They Mourn Their Child.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Durant of the Boyne (near Chesterville) mourn the death of their little daughter, Hazel Greta, who died on April 15th, 1909, at the age of 1 year and 8 months. The cause of death was pneumonia after an illness of eleven days.

The funeral took place on the 17th, service being conducted in the Methodist Church, after which interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Dawson Beattie Injured.

Wednesday of last week while working at the Holiness grove, Mr. Dawson Beattie happened with a very unfortunate accident and which nearly cost him his life. As it is he has two ribs broken and internally hurt. At the time of the accident it was thought he could live only a few hours, but he is recovering slowly and prospects are held out for his recovery.

Hav You Bronchial Catarrh.

It is easily recognized by the dry cough and hoarseness. Not difficult to cure with Catarrhozone as Mr. Xavier Rabin, of River Capalin, Que., proved. "No one could suffer from bronchitis more than I did. I had a hard hacking cough that caused me great pain. My throat was hoarse, and I had great distress in my chest, Catarrhozone reached the sore spots and gave immediate relief. Since using it I have not had a single attack." Every physician who is asked about Catarrhozone says it is a sure cure, —so will you if you try it. Sold everywhere, 25c. and $1.00.

Barns Burned.

The barns and outbuildings on a farm owned by Johnston, about three miles northwest of Kemptville and occupied by John Burley, were burned to the ground early Monday morning with six cows belonging to the occupant. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It is understood there is no insurance.

Young Man's Brave Act.

While Eleanor Moorehouse, aged ten years, daughter of Mrs. Moorehouse of Morrisburg, was attempting Saturday evening to get into a punt at the wharf at that place in charge of Harold Murphy, 15-year-old son of Mr. E. L. Murphy, editor of the Leader, in order to cross to her home on the other side of the canal, she slipped into the water pulling young Murphy with her. The lad at once seized the girl and managing to grasp a projecting stone in the canal wall called for help. Mr. Fred H. Broder of the Molsons Bank, who was on the opposite side two hundred feet away heard the cries, and without stopping even to remove his coat, leaped into the water and swam across the canal. He was nearly exhausted when he reached the drifting punt, but succeeded in clamoring in when he rescued the two children from their dangerous position.

Cattle Importation.

A new order was issued Saturday regarding the importation of cattle and other articles from several of the United States. The importation of hay, straw or other fodder from the States of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Michigan, Maryland and Delaware, except as packing material for breakable goods is prohibited, and all hay, straw or other fodder imported from the above named states as above provided shall be burned by the consignee immediately on arrival at destination.

Two Years for Burglars.

For breaking into cottages on the river between Alexandria Bay and Gananoque, W. Robbins and W. Russell were sent to the Kingston penitentiary for two years. The judge tempered justice with mercy, on account of a largely signed petition, telling of the previous good character of the prisoners.

Shrubb Beat Indian.

Before a gatheridg of upwards of 5,000 spectators at the M. A. A. A. grounds at Montreal on Saturday, Alfred Shrnbb, the English runner, made good his oft repeated claim to superiority over Tom Longboat, the Indian, at a distance of fifteen miles. Shrubb won by about 550 yards, a little less than a iap of the M. A. A. A. track, in tbe fast time of 1 hour, 23 minutes and 57 seconds, wnile Longboat finished out the distance in 1 hour 25 minutes and 56 seconds.

The Englishman's time, it is claimed, is the fastest ever made for fifteen miles in America, but is 3 minutes and 52 2-5 seconds slower than the world's record, established by Fred Appleby at Stamford Bridge in 1902. It was 2 minutes and 15 seconds faster than Shrubb's time in his fifteen mile race against St. Yves in New York last month, and that was the fastest fifteen miles reeled off since the present professional running craze started.

Grand Excursion to Ottawa.

Remember the grand excursion over the C. P. R. to Ottawa, via Kemptville Junction on Wednesday, June 2nd, under the auspices oi the Winchester W. C. T. U. for Hotel fund. Fare from Avonmore $1.15, Finch $1.10, Chesterville $1.05. Arrangements have been made with the Ottawa Electric Co. to carry passengers to Brittania-on-the-Bay, where there are splendid facilities for picknicking, boating and other amusements. Come along, bring your lunch baskets and have a day's outing at this famous resort. Train leaves Avonmore 7.25 a.m., Finch 7.35, Chesterville 7.46. Returning leaves Union Depot, Ottawa, 8 p.m. For full particulars see posters.

After American Poachers.

Gananoque, May 8.—Inspector Toner within the last six days has made four seizures of American fishing and shooting goods. On Monday he came in with a skiff containing two decoys, two hamerless guns, field glasses and sundry other articles. On Wednesday one skiff and eight hundred pounds of fish. On Thursday two cases of hoop nets; to-day he brought in three miles of night lines with thousands of hooks, which were just set and had only one sturgeon on it, and one skiff. Canadians are complaining of Americans fishing id the St. Lawrence.

Mr. Dixon Leaving Town.

Mr. Jacob Dixon, who has been a resident of this place for a number of years and conducted a livery stable and lumber yard, has decided to move away. A couple of weeks ago he took a trip west and on his return began to arrange for removal. He intends locating about a hundred miles from Edmonton and will follow the ranching, livery and sales stable business. Mr. and Mrs. Dixon are good citizens and Chesterville will be sorry to lose them. While some of the family have already gone the remainder intend leaving in a few days. We wish them every success.

Morrisburg-Ottawa Electric Line.

The Morrisburg-Ottawa electric railway is a certainty unless something very unexpected happens. The right of way of the roads in each of the municipalities through which the line will pass has been obtained. A meeting was held at Morewood recently when Messrs. C. M. Willard, J. H. Loughridge, B. Loughridge, W. M. Loughridge, J. W. Bogart, R. Merkley and John McFarlane were appointed directors. Mr. John McFarlane is the only Ottawa director. The surveyors will start work at once laying out the line and the grading will be completed next fall in order that the rails can be laid as early as possible in the spring. Options have been obtained for electric power from Morrisburg, but the company will endeavor to buy a water power in the vicinity of Ottawa and develop its own electricity. Stock enough to float the project has been subscribed by farmers along the route and a New York firm has taken over the selling of the bonds. Nearly all the municipalities along the route have bonused the new undertaking.

Toronto's Boy Singer.

