes of pastorates take effect the second Sunday after the rise of conference, and at no other time, except in the event of death, or circumstances beyond control. In such case, when a charge becomes vacant, the settlement committee shall provide for the supply until the end of the conference year.

At such meeting, the members present shall appoint a layman as chairman to preside.

The special committee appointed at the last meeting of the Presbytery to consider the resolution from Winchester official board, recommended non-concurrence. Regarding the pastoral relationship and other matters of common interest to ministers and people throughout the church, it was recommended that the executive committee of Presbytery arrange for sectional meetings to be held, where opportunity would be offered for a more intimate knowledge to be gained in regard to proper procedure.

The report of the committee on candidates for the ministry recommended that Gordon Dangerfield, of Kemptville, and Lynden Lawson, of Mount Forest, be certified to college, and this was approved.

Rev. A. O. Lloyd, of South Mountain, having been transferred to Montreal, Rev. A. L. Sisco, of Cardinal, was appointed convenor of the foreign mission committee. The name of Rev. W. P. Wornell of South Mountain, was added to the committee.

Presbytery Visitors

Visitors to the Presbytery included Rev. John Coburn, of Toronto, secretary of the national emergency relief committee, whose address on the aims and objects of this important committee was listened to with rapt attention, and Rev. J. A. Stead, of Angela, South Africa, a returned missionary. Rev. Mr. Stead was heard during the afternoon, and also in the evening, and his vivid description of life among the Africans was an entrancing story.

New members of Presbytery were accorded a welcome in the persons of Rev. W. P. Wornell, of South Mountain; Rev. A. W. Stewart, of Shanly, and Rev. John Stark, of North Augusta, being present for the first time.

Rev. R. W. Armstrong, Morewood, reporting for the committee on Evangelism and Social Service, recommended two study groups be formed in the Presbytery, where members might spend time in becoming more conversant with present-day needs and how to meet them.

Announcement was made of a rally of young people within the Presbytery to be held at Chesterville in October. The programme is in the hands of the Young People's Union to arrange, and among the speakers will be Rev. D. T. I. Forsyth, of Montreal, recently appointed field secretary of religious education for the Montreal and Ottawa conference.

In connection with the emergency relief work for the Canadian Western Provinces it was stated that the railway companies had consented to provide free transportation for all shipments of clothing going to the distressed areas.

HATS OFF TO CANADA

REPORTS from the Dominion of Canada are to the effect that not one bank failed there during the past year. As a matter of fact, there have been but twelve charter bank failures during the last 37 years, and the total liabilities of these twelve failures amounted to less than seven dollars per capita, figuring on Canada's present population.

Of course, the population of Canada is only one-twentieth of the United States. The United States, therefore, could have about 240 bank failures and still feel quite proud. Unfortunately, the United States has had 8,000 bank failures in the last 37 years.

There seems to be something wrong somewhere.

HORSE SENSE NEEDED

EVERY TIME a newspaper reader encounters the daily record of the havoc wrought by speeding automobiles when they run amuck on crowded streets, the pharse "horse sense" takes on a new significance. The horse which prompted the coining of the words may be a vanishing quadruped—in time, a museum piece—but the qualities it exhibited in the phaeton era of American life are still worth emulating. As some funster facetiously remarks: "Horse sense is always sure to result in a stable government."

The old reliable horse never took a chance with busy traffic, but slowed down to allow vehicles to pass. The horse keeps to his side of the road, and attends strictly to its business, the hauling of a wagon or buggy to the destination without mishap. Perhap's the horse's slow progress is not keyed to the tempo of our hurrying days, but safety is the sure reward of a plodding gait, and the occupants of the vehicle thus have a better chance to see the scenery and say "good morning" to pedestrians.

To have "horse sense" is to watch where one is going, to stay out of get-rich-quick schemes, to be abstemious in eating, to go to bed at reasonable hours, to say "neigh" to many golden-voiced invitations to desert the high road for devious by-paths leading to disillusionment and disaster.

