HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Born In Dundas Died In Iowa

Hamilton M. Sproule, a resident of Green, Iowa, for forty years, and who served on the Board of Supervisors of Butler County for nine years, passed away recently in his sixty-ninth year after an illness of three and a half years with cancer. He lived in Dundas County during his childhood and youth. In 1882 he married Miss Eva Hanes, also of Canada. To them two sons were born, both of whom passed away during young manhood. Mrs. Sproule also died during the 'flu epidemic in 1919.

Mr. Sproule was a steward of God's material and spiritual blessing. He learned to serve the Lord in all he thought and did.

Mr. A. B. Allison, of Morewood, and Miss Jennie Allison, of Winchester Springs, also the late Andrew Henderson, of Chesterville, were cousins of the late Mr. Sproule.

Mrs. S. Glasgow, Ottawa

The death of Harriet C. Countryman widow of Samuel Glasgow, 174 Gladstone avenue, occurred at an Ottawa hospital yesterday, following a brief illness.

Born at Morewood, 79 years ago, Mrs. Glasgow resided there for some time, later moving to Winchester, where she lived for the greater part of her life. Three years ago she moved to Ottawa and from that time until the time of her death she lived in Ottawa with her son, William H. Glasgow, 174 Gladstone avenue. Mrs. Glasgow had made many friends who will learn of her death with sincere regret.

Surviving her are, one son, William; one daughter, Mrs. Ada Tricky, of Ottawa; one brother, William Countryman, of Morewood; four sisters, Mrs. William Hall, Morrisburg; Mrs. May Durant, and Mrs. Elma Parker, Ottawa, and Mrs. Desmond Gault, of Manotick; and six grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home of her son, 174 Gladstone avenue, but the date and time have not been decided.

Searchers Fail Find Farmer Lost Near Kingston

Kingston.—Although a constant search has been maintained since Monday, when he was reported missing, no trace has been found of Zeph Dean, 74, prominent farmer of Richmond township, who vanished after he entered a sap bush a short distance from his home.

The bush, on the fringe of which he was seen, covers a very large area of swampy land and police state that it may take several days to make a complete search through it.

The hunt is being carried on under a handicap as the water is so deep in places that those taking part have to don rubber boots. Several clues have been followed, but police admit that they are baffled. The search will be continued until every inch of ground in the bush has been covered.

The theory is that Dean was overcome with a weak spell while in a very secluded portion of the bush and that he may have died.

Auctioneer Heard In Historic Home

Ottawa.—Under the hammer of an auctioneer, Earnscliffe, the historic home of Sir John A. Macdonald, is jumping from one political epoch to another. The halls of the stately old building once trod by the elder statesmen of an infant nation to-day echoed the footsteps of bargain hunters and the merely curious section of the public. In a few months it will once more be the gathering place of public men. But it will be the home of a diplomat instead of a prime minister.

Before being fitted up as the residence of Sir William Clark, British high commissioner, for whom it has been purchased, the furnishings of the old house are being sold by auction. The British government takes the place over from the estate of the late Dr. Charles Harriss and the entire contents of the house are to be disposed of.

Long before the hour set for the auction the house was filled with men and women. Treasures, antiques, furniture, silver, and brassware ,all came under the hammer and fell to the highest bidder. The sale has aroused widespread interest and attracted art dealers from Toronto, Montreal, and New York.

DRESSMAKING SLUMP WORST IN TEN YEARS

The worst business conditions in 10 years face Toronto dressmakers in what should be their busiest season, according to statements made yesterday by A. Kirzner, representative of the Garment Workers' Women's International Union. He thought the bad weather and the financial depression following in the wake of the market crash, were the causes.

Williamsburg Residence Burned

The frame dwelling belonging to Mr. Walter Merkley, second concession north of Morrisburg, was totally destroyed by fire starting at twelve-fifteen noon on Monday. The fire originated in the chimney and stove pipes and quickly spread to the highly inflammable buildling, burning it and all its contents to the ground in a short time.

Mr. Merkley had just finished his dinner and had gone to the barns when he was warned of the blaze and upon reaching the house attempted to rescue what he could in the upper floor of the building. But the flames and smoke had already gutted that section and he was forced to retreat and soon the entire place was afire. Neighbors arrived as soon as word reached them but nothing could be done but watch the surrounding buildings, while the high wind fanned the flames and in a short time the building and its furnishings and the clothing in it were destroyed entirely. There was no insurance on the building.

Child Almost Drowned In Canal At Morrisburg

Miss Barbara Finnie, aged five, had a narrow escape from death on Monday evening, when she fell into the canal at the foot of Union street less than 100 feet from her home while playing with a group of young friends.

After supper Barbara had gone out to play with the youngsters and ventured too near the stone coping along the canal near the bridge crossing the locks. A slight shove by one of her playmates caused her to lose her balance and fall into the water where she floated for almost a minute held up by the air in her heavy overcoat. The shouts of the playmates were heard by R. G. Hodge who rushed to a pier near which Barbara had been carried by the slight current, and with the assistance of Albert Burns and Mac. Robertson, succeeded in pulling her from the water.

Barbara had taken in quite a bit of water as she had her face underwater most of the time and her clothing was soaked through with the icy water. She was rushed to her home and today is apparently none the worse for her adventure.

Canadians Touring States Must Secure Papers

Canadian motorists who are crossing into the United States are now required to secure from the Canadian customs form "C-12." The form has been in use for some years, but the majority of motorists did not secure them. Now there is a general application of the rule. The customs authorities state that the form is merely an aid in checking cars and equipment as they return to this side and also expedite return if the motorist wants to come back at some other point than the one which he left.

Former Chesterville Woman Instantly Killed At Miami

Word was received in Chesterville this week of the accidental death at Miami, Florida, of Mrs. George T. Oakes, formerly Mrs. David Carter of this place, but latterly a resident of Florida. Mrs. Oakes was instantly killed on April 8 when she stepped off the sidewalk into the path of an automobile.

Although cold and threatening weather held down the attendance in some places, nearly 200,000 fans turned out Tuesday to see the opening games of the 1930 baseball season. New York's National League opener between the Giants and Boston Braves at the Polo Grounds drew the largest crowd, estimated at 40,000. The struggle between the Athletics and the New York Yankees at Philadelphia drew 33,000. With Boston and St. Louis suffering from bad weather and the Chicago game postponed, the total attendance for seven games was estimated at 177,500.

WORKERS' EYESIGHT

ONLY THOSE WITH PERFECT SIGHT CAN DO PERFECT WORK

The skilled worker therefore has vital need of good sight. It behoves him to care for it to preserve his skill.

Good sight has a cash value because it affects the quality of ones work and also because imperfect sight means imperfect health.

Many nervous disorders are due to defective sight and all skill quickly deteriorates when the nerves are affected.

If you are a skilled worker, don't take for granted the condition of your eyes. Have them tested. If they are right, well and good, otherwise you can take steps to avoid trouble. We will tell you the plain truth—no more —no less.

Preceded Dynamite Truck Ran Into Freight Train

Harry Shortt had a miraculous escape from serious injury or worse last Thursday night when the motor truck he was driving ran into the last car of a short freight train at the North street crossing. Mr. Shortt was coming into town ahead of another truck with a load of dynamite. He did not see the train passing until he was on the track. Fortunately, the driver of the truck with the dynamite saw it and stopped his car. The head of Mr. Shortt's truck was smashed in. The train stopped to see what damage had been done.—Perth Expositor.

He suffered severe burns to his hands which necessitated medical attention.

