Burglars Raid Local Store Secure Haul of Dry Goods

A. T. David's Store Entered by Front Door as Jimmy Used to Pry Open Locks.—Thieves Also Believed to Have Stolen Gasoline at Munro's.

Burglars early Tuesday morning made a rather good haul from the store of A. T. David, in the Kearns Block, when they carried off 25 suits, six overcoats, 12 ladies' dresses, numerous ties, gloves, and toilet sets as well as three stacks of shirts, amounting in value to around $500.

The front door was jimmied to open the Yale lock and provide entrance. The burglary is believed to have taken place around one o'clock in the morning, because at that hour Bob Hanna, on his way to meet the midnight train from Montreal due shortly after one, saw a motor car dash away and speed south on King street from Munro's garage, where it was afterwards learned the lock on the gas pumps had been smashed and a quantity of gas taken.

The first learned of the David burglary was when Bill Clark noticed a folded shirt lying on the walk in front of David's store and on investigation found the front door open. Constable Garnet McLean was at once notified and with Provincial Officer Rose of Morrisburg has the case in hand.

Police say they have knowledge of where a considerable quantity of merchandise stolen from store in the district has been stored and they are biding their time until the goods are moved so they can nab their man.

ALLEN—MILLEA.

The marriage was solemnized this morning at St. Mary's church by Rev. Father P. J. Keaney, of Miss Florence Millea and Mr. Frank Allen, two popular Chesterville young people.

THE BOY OF YESTERDAY.

I HAVE appreciated the privilege of serving you during 1935 and wish it were possible at this time of year to stretch out my hand and extend to you personally greetings appropriate to the season.

Unfortunately, I cannot do this, and so I send you a greeting impersonal, but none the less sincere. May your Christmas be crowned with joy, and your New Year filled with prosperity and happiness.

Sincerely yours,

W. O. Dixon

WIFE OF FORMER PASTOR INJURED IN BUS CRASH

Mrs. W. S. Weary, wife of the late Rev. W. S. Weary, of Ottawa, a former rector of Holy Trinity church here, was seriously injured in a bus crash in Iroquois Tuesday afternoon when the Ottawa-Prescott bus in trying to avoid hitting a horse attached to a sleigh skidded on the ice and side-swiped a tree. Mrs. Weary suffered injuries to her head and hip and was removed in an ambulance to the Civic hospital, Ottawa. Five other passengers in the bus also received injuries and suffered from shock.

Local Auto is Wrecked.

Clarence Labre, Town, Injured in Accident Near Gananoque.

Monday evening as Clarence Labre was returning form Gananoque, his car, a Ford roadster, skidded into the ditch, smashed against a telephone pole and was badly wrecked. A few miles east of Gananoque when Labre was meeting a horse drawn vehicle his car struck an icy patch on the road and was quickly turned over. Mr. Labre had his right shoulder injured when he was crushed between the telephone pole and the side of the car and was very fortunate to have no bones broken.

First High School Principal Sends Donation to Fund

Geo. H. Steer, K.C., of Edmonton, Was in Fight to Establish Local High School.—Later Studied Law

Mr. Geo. H. Steer, K.C., of Edmonton, first principal of Chesterville High School, in writing to Reeve W. H. Casselman enclosing a cheque of $10.00 for the Community Hall fund, says: "I am glad to do this for old times' sake." It will be remembered by many that Mr. Steer was associated with Mr. Casselman, then Chairman of the School Board, and Dr. A. S. Morrison, in the endeavour to have a High School established in Chesterville, which was brought to a successful conclusion. Mr. Steer was then prinicipal of Chesterville Continuation School. After giving up teaching, he studied law and at present is a prominent member of the legal profession in Edmonton. He originally came from Guelph. It may be noticed from the foregoing that Reeve Casselman is always in the thick of the fight when this community requires some outstanding improvement.

ANOTHER FORMER RESIDENT HELPS OUT SPECIAL FUND

Kingston, Dec. 23rd, 1935.

Dear Mr. Casselman,-

On behalf of Alice and myself I enclose you Ten Dollars as a contribution towards your new Community Hall in token of the many happy memories and loyal old friends of dear old Chesterville for whom we will always have the most kindly feelings.

Yours sincerely,
L. A. ZUFELT.

125 Beverly Street.

GOOD ICE AT SKATING RINK.

With a good sheet of ice for hockey and pleasure skating at the rink, the same prices as last season will prevail for season's tickets, that is: Family season tickets $8.00; Ladies' tickets $2.50; Gentlemen's tickets $3.50; High School pupils, $2.50; Public and Separate School pupils', $2.00; General admission 15c, children 12 years and under 10c.

