O.P.P. to Police Morrisburg Soon

Morrisburg Police Department will come under Ontario Provincial Police control in the near future. At Monday's meeting of village Council, Clerk Lloyd Barkley was authorized to enquire into exact duties coming under OPP jurisdiction and at what date the changeover might be made.

The decision followed lengthy discussion relative to salary and car allowance for the existing police force. Due to lack of agreement by all members of Council, the decision to accept the OPP proposal was reached.

Use of the Civic Centre auditorium for a benefit dance was granted to Mitchell Cassell, manager of the Morrisburg - Williamsburg Intermediate Hockey Club. The purpose of the dance will be to raise funds to assist injured players not covered by insurance, to defray medical expenses. Following a request by a local restaurateur to sell drinks, chips and chocolate bars at the Saturday dances in the auditorium, it was suggested that club members be permitted to raise additional funds in that manner.

Council had submitted a brief to the Board o fGovernors of the St. Lawrence College of Applied Arts and Technology outlining advantages of locating at Morrisburg, where the present High School building will be available at the close of the present school year. L. A. Lindsay, chairman, reported that a decision had been reaeched to locate at one of the major centres: Brockville, Kingston or Cornawll.

A donation of $50 was voted to the Morrisburg Jets Girls Softball teeam.

A recommendation for lighting of the parking area at the north of the Civic Centre was discussed and it was felt that some action should be taken. No decision was reached.

Police Chief Thomas Duval reported that $270 had been collected by magistrate's court on 12 convictions; 15 complaints had been received and investigated during the month of January.

Jean to Seek New Riding Nomination

Mrs. Jean Wadds, M.P. for Grenville-Dundas has announced her intention to seek the Conservative nomination for the new federal riding of Grenville-Carleton, it was reported at the Progressive Conservative Association's inaugural meeting held recently in Kemptville. R. A. Bell, sitting member for Carleton County has not given any answer to the question. He said he would announce his decision at a later date.

A poll taken at the meeting indicated that Mr. Bell would have little trouble getting the Grenville-Carleton nomination because of the large number of Carleton delegates who would attend a nominating convention. However, the con census was that it was unlikely Mr. Bell and Mrs. Wadds will face each other at a convention until shortly before a federal election is imminent.

There have been rumours that Mrs. Wadds might be asked to run in Leeds and that Mr. Bell might seek election in one of the urban Ottawa polls. Neither rumour has been confirmed.

At the inaugural meeting of the new riding, which includes the west half of Dundas County, Chas. Farlinger of Morrisburg was elected second vice president. Other officers, all named without contest, were: Don Irvine of Prescott, president; Sidney B. Handyman, Bells Corners, first vice president; Donald Hutcheson, Nepean Township, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Jack Toshack, Prescott, assistant secretary treasurer.

Both M.P.s in the new riding have voiced strong opinions on the question of the Conservative Party leadership and both were strong supporters of Dalton Camp in his move to have a leadership convention in 1967.

Mrs. Wadds paid tribute to Canada's most famous politician, Sir John A. Macdonald, saying, "We need to maintain some of Sir John A.'s buoyancy. Certainly we have some problems, but so had he"

Speaking of the youth of today, she said, "I find these pioneer children of the space age having much in common with our pioneer forebears It may be another type of courage, but they face horizons equally unknown as those of 1867".

Mr. Bell cautioned the meeting that "Grenville-Carleton looks like a good bet for the Tories, but it will be no pushover." By the end of 1967, he said, it will probably have a population of 100,000 with half in the burgeoening area around Ottawa, residents who have not yet absorbed the political traditions of the three old counties. These will reequire persuasion.

Speaking of the Party leaders up, president Don Irvine said: "I would hope that when a national convention is held, the Wadds-Bell views will prevail and we will see a new leader of the party". He added: "I know a new leader won't correct all our problems, but when a ship is on the rocks, there is only one place to change . . . and you can't change the deckhands".

Mrs. Jean Wadds, M.P.

OPP Broomball

Last Thursday night at the Morrisburg Arena, Mungo's Manglers were edgeed 3 to 2 by the Ottawa Detachment team known as the Black Muslims.

This game was a hard-fought contest right from start to finish. The Manglers jumped into an early 2 to 0 lead on goals by defenceman Schooner Goalen and hangy forward Flipper McGregor. "Bob" Blackie Richardson caught the Manglers' goalie, Brutus Noble, and the defence napping and rammed in two quick counters to tie the game at 2 all. This set the stage for "Clay" Pigeon, who rushed the length of the ice, deked goalie Noble and salted away the winnere. The classy Manglers never quit trying and had the Muslims on the ropes in the dying minutes, but they were unable to notch the tying marker.

Next week, on Saturday, the Manglers are in Iroquois, where they play the Iroquois Legion in the carnival thatis to be held there.