Egg Situation Reviewed

Ottawa, April 16.—Egg production in Canada does not appear to be holding up to the volume of last year at this time, the egg and poultry market telegraphic service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture shows. While eastern receipts are about holding their own, Winnipeg receipts last week were 1,400 cases lighter than last year, Edmonton was 400 cases below last year and Vancouver reports that production in British Columbia is running from 20 to 25 per cent lighter than in 1929.

On the other hand, storage holdings in Canada are the heaviest they have been since 1925 for so early in the year. Official figures for April 1, 1930, were 845,160 dozen, as compared to 305,585 dozen last year. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that production got under way very early this year. The storage season is but little advanced, however, and in view of the apparent decrease in production, the early holdings are no criterion of future developments.

Canadian egg markets during the past week showed a very distinct firmness and as demand showed veidence of overtaking supply towards the close of the week, prices strengthened perceptibly. While the price increase was reflected principally in carlot trading in the east, it was also apparent in local values.

An extremely heavy consumer demand is reported from practically all the major markets and this is having an effect on the price trend. This heavy consumer demand, which is a new factor in the egg market situation at this time of the year, has been supplemented by active buying for storing purposes. Some indication of the scope of this movement is shown by the reports from British Columbia that visible supplies have been booked up in advance for practically a month.

British Speed Driver Will Not Make Attempt

New York.—Kaye Don's first attempt to smash the world automobile speed mark on the sands of Daytona Beach is over, but the dapper little Englishman with the bristly blonde moustache will be back again for another try next year. It has been anything but a pleasant expedition for the debonair king of Britain's amateur race tracks, who set forth like a schoolboy on a holiday two months ago to crack Sir Henry Segrave's mark of 231 miles an hour in the massive Silver Bullet, built especially for him by the Sunbeam Motors of England. Twenty-two times Don battled a set of coughing motors and the unusually rough Daytona sands without coming closer to the record than 198 miles an hour.

The latest of the speed attempts that have already cost two crack American pilots their lives, ended officially Friday with the American Automobile Associations' withdrawal of sanction for further tests due to the unfavorable weather conditions at Daytona Beach. The official communique was superfluous, however for Don had already abandoned the venture, and was in New York preparing to sail for England Wednesday. His giant silver mount, somewhat in disgrace for failure to develop more speed, was being crated in Florida for shipment abroad.

The slender Englishman appeared perturbed only at reports from Chattanooga, Tenn., that Cannonball Baker, American driver, would confer with the designer and others in regard to driving the Silver Bullet in another record test. Don declared he had paid $50,000 for the driving rights of the car, valued at $150,000, for three years, and that no one could even sit in it, let alone drive it, without his approval.

"I don't care tuppence," he said "about most of these rumors. The best answer to hints that I am dissatisfied with the car is the fact that I am taking it back to England and will be back to try again for the record in the same car next December. We probably will make some small changes in the motor."

Trees

When Admiral Byrd's returning explorers reached New Zealand, the sight which stirred them most deeply was trees. For nearly two years they had not seen a tree. It is difficult to imagine a world without trees, though in Iceland a hundred generations have lived and died without having seen one. We are cutting down trees faster than we are planting new ones. We do not think of trees as a crop, but as a natural resource to be mined without replacement. The Federal Farm Board's chairman lately made a plea for the restoration of the "wood lot" as an important part of every farm. Trees as a crop do pay. They take longer from seed to market than any other crop, but every sound tree adds its little to the value of any farm, and with the inevitable reduction in acreage devoted to money crops and pasturage there is no better use to which surplus land can be put than growing trees for the future. Moreover, many states now exempt reforested land from taxation.

Pulpwood By The Million

Bracebridge Gazette. — Norman Kelly, of Baysville, spent the Winter up north in the pulpwood country. Norman gives very vivid pictures of the immensity of the paper business at Iroquois Falls and other mills. He tells of one camp cutting pulpwood where the logs cut by a camp of 125 men all Winter furnish only 10 days' supply for one mill. The company has seven such mills. The wood they have, if piled four feet high by four feet wide, would reach 500 to 600 miles. Where Norman was scaling the piles of logs contained from 500 to 600 logs in a pile. They just allowed room for scalers between piles, and the piles like that reached two and a half miles along the railway. Evidently Ontario's spruce timber is disappearing.

Health Service

Prepared by the Canadian Medical Association.

DRINKING FOR HEALTH

The body of the average person contains about seventy per cent of water. It is important, therefore, that the individual see to it that a sufficient amount of water is supplied to his body.

It is not possible to say just how much water a person should use, because the amount varies, depending upon his occupation and the heat and temperature of the atmosphere in which he lives and works. Working out of doors on a hot day, a man gets rid of a considerable quantity of water by evaporation of water from the skin.

Generally speaking, most people do not secure a sufficient amount of water; either they do not drink enough water or other fluids, or they do not eat sufficiently of foods containing a high percentage of water.

Water is usually so easily and readily obtained that it is not generally appreciated. We are apt to think of it only at those times when we are thirsty and there is none available. It is likely that many persons who now enjoy health would feel even better if they were to increase their fluid intake by developing the habit of drinking a gless or two of water before breakfast and between meals. There is no objection to a moderate use of water with meals, but it is distinctly harmful to use water or any other beverage to wash down food. Drink should not be taken while food is in the mouth. Before drinking, any food that is in the mouth should be thoroughly masticated and swallowed.

Water acts as a food solvent. It is a most valuable aid in securing regular and complete elimination of body wastes. Water is also necessary for the regulation of body heat.

It is not sufficient to rely upon a sense of thirst as a guide. When thirst occurs, it should be quenched. but it often happens that many persons are only occasionally thirsty. For years they have not attended to the natural demand for water unless it were pressing, and so their sense of thirst is blunted. A daily water-drinking routine should be adopted, regardless of the absence of thirst.

Like all good things, abuse may do harm. If six glasses of water a day are good, it does not follow that eigteen are three times better. Excess is never desirable, and in those who suffer from a heart or kidney condition, excessive drinking of water may be definitely harmful.

No rule of hygiene is easier to obey than that of drinking sufficient water. There is no reason to overlook its regular practice.

Early Swarming--- How To Stop It

Experimental Farms Note.

It is all important to have each colonly at maximum strength in time for the main honey flow, to do this, careful managment of the colonies through spring and early summer is required. Careful management does not mean constant manipulation but consists of doing the right thing at the right time. All manipulations in the apiary during spring and early summer are for the purpose of producing bees to gather the harvest and to prevent them from splitting forces through swarming. The important factors in building up the colonies to proper strength are good queens abundant food, sufficient room and protection. Early, very early in the spring the queens start their egg laying and as the spring advances and new nectar and pollen are coming in, the number of eggs laid each day increases until there are between two and three thousand produced every twenty-four hours. Twenty-one days after the first eggs are laid new bees are being added to the colony. New bees cannot be produced unless there is first sufficient room for the queen to reach her maximum egg production and secondly, enough food to feed the young bees. Now it is quite possible that a colony may reach a feeling of strength before the main flow commences and thus decide upon swarming during the dandelion and and fruit bloom flow. This early tendency is usually of short duration only and is easily controlled by giving the queen sufficient room for egg laying by enlarging the brood chamber and by giving enough super room so that surplus nectar may be stored in supers instead of the brood chamber. Bulletin No. 33 of the Dominion Experimental Farm, Ottawa, contains information on swarm control, write for it.

O. P. V. Silage or Hay

Experimental Farms Note.