Even though the modern man may ride in a high-powered automobile and prefer all the high-geared mechanism of civilization, he will probably do well to hold fast to some of those old-fashioned virtues of foresight, caution, serenity, and concentration to be found in the words "horse sense."—Rotarian Magazine.

ADVICE FOR HARD TIMES

London Advertiser

MR. BENNETT utters a warning against speculation and eagerness to get rich quickly. Generally speaking, this is good advice, but it was never less required than to-day. The craze for speculation is over for the present. Unfortunately many people have gone to the opposite extreme, and are needlessly holding back from spending money for things of real value, which are now much cheaper than in flush times. In this way they are delaying the return of good times.

Of course no blame is to be attached to those who are in real need or out of work; at the end of their resources or nearly so. They do not require to be told not to speculate or to spend. But notwithstanding the hard times there are millions of people in Canada who are in comfortable circumstances, as they were in 1929 and 1930. Their saving is due not to necessity or prudence, but merely to mass psychology. Some who were straining to keep up with the Joneses in the good times are holding back with the Joneses, now that the Joneses have cold feet.

If they would overcome this fear complex they would help manufacturers and merchants reduce unemployment and hasten the return of good times.

DAIRY HERD PROFITS

THERE is probably no more interesting phase of experimental work carried on by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa through experimental farms and stations than the studies made from actual operation in the cost of dairy herds.

At the Experimental Station at Morden, Manitoba, the report for last year's operation shows an average profit of $99.79 for a herd of nine cows. The maximum individual production was 11,378 pounds of milk, averaging 4.10 per cent of butterfat. This cow showed a profit during the lactation period of $108.82. In contrast with this, Morden Marjorie with a milk production of 10,650.50 pounds of milk testing 4.56 per cent butterfat, shows a profit over cost of feed of $121.42.

Equally interesting are the figures supplied by the Experimental Station at Rosthern, Sask., where the average profit under conditions for 1930 from a herd of 15 cows was $81 per head. This herd produced an average of 10,934.1 pounds of milk rating 3.66 per cent butterfat.

Western Ontario Farmers Offer Aid for the Prairies

The need of relief in the dried out area of the Canadian West was emphasized in an address by Rev. E. H. Oliver, D. D., moderator of the United Church of Canada before three hundred delegates of the London conference held at Alma College, St. Thomas. Dr. Oliver has just come from a visit to south Saskatchewan where he found the country in immediate need of assistance.

His appeal was followed by offers from the floor of the convention of a carload of potatoes and vegetables from West Middlesex, a carload of apples from Oxford County, and beans from Middlesex-Kent counties, providing the Government will guarantee transportation. The offers are to be taken up on Tuesday at a special meeting of the national relief committee in conjunction with the Canadian National Railways.

Rural Church Must Aid Farmers Meet Crisis

The rural church must set itself to face the economic difficulties of the farmer, or it will lose its place in the country, said Miss Agnes Macphail, M. P., for Grey Southeast, addressing women at the National and International Labour Unions in the Canadian National Exhibition.

She advocated closer union between labour and the farmer in an effort to improve conditions for both. The difference in prices obtained by producer and distributor was attacked by Miss Macphail.

"The rural church must attempt to improve a system that is unjust and therefore unchristian," she said. The small villages thought in terms of the metropolis, instead of in terms of the land, she said.

"The farmer's consuming power is almost nothing," she declared. "As a producer he is a howling failure." She instanced milk prices. The farmer is getting four cents a quart for milk, the transportation companies one cent and the distributor six cents. "That's absolutely unfair," she declared.

The criticim had been made that if the problem existing between the producer and the distributor was straightened out, many people would be thrown out of work. "Any system of reconstruction must be ruthless," she pointed out, "as far as the individual is concerned. That just can't be helped. We have to-day too many people making a living between the producers of wealth.

"Capital must be prepared to give goods cheaper than ever before. Goods must be reduced in price. Capitalism is going and the workers with hearts, minds, and hands must build a system to take its place."