Morrisburg opened the scoring at 3:32 of the first period, with Rick Rushford putting in a pass from Casselman and Gillard. Buckingham's Phil Fong tied it up at 6:15 with an assist from Larry Brazeau and the score remained tied until the second period.

Bob Aube put Buckingham ahead at 3:26 of the second and they stayed in the lead for 13 minutes, till Jim Forrest, with help from Gillard and Cameron, tied it up again. Forrest scored again 2 minutes later to give Morrisburg the lead.

The start of the third period saw the first penalties of the game, McMillan of the Combines and Laurin, of the Aces, each picking up a minor for slashing. Half-way in the period, Fritz Gendron took a hooking penalty and Aces Serge Talbot took advantage of the short handed Combines to even the score 12 seconds after the penalty was issued.

In the last ten minutes of the game, Morrisburg scored three additional goals to grab the lead and keep it, Doug Casselman scored the winner, while the Aces were serving a penalty for having too many men on the ice, and Forrest and Rushford each added a marker for insurance.

Next game is Friday (tonight) in Morrisburg.

TORIES IN TROUBLE IN NEW RIDING?

"If the Conservatives in the new federal riding of Grenville-Carleton are indicative of Tories across Canada, then the Conservatives are in trouble", say the last issue of the Prescott Journal And the weekly paper in Mrs. Wadds home town goes on: "Conspicuous by their absence at the inaugural meeting of the new riding association in Kemptville last Wednesday night were young people.

"We don't mean tenn-agers; we mean young men and women under the age of 35. What we saw at the Kemptville meeting was a sea of gray-haired supporters, dotted sparsely with the odd young man or woman. This was an historic meeting for the Tories of the two counties, and there should have been more drum-beating and hoopla in the preceding weeks to advertise it.

"Wednesday night's meeting was too, too typical of the political fare that has been offered Grenville and Carleton residents in past years. The speech making was conservative, with Mrs. Wadds dealing with an ultra-safe eulogy of Sir John A. Macdonald, and Dick Bell tossing angry anti-French tidbits about the Civil Service to a loyal Anglo-Saxon audience. Even Senator McCutcheon's gravel voice and good wit failed to get the supporters off their hands for anything but a token response."

Although the former riding of Carleton, once since Confederation elected a Liberal, when Lloyd Francis trimmed Dick Bell, it is next thing to heresy to suggest that history could repeat. Both Mr. Bell and Mrs. Wadds are immensely popular candidates, of course, and in an election, it is more than possible that disgruntled supporters of either one, might support some other party in a protest vote.

HAS ANYONE SEEN THOSE PROMISED DAYLINERS?

A couple of times recently we have had occasion to use the facilities of Canada's national railroad system, first having to travel to Brockville to use them, and these occasions brought the reflection that this organization has on its staff some of the greatest prevaricators outside the ranks of moose hunters.

It seem only a short time ago that Morrisburg, and other small towns along the line had train service almost as good as the larger cities. Then one day, the village council, the press, and a few others were invited to a meeting with railroad officials. These worthies talked at some length about "progress", more efficient operation of the C.N.R., and many other things, before getting to the main point, which was that several of their trains which had previously stopped at Morrisburg, would now be stopping no longer. And further, that after a few more months, NO regular passenger trains as we had known them, would be making stops at the local station. To offset this loss, we were told, and to provide train service to those who wished to use it, the C.N.R. would run "dayliners" self-propelled coaches between the smaller towns which would connect with larger trains at the larger centres. Well, these samll-town councils or most of them, took the officials at their word, and raised no serious objection to the discontinuance of the former service.

The officials kept their word, but only the first part of it, — the regular trains ceased stopping at Morrisburg,— but the dayliners — — they forgot about that part of the promise. The first one has yet to put in an appearance at the local station.

AN OFFICIAL CREST FOR MORRISBURG?

One project, we would suggest for the Morrisburg Council during Centennial Year, could be the adoption of an official crest for the municipality. Although Morrisburg has been an incorporated village since before Confederation, there has never been such a crest, to our knowledge.

What are YOU doing to mark Canada's Centennial. Are you one of the Canadians who is sitting back and criticizing THEM because THEY are not marking this most important anniversary properly? Have you thought, that if you do something to improve YOUR property, YOUR village, YOUR church, that the whole of Canada will have benefitted, and that Canada — — your little corner of Canada — — will be a better place in which to live?

A LITTLE DAB WILL DO YA

A little dab of color here and there into her life and Greta Veblen, played by Patricia Harty, becomes the occasional wife of Peter Christopher, played by iMchael Callan in a new series called Occasional Wife, seen Thursdays on the CBC-TV network.

...Never leave parcels, clothing, cameras or other items of personal property in a parked car. The temptation for a thief is great if he sees an expensive camera lying on the seat of your car. Place all personal property in the trunk, prior to parking. If you must leave your keys in the car, leave only the ignition key. Keep the trunk key in your possession.