In any section of the country where the number of live stock being kept is increasing all the time and where mixed farming with a strong tendency toward dairying appears to be the most promising system of farming the question of producing an abundant supply of palatable roughage for this stock is always of importance.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Kapuskasing, Ontario, an experiment has been counducted for a period of years in order to determine the best date or dates on which to seed oats, peas and vetch (O. P. V.), which crop may be used to good advantage either as a silage crop or when cured and stored for hay.

The mixture used in this test was sown at the rate of 2 bushels of oats. 1 bushel of peas, and ½ bushe of vetch per acre, O.A. C. No. 72 oats Mackay peas, and Common vetch were the varieties used.

The seed was sown on six different dates each year at intervals of seven days commencing as soon as the soil was in a suitable condition. Owing to the fact that some years this experiment was placed on rather low-lyng land even the first seeding was not sown until fairly late. In fact, the average date for the first seeding over a six-year period was May 23 which put the average date of the sixth or last seeding on June 27.

Over a six-year period the average yield of absolute dry matter per acre obtained from each of the seedings are as follows: first, 2 tons. 1821 lbs· second, 2 tons, 1611 lbs; third 2 tons 1161 lbs; fourth, 2 tons, 728 lbs; fifth, 2 tons, 326 lbs, and sixth, 2 tons, 307 lbs. These figures bring out several points, three of which should possibly be mentioned in particular. Firstly, that good yields of this crop can be grown, which may be used either for silage purposes or cured for hay; second, that the earlier seedings have given better yields, and thirdly, that while the earlier seedings have given considerably the larger yields, nevertheless very good results can be obtained from this mixture even when it is sown as late as the end of June. This may sometimes prove a distinct convenience, particularly in late seasons, or when it is desired to sow the crop on an area of low-lying land which may be slow in drying up in the spring.

Mother—What kind of a show did papa take you to, Bobby?"

Bobby—It was a dandy, mamma. They had ladies dressed in stockings up to their necks.

Girl Claimed Cured By Canadian Martyrs

Daughter of Former Chesterville Family Afflicted with St. Vitus Dance—Visited Shrine, Cured on Ninth Day.

Many cures of a most credible nature have, from time to time, been reported as having taken place through the intercession of the Blessed Canadian Martyrs, whose canonization is set for some time during the present year, possibly the month of June. It is upon the evidence of these cures and attested by medical authority, that the Church will declare the sainthood of her martyred sons. Not every cure, however, is used in the process, as some may come about from natural causes or through mere accident, although they may have been the result of supernatural intervention.

What is purported to be a real cure is that of little Miss Aurea Flynn, aged 10 years, of 42 Gloucester St., Toronto. Troubled for some time with what the doctors diagnosed as Chorea in a most aggravated form, and commonly known as St. Vitus Dance, this little girl with her parents and uncle, Mr. Claude Reilly, of 249 Gainsborough Rd., Toronto, himself a convert of the Catholic Faith, medical aid having failed, motored to the Canadian Martyr's Shrine, near Midland, Ont., on Sunday, July 14th, of last year. While the Rev. Father Lally. S. J., director of the shrine, rec ted the customary intercessory prayers over the child and applied the relic of the martyrs. He also gave the suppliant oil blessed with the relic, and instructed her to apply it for nine days. This she did, along with a small relic which was also given to her.

No progress in her condition was apparent, and upon retiring on the night preceding he ninth day the child seemed worse than ever. She tossed most restlessly all night, her face twitched severely, her speech was greatly affected, and her right side, leg, hand, and head were giving her great pain. With daybreak the child called for her breakfast, and to the surprise of her worried mother she picked up her spoon and fed herself without assistance.

Since that time she has shown no signs of the malady and takes her place in play with the rest of the children of the neighborhood. The child is now attending school regularly and making excellent progress whereas her medical advisers had previously forbidden her attendance at school for fear of developing a mental condition.

The cure has been attested by her physician, Dr. W. P. Thomson, Toronto, and others who are not of the child's own faith.—The Catholic Register.

Drudgery

The world is full of people, especially young folk, who think there is some short cut to fame and fortune. They try to write stories and poems, paint pictures, carve statues, act leading roles on the stage, or make fortunes in business, without serving the long and painful apprenticeship which always precedes real success. It can't be done. Just now two young men who broadcast a Negro comedy feature every night are attracting world-wide attention. "Amos 'n' Andy" are reported to be drawing a salary of $100,000 a year, so thousands of young men who think that is easy money are trying to break into the same game. The young men who are earning a fortune for their ability as entertainers went through years of ill-paid, long-hour drudgery before they became masters of their art. So did every man or woman who has made a success in business or industry. Young people don't believe that. It was true when the pyramids were built! it will still be true when they have crumbled into dust.

A Mother's Love

A mother was dying in the hospital. She suffered agony, and her mind was no longer clear. In the shadows around her bed the family sat silently. They did not say a word, because they did not want to disturb the patient, and because their feelings were beyond words.

Suddenly one of the sons coughed. We hardly noticed it, but it did not escape the mother.

"Was that you coughing, Fred?" she asked with tender solicitude.

"Yes, mother, he answered, "but neved mind, it's nothing."

In spite of pain and the shadows of the valley of death, mother's love asserted itself.

How beautiful is mother's love. It is the sacrificial love; it always gives. A mother can not be happy so long as she knows that one of her children is unhappy, and she finds her happiness in making her loved ones happy. She spends herself on her children, and considers the sacrifices a privilege.

We all ought to get down on our knees and thank God that in this pilgrimage through life we were permitted to taste so sweet a thing as mother's love. And as we adore, we shall be able to see through the heart of mother into the great heart of God.

Jealous Lover Suicides After Double Murder

Hilton Beach, Ont., April 13.—Mrs. Mary Campbell, 40, her daughter, Lillian Mary Campbell, 17, and Andrew Simons, 27, are dead in a double murder and suicide which has shocked the peaceful community of St. Joseph's Island, the first major crime it has known for fifteen years. Jealousy over the attentions of a rival suitor is believed to have been the motive for Simons' deed.

"I'm going to kill you, Lily, Simons is reported to have said as he entered the home of Miss Campbell, at Hilton Township, late Friday night. The girl's mother on hearing this called to her daughter to run upstairs and grappled with Simons for the rifle he was carrying. During the struggle the rifle was discharged and Mrs. Campbell fell with a bullet through her chest, the bullet continuing through the kitchen stove, lodging in the wall.

Simons then went out the front door. Lillian and three younger children, Godfrey, 14, Susie, 11, and Lloyd 7, went to the doorway after him. Turning, Simons fired and hit Lilly in the chest. Badly wounded, the girl staggered into an adjoining room and fell on a lounge. Simons is reported to have followed her into the house and fired another shot through the girl's heart.

Simons then rushed out of the house into the yard where he turned the rifle on himself. The first shot grazed his neck, causing blood to flow freely. Staggering to his knees, he placed the muzzle of the rifle to his body and in some manner contrived to press the trigger, the bullet entering his heart.

Simon's manner on the night of the shooting apparently worried his mother. He announced he was leaving and would not be back. His mother called two brothers, Stanley and Arthur, but all Andrew would say was that he would leave the car where they could get it, and that they would know in the morning what he was going to do.

Ottawa Man Held On Serious Charge

Provincial Constable Boudreault, of the Ontario police, Friday, at Casselman, arrested James Wilson, said to be of Ottawa, on a charge of attempted robbery with violence.