Should curlers be organized for the season, it will in no way interfere with pleasure skating as the small section of the ice required for curling will be well provided with safeguards both for the curlers and the skaters.

MANY CHILDREN SEE SANTA.

When Santa Claus stopped off in Chesterville for a few minutes Christmas Eve, at the invitation of the Boy Scouts, he was greeted by about 200 children. The jolly old chap was seated at the tree on the Community Hall grounds and to each child he gave a sack of candy. The Scouts formed a line with their ropes and staffs so that everyone had a chance to meet Santa and they had their hands full handling the large number.

Reservations Being Rapidly Made For Official Opening

300 Tickets Expected to be Sold for Banquet Which Will Be Attended By Prominent Persons.

Big plans have been bearing fruit for the official opening of the Community Hall a week from to-day and a treat is in store for those fortunate enough to secure tickets, of which only 300 are to be sold. Half that number has already been picked up by the forehanded and it is likely that every seat will be disposed of before the eventful night.

While Hon. Leopold Macaulay, former Minister of Highways for Ontario, has graciously consented to be present, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and Col. Drew are doing their utmost to clear their engagements for that date and join the citizens of the community in opening their new hall. Mr. L. Chevrier, M.P. for Stormont, and F. B. Brownridge, M.L.A. for Stormont; Hon. George H. Challies, M.L.A., and Col. A. C. Casselman, M.P. for Dundas-Grenville; Mr. C. F. Marselis and Mr. P. Elliott will also be guests of the committee in charge.

Everything to the last detail is being well taken care of by the committees in charge and the response that is being made by every one approached shows that the whole community is interested as never before in a like project.

Mention has been made elsewhere in this issue of the splendid donations from men who still remember pleasant years spent in this community, and who are glad to have an opportunity to show their appreciation in a way that will permit good times to be enjoyed more intensively by the citizens of to-day. By no means does all the gratitude for unsolicited donations go to outsiders. Last week a very gracious communication was received by Reeve Casselman from the popular parish priest of St. Mary's congregation, Rev. Fr. Keaney, accompanied by a cheque for ten dollars to add to the special Community Hall Fund, and so the good work goes on.

REEVE H. H. NESBITT ANNOUNCES RETIREMENT

H. H. Nesbitt, reeve of Winchester township for the past five years, four of which he was returned by acclamation, has announced his intention of retiring from municipal activities at the end of his present term. Mr. Nesbitt has guided the township's affairs through all the years of the depression with remarkable ability, effecting a tax rate reduction from 12 mills in the general rate to a present rate of five mills. W. J. McConnell, for the past four years deputy-reeve, will be a candidate for the reeveship at the approaching nomination.

Christmas Passed Quietly in Chesterville District

Ideal Christmas Weather Prevailed and Family Gatherings are Numerous.

With ideal Canadian Christmas weather, Chesterville citizens passed the day as has been customary, in family gatherings enjoying the good things provided to the fullest extent. Notwithstanding the rather high price of turkeys, dealers and farmers who supplied the local market report about the usual number sold, with geese probably topping the list as the main attraction of the Christmas dinner. Without a cloud in the sky throughout the day the sun failed to add much heat to the atmosphere which stood at the zero mark at eight in the morning. A day like yesterday for the holiday years ago would have seen the streets crowded with fancy turnouts of horses and cutters with flowing robes in all their luxuriousness but not so now. However, one lover of a spirited horse could not be lured into motoring during the sunny afternoon when Jack Fawcett held a steady rein over his fine driver.

Church services were well attended by worshippers commemorati... Nativity. St. Mary's chur... crowded for the celebration ... night Mass and again for the ma... on Christmas morning. Rev. G. O. Davies celebrated Holy Communion at Holy Trinity church at 11 o'clock after holding similar services at St. Matthias, Winchester, at midnight, and at St. Peter's, South Mountain, at nine o'clock.

Aged Metcalfe Man Dies After Leaping From Truck

Henry Palmer, 80, Excited When Light Vehicle Skids on Corner.—Dies From Shock.

Metcalfe.—Henry Palmer, 80 died Saturday night 20 minutes after he was injured leaping from a moving automobile on the Ottawa-Morrisburg highway near Greely.

According to a youth named Garvelle, passenger in the car, and Carl Palmer, son of the victim and driver of the machine, the elder Palmer apparently got excited when the light truck skidded rounding a curve; he opened the door of the cab and leaped out. Carl Palmer's attention was momentarily diverted from his driving by his father's action and he lost control of the car. It turned over but neither Garvelle or the younger Palmer was injured.

Dr. Byers, who attended Mr. Palmer, attributed death to shock. An inquest will be held, Dr. J. E. Craig, coroner, presiding.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Breeds For Crate Feeding.