...Were you one of the more than forty thousand people who had their car stolen last year. If so, then the following message is for you. The biggest percentage of stolen cars are ones where the doors have been left unlocked or the keys in the ignition. Truly an invitation to a thief. Never leave your keys in the car, always lock all doors and windows.

More on education

This was supposed to be part two of a series on education in this country. Last week, I complained about: obsolescence; the lack of everything but pupils; the unfairness of the fund-raising for education; the lack of any national standards; and the rigidity of practically everything in the system. Not bad for a start.

In all the years I wrote this column before I began peddling pedagogy, nobody tried to suppress my opinions here. Many disagreed violently. Others threatened to cancel their subscriptions. Some said I was vulgar. And one reverend gentleman even offered to thrash me within an inch of my life. I reminded him that my big brother was a six-foot-two, 210-pound engineer, and I never heard another word.

The first hint that I should tone it down came from a representative of the mighty t e a c h e r s' federation. Said they'd had several letters from members urging that I be drummed out of the service because I was destroying the teacher's image by mentioning here such human horrors as sex and drink, and by using the odd epithet.

He asked me heavily what I would do in his position. I replied lightly that I'd do what I always do with letters from cranks and bigots — chuck 'em in the wastebasket. He was annoyed. Pinned down, he admitted there were two such letters. And I was annoyed.

Second subtle suggestion was from an inspector. A lady. She passed the word that the Deputy Minister, no less, was concerned about my column and its contents.

I turned indigo and snarled, "You mean the Department is trying to tell me what I can say and can't say in my column?"

"Nononononono!", she blurted, visions of headlines dancing in her head. "It's merely hoped that you'll use your own good judgment."

Next time, it was another inspector. At the time, a now-defunct newspaper for teachers was running my column. The paper was happy; the fan mail was heavy. But, whispered this inspector, he thought he should tell me, for my own sake, that I was getting in wrong with the federation.

"Waddaya tokk'n about!", I enquired in my best Head of English Department manner. And got no answer that I could pin down.

I seem to be down on inspectors this week. And so I am. We got the word the English inspectors were coming. I alerted my 15-odd birds in the English department.

Next morning, the English staff would have gladdened your eye. Gals all in their best dresses, hair fresh-done. Men with their shoes shined. And every single one glowing with virtue after working till one a.m. preparing the sort of unrealistic but model lessons that inspectors expect.

Nine a.m. Word comes that they wouldn't be there. Snowing and blowing. Any of us would have struck off for anywhere. But these city-nurtured drivers are terrified by a bit of wind and snow.

So we shot off all those terrific lessons on the kids. Mine laughed heartily when they saw my desk cleaned off. It was the first time they'd seen me below the breast-bone in months.

And tomorrow we have to do it all over again, because the inspectors are still coming, if they can make it. May they go into a big snow-bank and sit there for four hours. If they do struggle through, it will be an anti-climax. The girls' dresses are crushed and their hair coming down. And I sure as hell am not going to shine my shoes two days in a row.

Just another of the evils of our system. A teacher is given a record of merit by an inspector, who sees him maybe once a year, for one or two lessons. The self-confident showman, who may be a lazy bum normally, whips up a flashy lesson for inspection, and scores high. The self-conscious teacher, who normally does a terrific job, becomes nervous and makes a botch of things, and scores low.

I don't really hate inspectors. They've changed. They are no longer the old terrors, but a pretty decent, helpful lot. But the system is punk.

More next week, maybe.

OPERATION PROTECTION BELT
By A. J. Campbell, R. P. F.,
Extension Forester

About this time of year as bitter west and north-west winds bear tons of snow to your doorstep, do you ever wish you had planted that windbreak? You remember — the windbreak of trees that you vowed you would plant, but forgot about when spring turned the bitter winds to breezes, and the snow to gentle rain. Now is the time for action to forestall the forgetfulness brought on by spring fever.

Plan this belt for protection from snow and wind. You don't have to be reminded that everyone is in a hurry, so join the crowd and plant a species that will grow fast. Red pine or Scotch pine will serve this purpose providing your soil is well drained. This is usually not sufficient, since fast growing species become thin crowned over the years. To offset this problem, plant a slower growing species, such as Norway spruce or White spruce in an adjoining row .Now while the speedy growers spring into action up front, the slower growing spruce san take the time to develop that close, tight foliage necessary for the best windbreak.

Now that the wind has died down let's try and stop that snow before it reaches the driveway. A good efficient wind and snow protection belt should be at least as far from the driveway as the height the trees may attain. This should be 100 to 200 feet west and/or north of the area to be protected. To force the wind to climb over the trees a third row of Cedar, which develops a low, very tight foliage, could be added to the windward side of the belt. As the wind climbs over the top of the trees the snow drops out in the low pressure area on the leeward side of the belt. Remember this process requires at least 100 feet of space. Essentially you wind up with a 3-row belt at 6' x 6' spacing consisting of Scotch pine, Norway spruce and White Cedar. Stagger the trees in the rows for best effect.