Toronto, May 8.—Master Wilfrid Morrison, the boy singer of All Saints' Church choir, Toronto, has accepted an offer from a New York concert company of $500 per week to travel between New York and San Fransisco and thence to Australia, the engagement to cover one year, with the option of signing for two years. On April 22, Wilfrid sang at the Julian Walker testimonial benefit concert in Carnegie Hall, New York, and, to use the words of the press in their comment of his work, "he electrified the audience by his striking rendition of 'May Morning.'"

Chesterville Public Library.

A meeting of the Chesterville Public Library Board was held on April 30th in C. W. Casselman's office.

Members present: S. Robinson, F. McCloskey, H. Wallace, W. G. Bolster.

The following motions were carried.

Moved by F. McCloskey, seconded by H. Wallace, that S. Robinson take the chair.

Owing to the removal of Mr. Wallace the next order of business was the appointment of a new treasurer.

Moved by F. McCloskey, seconded by W. G. Bolster, that the new manager of the Molsons Bank be elected treasurer.

Moved by F. McCloskey, seconded by W. Wallace, that W. B. Lawson, W. A. Brown and O. D. Casselman be a committee (with power to add to their nnmbers) to purchase new books for the library and also to appeal to the Government for assistance for the same.

Moved by W. G. Bolster, seconded by W. Wallace, that S. Robinson, F. McCloskey, W. A. Brown, be a commitee to investigate in prices, etc., of books, cases and report at next meeting.

Moved by F. McCloskey, seconded by W. Wallace, that S. Robinson, W. G. Bolster and W. M. Saucier be a committee to look after an entertainment for the benefit of the Public Library.

The meeting then adjourned.

Have You Stomach Trouble.

When you wake up with headache and bad taste in the mouth something to settle the stomach is needed. That dull, heavy feeling must be lifted, and appetite must be created. Get a tumbler of water some sugar, and then pour in a stiff dose of Nerviline. You'll feel tip top in a few minutes. Nervlline invigorates, braces, tones, puts vim, and snap into your own movements. You'll feel fitted for a hard day's work by taking Nerviline—nothing better. Large bottle, 25c. everywhere.

Died In Church.

Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock Mrs. Timothy Hanrahan, of Renfrew, who was at devotions in St. Franeis Xavier church, fell dead while seated in one of the pews She expired without uttering a word. The cause of death was acute indigestion from which Mrs. Hanrahan had been a sufferer for some time. Deceased, who was about sixty-five years of age, is survived by a family of sons and daughters. Her husband, who died a number of years ago, had an equally sudden summons.

A VALUABLE WEED.

The Teasel That Is Used to Raise the Nap on Cloth.

Our readers who never saw a teasel (spelled also teazel and teazle and even tassel) can imagine a fir cone or "swamp cattail," set all over with little stiff hooks. It is the bur (or tassel or flower head or thistle top) of the plant dipsacus, and so identified is it with cloth dressing that this use of it gave it its botanical name, Dipsacus fullonum, or fuller's teasel.

However familiar to people who live in lands where the teasel is extensively grown the fact may be that the prickly heads of that plant are universally used to raise the nap on cloth, a multitude of persons in his country probably never heard of it and will be astonished to learn in what enormous quantities the plant is raised.

In France alone several thousand acres of land are exclusively devoted to the cultivation of the teasel. French manufacturers use many thousand dollars' worth of the prickly heads and export thousands of tons of them, valued at perhaps millions of dollars. Hundreds of tons are produced in Austria, England, Belgium, Poland and the Crimea.

The prickles of the teasel have a small knob at the end, and this, mounted on an elastic stem and set with great precision on the central spindle, affords a little brush, such, it is said, as the utmost mechanical skill has never been able to rival, at all events at the same price.

A LOST MINE.

The Tragic Legend That Is Associated With Bald Mountain.

The legend of a lost mine has given to Bald mountain, in Placer county, Colo., a fascinating interest for prospectors. Tradition is that early in the fifties of the last century three men disappeared from an immigrant party going over the old Gap trail. Search for them was without avail, and they were finally reported dead by the searchers.

Where or how they wintered no one knows, but the following spring, ragged, shoeless and demoralized, they filed into Michigan Bluff. Their blankets were converted into sacks, and with them they brought gold dust to the amount of $10,000 or $15,000.

Spending but a single night within the confines of civilization and giving no information as to the location of their large claim, they were followed on their return trip, and a few weeks later their murdered bodies were found in one of the dreary canyons that scar the face of the desolate peak.

Since then many a man has sought this lost mine, but apparently its immunity is as certain as that of the treasure of Captain Kidd.

Pensive Butlers.

The fashion of building houses with the entrance doors practically on a level with the street gives the observing stroller on Fifth avenue some humorous glimpses of butlers on duty. In the house of one of the most fashionable families in town the butler can be seen standing behind the bronze grill and glass doors staring disconsolately out at the passing throng for most of the afternoon, while across the street from this house the same kind of an entranceway often discloses a glimpse of a functionary of the same class seated in a poetical attitude by a circular marble table, his head supported by his hand. Outside of a hospital they are probably the saddest looking men in New York.

Comparative.

"You think Jinks is a better conversationalist than Smith? Why, neither one of them ever says anything sensible."

"I know but it takes Smith longer to say it."

Then the Trouble Started.

The Husband—Well, say what you will, my dear, you'll find worse men than me in the world. The Wife—Oh, Tom, now can you be so bitter?—London Sketch.

Fair Warning.

Year after year an old farmer had listened in grim silence to the trains thundering by his land. Finally one day, his patience at an end, he dropped his plow and shook his fist at the passing express.

"Ye can puff an' blow all ye like, gol durn ye," he cried, "but I'm goin' to ride ye Saturday!"—Everybody's.

The Zones.

Teacher—How many zones are there? Small Boy—Six. Teacher—No; there are but five. However, you may name six if you can. Small Boy—Torrid, north temperate, south temperate, north frigid, south frigid and ozone.—Chicago News.

His Genius.

"Why do people think he's a genius? Nobody can understand what he's talking about."

"No, but he can make people believe that he does."—Exchange.

THE LUMINOUS HALO.

Psychic Explanation of an Oft Witnessed Phenomenon.

I was summoned one day to the Salpetriere in Paris to see a woman who lay in a bed in the dark. She was a woman whose body, nerves, brain, had been teased and tortured for years in psychic and occult experiment. What mental perturbation was racking that brain I did not know, and the physicians at her bedside did not know. With clinched hands and teeth and eyes open wide the woman lay there. Her breathing was irregular and not deep. What we saw was this: A luminous halo of a vague orange hue that circled her head, even as in the old pictures of martyred saints you see the heads mooned with faded gold. This halo was fluctuant. It came and went. It was a light that flickered, grew, faded, formed itself anew.

