H.S. Board Seeking Advice About Addition to School

Three new members took their seats on the High School Board Tuesday evening when the board met for the February session. They were: Geo. Gillard, appointed by Public School Board, for term of one year; Matthew A. Flynn, appointed by the Separate School Board, term of one year; and E. B. Lynch, appointed by the Village Council, to complete the term of D. J. MacMillan, resigned.

H. E. Wales and H. S. McMurray were re-appointed for three-year terms by Counties' Council and the Village Council.

The members elected H. E. Wales chairman of the board, with H. S. McMurray as vice-chairman. Other appointments were: Purchasing Committee, Geo. Gillard and H. S. McMurray; Secretary-Treasurer, W. N. Fulton; Janitor, Jas. Riddell; Attendance Officer, Constable G. McLean.

The secretary was instrucetd by the board to write the Deputy Minister of Education asking for the visit to Chesterville of an official of that department to look over the situation here and advise the best means of providing new space for the courses in Shop Work and Household Economics it is contemplated starting here next fall.

Plans for an addition to the present school building were secured last year but were turned down by the board by reason of the high cost of the proposed building and equipment, $21,500, and because the location would necessitate removal of the sceptic tank system installed at a big cost a few years ago.

There is no doubt a new building will have to be supplied as the new courses will be compulsory in a short time, and the board is hopeful of having the addition ready for school opening in the fall. The question was raised of supplying sufficient space to resume the commercial course abandoned when the school was overcrowded a few years ago.

The report of Inspector Hooper on his recent visit was read to the board and two items, asking for better artificial lighting and for handrails on the basement stairs were ordered to be attended to.

H. S. McMurray and E. B. Lynch were instructed to interview C. W. Casselman with regard to the insurance policy falling due Feb. 8th, to try and secure a lower rate. The secretary was asked to write the manager of the Bank of Montreal expressing the thanks of the board for the use of the office for board meetings.

SUPPLIED WITH HOCKEY STICKS

Bill Dixon's Cubs are sporting a full new set of hockey sticks of which they are very proud. The "boys of town" put on a dance in the Community Hall last week and used the proceeds to equip the Cubs with new sticks for which they are duly thankful.

Leafs Display Fine Spirit Force Canadiens to Overtime

A lot of fans missed the best hockey game of the season when Leafs and Cornwall Canadiens met for the third time in a week and played here Monday night to an overtime 4-2 win for the visitors after regulation time had seen the score tied 1-1. The Leafs were a greatly improved bunch of boys compared to the showing in last Wednesday's game here when Cornwall swamped them 13-1.

The fair crowd of fans on hand were amazed with the pressure turned on by the Leafs from the first whistle and kept up throughout the game. They skated with the speedy Canadiens and back-checked like fiends to keep the factory-town boys plainly worried.

Canadiens showed better condition when the game went into overtime, and were able to outscore the Leafs 3-1 for a two goal margin.

Chesterville were handicapped with injuries as Warrington played with a badly wrenched left elbow due to an injury received at Prescott Thursday night, and Darky Fyke was still nursing a bruise on his foot that had kept him out of the game at Prescott, and Dob Plantz was stuffed up with a cold. Dob played the nets in Prescott last week for Fyke.

Del Robertson was the most improved man on the ice. He stayed out of the penalty box all night, and he skated like the wind, both ways, and with ordinary luck should have figured in a couple of goals as he worked in close on the Canadien nets. Percy Warrington turned in a gritty performance in spite of his bad arm. He was not able to shoot, but he laid over the two passes that gave the Leafs their counters. Every Leaf seemed out to make good the team's standing with the fans.

Gault again shone for Canadiens, getting three assists on rushes from his defence post, and with Donihee, Payette, Andrews and Labonne, kept the visitors a constant threat.

Bob Hitsman put the Leafs ahead at 3.17 when he drilled a shot from the blue line after Warrington had carried the puck down and slipped it across. Canadiens could not score until halfway through the second period.

Lloyd MacDonald evened the count when he blazed a high one from left wing into the upper right hand corner of the net that was too fast for Fyke to cover up. The goal umpire failed to turn on his light, but Referee George Foster ruled it a score. MacDonald took his pass from Gault. The play started after a draw in the Leaf end and the puck went to the blue line to Gault, McDonald and Labonne who were bunched at the left boards. Gault got the rubber, darted forward and gave it to MacDonald, and the

Quantity Chewing Gum Taken From Hall Floor

Work was commenced this week to put the floor of the main auditorium of the Community Hall in better shape with a thorough cleaning and waxing. Many successful dances have been held on this floor and a habit of the patrons of dances seems to be that of spitting chewing gum on to the floor where it sticks and doesn't improve the quality of the floor. Evidence of this is being kept in the form of a five-pound honey pail almost filled with gum scraped from the floor.

Valentine Tea: Apron Shower By Trinity United Ladies' Aid

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Trinity United church was held yesterday afternoon at the Manse and took the form of a Valentine Tea and Apron Shower and was attended by a large number of the members and their friends. After the opening with the Lord's prayer in unison and scripture reading by Miss Moad, the roll call was answered with a favourite dessert. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting and the presentation of several reports, the business included setting the date of April 8th for the bazaar. A letter was read from the Sunday school thanking the Ladies' Aid for a handsome donation toward the funds.

The programme consisted of a reading by Mrs. Tait and musical numbers by eight High school girls. The president, Mrs. McElheran, thanked Mrs. Tait for the use of her home, also all who had helped in any way to make the meeting so successful. Refreshments were served by the committee, whose convenors were Mrs. Tait and Mrs. King.