The alleged offence was committed at 12.45 o'clock Friday when Jean Ouimet, farmer, living near St. Albert, was awaked by knocking on the door, and was confronted by an armed man when he opened it. The man demanded money, and Ouimet went upstairs on a pretext of getting it. He stayed there a long time, and when he finally returned to the front door the unwelcome caller had gone.

Provincial police were notified and commenced investigation on the case. They received a report from a farmer near Crysler that, later in the day, he had found a man hiding in his barn, and that the stranger had knocked him down and escaped before he could be questioned. When Wilson was arrested at Casselman, police said both Ouimet and the Crysler farmer identified him as the man they had faced earlier in the day.

Can Farmers Make Money?

So much is being said these days about the "decadent condition" of agriculture that many farmers have fully made up their minds that the industry has gone entirely to the bad But this is not the experience of many of our best farmers today. The fact is that any farmer who is willing to work just 75 per cent as hard as his father did and carefully plan his finances and his farm operations can make money these times. Too many farmers are buying expensive cars and more farm machinery than is absolutely necessary, the long term payments appealing to them. The farmer must adopt more careful business methods and those who are doing this are prospering today.

The New Era

What is coming over the world? There would seem to be over production of wheat, coffee, oil, rubber, cotton and so forth. Modern machinery appears to be making changes in our economic life that are serious, and far-reaching. What are we going to do about it? A chance acquaintance whom we met on the train recently summed it up with the observation that people will only work about three days a week a generation or so hence. Wage scales and methods of living have to be changed to the new era. Sounds good.

"Mike, how did the accident happen?"

Mike: "Well, boss, ye see, 'twas like this: I was drivin' me truck up Main Street, when I had to stop suddenly, and a fellow with a big Packard car crashed in the rear of me truck. Sure, it didn't hurt his machine very much, but he jumped off, ran up to me, and a-shakin' his fist said: 'Hay, you little Harp, why didn't you put out your hand?' 'Put out me hand,' said I, 'Ye dang fool, if ye couldn't see the truck, how the divil could ye see me hand?'"

The Letter of the Law.

The prospective tenant had inspected all the rooms, the coal cellar, and the other conveniences of the flat, and had expressed himself satisfied.

"Have you any children?" asked the porter.

"I have."

"Then you can't have the flat.'

"But you don't understand. My youngest child is married and lives in Australia, and the other two are in Dakota!"

"That makes no difference," said porter. "I have orders not to let this flat to anyone with children!"

Gardens For The Kiddies

Let your children have a garden this year—a garden that is their very own. Even though you have but a small plot of ground, you can surely set aside a tiny patch for each of the children.

It may be six feet square, or only four. It may be ten or twelve. But no matter how large it is, teach the children how to loosen the soil, sift in ashes if needed, add fertilizer, smooth it down and plant the seed.

Teach them to care for the tiny plants when they come up. to water them, weed them, and shelter them during heavy winds or storms. Let them compete with each other, seeing who can grow the first radish of edible size, who can furnish mother with the first mess of peas or lettuce, or who can bring an ear of corn to dad first.

They will learn to love the soil and the vegetables it produces, as millions of their adults love it. By all means let the children have a garden.

Astonishing Finds of Coal Reported in North

Toronto. — Government operators who are now concentrating their drilling attentions on an area lyig west of the Onakanawa river, two and a half miles southwest of Blacksmith Rapids, have recently reported astonishing finds of lignite to the Department of Mines at Queen's Park.

Sink holes in an area of 2,000 feet wide and 1,500 feet long have indicated the presence within that small area of approximately 5,500,000 tons of this class of coal. One seam of lignite uncovered was 64 feet in thickness. The other five holes in this particular area registered 49, 58, 43, 53 and 49 feet of coal respectively.

Thomas F. Sutherland, acting deputy Minister of Mines, stated that drilling would continue without interruption as long as the muskeg was traversable and as long as lignite indications warranted. Operations now being conducted are for the purpose of delimiting the area of the coal indicated by last Summer's drilling. Since the Government began its exploratory work 37 drill holes and two shafts have been sunk. From the shafts 300 tons of coal have been mined and transported to steel. One carload was shipped for testing purpose to the fuel testing branch of the Department of Mines at Ottawa. A second carload to the Foster-Wheeler Company of St. Catherines and a third to the Ontario research foundation. In addition small test shipments have been made to Germany and the University of North Dakota.

Great activity in developing the coal beds is due this Summer and Fall with marketable quantities mined, if tests justify such action following development of the new Abitibi Canyon Power to the extent of 275,000 h.p., which, in turn, will be maintained at production peak by Blacksmiths Rapids cheap fuel.

Miss Laura entered the parlor to the strains of "Here Comes the Bride" played by Miss Winnie MacElheran and was seated in a chair which was prettily decorated and an address was read by Miss Doronthy Shaver as Miss Beth McMillan and Master Ralph MacKenzie, dressed as bride and groom, wheeled in a prettily trimmed wagon with the gifts, after which Miss Laura fittingly replied, thanking her friends for the lovely gifts and inviting them to visit her in her new home. The evening was spent in games and music, refreshments being served at midnight. Geese At Brittannia Bay Get Corn By 'Plane

Some fifteen hundred wild geese who are making a temporary stop at Britannia Bay were assured of one substantial meal as several Ottawa men combined to send out a supply of corn to be dropped by airplane. The plane was piloted by its owner, Chas. Garland, and the other occupant was Burton Ritchie. The corn was divided into five-pound or ten-pound paper bags and dropped on the ice. By this means it was possible to afford succor to more birds than would otherwise be the case, as the feather d visitors congregate in groups.

W. R. Barnard, a member of the Britannia summer colony, is behind the move and states that several more bags are promised. The birds, he said were flying very high this year. a sure sign that they require food. This is, moreover substaniated by their thin apeparance.

The geese, taking previous seasons as a criterion. will be winging northward about May 1.

Reasonable Doubt.

The jury had acquitted the defendant of horse-stealing because of the powerful plea of his lawyer.

"Honor bright, now, Bill," said the lawyer, as the two left the court house, "you did steal that horse, didn't you?"

"Well, now look here. I'll be honest with you. I always did think I stole that horse until you made the speech to the jury. Now I'll be doggoned if I ain't got my doubts about it."

The Old Box Stove Clubs

The passing of the country store is noted sympathetically by the Parkhill Gazette. In reminiscent mood, it is pointed out that the general store at "the corners" was the club of its time. "Day and night the store was open and seats were provided for those who wished to meet neighbors around the hot box-stove during the chill winter evenings. Amusements were few, newspapers scarce, and there was sure to be some news to be gleaned from conversations at these gatherings." One thing certain about the country store assemblies was that whatever news turned up would be thoroughly and vigorously discussed.

Among those who have passed the meridian of life, and especially among the farm and village boys of other days there will be genuine regret over the passing of what in their youth was regarded as an institution. They will recall the old hitching post at the door, always well chewed by impatient nags that did not understand why the master should spend so much time in the settlement of world affairs. Visions would arise of the long row of drawers that held the raisins, the candy, and, above all, the sweet smelling spices that set their imagination roving to Far Eastern lands. They will see again the barrel with the prunes—from which it was no great crime to extract a sample now and then. Recently the prune has moved into better society and become respectable, even admired; but in those days it was fair game for the joker—and there were jokers in the country store gatherings, plenty of them.

At the back was the dry goods department, and the boots and shoes, while a little wire wicket indicated the location of the post office. No country store was worthy of the name unless it handled the mail.

Those who have advanced into the world of big business will smile as they recall the system of bookkeeping adopted by the keeper of the country store. Nothing like it has been evolved since, not even by the most talented chartered accountants. Entries were made by every member of the family, and when accounts were being made out they all had to give a hand to explain what it was all about.

