J. Howard Crawford Passes Following Lengthy Illness

Funeral Held Monday Afternoon at St. Andrew's Church.—Death Occurred Friday in His 41st Year.

The funeral of J. Howard Crawford who passed away at his home here on Friday after a lengthy illness, was held Monday afternoon from the residence of H. M. Henderson to St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, of which he was a member. Rev. R. C. Tait, of Trinity United, conducted the service, while the Masonic ritual was conducted at the graveside by Dr. S. H. Hutt of Chesterville lodge A.F and A.M.

Mr. Crawford was born in Appleton, Ont., and was in his 41st year. He was a son of the late James H. Crawford and his wife, Welhelmina Tomlinson. When 11 years old, he moved with his parents to Carleton Place. In 1916, at the age of 17, he enlisted in the 207th Battalion, and at the battle of Ypres was decorated for bravery on the field. In 1922 he married Alice R. Henderson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Henderson, of town. For 12 years he resided in Ottawa, being employed by the E. B. Eddy Compan. In 1935 he moved to Chesterville where he resided until his death. He was a member of Chaudiere Masonic Lodge, Ottawa.

Surviving in addition to his widow, are one daughter, Joan, at home; two sisters, Mrs. Donald McPhail, Mrs. Orton Hobbs, and one brother, J. Kenneth Crawford, all of Carleton Place.

Among the beautiful floral tributes received were pieces from Union International Pulp anl Sulphide local 50, Store Department, E. B. Eddy Company; Chesterville Veterans, "Fellow Workers, Lower Mill," E. B. Eddy Co., Chaudiere Lodge, and Ottawa Dairy. Williams Chemical Co., Pillow from Wife and Joan, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crawford and family, Mr. and Mrs. Porter of Carleton Place, Sisters and Brother.

cemetery, the pall-bearers being Haldane Durant, Carman McIntosh, G. H. Barkley, Oscar Olsen, A. J. Barrie and Jack Cross.

The work committee of the local Red Cross have decided to act upon the suggestion of headquarters office in Toronto to clse the workrooms of the local branches during the holiday season. The workroom will therefore remain closed from Saturday, Dec. 16, until Friday, Jan. 5. The ladies will be working on Friday of this week as usual and will be prepared to distribute wool and sewing supplies on Saturday evening.

Her Excellency Thanks Girl Guides For Clothing

Donation of Clothing for Relief English Evacuated Children Touches Lady Tweedsmuir.

Following a shipment of clothing for the relief of evacuated English children sponsored by Her Excellency The Lady Tweedsmuir, Mrs. Geo. G. Merkley, Captain of the 1st Chesterville Company of Girl Guides, has received the following letter of thanks from Government House:

Dear Mrs. Merkley,—I am desired by Her Excellency to thank you and the company of Chesterville Girl Guides for their wonderful gift of clothing for the children in England. I am putting a note in the parcel to the effect that it was a special donation from a Girl Guide Company, and hope you will get a letter in return. If they don't, however, you will understand that the clothing is none the less gratefully accepted. Her Excellency was very much touched at their thought, for a gift which may possibly be for other Guides in England.

Yours sincerely,
JOAN PAPE,
(Mrs. George Pape.)
Lady in Waiting.

DAVID GILLARD, BOUCKS HILL, PASSES AT ADVANCED AGE

David Gillard, of Boucks Hill, was laid to rest yesterday afternoon when the funeral service was held at Trinity Memorial church, Riverside. Mr. Gillard died Monday at the age of 91. Among those from Chesterville attending the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gillard, Mrs. Ed. Gillard, Mrs. Milton Stewart and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hess. Mr. Gillard was a brother of the late Edward Gillard and was the last member of his family.

The Record To Be Issued On Wednesday Next Week

NEXT WEEK The Record will be issued one day earlier than usual, Wednesday afternoon. The idea is to give advertisers full opportunity to place their offerings before the public of this trading area, giving ample time for shoppers to make their selections for week-end purchases. Christmas coming on Monday this year, the intervening Sunday between Christmas and our regular day of publication does not work out for the convenience of everyone.

We would ask our district correspondents to have their weekly letters reach us not later than Tuesday evening—and earlier if possible. We want all Records for the rural routes which we serve to go out Thursday morning.

Change of copy from advertisers must be in our hands Monday morning as early as possible.

With a little co-operation by all concerned, we feel The Record will be helping you in your last minute rush of Christmas buying.

For these two last issues before Christmas The Record enters every box of Chesterville and District and in addition to many homes in surrounding villages as a better service to advertisers and it is hoped that many receiving these sample copies will avail themselves of the special offer on page three.

WRITE TO SANTA CLAUS.

