Admission to the session, which begins at 2 p.m., is free.

Toy drive

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Village residents can bank toys when they drop by the Bank of Nova Scotia or the Toronto Dominion in Chesterville. Both banks have put out boxes for donations of toys, to be distributed the week before Christmas to area families in need. Donations to the toy drive will be accepted until two weeks before Christmas.

Enrolment stats

CORNWALL (Staff) - Enrolment at SD&G County Board of Education high schools is down less than one per cent from last year. The board's 7,127 students represents an increase of 72 from its projected enrolment but 21 fewer than attendance at the board's 11 high schools in 1986. Enrolment at North Dundas District High Schoool stands at 783, down 44 from last year; at Tagwi, there are 489 students, a drop of 37; and at Rothwell-Osnabruck, enrol- remains unchanged at 228.

Morewood unites in crime prevention

MOREWOOD (Staff) - Shocked by the murder this summer of village resident John King as well as other crimes throughout the area, the village of Morewood has turned to the Neighborhood Watch program for help.

The group will hold a meeting Oct. 27, at the Winchester Community Centre, Morewood, to help generate public interest in the program. Program members will also be canvassing door to door to solicit members.

"It seems that people are really interested in doing something," said Robert Norris, chairperson for the Morewood Neighborhood Watch. "It seems like the right time to do it."

"From the people I've talked to, I have no doubts it will go," he said in an interview last week.

A crime increase in the area over "the past year or so" has spurred villagers to implement the program, Norris said. He attributed at least "part of" the villager's concerns to the murder of three elderly bachelors from the area the past four years.

Police have also linked three other deaths, dating back to 1975, to the string of rural killings.

There already is a form of Neighborhood Watch in the village, Norris said. "What we're doing is fine-tuning this."

Group members are working with the Winchester OPP to get the program going and their "main goal right now is to get people signed up and identify items." The engraving of household items is encouraged by police as it helps them identify stolen objects "quite quickly", Norris said.

People involved in the program will receive door stickers identifying them as program members. If 50 per cent or more of the residents join the program, signs identify Morewood as a Neighborhood Watch community will be placed on roads going into the village, Norris said.

Const. Bernie Gadbois, community service's officer with the Long Sault OPP, said the most important thing in starting a Neighborhood Watch program is to reach people in the community.

"Once the program is going...it all comes naturally from then one," he said.

The program is "really spreading" and it's being "well recognized nationally," Gadbois said. "I think it's one of the best...as far as I'm concerned for crime prevention."

The OPP greatly support the Neighborhood Watch program and are getting good results from it, he said. "'And the program certainly works."

The program has had great success in two Stormont County villages Crysler and St. Andrew's. The villages are the "least plagued with criminal activity" in the county, Gadbois said.

Basically describing the program, "it's just keeping your eyes and ears open, and reporting any suspicious circumstances to the police, he said.

Singing for cheer

The two young vocalists (above) definitely had their hearts in what they were singing as they added some culture to the International bazaar and festival at NDDHS Saturday with an old French-Canadian jig. About 750 people packed the school gym to buy homemade goodies, sip tea and enjoy the entertainment at the Winchester District Memorial Hospital auxiliary's second annual festival. The theme of the bazaar, festival this year was Christmas Around the World. Story and pictures inside on page 11.

Villeneuve not to seek Ontario PC leadership

MOOSE CREEK (Staff) - The provincial Tories elected an interim leader for their party last week, starting on what will likely be a rough and rocky road of transition for the party that once dominated Ontario politics.

Andy Brandt, MPP for Sarnia, garnered the majority of the 16 MPPs' votes Thursday afternoon to become the party's leader until the next leadership convention. Brandt defeated Cochrane South MPP, Alan Pope, formerly a contender in the leadership race to replace Frank Miller.

Noble Villeneuve, who barely squeaked out a win Sept. 10 to become the MPP for Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry and East Grenville, did not run for interim leadership.

"It (party leadership) was not one of my aspirations," he said. "I've had enough running the last four years to last any politician 10 years."

He is now content to get familiar with the new portion of his riding, East Grenville, and he just wants to serve his constituents "the best I possibly can," he said.

Brandt's leadership became effective at 3 p.m. Thursday and he has "full authority and control" over the party, Villeneuve said in an interview Tuesday.

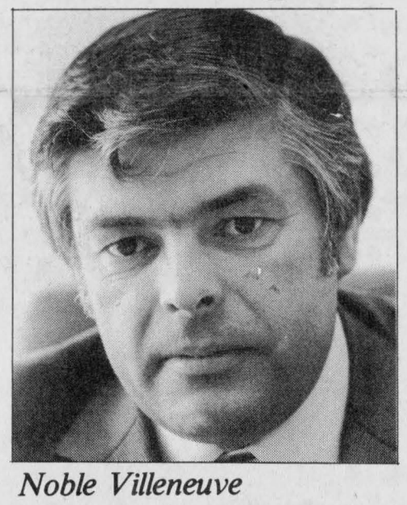
The personal defeat of party leader Larry Grossman in the Sept. 10 election forced the Conservatives to elect an interim leader until the next leadership convention. Grossman lost his seat in his Toronto riding and announced immediately after the election that he would resign.