A miracle, this aureoled head?

If you want to call it that. Words are not of great importance. It was a miracle when it glowed around the head of a martyr tortured in the arena, so tortured by pain and fear that his dissociated psychic centers produced the phenomenon of the exteriorization of luminous energy.

Perhaps it were better to call it at once a miracle and a prescientific fact—a fact, that is, which is occult, but is in the way of becoming known.

I asked Dr. Frere what he thought of this miracle.

"I have often seen it," he said. The field of his experiments was the madhouse at Bicetre. There many neuropathic patients abide, and often in cases of severe headache or of religious ecstasy he has seen these fluctuant aureoles around the head.

"The rays are often twenty centimeters in extent, quite regular, forming a perfect aureole," he explained.

There is, then, a form of energy endowed with luminous properties emanating from the human body under certain conditions.—Vance Thompson in Hampton's Magazine.

THE LAND OF BIG GAME.

British East Africa as It Appears to the Hunter.

A brown village of thatched huts squatting in a trampled clearing of the forest and backed by thickset trees so closely laced with a living tapestry of woven green that the aching tropic sunlight can scarcely penetrate; slim, naked blacks slipping like shadows among the broad leaved bananas and rubber trees, staring furtively as your bearers file slowly past them; a lonely station far up or down river, where a haggard white man sits to receive tribute in the name of his trading company, marks an outpost of civilization in this jungle land. And through and under it all are the fevered glare of sunlight, the ceaseless drowsy whisper of the woods, the hot, dry scents of the parched earth, or, if the rains have come, all the land about will lie cloaked in steaming vapor, the sultry air as thick and humid as the air of a greenhouse at home. There you have the Kongo as the white man knows it—the Kongo or the jungle of Uganda. But all of this is only a part of what we have chosen to call and to picture as the dark continent.

For there, too, is the desert, widely different in all its aspects from Kongoland. On the slope of the rising ground that lifts from sea level at Mombasa and climbs to nearly 8,000 feet before it drops again to the lesser level of Victoria Nyanza is another vast waste as typical of Africa as this jungle country—the desert, as it is called, the plains of bush and grass. Six months of the year—from October to April—it lies half drowned under tropic rains. From April to September only occasional showers fall, and the wide plateau grills under the staring sunlight, all yellowing in the glare. Here upon these uplands is found the great variety of big game, the vast herds of wild things that have made and still make Africa the greatest shooting country in the world. This is British East Africa as the hunter knows it.—C. B. Taylor in Everybody's.

An Alibi.

The milkman stood before her nervously twirling his hat in his hands.

"So," she said sternly, "you have come at last."

"Yes, madam. You sent for me, I believe," he replied.

"I wished to tell you that I found a minnow in the milk yesterday morning."

"I am sorry, madam, but if the cows will drink from the brook instead of from the trough I cannot help it."

A Queer Dish.

A great dish at Egyptian harem feasts is that of a lamb roasted whole. After the manner of a nest of Chinese boxes, each smaller than the other, the lamb is stuffed with a whole turkey, the turkey with a chicken, the chicken with a pigeon, the pigeon with a quail and the quail with a becafico, the smallest bird known, except a humming bird. The lamb is roasted over a slow fire until it is almost ready to fall to pieces.

MRS. LILLIAN MASSEY TREBLE

A Life of Consecration to Humanity.

In Leigh Hunt's beautiful poem "Abou Ben Adhem," where the angel wrote on the tablet the names of the world's great ones, because Abou Ben Adhem loved his fellow-men, his name led all the rest. On the tablet of the world's remembrance, surely high place belongs to those who have consecrated their lives to the betterment of humanity; who were great not for what they possessed but for what they gave, not for what they absorbed but for what they radiated, not for what they became but for what they helped others to become.

Among the Canadian women who have made philanthropy a living, vital atmosphere of helpfulness rather than a mere theory of living, the name of Lillian Massey Treble deserves high praise. Born in 1854, in Newcastle, Ont., the only daughter of the late Hart A. Massey of Toronto, who was the inspiration and impetus to some of the Dominion's most important industries and institutions, from her earliest moments she has lived in the atmosphere of wealth. Her fine mind was given additional strengthening and refining under the best instructors, and later in that best of schools—foreign travel—where observation is the teacher and the many new cities and countries but new school-rooms. The heiress of great estates, she consecrated herself and her wealth to the good of the world.

Her earliest work in the Fred Victor Mission in one of Toronto's neglected quarters, soon convinced her that the primary source of good or evil in most instances is the home; that the greatest good to humanity must come from preventing evils, not from curing them, and from building up higher ideals of life and living. The first step in this work of regeneration was in the organization of domestic science classes in connection with the missions. Then came the demand for a higher class of teachers, alive to their duties and their privileges; this led to the founding of the Lillian Massey School of Household Science and Art. In this institution the work of training women for the home, so that they may make homes a great power for good in themselves and others, is the supreme aim of all the teaching. The course—literary, scientific, moral, practical—is all centered in making woman more efficient for the responsibilities and privileges of woman's sphere.

In 1897 Miss Massey was married to John M. Treble of Toronto.

In 1897 Miss Massey [illegible] helpfulness of [illegible], but this made no difference in the intensity of purpose and [illegible] of her philanthropic life, constantly broadening into wider channels of usefulness. Her work as trustee of the Fred Victor Mission, honorary president of the Canadian Household Economic Association, vice-president of the Women's Council of Toronto and an executrix of her father's estate are but a few phases of her busy career.

With all the advantages of youth, education and good looks and no vocation other than the enjoyment of wealth, the hero of our present story chose rather to sacrifice his ease and comfort on the altar of his duty as a citizen. His city called him to save her from spoliation and corruption, and he responded to the call. To lure him from the path of right came the seductions of love and the claims of a revered parent's memory, allied with the mighty forces at the command of political and financial malefactors. The firmness with which "the man of the hour," singled out for the highest post in a great municipality by those who saw in him only a weakling and a tool, resisted the very forces that had elevated him for their own purposes to official power will be an inspiration to the reader, as it has been an uplifting force in the minds of thousands who have witnessed its theatrical representation.

"You didn't write it yourself, then?"

"I? Of course not! How could you think"—

"I didn't; I just wondered. Please see that the rumor is denied."

"Why should I? You are going to marry me some day, aren't you, Dallas?"

"Have I ever given you reason to think I would?"