The best breeds of poultry for crate feeding are the general purpose types such as Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes or the heavy types such as Jersey Giants.

Corn Borer Increase.

There has been a striking comeback of the corn borer in Ontario this year. The Provincial Entomolologist reports an average increase of between two and three-fold over last year. The increase was brought about chiefly by the very favourable weather for the insect last June and July. In counties where there was no clean-up last spring the insect multiplied much more than where the clean-up was made. This outbreak has shown that the borer is still a real menace to corn growing.

Some Hints on Honey.

Granulated honey can be brought back to its liquid form by standing the container in water and heating it to 150 degrees Fahrenheit. A higher temperature than that is likely to darken the colour of the honey and drive off aroma and flavour. As soon as the honey has become liquid, cool it as rapidly as possible, but do not put into the refrigerator.

Honey absorbs moisture from the air and loses aroma and flavour rapidly; therefore, it should not be kept uncovered any longer than is necessary. Keep extracted honey in a cool dry place, but honey in the comb should be stored where it is warm and dry.

Cornwall Ploughing Meet.

Although official announcement will not be made until the annual meeting of the Ontario Ploughmen's Association at Toronto in February, members of Cornwall Board of Trade have been given assurance that the International Ploughing Match and Farm Machinery Demonstration will be held at Cornwall in October, 1936.

The four-day event is expected to attract from 75,000 to 100,000 people, and the Cornwall Board gave its unanimous endorsement to the scheme.

J. W. McRae, Lochiel, and J. J. Tierney, Brockville, vice-president and director respectively of the Ontario Ploughmen's Association, stated that a survey had been made and suitable lands found in the immediate vicinity of Cornwall. They had received assurance that 135 to 150 teams of horses could be obtained for the match. With these factors settled, they were in a position to state that the match would be held near Cornwall, providing they could be assured of Civic and Counties' Councils and the citizens in general.

Crate Feeding Poultry.

Modern methods of production have so simplified poultry raising it has been made possible for poultry meat to become an every-day article of diet. Too much of Canada's poultry is marketed in an unfinished condition, consequently dry and tough and, too frequently, poorly dressed. Poultry to be appetizing must be well fleshed and properly dressed.

There are two principal methods of finishing poultry — pen-feeding and crate-feeding. The former method is generally used for turkeys and waterfowl, the latter for chickens of all ages. Some feeders follow the practice of pen feeding for a couple of weeks and then "finish off" in crates. Batteries are commonly used in intensive plants, but for ordinary farm use crates are equally satisfactory and are inexpensive. The quarters where the birds are to be "finished" should be dry, cool and well ventilated, and the birds should have quiet and freedom from excitement.

The general purpose or heavy weight breeds are best suited for crate feeding and best results can be expected only where strong, vigourous, sturdy type birds are used. Before starting the finishing period, the birds should be dusted with flour of sulphur or some other suitable preparation to ensure their freedom from lice.

Anaemia in Pigs.

Reports are often received of the large mortality among little pigs prior to the age of weaning. The little pigs which have usually been doing well and putting on weight suddenly become unthrifty. They lose weight, the hair becomes rough and the pigs appear listless. Diarrhoea is a common symptom. If examined they are found to be very pale and anaemic which is most apparent in the white of the eyes and in their bloodless ears, and by the absence of a healthy pink colour from the skin. Deaths due to anaemia are frequent.

This condition is due to deficiency of iron in the blood and is particularly serious in larger piggeries, where the pigs are on a carefully balanced ration.

The treatment used at the Kapuskasing Experimental Station has proved very satisfactory and consists of a powdered "reduced iron" which can be purchased at any drug store. Absolute accuracy of dosage is not important, and for practical purposes the quantity can be roughly measured as the amount which can be piled up on a small Canadian one cent piece. Each pig is caught, the iron placed on the back of the tongue, the pig marked and put back in the pen; this is repeated evey other day, starting when the pigs are 4 to 5 days old until they are three weeks old or rather as soon as they start to eat from a small trough.

Canadians Win Honours At Chicago International

Farmers from Canada who exhibited at the 36th ainual International Live Stock Exposition and 17th annual International Grain and Hay Show held at Chicago from November 30 to December 7, 1935, demonstrated the high quality of their products entered in competition with those from all parts of the United States and other countries by winning a substantial list of championships, first prizes and hundreds of lesser awards.

A tabulation of the prize lists shows that Canada won 18 championships and 12 reserve championships, ten of the former being for sheep, two for cattle, one for horses and five for field crops—wheat, field beans, field peas, soy beans and white corn; eight of the reserve championships were for sheep and four for field crops—wheat, field beans, field peas and alfalfa seed.