Kenmore Barn Destroyed

Fire of an unknown origin destroyed a barn owned by K. M. Dalrleish, well-known farmer of the Kenmore district. Hay which was stored in the building made the barn an easy prey to the flames. The blaze, which started at 1.30 Saturday morning, attracted a large crowd who were successful in keeping the fire from spreading to other nearby buildings. The barn, which was about a mile from the town, was valued at $3,000.

HEALTH SERVICE of the Canadian Medical Association

THE OPEN BED-ROOM WINDOW

THIS may appear to be the wrong time of year to speak of spring tonics, but it is nevertheless seasonable if considered from the preventive side. The idea that a person requires a spring tonic grew out of the fact that many people did not feel as well in the spring as they did at other seasons of the year.

We know that the only tonic these people require is made up of fresh air, sunshine, exercise and proper food. Our present interest is to point out that if people were to take reasonable care of themselves during the winter, they would feel fit when spring came.

During the summer the windows are kept open and so we work and sleep in the fresh air. With the advent of the cooler weather, windows are not left open all the time and, unfortunately, they are not kept open at all in some homes. Fresh air is necessary for health. It is needed in winter just as much as in summer. The want of fresh air is one reason why there is more disease in winter and why, when spring comes, there is a lack of good health which makes itself felt as a tired, run-down condition.

The time which we spend in bed securing the rest we need should also be time spent in the fresh air. This is possible, providing the bedroom window is kept sufficiently open to allow for a gentle movement of air throughout the room while we are asleep.

How high the window needs to be open depends upon the temperature and the wind. The smallest opening will be sufficient on very cold windy nights. Cool air from out-of-doors, kept in gentle motion, is the kind of air in which we should sleep. It will bring us all the benefits of fresh air and will enable us to sleep restfully and feel more refreshed in the morning.

The idea of keeping the bedroom window open was one of the first points to be emphasized in the campaign against tuberculosis. At the beginning of this century tuberculosis was "The Captain of the Men of Death" because it caused more deaths than did any other disease. This is no longer true of tuberculosis as its mortality rate has been reduced by half in the past twenty five years.

This reduction has not come about because of a discovery of some remedy to cure tuberculosis. It has taken place because people have learned to live more healthy lives. They have learned that if they keep themselves healthy by paying attention to fresh air, sunshine, rest and exercise and proper food, they can protect themselves against tuberculosis.

The open bedroom window is one of the strong forces which we can all employ in order to keep healthy and to combat tuberculosis.

PEOPLE WILL TALK

WE MAY GO through this world but 'twill be very slow,
If we listen to all that is said as we go;
We'll be worried and fretted and kept in a stew,
For meddlesome tongues must have something to do,
For people will talk, you know.

If quiet and modest, you'll have it presumed
That your humble position is only assumed;
You're a wolf in sheep's clothing, or else you're a fool;
But don't get excited; keep perfectly cool—
For people will talk, you know.

If threadbare your coat or old-fashioned your hat,
Someone, of course, will take notice of that,
And hint very strong that you can't pay your way;
But don't get excited, whatever they say,
For people will talk, you know.

If you dress in the fashion, don't think to escape,
For they'll criticize then in a different shape;
You're ahead of your means, or your tailor's unpaid!
But mind your own business; there's nought to be said—
For people will talk, you know.

If a fellow but chance to converse with a girl
How the gossips will talk, and their scandal unfurl;
They'll canvass your wants and talk of your means
And declare you're engaged to a chit in her 'teens,
For people will talk, you know

They'll talk fine before you, but then at your back
Of venom and slander there's never a lack;
How kind and polite in all that they say!
But bitter as gall when you're out of the way—
For people will talk, you know.

The best way to do is to do as you please,
For your mind, if you have one, will then be at ease;
Of course, you will meet with all sorts of abuse,
But don't think to stop them, it's not any use—
For people will talk, you know.