This, you say, is ridiculous. If I plant trees 100 feet west of the driveway I will be out in the middle of my best field. You may still have your windbreak.

An alternate means of cleaning your driveway is with a wind tunnel. Plant the belt right beside the west side of the driveway. You will get fallout for a few years, however, as the trees gain height, prune the branches from the ground up a couple of feet. Now the wind and snow hits the tree wall and some of it is forced at an accelerated speed under the trees and across the driveway before it slows down again and drops the snow out. The snow that falls out from over the top is caught in the wind tunnel and whisked away before it will hit the ground. There is that early period of sufferin gwith this method. We have talked mainly about wind protection and protecting the driveway from snow . There are more variations that can be applied. The Department of Agriculture also have excellent data on the protection of buildings from drifting snow and Department of Lands & Forests can advise you on planting.

The catch is, you should order your trees NOW to be sure of obtaining them for spring. Tree planting is only 2½ months away.

HUNGARIAN PARTRIDGE
By R. Belanger,
Wildlife Management Officer

You have no doubt often wondered where this wily little brown bird, often seen in family groups, along your winter roads, came from

Huns, as they are commonly called, were first introduced into this district by former Wildlife Inspector, R. Baker, in 1933 at St. Andrews north of Cornwall. From that point they have spread throughout most of Eastern Ontario and into Quebec. They have had their ups and downs in their fight for survival. Deep snow, crust and freezing rain are usually fatal to them. Under these conditions, coveys of birds fly to the roadside to obtain grit, seeds and green grass uncovered by snow plows.

The Hun is one of the gamiest birds to hunt. Hunters from most of Ontario and the United States are attracted to this district where they enjoy many hours with pointing dogs in search of the quarry.

A little protection during these winter months goes a long way toward maintaining the Hun population.

THE SPORTS BEAT

A letter to Toe Blake

Toe Blake, the gum-chewing soothsayer of the Montreal Canadiens, has joined the land of Virginias . . . wondering if there is in fact, a Santa Claus. His Habs have been stumbling along this season among the lower echelons of the National Hockey League after they were universally picked to finish first and win a third successive Stanley Cup.

After watching Les Canadiens slap down the Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1 recently it is only just that an open letter must be sent to Blake with the thought of once again vindicating his faith in the Jolly Old Elf, as he's with the Habs throughout their campaign.

Dear Toe:

All those nasty sportswriters and thoughtless fans at home and away are wrong.

They have been disillusioned at a time when the entire hockey world is disillusioned.

They only believe what they see, and even then there is an area of doubt.

Ah yes, those poor, unbelieving souls only rely on statistics. They cannot comprehend anything which at times does not appear to be comprehensible on the surface. Theirs is a world of stark reality. They forget the intangible qualities which must be accepted and realized.

Toe, no matter if they be a child or adult, their mental prowess is minute.

In this vast and unparallelled world of sports we are all tiny creatures, lost and befuddled by the inexplicable happenings around us. Man cannot grasp the intelligence needed to solve the mystery of sport.

Yes, Toe, there is a Santa Claus. (Even in February.)

He exists as certainly as goals and penalties and injuries exist, and you realize they are ever prevalent, giving you thrills and despair in abundant packages.

Alas, how dreary it would be if there was no Santa Claus.

It would be as dreary if there was no Toe Blake.

There would be no cup overflowing with confidence and faith in the ability of the Montreal Canadiens.

That eternal flame which flickers forever filling the world of dreams and ambitions would be extinguished forever. Life itself would appear senseless and useless.

Not believe in Santa Claus!

You might as well as not believe in yourself.

Millions of- people sit and watch him week after week, but they do not see him. They do not realize they are watching the great leader of the Montreal Canadiens as he journeys, at times almost unobtrusively, up and down the ice.

The most real things in this world are those which people do not realize.

Have you ever seen a leader among men whimper with pain in public? Of course not. But that's no proof he hasn't had to find an area of privacy to release a groan or moan to relieve the physical hurt.

Again, let me say, even the most observant of hockey followers never see or realize the fine qualities which are hidden inside the human body. It is a world of intangibles they cannot enter.

But this intangibible element is the strongest and most inspiring quality a human being can possess. It is a universal gift he can deliver to anyone, anywhere in the world.

No Santa Claus?

Nay, he lives and plays, and may he continue his role for many, many years.

And as hockey historians recall the names etched with greatness countless years from now his name will always appear.

Yes, Mr. Blake, you and the millions of hockey fans in the world have a Santa Claus. Perhaps the reason you were not aware of it was due to the spelling of his name.