What is regarded as the outstanding honour won by Canada at Chicago was the winning of the wheat championship which was awarded to W. Frelan Wilford of Stavely, Alberta for his exhibit of Reward wheat, a hard red spring variety developed by the Cereal Division of the Experimental Farms Branch.

Another particularly notable award was won by G. Gordon Finlay, Northwood, Ontario, who carried off the championship for soy beans against a big field of competitors. His win this year made the third time in succession he has won the soy beans championship, and consequently he will not be allowed to compete at the International for another three years.

Field Beans — H. Graham, Iron Springs, Alberta; reserve championship—George Taylor, Milford, Ont.

Field Peas — James W. Shearer. Morrin, Alta.; reserve championship —C. W. Stirling, Sidney, B.C.

Alfalfa Seed—Reserve championship, Ellsworth Francis, Renfrew.

The championships for sheep were awarded to famous breeders from Ontario who have been winners of blue ribbons for several years, among them being C J. Brodie, Stouffville, Ont.; Charles J. Shore, Glanworth, Ont.; H. M. Lee, Highgate, Ont.; John D Larkin Inc., Queenston, Ont.; H. Noel, Gibson, Komoka, Ont.; and John D. Patterson, Richmond Hill, Ont.

Oh, My!

It was one of Mother's busiest days. Her small son came in with his trousers torn. His mother helped him to change into another pair, but in an hour or so he was back, his trousers torn. His mother helped him to change to another pair, but in an hour or so he was back, his trousers torn again.

"You go right upstairs, remove those trousers and mend them yourself," his mother ordered.

Some time later, she thought of him and went upstairs to see how he was getting on. The torn trousers were lying on a chair, but there was so sign of Johnnie. Returning downstairs, she noticed the cellar door was open, so she called down loudly and sternly: "Are you running around down there without your trousers on?"

A deep voice answered:

"No, madam, I'm reading the gas meter."

The kindergarten teacher was telling her class about the canary bird.

"Can any little boy tell me what a canary can do that I can't?" she asked.

A hand went up.

"All right, Marvin."

"He can take a bath in a saucer."

Miss Jamieson Again Heads St. Andrew's W. M. Society

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's church was held at the home of Mrs. R. J. Barrie on Thursday afternoon last with the president in the chair. The meeting opened with the Apostles' Creed being said in unison and the hymn "Joy to the World, the Lord is Come." The scripture reading was taken from St. Matthew 1, and Mrs. Barrie led in prayer. The secretary, Mrs. J. A. Munro, read the November minutes which were adopted. Each member replied to the question: "Why Are You a Member of the W.M.S.?" as the roll call. The hymn, "Who Is He in Yonder Stall?" was sung. The president gave a very fine Christmas entitled "Invisible Glory," rom St. Luke, ii:16. The treand secretary reported for the showing an increase of over 30 cent. All the 1935 business was ed and the president thanked the mbers for the splendid spirit own throughout the year and the eady co-operation. Mrs. J. A. Munro poke on behalf of the auxiliary in return, thanking the president for her leadership and what she had given to them in the past year of her time and energy. The hymn, "Holy Night," was used for closing the regular meeting and Mrs. J. A. Munro took the chair for election of officers with the following result:

President—Miss Jamieson,

"Till We Meet Again" was the closing hymn and prayer by the president closed the session. Mrs. Barrie served lunch assisted by her daughter Ethelwyn, for which she received a vote of thanks voiced by Mrs. Perkins.

Antics of Quintuplets Force Change to Be Made

Young Ladies Have Learned to Turn on Lights and Stage Midnight Frolics.—Switches Are Moved.

Callander.—Now the Dionne quintuplets have taken to switching on lights in the middle of the night, forcing Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, their physician and Guardian, to make another change in their nursery before they celebrate Christmas.

First he introduced unbreakable dishes when the quints had smashed several dozen plates and saucers by tossing them on the floor. To-day workmen completed installation of shatter-proof automobile glass in the nursery. The girls had broken 25 windows in two months, mostly by throwing alphabet blocks through them.

Electricians Follow Glaziers.

When the glaziers finished the latest defence against the quints' pitching arms, electricians set to work moving the electric light switch to prevent recurrence of the midnight parties the quints have been staging lately.

Perhaps she was looking for Santa Claus when Yvonne, always the most venturesome of the five, woke up the other night and, standing in her bed below the light switch, reached up and turned it. The nursery was flooded with light, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie and the fun was on.

Moved to Another Bed.

Nurse Yvonne Leroux heard them giggle and then try to climb out of their beds. She put a stop to all that and the next night Yvonne was moved to another bed away from the switch and Cecile took her place.