Village Council Announces Relief Plans For Winter

The Village Council passed a resolution at the meeting Tuesday evening for the regulation of relief in the village this winter, in an effort to keep the problem in an orderly fashion. Seven points were contained in the resolution, the first being that no direct relief relief will be given unless the applicant produces a doctor's certificate that he is unfit for work. One dollar a week for food for two heads of a family with fifty cents for each dependent is the total allowed each family, with two dollars for fuel—and only to those having no other means of providing fuel. All recipients must sign the necessary relief certificate and single men will be allowed relief work only when they are the sole wage earners of the family. All must perform the labour as the relief officer directs. No relief money will be provided for rent or other shelter.

The only other business for the town fathers was the passing of the accounts and giving a grant to the Horticultural Society of $25, the same as in previous years. An application of the Citizens' Band for a grant to assist in training a large number of young boys was turned down.

Mrs. Andrew Balkwell Laid to Rest Yesterday

The burial took place yesterday afternoon in Maple Ridge cemetery of Mrs. Andrew Balkwell, of Pembroke, who before her marriage about a year ago was Erma Jean Beach, daughter of A. W. Beach and the late Mrs. Beach of Winchester, and was quite well-known to many Chesterville people. Mr. Balkwell is also well known here, having on several occasions been on the station staff of the C.P.R.

Mrs. Beach was 36 years old. She was an outstanding athlete and for three years had been captain of the Queen's Hockey team at Kingston, as well as taking an active part in sports in Ottawa where she was employed in the Civil Service prior to her marriage. Educated in Winchester Public and High schools, she was employed as clerk in the Bank of Nova Scotia before entering Queen's University, where she specialized in commerce. She worked for some time in Montreal before entering the Civil Service at Ottawa.

Surviving in addition to her father and husband is an infant son; one brother, Fay Beach, of Moosomin, Sask.; one sister, Mrs. Ira Shaver, of Mountain township.

CANADA'S "SWEET TOOTH" SHOULD LEAN TO HOMELAND.

CANADA'S Juliets have a very "sweet tooth" if the consumption of candy is any criterion and their Romeos apparently take pains to satisfy the craving for, in the twelve months ending October, 1937, in imported confectionery alone, the substantial total of $838,917 was spent.

The children, whose passion for candy is stronger than their interest in homework, for example, are also generous buyers of the toothsome morsels which come from abroad, and according to the National Produced in Canada Association, in a statement released today, the Romeos and the children could, with their parents, do their own country a service by showing more preference for candies that are produced in Canada.

"Canadian men and women are employed in making candy, just the same as they are in producing other goods, and when we spend more than three-quarters of a million dollars on candy alone, in foreign countries, it means that there is a lower demand for the confectionery that is produced in the Dominion. Automatically, with a lower demand, there is less call for the services of our own people. And it is the fathers and mothers who eventually are affected by the spending habits of their children or their sons who are very much concerned with future plans for marriage and the noble experiment in which two try to live as cheaply as one."

TRUCKS ON THE BACK CONCESSIONS.

The Huntsville Forester.

EVIDENCE submitted to the Chevrier Commission on truck haulage in Ontario brings to attention the profound changes in the structure of rural economy which the truck has effected during the past short score of years. The carrying of goods by motor vehicles has become an integral necessity to farming districts which used to be considered hopelessly isolated from most markets. Urban communities also in the well-known "back concession" territories have found in the truck the answer to both their export and import problems. Out of some 4,000 communities in Ontario, more than 2,000 are not served by railways and it is to these that the truck is a particular boon. In an age when transportation is the touchstone of success for any locality, the truck is performing a service of much greater importance for rural areas than most people realize.

In many back-country farming districts and in half the urban communities of the province there is no competition between the truck and the railway for the obvious reason that the railway is not a factor of transportation. There is no railway; but there is a truck. The truck has transformed many of those places, bringing them at one great bound into the course of trade.

Part of the task of the Transportation Commission is to study the relationship between truck and railway haulage. This is in some parts of the province a chore of considerable magnitude. The railways are a prime necessity, but so are the trucks. We have too many railways, but we have also too many trucks. Towns and cities owe much of their importance to railways, but to an increasing extent they spend on trucks. The two forms of transportation compete in some regards, but they are in many more regards complementary, the trucks supplementing the freight and express train as an added service in the rapid transmission of goods. Where railways run, the Commission's task in adjudging the possibilities of co-ordination between train and truck is not easy, but in those wide "back-concession' 'areas where there are no railways, there is no problem except to ensure that the new prosperity of the farmer and small townsman be not impaired by shackling legislation imposed upon the truck.

EVEN YOUR BEST IS WORST IN DRIVING.

"THINGS happen when you least expect them," is a good old adage. And if you think it isn't, just glance at the latest summary of motor accidents which shows that all the logic and order of man's world really seem to be reversed on the highway. For instance:

Novice drivers figure in a far smaller proportion of mishaps than those with the amount and kind of experience that should keep them out of accidents.

Cars in good mechanical condition participate to a greater degree than inferior ones in accident mêlée constantly being staged on the streets and highways of the country.

Drivers in good physical condition are involved in more accidents proportionately than those who are handicapped by the absence of a limb. by poor hearing or by some other physical shortcoming.

Good weather produces a larger quota of highway death and destruction than bad.

The best highways and the widest steets are more dangerous than the rough, narrow and curving street or road.

Most accidents happen when cars are being driven in a straight-ahead position.

It doesn't seem to make sense, but there is the accident analysis to prove it. With respect to driver experience, of 40,000 mishaps analyzed, 97-plus per cent were caused by drivers with one year or more experience in driving. The records indicate, really, that the whole accident situation would be a great deal improved if there were some way to leave the highways entirely to drivers with from three to six months' experience.

The driver of a car in poor mechanical condition does figure in accidents at times. Apparently, however, there is a degree of awareness on the part of most such drivers that tends to hold their driving within the limitations of the car's condition. So much is indicated in that fact that 93.1 per cent of vehicles involved in accidents were in apparently good mechanical condition. That leaves but 6.9 per cent to the discredit of the unfit car.