You see, it's spelled, J-E-A-N B-E-L-I-V-E-A-U.

Did You Ever Wonder Why Dominion Sells

ONLY RED & BLUE BRAND BEEF?

Don't be misled by advertising phrases such as "economy beef," "budget beef," "grain fed western beef," "baby beef," etc. Officially, there just ain't no such animal!

The only official grades of beef, as established by the Federal Department of Agriculture, are in order: RED Brand, BLUE Brand, STANDARD Brand and COMMERCIAL Brand.

No cows! No old bulls! No immature heifers! No low-grade stock that has been tenderized by injections!

That's why you can always depend on DOMINION for beef that is naturally tender, juicy and full of flavour. And you pay no more . . . often less . . . for dependable DOMINION meats!

Mrs. Leo Monette received the news on Wednesday of the sudden death of her mother, Mrs. Delaney in Montreal.

A 40-year old Chesterville man was killed early Sunday morning when he was struck by a car near the northern limits of Chesterville approximate to the junction of County Road 7 and Highway 43. Walking east, John Patrick Barrett was struck by a car driven by Stuart Byers. The driver swerved but poor visibility made the action too late to avert striking the pedestrian with the right front fender. Constable Roy Guse, of Morrisburg OPP detachment, investigated.

Sympathy is extend to Mrs. Russell Schwerdfeger of Monrisburg, in the death of her father, John Forest Atchison, which occurred in hospital on Monday, February 6th. Funeral service was held at Metcalfe on Wednesday, with interment in Springhill cemetery.

WOODS, WATER & WILDLIFE

One of the sad things about air pollution is that it ruins the snow ice cream making. Maybe you know that if you mix sweetened flavored whipped cream with about twice as much fluffy, fresh snow, it crystallizes into something absolutely delicious. My wife and children like snow ice cream with "real" maple syrup, but I like it plain, just for the marvellous texture and subtle flavour.

The ideal time to make snow ice cream is during a blizzard, while the snow is clean, white, and pure as a Christmas card. How long after the storm you can make snow ice cream depends on where you live. If you live out in the country, where the air is clean, you can make it a day or two afterwards. But in the city, you'll find a layer of black dirt on top of the snow, even a few hours after it has fallen.

No mystery about this — the air in cities is just very-very dirty. After last fall's big smog scare on the east coast, most people have settled down complacently, thinking the danger is pretty much gone. But air pollution is still with us, and one look at the snow a week or two after it has fallen will prove it to you. After a cold winter of several snowfalls on top of each other, you can measure the winter's dirt by the residue left in layers on the last snow bank of spring. And this is only the stuff you can see — — carbon monoxide and sulphur dioxide, for example, leave no residue. In the city, it's astonishing how fast the snow gets black — - to black for snow ice cream in just a couple of hours.

Here are some tips on making snow ice cream, so you'll be prepared when the next snowstorm arrives.

Before supper, put the serving dishes, pan for getting snow, mixer bowl and beaters in the refrigerator. When you're ready for dessert, send one of the children out with the cold pan for a panful of snow. This is a great adventure, so if the children fight for the privilege, send them all out.

Meanwhile, whip half a pint of heavy whipping cream (no aerated stuff) and add a teaspoon of vanilla and about a quarter sup of sugar. Add the snow gradually until the whipped cream won't take any more and the snow seems to have changed texture.

Make it right at the table — eat it quickly before it melts — and don't use any polluted snow.

MAGIC OF ELECTRICITY POWERS CANADA'S RAPID PROGRESS

Electricity has powered Canada's progress for a long time.

While the history of electric pow er in Canada goes back more than 80 years ,enterprising pioneers in Ontario were in the vanguard of the world's electrical researchers.

In the 1870s and 1880s, just a few years after Confederation, Canadians like Henry Woodward and John Joseph Wright of Toronto, and Thomas Ahearn of Ottawa, were fabricating incandescent and arc lamps, constructing central power stations and designing electric railways.

Credit for the first practical incandescent lamp belongs to Thomas Alva Edison, however. His breakthrough in 1879 assured the future of the budding electrical industry.

Electrical energy was available in Ontario from numerous sources in those early days, but it wasn't until 1906 that the public utility concept of supplying power came into being with the creation of the Ontario Hydro. From that point on the province has never looked back

Today, in partnership with 352 municipal utilities, Ontario Hydro provides more than two million customers with an abundance of low-cost electrical energy.

Each year Canadian pay tribute to the electrical industry and its pioneers during National Electrical Week — timed to conincide with the birthdate of Edison. This year it is being celebrated Feb. 5 to 11.

Fittingly, Ontario Hydro and the municipal utilities will follow up the occasion by kicking off their programs for Canada's Centennial celebrations.

