60 local workers lose jobs

Rohm and Haas closes down plexiglas operations

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MORRISBURG—Rohm and Haas will be closing down its plexiglas acrylic-sheet division this December 31st, following 30 years of local operation.

The shutdown announcement, made at a staff meeting last Friday morning, will effect about 60 hourly and salaried employees, plus some additional support staff at the Toronto office.

"We tried juggling around several different financial models to come up with a way to save the Morrisburg line," said plant manager Cam Dillabough. "But in the end, we could not generate the cash needed to continue operations."

The line closure came about after several years of steady decline in demand for the "cell-cast" acrylic sheet, as the market shifted to the less expensive "extruded" acrylic sheet option after 1981, Dillabough said. From a peak production of up to 8.5 million square feet in the late 1980s, market analysts project the plant to sell only three million square feet this year.

"People are moving away from it. We couldn't compete on price. The product had reached the end of its life cycle," Dillabough said.

The first signs of things to come began in 1987, after Rohm and Haas closed down operations in Knoxville Tennessee and shifted its entire cell cast production to the Morrisburg plant. At that time, the local plant employed 100 Morrisburg residents and became the only Rohm and Haas supplier of cell cast plexiglas in North America, shipping upwards of 75 per cent of the product to markets in the United States.

But the "extruded" sheet market share continued to expand rapidly, and Rohm and Haas corporate head office made a decision to expand operations at its Kensington Connecticut plant rather than invest in retooling the Morrisburg plant.

Faced with a sudden need to diversify operations, local management put forward several proposals to bring other product lines to Morrisburg. But one bid after another was rejected, stemming at least in part from the impact of globalization and growing competition from Third World trading partners, Dillabough said.

"We've been trying for three years to delay this decision. But we're at the point now where the volume can't generate the financial returns Rohm and Haas requires."

Dillabough said Rohm and Haas had a long-standing policy of keeping the employees informed of all the latest developments within the company. The workers had been involved in several previous cost-cutting initiatives to save the plant. So the news shouldn't come as too much of a surprise.

"It was more of a timing thing than anything else," he said.

Still, Dillabough remains "frustrated" the employees didn't have more control over the situation. Nothing they could have done would have been enough to avoid the eventual closure, he pointed out.

"Although the Morrisburg employees continually improved quality and reduced costs, enough volume couldn't be generated to continue operations."

The latest layoff announcements comes quickly on the heels of two previous work force reductions over the past year and a half. This time, however, the decision was that much more difficult, because the worker effected averaged 47 years old, with 17-18 years seniority.

"I feel particularly sad because these employees are well respected in Rohm and Haas. This closure is not something they can control: they've made their sacrifices. But we don't have any other options. We ran out of time."

Rohm and Haas Inc. will continue to manufacture petroleum-additive products at the Morrisburg site, employing about 25 hourly and salaried personnel. Dillabough doesn't know what future role, if any, he'll be serving within the company. Corporate head office still needs to sort through decisions on future managerial responsibilities as well as severance packages and outplacement counseling to the displaced workers.

Coloring in The Garden

Jeff Arsenault recently donated close to 200 of The Garden coloring books to CHEO and Winchester Hospitals for the sick children who are admitted there. Jeff says that if anything ever happened to his daughter Danielle, 3, (beside him), he would hope she would take solace coloring one of the many child-oriented garden themes. He is now busy with the second edition if anyone missed the first one. The pair are pictured sittting on the bridge that crosses the creek to the gazebo in The Garden.

Workers react to layoffs here

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MORRISBURG—The mood wasn't exactly upbeat at Gregor's Place on Friday afternoon, where Jerry Michalicka and several of his laid-off coworkers from Rohm and Haas had gathered to collect their thoughts.

Michalicka and the others were sitting outside around the picnic tables, taking the rest of the day off, thanks to a gracious decision by management.

Some sat quietly by themselves — sipping coffee or smoking a cigarette. Others, like Michalicka, were more talkative, reflecting back on the many happy years they'd spent working in the plant.

"It's not much of a surprise," he said. "We knew it was coming, but it's still a shock."

Michalicka had worked in the plexiglas wing of the plant for 26 years, almost his entire adult life. This was really the only work he'd ever known.

"The benefits were good, the wages were good. It was a great place to work for sure—no doubt about it."

His pal, Rick Roberts, had started at the plant the same day all those years ago.

"At one time, when you said you worked at Rohm and Haas, you had it made — you had security. But not anymore, I guess," he said.

Roberts said he and the other workers are still a little "numb" by the news.

"We've got just a few months to think what we're going to do for the rest of our lives. But with 10.5 per cent unemployment there's not a lot out there."

It'll be the first time either man has been unemployed. Both anticipate a long job search.

"When you're 51 years old, where do you get a job at a decent rate?," Michalicka said. "I don't know what I'm going to do. It's too early yet."

For Rob Wagner, a 15 year veteran line worker, the next four months will be crucial to determine his future.

"We'll have to wait and see how the counselling goes — and the severances they provide. But how do you prepare for something like this? Where can you get another job in the area that pays like this?"

None of the workers assembled at Gregor's Place held any ill-will to local management. Most equated the closing to the devastating recession which has paralyzed much of Eastern Ontario through the early 1990s.

"It's just another example of the results of free trade," said Hans vanderZweep, summarizing the feelings of most of the others. "As far as I'm concerned, that was just a give-away of jobs."

Reeve's viewpoint

Morrisburg Reeve Gord McGregor called the Rohm and Haas announcement a "devastating blow" to the village.

He said the layoffs will impact the entire community, effecting not only the 60 workers involved but everyone who depends on their business for their livelihood.

"A lot of these people lived in the town. A lot shopped in town. The business community is really going to feel it because they were good customers."

The reeve said he's hopeful some of the displaced workers can find employment within the community and won't have to go elsewhere. But finding work for 60 people won't be easy, he added.

"That's a lot to add to the unemployment rolls."

The Township of Williamsburg, and not the Village of Morrisburg, will have to cope with the lost tax revenues — projected in the thousands of dollars.

Village, Ministry to repair dock

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MORRISBURG—The Village will be receiving $15,000 from the Ministry of Fisheries and Oceans for renovations at the Morrisburg dock.

Reeve Gord McGregor made the announcement last Friday morning, after hammering out an agreement with MP Bob Kilger and Duane Blanchard, a Ministerial representative.

"The docks have needed some repairs for quite some time," Reeve McGregor said. "We all went out to the docks last week and I showed them what had to be done."

While the timber crib dock itself remains reasonably sound and stable, some work needs to be done on the deck boards, the fendering areas and in re-securing the fendering walers. The total estimated cost of the maintenance repairs is estimated to be about $20,000, of which the municipality will pick up $5,000, or one-quarter of the costs.

Under the terms of a lease agreement established between the federal government and the village, council is responsible for minor repairs of both the docks and the parking lot. Major expenditures such as structural repairs come under federal jurisdiction.

"It all hinges on how you define what major is," the reeve said, admitting the agreement came about after a year's worth of negotiations.

Council will take the $5,000 out of its parks and recreation budget. Blanchard verbally committed his Ministry to the remaining $15,000; it will be forwarded to the village on the job's completion.

McGregor expects the village will begin excepting tenders some time in the next few weeks.

McGregor admits the village and the Ministry still have a ways to go before finalizing a permanent funding arrangement for regular repairs to the dock, which is now over 30 years old.

"We're trying to come up with an ongoing program with the Ministry to get the major things done. But they couldn't commit themselves in terms of dollars at this time."

A recent structural inspection conducted by McNeely Engineering Consultants suggests some of the timber crib structures are beginning to show signs of deterioration. Within the next ten years, the docks may need to be completely replaced, at an estimated cost of $200,000-300,000.

The timber shorewall isn't expected to last that much longer, either. Repairs or replacement could turn out to be in the neighborhood of $25,000-75,000. And the concrete shorewall also is expected to need repairs within the next ten years. Replacing it would be an additional $75,000, although it may be possible to stabilize the deterioration by excavating behind the wall and casting more concrete.