"You have let me keep on coming to see you. You have"—

"I have told you that I don't care for you the way you want me to. I have great admiration and respect for you, but that is all. And it is not enough to marry on."

"It is enough for me. If I have your admiration and respect to start on I'll soon make you love me."

"You would be satisfied with so little?"

"Yes. Knowing I could in time win more. You aren't the sort of girl who could marry a man if she didn't respect him—didn't admire him. You"—

"Perhaps I couldn't marry such a man. But perhaps I couldn't help loving him."

"Your chances for happiness would be better with me. Oh, Dallas, you know I love you! You've kept me waiting so long! Is it fair to either of us?"

"I hesitate because I want to be fair to [illegible]th. For that reason I must still ask you to wait."

"But I've waited so long! Tell me one thing: Is there any one else that"—

Steps, none too light, clattered down the stairs, and into the library bounced a lad in tennis flannels. He was tall, well set up and good to look at and seemed always to have stepped directly from a bandbox and to have had extremely recent acquaintance with much soap and water.

"Hello, Dallas!" he shouted, encompassing his sister in a bear hug. "How soon are"—

"Here's Mr. Gibbs, Perry," Dallas reminded him as she emerged, somewhat crumpled, from the embrace. "Have you"—

The lad's manner underwent a lightning and frigid change.

"Oh, good morning!" he grunted, with a curt nod to the visitor, and, picking up a paper, turned to the sporting sheet and became immersed in its contents, oblivious of all else.

"Mr. Gibbs is only spending one day with us," admonished Dallas, trying to soften her young brother's rudeness.

"Hope he'll enjoy it," came in absent tones from the depths of the paper.

Gibbs rose.

"I'm going out for a cigar on the terrace," said he. "I'll join you a little later."

"Perry," scolded Dallas as soon as the broker disappeared through the long windows, "how could you treat a guest of uncle's so rudely?"

"I don't like the fellow. And I don't like what I read in the paper today about him and you. Gee, what a measly paragraph! It's enough to make a white man want to dash out his brains with a cigarette. You're going to deny it in time for the retraction to get into tomorrow's papers, aren't you?"

"I—I'm not quite sure."

"Good Lord!" gasped Perry, slumping down in the nearest chair. "Are you crazy? Say, if you are looking for a real good, exciting match why don't you marry a Wall street stock report? It'd be better 'n Gibbs. If you marry him you'll only be an 'also ran' with the ticker tape and the market news. Oh, keep out of it, old girl! You owe something to your intelligent and distinguished little brother. If you've got to commit matrimony, marry some one I like, can't you?"

"I haven't given him a definite answer yet," admitted the girl, a little touched by the real feeling that underlay her brother's flippant words.

"That's good medicine. Confidence restored and the run on Brother's Emotions is checked. Next time you get the marry bee I have a dandy candidate to suggest for the job."

"Who?" laughed Dallas, amused in spite of herself.

"Alwyn Bennett!"

"How silly!"

"Not on your life! Words of wisdom from the young—that's what it is. Go ahead and marry Bennett. Be a sport and say 'Yes.' Why don't you want to marry him?"

"For any one of a million reasons. First of all, he never asked me to."

"Maybe he's scared to. But if he wasn't stuck on you he wouldn't be hanging around here every day and going everywhere with you the way he does. I'll bet $9 he's"—

"Mr. Bennett!" the butler announced. Brother and sister stared guiltily at each other.

"Speaking of angels"— muttered Perry. But Dallas had already turned to welcome the visitor.

Alwyn Bennett at first glance had little to distinguish him from the average good looking young man about town. But a closer observer would have noticed a firmness about the shapely mouth, an honesty and strength of purpose about the eyes, a general air of latent power that lay unawakened beneath the jolly, purposeless exterior. No crisis had yet called forth any special manifestation of this power, and meanwhile Bennett was content to loaf through an existence that thus far had been decidedly pleasant. The only son of a widowed mother who advised and spoiled him, more than comfortably well off from the great fortune amassed by his dead father, possessed of a social position unassailable and equally fortunate in that mysterious quality that spells popularity—all these gifts had saved Alwyn Bennett the trouble of fighting life's battle or showing who might be within his reach.

"Good old Bennett!" hailed Perry. "We were just talking about you."

Dallas Wainwright.

"Good!" answered Alwyn. "Anything is better than indifference. What were you saying about me?"

"You tell him, Dallas!" grinned the boy.

"Be quiet!" whispered his sister, flushing with vexation.

"Then I'll tell for myself," went on Perry gleefully. "I was just asking her"—

Seeing the girl's confusion, Bennett quickly changed the subject by interrupting:

"My mother will be over here in a few minutes, Dallas. She is bringing along a guest of ours, who says you and she were chums at school—Miss Garrison."

"Cynthia Garrison! Oh, I'll be ever so glad to see her again! I"—

"I know who she is!" cried Perry, refusing to be snubbed. "They say she's a gorgeous looker. When her kennel was under the hammer I bought in her two pet Boston terriers, Betty and Prince. Maybe that won't make me solid with her, eh? Well, I guess. All I ask is a start, and you'll find a whole lot of cripples slower than I'll be. If they're walking over I might wander out, sort of aimless-like and happen to meet 'em. Maybe that's a bum idea? Good old me!"

Full of his Machiavellian scheme, the lad bolted through the long window and was gone.

"Dallas," began Bennett, without preamble, "you must surely know why I'm here today. You've seen that paragraph in the"—

"I have seen it," she answered quietly.

Taken aback by her manner, Bennett hesitated an instant; then asked nervously:

"The—the rumor isn't true, Dallas? Tell me it isn't."

"Why shouldn't it be true?" she countered perversely, as though not wholly sorry to witness the new look her words called to his face. The look deepened as Bennett continued:

"You don't love Gibbs? Surely you don't love him?"

"I"—

The French windows swung wide, breaking off her reply.

CHAPTER II.

ALWYN BENNETT turned sharply toward the window, angry at the interruption, but Perry Wainwright, ushering two ladies in from the veranda, met his scowl with a wink of triumph.

"Not so bad, eh?" called the boy. "Met them as they were turning into the drive. You see"—

"Oh," observed the younger of the two women—a pretty, flower faced girl who since her entrance into the room had been engaged in exchanging delighted greetings with Dallas. "So you came to meet us? You said you just happened"—

"Did I?" asked Perry in deep amazement. "Well, well! The fact is, I wanted to do something startling in honor of meeting you, so I told my first lie. I"—

"Don't mind him, Cynthia!" laughed Dallas. "He's taken that way quite often."