The community immediately concerned will, of course, most keenly regret the disappearance of the country store. They feel their loss in a direct way. But they are not without sympathizers in high and far-away places. There will be sorrow in the heart of the man who carries with him into later life happy memories of the old place; and the most fragrant of these will be the faint, pleasing perfume of the spices.—The Toronto Globe.

A Good Slogan

"An acre of alfalfa for every cow" is a slogan adopted in many districts where live stock is kept, and with modification to suit local requirements it is one which receives strong support by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. With the short crops and difficult seasonal conditions of 1928 and 1929 the need of adequate provision with respect to fodder crops became more apparent. Not only will the application of this slogan to alfalfa, or suitable clover or hay crops, go far to meet the urgency of the present situation but it would also provide a useful and profitable rotation medium for keeping soil up to production capacity and assist in weed control. This scale of planting not only provides adequate pasturage but allows a surplus for feeding to other farm animals and often provides a carry-over of hay to a lean year.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

A Large Apple Orchard.

Norfolk Orchards Limited operate what is probably the largest acreage of apple orchard under one management in Ontario. They have 225 acres of bearing trees, including a solid block of 140 acres. These consist mostly of good varieties such as Spy, Baldwin, Greening, McIntosh, Scarlet Beauty, Duchess, Wealthy, etc. In this there is one block of 1000 Hyslop crab trees. The manager of this big orchard is Harvey L. Johnson, of Simcoe. The crop is sold by the Norfolk Fruit Growers' Association.

Situation Serious.

Dr. J. F. Booth, head of the newly organized branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, in addressing the annual meeting of the O. A. C. Alumni Association at Toronto, offered some suggestions for dealing with the present crisis. He did not try to minimize the seriousness of the economic situation but suggested that the best thing to do was to cut the cost of production, diversify farming where this was not being done, to study local conditions, and turn production to suit, to develop co-operative marketing and pay more attention to quality and advertising.

The Royal Trip.

The regulations governing the contest by which boys from all parts of Ontrio will be the guests of the Ontario Department of Agriculture at the Royal Winter Fair next fall stipulate that the contest is open to farmers and farmers' sons who have not reached their 21st birthday on November 1st and to be eligible to take part in the competition they must submit some statement as to the cost of some farm crop or operation. The arrangements provide for the following accommodations while in Toronto free of charge: Railway fare to and from the city; lodging accomodation for four nights; meals while in Toronto; an extensive and vitally interesting program; transportation while carrying out the program arranged.

Plant More Trees.

There are thousands of acres of land on Ontario farms that are nonproductive that might well be planted to forest trees. Any resident in Ontario may obtain free of charge up to 3500 trees for reforesting, an additional 500 trees can also be obtained for windbreaks. These trees are distributed in the spring only, to those who apply to the Ontario Forestry Branch, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Cut Cost of Production.

With a gradual drop in the level of most farm produce prices in the past few years, the cost of production again becomes a vital factor in agricultural operations. One very high factor in reducing the costs of production, the very foundation of agriculture, is better seed. However, unfortunately, when a man uses his own seed, as a bulk of Ontario farmers do, there is no selling and hence no government regulations, and as a result very little attention is paid to grade. Only seed that has been cleaned up to meet a certain grade and conformed with very strict regulations in regard to noxious weeds is allowed to be sold legally in Canada, and yet, in spite of all efforts to protect him, the average farmer goes ahead and uses ungraded and very often uncleaned seed.

Orchard and Spray Service.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture has extended the orchard and spray service to the Counties of Dundas, Prince Edward, Hastings, Grey, Northumberland, Durham, Peel Halton, Wentworth, Lincoln, Brant, Middlesex, Welland, Norfolk, Lambton, Huron, Simcoe South, Oxford and Elgin. Agricultural representatives and spray supervisors of these counties met with various specialists and officials who assist in this service at Vineland during the first week in April at a conference to discuss ways and means for improving the service throughout 1930. Professors Caesar and Howitt of O. A. C. are the directors in charge of this service in the province. All growers who really want to make their orchards pay and who are willing to follow the Ontario spray calendar and special directions given by the supervisors, can obtain this service free of charge if they apply before April 19.

Care of Ewes.

To a large extent the success and profits of sheep raising depend upon the care given the ewes during the lambing season. A crop of well nourished healthy lambs means success, but a poor crop invariably means a loss. Good succulent feed with a reasonable amount of grain should be fed the ewes both before and after lambing and especially while nursing the lambs in order to supply an abundance of milk and keep the youngsters coming along.

Seed Program Endorsed.

Members of the agricultural advisory committee of Elgin County at their annual meeting early in April endorsed the carrying out of a seed grain survey as proposed by the agricultural representative, F. S. Thomas. The survey is to be made in an effort to improve the quality of the seed grain grown in the county and to increase production. Mr. Thomas proposes to work through rural schools, and the senior pupils will be asked to co-operate by furnishing samples of the oats and barley being used as seed on their parents' farm this spring.

A Remarkable Crop.

In 1929 James McKitrick of Orton in Wellington County harvested 511 bags of marketable potatoes off two acres. The field in which this remarkable crop was grown was of a light loam. The potatoes, which were of the Green Mountain variety, were planted on June 10, after a sweet clover pasture had been turned under in the fall along with about ten tons of barnyard manure per acre. An application of 900 pounds to the acre of 4-8-10 commercial fertilizer was made after planting. The crops was sprayed for late blight every two weeks after the potatoes were up six or eight inches.

Cleaning of Seed General.

The crop bulletin for the first week in April stresses the general turn of Ontario farmers toward the cleaning of seed. Inquiries in Dufferin have been numerous for good seed of standard varieties. In Dundas the uncertainty of the milk situation is having a very depressing effect on production. The average price received for Holsteins at a sale in Durham was set at $145. A shortage of grain is indicated in Frontenac, while a heavy demand is being made for good seed oats and barley. Exceptionally favorable reports from sheep flock masters have been received from Grey, while an increased acreage in spring wheat is reported in Hastings. Shipments of Western horses are meeting a slow ale in Huron, while in Lambton seed grain is more plentiful than was expected.

Dog Awarded Medal

Brockville.—"King," the police dog that effected the rescue of Jack Wylie, of Brockville, member of the crew of the J. P. Porter and Sons drill boat, from drowning in the icy waters of the St. Lawrence, opposite here, on February 27 last, may be awarded the Spratt's dog hero medal that is given every six months to the dog that performs the outstanding act of heroism during the preceding six-month period. Word has been received here from the national award committee of the foundation, the headquarters of which are in New York City, that "King" is eligible for this award and asking for additional and authentic information concerning his exploit.

Roddie McNeil, of St. Catherines, foreman on the drill boat, and Jack Wylie, a member of the crew, were moving a heavy piece of machinery across the ice when it broke and both were plunged into the water. McNeil was rescued with difficulty but Wylie had disappeared when "King," pet of the crew, dived from the deck of the boat and reappeared with a firm clutch upon the man's clothing. Wylie was then pulled to safety.

"Normalizing"

When the 1930 maid or matron counts her calories and balances her proteins and carbohydrates, she no longer "diets," she "normalizes."

The change is more than one of terms. "Dieting" usually signifies semi-starvation. "Normalizing" apparently means the process of one's contours conform to the lines of perfect health. It may apply to putting on weight as well as to reducing, a situation in which more than one young woman has found herself recently, owing to the growing popularity of curves.