Plans in "The Garden" take new twist

LAURIE DAY

MORRISBURG—Give him a foot and he takes a yard, give him an acre and he'll take two, but give him a garden and he'll borrow a spade.

That's Jeff Arsenault's outlook on life. What little he has to work with, he'll make it bigger, and significantly better.

Prominent gardener in Morrisburg, Arsenault's exquisitely pungent garden has been a tour site for many visitors to the area.

He's been on television, in magazines and newspapers, and is becoming a regular household name.

Now the frivolous gardener is onto something else. And yes, it also has to do with gardening.

"I've made up some coloring books for kids who visit The Garden, and have been giving them away for free," said Arsenault.

"Friday, I donated 100 coloring books to CHEO, and last week I gave 80 away to Winchester Hospital."

The 8"x10" coloring book has a gardening theme on all 12 pages inside. It also comes with a package of McKenzie Marigold seeds (for either indoor or outdoor gardening), and eight Crayola crayons.

"I gave them away to the hospitals so kids who are admitted to emergency or to the long-term care wards will have something to do with their time," said the father of a three-year-old girl.

"If something ever happened to our daughter, Danielle, and she had to go to the hospital, I would hope she would color in one to take her mind off her troubles," he said.

As well as keeping the children pre-occupied, the coloring-book package is also geared to teaching them a bit about gardening in general.

"We were giving them away to the kids who came to the garden on class trips and individually with their parents," he said. "We've even given some to Danielle's play group. But we've had a few left over, so we thought we'd put them to good use."

Arsenault's had a little help with the packaging and printing of the books, and has obtained financial help as well.

Dr. Peter Playfair of Iroquois and his brother Scott have financially assisted with the project, while Terry Laurin at the Morrisburg Leader printed the actual books.

The plastic shrink-wrap was provided by the Dundas Community Living Association (the workskills department with help from Lana Barkley).

McKenzie (McFayden's and McConnell's) Seed Company was also instrumental in providing Arsenault with enough seeds for the coloring book packages.

For those individuals who missed the first printing of the coloring book, you will be pleased to know that a second edition is in the works at this time.

Arsenault is also working on new seed packages directed towards the young gardeners, incorporating such new cartoon characters at Willy Wizard and Patty Pansy.

There are also still plenty of glads left to purchase for $1 each. The money raised from the sale of these flowers goes to CHEO as well. Recently, Arsenault made a presentation to the hospital of over $130.

As for The Garden, Arsenault has many new additions that he will be pleased to show visitors, including a Victorian Trellis adorned with morning glories, and new perineal beds with gallardia, Jacob's ladder, poppies, yarrow, the Trumpet lilly, and black-eyed susies, and many other varieties.

Open from 8 a.m. till dusk, The Garden will not close for the winter until October 2nd.

Located at 17 Casselman Road, Morrisburg, The Garden is truly a pleasure to see, and there is no charge for admission, although donations are appreciated.

Trail of blood leads to arrest of local man

MORRISBURG—A trail of blood which began at the liquor store here and traveled through the shopping plaza, down an alley and across Fifth Street, led Morrisburg Police to the arrest of a local man for smashing the window at the liquor store.

Approximately 11 p.m., Monday, August 8th, the front window of the liquor store was broken, resulting in the culprit receiving a cut to his hand.

Constable Giroux of the Morrisburg OPP followed the trail of blood until it ended. He later made inquiries at the Winchester Hospital where Const. Giroux located a man with a serious cut to his right hand.

At the hospital, Gerald Chatter, 38, of Morrisburg, admitted to the crime and was charged with the break and enter, as well as mischief.

Damage to the window of the liquor store was estimated at $376. Nothing was reported missing from the premises.

Chatter received surgery on his hand later in the afternoon, August 9th, to repair the tendon damage. He is to appear in Morrisburg Provincial Court on September 6th.

Regional landfill site toured by SD&G Waste management

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

NEPEAN—Seeing is believing, as the saying goes.

And no one would believe the amount of garbage generated by a large region until one has toured the Trail Road Landfill Site serving the regional municipality of Ottawa Carleton. Approximately 40 representatives from Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry had their eyes opened last Thursday.

A guided bus tour was organized by Anne MacGillivray, waste study coordinator for the three United Counties and included members of the public liaison committee, the steering committee and Ministry of Environment and Energy officials.

Modern facility

The Trail Road site is reputed to be one of the most modern engineered landfill sites in Ontario, and also in Canada. The Regional Municipality of Ottawa-Carleton was incorporated in 1976 and owns and operates the site which was started in 1980. It now serves a population of approximately 650,000 from 11 municipalities including the City of Ottawa, Hull, Vanier, Rockcliff, Kanata and Glou-cester, and Nepean. Eighty per cent of the waste it accepts is residential waste.

Another major landfill site operated by Laidlaw Waste Management, located at Carp and the Queensway and three small sites serve the region. The Laidlaw site accepts both residential and (ICI) industrial, commercial, and institutional, but the majority is ICI waste. Under a "good neighbour policy" developed by the municipality of Ottawa-Carleton, Laidlaw may accept residential or ICI waste from neighboring municipalities ranging in an arc from Ottawa southwest to Kingston.

The Nepean Trail Road site has a capacity of 500 acres or 200 hectares, 80 hectares of which or 200 acres is actually in use. The landfill is divided in four sections or stages, with stages one and two presently full to capacity and capped.

As the site was first constructed with more primitive technology than is currently available, neither of the first two stages have liners. But Stage Three has a liner. This stage is being filled in now, and is half way full, expected to be full by 1997. A smaller section, Stage Four is in the pre-design stage. At the current rate of use, the landfill is expected to be used until the year 2002.

A study of future options is underway and getting permission to go higher is considered the most favorable at the present. By ministry regulation, landfills are allowed to go to 119 meters above sea level. Since Stage three was started at about 103, garbage may go about 15 meters in total, but another 13 meters would extend the use significantly.

Another option would add an additional stage to the north. Landfill mining or digging up and diverting or recycling some of the older garbage is also being looked at.

Dave Ryan, solid waste technologist outlined the procedure for opening and operating the site, which is first excavated, then lined with subgrade, clay, and a geomembrane polyethylene (80 ml of high density polyethylene).

On top of the geomembrane is geotextile, a non-woven fabric acting as a dispersion layer to prevent anysharop objects from puncturing the geomembrane.

"We have the clay and the geomembrane so it's a double liner on the bottom of stage three. So if there's any problem with the plastic, 60 cm of clay acts as a great liner, there's a lot of protection," Ryan said.

The next layer is 60 cm of coarse sand and gravel, on which the garbage is laid. Leachate collection pipes are placed in drainage envelopes, and lowered into the clay to carry leachate to the pumping station.

Currently, leachate is pumped to the top of the active landfill where it sits in a lagoon. Most circulates back down through the garbage and is collected again. As it keeps the garbage moist, it thus aids in the decomposition the waste.

A 33 metric ton compactor spreads and compacts the garbage, and at the end of each day, six inches of clean fill are laid down as cover. Substances used are wood chips, auto fluff made from car seats, sand or clean fill brought to the site by area residents.

When the permitted height is reached, the landfill is to be capped with a cover similar to the liner.

Capping landfill

On top of the refuse is placed subgrade, sand buffer, geomembrane and geotextile, granular layer and general coverage top soil. After capping, a system to vent the landfill gas is achieved through a series of venting stacks.

Landfill gas which contains much methane is collected, brought to a flaring station and burned off.

An extensive ground water and surface water monitoring program is in place at 50 locations. Monitoring for the presence of leachate is done April, July and November, with the aim of protecting the private wells around the site. The main indicators of leachate are chloride, iron etc. Monitoring for gas is performed at various stations.

To preserve the life of the existing landfill, efforts are made to keep as much out of the landfill as possible. Most municipalities are running blue box domestic recycling programs, and tipping fees are charged for every material brought to the site except clean fill.

Windrows approximately 150 feet long have been set up composting, and approximately 15,000 tons of leaf and yard waste was set up in August 1992. The service is free to residents but about $80 per load to the regional municipality and last year 9500 cars visited the depot.