"Oh, it's his usual pace, then?" queried Miss Garrison innocently. "I thought perhaps he was just warming up."

"And now," pursued Dallas, taking possession of Cynthia, much to Perry's disgust, "tell me all about yourself. Have"—

"There isn't much to tell. But there's going to be. I'm going to work."

"Work? What for?"

"For a living, of course."

"Not really."

"Yes, isn't it ridiculous?" broke in Mrs. Bennett, a sweet little old lady who now found her first chance to edge in a word amid the general volley of talk. "But Cynthia is set on doing it."

"Why shouldn't I? I haven't a dollar, and there's a theory that one must live."

"But what are you going to do?" asked Dallas.

"I don't know. I have a pretty good education. I shall find something. I—Dallas, I think your brother is giving us a high sign of some sort."

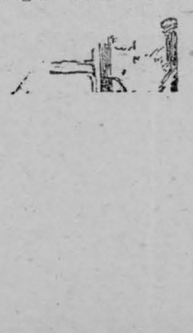

"I am!" declared Perry. "I just wanted to tell you there's a surprise waiting for you. Two surprises in one kennel. Want to see 'em?"

"What is he talking about?" queried Cynthia, appealing to Dallas for light on the mystery.

"About Betty and Prince Charlie," retorted Perry, "Your two Boston terriers that I bought. Want to see 'em?"

"Oh, the darlings! Of course I do. Where are they?"

"Come along and I'll show you. 'The darlings,' eh? Talk like that makes me wish I was a dog."

"Don't despair," suggested Cynthia. "Maybe you'll grow."

Perry followed Miss Garrison from the room.

Still puzzling vaguely as to the meaning of this cryptic utterance, Perry followed Miss Garrison from the room, a grin of satisfied ambition wreathing his tanned face.

"To think of poor little Cynthia having to go to work!" sighed Dallas, looking after them. "One would as soon think of putting a butterfly into harness. Is it true she has no money left?"

"I'm afraid it's only too true," answered Mrs. Bennett. "Her father lost everything in speculating. He was cashier of the Israel Putnam Trust company and afterward president. He"—

She paused as the office door opened and Thompson, the secretary, came into the room. At sight of Mrs. Bennett he seemed about to turn back; but, changing his purpose, crossed to the table and began to look for some documents he had failed to gather up.

"What was the rest of the story about Mr. Garrison?" asked Dallas, really interested in the older woman's recital.

Thompson's papers slipped through his fingers and went skidding across the polished floor. The others looked around in surprise.

"Excuse me!" muttered the secretary as he stooped to gather up the documents. "Very awkward! I'm sorry."

He went on arranging the scattered papers in his usual unobtrusive silence, effacing himself from the general talk.

"You were telling me about Cynthia's father," said Dallas.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Bennett, taking up the thread of her tale. "He was looked on as one of the most honorable bankers in the city. And so he was until his misfortune."

"Misfortune?"

"More misfortune than crime. His wife was a girlhood friend of mine, so perhaps I am prejudiced in his favor. A famous financier—a dear friend of his—induced him to make a very large loan that proved to be a mistake. He went to the financier for advice as to how to recoup the loss. The financier told him of an investment by which he could get all the money back without any risk and could make good the loan. Mr. Garrison took his advice, used the bank's funds for the purpose and—the investment proved worthless. The bank was insolvent. Mr. Garrison shot himself."

"Horrible! Horrible!" murmured Dallas.

"The 'horrible' part of the whole story came out later," said Alwyn Bennett. "It seems the financier had deliberately ruined Mr. Garrison and was on the other side of the deal by which the bank's funds were lost. In other words, he persuaded his friend to put money in what he knew was a losing venture, then took that money himself."

"He did it willfully," chimed in Mrs. Bennett, "knowing his friend would be ruined and that the bank's money which he lured Mr. Garrison into investing was going to swell his own ill gotten fortune."

"I did not think any one lived who could do such things," shuddered Dallas. "Poor Cynthia!"

"Cynthia suffered least of all," said Mrs. Bennett. "She was little more than a child at the time. Her mother died of grief, and her brother—a promising, clever young fellow just entering college—disappeared."

"Deserted Cynthia?"

"Not so bad as that. He probably went away sooner than face his father's disgrace and began life somewhere far from home. That was [illegible] years ago, yet ever since then he has sent Cynthia a little money every month—not much, but no doubt all he can scrape together above his bare living expenses. She has tried in every way to get in touch with him, but she can't locate him anywhere. There is no clew except that monthly money order. I never knew him very well—in fact, I only saw him once or twice—but I've heard he was a fine, manly boy. The shock must have been worst of all on him."

"So a man lost his good name and his life, his wife died, his son's life was wrecked and his daughter impoverished," mused Dallas, "and all that a financier might grow a little richer. I can't believe it!"

A little ashamed of displaying such vehemence in the presence of one of her uncle's dependents, the girl glanced toward the table. But the secretary had gone.

"My husband," prattled Mrs. Bennett complacently, "always said that the men who rose highest in the money world reached their lofty places over the despoiled bodies of hundreds of victims. Thank God, my boy has no such parental record to look back on. My husband was one man in a mil-

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 48 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

A REAL MONTE CRISTO

The Tragic Career of Picaud, a Cobbler of Paris.

HIS RISE TO GREAT WEALTH.

Thrown Into Jail by Secret Enemies, He Was Left a Fortune by a Fellow Prisoner—Released, His Scheme of Vengeance Brought Him Death.

That romantic creation of the brain of Alexandre Dumas, "The Count of Monte Cristo," had a counterpart in real life in France in the last century. This is the tragic story:

In 1807, when Napoleon was at the height of his power, Francois Picaud was a sturdy young journeyman cobbler of Paris, full of health and animal spirits and happy in the love of Marguerite Vigoureux, a young girl of his own station in life. On the eve of his marriage hidden enemies denounced him to the imperial government as a spy. He was cast into prison, where he remained, forgotten by the world, for seven years.

Among his fellow prisoners was a wealthy Milanese priest, who treated him like a son and bequeathed to him 7,000,000 francs on deposit in the Bank of Amsterdam. Furthermore, this ecclesiastic told Picaud the secret of a hiding place in Italy where were concealed jewels to the value of 1,200,000 francs and specie amounting to three millions.

When the empire was overthrown in 1814 Picaud was one of a vast number of political prisoners throughout France who were given their freedom. He proceeded to gather the priest's treasure and to plan vengeance upon his enemies. Who they were he did not know.