It was four o'clock in the morning before Cecile turned on the lights. The nurses suspect Yvonne put her up to it. The same performance was gone through again and this time the bed was moved far away from the switch.

Dr. Dafoe preferred its original position, so the switch was moved and the bed returned to its place, while Dr. Dafoe and the nurses wondered what prank the 18-months-old babies would stage next.

THIS THING CALLED CREDIT.

IN WHICH ALAN CAMPBELL, BANK MANAGER, SHOWS A LOCAL INDUSTRIALIST THAT BUSINESS IS THE THAT BUSINESS IS THE REAL CREATOR OF BANK CREDIT AND BANK LOANS.

By Peter Thomson in The Financial Post.

"SURPRISING but satisfactory," remarked Edward P. Marks as he leaned back in the chair.

"Why surprising?" asked Alan Campbell as he picked up the promissory note from the desk which separated the two men.

"These days, you know," answered Marks, "everyone says the banks won't give credit and . . . "

"Wait a minute, wait a minute," interrupted Alan, "I've been manager here in Remford for ten years; every fall you've been in, and have I ever given you less than you've asked for; and haven't I always suggested that I'd be glad to let you have more?"

Some Say . . . .

Marks scratched his head. He'd been reading the newspapers more of late. Unconvinced he answered: "Yes, but some say you bankers aren't providing enough credit to go round. I don't believe in that Social Credit stuff myself but if the banks would loan more to business, things would be a lot better all around. The more will grow and the more you have to loan."

Alan was silent for a moment. For twenty years, ever since he left high school in fact, he'd been with the bank. He sometimes reflected he had not done badly to be manager in Remford which, as the Chamber of Commerce sign on the Toronto highway announced, had "20 Industries, a Happy Population, Sane Labour, Two Railways and Water Transportation."

To gain time, Alan coughed. Not because he had no answer, but because he could not find the right words. For twenty years facts and figures had usually sufficed to express his views.

Offered and Refused.

Pressing his advantage, Marks continued, "Now, if you would only increase your loan to me . . . ." Just then the sun, coming from behind a cloud, flung a beam of bright sunlight from the window across the desk. It seemed to lighten the entire office. It must have also exerted some benign effect on the banker's soul for, throwing caution to the winds, he lit into Marks with a crisp "All right. You can have all the money you need. How much will I make the note for?" The manager fingered the promissory note as if he intended to tear it up.

"But I don't know whether I can use more money just now," answered Marks.

"Oh yes you can," continued Alan, "you've often told me of your plans for getting into the cloth end of the business. You could produce cloth as well as leather goods. You could increase the number of hands you employ by twenty . . . ."

"By thirty," interrupted Marks.

". . . .and they would all open accounts with me. Everyone would be happier. Come, how much more do you want?" demanded Harold.

Marks swallowed before answering. "I don't think I should take any more than that five thousand," he replied, pointing to the note in Alan's hand.

"Why not?" shot back the manager.

"Well, to tell the truth, I don't know that I could pay it back. You see, I think I should wait to finance that out of my plant earnings rather than borrowing it," answered Marks. Alan was relieved. Bank managers are not trained to four-flush. His tones grew serious and rebuking. He said: "I've solved a very great mystery then."

"What mystery?" Marks asked the manager.

"All through the depression," answered Alan, "people have been saying that we, that is the banks, haven't given enough credit. We've been told continually that we create credit out of thin air. But I see now that it is all wrong. It's fellows like you who create credit by finding markets for your goods and by both making and borrowing money."

"But you people have all the money . . . ," began Marks.

"Yes, and it's decent business men like yourself who lend it to us," Alan replied; "we cannot create credit out of nothing. You've created your credit by initiatve, the way bank credit and all other credit is created. All you have to do to get another $10,000 from us is to find some way in which you can repay it." Alan was speaking freely; he knew his man would not ask for five cents more than he could repay. He continued: "The banks want to increase commercial loans but it is fellows like you who prevent us. You have not been smart enough to find markets for more goods, you've not . . . " But Marks had risen. He could not take it. But he wanted the last word; as he reached the doorway he turned and said: "Well, your bank holds a lot of government bonds instead of lending your money to industry."

"I'll tell you about that another time," laughed Alan, as his customer departed.

Lindberghs Quit America To Seek Solace in England

Fear For Safety of Their Three-Year-Old Son Forces Famous Flier to Take Secret Leave of Homeland.

New York.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, his wife and their three-year-old son, Jon, driven into voluntary exile by threats against the child, were well on their way to England to-night where they expect to make their permanent home.

Driving against rough seas, their vessel, the tiny American Importer, combination freighter and passenger ship was near the "Ocean Corner," the spot where outbound craft turn toward Europe.