The girls and boys of this district who wish to tell Santa Claus what they want for Christmas are invited to use The Record for that purpose by writing letters to him mailed in care of this office. All letters received up to Tuesday noon next week will appear in our columns of next week's issue. Get busy as soon as you read this notice and watch for your letter next week—Santa sees them all.

Trinity United W. M. S. Met Yesterday Afternoon

Members Enjoy Talk on Study Book Chapter Given by Mrs. L. H. Doering.—Held at Parsonage.

The December meeting of Trinity United Church W.M.S. was held at the parsonage on Wednesday, Mrs. W. O. Dixon, the president, in charge. The meeting opened with hymn 47, "O Come, All Ye Faitful." Mrs. R .C. Tait led in prayer. The annual reports of the officers followed. Mrs. Wm. Ross was made a life member, and a letter was read from Mrs. Ross expressing her gratitude for the honour bestowed on her and also her regret at not being able to be present. Solos of Christmas numbers were sung by Mrs. Myles Merkley, accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Shay, and Mrs. C. McMillan accompanied by Mrs. A. B. Clayton. Mrs. L. H. Doering very ably gave the second chapter of the Study Book "Moving Millions," which was greatly enjoyed. Surely anyone missing these addresses is deprived of a treat. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and the Mizpah Benediction.

GRANTLEY W. A. RE-APPOINTS OFFICERS FOR COMING YEAR

The president, Mrs. J. Kittle, conducted the meeting and at the close asked Mr. Beach to have charge of the appointment of officers for the coming year. It was moved by Mrs. F. Darling and seconded by Mrs. Bert McMillan that the same officials remain for 1940 and this was carried with hearty applause.

The hostess served lunch, assisted by Mrs. Darling, Mrs. John Shaver and Mrs. Alex Taylor. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction and a hearty vote of thanks to Miss Fader and her brother for their kind hospitality.

Y. P. S. CHRISTMAS TREE.

The Young People's Society will meet at the home of Miss Mary McMillan on Friday evening when there is to be a Christmas tree and an exchange of gifts by members and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Darling and Ray visited Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Rice at Winchester Springs on Thursday.

Mrs. Marshall Merkley and sons Harold and Albert, of Chesterville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Kittle and family.

Mr. Wm. Carr and sons, of Boucks Hill, visited with his brother, Mr. D. Carr, and family one evening last week.

Their many friends are pleased to see Alan and Garry Fowler home after spending some time in Montreal where they were taking treatments and underwent operations.

Mrs. Edsel Merkley and two daughters and Mrs. Walter Merkley, of Orchardside, visited with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Wallace one day recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elliott, of The Boyne, spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Alex Taylor.

The Women's Association met at the home of Miss Fader on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 6, when there was a good attendance of members and some visitors.

PROSPERITY ON SOLID GROUND.

CANADIANS who rub their hands in glee at this time, gloating over the realization that prosperity is back with us again because of a war in Europe, exhibit bad taste. But that is not all. They are wrong in fact.

Business men and statesmen of this country are taking keen satisfaction in examining statistics from the Department of Trade and Commerce that show conclusively that the main foundation for the increase in sales and a big jump in the total of men and women employed was laid before the outbreak of war on September first. In other words, had war been averted we would even now be enjoying better times than the Dominion has experienced for years.

True, war orders now on hand have given an added impetus to the trend; war psychology too has served the purpose of getting people back into the spending habit, which is a good thing. For prosperity demands that money be turned over often, in the same way that the storekeepers' success depends on the frequent turn-over of their stock. But it seems obvious that the sound policy of planned economy adopted by Canadian authorities brought on the marked improvement throughout the country.

Common sense has a habit of rising to the occasion eventually and obliterating crackpot ideas in the realm of money and economics, just as it does, at times, in politics.

Defeat, early in November, of Utopian money schemes in California and in Ohio, furnish sure indication that monetary madness is definitely waning on this continent and that economic and political sanity are once more in the ascendant.

Incidentally, a similar observation might be made in respect to the recent Quebec elections, wherein not one candidate ran openly as a Social Crediter or money reformer. And not one who espoused the doctrine, but ran under the shelter of some other political label, saved his deposit.

In California, Ohio and Quebec, the elections are regarded as having furnished a vital test of democratic common sense and a triumph of representative government at the polls.

California and Ohio are of especial interest to Canadians because the fantastic economic proposals were similar, in effect, to the Alberta promise of $25 per month dividends. In California, the "Ham and Eggs" proposal to pay $30 every Thursday in pensions was defeated by two to one—a much more emphatic rejection than last year, indicating a growing impatience against magic prosperity. Ohio voters rejected a similar but more modest scheme—the Bigelow plan of $50 per month—by a vote of three to one.