LET YOUR LIGHT SO SHINE.

Petrolia Advertiser-Topic.

THE Hanover Post tells about a church which decided to discontinue publishing a list of its contributors at the end of the year, but the term was only half completed when the offerings had fallen off so alarmingly, that it was decided to cancel the resolution and again issue a list of contributions. Secure in the knowledge that nobody would know how much they gave to the church, many members had straightway reduced their givings, but, when it was announced that this secrecy would no longer obtain, they brought their contribution up to a respectable total.

An Irish sheriff court usher, being ordered to clear court, did so by this announcement:

"Now then, all ye blackguards that isn't lawyers must leave the coort."

Frankie: "Dad, what do you call a man who drives a car?"

Dad: "It all depends on how close he comes to me, my boy."

COSTLY EXTRAS

For 62 years doctors have been coming daily to this Hospital to donate their time without charge. During the past year over three score of them donated 40,000 hours of work to the task of giving sick and injured children the very best chance for the recovery of health and happiness.

Crippled? Deformed? Hurt in an accident? Suffering from Disease? Just "yes" to any of these questions has always opened the doors of this institution to children in need of hospital care.

No distinction has ever been made in respect to race, creed or circumstances.

The Provincial and Municipal Governments each contribute a fixed amount per day for those who cannot pay. But these grants do not contemplate the cost of medicines, operating rooms, oxygen, X-rays, plaster casts, anaesthetics, special diets and extra nursing—and they do not provide for the cost of many, many other necessary items.

Each year we depend on public subscriptions to cover these extra costs. Won't you help this very worthy cause?

Please send your gift direct to 67 College Street, Toronto. We employ no canvassers.

Life Memberships Presented By St. Andrew's Societies

On Sunday evening the service in St. Andrew's church was under the direction of the Women's Missionary Society. The minister, Rev. George Extence, opened the service and then gave it over to the W.M.S. president, Miss Jamieson.

Following the Doxology, Mrs. Geo. Crawford, Mrs. Jas. Campbell and Miss Mary David gave New Year poems, followed by the hymn "Standing at the Port of the Opening Year." Scripture reading was taken by the president from St. Matt. xxv:1-13. A very fine Bible study paper was given by Mrs. J. A. Munro, and Mrs. Smirle offered prayer. Miss Georgina Cameron received a Junior membership certificate from the Sunshine Mission Band, awarded for perfect attendance. Dorothy Liscumb read the address, Doreen McLean presented the certificate and Susie Liscumb presented the pin.

Laura David received a Junior membership certificate given to her as a coronation year gift of the W.M.S. Melba Perkins read the address, Agnes McNaul presented the pin, and Mrs. Stanley Fyke presented the certificate on behalf of the W.M.S.

Ruth Moore received a Junior membership certificate from the Mission Band for repeating correctly the 91st Psalm. This certificate was presented at the Mission Band Rally held in Winchester.

The McKay-Douglas Helpers Group presented Mrs. Wm. Perkins with a Life Membership Certificate, a coronation year certificate from their organization. Mrs. Lorne Marcellus, president, read the address and Miss Clara Heirnen, secretary-treasurer, presented the certificate.

The Women's Missionary Society awards a Life Certificate each year to an active worthy member, and Mrs. Jas. Campbell was chosen for 1937. Miss Jamieson read the address and Miss Agnes Rae presented the certificate, while Rev. Mr. Extence offered the dedicatory prayer.

The offering was presented by Mrs. K. Wood and Mrs. Harradine, and the choir sang an anthem, "When Jesus Comes to Reward His Servants," under the direction of Mrs. Smirle.

Miss Helen Scott gave a reading, and Miss Jamieson, on behalf of the senior auxiliary, thanked Mrs. Smirle, the choir, Rev. Mr. Extence, Session, McKay-Douglas group and the Mission Band and their leader, Mrs. R. J. Barrie, for their assistance and cooperation. Hymn 594 was sung, followed by an address by Rev. Extence, who introduced the pageant, "Ten Virgins, Five Foolish and Five Wise," presented by the McKay-Douglas group and assisted by members of the choir under the supervision of Mrs. Smirle. Those taking part were Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Geo. Crawfod, Mary David, Jean McLean, Gertrude Weegar, Clara Heirnen, Melba Perkins, Mrs. Lorne Marcellus, Peggy Fleming, Ethel Smirle, Messrs. Milton Shaver and Jas. Campbelil. The service closed with the benediction by Rev. G. Extence.

Addresses:

Mrs. Wm. Perkins, Chesterville.

Dear Mrs. Perkins,—It is the pleasure and privilege of the McKay-Douglas Group of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church to present a Coronation Life Membership Certificate to you, Mrs. Perkins, who received the unanimous vote of the group.

We deeply appreciate your ever-ready willingness to help the group on its way to future growth and prosperity. A Life Membership Certificate is a gift of honour, and love, and very often means sacrifice of the society that donates it. It is a fitting tribute for whole-hearted service fittingly rendered.

God gave His Son to the world and we humbly give this Coronation Life Certificate which represents the money that we have given to reclaim "The World For Christ."

We feel that you are indeed worthy to receive this certificate and we present it to you with our best wishes, and ask God's blessing to rest on you throughout the New Year.

McKay-Douglas Group of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Chesterville.

Chesterville, Ont., Jan. 30, 1938.

Mrs. Jas. Campbell, Chesterville.

Dear Mrs. Campbell,—It is the pleasure and privilege of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's church to present a Life Membership Certificate each year to one of its members. It was you, Mrs. Campbell, who received the unanimous vote of the auxiliary in 1937.