Leading off the list of activities will be the opening of the Hydro Hall of Memory at Niagara Falls in February. Theme of the project is "Public Power and its People". Recorded in the Hall are events leading up to the opening of Hydro's Sir Adam Beck generating sta tion no. 1 — the first major power station built by the Commission, and the careers of people who play ed important roles in the development of public power.

Hydro's major contribution to Canada's Centennial is at Expo 67. Ontario Hydro and Hydro-Quebec are sharing equally in a $1,500,000 exhibit in the "Resources for Man" section of the "Man the Producer" pavilion.

The exhibit will show various sources of electric energy in their present state of development and suggest their roles in days to come.

As well, the Commission will par ticipate in the provincial government's Expo exhibit and focus attention on the Ontario pavilion with a spectacular lighting display.

Hydro also anticipates involvement in Ontario's Centennial Centre of Science and Technology, now under constructon in Toronto's Don Mills.

Out of sight, out of mind. This your parked car has been properly old saying is still tru today. When locked and the keys are in your pocket instead of the switch, the thought of stealing your car never enters the mind of the young person standing around. Lock your car, remove the keys from the switch, remove temptation.

I'm sure you would not want to contribute to juvenile delinquincy of that young lad down the street. Every time you leave your car unlocked or leave your keys in the switch, you are assisting those people, young or old, who are inclined to steal cars. Always lock your car.

SEAFOOD PYRAMID. The lower down on the pyramid an animal feeds, the more is available. It takes 1,000 pounds of miscroscopic plant cells to feed 100 pounds of tiny vegetarians which drift in the ocean as plankton. Plankton animals only support 10 pounds of fish. If a man eats this fish, only one pound of it can be built into his fat and muscle. If he waits for a big fish like a tuna to eat the smaller one, then eats the tuna, his share of the small fish is only one-tenth of a pound. Scientists are looking for the best ways to break into this big-eat-little chain in order to provide new sources of food for the 500 million people on Earth who do not receive sufficient protein for good health. — TNS Photo

The Fifth, and undoubtedly the last, Session of the 27th Legislature of Ontario was opened on January 25th last by Lieutenant-Governor Rowe with usual pomp and ceremony. As this Centennial year has widely labeled as election year in Ontario this session should provide most interesting debates as the two opposition parties endeavour to locate an issue or some issues upon which they can fight a successful election campaign. On the other hand it appears that the government will content itself with a minimum of new legislation and all look for a sunshine budget.

The speech from the throne, delivered by the Leiutenant-Governor, is the outline of each session of the Government's legislative program.This year, it was brief and while it gave notice of some important changes in health and housing laws and regulations, it did not spell out a heavy program. Consequently many members anticipate a short Session, followed by an intensive election campaign; others, however, feel that the Session may be prolonged and that a provincial election may be held later in the year. All, however are certain there is to be such an election in 1967.

Robert Nixon, newest leadre of the Ontario Liberal Party, has made an auspicious beginning in this Session and should prove over the years to be a very excellent leader of the official opposition, a position which he and his Party, it would appear, hope to consolidate in 1967 against the inroads of New Democratic Party leader Donald C. MacDonald and his followers.

The first weeks of this Session, as is always necessary, are devoted to organization of the Standing Committees of the House, introduction of Bills and Resolutions for later consideration and debate, and generally settling in to work. As a result there have been no matters of importance raised in debate and no ltgislation yet considered.

As in the past it is my intention this year, through the courtesy of your Editor, to bring you each week in the columns of this paper a short report on events and legislation in the Ontario Legislature. While I realize that day by day occurrences reach you through the daily press, radio and T.V., I am hopeful that my brief reports will be of interest and may perhaps at times give a more local outlook on these events and new laws.

EDITOR'S NOTE: We have no doubt that Mr. Nixon will be grateful for Mr. Cass' faint praise, but we are just as sure that Mr. Nixon would want to assure the Member from Grenville-Dundas that he did not seek the leadership of his party to "prove over the years to be a very excellent leader of the official opposition". We were in attendance at the recent Liberal Convention in Toronto, and we came away with the impression that it is the intention of the Liberal leader, and of his party, that Mr. Nixon will exert every effort to become the Prime Minister of the next government at Queen's Park, and will be oly too happy to relinquish the position of Leader of the Opposition to Mr. Robarts, or to any other leader who might be named by the Tory Party.

Here are a few tips which may prevent your car from being stolen.

1. Whenever parking your car, lock ignition and remove keys.

2. Secure all vents, windows, glove compartment with doors.

3. Place all parcels and clothing out of sight in the trunk.

4. Keep the trunk key, when parking in a commercial garage or lot.

5. Carry your keys, registration, credit cards and other identifying credentials on your person.

DEAR DORIS
advice from Doris Clark

Still in love

DEAR DORIS — About a month ago my boy friend (17), whom I will call D., and I, broke up. I am 16. We loved each other very much (or what we thought was love).