Disguised as an Italian priest, he succeeded by bribing the least guilty of the conspirators and discovering the entire story of his undoing. The leader in the plot he learned was one Loupain, who had married Marguerite Vigoureux, prospered and become the proprietor of one of the handsomest cafes in Paris.

Picaud went to the capital and under a suitable disguise obtained work as a waiter in Loupain's establishment. Fellow servants there were Guilhem Solari and Gervais Chaubard, who, with Loupain, had denounced Picaud in 1807. The pretended waiter was not long in bringing his vengeance to a consummation. Chaubard was the first victim of his wrath. His body, pierced by a knife, was found on one of the bridges over the Seine. Loupain was disgraced, reduced to penury and finally stabbed to death in the Tuileries gardens. Solari was poisoned and died in frightful convulsions.

But speedy retribution overtook the implacable avenger. One night Picaud was seized, bound and borne to an abandoned quarry. In the darkness a terrible voice said:

"Picaud, what name are you passing under now? Are you still the priest Baldini or the waiter Prosper? You wished for revenge. You have sold yourself to the powers of hell. Ten years you have given to the pursuit of three wretches you should have spared. Me you dragged down to perdition. The diamond by which you bribed me was my destruction. I killed him who cheated me. I was arrested, condemned to the galleys and escaped only after years of torture. My one thought has been vengeance on the priest Baldini. You are in my power. Do you know me? I am Antoine Allut. How much will you pay for bread and water?"

"I have no money," groaned Picaud.

"You have sixteen millions. These are my conditions: I will give you something to eat twice a day, but for each meal you must pay me 25,000 francs."

However, the cupidity of the prisoner proved stronger than his hunger. He underwent terrible suffering without any signs of yielding until his captor, goaded to fury at the prolonged obstinacy, threw himself upon Picaud and stabbed him to death.—Bookman.

A Thackeray Story.

A correspondent of London Notes and Queries contributes this anecdote of Thackeray:

Thackeray once desired to succeed Cardwell as M. P. for the city of Oxford and when returning from his canvass said: "What do you think, Cardwell! Not one of your constituents ever heard of me and my [illegible]." He prefaced "constituents" with a strongish adjective.

Strange, if true. They must have been starving in the midst of plenty.

A Straight Tip.

Johnnie (to new visitor)—So you are my grandma, are you? Grandmother—Yes, Johnnie. I'm your grandma on your father's side. Johnnie—Well, you're on the wrong side, you'll find out!—Philadelphia Bulletin.

THE GREEN MORAY.

A Savage and Voracious Eel Found In Bermudian Waters.

The experienced sea fisherman takes care to kill every large conger eel as soon as it is brought into the boat. The conger has not only extraordinary jaw power—it can triturate shellfish, shells and all—but is also so abominably active that the fisherman's opinion of it coincides with that held of the Indian by the western plainsman, "No good conger except dead conger."

Ugly and savage brute as the conger is, it is a lamb compared with its relative, the green moray of Bermudian waters. This great eel is of an unnaturally brilliant green and has an eye which is the very epitome of intense and malignant ferocity. It is voracious and savage beyond words. The negro boatmen have such a holy horror of it that they absolutely refuse to allow a moray into the boat. An acquaintance of the writer, a marine officer, fishing in a small boat off Bermuda, hooked one of these fish, but as soon as his boatman saw the hideous head above the water he whipped out his knife and made to cut the line. The officer shouted to him to stop, but had to threaten to throw the man overboard before he would put up his knife. When the great eel was pulled over the side the negro went absolutely ashy with fright. As for the moray, no sooner was it in the boat than it doubled upon itself, and its jaws met with a clash in its own side, cutting out a chunk of white flesh as neatly as a scoop would cut cheese. That was enough for the officer. He picked up a boathook and forked the uncanny creature overboard—Chambers' Journal.

A MANUFACTURED CLIMATE.

Methods of the Paris Market Gardeners In Forcing Nature.

The gardeners of Paris get their products on the market weeks before the regular season for them. This forcing of nature is described by Ernest Poole in Success Magazine.

The secret is simply this: The French maraichers have manufactured a climate to suit them. As one observer has said, "They have moved the climate of Monte Carlo up to the suburbs of Paris."

Some new prodigy of modern science, this? Not at all. Only enormous expense in money and in time. The gardens, whenever possible, are placed on land with a slope to the south and are well protected by walls on the north and east, walls built to reflect light as well as to give protection from the northeast winds.

The ground is practically covered with glass, not as in a greenhouse, but by glass frames in the open, "three light" frames of uniform size, 12 by 4½ feet, and also by glass bells. These, too, are of a uniform size, about the shape of a chapel bell, a little less than seventeen inches in diameter and from fourteen to fifteen inches high. The French call them cloches. You may often see over a thousand frames and over 10,000 glass bells in one two-acre plot in the suburbs of Paris.

A more recent innovation is the employment of hot water pipes run under the soil, making of the earth a veritable steam heated hotel, with this essential difference, that the hotel keeper here is desperately eager, not to keep his guests, but to persuade them to leave on the earliest possible day.

A Memorable Wreck.

The most memorable wreck in the history of the American surf was that of the bark Mexico, stranded on Hempstead beach, Long Island, early in the morning of Jan. 3, 1837. She carried 104 passengers and a crew of twelve men. Four passengers and four of the crew were saved by a surfboat from the beach under the command of Raynor Rock Smith. All others were frozen to death, though the wreck was so close to the shore that their cries and even some of their words were plainly heard on the beach. It was the story of this wreck, as published throughout the nation, that led to the establishment of the United States life saving service.

The Bayonet.

The bayonet was due to the fortunate inspiration of a Basque soldier, who, when he and his regiment, having expended their ammunition, were driven to bay on a mountain ridge near Bayonne, suggested that they should fix the long knives with which they were armed into the musket barrels and charge the enemy. This advice, which was followed with complete success, was the means of introducing the weapon to the notice of military Europe.

What He Lacked.

It is related of a South American general, who was extremely well pleased with himself, that once when about to sally forth to a grand dance he surveyed himself contentedly in the mirror and then soliloquized thus:

"Ah! Thou hast all—bravery, wealth, position, good looks. Ah, what dost thou lack?"

Whereupon his orderly, who, unknown to the general, was close at hand, remarked:

"Sense, general, sense!"

Avonmore.