Now she is following the "Great Circle" course—a lane only a little to the south of the one the unknown flier took on his famous flight to Paris eight years ago.

It was a stunned world that awoke Monday morning to the news that Colonel Lindbergh had left his own country to seek refuge for his family in a foreign land because of dangers and threats against which they felt there was no adequate protection at home.

Governor Harold G. Hoffman, chief executive of the state in which the famous flier had come to believe his son was not safe, merely remarked that he presumed the Lindberghs had good reason for their decision. Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, commanding the State Police, which Colonel Lindbergh had praised on the witness stand at Flemington, and David T. Wilentz, Attorney-General, both said, "No comment."

In Washington, J. Edgar Hoover, head of the investigating division of the Department of Justice, was equally reticent.

The news was received in England with surprise tinged with joy. The law enforcement bodies were informed before the rest of the country. Police Commissioner Valentine of New York cabled Scotland Yard, and at once that organization started preparations which were duplicated in every port where it was thought possible the travellers might land.

Although public officials there had little to say, there was plenty of informal comment.

It was revealed that one of the final items in a series of distressing incidents that drove Colonel Lindbergh to make a decison was the report that politics had entered the Hauptman case. Another report that disturbed Colonel Lindbergh was one that Governor Hoffman was looking to a reorganization of the State Police with the replacement of Colonel Schwartzkopf by Major Mark O. Kimberling, now warden of the state prison and formerly a state police officer under Schwartzkopf.

Throughout the country the situation that forced the departure was declared by the press to be "a national disgrace," a "humiliating reflection on law and order in the United States. One paper blamed "yellow journalism," others "inexcusable meddling" in the Lindberghs' private life, and several held the intervention of Governor Hoffman into the Hauptmann case to have been "the determining factor" in bringing about the decision.

Most newspapers expressed the hope that the family's action would stir American public opinion into concerted action against crime in general and kidnapping in particular.

It doesn't cost to advertise in The ...cord. It Pays.

We have tried to think
Of some good reason
Why you should
Buy Furs
At Burkholder's.

We have just one to offer—
This is a good store.

We don't say it's the only good store
There are others,
But if you buy from a good store
We too will benefit,
For all good stores have a common cause.
The name of Burkholder
on your Furs
Is a token of
A High Standard of Quality.

Need of Sound Business Stressed For Recovery

Sir Edward Beatty Warns of False Wave of Optimism Spreading Over Canada.—Too Many Depend on Tricks of Law or Money.

SPREADING across Canada today is the same false optimism which led to the excesses of boom years and which resulted in the national distress of the depression, Sir Edward W. Beatty warned 1,250 members of the Commercial Travellers' Associaton in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

Too many Canadians believe to-day that it is possible to make business good by some ingenious trickery of currency or credit or legislation, Sir Edward declared.

In an address which sharply condemned social credit, inflation and socialism, the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway further expressed his belief that freer expansion of credit by banks could not possibly make for better business in Canada.

Asks Travellers' Help

"At present I notice a growing inclination in this country for people to talk as though our present business system was a complete failure," Sir Edward stated. "It has its abuses and I should be the last to deny that. It is, however, a very complicated machine which on the whole works not too badly and those, like the commercial travellers, who gain their living as cogs in this machine might do worse than undertake to familiarize the public at large with the workings of our business system."

Social Credit was an appealing idea, he admitted, and was a great attraction for people who have been short of money for several years.

"But how many of you commercial travellers who visit the province in question have taken the time to discuss it with the merchants whom you meet?" he inquired. "Do you think that your credit men will allow you to accept orders for goods to be paid for in this new sort of money. If they will not, how can the existence of money add to the purchasing power of the people to whom it is issued? They might, of course, be able to spend it for goods within their own province. Sooner or later, if it is to be useful money, some merchant will be forced to ask you whether he will accept it in payment for a bill of goods. You know what he will say."

The idea that freer expansion of credit by banks would stimulate business in Canada, he continued, was based on the assumption that if merchants in the province, for example, could go to the banks for larger lines of credit, then they would be larger purchasers of the goods which are offered for sale.

Hits Disastrous Results

"Do you wish to sell goods to merchants merely because they can be persuaded to buy them?" the speaker asked. "As things stand at present, most manufacturers and large commercial houses in this country are able to obtain all the credit accommodation which they need to enable them in turn to sell goods to established merchants on reasonable terms of payment. Would it be good business for a general increase to take place in merchants borrowing from banks? How many of you know of cases where merchants were kept from buying goods because their own line of credit was too small? Has it not in your experience been almost always the case that the merchant could get the goods, provided he could show you, and you could show the credit men, that he had a reasonable prospect of selling them in a reasonable time and at a profit? Beyond this limit nothing could be worse for this country than that merchants should buy goods as a result of finding it easier to obtain credit."