When he said he didn't want to go steady any more, I agreed that we would still be friends. But he is now going with another girl. She has one of the worst reputations in the school. She gives herself away to boys, if you know what I mean.

She has long black hair, which she combs so it covers half of her face. She also wears cakes of make-up and white lipstick, and her skirts are so short she may as well not wear one.

I heard from a few kids at school that he is going with this girl just to make me jealous. D. and I both come from respectable families. Should I try to get him back?

Still In Love With Him, But Trying To Hide It

DEAR S.I.L.W.H.B.T.T.H.I. — Don't kid yourself that a boy will spend evening after evening with another girl just in the hope that someone he has deliberately broken off with will be jealous. D. goes out with White Lips because she fits his present mood.

Here's your chance to broaden your outlook and play the field. Forget that all-embracing word "love" for a while.

Want my leaflet on the subject?

DEAR DORIS — My mother and father will be married 50 years in March and because of their poor health it will be impossible for us to have a large celebration. As we are a small family and all situated over 100 miles from "home," could you suggest how we could plan a happy day for them when it may be impossible for us to get there?

Also, would it be ethical for me to write and remind cousins and aunts about the up-coming anniversary? I do not want to solicit gifts for my parents, but feel a card or letter to them would be appreciated.

Daugher And Son

DEAR DAUGHTER AND SON — Much can be done by just taking a little thought.

(1) Fifty years of wedded bliss are worth a picture and story in the local newspaper. Write to the editor yourself.

(2) Send personal notes to their old and treasured friends; say you are planning a card shower for your parents, as a Golden Wedding celebrations; and that a card or note from them would be prized.

(3) Arrange for a cake, dinner, flowers to be sent in.

(4) Far better than anything else is to get there to share the day with them. Turn handsprings to make it!

Confidential to Tempted — There's nothing abnormal about being tempted. Everybody has wrong impulses. Just how well you handle them determines the kind of person you are. A Chinese proverb says: You can't stop birds from flying over your head, but you can prevent them from building nests in your hair!

DEAR DORIS — Is it proper at a small wedding for the girl standing up with the bride to wear the same color suit as the bride? Also, could you suggest a color of accessories that could be worn with plum besides winter white?

Bridesmaid

DEAR BRIDESMAID — Better for the attendant's suit to be a different color. The bride has the limelight on her day; others should not seem to rival her, but rather to be her helpers.

Accessories to plum could be a softer shade of plum, or white, or creamy white, or silver gray.

If you're looking for a place to start on home improvements, consider these facts about electric wiring.

To most people, home improvements mean a panelled recreation room or a shiny new set of kitchen cupboards. But there's a way to improve the improvements: modernize your home wiring first.

Up-to-date wiring lets you make the most of the new room you're building, or the old one you're re-styling. It lets you place your lighting wherever you like, have as many electrical outlets as you choose, and use as many appliances as you need without popping fuses.

In fact, you'll notice pleasant changes all through your home. Modern wiring can improve the efficiency of your lighting and the performance of your appliances. It puts such comforts as electric heating and air conditioning well within your reach. It can also make a big difference to the safety and re-sale value of your home. Before you reach for your toolbox, reach for your telephone. Call a qualified electrical contractor, or your Hydro.

Up-to-date wiring costs less than you may think. Yet it could be your most important home improvement of all.

REPORT FROM PARLIAMENT

By Mrs. Jean Wadds, M.P.

Although public interest generally seems to have cooled towards the Armed Forces Unification Bill being debated in the House of Commons, it can be readily assumed that there are many Canadians who feel very strongly about it indeed. The debate continued all this week with continued demands by Conservative Members to be allowed further opportunity to question unification before a vote was taken.

Mr. George Chatterton, Conservative Member for Esquimalt Saanich challenged the Minister to allow more examination of the Bill, saying that it hsould stand up to such a test if it is as good as the Minister pretends.

The bitterness felt by so many who have served ably, loyally and courageously in Canada's Armed Forces is twofold. They invariably and understandably resent their particular branch of Canada's defences being incorporated into what seems likely to become a less colourful, more administrative grouping.

Many brave deeds have been done ,many lives sacrificed and others saddened under the blue of the Air Force, the navy and white of the Navy, the khaki of the Army, the tartans of the Scottish Regiments .One has only to read such an engrossing piece of Canadiana as the biography of General Worthington, by his understanding and gifted wife, to realize the enormous effort that goes into making an Army. It takes enthusiasm, leadership and conviction to prepare otherwise peaceful men to go to war.

If we must anticipate a world, as indeed we must, unfortunately, where war is not yet impossible, then it does seem poor policy to lessen the esprit de corps and the morale of those in Canada's Armed Forces and those intending to join.