Materials accepted include paints, stains, gasoline, oils, batteries, antifreeze, propane tanks, insecticides, disinfectants, herbicides and fungicides. Paints are bulked together into liquid and sludge and the liquid is recycled, while sludge is used as secondary fuel in the cement kilns in Hamilton. Waste oil and antifreeze are also bulked. Other materials are placed in plastic containers in their respective waste classes, and taken by a waste handler.

Amounts brought to the site have declined slightly in the last couple of years, and last year, the site brought in 267,000 tons of garbage. "We dropped 25,000 tons in the last year of expected garbage," said Ryan. "Whether it's due to recycling, or the recession, it's hard to target how, but residential collection is down."

Options being examined to reduce the amount even further include user pay or "tag the bag" system, being studied for Kanata.

Costly to operate

Operating costs of the site are very high with an annual budget of about $5 million for running the landfill and salaries. Environmental management programs such as three R's (waste diversion) promotion, and leachate management may run from $9 million annually to $21 million. Costs are higher when new equipment is installed, with the cost of a liner running about $7 million, and capping another $7-9 million. Expropriating land is considered another capital cost. The cost of the household hazardous waste collection depot is $800,000 yearly, or $80 a carload.

In general, costs are covered by the tipping fees imposed, with a small reserve depending on what the capital costs have been.

Ann Marie Fowler, business manager, said that while the site attracts many seagulls, estimated at 2000, there are no rats due to the daily cover.

And during the tour of the active landfill stage, a slight odor of leachate permeated the bus, but odor levels outside were no worse than after a farmer has spread manure in local fields.

Afterwards, study coordinator Anne MacGillivray commented, "It was excellent information."

"When you see a site like that, you realize how important and how crucial waste reduction is," she added.

Chair of the PLC Susan Shaw said, "It was very interesting. Managing our garbage has certainly become big business. I've never been to a facility of that dimension before and I was impressed with how orderly it was and overwhelmed with the size and logistics of it all."

"In SD & G we're looking for one on a smaller scale but as well-organized and well-engineered as that one," Shaw added.

"It's as if we were looking for one cell of that," said Pat Ager, vice-chair of the PLC.

"Regarding costs, it's important to remember that you just use it a bit at a time. You don't have to develop it all at once, so you can phase in the funding."

The SD & G waste study is currently in the preliminary stages of landfill site selection, and is examining candidate areas based on selection criteria from public and goverment agency input. The study is looking for a site of approximatley 100 acres or 39 hectares capacity.

A public liaision committee meeting is scheduled for 7.30 p.m. August 11 at the Agricultural and Food and Rural Affairs building in Avonmore, when a video of the Cornwall landfill site, of approximately 29 hectares will be shown.

New Chamber Sign

Members from the Chamber of Commerce and from local businesses pose in front of a new Information Centre Sign recently installed to help tourists in their visit to the area. The old plexiglas sign had fragmented, and the foundation was beginning to crack. The cost of the sign was split five ways by Rohm and Haas, Odonto, Eckel Industries, Beavers Dental and Upper Canada Motors, each of whom paid $177. Pictured, left to right: Ron Hunt, production manager Odonto; Pierrette LeBlanc, Tourist Information Booth Chair; Tom Ayerst, 1st v.p. Chamber of Commerce; Bob Leroux, G.M. Morrisburg Horticultural Society Show this Saturday

MORRISBURG—The Morrisburg and District Horticultural Society is holding its annual Summer and Vegetable show on Saturday.

Entries will be received at the Civic Centre auditorium between 9 a.m. and noon only.

Residents of South Dundas are invited to enter flowers, vegetables or arrangements according to the classes listed in the members' yearbook.

The classes will also be posted in the Auditorium, and society members will be on hand to assist exhibitors with placing their entries in the appropriate classes.

Since one aim of the show is to educate, please name your exhibits with variety names if known. In the event of a tie, the named variety will win.

Non-members may enter exhibits in the show at a price of .50 cents each, while junior entries are free.

A qualified judge from out of town will ensure an unbiased assessment of entries. She will adhere to the Horticultural Judging Standards as set out in the Ministry of Agriculture Publication No. 34. Copies will be available at the registration desk for $2 each.

Uniformity, condition and symmetry in samples are desirable. Tops of carrots and beets are removed to one-half inch from vegetable. The judge will exclude an entry if the number of items, the color, or a height limit as listed in the yearbook, is not respected.

A little checking beforehand can avoid a disappointment.

To encourage novice gardeners to make that first attempt, there is a prize for an "Arrangement by a Novice" who has never won a prize at a show.

At 7:30 p.m., prizes and trophies will be awarded to the exhibitor who wins: the Highest Points in the Show; the Highest Points for Cut Flowers; the Highest Points for Vegetables; the Best in Decorative Class; Highest Points for Men, and Highest Points for Juniors.

The public is invited to view the exhibits between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. This is a wonderful opportunity for people to learn and share horticulture.

Zebra muscles have scientists scurrying for environmentally friendly way to kill them

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

INGLESIDE—They're tiny little creatures — rarely more than a couple of centimetres long — and they don't appear that menacing.

But their potential destructive capabilities have scientists especially concerned, and desperately searching for an environmentally-friendly way to kill them off.

Zebra mussels first began appearing in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway system some time in 1986. Originally native to Eastern Europe, the tiny, striped clam-like animals apparently were transported on an ocean liner, which discharged its ballast water into Lake St. Clair.

"When they first came, nobody knew much about them," said Osnabruck Engineering Technician Bart Whitton. "The engineers didn't have much to go on; they hadn't seen anything like them before."

Whitton and incoming Superintendent Roger Wilkes have been busy these past few weeks testing the Township's water intake system, and especially the chlorinator, which they've been tampering with to ensure it discharges adequate quantities of the lethal gas to repel the mussels from Ingleside's water intake piping.

Whitton said the zebras have a tendency to attach themselves to areas where there is flowing water to ingest moving organic material as it moves by. Consequently, they can do extensive damage to property — particularly municipal pipes, where they've been known to block up areas up to four feet in diameter.

So far, the township's 16 inch thick, 3,000 foot long pipe hasn't been infested. But if that ever happens, the township could be looking at a "horrendous expense," he said.

"To clean it up, you'd almost have to pick them off one at a time."

Living in colonies of tens of thousands per square meter, zebra mussels have been reproducing locally at a phenomenal rate. Researchers at the Ministry of Natural Resources estimate one female can produce as many as 30,000 eggs a year.

When the township staff first heard about the zebra mussel problem a few years back, they invested in chlorine gas cylinders as a repellent, rather than the recommended liquid chlorine, which engineers believed was safer.

Now they're glad they did because several other municipalities, including the city of Cornwall, recently had to shift to the gas dischargers because of all the problems with the liquid dischargers.

Whitton said it wasn't so much foresight on his part as it was convenience that dictated the original move. For the liquid dischargers, the township would have been required to construct several large mixing tanks. They didn't have the necessary storage space at the time, however.

Nevertheless, the gas cylinders haven't come without their share of problems, Whitton admitted. Since the system's installation, it has required almost continuous maintenance adjustments. And just a few weeks back, the township had to hire divers to take apart the whole system and redesign entire sections so there wouldn't be a chance for further blockages.

Whitton calls these problems "teething pains," coming as a result of a new technology never utilized before. He said most of the problems appear to be solved now.

"It's been a learning process for everyone but it's working quite well now. It's now as good as it's ever going to be."

While the system will never operate at one hundred per cent, Whitton believes it's safe as long as the township staff are careful in how they handle the material.

"Chlorine gas is poisonous. It can kill people, and it's environmentally dangerous. But what are you going to replace it with? We'll monitor it and take special samples to the Ministry. Until we come up with something better, we're stuck with it."

In the meantime, The Ministry has prepared a guideline for residents to help stop the spreading. Boaters, anglers and scuba divers are encouraged to clean all their equipment thoroughly before moving from an infested lake to another lake. Contaminated areas should be left out in the sun to dry, then washed with a household bleach solution. (one tablespoon of bleach per one gallon of hot soapy water). In addition, motors should be cleaned periodically to ensure the zebras don't inflict permanent structural damage.