Like many words and phrases that record the changes of feminine styles, this one comes from Hollywood. It was given its first currency by Nancy Carroll, one of the younger screen stars, who seems to take her eating problems very seriously.

Miss Carroll is the author of a new Thirty-Day Diet which has gained wide popularity and practically swept the older and dangerous and outmoded 18-Day Hollywood Diet into the discard. Her system is to cut down calories where necessary, but to maintain bodily energy by allowing plenty of sweets. Candy is not only permitted but is encouraged, on the ground that it helps the subject to endure the reduction of her food supplies with comfort and equanimity.

Since the first of the year the number of requests for Miss Carroll's diet has grown until she has been obliged to open an office in Chicago to handle the mail on this subject.

The question is—Is the new diet responsible for the new styles of dress, or are the new modes entitled to credit for the new styles in feminine figures.

Which came first, the hen or the egg?

An auto crashed into a telegraph post and the driver was picked up in an unconscious state entangled in the wires. Just as his rescuer feared the worst, a smile crept over his face and he was heard to murmur as he fingered the wires: "Thank Heaven they've given me a harp!"

Early Vegetable Types

Vegetables divide themselves into three main classes. First, there is the early sort, usually grown for leaves such as lettuce, spinach, cress, and mustard, which can be started just as soon as the ground can be worked up. With these also goes the radish. The second batch, which includes onions, carrots, beets, and early turnips, go in almost at the same time but they are not quite so hardy and after these come the peas, which are liable to rot unless the weather is warm. The third main group runs from cabbage and cauliflower, which go in first, tomatoes, set out after all danger of frost is over, right through to melons, cucumbers and celery, which are not planted until the weather is thoroughly warm and there can be no danger of frost. Where the season is short most of the last named can be started in hot-beds or cold-frames and set outside later. Good success is reported from sowing melon and cucumber seeds in the sod turned upside down and after the weather turns really warm transplanting the whole thing outside.

The Nicest Remembrance of All

On Birthdays

ALONG distance call — that carries your voice, your personality — is the finest remembrance you can send on a birthday, anniversary or any other occasion. It carries a touch of intimacy no other remembrance can bring.

And what other gift could you send that would cost you so little and give so much pleasure. Just look over the long distance rates in the front of your telephone book and note the unusually low cost since the recent rate reductions.

Call by number and tell the long distance operator "anyone there will do." This gives you the low station-to-station rate.

If you call after 7 in the evening the cost will be about 25% lower than the day rate; and from 8.30 p.m. to 4.30 a.m. the rate is about half the day rate. (These reductions apply on "anyone" calls only.) Long distance today is quicker, cheaper and more dependable than ever before.

AN EASTER SUNRISE

Awakened by an unusual sound, Priscilla opened her eyes with great effort. A sound of any kind was startling in the quiet village night, but the music of a band was incredible! She must have imagined the sound as she had imagined sounds and sights in the dreams of her long convalescense. As she opened ber eyes a little wider she could see against the many paned window of her bedroom a dark object that had not been there the day before. She blinked sharply, trying to identify it and wondering whether the dim light that filled the room was that of dawn or of a clouded moon.

Presently she saw that the dark object was a plant with large leaves and a white flower. Frequently since the fever had left her and she had been conscious the doctor's wife had put a blooming plant into her window so that she might see it when she awoke. They were not hothouse plants, but geraniums or blooming oxalis from the sunny south windows of the doctor's house. This plant—Priscilla could see more and more plainly—was a calla lily; it reminded her that the dawning light was that of Easter morning. The day mocked Priscilla's saddened heart.

With a quiver of distress she turned quickly on her side, away from the window, with her face to the wall. It was terrible to have recalled to her even before she was awake the cruel sorrow that had broken her down and ruined her life. The doctor's wife did not know that she had lost her mother and sister within a few weeks of each other; but, even if she had known, she would not have been careful of Priscilla's feelings, for she was not a woman of deep feeling. She herself had lost four children in a fearful epidemic of diphtheria years before, but she spoke of her loss calmly to Priscilla, who was almost a stranger. She went about her work as if she had never had a grief in the world; she teased the doctor; she played like a child with the many children whom she invited to the house, and there was always a laugh brimming at her lips. She had told Priscilla about her children as she sat by the girl's bed with her sewing in her hands, but she did not cry; she had even smiled as she talked.

"There were four of them, Miss Pryor," said Mrs. Kline, "from so high"—holding her hand not far from the floor—"to so high," and she raised her hand a little. "We didn't know anything about antitoxin then, and the doctor had to go about among the sick people. We were as careful as we could be, but they all sickened. We laid them out there; you can see the little graves in a row."

Mrs. Kline lifted her head to look out of Priscilla's window. The little cemetery adjoined the doctor's property; in it were the graves in regular lines with uniform low headstones. Beyond was the little gray church of the Moravian sect, to which the doctor and his wife belonged, and still farther away rolling hills almost tall enough to be called mountains. The grass in the cemetery was growing green; the trees were budding; the crocuses were blooming in the doctor's lawn. But Priscilla did not see the lovely outlines of the mountain or the soft gray of the little church or the heavenly yellow of the sap-filled willow branches. When she looked out the window she saw only the long, straight rows of the village graves. Mrs. Kline watched Priscilla's eyes darken. "You are not afraid next to the cemetery?" she asked in concern. Her forbears had been Germans; she spoke with pleasant, homely inflections strange to Priscilla's New England ears. "I never thought of that. I am so used to it; it seems like part of my home. You are not afraid, are you?"

"No," Priscilla had answered. Even in the weakness of her fever she was reserved; she told Mrs. Kline nothing about hereif except that she was alone in the world. In reality the sight of the graves made her shiver; she could not turn her head without remembering that far away her beloved mother and sister had been laid under the ground, and that she would never see them again.

"It was not right!" Priscilla cried over and over to herself. "They were all I had in the world. I didn't ask for riches or great honor or talent; I didn't want anything but them. And I shall never see them again, never, never!"

It again seemed to Priscilla that she heard the faint note of a horn, and she put her hands over her ears. This was a strange time for revelry. If only the noise had not awakened her If only she could have slept on forever! It would be no more trouble to these people who had taken care of her to lay her quietly away than it would be to nurse her indefinitely. She should never get well; she did not wish to get well! There lay the deep root of the trouble. For years she and her sister had looked forward to having their mother in a little place in the country where she would get better and where they, their education finished, could relieve her from all anxiety and care. But Priscilla's mother and sister had died. and with them had vanished the girl's ambition, joy in life and faith.

In June Priscilla had been graduated from college, and by the following February she had not found a position; it had been important for her to find one by September. By February she was desperate. She lived upon the charity of a distant cousin who could afford to give her nothing except her board. Priscilla needed work so that she might pay up her debts and buy herself clothes and above all so that she might have occupation for her burdened, morbid mind.

It is true that she had stood at the foot of her class; it is true that her marks were little better than passing, and it was only right that other students should be recommended first. The college could hardly explain to those who applied for students to fill positions that Miss Pryor was brighter than her marks would indicate, that she had been handicapped all through her course by the serious illness of her mother, and that during her senior year she had lost not only her mother but her sister and had become thus the last of her family.

It is doubtful indeed whether the college was fully informed of the troubles of slender, silent Miss Pryor who as soon as her classes were over hurried to her home in a distant part of the city, who took no part in school activities, and who had little to say to anyone. In applying for various positions Priscilla herself might have said that she could do better than her marks showed, and that she loved children and liked to teach, but she made no such explanation.