Bob McCleave, 45 year old Conservative Member from Halifax, summed up several far-ranging questions when he said:

"The proportion of naval officers and men serving at sea has been shrinking. At one time I believe that over 50 per cent of those in the Navy were serving at sea but I understand that the figure is now under 50 per cent. Can this be said to be a successful defence policy?

There was the case of the short-term pilots who were let out, later creating a crisis in the Royal Canadian Air Force. Can this be said to be a successful defence policy

A dozen or more senior officers have either left with the golden handshake, or have been booted out. These are men who have given distinguished service to Canada, whose views surely must have had a hand in the past in shaping defence policy and whose views, one would think, should be welcomed now. But they are gone. Can this be said to be a successful defence policy?

Admiral Landymore has made the point that even with the few steps in the direction of unification in his own maritime command, the administrative costs have trebled. As one of our objectives in Canada we try to achieve as much for the defence dollar as possible. Yet there appears to be, from Admiral Landymore's statement, a wastage of dollars in administration. Can this be said to be a successful defence policy?

In addition, though the Minister trumpets the virtues of unification to the world, the world does not listen and nobody else is following Canada's lead. Is Canada to be the only nation in the world in step, with everybody else out of step? Can this be said to be a successful defence policy?"

Unfortunately, the Hon. Paul Hellyer has always been accused of an arrogant approach to this huge, important Department. His apparent inability to dispel this accusation has led to increasingly bitter attacks upon him in the House of Commons. Considerable rather pointed publicity which suggests his interest in, if not competition for, the leadership of the Liberal Party, adds to the sharpness of the attacks.

How well Mr. Hellyer handles these barms, which after all are only a taste of what would be aimed at him as a National Leader or a Prime Minister, will be decisive for his political future. How well he has been able to judge and estimate the future needs both mechanically and psychologically of Canada's defence, will be decisive for Canada's future.

MIDDLE MAN. Walter Gordon, just recently returned to an authoritative post in the Liberal Party, has renewed his struggle to keep American interests from controlling Canada's economy. He is currently engaged in a banking battle with the U.S.-owned Mercantile Bank, and is conducting an investigation into foreign ownership of Canadian industry. — TNS Photo

THIS WEEK AND NEXT

by Roy Argyle

The banking issue

The Government's firmness in dealing with the take-over of the Mercantile Bank by the Rockefeller interests suggests a new chapter may be opening in U.S.-Canadian relations.

For the first time, the Canadian Government has been able to resist U.S. intrusion into a key branch of the Canadian economy.

The Mercantile story goes back to 1963 when New York's First National City Bank decided to buy up the Dutch-owned Mercantile Bank. It was Canada's smallest chartered bank, but would provide the springboard from which to jump into Canadian banking in a big way.

As First National chairman James Rockefeller told the story to a committee of Parliament, it was only after his group had bought Mercantile that Ottawa threatened to restrict the bank's operations.

However, a memorandum written by Robert MacFadden, president of First National, mentioned the Canadians had been assured that the U.S. bankers would "come back . . . when the deal is firm . . . to clear with the minister of finance."

This seems to destroy the Rockefeller contention that the Americans didn't get fair warning from Finance Minister Walter Gordon.

When the Bank Act came up for revision, Mr. Gordon designed legislation which would specifically curb Mercantile's growth.

This was done by restricting banks to assets 20 times their share capital. As Mercantile's share capital is only $10 million, it would be limited to holdings of $200 million if this revision becomes law. Mercantile's assets are already, in fact, greater than $200 million.

An ironic sidelight to the argument is that both First National and the Dutch interests which then owned Mercantile, agreed their deal would be subject to the approval of the governments concerned. Approval of both the U.S. and Dutch governments was sought and obtained — but no one bothered to seek the approval of the Canadian government!

Now, First National is stuck with a small bank in Canada which has no prospect of expanding.

This is not, of course, the first time trouble has flared between the U.S. and Canada in the past few years.

Prime Minister Pearson recently earned bitter vitriol from President Johnson for suggesting the U.S. stop bombing North Vietnam. External Affairs minister Martin's clear call for admission of Red China to the United Nations did not enhance our popularity with Washington.

And there was the nuclear arms dispute between the Liberal and Conservative parties in which Washington clearly backed the Liberals, contributing to the defeat of John Diefenbaker in 1963.

But in the current episode, the U.S., for the first time, has threatened to retaliate against Canada. Washington was abuzz with plans to amend U.S. banking legislation which would have curbed the operations of Canadian banks in the U.S. Since then, Ottawa has offered American banks the same type of agency deal here which Canadian banks have in the U.S. Under this system, the banks cannot accept local deposits or engage in check-cashing.

It must be remembered that while Canada needs American investment, the U.S. also needs the goodwill and co-operation of Canada. Twenty million Canadians are the equal in both population and productivity of America's richest state, California. Canada is America's best market, the source of much-needed raw materials, and a lucrative investment opportunity. The U.S. needs Canada every bit as much we need the United States.