Stopping the spreading is important not only for economic, but also for ecological reasons. Each adult mussel filters approximately one liter of water per day. In the process, the mussels consume large quantities of plankton — a very important link in the food chain of any aquatic ecosystem. At this present time, the zebras have few natural enemies to keep the population in check.

SPARTA: a strategic plan for development

CORNWALL—A strategic plan for community development known as SPARTA is expected to be complete within 18 months.

An activity plan has been developed by the SPARTA team of Vice-chairs in cooperation with Professor David Douglas of the Guelph University School of Planning and Development.

Douglas is a recognized authority in community development and strategic planning and the author of a Canadian Government guide and program on Community economic development and strategic planning.

Vice-chairs, Jill Proctor, Doug Hill and Jean-Marc Boisvenue have identified and contacted key persons in communities across the United Counties including the City of Cornwall in respective areas of economic development, cultural development and social development. These persons will enjoy a two-day training session with Professor Douglas in organizational and management strategies and community development and strategic planning for the community forums planned in October and November 1994.

Forums will be held on Saturdays in six areas of the Counties including Cornwall. All interested persons will be invited through the media and will have the opportunity to offer input in a major strategic plan.

During the first phase of the Project, 300 letters were sent out to municipalities and organizations requesting submission of existing plans. The mail out was followed up with telephone calls but showed that few plans exist within SD & G in the areas of economic, cultural and social development. The exercise confirmed the need for Project SPARTA.

Grab for cash nets $300 plus

IROQUOIS—She must have felt like a contestant on a game show.

Ivy Gill of Matilda Township was driving in Iroquois last week, when she saw money floating in the wind on Dundas Street.

Stopping her vehicle, she got out to collect all of the cash. Upon doing so, she discovered there was over $300 in total and took it to the Royal Bank in the village.

The money was returned to the owner later in the day.

Won't get fooled again

It's almost inevitable, isn't it, that those self-righteous relics from the 1960s would crawl out from beneath the cracks in the wooden stages to try and turn the 25th Anniversary Woodstock celebrations into something they most certainly were not — a political event. While the vast majority of those in attendance were there to party and enjoy the music (while rolling around in the mud), there were a few of them — mostly self-centred middle-aged types too serious ever to have a good time — who seemed intent on exposing the anniversary as a symbolic representation of the materialism and greed plaguing the younger generation.

Typical of the attitudes of these '60s era social critics was Peter Howell, the ever so hip rock critic of the Toronto Star. "Greedstock," wrote Howell, in typical condescending tones, "is as much a tribute to American enterprise as it is to peace, love and rock'n'roll." The flowers, tents, and tie died shirts, he suggested in a particularly scathing attack, have given way to "merchandise" such as $3 souvenir condoms, $900 laser karaoke machines and compact disk players. "Imagine the entire lower floor of Toronto's Eaton Centre plunked in the middle of a 345-hectare farmer's field, and you have an idea of the length and breadth of the hard-selling going on."

Howell's judgments could have have made before he got there. And they probably were. For months, media representatives who came of age during the 1960s have been rallying around similar themes, intent on exposing the polarized cultural and social values of hippies vs. Generation X. "Capitalism conquers Woodstock" was to be the symbolic representation of what went wrong.

But before we of the younger generation allow them to destroy our party, let's remember a few things about the original festival. Like this one, the original Woodstock was geared to make money (which come to think of it, is no crime!). It wasn't a free party — but it turned into one because the massive and unexpected crowds tore down the gates before organizers had a chance to get the situation under control. And while there wasn't the open commercialism present, anyone who was there would be able to describe the highly organized underground economy of ridiculously expensive liquor and drugs present. Vendors took advantage of the desperation of mostly upper-middle class white kids who'd left the comfort of the suburbs for the weekend. Drinking water was in such scarce supply that vendors were selling it at 50 cents a glass. There were some freebies, but not for everyone.

The original Woodstock, if anything, was more about style than substance. Fashion and phrases linked a generation in a three-day orgy of excess. It's hard to take a generation seriously who gave birth to important status-symbols such as the cellular car phone and the jacuzzi. The hippy movement and the entire 1960s subculture, which Howell and the others look back to with such fondness, is best understood as the worst kind of tribal conformity, the ultimate example of why American individualism, which used to be that country's greatest strength, is now in danger of extinction. The Woodstock critique of capitalism and all material possessions isn't likely ever to win favor in an era of 11.5 per cent unemployment — We just can't afford it any longer. —M. Van Raalte

Helping the visually impaired

September is the month when the Canadian National Institute for the Blind conducts its door-to-door campaign for funds.

Money raised from this campaign ensures that services can continue to be provided to the 105 blind and visually impaired individuals in Dundas County and to those who will require assistance in this coming year.

A donation to C.N.I.B will give counselling to the individual and family regarding vision loss and referrals to the appropriate community services available. Through rehabilitation teaching, visually impaired persons learn the practical skills of daily living like cooking, banking, personal care, typing, and handwriting. Orientation and mobility are learned by working on a one-to-one basis to help develop travel skills and white cane techniques. Through Sight Enhancement and technical aids, the C.N.I.B. teaches people to help cope with blindness and teaches new techniques to help them make use of their remaining vision more effectively.

At C.N.I.B., one can obtain a large number of visual aids such as talking watches and clocks which will tell the time at the touch of a button, or a scale which will tell what you weigh. There are large print crossword puzzle books and magnifying devices available which will thread sewing needles. Donations will also help purchase demonstrations of high and low-tech devices from needle threaders to computers with voice output, large print computer screens, printers that produce braille text and machines that can scan the printed word and repeat it back to the user.

Recreational books and magazines in braille and audio cassette format in French and English, vocational, educational and professional materials are provided on request. And C.N.I.B. volunteer groups provide transportation, reading and friendly visiting services in many areas.

For those with only minor sight problems and those who are considered legally blind, it is a great comfort to have this help available—BUT—all these services need funding above and beyond what is obtained from the government or the United Way sources. C.N.I.B. campaign organizers are proud of the fact that all monies raised by the Dundas County campaign are used for needs in the County. Last year's door-to-door campaign in Morrisburg raised $5,246.69 and campaign organizers are again hopeful that individuals will assist as generously when canvassers call at your door.

This Week In Morrisburg's History

Compiled from The Leader's fyles by Laurie Day

Mary Jane VanDongen blushed and covered her face when she heard her name called, but recovered from the initial surprise a few minutes later to flash a big smile. The 17-year-old farm girl from Morewood was named Dundas County's 1984-85 dairy princess at Winchester. Along with the royal title, VanDongen received several gifts, including a $100 cheque and an engraved locket from the county's milk producer's committee which sponsored the competition. She also was presented with a trophy from the Dominion Bank, as well as a few other prizes.

Village residents owed more than $1M in taxes at the end of June said Lloyd Barkley, the clerk-treasurer of the village, stating that tax arrears was a common occurrence. Some of the uncollected taxes went back to 1981. One of the worst expenditures in the entire budget was the deficit of the old high school, which was $15,835 by the end of June. Council estimated that it would spend $34,400 on the school for 1984 while only collecting about $1,800 in rent.

Produce King, a local grocery store, opened its doors on August 15th. Cornwall business man, Brian Wheeler, credited the availability of the site in Morrisburg as the major reason for locating here. "I was looking at different towns and villages for space and thought Morrisburg looked like a good spot to set up shoP in. Besides, here was this good building already available and just waiting for someone to move in."

The Morrisburg Pee Wees were pictured on the front page of The Leader as they captured the hardware at the Ingleside Baseball Tournament. After winning their first game, it was reported that "they never looked back" and apparently didn't lose any games on the way to the championship. On the team were Scott Corden, Tim Smith, Glen Elliott, Barry Beckstead, Kevin Casselman, Bill Tottle, Glen Howald, Doug Cassell, Caleb Robson, Jim Whelan, Frank Hummell and Blair Robinson. They were coached by Ron Casselman and Larry Dowell, while Bob Howald was the manager.