Early in February the offer of a position had come. It was in another state far away from her old home and her college and her few friends, and it was only a country school, but she had promptly written her acceptance, had borrowed the money for her fare and had set out.

It was night when she arrived, and she could see nothing of the little village. She knew that it lay among the hills, and she could tell from the pale, old-fashioned street lamps and the rough pavements over which the doctor, who had met her at the station, led her that it was a small and unprogressive settlement. The doctor had engaged her and she was to board at his house.

Now, even though she had been in the village seven weeks, she had as yet seen nothing of it except the view over the little cemetery toward the church and the hills. For in the doctor's pleasant office here she sat talking with him while his stout wife put supper on the table in the next room, Priscilla had slipped slowly from her chair in a long faint. Each day she had been feeling a little more tired and dispirited, and it had seemed to her that day as if the long journey would never end. She had not dreamed, however, that she was going to be sick. She was never sick!

From that moment until the past week Priscilla had known nothing. They had carried her upstairs and had laid her in a bed in which she seemed to sink to unfathomable depths. There she stayed, fever-stricken, delirious, and desperately ill, for seven weeks. Other women besides the doctor's wife had helped to care for her, but Priscilla did not know one nurse from the other. The doctor's wife had tried to make her understand that the village preacher was holding her school for her but Priscilla only looked blank. Once a friend of the doctor's from the city came and examined her and said she would recover. But Priscilla did not see him or hear his voice or feel the touch of his kindly hand.

Lately, however, there had been visitors of whom she was aware. Children had peered in at the door, smiling at her; Priscilla had made no effort to speak to them, not even to answer their "good morning." She was physically able to have visitors, but she shrank from them with a feeling that was almost terror. The doctor stopped at her door four or five times a day and told her stories, but Priscilla did not smile. The young minister came to call upon her, and to him Priscilla managed to utter a few words of thanks for his kindness in taking her school for her. When he had gone the slow tears of despair had filled her eyes. She could never teach; she did not wish to teach; she could never rise from this bed. She wanted to see her mother and her sister; she cared for nothing else in the world. On Sundays she heard the hymns in the little church and thought them mockery.

Outside her room the doctor shook his head. "She does not want to get well," he said to his wife. "She must be roused, or she will never get well."

Mrs. Kline grew thin in her anxiety over the strange patient whom Fate had laid in her best bed. She sent the neighbor's children in to see her; she carried into Priscilla's room the first brood of tiny chicks, and left them in their basket by Priscilla's bed so that she might handle them if she wished. But the children were frightened by the lady's white, unsmiling face, and the chicks peeped and chirped for a whole morning, and Priscilla did not look at them.

Presently, the doctor's wife, suspecting some grief, had told Priscilla of her own sorrow, of her four little children who had sickened and died in a week. But Priscilla responded wth no confidence. only turned away and pressed her cheek a little deeper in the pillow. She had no spirit, she had no hope.

Presently in the quiet Easter dawn Priscilla took her hands away from her ears. She could hear the music no more. Now that she was really awake, it seemed to her that Mrs. Kline had said something about music when she had made her comfortable for the night and had warned her not to be startled. The music was over now evidently, and the musicians had gone.

Then suddenly Priscilla sat upright. She had been mistaken. The horns sounded forth boldly; their music seemed to come from beneath her window. It came no more in faint, single notes that a person recovering from fever might have imagined, but in a great burst of sound. The tune was not one of revelry; it was a hymn Priscilla, who was not German, did not recognize the hymn; it did not belong to her church. But it nearly broke her heart with its solemn majesty. It seemed to pierce her soul, to lay bare once more all the misery of the recent past.

Priscilla began to cry, at first weakly, then with sobs. She tried to control herself, for she knew that in a moment Mrs. Kline and the doctor would hurry into the room, and that they would be alarmed and distressed She glanced out of the window and toward the little church to see whether the great sound could come from within its walls. Then at the strange sight that met her eyes she ceased crying and sat breathing heavily.

Day was immediately at hand; the gray sky was set with rosy clouds, and there was a rapid brightening and clearing of the dull air. Through the half-bright, half-dim light a procession was advancing from the little gray church into the little cemetery with its low gravestones, its great trees, and its encircling hills. At the head walked four men with trombones and to Priscilla's amazement the doctor was the leader. Behind them walked the preacher, and then followed a throng that Priscilla thought must include every inhabitant of the village. The doctor's wife was there; the little children who had peered at Priscilla from the doorway were there.

Across to the centre of the cemetery they walked to the solemn music of the old hymn, and while the music continued they spread out into a great semicircle with their backs to the doctor's house and their faces toward the eastern hills. Then the music ceased

Still the sky grew brighter, and the air filled with a golden haze. The rosy clouds turned to crimson; great ribbons of green and yellow and gold lengthened and widened in the heavens. Then suddenly the brightness became ineffable, the silence deeper. The people stood motionless with their faces lifted as if they were awaiting some portentous event. These were simple country folk, but they seemed uplifted with a mighty hope that they knew was now to be fulfilled.

Priscilla began to tremble. She felt no further impulse to tears; it seemed to her that she too was awaiting something. Her body felt light; the blood quickened in her veins; she began to anticipate some strange miracle to be worked in her.

The cloud banners grew longer and seemed to vibrate; then they vanish d in a greater glory. Majestically rose the sun, first a fiery rim, then a rapidly broadening disc of gold. He did not rise ungreeted; to those waiting he was the great symbol of a fact more marvellous. Standing among the graves of their dead, they lifted their voices and sang. The trombones led in the burst of music, and every voice swelled the sound. They sang of that which was more certain to them than the rising of the sun, of a greater miracle than the mysterious alternation of light and darkness:

Christ, the Lord, is risen again;
Christ hath broken every chain;
Hark! Angelic voices cry,
Singing evermore on high,
Hallelujah!

The miracle was not new to Priscilla; it was only forgotten. All her life she had believed it—until she had needed it for consolation; then she had ceased to have faith in it. It seemed suddenly to Priscilla that in the months of grief she had been out of her mind.

Slowly she rose from her bed and went toward the many-paned window through which she had looked so many times with almost intolerable oppression of the heart. There she knelt down and looked upon the graveyard with its low stones, upon the great semicircle of men and women facing the east with a song. She looked upon her good nurse whose children had been taken from her arms, but who now sang heartily, believing in a great day when they should be restored to her. She thought of the work to be done in the world, of her opportunity, of the kindness of these simple folk, of her blessed memories and of her rich hope, and she dried her tears of regret over her blindness so that now she might look and listen and believe.

"Above all," said the mistress to the new maid, " I want obedience and truthfulness."

"Yes, madam," replied the girl. "And if anyone calls when you are in, and you say you are out, which shall come first—obedience or truthfulness?"

Mineral Delights

By Etta Bitta Pye.

With the coming of Spring we need plenty of minerals, salts and vitamins. Lettuce and other green vegetables fit into these needs without drawing very heavily upon the family pocket-book. Here are two salads, particularly seasonable during April and May:

A Man's Salad.

One head of lettuce, half a dozen young green onions, including tops, and one hard-boiled egg. Use the heart of lettuce for the body of the salad, chop the onions and mash onions and mash the egg. Moisten with French dressing and pour over lettuce.

Spanish Delight.

Two lettuce hearts cut in quarters, two ripe tomatoes peeled and quartered, one cucumber cut in dice, one sweet Spanish pepper, shredded, two sprigs of parsley cut fine, two hard-boiled eggs, sliced, salt and papper to taste. Arrange ingredients on lettuce and cover with French dressing.