Edward Bethune spent Friday in Finch, a guest of the Rebekah Lodge. He gave them instruction in the work, drills, etc. Mr. Bethune is noted for the interest he has always taken in Oddfellowship, aud in connection with the Rebekah Lodges in this vicinity. It is always a delight to him to give his services for the benefit of any lodge in the district.

The parade of the local I. O. O. F. Lodge to the Presbyterian church last Sunday was well attended. The sermon by Rev. James Cormack of Ottawa was all that could be desired. The Oddfellows turned out about 75 strong, with about 25 Rebekah Members. Finch sent about 25 Oddfellows and Rebekahs. They were welcomed by Mr. Bethune in a few well chosen words, and after the return to the lodge room a vote of thanks to the visitors was proposed by E. Bethune, seconded by William McDermid and carried by a standing vote. J. R. Simpson, as spokes for Finch Lodge No. 239, said in part they were always pleased to visit Avonmore Lodge to take part in a service of this kind, and before sitting down he extended an invitation to visit Finch on Sunday, May 16th, when a similar service will be conducted in the Presbyterian church by Rev. Mr. Bell.

If your stomach, heart or Kidneys are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerve. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain yet vital truth clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. It's success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by W. G. Bolster.

Ladies Decline to Remove Hats.

In spite of the resolution passed by the Guelph Ministerial Association condemning the wearing of big hats in church, the church-going ladies of Guelph positively decline to remove their creations. Only in one church, Norfolk Street Methodist, was there any sign of obedience on the part of the ladies present and here the little company of four hatless women dwindled down to two at the evening service.

The appeal in the case of Ward vs. the corporation in Smith's Falls has been dismissed with costs. This was an action brought by Mr. J. A. Stewart, of Perth, to upset the by-law reducing the number of hotel licenses in Smith's Falls by two. In the first decision the case was dismissed, but the town was ordered to pay its part of the costs. In the decision just handed out the costs fall on the plaintiff.

Dey—Jardine.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Presbyterian Church, Newington, on Wednesday, April 28th, when Miss Lida A. Jardine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Jardine, merchant, of Newington, was married to Mr. W. P. Dey, of Finch. The bride was accompanied by her sister, Miss Elva Jardine, who was the bridesmaid; and her niece, Miss Mildred Jardine as flower-girl. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church, Rev. G. W. Mingie, B. D., assisted by by Rev. D. Coburn, of Buckingham, a former pastor. The bride wore a fine gown of sreams chiffon taffetta silk, trimmed with French Valenciennes lace and insertion, and embroidered silk Brussels net veil, and carried a boquet of cream roses, lillies of the valley and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid wore a cream de chene semi princess with lace blouse; boquet of pink carnations and maiden hair fern, tied with streamers of pink ribbon. The flower girl looked like a little fairy, dressed in white and pink, carrying a basket of sweet peas and ferns. The brides going away dress was a cobalt blue broadcloth suit, lace blouse and hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl brooch; to the bridesmaid a gold signet ring to the groomsman a gold tie pin set with pearls, and to the flower girl a gold locket and chain.

Mr. and Mrs. Dey left on the 6 o'clock express. They will visit friends in Chicago, Niagara Falls and Grimsby, and will be at home after May 25th.

The young couple are held in high esteem and have the hearty congratulations and best wishes of a very wide circle of friends. The groom is one of the most highly esteemed young men of Finch. He has been engaged in the mercantile business for a number of years with his uncle, Mr. A. F. Dey. We all wish them every happiness and prosperity.

One Way to Save Work

As every woman knows who has to take care of even one room, dust is the worst workmaker of all, for the housewife. Most people know, too, that floor dust is a vehicle of disease. But it has not been an easy matter heretofore to prevent dust from having its own way with floors, even with the gradual banishment of carpets and the substitution of rugs and hardwood floors; for not every home can afford such floors, even if they were easy to keep clean or new-looking, as they certainly are not. Yet the solution of the dust problem is made easy by Floorglaze. With any of the ten charming shades of this easily-applied and quick-drying floor finish, any woman can have floors which will be easy to keep clean, and far more sanitary than a painted, oiled or waxed floor.

5 Floorglaze

Even to soft-wood floors Floorglaze gives a beautiful, glossy surface that will show no signs of wear after years of severe service, and that can be quickly washed clean and brilliant with soap and water. The use of Floorglaze is an insurance against dust, and actually against disease as well; it saves a vast amount of tiresome housework; and it is good for outdoor use, on porch and veranda floors and steps. A gallon of this most useful enamel covers 500 square feet. Floorglaze is sold in tins, from a pint to a gallon in size, by most reliable dealers in paints, and is made by Imperial Varnish & Color Co., Limited, of Toronto, who will gladly send you a free booklet worth reading.

The Gordian Knot.

When one of Uncle Sam's sailor's, a man named Gordon, formerly serving on one of our vessels in a West Indian squadron, was taken to the Naval hospital in Washington he described with grewsome vividness to his companions there his adventure with a shark off one of the islands in the West Indies.

"I had jest fell over the bulwarks," said the able seaman, "when along comes a big shark an' grabs me by the leg."

"What did ye do then, matey?" asked one of the patients.

"I never disputes none with sharks," said the sailor. "I let him have the leg."

A Composer's Compliment.

Wagner once said he would prefer to go to Vienna to hear the waltzes of Strauss to hearing Italian opera. On a birthday of Mme. Strauss some years ago she had as guests many celebrated musicians. She passed around a fan on which the different composers and players were writing their names and excerpts from compositions of their own. When it reached Brahms he penned the first measure of the "Blue Danube" waltz and signed beneath, "Not, I regret to say, by your devoted friend Johannes Brahms."

An Opinion.

"Say, paw," said little Rollo, "why do they call George Washington the father of his country?"

"I dunno, son, unless it was because his country kept him hustling to keep it out of trouble and then came to look at him as a sort of old fogy whose advice didn't amount to much anyhow."

What He Wanted.

"Be careful, young man. You know the old saying, 'Marry in haste and repent at leisure.'"

"That's why I'm rushing things. What I want is leisure."

When fortune fails us the supposed friends of our prosperous days vanish. —Plautus.

Try This.

Fasten a key to a string and suspend it by your thumb and finger, and it will oscillate like a pendulum. Let some one place his hand under the key, and it will change to a circular motion. Then let a third person place his hand upon your shoulder, and the key becomes stationary.—London Express.

Balsamic Essences.

Make Wouderful Cure for Catarrh, Colds, Bronchitis, Throat Weakness.