Plans were made for the Morrisburg Trade and Home Show to be held at the arena September 26-28.

The March of Dimes Ability Fund representative, A.W. (Bill) Oaks, sent a thank you note to the newspaper for publication as over $700 was raised through people of the village to help with fund raising efforts.

Mr. William Robert (Bert) Allen, of Morrisburg, died at the Winchester Hospital August 9th at the age of 71.

Brockville Commercial Stars won the league fastball pennant with a 2-1 win over the Williamsburg Pioneers.

1964

Local voters were to go to the polls September 14th, for the second time in less than a year to decide the question of Sunday sports in the village. In December 1963 Morrisburg voted against Sunday sports by a margin of 72 votes. William Dillabough manager of the Morrisburg Combines hockey team who presented a petition to council with the required number of signatures, said all teams in the St. Lawrence Ottawa Senior hockey league, except Ottawa and Morrisburg, could play Sunday games.

The lacrosse season came to an abrupt end for the Mets when they lost the third consecutive game to the Long Sault Barracudas, 3-2. Bob Barclay and Dale Hess score the Morrisburg goals.

World famous Ontario cheddar cheese was to be manufactured at Upper Canada Village under the same conditions as when it was first made in 1864. A replica of a 19th century cheese factory was officially opened by Hon. W.A. Stewart, Minister of Agriculture celebrating 100 years of cheese making in Canada.

Two members of the Morrisburg detachment of the OPP had been promoted to the rank of Corporal. Constables Raymond Dowe and William Eady appeared before the Promotion Board at General Headquarters in Toronto on July 9th and qualified for the promotions. Both men were 40 years of age and had joined the force in 1949 after serving in the armed forces for six years.

The Leader reported that two Morrisburg boys had been wounded in action. Mr. and Mrs. Edson Robinson received a cable informing them, their son Tpr. George Robinson, had been wounded August 10th in france, but was healing well and was expected to be up around before too long. Mr. and MRs. D.H. Weir received word that their son Capt. E.A. Weir, had been wounded in France August 16th. The nature and extent of his wounds were not known.

Mr. James Meikle captured an eel measuring 32 inches and weighing just two ounces short of six pounds.

Mountain Township was gearing for its annual fair scheduled for August 31st and September 1st. Main attractions were the black and white field day, horse races with purses totalling $425 and a softball tournament.

Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly were starring in Cover Girl at the Cameo Theatre and at Williamsburg, the Picadilly was showing Adventures of Tartu starring Robert Donat and Valerie Hobson.

At Morley's Store 75 cents could purchase a pound of creamery butter, a pound of weiners and seven pounds of flour.

Irving Cochrane, who had been serving overseas with the Central Mediterranean Forces, had been promoted to Sergeant.

1934

Headlines in the August 17th issue of The Leader read: Drastic change in Magistrates. Order-in-council passed by the Ontario Liberal Cabinet reduced the number of magistrates in the province from 138 to 48. Under the change, 90 of them were to lose their positions and some 10,000 justices of the peace would be retired. The new system gave magistrates province-wide jurisdiction and they would journey from court to court in the same manner as supreme court judges. Chief Magistrate Geo. A. Wright of Brockville, had been selected for the front portion of the Leeds, Stormont, and Dundas district, and John McCormick of Winchester was selected for the northern part.

At R.H. Bradfield and Co. a genuine gold-plated Gillette razor and five Gillette blue blades, in an attractive case, were selling for 79 cents.

Eddie Cantor was starring in Roman Scandals at the Cameo Theatre.

The Archer correspondent wrote thrashing was the order of the day.

The Ottawa Exhibition was to begin August 20th and run one full week. General admission was 25 cents. Some events scheduled were horse races, auto races, a large midway, track and field sporting events, horse shows, a baby show, dog show, and a new al-feature vaudeville show.

Mrs. Esther Gilmer celebrated her 85th birthday at her home in Pleasant Valley on August 8th.

John Labbatt was being held by his kidnappers in a farmhouse in Western Ontario.

1924

Morrisburg's motor traffic for the week of July 30th to August 5th totalled well over 5,000 cars, 500 of which were American. The census of the traffic covered the River Road and the Morrisburg-Ottawa Highway.

Words cannot express our gratitude to Branch 48, the Golf Course and the people of Morrisburg for the comradeship and hospitality shown towards us.

We would like to thank the Legion Choir, the staff and volunteers at both the Legion and the Golf Course, the owners of the golf carts who donate their use every year, which without their generosity this event would not be possible.

Also the bus driver for offering his services and bus for the tour for our non golfers, Terry and The Leader for the pictures and copies of the paper for our members, to the Legion for the Colour Guard and Gord McGregor for piping us into the golf course, and Bob Sprague for the entertainment on Saturday night.

With that long list of people that we are grateful to, it's hard to believe we were there for only two days. You really went out of your way to make us feel special. That is why we feel this weekend is like a homecoming with our family and we anxiously await the next year.

Wishing everyone good health, happiness, and prosperity.

Noise complaints go unanswered at Matilda Council

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MATILDA—Council decided not to act on noise complaints filed against a radio-controlled model airplane club.

After listening to a delegation of local Matilda club members, the township staff felt it would be too difficult for them to regulate noise levels in the township.

"If a petition comes, council will have to deal with it then as it sees fits," said Reeve Charles Barkley, suggesting the township preferred to leave the matter alone, at least for the time being.

This decision was a relief to Matilda model airplane enthusiasts Alan Jackson, Charlie Jackson and Gary Smith, who had been invited by council last Thursday evening to explain the operating procedures of their club, which practices in a farmer's field off Fulton Road.

In its fourth season of operations, the club has eight local members, four of which are township residents and four are guests of the club. Members recently participated in the Iroquois summer festival, and have been practicing for upcoming tournaments in which they compete for points based on their handling skills.

In explaining why they'd been asked to appear before council, Councillor Bev Sabourin said she'd heard repeated complaints from a neighbor living adjacent to the practice area, who had been threatening to put together a petition from like-minded residents.

Sabourin said she and the other councillors wanted to find out more about the club, especially issues which could be of potential safety concern to township residents.

"The people there are complaining you're out there all the time. It's a continuous noise," she told club spokesman Alan Jackson. "I think the thing is, it's steady. And we've heard some concerns over planes flying over houses."

But the club membership down-played suggestions they were causing a disturbance. Alan Jackson said the club practices no more than two to three nights a week plus a few hours Sunday afternoons.

And he dismissed suggestions the planes could be a potential danger to residents' properties. Club members establish themselves in a pit area in the southern section of the field to ensure their planes stay to the north, east and west, he said, away from the houses. To maintain control of the planes, he added, operators must keep the plane within viewing distance at all times.

"The only time they'd be flying over someone's house is if the operator ran out of fuel and had to let the plane glide back" to the safety of the field, Jackson said. "We're careful. These things cost a lot of money."

This latest confrontation was by no means the club's first with neighbors, Jackson admitted. On one occasion, he'd heard up to 30-40 gunshot blasts going off over the sounds of his airplane engine. These bullets, he inferred, were aimed at his airplane because he'd heard them "whizzing by his head."

Reeve Barkley said he wasn't sure the township staff could regulate the hobbyists even if they wanted to — the club had the land-owner's permission to operate on the site, and recreational activities constituted a permitted land use. And he dismissed any suggestions of establishing a noise control bylaw.

"Where do you take it: it's too general, especially in a rural area. We'd have to close a certain number of businesses down."

In the meantime, Jackson and the other club members are looking for a new isolated area to call home. They must vacate their present location after this season because the landowner plans to build a house there.

"I'm sure there will be a place for you in the Township somewhere," said Reeve Barkley. "I think it's a great hobby. It's just unfortunate they make noise."

Environmental Commissioner Villeneuve to tour the OETIO

MORRISBURG—Eva Ligeti, the new Environmental Commissioner of Ontario, will be in Morrisburg early this afternoon, as part of a cross SD&G tour with MPP Noble Villeneuve.