Waffles.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 2-3 cups milk
3 eggs
6 tablespoons butter

Beat egg yolks well; add milk and sifted ingredients quickly. Add melted butter. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites last. This recipe makes six large waffles.

Honey Syrup.

2-3 cup melted butter
2 cups honey

Heat honey and add melted butter.

"Challenge" Lemon Pie.

Here's another lemon pie, which is simply delicious, but necessitates unusual care and attention. It challenges your ability; so we call it "Challenge" Pie.

Beat yolks of 3 eggs very light. To this add juice of one lemon and rind of 2 lemons, 3 tablespoons hot water, ½ cup sugar and a large pinch of salt. Cook in dobule boiler until thick. Have whites of eggs stiffly beaten, add ½ cup sugar to them and fold into cooked mixture. Fill pie shell that has been previously baked, place in oven and brown.

Swedish Spritz Cookie

1 cupful sugar
1 cupful butter
2 eggs
4 cupfuls flour
½ teaspoonful baking powder
¼ cup sweet almonds

Mix all ingredients together in bowl, sifting baking powder with flour. Mix with the hands until ingredients are blended. being careful not to work too long. Push through pastry gun. Shape in rings or S shapes. Bake in a quick oven.

Bacon and Liver Sandwich.

Brown thin slices of calf's or pig's liver in bacon fat. Chop fine, season with salt and pepper, and spread over buttered bread. Add two slices of crisp hot bacon and a second slice of bread. Garnish with cucumber pickles or olives. For a more moist sandwich, make a gravy of the fat in the pan. For each tablespoon of fat add one tablespoon of flour. Stir to form a paste. Add ½ cup of milk, stock, or water and stir until the gravy is thickened. Pour this gravy over the chopped liver before adding it to the sandwich.

Mainly About People

Miss Jewell Clement spent the past week visiting friends in Cornwall.

Miss Betty Bolster has been spending the week with her brother in Montreal.

Mrs. G W. Shaw, of Lachute Mills, is spending some time with Mrs. R W. Carkner of Williamsburg.

Mrs. J. W. Munro, who has spent the past five months with her daughter in Buffalo, has returned to town

Messrs. J. H. Fulton and W. O. Dixon have been spending a few days in New York City this week.

Mr. Murray MacLean, of New York State returned after spending the week end with R. B. Clement and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Faulkner, of Windsor, are receiving the congratulations of their friends on the birth of a son (Gordon Howard), born at Hotel Dieu hospital April 5th. Mrs. Faulkner was before her marriage Miss Edna De Hurst, of Windsor.

Many Chesterville people will be grieved to hear of the death of Miss Katherine Shannette in a Toronto hospital last Thursday. Miss Shannette was for some time principal of Chesterville Public school and was for a time quite prominent here in work for our soldiers in the early days of the war. The remains arrived at Williamsburg on Friday where the funeral took place on Monday.

Decidedly Cool Weather

Following the delightful summery weather of the week end something seems to have gone wrong with the works and winter plugged in again. Friday and Saturday the clean-up spirit was much in evidence when smudges could be seen arising from numerous back yards where refuse heaps were being burned. One misguided individual, to wit: the editor, attempting to steal a march with a little early garden truck, planted a few rows, and here is hopin' that the seeds did not start to germinate before the heavy frosts of this week which have kept the ground frozen more than a little.

Some people say that it is only the young and foolish birds that come real early in the season, but there are others. Last week Dave Beckstead's martens made their appearance at their summer home where Dave maintains a cottage for them, and if it is the young ones that come first, how do they locate the summer quarters? These birds have been coming for years to Dave's bird houses, first one pair puts in an appearance to be followed very shortly by quite a large colony. Spring is considered definitely here with their arrival.

A Pea-Soup Problem

Pea-soup is essentially a Canadian dish rapidly growing in popular favor and the small white pea from which it is made provides one of the most attractive cash crops which can be grown in areas suited to its cultivation, but in recent years a real problem has developed in connection with pea-soup in that for some reason as yet not clearly apparent peas grown on certain land will not "break-down" boiling. The Cereal Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture are studying the problem at the present time. So far it is not definitely established whether the difficulty is an organic or plant fault. The Montreal Market at the present time takes around 135 -carloads of split peas annually, and all buying is done on a boiling test basis.

Dairy By-Products Turn Loss Into Gain

Dairy production in Canada is slowly forging ahead, but along new lines. The Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture report an increasing demand for what might really be termed the by-products of the dairy industry. Dairy Produce in Canada heretofore has been expressed largely in terms of butter, cheese, and cream. The production of butter and cheese shows a decline in volume, while "miscellaneous factory products" and "milk consumed fresh or otherwise" show a big increase, and it is this increase that is responsiblle for the net gain in dairy producton during the past five years of over $13,000,000. More fresh milk and cream are being used to-day than ever before; ice cream continues to grow in popular favour, and there is a striking increase in the amount of milk which is being processed for sale in evaporated, condensed, concentrated, and powdered form.

Star Part Comes Easiest.

"Mayn't I be a preacher when I grow up?" asked the small boy.

"Of course you may, my pet, if you want to be," his mother replied.

"Yes, I do. I suppose I have to go to church all my life, anyway, and it's a great deal harder to sit still than to stand up and holler."

Steppe by Steppe.

A Russian was being led off to execution by a squad of Bolshevik soldiers one rainy day.

"What brutes you Bolsheviks are," grumbled the doomed one, "to march me through a rain like this."

"How about us?" retorted one of the squad. "We have to march back."

Object to School Spanking

Pembroke Standard-Observer. — Because their little daughter, who is in the primary class, was turned over the knee of a teacher and spanked in the good old-fashioned way, and as a Dutch father treats his wayward child, with bare hand, causing bruises, the irate father, objecting to this form of punishment when marks were left upon the body of he child, wrote a letter to the Board of Education which was read at their meeting, stating that it was not his wish to take the case into the court, and unless satisfactory action was taken by the Board, he would do so.

When Dr. Delahey, chairman of the Board, and Mr. Bevans, principal of public schools, called at the parents' home at noon of the same day the little girl had suffered, apparently any more than temporary bodily harm from this chastisement, except for a few bruises, but as this motherly proceeding of punishing a child is not the ordinary one in vogue in schools, though possibly no more harmful than the authorized punishment of strapping the hands, the mother and father figuratively had their feathers ruffled when their brood chick was so treated.

That the child is hard to manage was admitted by the mother, members of the Board stated, and she did not object to the child being punished but it was the unorthodox administration that roused her ire. It was decided that a committee would be appointed to investigate the matter by the Board, and they will report back at their next regular meeting.

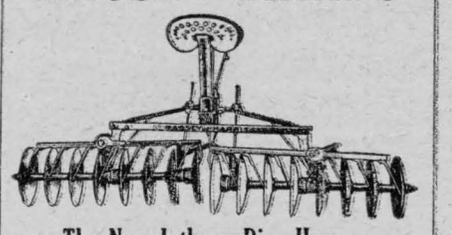

Appalling Weapon Of War Devised

London.—The Daily Mail states that "the most appalling weapon of war ever devised by man, defying all defence and raining merciless death from the skies is now being forged in secret in England.'

This new war terror, according to the Mail, is a giant airplane torpedo operating without a crew, its engine and course controlled by clockwork and its hull a mere receptacle for bombs.

The clockwork control is set beforehand to operate at a certain moment and a specified place. On arriving at the appointed place the engine stops and the whole machine with its deadly load crashed to earth.