These results indicate that voters are becoming much more realistic than when Premier Aberhart gained office in Alberta. They are appreciating that money does not grow on trees—that money spent has to be earned or raised by production of goods and services somewhere and somehow.

CREATED JACK CANUCK.

SAM HUNTER, who passed away in Toronto last week, was Canada's outstanding cartoonist, his caricatures of Sir John A. Macdonald, Cartwright and others being works of art. Sam's cartoons and Billy MacLean's thumb nail editorials provided features that made the little Toronto World famous throughout the country. It was Ham Hunter who produced the figure that as Jack Canuck is now symbolic of Canada as the drawing of Uncle Sam and John Bull.

CHANGES IN COURT SYSTEM.

PLANS for simplifying and reducing the administration of justice in Ontario are set forth in the recommendations of Commissioner Fred H. Barlow, K.C., who has submitted his final report to the Ontario Government after 12 months of investigation. He advises the abolition of the Coroner's Jury and the office of the Court Crier; consolidation of the County Court, the Court of the General Sessions of the Peace, the County Judges' Criminal Court, and the Surrogate Court into one court; the dividing of the Province into judicial districts, each composed of a number of Counties, and the replacing of the Division Court system by a "small claims court" system. He also believes in the setting up of a policy of defending poor persons charged with crime.

One thing seems sure: if the government were to accept these recommendations, there would be a large number of court officials deprived of a job. And the government might find it easier to make the change when work is getting plentiful than to delay action until another period of retrenchment.

CHURCHMEN CALLED TO HELP MARK 125 YEARS OF PEACE

Toronto, Dec. 14.—A call to Canadian churchmen and all lovers of justice, peace and goodwill to observe in simple but appropriate fashion the 125th anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent in 1914 was issued today by the American Council of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches. The Canadian National Council of the World Alliance, headed by Rev. Dr. George Fallis, president, and Rev. Dr. C. E. Silcox, secretary, has forwarded the call to Canadian churches.

The War of 1812 between Great Britain and the United States came to an official end on December 24, 1814, as the Treaty of Ghent was signed, the Canadian National Council pointed out. Plans for a joint celebration of the 100th anniversary of the signing of the treaty were interrupted in 191. by the outbreak of war.

In a signed statement by Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill and endorsed by such men as Dr. John W. Langdale, Harry N. Holmes, Dr. J. S. Bonnell, Dr. W. Russell Brown, Dr. Arthur J. Brown, Dr. W. E. Gilroy and Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, "all churchmen of every variety" are called upon to observe the anniversary occasion by appropriate services of thanksgiving and prayer on December 17 or the following Sunday.

"We should give thanks to God for the outstanding and enduring blessings that mark our relations for 125 years," the statement reads. "We should give thanks for a boundary of 4,000 miles which needs no defences and causes no apprehension on either side; for the unbroken record of settlement of disputes by conference and arbitration without the use or threat of force; for free and friendly intercourse and mutual respect and regard between the peoples of the two countries; or common ideals of freedom, justice, order and religion and for growing understanding and goodwill, each country loving its neighbour as itself."

Polyice Sergeant: "Have you caught that burglar?"

Patrolman Chuzz: "No, but we've got him so scared he doesn't dare to show himself while we're around."

She (coyly): "Can you drive with one hand?"

He (expectantly): "You bet I can."

She: "Then have an apple.

Jack: "Do your eyes bother you?"

Clara: "No; why?"

Jack: "Well, they bother me."

Wifey: "Do you love me still, darling?"

Hugh: "When I'm reading my paper I do."

Just Foresight.

Knicker: "Kipling's 'Recessional' is a great poem."

Bocker: "Wonderul; but how did he know the recession was coming?"

That Indefinable Nothingness.

Since the war began, Italy has imported great quantities of Swiss cheese, which is compressed, the pulp being eaten, and the holes being put into macaroni.

Proud Father: " Iwant our Joseph to be a politician."

Friend: "Why?"

Father: "He's so big and strong I'd hate to have him ruin his physique by working."

Geese as an Additional Source Of Revenue For the Farmer

GOOSE RAISING fits so conveniently into farm practice that it is surprising that more farmers do not raise a flock of geese each year, states A. G. Taylor, Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The two essentials to success in the raising of geese are present on the farm and nowhere else. These are, first, free range, and, second, an abundance of green food. The amount of labour required to produce a flock of geese is remarkably small and as goose flesh demands a good price on the Christmas market, the labour income from goose raising is well worthwhile.

Very little expense is necessary in starting a flock of geese. Apart from the birds themselves, almost any farm has all that is necessary to start into the business of goose raising. The question of housing is not important as any place that will keep them out of snow and out of draughts is quite satisfactory. Geese require no special feeding and will eat any kind of coarse grains. Much of their food should be in the form of green food such as cabbage, mangels, or well cured clover or alfalfa hay which has been cut about the flowering stage.