We would like you to know we appreciate your help in our auxiliary, that you are always ready to do smilingly your allotted share not only as Glad Tidings secretary but in all other departments and in all church organizations and the choir.

We realize fully how much you are needed in your home to help an aged mother and father, therefore for all your help to us we thank you. A function of any kind put on by anyone of the church organizations would not be a thorough success without Mrs. Campbell.

There are many virtues of service which the women of our auxiliary deem desirable in the contributions of its members. Most important is the donation of time. Unless time is given the work cannot go on. There is time required for service, time for prayer, and time for fellowship.

A Life Membership certificate is a gift of honour and very often means sacrifice to the auxiliary that donates it. It is a fitting tribute for whole-hearted service, faithfully rendered and graciously accepted by the auxiliary. God gave His Son to the world and we humbly give this Life Certificate which represents the money that we have already given to aid in reclaiming the "World For Christ."

We desire to confer upon you the finest honour within our power and we feel you are indeed worthy to receive this certificate, and we feel that the passing of the years will only deepen your interest.

It is our aim to spread the light of the Gospel of Christ to all the dark places of the earth and we present this certificate to you and ask God's blessing to rest on you throughout this and all future years.

"O Spirit of the Lord, baptize the nations far and near,
The triumphs of the Cross record and
The Name of Jesus glorify
Till every kindred call Him Lord;
And, Father, Thou who lovest all,
Hear them when they pray."

Dear Nellie,—

We, your friends, have gathered here this evening not only to spend a social hour, but to bid you a kind farewell as you go from our midst to begin your career as a nurse.

With every assurance you shall be missed from our community as a willing helper in both church and social activities, and to many of us

"Memories of our yesterdays shall blossom brightly too,
And in our hearts forget-me-nots are growing always for you."

Wishing you every success in the future, we ask you to accept this gift as a token of remembrance.

Leafs Display Fine Spirit

tying goal came surprisingly fast.

Andrews, Canadian redhead, and Hubert Harper went sent off for the first penalties at 17.38 after they had been bothering each other all period.

The rival goalies were unbeatable in the final even though both teams had advantages through penlties. Andrews drew his second penalty as he started swinging his fists on Shi Harper, and Foster sent both to the bench. A minutes later the Leafs had the advantage when Payette was sent off for tripping Bob Hitsman. Less than a minute after Shi returned he went back to the bench for taking Andrews for a ride as the big forward came into the defence. It looked as though tempers were flaring, but the players held their heads and kept play going at a burning speed.

The overtime started just as fast and it was not until 5.02 that Canadiens went into the lead after Labonne slipped away from Hubert Harper in the right corner and skated in on Fyke with a hard shot. The advantage lasted only a minute. Dob Plantz, Hitsman and Warrington took the play down, Dob shot from the blue line, Warrington raced in with Hitsman to secure the puck behind the net. Percy finally passed out to Dob and the game was tied 2-2.

At 8.18 Donihee scored on Labonne's assist as the Leafs began to lag under the pressure, and with but a half minute to go, Andrews put his team up 4-2 with Gault's help.

The teams:

Canadiens—Goal, Gamache; rd, J. Donihee 3; lf, Gault 4; centre, Payette 6; rw, Andrews 9; lw, Landriault 5; subs, Labonne 10, Moore 8, L. MacDonald, Bus Cameron 7, R. Baker.

Prescott has crowded the local boys from second place, and a win for the Leafs will keep them in the running. In their last home game, the Leafs put on a brand of power that startled the fans and if they turn in the same kind of a game tomorrow night, they should take the Fort Town boys for a ride.

LEAFS LOST LAST NIGHT TO PRESCOTT PANTHERS 7-0

Prescott Panthers crushed Chesterville's Leafs last night for the local team's fifth straight loss by a score of 7-0. The shut out was the second of this season and the first for Prescott.

Prescott scored twice in the second period where they were held by the Leafs until the last frame when the Panthers rammed in five goals. Fyke received a nasty blow on the arm that kept him out of the Leafs' nets for a few minutes, and Warrington was badly cut about the mouth with a high stick.

The last period counters were scored by Bennett and Black, two each, and Fisher.

The teams—Goal, Fyke; defence, M. Harper and P. Plantz; centre, F. Plantz; wings, Warrington and Hitsman; subs, Robertson, Pyefinch, Harper and McIntosh.

Prescott—Goal, Cook; defence, Newsome and McConnell; centre, Frattura; wings, Fisher and Farmer; subs, Black, Bennett, Windsor and Auclaire.

Referee—A. Peterkin, Ottawa.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

HOT DISHES ON COLD DAYS.

IN THE WINTER, when the weather is cold, a hot dish of some kind is almost a necessity for supper. Cold salads and cold meats lose their appeal when the mercury is hovering around zero and below.

As the cook stove which burns wood or coal is usually kept going all the time in the winter, extra fires do not have to be made to prepare a scalloped or baked dish for supper.

CHEESE PUDDING.

½ cup bread crumbs
¾ cup grated cheese
1 cup milk
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt

Soak the crumbs in the milk, add cheese and egg yolks and salt. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the first mixture. Bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes and serve immediately on removal from oven.

If you think you are not serving sufficient raw vegetables, it is an excellent opportunity to serve a cabbage salad as the crispness of the cabbage is an excellent contrast in texture from the soft cheese pudding.

SAVOURY RICE.

2 cups cooked rice
4 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups tomatoes
¼ cup grated cheese grated pepper or pimento (if desired)
salt and pepper
½ cup buttered crumbs

Add cooked strained tomatoes and seasonings to the cooked rice. Add onions which have been fried slightly in the butter. Add grated cheese. Mix well and arrange in layers with the crumbs in a buttered scalloping dish or casserole. Brown in the oven. Serve hot with pickles or a meat relish.