A little boy was balancing himself on his head. An old lady who knew him came by.

"Aren't you too young to do that? You are only six," she said.

"It's alright, missis," replied the boy. "I'm nine while I'm upside down."

The Vox Humana

As Uncle Jake Weatherbee sank into an easy chair he chuckled.

"Fooled us! Fooled us all," he said, shaking a forefinger at the assembled family. First that girl came out and sang, then the phonograph machine was brought in and sang the same thing; then they sang together. I couldn't tell a mite of difference at first between the two; but some of the music sharps shook their heads and put 'em on one side like canary birds—they could!

"Next they turned out the lights, and the girl sang, and the machine sang. Those sharps whispered and put their heads together. They've got ears that can detect the difference between a mere machine and the human voice—well, I guess they have!

"'That's Mme. LeRoux,' I heard them whispering. I could begin to detect the difference myself, now that they had pointed it out. Then on came the lights, and it wasn't the singer at all! She had stolen off stage and the phonograph was going it all alone!

"Pretty soon she came back, smiled and started a new sing by herself. The lights went out again, and after she got through there was a second of silence, and I could hear the machine a-scrunching as the same piece was started over again. I was so tickled that I said right out loud, 'That's the machine, all right!'

"One of the sharps at my right agreed; another just in front said, 'Certainly—but sh-h!'

"The song came out pretty clear and strong, but every now and then there was the hint of scrunch—and then on flashed the lights, and it was the girl!"

Uncle Jake had given a characteristic description of a joint recital by a famous singer and an improved phonograph. He had only slightly exaggerated the effect produced; for the result had been staggering to some people who believed implicity in the accuracy of their hearing.

"It reminded me," he resumed, "of the Vox Humana—"

"The Vox Humana!" Clara exclaimed. "Why, uncle, that's an organ stop, one that is supposed to make the instrument imitate the human voice!"

"I know, Clara; but the Vox Humana that I'm telling you about wasn't an organ stop. It was the first and original phonograph."

Clara regarded the old man with a puzzled frown. "I never knew that Mr. Edison called it—" she began.

"He didn't," Uncle Jake explained; "it was Ring Bassett that invented the Vox Humana. It was a puzzler, too; but the truth came out quicker than you might have expected."

"Bassett," I remarked musingly, for the name had stirred old and half-forgotten memories. "Wasn't he a tall, spare man who used to live over beyond Centreville when I was a boy—always wore a battered silk hat?"

"That was Ring," Uncle Jake replied. "He was some battered throughout by the time you knew him; but he was a gallous youngster earlier. Like Edison, he was an inventor, but with this difference.: Edison works all the time, and Ring was trying to invent something so he wouldn't have to work at all. He never quite succeeded with his inventions, but he was pretty successful in not working.

"He came to Dexter with his folks along about the close of the Civil War. The Bassetts were from somewhere in southern New England and had an inventive streak in them; old man Bassett had made quite a bit of money out of a double-action egg-and-cream beater.

"Ring was always fooling with something that was going to make his fortune, but he first attracted public attention by going away with a travelling theatre company that came to the town hall. He didn't stay with the company for more than six or eight months; then he came back and sold his patent rights, and it wasn't a great while before we heard of him lecturing on temperance and such topics in outlying towns. He didn't lecture in Dexter, for he had sold some patent rights in the neighbourhood that had failed to turn out just right. People said he was smarter than he was honest. They were mistaken — his smartness and his honesty were about on a par.

"Right after the holidays in either 1870 or '71, I forgot which, he got out handbills announcing that on the following Saturday night in the town hall he would give a public exhibition of his great new invention, the Vox Humana. The instrument he explained, reproduced the human voice perfectly and the violin less perfectly. Ring used some pretty big words on that handbill and wasn't sparing in self-praise and promises. So many people thought him smart—though not over-honest—that he roused a good deal of curiosity, and the hall was crowded—at thirty-five cents apiece for the reserved seats and twenty-five cents for the seats farther back.