During the laying season, hatching time and the early life of the goslings attention to detail is required. A little care on the part of the farmer or some member of the family to such detail as gathering the eggs regularly, having the wants of the broody bird attended and caring for the goslings for the first two or three weeks or until they get a good start in life will often increase the profits one hundred fold.

Geese are not subject to diseases like hens or turkeys. The goslings are hardy, grow rapidly and are soon able to care for themselves. A gosling once hatched is usually another Christmas dinner and at a very low cost.

The fattening of a flock of geese requires no special feed, no cratefeeding or even pen feeding and unless the snow is deep and the weather severe, housing is unnecessary. Even with cold weather a shed or barn floor will provide them with ample housing accommodation.

No branch of the farm offers greater returns for the money invested than does goose raising.

Farmer Should Control Surplus And Maintain Price Levels

Hugh Smith was elected president of the Chesterville Concentrated Milk Producers Association at the annual meeting held in the Community Hall on Friday afternoon. Other officers are: vice-president, Eric Casselman; secretary treasurer, Allison Graham; Directors, Sheldon Ball, Howard Kittle, George Beattie, Vincent Coyne.

Reports of the year's work were given by the president, Hugh Smith, and the secretary, Allison Graham. A discussion of these followed.

Harry Scott, first vice president of the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers' Association, spoke on the operation of the association. Erle Kitchen, secretary-treasurer of the Association, gave some of the accomplishments in spite of adverse conditions the first half of the year. V. S. Milburn, secretary of the Ontario Cream Patrons Association and of the Canadian Dairy Farmers Federation, emphasized the necessity of close co-operation among the different farmers organizations. He also explained the plan of the Cream Patrons Association to prevent the butter surplus ruining the price of butter. Charles McInnes, a director of the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers Association, said it was time that the farmers controlled the dairy products instead of the surplus controlling the farmer.

Given Year in Reformatory Convicted of Poultry Theft

Before Magistrate J. McCormick of Winchester, in Kemptville, on Tuesday afternoon, Gordon Haskins, Oxford township, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a number of chickens. Following evidence given by Provincial Constable Alex McLeod of Prescott, who laid the charge, also a number of witnesses, the magistrate imposed sentence of one year in the Ontario Reformatory definite and three months indefinite.

A juvenile of Oxford township implicated in the theft was given one year suspended sentence and ordered to report every two weeks to his minister.

The birds which were recovered alive were ordered returned to their owners. There were 28 birds owned by four different farmers.

British Sub Lets Bremen Go Respecting International Law

London.—The German liner Bremen was sighted Tuesday morning by a British submarine, which the Admiralty said refrained from attacking her without warning.

The Bremen was apparently heading toward Germany from Murmansk, Russian Arctic port, where she found refuge last September.

Rules of Warfare.

The Admiralty's announcement said the submarine in failing to attack without warning acted according to "the rules of sea warfare."

The Admiralty said that the Bremen last reported at the Russian Arctic port of Murmansk, apparently was homeward bound.

The Admiralty gave no hint as to where the submarine encountered the Bremen or whether it took any action to capture her.

The Bremen, $20,000,000 liner of 51,731 tons, and flagship of the German fleet, sailed from New York 36 hours before Great Britain declared war on Germany and managed to reach Murmansk.

British naval observers said the Bremen's speed of 30 knots would make capture by a submarine virtually impossible. A submarine can travel 15 to 20 knots on the surface and at about 10 knots submerged.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Crump Celebrate Silver Anniversary

Over one hundred relatives and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Crump last Thursday night to honour them on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The evening was spent in dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Crump were married at the latter's home at Wales, Ont., by Rev. L. E. Gosselin and have since resided at their present home.

About midnight the following address, presented by Miss Helen McMillan, was read by Mr. Frank Casselman:

Chesterville, Ont., Dec. 7, 1939.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Crump:—Once again we, your friends and neighbours, have gathered in your home. It is to honour you, Mr. and Mrs. Crump, on this your twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, that we are assembled here this evening.

You, Mr. Crump, have long been one of us, and to this home did you bring your bride, a woman whom we have learned to love, and of whom, I am sure, you are proud. For the full twenty-five years of your wedded life have you been members of our community and in that time have you won the respect and admiration of us all.

As we journey up hill and down dale along the pathway of life, each and all of us receive our share of troubles and good fortunes as we may deserve. Many are the pitfalls into which we may fall according to our ability and ableness to combat life's enticing evils.

Safe in the love and happiness of your home have you conquered a quarter of a century together. About you are the happy faces of your family, secure in the knonwledge that they have received and are still receiving the love, kindness and guidance that is God's will.