Governments could do but little about altering the volume of business in Canada or any other country, Sir Edward continued. In most cases, he said, attempts of governments to improve business conditions had resulted either in the lavish spending of Government money or else in inflation. Both of these so-called remedies had always ended in disaster, the speaker believed.

Not Pessimistic

"I am not being pessimistic when I stress so much the danger of business seeming to be better than it really is," he declared. "I believe that this country, with the greatest provision of natural resources per capita of all the countries in the world, should be able to furnish employment not only for all its present people but for many more. I believe that we shall do it. But my sole reason for all the warnings which I try to give you to-night is that I see growing in this country to-day exactly the same spirit of false optimism which led us to the excesses of the boom years and, in consequence, to the distress of the great depression."

Canada needed to-day a period of good business on sound foundations, Sir Edward declared If everyone in the country commenced to talk again in terms of rising stock prices, he warned, stock prices would rise whether the rise was justified or not. If a speculative boom of this kind should develop there could not be the least doubt, in the speaker's opinion, that it would reflect itself in a rapid increase in the production of goods, and in the earnings of the railways.

But the expansion of commerce and transportation must be on a sound basis if it is to last, he warned. In Canada, where agriculture and primary production in general were the staple industry of its citizens, Sir Edward believed that permanent recovery must come from recovery in primary industry.

A PURPLISH TINGE to the skin with intense itching of the part, followed by a blister with severe pain, the blister breaking down later into an open sore which is slow to heal—that is a chilblain.

Chilblains do not endanger life but they destroy happiness and may even ruins tempers in the holiday season The feet suffer most frequently; often the hands are affected and sometimes the ears. Chilblains happen as a result of poor circulation in the parts affected.

Children who are in poor health are frequent victims. This may be due to defective circulation which accompanies a low standard of nutrition and vitality.

The floors of stove-heated houses are usually cold. This is particularly true of the kitchen which has no cellar or an unheated cellar beneath it. The housewife who spends much of her time standing on cold floors is likely to have chilblains.

Tight shoes and tight stockings interfere with the circulation in the feet and so predispose to chilblains. Thin shoes and stockings which allow the feet to be chilled do the same thing. It is bad if the feet and hands are dressed too warmly for then they perspire excessively and later become chilled.

Enough has been said to indicate the lines of prevention. To begin with general attention must be given to the health of the body. Next comes clothing suited to the temperature rather than the season. Tight shoes and stockings are to be avoided, and round garters should not be worn as they interfere with the circulation. Woollen gloves may not be in style but they may still be needed to keep hands warm.

The wrong way to treat cold feet and hands is to hold them close to the fire or heater. To do so causes a sudden rush of blood into the parts and this engorgement with blood is undesirable in those who are predisposed to chilblains.

The right way is to take off the shoes or gloves, bathe the feet or hands in cool water and follow this with a good brisk rub, using a rough bath towel. In this way, the circulation is improved, the extremities are made to feel comfortable and no harm is done. People who are subject to chilblains must not rush to the fireplace or stove when they come in cold. They must keep their cold hands and feet away from the heat.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

A YOUNG JAMAICAN HERO.

The Scout Bronze Cross, given for gallantry at serious personal risk, was awarded a Jamaican Scout, Martin Watkis, 13, of the 15th St. Ann (Mount Zion) Group. Scout Watkis entered a burning house and rescued a crippled woman 90 years of age whose presence in the building had been overlooked until the house was aflame from floor to roof.

Scouts of England to Scouts of U.S.

The contingent of British Scouts for the Washington Jamboree of the Boy Scouts of America had planned to bring as a gift to the American Scouts a fine old grandfather's clock. When the Jamboree was cancelled the clock was sent instead, and now occupies a prominent place at the Mortimer Schiff Memorial Reservation Training Centre in New Jersey.

Training the Whole Boy.

"In Scout training knowledge and skill go hand in hand. So many movements and organizations place lofty ideals before their members, but never explain how those ideals can be attained. In Scouting the boys are never in the dark; they are not just told what to do, but are shown how to do it. The whole boy: soul, mind, body and character, is considered—not just part of him."—Prof. L. P. Jacks, M.A., D.D., Ll.D., D.Litt. addressing English Scout Leaders on "Physical Education."

Toyes Hill

Mrs. Charles Kirkwood entertained the Toyes Hill Branch of the W.M.S. last Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Roy Casselman spent Sunday visiting his father, Mr. Jas. Casselman.