The purpose of the visit, Villeneuve suggested, is to familiarize the new government appointee with the various issues of importance to people of the riding.

"I wanted to point out some of the positive things we've been doing in Eastern Ontario," the MPP said.

At 2 p.m., the entourage will take a tour of the Operating Engineers Training Institute of Ontario. Meeting there with Administrator of Training Kingsley Cole, they will discuss the environmental training conducted at the site, and the various types of heavy equipment involved in the remediation of contaminated sites.

"The handling of waste is very important, and you in Morrisburg have one of only two such operating engineering units in Canada. It's important she knows it's there and how it's run," Villeneuve said.

There were three Liberals and two Tories on the selection committee which finally settled on Ligeti for the new position, Villeneuve said. It's still far from settled what her responsibilities might be. "It's a first; she's breaking new ground."

A major issue the local MPP wants to bring to the attention of the former environmental lawyer is the deep concerns being expressed by farmers and landowners over the wetland designations. He's arranged a meeting earlier Wednesday morning in Bainsville with SD&G Warden Charles Sangster to discuss the issue.

"Many landowners didn't know their lands would be designated to restrict its use. The property owners weren't advised it was happening, and they weren't given the rights they should have."

Villeneuve also would like to bring to the new environmental commissioner's attention the need to begin a program to shore up some of the eroding shorelines there, especially along the east side of Lake Francis. Presently, the Ministry of Natural Resources isn't allowing any man-made rip-rapping to be done to stabilize the shoreline, fearing it could interrupt the spawning grounds along the waterfront. Villeneuve said if the government doesn't act soon, there won't be any grounds for spawning left.

"How long could they stay as spawning grounds if the erosion continues like this? The trees there are falling into the water."

Other areas scheduled on the tour include a visit to the Domtar Cardboard Recycling Operation in Cornwall; a tour through the proposed 11,000 acre BFI recycling site in Roxborough; and a brief stop at the Cooper Marsh Facility in Lancaster.

Legion recognizes veterans WWII heroics

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MORRISBURG—Canadians, and especially the national media, should be doing more to celebrate the 50th anniversary Celebrations of D-Day, said Legion Service Officer Ross Hummell in an address to World War II veterans Saturday afternoon.

"Unfortunately, I do not think the 50th Anniversary Celebrations are living up to my expectations," Hummell said, scolding both the print and TV media for devoting almost exclusive attention to scandals such as the O.J. Simpson murder trial at the expense of the historical anniversary.

Hummell said he fears younger people won't be able to understand "the spirit of patriotism" which made Canadians of the 1940s willing to risk their lives so that the world might be free and a better place to live in.

"If (these events) are not recalled at this time during your life, I am afraid they will be lost forever. It has been said that a nation that forgets its past has no future. We as members of the Royal Canadian Legion should be doing more to bring your service to the attention of the younger and future generations. Your service to your country is a glorious chapter in our country's past and should be handed down to future Canadians as part of our heritage."

Hummell made these comments following a special ceremony at Branch 48, where President Lloyd Merkley awarded commemorative 50th anniversary pins to WWII veterans who belong to the local branch.

World War II Veterans 25th Anniversary

The Morrisburg Branch of the Legion recently honored local veterans who bravely defended their country during World War II. More than 60 Legion members who fought in WWII recently were honored with individually numbered bronze commemorative pins with the words "We Will Remember" inscribed along the edges. A special ceremony was followed by a light dinner and a 1940s-style theme dance at the Legion .

Organizers were very pleased with the turnout, despite the wet weather. A majority of the 63 specially-numbered bronze pins were handed out personally following a brief ceremony at the Waterfront Memorial.

Among those in attendance was Corporal Norm Amell, a former Oak Leaf recipient, who'd served in campaigns in Italy, Africa, Belguim and Germany, and was part of that proud Canadian contingent to liberate The Netherlands at the end of the war.

He said he "really appreciated" the efforts of the local branch in helping to commemorate the occasion.

Former air craft mechanic Frank Ostrander also was on hand.

"I feel very proud," he said, admitting he would have liked to have been more a part of the action but was a little young at the time.

The commemorative pins, about two inches in diameter, were shaped in a big V with the number 50 centered in between. With the legion crest on the top and the words "We Will Remember 1939-45" inscribed on the bottom, the pins looked impressive, and were a worthy "sign of recognition for those who served their country so well."

Hummell said he hoped the WWII veterans "wore them with pride as a symbol of appreciation" from their comrades at the Royal Canadian Legion.

Navy crewman Ed Rice, a veteran of the North Atlantic campaign, said he would.

"It's nice to have one. The only problem is, no money came with it."

Following the ceremony, the assembled veterans listened to a number of selections from the Legion Choir and the Brockville Pipe Band, under the direction of Ken Larocque. Padre Donald Prunner followed with a brief prayer, and then the guests enjoyed a light dinner, served by the Ladies Auxiliary.

Later that evening, members enjoyed a 1940s-style dance, led by Don Morrell and his orchestra.

Activities coordinator Judy Laurin said she personally would like to thank everyone who helped support the committee's efforts during these past few months in putting the special day together. She encouraged Morrisburg residents to visit the Legion Hall and take a look at the "great looking display of artifacts" collected and put together by members Paul Taillefer and Gerry Bowen.

Horticultural Societies to meet here September 17

MORRISBURG—The members of eight Horticultural Societies which form district #1 of the Ontario Horticultural Association, will meet for their Annual Meeting in Morrisburg on Saturday, September 17th at 8:30 a.m.

Organizers have been successful in obtaining an outstanding speaker for this event, Trevor Cole, curator of the Dominion Arboretum. Readers of the Ottawa Citizen will recognize Mr. Cole (as well as Brenda Cole) as authors of many horticultural items which provide practical information to gardeners of Eastern Ontario.

expertise on "SHADE GARDENING" . Unlike suburbia, our rural communities have a wealth of magnificent old trees which present limitations to gardeners. How does one cope with shade as well as the particular soil PH and loss of moisture? What plants can satisfy a gardener's yearnings for color in these shaded areas? Put your questions to an expert.

For those who would like to become more successful in horticultural competitions, an O.H.A. Judge will provide "TIPS on COMPETING" . Callie Basham could run a two week course on preparing horticultural exhibits but in one hour she will explain how to select, collect and prepare flowers and then incorporate them into a winning design. This is your chance to query a judge on what they look for in flower arrangements; how to avoid the wilted look and how to plan your design.

These presentations will take place in the comfortable auditorium of the Operating Training Engineers Institute of Ontario, located just east of Morrisburg on Highway #2. A buffet lunch will be served in the dining room looking out to the Seaway channel.

Registration is only $10.00 (deadline is September 6th,) but is limited to members of the eight participating horticultural societies. For a $5.00 membership, anyone can become a member, so if you wish to join, contact your local society's secretary: Morrisburg 543-3308, Iroquois 652-1355. Morrisburg members may register on Saturday, August 20th at 7.00 p.m. at the Summer Flower Show or when they are contacted by the telephone committee.

Prizes will be awarded for flower arrangements in three classes:

I—"Russell's 75th" (Russell Society is 75 years old) a front facing arrangement, up to 24 inches in height (including container)

II—"Welcome Newcomers" (Cornwall has joined District #1) miniature arrangement with a maximum of five inches in any direction

III—"Looking Ahead" (An optimistic look to the future) free form arrangement, size within reason for transport

Second place, and a 28" stero TV was won by Greg Outerkirk of Berwick, 3rd by Trevor McKay of Maxville who won a Berkline Reclining Chair; 4th, John Marikay Bailey of Napanee, a VCR; 5th, Sandra Hollingsworth of Long Sault, a microwave oven; 6th, Earl Riddell of Cardinal, a gas barbecue; 7th, J.C. Kitchen of Martintown, a Workmate plus gift certificate and 8th, Stan VandenBosch of Chesterville, a clock radio. Randy Casselman, Barb Blackburn win club championships

LAURIE DAY
Leader staff

MORRISBURG—For Randy Casselman it was his first time, but for Barb Blackburn, it was a repeat performance.