Blessed with your home and family, may you continue through life together, sharing happiness and misfortune alike, and ever ready to aid one another in solving the problems which confront you daily. May prosperity and happiness continue to be yours. Signed on behalf of the Family, Relatives and Friends.

Following the address, a beautiful 52-piece silver chest was presented from the family by little Carl Crump. Many other silver gifts were presented to show the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Crump are held.

Iroquois Man Meets Death Struck by Car on Street

Iroquois.—Richard Whittle, 53, well known Iroquois butcher, was killed almost instantly when he was struck by a car in the middle of an Iroquois street at 3 p.m., Tuesday.

Mr. Whittle was taken to the home of James Smith, where Dr. C .R. Marcellus and Dr. E. H. Marcellus were called. Mr. Whittle died 45 minutes later.

Coroner T. A. Hamilton, of Brinston, and Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness, of Cornwall were notified. A post mortem was performed.

Mr. Whittle was crossing the street from south to north in the path of a car travelling west in charge of Garnet Lockett, Kingston salesman.

Mr. Lockett swerved to the left to avoid the man, and Mr. Whittle, apparently becoming confused, stepped backwards into the path of the approaching car, police said. He was struck by the front of the machine and knocked to the pavement. Several bones in his body in addition to his skull, were fractured, and he suffered severe internal injuries.

Mr. Whittle was born in Carlisle, England, the son of the late John Whittle and the former Margaret Kenyan. He was educated there and came to Canada 45 years ago, settling in Iroquois.

For 22 years he had been employed by H. B. Everett, local butcher, and four months ago went into business for himself.

He was a member of St. John's Anglican church and the Morrisburg lodge of the L.O.L.

In 1908 he married Martha Roberts who survives him, with eight daughters, Mrs. Hyndman McMillan, Elma; Mrs. A. J. Armstrong, Morrisburg,and Florence, Agnes, Ruby, Kathleen, Luella and Bernice Whittle, all of Iroquois; two sons Richard and Norman Whittle, both of Iroquois; three sisters, Mrs. Agnes Gilebrand, Sydney, Australia; Mrs. Elizabeth Nuttall, of Whalley, England, and Mrs. William Dickson, of Carlisle, England, and a brother, John Whittle, Preston England.

Straders Hill

Mr. and Mrs. Eslie Pitte visited with friends at Iroquois on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Acel Hanson visited Mrs. Hanson's uncle who was hurt in an auto accident at Cornwall, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Johnston and Eva were tea guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hanson on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Clint Pitte, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Acel Hanson, visited Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Pitte at Prescott on Sunday.

Mrs. Blanche Hanson visited withh her mother, Mrs. E. Foster, who is not very well, at Morrisburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason Hanson visited friends at Dixons on Sunday.

Carried Away by Words.

Three men were sitting in a café in a dictator-governed country. The first was reading a newspaper. Suddenly he pointed to an article, shook his head and exclaimed: "Tut, tut!"

The second man looked over his shoulder and exclaimed: "Tut, tut, tut!"

The third man jumped to his feet. "If you two fellows are going to talk politics, I'm going home!"

"She says here, she'll be home to-night!"

Is there anything more worrying than waiting? One voice inside you says: "Don't be silly, she's all right . ." And another voice whispers: "Perhaps she's had an accident . . . oh dear, what shall I do?"

"I would have stayed up all night!"

But when you hear her voice on the telephone you know all is well— you thank heaven for Long Distance service — you realize how easy it is to keep in touch — and you like people who do.

"She didn't realize that I couldn't get away"

Sometimes you think older people are foolish to worry — but somehow you feel better when you've brought calm and peace to anxious minds —

by LONG DISTANCE

And it's so easy too. Your call is on its way in a few seconds, your destination reached in the twinkling of an eye. Use low Night Rates applying every evening after seven (and all day Sunday as well), and place "Anyone" calls.

True Spirit of Christmas Ready for Canadian Radios

THE TRUE SPIRIT of Christmas will be reflected in the programmes to be heard when Canadian listeners turn on their radios during the next two weeks. The immortal music always identified with Christmas, extravaganzas to add to the jollity, stories of Christmas past and Christmas present, and, of course, the ever-familiar and beloved carols have all been planned to blend with the trimmings on the tree, the gay decorations, and the frost on the windowpane.

Christmas season broadcasts, announced for the week of December 17 by the CBC, include a performance of Handel's "The Messiah" by the Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto, programme played by the Hart House carilloneur, Leland Richardson; and a gala extravaganza, "Turkey Trimmings," arranged and conducted by Percy Faith. The great Handel oratorio will be given Wednesday, Dec. 20, 9.30 to 10 p.m., the bells from the Hart House Memorial Tower will be heard Saturday, December 23, 5.30 to 5.45 p.m., and the special streamlined Christmas fantasie, under the baton of Percy Faith, will be listed Friday, December 22, 9.00 to 9.30 p.m.