"I can see him now as he came out on the stage, bowing and smiling. He had thick black hair, cut bushy in accordance with his fashion, and all of ten inches long over his forehead. That front lock kept falling down, and he'd always throw it back with a graceful gesture—that was for the artistic effect, I suppose.

"He explained that he could not give more than a forty-five minute programme with the Vox Humana, because he had as yet secured only a limited number of vocalions. The vocalions, he went on to tell us, were singing or playing records. He then exhibited a strip of tin perhaps an inch wide and two yards long that was punched full of round holes, slits and squares. He told us that, as his patent was still pending, of course he dared not exhibit the inner mechanism of the Vox Humana or give any details that might be of use to a patent thief.

He concluded his opening lecture by saying that since his vocalions were limited in number, and since he wished to give his friends the full worth of their money, he would first perform a few simple feats of prestidigitation, more popularly known as parlour magic.

"Then he rolled up the sleeves of his Prince Albert coat, pulled out yards and yards of ribbon from a little boy's ear, produced a kicking rabbit from his hat and made a flower grow from a seed that a young lady planted in an earthen pot. He probably had learned those tricks while with the theatre company.

"That part of his programme lasted not more than three-quarters of an hour; and then, with an impressive air, after turning up the kerosene lamps that served as footlights, he lugged out the Vox Humana and carefully set it down near the centre of the stage.

"What we saw was a small mahogany table with a single pedestal leg that bulged in the middle, and upon it a box, maybe a foot and a half square, with what we called a 'cornucopia thing' sticking out in front. I suppose that it was simply a megaphone, but we weren't familiar with megaphones in Dexter in those days. Hanging down from one side of the box was a clock weight, with its cord running over a little pulley. Those things, besides three or four insulated wires connecting the box and the table were all we could see.

"'You will observe,' said Ring, 'that I insert one end of the vocalion into this little slit and pull up the weight. Now the weight begins to descend and draws after it the vocalion. Listen!'

"Out of the cornucopia thing came a song. It was muffled and indistinct and hollow; but we could recognize that it was 'Rocked in the Cradle of Deep.' We stuck our heads forward and listened with both ears. Down went the vocalion inch by inch, and out came the song verse by verse, till the strip disappeared with a sort of chug and the singing ended.

"We all drew a long breath and looked at one another. There were skeptics present, plenty of them, but even they were dumbfounded.

"'We will now have a universal favourite, 'Tenting on the Old Camp Ground',' said Ring, inserting another strip of tin and pulling up the weight. 'In time, ladies and gentlemen, the Vox Humana will be singing in every home of culture and refinement in this broad land. It will bring the masterpieces of music to people everywhere. Have patience with its present defects, friends, for they will be remedied. Now it is an infant and it merely creeps; soon it will walk erect and then run and leap!'

"Down went the second strip, and out came 'We're tenting to-night—' and so on to the close of the song. We scratched our heads.

"Next we listened to more oratory—and it was pretty good oratory, too; then came Ben Bolt. It seemed to me that the Vox Humana was getting hoarse or muffled, or that it needed oiling; but Ring didn't seem to notice it.

"He served us with a violin selection, first explaining that the slits on the vocalion were narrower because, as he explained, the notes were thinner. They were—they certainly were! Bassett kept up a running fire of talk all through the piece. There was somthing strange about that violin music—it seemed to be near and yet a long way off; it seemed as if the cornucopia thing were clogged, and the thin notes leaked out of cracks in the box and in the stage. The music sounded just as if the fiddler were sawing away for dear life at the bottom of an empty hogshead. The skeptics began to whisper, and Ring couldn't help seeing that the selection wasn't a success; so he talked faster and louder.

"Without waiting an instant he switched back to vocal music and gave us 'Annie Laurie;' that is, he promised to give it, and it started the first verse pretty strong, but it tapered off a little. Beginning with the second, the Vox Humana gurgled twice and stopped, though the vocalion was still going down the slit.