To cure an ailment in the throat or chest, to rout out Catarrh or Asthma, it is essential that the medicine be conveyed direct to the affected parts. This is why no other remedy has achieved such world-wide success as Catarrhozone, which alone can be breathed in one second to every air cell in the breathing organs, The healing vapors of Catarrhozone mix with the breath and descend through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, so the deepest air cells in the lungs—all parts are saturated with the rich piney essences that ease, heal and cure.

Catarrhozone has entirely displaced the old-fashioned remedies such as cough syrups, sprays, tablets, and sedative powers. It contains none of the opium, chloral and drows narcotics, so commonly found in liquid cough and catarrh remedies.

The extraordinary curative power of Catarrhozone is well explained in a letter from A. B. Cowan, the well known resident of Carleton, who writes: "Some time ago I suffered severely from a frightful cold in the head and chest. It was nothing and three continual cough, headache, that morning and night. My nose was so that were so completely stuffed up that I could scarcely breathe. Catarrhozone eased the cough instantly, that would not yield even to the doctor's medicines. Hour by hour Catarrhozone relieved and by pursuing its treatment I have been permanently cured of all trace of Asthma, Catarrh and Bronchial Irritation."

Once you try Catarrhozone you'll realize how indispensible it is—the large dollar size contains an indestructible hard rubber inhaler and sufficient medication to last two months, Smaller trial sizes 25c. and 50c. Beware of the substitutor and imitators of Catarrhozone—use the genuine and you'll get cured. By mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Beautiful imitations of natural wood finished with varnish may be obtained by applying one coat of Campbell's Varnish Stain. Fulton Bros. carries a full line of all colors and size cans. Color card free.

Fatality At Aultsville.

A sad and terrible accident, which resulted in death occurred in Aultsville on Sunday, May 2nd, 1909, when Miss Lottie Dafoe, daughter of Stanley Dafoe, aged 17 years, was burned to death. It is not known how the accident occurred but it is supposed the girl's clothing caught fire from a Quebec heater, on which she was cooking raisins, her dress or apron being drawn in at the lower draught. Their home is over the Sterling Bank and the father had gone out just a short time previous. On returning he found the charred remains of his daughter on the third step. Her steps was traced to the sideboard where she evidently put out the fire which must have ignited from her clothing, and then to the water pail. There were several men snd boys sitting on the bank platform, but they did not hear a cry for help. The deceased was always in poor health, and was far from strong. Rev. Mr. Homer conducted the funeral services on Monday at the home of the deceased. Very much spmpathy is felt for Mr. Dafoe and his family in their terrible bereavement,

Caine—Moriarty.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Bernard's Church, Finch, on April 27th, when Patrick Caine of Connaught, was united in matrimony to Miss Agnes, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Moriarty of Finch. Rev. Father Leahy officiated at the ceremony, which was performed in the presence of a large number of friends of both parties.

Miss Ella McCloskey presided at the organ as the bridal party entered the church and marched up the aisle midst the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march.

The bride looked charming in a beautiful costume of blue cloth with white silk blonse and picture hat. She was attended by her sister, Miss Cassie, who wore pale blue silk eoline with hat to match.

The groom was assisted by his friend Mr. Vincent Coyne.

After the nuptial knot was tied the bridal party drove to the bride's parental home where a sumptuous repast awaited them. The remainder of the day was spent in social amusement. The dance music was furnished by Mr. J. McCloskey and Mr. C. Malay.

The happy conple will reside near Limerick. May every happiness attend them through their wedded life.

The numerous and valuable presents testify the high esteem in which the contracting parties are held.

Two Brothers Drowned.

Two young Ottawa boys, Napoleon and Daniel Valiquette, brothers, were drowned in the Ottawa River Monday afternoon at the foot of Kent street, Ottawa, within a few hundred yards of the Parliament building. They were standing on the edge of the high embankment overlooking the river when a large section of earth, loosened by recent rains, gave away and slid into the river, carrying both lads, along with another boy named Oscar Major, into the swift-flowing river beneath. The latter managed to grab a tree at the bottom of the embankment and saved himself. The other two were swept away by the current.

Beaten And Robbed.

Peterborough, Ont., May 10.—Alfred Gaddy, an Otonabee Township farmer, was set upon by two unknown assailants near his own house on Saturday night and brutally assaulted. The two men called at Gaddy's house about nine o'cloek and asked for a piece of a wire to fix a broken shaft of their buggy, which they said was a short distance from the house. Gaddy accompanied them, and when a few hundred feet from the honse the two men assaulted him. After rendering him unconscious they went through his pockets, but did not secure anything of value. The police are investigating the case.

Death of Mrs. McLeod.

Mrs. D. C. McLeod, Newington, passed away April 30th, 1909, at the age of 25 years. During the past three months she had been confined to her room, but her condition was not considered serious till a week before her death, when she took a bad turn gradually became worse till she passed peacefully away, surrounded by her parents, husband and other relatives, who had been unsparing in their care and faithful nursing. Her maiden name was Etta Martin, and she was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Martiu, at whose residence she died. She leaves to mourn her loss a loving husband and two small children one son two months old; and the other a daughter seven months old; also her parents, one brother, Ernest Martin, Ottawa; a sister, Mrs. Percy McEwan, Northfield Station and a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The funeral on Sunday was largely attended. The service was held at the Presbyterian Church by Rev. George W. Mingie of North Lancaster, and by Rev. Mr. Beamish, after which interment was made in St. Luke's cemetery, Finch. The pall-bearers were Wilson Snetsinger, W. G. Stewart, A. C. Jardine, Percy McEwen, E. W. Martin and D. C. McLeod.

Mrs. McLeod, or Etta, as she was familiarly known among her friends and associates, had a bright and promising carreer before her, her services being sought for many times at entertainments and social gatherings, as an elocutionist, for which she was naturally gifted. She always responded cheerfully. Mr. and Mrs. McLeod have lived in the same house with Mr. Martin for the past two years, ever since the firm of Martin and McLeod was organized as feed and lumber merchants of Newington.

Stubbs—Gibson.

An interesting event took place on Wednesday evening May 5th, 1909, at the Methodist parsonage, Aultsville, when two of Farran's Point's most popular young people, Charles C. Stubbs, the well known marble dealer, and Miss Gertrude Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gibson, were married by Rev. T. C. Cassidy. The bride wore a brown broad-cloth suit with a blouse of cream net over silk, and a hat to match. The wedding was a very quiet affair yet the popularity of the young couple was evidenced by a very large number of valuable presents including several substantial cheques. The best wishes of a host of frieuds is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs.