* * * *

TO SING HANDEL'S "THE MESSIAH"

By general consent, "The Messiah," writen by George Frederick Handel in 1741, is the greatest of all oratorios. The work was completed in 24 days and had its first performance at a benefit in Dublin. Dr. H. A. Fricker will conduct the oratorio for the CBC broadcast, which will be heard over the national network from Toronto on Wednesday, Dec. 20, 9.30 to 10.00 p.m. Besides the Mendelssohn Choir, listeners will hear an orchestra comprised of members of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists to be heard during the performance are Frances James, soprano; Eileen Law, contralto; Albert Kennedy, baritone, and William Morton, tenor. An invited audience will be in attendance at the Eaton Auditorium, where the broadcast will originate under the supervision of John Adaskin, of the CBC production staff.

* * * *

THE GUARDS "ON PARADE"

One of the first musical groups to be heard by listeners across the Dominion when network broadcasting was in its infancy, is still a favourite with CBC audiences. It is the Band of His Majesty's Canadian Grenadier Guards now heard over the CBC network on Thursday evenings at 8.30 p.m., in the programme "On Parade."

The formation in 1913 of Canada's celebrated regiment, His Majesty's Canadian Grenadier Guards, brought about the organization of this regimental band, which was to earn international acclaim. At its inception, Captain J. J. Gagnier was appointed band leader and has remained in that position since that time. Since the first broadcast of the band, it has been a regular feature of the CBC network and has also been heard in the United States over stations of the National Broadcasting Company.

Russell Store Ransacked Giving Thieves Rich Loot

Thieves ransacked the general store of McArthur and Warner in Russell during Monday night and escaped with $500 worth of merchandise and between $40 and $50 in cash.

They gained entrance to the large building by smashing a panel in the rear door. Nothing in the store was left untouched and the thieves got off with a wide variety of goods including three mantel radios, a portable radio, electric irons, percolators, toasters, sweaters, men's and ladies' underwear and other clothing.

In ransacking all the drawers the thieves located small amounts of cash totalling between $40 and $50 which had been hidden by employees when the store was closed Monday night.

They left behind their flashlight and a pinch bar which are now in possession of the Ontario Provincial Police.

The burglary was discovered by one of the employees when he went to open the store the next morning. Constables Harold Dent of Rockland, and R. H. Wannell at Hawkesbury were notified and are investigating.

The burglary at the Russell store boosted the number of store thefts in this district during the past few weeks among the larger burglaries being those at Winchester and at the Carp garage.

Miss Marguerite Crowder was an overnight guest of Miss Lyla Beggs.

Mrs. Arlow Beggs and Irene and Miss Hazel Carr spent Saturday evening with Mrs. Robt. Grant.

Who Wouldn't?

"The manager of the department store fired Umson."

"What for?"

"Umson took the sign, 'How would you like to see your girl in this?' off a swell dress ——"

"Uh-huh."

"And carelessly hung it onto a bath tub."

Going Too Far.

"What's a man who marries two wives, dad?"

"A bigamist."

"And what's one who marries three?"

"A bigamistry."

Ann Fetches the Doctor

LESS THAN quarter of an hour after Ann Russell had set out to see why her father was late to dinner she had found him lying helpless among the snow-capped rocks not far from the motor boat he had been repairing. He had started home when the snowstorm began and while stepping from boulder to boulder had slipped and fallen violently. His left leg had snapped just below the knee. In that plight he had lain exposed to the storm for some time and his blue lips and weak voice showed that he was in a serious condition.

Ann, with her skirt cracking in the blasts, fetched her brother Eddie's new sled, got her father upon it and started to drag him home. After they left the beach the going was comparatively easy, and presently she drew the sled and its burden across the low threshold directly into the kitchen of the cottage. Ten minutes later, with Eddie's help, she had removed her father's boots and oilskins and had put him to bed on a mattress laid near the range.

When she had put a saucepan of broth on the fire she slit the clothing on the injured leg. Even her inexperienced eye could see that it was a mean break; but she must do her best, nevertheless. In the woodshed was the crate that had enclosed Eddie's sled. She broke off several narrow pieces of wood and got some long linen strips from the rag bag. Then she proceeded to splint the broken limb.

When she had finished, Mr. Russell said, as he wiped the sweat from his forehead:

"You're smart, Ann. And those Red Cross lectures you went to were worth while, I guess."

Ann gave him a cup of hot broth but it did not check his shivering. She put more coal on the stove and brought him another blanket. His colour and weakness alarmed her; she decided that she must get the doctor. What if her father should get pneumonia on top of his injury!