"Following the second gurgle, things happened with a rush. Just off the middle aisle in the second section sat a woman, Mrs. Sim Grover; and before we noticed what was happening she was on her feet and running for the stage. Ring tried to stop her, but her lips were set in a straight line ,and she flung him aside as if he'd been a feather. Right beside the Vox Humana she stooped over, yanked up a trapdoor and pulled out her son, Bartlett, who was covered with dust and sweat. He'd been shut up in a little cubby-hole, almost airtight, for nearly two hours and was pretty near smothered. You see, Barlett himself had been the Vox Humana all the time; a tube ran from where he was through the table leg to the box and the cornucopia. That was the whole secret."

Uncle Jake drew a long breath and asked for a drink of water.

"What became of Ring Bassett, did you say?" he inquired after draining his second glass. "Well, there was so much excitement I don't rightly know. Some said he jumped out of a back window, and I guess maybe he did, for a lot of people were demanding their money back. Lawyer Westcott carried off the Vox Humana after everybody had had a look at it. It was nothing but an empty wooden box with a cogwheel to draw the strips of tin down and wind 'em on a spool. There was no great danger that the invention would be stolen, we thought.

"Just the same," the old man concluded, "Ring did have an idea; only he tried to work it out by laziness and fraud. Mr. Edison got the same idea, and he worked it out by hard work and honesty. There was a similarity at the start, you see, but it was followed by the biggest kind of difference. It's so with lots of things in this world."

TRY THIS GRAPE JUICE

IF YOU WANT a cool, refreshing, healthful beverage for use in the home, try this recipe for grape juice, which is supplied by the Fruit Branch of the Department of Agriculture: 1 cupful grapes, 1 cupful sugar. Thoroughly sterilize a quart sized sealer, put in the grapes and sugar, fill to overflowing with boiling water, seal and put away. This makes a delicious temperance drink and will not ferment as long as it is kept sealed but it should be used immediately it is opened as on exposure to the air for a short time fermentation takes place.

PRESERVING TOMATO JUICE IN THE HOME and ITS FOOD VALUE

Experimental Farms Note

TOMATO JUICE is among the most health giving drinks that a housewife can prepare from raw fruits or vegetables for her family. Although it is not rich in actual energy producing constituents, it contains such high proportions of vitamins A, B, and C, and minerals, particularly iron, that it assists materially in the assimilation of the heavier foods. Minerals acids, particularly citric, which assist in the digestion processes, are also present. Research work on vitamins carried on by various institutions has shown that vitamin A increases resistance to colds, sinus trouble, pneumonia and other infection, and promotes normal development of children. vitamin B is generally promotive of health and is an aid in keeping the appetite keen. Vitamin C is a factor in the growth of children and a preventive of many diseases. An abundance of Vitamin C in the diet helps to overcome irritable and restless tendencies.

In sections where tomatoes are grown, tomato juice can be made in the home and is a great deal cheaper than its equivalent in orange or citrus juices. Probably more Canadian diets are lacking in vitamin C than any other constituent, and tomatoes, which are our most economical source should be more widely used for supplying this constituent.

Choice of Fruits.—Pick thoroughly vine ripened fruit. Green portions import bitter undesirable flavours. Artificially ripened fruit is not as rich in vitamins as that ripened naturally.

Preparation.—Stem and core the tomatoes. Slightly purp with a potato masher and place on the stove in a covered kettle. Heat almost to boiling. It is wise to put as much fruit in the kettle at the commencement of this step as possible in order to exclude the air which slowly destroys the fruit by oxidation.

Extraction.—After the pulp has reached the desired temperature it is ready to be passed through a sieve to remove the skin and seeds. At this point the necessity of haste cannot be over emphasized as the juice will lose much of its nutritive value if exposed to the air for more than a few minutes.

Bottling.—Return the extracted juice to the kettle and bring just to boiling. At the same time have enough sealers or small pop bottles being kept hot in the oven. Fill these with the juice, seal, and place in boiling water. Remember to fill the bottles well up into the neck and to keep the juice hot. A cook of 2 minutes in boiling water is sufficient for small bottles while sealers should receive 4 to 5 minutes.