The Morrisburg Golf Club held its Club Championships here over the weekend where Casselman and Blackburn were the top golfers of their fields over the two-day event.

Casselman fired an impressive four-under par 67 here Saturday in a round he says saved the championship for him.

"Thankfully, I had a good round Saturday, or I couldn't have won this," he said as he nodded to the club cup.

Sunday, Casselman ran into trouble as he posted an 83 on rounds of 39-44.

"I was having a good round," he said. "I made a nice 15-foot putt, (to win it) but I bogied eight and doubled bogied nine. It was a good thing I parred the last three holes," he added.

Brian Dyck, one of Casselman's playing partners, was right on his heels at that point, as both golfers were tied at the 16th hole.

After playing the 16th, Dyck birdied the hole to lead by one.

On the 17th, Casselman stroked a par and waited for Dyck to do his own damage, which he did as he double-bogied the hole.

Casselman took the lead again, but only by one stroke.

On the final hole, Casselman made his 15-footer count for the par, while Dyck two-putted for a bogie.

Another playing companion, Tim Smith, who won the event last year, said it was a good round of golf by the two players. "It was tense down to the wire, " he said. "But Randy's putt saved the day. I'd say it was about a 16-footer."

Dyck finished with a 41 on the back, and added that to a 37 on the front for a round of 78.

It was that close to being a husband and wife club championship, as Barb Blackburn picked up the hardware for the ladies.

"This is my second championship," said Blackburn. "I won it in 1992. I didn't play in the tournament last year, because we were on holidays."

Last year, Barb Sheridan won the event.

Blackburn put together a two-round total of 175 on daily scores of 88 and 87 to claim the Fetterly hardware.

Other low scores

Jim Sage captured the low gross award for B flight golfers after a sudden-death playoff on the 18th hole with Shawn Duvall who were tied with 156s.

Sage fired an 81 Sunday, and added that to a first-round score of 75 for a 156 total.

With a 166 and winning the C flight low gross honors was Dan Rice. He shot rounds of 86 and 80 for the top spot.

Other low scores were carded by Russell Cameron with a 153 on rounds of 75 and 78 for a 153 total, and Blake Barry, and Kevin Duvall, both with 154.

D girls have playoff

For the girls of D class, there was a playoff between Elsie Guindon and Jane Lee to decide that flight's winner.

Guindon claimed the low gross of the flight with a 224 total on rounds of 106 and 118, while Lee took the low net honors with a 144 total (74-70).

In C class, Linda Barkley was the low gross winner with a 194 total with two rounds of 95 and 99. Vanessa Guindon took the net honors with a 75 and a 77 for a total of 152.

B class winners were Ricki Cottrill with a 197 gross on rounds of 98 and 99, and Donna Dillabough picked up the low net honors with a 149 (78-71).

Elaine Harward was the low net winner of A flight after carding a pair of 75s.

Morrisburg Golf Club Champions
Barbara Blackburn and Randy Casselman were crowned the Morrisburg Golf Club Champions when they finished the two day tournament Sunday. Blackburn had a fairly easy time of her championship as she beat out all others in her field by approximately 10 strokes. Casselman, on the other hand, sweated it out right down to the wire as he was tied with Brian Dyck with two holes to go. He had a phenomenal first round, firing a four-under par 67, and added that to an 83 Sunday for a 152 total. Dyck ended with a 154 after a bogey on the final two holes. The Ladies low net winner was Elaine Harward, while the men's B class winner was Jim Sage.

$800 raised for Juvenile Diabetes

LAURIE DAY
Leader staff

WILLIAMSBURG—Although there were only half as many people out for the annual Juvenile Diabetes tournament here Saturday, there was still over $800 raised.

In fact, since the fund-raising golf tournament started six years ago, Shirley and Gerald Belanger, the organizers of the event, say they have raised over $8,000.

"We usually raise over $1,000," said Shirley, "but the way the economy is now, trying to raise money is getting tougher to do."

The couple's son, Blair who is 17 this year, has suffered from diabetes for a number of years. Although Blair is a well-controlled diabetic, his parents still want to be able to give a little money to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation of Canada on a yearly basis.

"This tournament is our way of raising a bit of money for the JDF, and we will probably still do it when Blair gets a little older," said Shirley.

During the two-ball tournament, it was the father-daughter duo of Gary and Lea Anne Munro who turned in a 76 for the low gross of the day.

They had rounds of 39 and 37 to take the top honors.

The low net overall was won by Pete Brown and Carol Cassavoy with a 65 which was decided on back holes. With a 14 handicap, the pair fired rounds of 39 and 40, just missing the low gross of the day by three strokes.

Second low gross went to Shane and Helen Greer with an 87, while second low net was won by Mark Vanasse and Heather Blaine with a 65.

The most honest couple was Loyal Brunt and Eleanor Smith, although their score was kept secret.

Third place with a 91 low gross was won by the host couple, Gerald and Shirley Belanger, while Lyle and Jean Mattice won the low net prize with a 71.

Merle and Pat Reaney picked up fourth low gross with a 92, and Lorne and Elaine Kuntz won the low net honors with a 72.

In fifth place were Al and Rosina Thompson with a 101 gross, and Hugh and Marg Blaine with a 74 low net.

There were special prizes won by the golfers who were closest to the pin. For the men, Pete Brown was the winner, while Betty Cole was the ladies' winner.

There was also a special presentation made by Shirley Belanger to Eunice Munro for all her help over the years of the fund-raising tournament.

"We also really appreciate all the generous donations from the various local businesses and companies," said Shirley. "Because of their generosity, we were able to award all those who took part in the tournament with a gift of appreciation."

JDF benefit game players
Saturday marked the sixth annual JDF golf tournament at Cedar Glen Golf Course, and here are just a few of the winners from the day. Pictured at the back from the left, Gerald Belanger (organizer, and third low gross winner), Pete Brown (low net, and closest to the pin winner) Gary Munro (low gross of the day), Shirley Belanger (organizer, third low gross), front row: Lea Anne Munro (low gross of the the day), Betty Cole (closest to the pin) and Carol Cassavoy (low net of the day).

Terry Fox Run

September 18th marks, what organizers are hoping to be, the first annual Terry Fox Run in Morrisburg.

Last year, Ross Hummell tried to organize this event, but no one showed up!

Let's try and help Ross out this year. He's already had one organizational meeting, but is in need of some bodies to help with the event that is scheduled to leave from the Morrisburg Legion that Sunday.

There will be different categories to enter into, including biking, walking, a 10km running event, as well as a walk-a-pet-a-thon.

If you would like to help out, or need more information, please call Ross at 543-2034.

Seaway Spartans

The Seaway Valley Spartans dropped a 3-0 decision in Cornwall and District Soccer League action to the Osnabruck Cosmos in Ingleside last Sunday.

Seaway started slowly as they were short-handed and were unable to stem the Cosmos even with a full team later on in the game.

In other action, the Spartans travelled to the James D Canuel Memorial Tournament in Perth where they lost their first game, 2-0 to the Ottawa Hotspurs.

In their next game, the upset the hosting Saints 1-0 on a goal scored by Ben Norgaard.

Seaway then lost to an undefeated Arnprior team 1-0 and was excluded from further play in a three-way tie for second place of their division by a 1-3 goals for/against average.

Seaway only has three games left in the regular season, the next one being against North Dundas in Chesterville tomorrow night (Thursday).

Hopefully, the Spartans will be able to end the season on a winning note.

Cutting Horse Classic

IROQUOIS—This weekend marks the 11th annual Eastern Canada Cutting Classic to be held at Siebenfeld Equestrian Centre, Iroquois, Saturday and Sunday.

This inter-provincial tournament between the Ontario and Quebec Cutting Horse Associations will begin at 10am (rain or shine) each day, and spectators are welcome as there is no charge for admission, but are advised to bring lawn chairs.

The sport derives from the need of ranchers to separate cattle in a working situation to brand them, doctor them or ship them.

Cornwall Aces gear up for opening of new season

CORNWALL—In an effort to assist the Cornwall Aces as they enter their second season of play in the AHL, a dedicated group of volunteers representing a cross section of the City of Cornwall and District, has formed an advisory board.