MACARONI & CHEESE.

1 cup macaroni
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
few grains pepper
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups milk
1 cup grated cheese
1 cup buttered crumbs

Break the macaroni into one-inch pieces; wash; cook in a large amount of boiling salted water. When tender drain in a colander; pour cold water through. It is important to pour cold water over the cooked macaroni as this washes away any excess starch or flour adhering to it and so prevents it from becoming sticky and gummy. Make a white sauce by melting the butter, blending in the flour and seasonings and adding the hot milk slowly, stirring constantly to prevent lumping. When the white sauce has thickened, add the grated cheese and macaroni. Turn into a buttered baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs and brown in the oven.

This method of making macaroni and cheese is much better than placing alternate layers of macaroni and grated cheese in a baking dish and adding milk to it. If you have never tried the recipe I have suggested, you will be agreeably surprised by the improvement in flavour. It is well worth any extra trouble.

SCALLOPED HAM & POTATOES

6 potatoes
1 lb. raw smoked ham
3 cups milk
1 green pepper (may be omitted)
flour

Cover the bottom of a greased casserole or baking-dish with sliced, raw potatoes. Sprinkle lightly with flour and add one-inch squares of ham. Repeat these layers until the dish is full. Pour in the milk until it shows through the pieces of the potatoes near the top. Bake until the potatoes are tender, which will require about an hour and a half. The chopped green pepper adds flavour.

DEVILLED CORN.

2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon mustard
Paprika
2 cups canned corn
1 egg
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
buttered crumbs

Make a white sauce of the fat, flour and seasonings. Add the corn, slightly beaten egg, and the Worcestershire sauce. Pour into a buttered baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven 15 to 30 minutes.

Try to buy vegetables in season, as out of season they lack flavour, and are expensive.

Do not allow potatoes to stand in water after they are cooked. Drain at once and keep warm over hot water.

Save small amounts of left-over vegetables for salads, soups, fritters, croquettes or scalloped dishes.

If you add a few grains of salt to cream before whipping, you will find that the whipping process will be easier.

* * * *

When roasting meat and poultry, baste often to prevent burning and drying out.

* * * *

"THE PRAIRIE OPTIMIST."

Publication of a weekly newspaper, "The Prairie Optimist," at Gravelbourg, in the hard hit drought area of southwestern Saskatchewan, offers another illustration of prairie Boy Scout courage and persistence. The Rovers of the Gravelbourg Group, under the supervision of Rev. Fr. J. Branch, three years ago opened an amateur print shop, and began publishing "The Dry Belt Weekly." As a more appropriate name, the weekly has now become "The Prairie Optimist." Incidentally the shop has given a number of the Rover Scouts an opportunity to learn the printing trade, and several have graduated and secured positions elsewhere.

IROQUOIS MAN FACES CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

A charge of manslaughter has been laid against Arthur Osborne, Iroquois, by Provincial Constable J. Frank Rose, of Morrisburg, and will be heard in Magistrate's Court at Morrisburg today. The charge is the result of an accident on June 22nd last when a truck, driven by Osborne, crashed into a tree at the intersection of College and Mary streets in Iroquois, John Whittle of that place being killed.

Little Jeannie was watching some farm hands spreading out a stack of hay which was heating and might take fire. Why, after taking the trouble to build the stack they should be taking it to pieces, she could not understand. At last she asked politely: "Is it a needle you're looking for?"

Mother Nature Knows Best

A Condensation of the Nature Story of How Animals Cure Their Ills, Appearing in The Virginia Quarterly Review, Written by ARCHIBALD RUTLEDGE.

(The Literary Digest)

AS a plantation boy, I kept many wild creatures as pets. One of these was the fawn of a whitetail deer. One day a barbed wire fence tore an ugly gash in its side. I cleansed the wound with carbolic water and bandaged it. But my patient pulled the bandage off, and carefully licked the hair away from the injured place, exposing it fully to the air and sunlight. He took entire charge of his own trouble and shortly healed himself.

Birds and animals appear to know just what herbs will cure what ills. The Indians and our ancestors learned the rudiments of medicine by observing what plants were sought out by animals suffering from wounds, fever, alimentary disturbances; by watching a bear grubbing for the roots of fern; by noting how the wild turkey, during a rainy spell, compels her babies to eat the leaves of the spicebush; by seeing a wolf, bitten by a rattler, confidently chewing snakeroot!

We may wonder why carrion birds are not infected by their food. But nature has supplied the vultures with heads that are practically featherless; they scrupulously clean their huge beaks; and, further, the vulture is the only bird known to me which will select a high place exposed to the sun and sit there with wings extended for the purpose of cleansing his feathers. The manner of the bird's life calls for especial caution in sanitation, and he takes it.

Both birds and animals bathe regularly to rid their bodies not only of parasites but of possible sources of infection. These baths are of many varieties—water, sun, mud, dust. In the Yellowstone, old grizzly bears use the hot sulphur baths, which may alleviate the aches and pains incident to old age. It is almost a daily habit of such game birds as the quail, ruffed grouse and wild turkey to take dust baths to discourage insects.

Birds and animals that are injured are inclined to act swiftly and unerringly. If caught in a trap, or so injured that a leg dangles because of a broken bone, they do not hesitate to perform an amputation. When I was a boy I set a steel trap in our lettuce garden. The next morning I found a mother rabbit crouched beside the trap, in which was one of her babies; she was amputating his foot to free him. I have never since set a steel trap.

More remarkable than the heroic self-amputation of a limb is the care given the wound. A muskrat will completely cover such a wounded part with hemlock gum, thus excluding dirt and germs that might lurk in the water in which he swims. Bears also smear their wounds with spruce or hemlock resin, and occasionally with clay. But I never knew a muskrat to use the latter. He knows that water would dissolve it. The orang-outang, the chimpanzee or the gorilla, when wounded, will attempt to staunch the flow of blood with its hands, and will then close the hole with packings of astringent aromatic leaves.