Mr. Payne from Brinston has wired Mr. Wm. Steeles' place for Hydro.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wylie and children spent Sunday evening with the latter's father, Mr. J. Hunter.

Mr. Barrigar of Mountain has wired Mr. Geo. Carter's buildings.

A large crowd attended the dance held at the hall here on Wednesday evening.

"What shall I do?" wailed the young thing. "I'm engaged to a man who just cannot bear children."

"Well," remarked the kindly old lady, "you mustn't expect too much of a husband."

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

EASY TO PREPARE.

I CAN HEAR all of you who prepared a large Christmas dinner yesterday, sitting down with a sigh of relief. Because, after all is said and done, a Christmas dinner party is a lot of work but it gives a great deal of satisfaction too, both to those who just enjoy the finished product and those who do the planning and cooking for weeks ahead to make it a success. Perhaps you'd rather not think of foods and recipes for a while, even so, meals have to be prepared. But you can choose easy recipes that take little time or effort.

FLOATING ISLAND.

2 cups milk
2 eggs
¼ cup currant jelly
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla or almond extract

Scald the milk, but do not boil. Beat the yolks of the eggs, stir in the sugar and salt and add to the hot milk, mixing well. Cook slowly in a saucepan until mixture begins to thicken, stirring constantly. Cool and flavour. Make meringue of the white beaten stiff and into which the jelly has been beaten a teaspoon at a time. Drop the meringue in spoonfuls on to the top of the custard; chill and serve.

PINEAPPLE AND RICE.

2 cups cooked rice
1 cup shredded pineapple
6 tablespoons whipped cream
Sugar to taste

Mix rice and pineapple together well. Sweeten as desired. Fold in the whipped cream. Chill before serving. Garnish with maraschino cherries.

OYSTER STEW.

A generous bowl of oyster stew makes an appetizing supper dish that is easy to prepare. Serve with plenty of crisp salty crackers.

2½ cups milk
2 tablespoons fine cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons butter
¾ teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper
1 pint oysters

Clean the oysters by picking over to remove pieces of shell. Perhaps you may want to wash them by placing them in a colander and pouring cold water through. Heat the milk and crumbs in the upper part of a double boiler. Add butter, seasonings and oyster juice. Add oysters slowly to prevent curdling of the milk. Cook only until oysters are plump. Over-cooking will make the oysters tough. Serve at once, piping hot.

CORN CHOWDER.

This is another delicious soup for cold weather suppers.

2 cups canned corn
4 potatoes cut in ¼-inch slices
1½-inch cube of fat salt pork
1 small onion
4 cups milk
3 tablespoons butter
1½ teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper

Cut the pork into small pieces; put into frying pan over low heat. Add onion; cook five minutes, stirring frequently. Strain fat into saucepan; add potatoes which have been parboiled five minutes. Add two cups of boiling water; cook until potatoes are soft. Add corn and milk; heat to boiling. Add butter and seasonings. Serve hot with crackers.

TURKEY SALAD.

Left-over turkey can be made into a very appetizing salad.

3 cups diced cold turkey
2¼ cups diced celery
2 tablespoons chopped pimento
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper (if possible)
Turkey

Mix turkey, celery, pimento and green pepper together and season to taste with salt and pepper. Chill. Moisten well with mayonnaise dressing and place in mounds on lettuce leaves. Garnish with a spray of parsley, olives, radish roses or hard boiled eggs.

CREAMED TURKEY ON TOAST.

1½ cups cooked turkey
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon celery salt
Few grains cayenne
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup turkey stock
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley

Make a white sauce of flour, butter, milk, turkey stock and seasonings and heat turkey in it. Serve on slices of hot buttered toast. Sprinkle chopped parsley on top of creamed turkey just before serving.

This mixture may also be served in patty shells, croustades or poured over hot tea biscuits. Vegetables such as peas, celery or mushrooms may be added. Another variation can be had by placing creamed turkey or creamed chicken in a casserole with vegetables, cover with crumbs and brown in the oven. A whole meal may be cooked in one dish, thus making the dish washing task lighter.

She was giving a bridge party. When the patter of tiny feet was heard upstairs, she raised her hand for silence.

"Hush," she said, "the children are going to deliver their good-night message. It always gives me such a feeling of reverence to hear them. Listen!

There was a moment of tense silence, then, shrilly: "Mummy, Willie's found a flea!"

"What would a nation be without women?"

"Stagnation, I guess."

—o—

"He died in harness, poor chap."

"Yes, and, by the way, did you ever notice how much like harness life is? There are traces of care; lines of trouble; bits of good fortune, and breaches of faith. Also tongues must be bridled, passions curbed, and everybody has to tug to pull through."