The purpose of this board is to ensure the long term success of the Aces as an asset to the economy of our community and to enhance the quality of life of our citizens.

This 11 member board has been formed to assist the Aces marketing department in developing and implementing strategies that would benefit the Aces, hockey fans and local businesses with the potential advantages with what a pro franchise has to offer in the community.

"We all have to work together to ensure the success of the Aces," said George Assaly, the Boards' Chairman. "All of us on the board are hockey fanatics who want to see the Aces here for a very long time."

The advisory board consists of Chairman Assaly, Marcel Belanger, of both Cornwall Motor Sales and Belanger Chev-Olds of Hawkesbury, Newell Brown of Long Sault, Huron Hockey School's Brian Gilmour, Lawrence Lapierre of Cornwall Minor Hockey, Gilles Lascelle of the Days Inn, Sherry McCullough of the Aces Booster Club, Bill Parisien of Cornwall, Fred Pletsch representing the Media, Rick Shaver of the Chamber of Commerce and Ernie Thompson of Akwesasne.

"We have a great group who are volunteering their time to make this work," added Assaly. "We are working closely with Anne Vaughan, Aces' director of operations."

Booster Club

Shortly after the AHL Southern Division Champions' inaugural season came to an end, a group of dedicated fans, led by Sherry McCullough, got together to form an Aces Booster Club. The Club, 156 members strong, has been meeting regularly since June planning various events for the upcoming season.

The mandate of the Booster Club will be to provide support to the Aces marketing office in promoting the hockey club throughout S.D. & G. and Northern New York.

The Booster Club will also give the players and their families an opportunity to become an active part of our community, through player of the month luncheons, team barbecue, and a team Christmas party.

The Club will also be organizing bus trips to away games during the upcoming season.

During the last general meeting newly appointed Head Coach Bob Hartley addressed the club with positive anticipation for the upcoming season.

Anne Vaughan, updated the Booster Club on the Aces marketing strategies and season ticket drive.

Elections were held to elect a club president and vice president with Alex MacDougal and Lize Viezel taking the positions respectively.

Anyone interested in joining the newly formed Aces Booster Club is invited to attend the next general meeting to be held Tuesday, August 23rd at the Cornwall Civic Complex in Gallery 1 at 7 p.m.

Radio deal

For the second consecutive season, the Cornwall Aces will be on the air.

The AHL franchise announced recently an agreement with CFLG FM 104.5 to once again broadcast the entire Aces 80-game schedule.

"We are extremely pleased to be once again, associated with CFLG, staged Anne Vaughan. "The CFLG signal can be heard clearly throughout Eastern Ontario, Western Quebec and Northern New York where we have a considerable amount of interest!"

Returning will be CFLG News and Sports Director, Fred Pletsch, who will be the voice of the Aces.

"I'm extremely excited about the Aces' second season," he said.

"Last year, the Aces had a pretty god club and with a strong nucleus of players coming back, they will once again be very competitive."

Pletsch was joined in the broadcast booth last season by former Toronto Maple Leafs' coach Doug Carpenter on all home game broadcasts, and was assisted by Todd Hambleton of the Standard-Freeholder when the Aces were on the road. At this time, it is still not been determined if either one, or both, will be returning.

"The actual broadcast of the game will be very similar to last season," said Frank Holiday, CFLG program director.

"We are very proud to be associated with professional hockey in Cornwall."

The first broadcast for the Aces second season will be on Friday, September 30, when the Aces host Binghamton.

Williamsburg wins race

RIVERSIDE HTS.—The South Dundas Industrial Fastball League will kick off their playoff round here tonight with the first place Sidewinders taking on the number four ranked Riverside Raiders.

The Raiders fell to the Rebels in their only game last week, to drop to the fourth position in the standings.

The Rebels then took possession of the third place spot and will meet up with the Pigeon Island As in their first round of the semi finals.

In the deciding game between the Raiders and the Rebels Monday night, the Rebels took an 8-2 decision with a high-scoring first two innings.

Henry Looyen, Mark Lauzon and Corey Zufeld each scored to open the first frame, with winning pitcher Dan Hogaboam smashing a two run single.

The Raiders replied with a home run by Doug Coleman to start the rally, followed by another solo blast by Bobby Jack Hart.

In the second inning, Bobby Hart took over for Doug Coleman on the mound but he ran into trouble after hitting the first two batters he faced.

A pair of walks loaded the bases for Mark Louzon who got on from a fielder's choice and Dave Dupreau and Shawn Zeron scored.

With one gone, Dan Hogaboam flew out to right field but brought in the team's sixth run when Ed Gove crossed the plate.

In the third frame, Hart struggled some more on the mound as he had no help from his defence with two more unearned runs scoring.

Dupreau and Zeron scored for a 8-2 lead, which turned out to be the final.

In the fifth, Scott Nichols took over on the hill and put away the Rebels before any more damage was done.

Last Wednesday, the Rebels claimed a 3-1 win over the Iroquois Crushers with all three tallies coming in the sixth inning.

Mark Donnelly, Kent Pilon each singled and scored, and Kenny Konick scored some insurance.

Bruce Mullin singled for Iroquois and scored the team's only run in the first inning.

Dan Hogaboam claimed the win striking out eight, and Bob Renwick suffered the loss.

Williamsburg claimed their final win of the season with a 2-1 decision over Iroquois last Wednesday.

Steve Casselman scored to start the rally at the bottom of the third as Joe Hummell took credit with the RBI single.

In the fifth, Mitch Hutt scored from Dwayne Hummell's two base hit for a 2-0 lead after five.

A walk to Randy Mullin gave Iroquois" RAl Renwick the opportunity to close the gap to 2-1 with an RBI single.

Shawn Lapier popped one to centre field to end the game with Williamsburg's 2-1 lead intact.

Don't forget, the playoffs get under way tonight at 7:30, as The Raiders meet Williamsburg, and the Rebels take on Pigeon Island.

IN MEMORIAM

WHITTEKER-In loving memory of a wonderful son, James Paul, who entered eternal rest on August 19, 1974.
There is a bridge of memories,
From here to Heaven above,
That keeps him very close to us,
It's called the bridge of love,
As time goes on without him
And days turn into years
They hold a million memories
And a thousand silent tears.
To us he was very special
What more is there to say
Except to wish will all our hearts
That Jim was here today.
_In deepest remembrance, Dad, Mom, Isla, Garry, Mary and families. 33p

IN MEMORIAM

CASSELMAN-In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Orval who passed away August 22, 1992.
It's lonely here without you
We miss you more each day.
For life is not the same for us,
Since you were called away.
It broke our hearts to lose you
The day God took you home.
-Lovingly remembered, sadly missed by wife Audrey and family. 33p

VAN ALLEN-In loving memory of a dear mother, mother-in-law, grandmother and great grandmother, Goldie, who passed away August 23, 1993.

Fall Fair at UCV

MORRISBURG—Interested in participating in the Upper Canada Village's Agricultural Exhibition?

The Agricultural Exhibition or "Fall Fair" held on September 17 and 18 recreates an 1860s community event with period rules and regulations applying to all entries in many different categories.

Categories include livestock, agricultural and dairy products, vegetables, flowers, domestic manufacturers, ladies work and fine arts. Strict guidelines have been drawn up to make sure that entries are as close as possible to the 1860s description.

Although the Village interpreters will be the main exhibitors in the Fair, public participation is encouraged as well. Those who wish to enter may obtain specific information and a copy of the Fair prize list by calling Kimberley MacLennan at 543-3704.

All entries must be registered between 8.00 a.m. and 12.00 noon on Friday, September 16. First, second and third prize cards will be awarded in each category. Gift certificates redeemable at the Village Store will be awarded to first, second and third and discretionary prize winners.

For more information, please contact the Village at 543-3704. Brood mares, boars, fat stock, dressed flax, embroidered work, fancy knitting, honey in the comb, fulled cloth and flowers such as amaranthus, snapdragon, foxglove and calendulas are just a few items which will be judged at the Fair.