Some birds seem aware of the necessity for keeping a broken wing in "splints" I have seen a wild gobbler wth a broken wing lie down in a certain position, and with his bill adjust his wounded member, trying to keep it in the proper position for knitting. This break knitted completely, though the wing did not have the same angle as the other. Among woodsmen it is well known that a woodcock with a broken leg will apply to the injured member a splint of clay, sometimes reinforced with fibrous roots.

I used to have a flying squirrel in a large cage. One night she caught a foreleg in a crack, and in her frantic efforts to escape, she broke it. For several days she lay with her injured paw in the same position. She who had been vividly active suddenly became passive, intent on the great aim of healing herself. And this she did by being absolutely quiet and, I think, hopeful.

When a wild creature is injured it first seeks solitude and complete retirement. Then, besides giving scrupulous attention to its external wound it takes internal care. It may induce vomiting; it will almost certainly take a laxative. Members of the canine and feline families, when below par or in physical distress, eat green grass. Wild bears eat berries and roots that are cathartic in their effect. The ungulates rarely need a laxative, but they do sometimes need medicine that has the opposite effect. This they find in the tender bark and twigs of trees that are rich in tannic acid.

An animal with fever always hunts up an airy, shady place near water, and remains quiet, eating very little and drinking often until it recovers. On the other hand, a rheumatic animal always hunts the hottest spot it can find in the sunlight and soaks up all the heat possible.

With the changing seasons, when their systems require certain adjustments, some unerring instinct causes birds and animals to change their diet. For example, in the South, where there are great dredge-cuts left by phosphate mining, buck deer will travel miles to drink that water, which is rich in lime. They need lime for horn growth.

All female birds need lime to form eggshells; and it is a common thing to see even birds of the uplands in mating season resort to places where shellfish are found. They have to have lime and they know where to get it.

When sick or wounded, wild creatures resort to the ancient remedies of nature: medicines, pure air and complete relaxation. While I marvel over their capacity to heal themselves, my greater wonder is reserved for the majestic faith with which they undertake their self-healing.

MAKING A GOOD INDIAN

EXCEPT for John Cook, a friend of their former Eastern home, the Perris young people were alone on the ranch, and were rather enjoying the experience. When Mr. Perris was away, Manuel Vallejo, the good-natured New Mexican who inspected the flumes of the irrigation company, usually kept an eye on things for him; for it was still in the eighties in Arizona, and in this valley families were few and scattered and the country was rough and wild. But today was the 16th of September, and Manuel had gone to observe the Mexican Fourth of July at a fiesta across the line.

The young people were harvesting the bean crop on a patch of the upper forty. Fred. Perris and his "chum," John, gathered and piled the dry bushes on muslin sheets and flailed them; Alice and the two younger children picked the white kernels out and put them in a sack.

The ranch buildings were half a mile away in the valley where there was some shade. At noon John and Fred took each a pail of water from the springs and, with Alice and the children, started for the house. They had to carry all their water from the springs, because the well, which had been sunk to a depht of eighteen feet near the house, had ended on bed rock with a shallow pool of brackish water. To drill that would have drained the Perris pocketbook.

At the bottom of the well John and Fred had found, above the bed rock, a stratum of sand in which there were indications of fine gold. In their spare moments they had raised some of the sand by a windlass and had washed it at the springs. There was certainly gold in it, and if water had been plentiful, they said jokingly, they would have had a mine on the place in no time.

Excavating the sand from the dry well had left a round, cavernous space at the bottom; the boys had followed one drift that led fifty feet and that came out on the arroyo near the stables. The opening there was a cleft in the rock only a few inches wide.

Chattering and laughing, they hurried down the dusty canyon road toward the cool house. But when they turned the point of rocks into the valley their laughter died. The ranch house, the stable, the granary and the outbuildings, the very haystack they had left half cut, were white and level stretches of ashes, hot and glowing in the wind. The tiny cottonwoods and the pinons that had stood near the little house were scorched and withered.

As the young people stood, white and horror-struck, too completely dazed to take in the full meaning of the destruction, a rifle shot rang out, and a bullet whirled up the ashes in a gray spiral.

On the hill half a mile away, a dozen riders appeared. One glance told the homeless family that they were Apaches.

Indians were plentiful in that region—the terrible raids of Geronimo were only just over. But lately the troops had carefully kept the Indians on the reservations. This was a swift and silent raid such as the Apaches usually planned. They had slipped out of the reservation to harry the valley ranches, sweep up all the cattle and horses and dash to the mountains, where the soldiers would be six months "rounding them up," if they were fortunate enough to catch them at all.

There came another shrill whistle of a bullet, some blood-curdling yells, and then seven of the Apaches came dashing wildly down the slopes.

The boys looked helplessly around. There was no place to hide, nothing with which to defend themselves. John carried a shotgun, but that would scarcely hold off seven Indians. There was no chance of escaping the mounted savages by fleeing.

"The old well!" Fred cried suddenly. "It's the only chance! John, take the crank. We can lower them to the bottom. Hurry, Alice, take May by the arm!"

With the boys stoutly blocking the speed of the windlass, Alice clung to the rope until she felt the rock bed under her feet Then she crawled into the opening under the ledge, from which the sand had been taken. Directly under the opening was the shallow pool of bitter water, so that anyone, looking down from above, would not at once notice the cave.

Fred Perris lowered his eight-year-old brother and then his friend. When he sprang over the curbing himself and seized the rope, the Apaches, with frightful yells, were coming on a hundred yards away. They fired from their saddles, and one bullet tore through the wooden box of the windlass just above Fred's head.