"Be good, Eddie. Sister is going to get Dr. Maynard," she whispered to her brother, when they had hastily eaten dinner. "Take care of father."

Mr. Russell had sunk into a doze, and Ann did not think it wise to wake him. Hanging a lantern on her arm, she set out through the storm for the little pool where the motor boat was anchored.

But all hope of using the craft vanished when she found the engine partly dismembered. After a moment of dismayed thought, Ann squared her shoulders resolutely. There was a sharp knife among the tools in the cockpit, and this she slipped into her pocket. It might be useful in cutting off her oilskins in case of trouble. Then she got back into the dory and rowed out through the narrow entrance of the pool into the dangerous seas.

Almost instantly the boat threatened to get out of control. Now rising swiftly on the crest of a wave, now lunging madly into a trough, it drifted away from the point. The bay was not only the short cut to town in winter, it was just now the only way, for in such bitter weather no woman and few men, indeed, could have made the seven-mile trip by land through the gathering snowdrifts.

Sometimes it seemed to Ann that the boat would turn turtle in the bursting seas, but it always pulled through, rising each time from the yawning gulfs more and more heavily like a half-drowned creature fighting for its life. All was a chaos of sound and snow and leaping water. Ann did not know whether or not the dory was sinking. Her sturdy young arms vibrated painfully to the thrust and yank of the seas at the blades of the oars.

The darkness of a declining winter afternoon was deepened by the storm; snow blasts hid the lights of the town. Ann had only the vaguest idea of her course until a sudden louder churning of tossing waters reached her ears. The next moment the dory was among the beach boulders of Little Wood Island, and the starboard oar was wrenched from her hand. Its butt gave her a stinging upper cut under the chin.

Clutching the other oar, she rose to leap, and as the boat careened toward a flat rock she half jumped, half fell, out upon it. A higher rock lay close by, and, aided by strands of leathery seaweed, she pulled herself up on it.

She was on the very edge of the island. Two big waves burst beneath her and filled the boat, and when the spent swash of the last was sucked back, she sprang down and ran for the crown of the beach. She reached it before the pursuing water could do more than clutch at her rubber boots.

Without a moment of delay she started to cross the island. It was uninhabited and had always been so except for a brief period when private enterprise had tried to run a summer camp there, which ticks and mosquitoes and bad water had broken up. Many of the buildings had been removed, but the mess hall still stood facing the town, less than a mile away and in front of it stretched the idle pier. Ann had not expected to find a boat there; nevertheless she was disappointed when her search came to naught. Baffled, though not conquered she retreated to the small spot of bare ground in the lee of the mess hall to think it over.

The sound of something thrashing about the peak of the building immediately attracted her attention. With a sudden rush she remembered that a big bell had hung there. Probably it was there yet, and the whipping bell rope was what she heard.

The contractor had been demolishing the mess hall when the coming of cold weather had put a stop to the work. Among the piles of boards near by he had left two ladders. Ann took the lighter of the two and, placing it against the eaves, soon climbed to the roof. There her difficulties began, for though the eaves were low the ridgepole was high. The slope was sharp, and the heavy roofing paper was slippery with sleet.

Blinded and buffeted by a snow-laden wind, she found it no easy task to crawl up that steep roof. But at last she managed to gain the ridgepole, and to her joy she found that the bell was still there, swinging in a cage at its very peak. A section of its rope hung down against the end wall, thrashing it like a whiplash.

Lying close to the edge of the roof she tried to seize this agile rope. It eluded her fingers a dozen times, and in her earnestness she forgot how precarious her position was, and leaned far out. A violent gust of wind destroyed her balance, and a flying sheet of heavy paper struck her like a runaway kite. The blow was a violent one, and Ann was swept over the edge.

But a sudden jar stopped her downward plunge at its very outset; Ann found herself suspended upright in mid air forty feet above the frozen ground. Her tough oilskins had providentially caught on a projecting nail.

When at last she dared to move, a few careful efforts convinced her she could never pull herself up to the roof. Neither could she quite reach the bell rope, which had lodged across a piece of loose roofing paper that the wind had jammed against the cage. As she cast a desperate look about her, she noticed a big iron staple in one of the boards near at hand, and, peering down the wall, she made out a little shelf or platform five feet or less below it.

She remembered having seen a flagpole at that end of the mess hall. Evidently it had passed up through the staple and a slot visible on the projecting peak; its butt had rested on the small shelf. Unquestionably, the pole must have weighed much more than she did; therefore the shelf would sustain her if she could gain it. Once her feet were on it she could reach the bell rope, and when that was in her hand she could summon help for her father—and herself. If she failed to land on the shelf—but she must not fail.