Flavourings.—The juice at this point is pure tomato suitable for feeding to babies instead of orange juice. If it is to be used by adults as a before breakfast drink, it is improved by the addition of salt and sugar at the rate of a level tablespoonful of both to each gallon juice. If cocktails for dinner are desired, small amounts of mild spices such as cloves, allpice, cinnamon and red pepper may be added in addition to the salt and sugar. These help to emphasize the tomato flavour which should still be dominant after the blending is finished.

A fool and his honey are soon parted.

Nita was worried . . . she could not imagine where she had lost her bracelet—in the hotel or on the journey home.

"I can't think what I could have done with it," she kept telling her mother.

"Why not telephone to the hotel," mother suggested. "It's after eight-thirty now and a call will only cost a few cents."

Imagine Nita's joy when the hotel clerk told her that the bracelet had been found in her room and would be mailed to her right away.

Thanks to her mother's suggestion, Nita's anxiety was relieved at once . . . and the cost of the call was considerably less than her taxi fare from the station.

BOTH SIDES OFTEN TO BLAME

FREQUENTLY it takes two to make an accident as well as two to make a fight, according to Captain Art B. Hickox, now engaged in a safety tour sponsored by Oldsmobile. He points out that this fact is being recognized legally and that the traffic courts have entertained charges against both participants of a traffic smash when the evidence showed that both complainant and defendant were responsible.

"One of the major causes of serious accidents is cutting out of line and passing other cars on the highway," says Hickox. "Cutting out is necessary so long as we have drivers who want to go 20 miles and hour and others whose affairs demand double that speed on the highway. And it can be done without danger providing all concerned use common courtesy, good judgment and a fair amount of caution. Danger comes from three sides—each under the direct control of the driver. First, the driver attempting to pass misjudges the distance and speed of the other cars. Second, the driver of the car being passed becomes 'smart' and tries to race, regardless of the danger involved. Third, the driver of an approaching car, angered by seeing a car on his side of the road, declines to slow down until it is too late. If a triple crash occurs each of the three drivers involved is to blame.

APPLE SEASON RETURNS

SPEAKING of timely topics, now that the apple season is here again, the Dominion Fruit Branch supplies facts about the food value of apples which have special interest.

The varieties of fruits consumed are numerous and their use is important to a proper diet., but no fruit is more valuable than the apple.

"An apple a day" is a real health message. They act as a tonic and regulator and thus are the cheapest as well as the most pleasant form of medicine one can buy.

They are a source of natural fruit sugar and thus provide energy. Eaten raw between meals they satisfy the craving for sweets.

The water contained in apples is in its purest form.

They tend to promote proper elimination as skin and framework provide bulk and the organic salts are diuretic.

Apples counteract a tendency to acidosis as they leave an alkaline ash. A well masticated apples thus aids digestion.

Apples are a good source of vitamins, which are necessary to the body.

One large apple gives one hundred calories.

The apple is refreshing, cooling, stimulating and wholesome and may be eaten between or with the meals. They may be obtained nearly all the year round and because of their food value, their fine flavour, their abundance and popularity, apples are justly termed "The King of Fruits."

Dean: "Why is it that girls like to become engaged to several men at once?"

Lens: "You, know, when you have only one match, it always goes out."

"Your Otto had a fight with my Jack."

"Oh, well, boys must be boys."

"I'm glad you take it like that—I'll get the ambulance to bring your Otto home."

"How do you get him to chew his food?"

"I give him Shredded Wheat and it's so crisp he has to chew it—the more he chews it the better he likes it and the more nutriment he gets out of it. Many children bolt down their food without chewing—that means imperfect digestion, poor teeth and unhealthy gums. Shredded Wheat with milk makes a perfect food for growing children, and it's perfectly delicious with bananas or stewed fruit."