The boy landed with a jump, knee-deep in the water, and quickly joined the others under the ledge. The space which was almost dark, was not four feet high at its best. The bed rock was dry and cool.

Scarcely a minute passed before the Indians were at the mouth of the well. In the pool the children saw the broad, squat faces reflected as the Indians gazed in astonishment at the well bottom, apparently covered with water. There were guttural exclamations; then one man leaned over and shouted.

Little May began to whimper as the menacing voice reverberated through the cave, but Alice quickly buried the child's head in her lap. Lying stretched on the rock, they watched the uncertain reflections in the water of their cruel faces. Fred had both barrels of the shotgun cocked and ready.

The Indians held excited arguments above; they probably guessed now the well was hollowed, for presently they began to shoot at the edges of the bottom. The reports were terrifying in the close space. The big Remington bullets of soft lead smashed and glanced on the rock and tore the water, and the choking, pungent smell of powder drifted into the cave. Presently both the small children were crying in terror, while Alice bravely tried to quiet them.

When the Apaches had fired a dozen shots, they stopped and peered down through the drifting smoke. None of them apparently wished to venture down into the well. After a minute or two their faces disappeared from the rim of the well, and there was silence.

"They haven't gone," Fred whispered to John. "I've heard too many stories of their cunning; now we've got to watch them close for some trick!"

"If they find the drift to the arroyo," said John, "they'll try that."

"It's too small for anyone except a child to get through. And I don't believe they will discover it, anyway."

The drift hole was merely a narrow, crooked cleft under the masses of slate. The boys could see it now—a dim patch of light — at the farther end of the passage. But their attention was soon drawn back to the well, for the Indians had reappeared. Tearing away the well curbing and the windlass, the savages threw a mass of boards and brush over the opening. The fugitives now lay in total darkness. Fred crawled to his sister's side and put his arm around the small boy.

"Now don't be afraid, Allie," he said. "They're going to build a fire to roast us out, but they can't. You take the children and crawl back into the drift. There'll be some pure air coming in there and you can't be suffocated."

While Alice and the children moved as far as they could down the dark passageway. Fred and John lay and watched the rosy glow that was beginning to show in the pool. Pieces of burning grasses and wood began to fall sizzling into the water.

Presently the fire burst out brightly, and began to roar in the well top. Great chunks of flaming wood fell through, and the boys quickly seized the flaming brands and thrust them under the water. But while they were at this work, a mass of blazing wood dropped on John Cook and burned him painfully about the neck and hands. The boys quickly scrambled back—not a second too soon, for as they reached the shelter of the cave the whole burning mass fell down into the pool.

Choking fumes filled the space, and every moment the heat became fiercer. Gasping for breath, and nearly blinded by the acrid smoke, the boys had to retreat from their position and crawl toward the drift hole. But even at that end of the passage the atmosphere was suffocating.

The children began to scream in pain and fright; but luckily the noise that the Apaches were making as they threw burning wood and brush down the well drowned the cries of the fugitives.

Presently the Indians stopped throwing wood and brush down the well. The heaps of brush burned dully for a while and then smouldered down. The well became a glowing, ash-whitened cylinder, sending waves of scorching heat down the passage. After waiting a while Fred crawled over the hot rock to the well. Glancing carefully up between jagged parts of the wall, the saw two Indians peering down. He waited as long as he could, trying to learn what the Indians intended to do, but at last the heat from the smouldering ashes drove him back. He told the others what he had seen, and cautiouned Alice to keep the children quiet, for it was essential to make the Apaches think that they had all perished.

After a long wait, during which the cooling air revived them a little, they heard a scuffling in the well, and Fred once more crept forward to investigate.

An Indian was climbing down into the well. A lariat was about his waist and another savage standing above paid out the line, which others must have been holding. Round and round swung the Apache, catching a foot here and there, and glancing down curiously.

Then the Indian who was holding the rope changed his position. As he did so, he apparently stepped with his bare foot on a ledge covered with live coals, for suddenly with a wild yell of pain, he dropped the rope and sprang for the opposite edge. At that moment the man in the well had his foot on a projecting rock at the side, and the sudden slackening of the rope caused him to whirl and to pitch head-first to the bottom. He plunged shoulders-deep into the mass of ashes and water underneath.

Fred trained the shotgun upon him; but the man lay still, even though the hot embers were burning his bare back. His muscles were twitching in agony when Fred seized his shoulder and dragged him under the ledge.

At sight of the white boy, a great shout of surprise came from the Indians who had rushed to the side of the well. They had evidently been confident that everyone below was dead.

"Take the gun, John!" Fred shouted. "Let them see that we're not hurt at all"

John leaped forward, knelt on the savage's body and fired both barrels of the shotgun upward. Shouts of amazement followed the roar of his big gun. The boys waited anxiously, but the only sound they heard from above was that of a whispered consultation. Presently even that ceased, and there was absolute silence.

The prisoner, who was cut and bleeding, now began to move, and they tied him hand and foot with the lariat. Then, after waiting an hour for further signs from above, they crawled back to Alice and told her what had happened.

After another hour darkness began to fall. The Apache had revived and lay, watchful and sullen, in his bonds. He was very young, not more than fifteen years old apparently, although large of frame. He wore brass beads in his black, greasy hair, and was naked to the waist; and the blue drill trousers, held by a cartridge belt, were torn and old. He submitted to having his wounds dressed in stolid astonishment and lay in the long dark of the night in absolute silence.

When daylight came at last, Fred and John with much exertion scaled the rough well sides and cautiously peered out. The ashes of their little home were cold, and the place was deserted.

John climbed down again to guard the prisoner and comfort the children while Fred set off for a ranch house five miles away. He reached it at sunrise, to find the place deserted. He caught a horse, however, and rode to a cow camp, where he found the men discussing the swift foray of the Apaches. The Indians had robbed a half dozen ranches and killed eight persons the day before; but the troops who had set out instantly, were pressing hard.