With the knife in her left hand she reached up and began to cut away at the stiff jacket; she worked carefully, though somewhat blindly, for she had to keep her eyes on the iron staple, which her right hand gripped. At the fourth cut there was a quick sag and a ripping sound. She dropped the knife instantly, and, just as the cloth gave way, her left hand joined her right in a grip on the staple. Her body dropped downward, and her feet struck the shelf.

Ann immediately leaned out to the right and seized the bell rope. A moment later the strong clanging of the bell resounded. Surely the sound would reach the mainland, over the narrow channel. If it were heard, someone would come. Ann did not question that. The town knew too well the mysteries and the tragedies of the sea ever to ignore any signal that seemed to come from it, especially in a storm.

Though she soon grew very tired, she did not dare stop ringing for more than a minute at a time. Her legs became even more tired than her arms, and the only way she could ease them was by alternately shifting her weight from one to the other. The strain was becoming unendurable, when it occurred to her that she might make use of the bell rope.

Leaving a long, loose end, she tied the rope to the staple, and, passing the free end around her body just under the arms, she knotted it again to the staple. The loop supported her fairly well, and she found great relief in leaning back against it.

The relief, however, was only temporary. Her arm moved more and more mechanically. Gradually she let the bight of the rope take more of her weight. The brazen clamor of the bell came to her ears with lessening distinctness. At times she was not conscious of any sounds from bell or storm. Her head began to sag. Forty feet below was the bare ground, frozen as hard as marble.

Again and again she painfully shook off the leaden lethargy. Her pulls at the bell rope became more and more spasmodic. At intervals she roused herself and made the bell peal lustily, but her efforts grew steadily fewer.

The last thing she remembered was wrapping the slack of the rope around her arm as a further precaution against falling.

It must have been very soon afterwards that the piercing note of a boat siren brought her back to consciousness. In a daze, not fully grasping the significance of the sound, she tugged frantically at the bell. In answer the whistle shrieked, full of power and encouragement. "Whoever you are and whatever's the matter with you, I'm coming," it seemed to say.

The bow light flashed suddenly into the range of Ann's vision, and the boat came swinging and swashing up to the pier. What comfortable noises its spitting engine made! Two lights presently detached themselves from it and rapidly drifted along the pier. A big voice was lifted in a sea hail.

Being sailors, Captain Grummer and his two men brought Ann to the ground without difficulty. A few minutes later she was in the hot engine room of the fast tug Gloria B., which had turned her stern to the wind and was racing back to the mainland to get a doctor for Mr. Russell.

The storm was weakening when Ann, her quest ended at last, got back to the little cottage. Eddie had fallen asleep on the lounge. Her father was awake and in some pain from his broken leg, but Dr. Maynard soon had that scientifically set. The doctor stayed until morning, and, thanks to his care, no complications set it. In the course of time his patient was able

The professor was alone in the house when a beggar came along.

Beggar: "Beg pardon, sir, but I've had nothing to eat for a week."

Professor: "How very interesting. Well, come back later and tell me how long you were able to hold out."

A Royal Effort.

The class composition was on "Kings," and this is what one boy wrote:

"The most powerful king on earth is Wor-king; the laziest, Shir-king; the wittiest, Jo-king; one of the worst Smo-king; the quietest, Thin-king; the thirstiest, Drin-king; the slyest, Win-king; and the noisiest, Tal-king."

Taking It Personally.

In a small Western beer joint about 20 brawny punchers were passing the time of day, when suddenly a notorious bad man came ranting in, pistols blazing right and left, and shouted to the crowd: "All of you dirty skunks clear out of here." The rush for exits raised a cloud of dust, and when it cleared only one wizened little fellow was left. The bad man turned upon him and, waving his smoking pistol, asked, "Well?"

"The place was sure full of them," the chap replied.

Holy Smoke!

A motorcyclist was flying through a village when he was pulled up by the police.

"I say, man, where's your number plate?"

"Number plate?" The driver turned around in surprise. "Number plate be blowed! Where's my wife and sidecar?"

VICTORIA PREPARES FOR OLD FASHIONED CHRISTMAS

Preparations for the same kind of Christmas festivities which enlivened England in the days of Good Queen Bess are now under way at the Empress Hotel at Victoria, B.C., where an unusual number of Canadians will join approximately 400 Americans in an old-fashioned Yuletide celebration. The programme, seen here in rehearsal has such picturesque features as a boar's head, Yule log, wassail bowl and Christmas carols. Retainers in old time costume haul the log to the massive fireplace where it is lighted by the Mayor of Victoria with a fragment from last year's log, which has been "put under a bed to secure the house from fire", according to an ancient superstition. Christmas dinner in the three great banqueting halls with the chef bearing the boar's head, tusks fierce, mounted on a silver platter, are other picturesque notes in this most colorful festival.