The cowboys rode back to help the boys extricate the refugees from the well. Alice and the children were sent to the ranch of Mr. Perris' brother near Tuscon. John and Fred, however, lived in a tent on the home ranch with Mr. Perris until the crops had been harvested.

The military authorities held the young savage a prisoner for two years, and then sent him to the United States school for Indians in Pennsylvania. Eight years later he went back to Arizona to teach in a Protestant mission school, an educated, well-mannered and law-abiding aborigine.

Many an evening since then he has spent with his friends the Perrises rehearsing the fight at the well when the white boy dragged him, senseless and bleeding, from the fire. He still bears the scars from the burns upon his quiet, copper-coloured countenance.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

HEART BEATS.

THE menace of heart disease is brought home to us when some friend dies suddenly from this condition. More deaths occur from heart disease than from any other disease. Nevertheless, the picture is not as black as this statement would suggest. There is one bright spot, namely that the number of deaths from heart disease in early life are decreasing.

The increase in heart disease after forty-five is due, in part, to the fact that more people are now reaching adult life as a result of our better control of the diseases of early life. After forty-five, the body begins to show signs of wear and tear. The heart is one of the first organs to show such changes, and heart disease, in this case, is simply a wearing out of the organ.

Heart disease, other than the form that is due to actual old age, or to premature old age, is the cause of much suffering and of the cutting short of many lives. In order to prevent its ravages, we must consider what causes these cases, because the hope of prevention lies in the prevention or control of the causes.

Heart disease may follow any of the ordinary communicable diseases of childhood, such as diphtheria, scarlet fever or measles, but it is especially apt to occur after rheumatic fever, even of the mildest form. This means that if heart disease is to be avoided, all such cases of illness, no matter how mild the attack, must be carefully cared for, and before the little patient is allowed to go back to school or take part in games or active play, he should be given a thorough examination in order that the doctor may determine whether or not the heart is all right and that it is capable of meeting the strain of active life without injury.

The periodic health examination is of great value in detecting the early signs of any heart trouble. The doctor will discover any infected teeth, tonsils or head sinuses, which may be the focus from which the heart is being poisoned and damaged. He will also bring to light any unsuspected chronic disease, such as syphilis, which, if untreated, insidously undermines the heart and arteries. If the heart is damaged, the doctor will give advice on how to live so as to conserve the strength of the organ.

The correction of defects and the proper treatment of chronic infections will protect the heart from damage. Thus, the periodic health examination protects those who take advantage of a medical check-up at regular intervals, in order that they may keep well and not find themselves stricken by a heart condition which could have been detected and, at least, kept under control through medical supervision.

TRAPPING.

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

THE pages of Canada's early history are filled with the romance of the fur trade. As late as a century ago the value of our fur exports exceeded that of any other product. Hunting and trapping is still the chief occupation of 14,000 people, the majority of whom are Indians, as in former days.

Besides these, thousands of farm boys, stirred by stories of the adventurous north, set out traps in likely corners of the fields, woods, or ponds near home. Their catch is most often a muskrat, if we may judge from the two million sold in a year; squirrels next, to the number of more than a million; and half a million weasels. Mink follow and there is still a good chance (or should we say danger) of them finding a skunk in their trap. More than 100,000 of these are caught in a year, and those other two crafty chicken-thieves, the red fox and the prairie wolf, are next in number.

After these come the little animal that is most characteristically Canadian, and which in former days used to head the list. The beaver, still trapped to the number of 50,000 in a year, is now finding many protectors, chief among whom is Grey Owl, that great Canadian who is making it his life work to befriend the busy little builder that is emblematic of Canada.

The value of furs taken in the wild state last year was about nine million dollars.

Two minutes after the giant Falls View Bridge collapsed with a thundering roar into Niagara Falls gorge January 27th, a commentator went on the air to tell the news to listeners of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation from coast to coast. The broadcaster, Jack Kannawin, of the corporation's Toronto production staff, heard the crash from his nearby hotel room, hurriedly donned his overcoat and dashed to the customs building where the day before he had installed a microphone. The bridge collapsed at 4.15. Kannawin started speaking at 4.17.

Mainly About People

Mrs. H. G. Bigelow was among those present at the opening of Parliament in Ottawa last week.

Mr. Bert Colquhoun returned to his home on Monday after spending two weeks taking treatment at the General hospital, Cornwall.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Smith and Mrs. Langrell Belway visited on Tuesday with their aunt, Mrs. Mary Corley, who is seriously ill at Cardinal.

Mrs. Amelia MacMillan Lambkin has written The Record explaining why Mrs. Alice MacMillan Thurston was not heard in Rudy Vallé's programme as announced for two weeks ago. When Mrs. Thurston was accepted for Vallée's programme, Mrs. Lambkin was most anxious that the "old home town folks" would tune in on it but in the hurry to catch the air mail overlooked the fact that these programmes are made up weeks in advance and took it for granted Mrs. Thurston would be on the next one broadcast. However, she will be guest artist on one in the not-too-distant future, for which folks hereabouts will be anxiously tuning.

Mrs. Lambkin continues:

"You have never seen such a place as this (Hollywood) is. It is a hot-bed of performers, actors, screen writers, radio stars ,novelists from all over the world. They have all flocked in here from every direction. It is as entertaining as a circus to walk down the boulevard any time of any day and just view the types you meet. They look differently, act and dress and talk differently and really are a law and a life unto themselves.

"The weather here is quite wonderful. Californians tell us it is very unusual. We have had scarcely any rain and right now the oranges are being picked and packed. They are in abundance, and what a glorious sight for the Northerner."