Villeneuve said Grossman will vacate his office in Queen's Park within the next month and will return to his private law practice.

But until Grossman officially resigns, the Conservatives will in reality have two leaders, Villeneuve said. "Larry Grossman is still leader per se because of technical things and changes in the (party) constitution."

If Grossman resigned now, recent changes to the party constitution could force a convention within six months, Villeneuve said. But the party doesn't want a convention for at least two years.

Caucus and executive members will decide about the convention in two months, Villeneuve said.



Noble Villeneuve

One change the party's considering is allowing all card-carrying Tories to vote for their leader. The method, called "universal sufferage" was used by the Parti Quebecois to elect its present leader Pierre Marc Johnson.

"Universal suffrage would be totally different," Villeneuve said. "It's a relatively new concept for Ontario politics." But he added: "I think it is feasible in that it has been done before."

While process "tends to be a little longer", but it involves more people, Villeneuve said.

With only 16 members in provincial legislature, "we will certainly be shouldering a heavier burder," Villeneuve said. But the 49-year-old Moose Creek farmer says he's not daunted by the prospect of extra work.

"I think it will start being fun again." But he added, party members knew by the time the election rolled around that the future for them would be no picnic.

Each MPP will likely be covering two or three areas for the party, Villeneuve said, but he has no idea what party positions are in store for him.

Chesterville Lions Club roars to life

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - The pride of Lions from Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec will meet in Finch Saturday night to give their blessing to the creation of the Chesterville and District Lions Club.

A crowd of 300, including of Lions Club members from the Thousands Islands to Seeley's Bay to Low, Que. and all points in between, is expected to attend the Chesterville club's charter night.

"Charter Night is the recognition of the Chesterville Lions Club to all the other Lions Clubs throughout the complete district," explained Alex Nevins, president of the three-month-old Chesterville group.

"This is the biggest event any Lions Club can have. It's where all your fellow Lions come to recognize you. You get recognized by your community."

It's a sign, he said, "you're here to stay."

Membership in the club now stands at 27 or 28. And although the international Lions organization approved the admission of women into the service club earlier this year, Nevins said no women have expressed an interest in joining the local club. After Saturday, admission will be by invitation only. New members are charged a $20 initiation fee.

The Chesterville club is allowed to draw members not only from the village but as far south as Dunbar, west to Maple Ridge, east to the boundary with Stormont and north to Morewood.

Although the club has recently signed up two members from Dunbar, Nevins said it hasn't yet attracted anyone from Morewood.

"We're there to help out these three small communities," he said, adding that without contacts in Morewood, it's difficult to know that community's needs.

The club has been active in the months preceding its charter night. In August, it sponsored a corn roast in conjunction with a sidewalk sale and street activities raising money for victims of the tornado that levelled parts of Edmonton.

It's also assigned a member to work with the newly formed recreation committee in the village and plans to enter, a float in the Christmas parade.

"We are willing to get involved in just about everything. Our members seem really enthused about it yet."

He thanked the Finch club for guiding the rookie organization through its initial stages: "They've been a fantastic help. There's a lot of things we wouldn't have known what to do without them."

He said the club has received no negative reaction from anyone. When the idea of creating a Lions club was first suggested, there were fears Chesterville wasn't big enough to support both the Lions and a Rotary Club.

But Nevins believes the two organizations will work together on behalf of the community.

"It's been a lot of work up to now and I hope it's going to take off and stay going well."

Response to recycling venture mixed

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - A blue box may be the key to the success of a recycling operation in Chesterville.

Guy Leclair, the initiator of recycling programs in Winchester and Chesterville this month, says the absence of the containers designating material for pick-up is definitely hampering the popularity of the venture in Chesterville.

Without the box, he said it's difficult to convince people to participate by putting out their newspapers. But without the response from residents, he said he'd find it difficult to justify to council why it should subsidize the purchase of containers.

The lauching of the project in Chesterville has also been plagued by scheduling problems.

Errors and omissions in advertising the project resulted in a poor response on Oct. 5, the first official pick-up day in Chesterville. "We got some response, about a dozen homes," Leclair said. Those few homes yielded about one-quarter ton of newsprint.

The next pick-up fell on Thanksfiving Monday "and the response wasn't what I had hoped it would be. But I'm assuming it's because of the holiday."

On Monday, response had improved to include 40 households.

While Chesterville declined to purchase the boxes, Winchester Village spent about $5,000 on containers and opted to recycle tin and glassware as well as newsprint.

On Oct. 6 and 7, the launch of the project in Winchester, about 80 per cent of the households with boxes placed them at the curb. Some of the newspapers, he said, dated back to June, 1986.

Some of the newspapers could have been better bundled and some of the glass and cans could have been rinsed, he said. But he was pleased with the response from the village.

Last week, he hoped to approach senior citizens buildings and apartments, which don't yet have boxes, to participate.

He urged Chesterville residents to package papers so he can distinguish the bundles from the trash placed out for regular garbage collection. "Unless it's obvious, it doesn't get picked up."

Leclair has recently moved from Chesterville to a warehouse in Williamsburg to expand the recycling operation. He's also switched paper dealers from an Ottawa firm to Prescott businessman Gord Campbell, who transports Leclair's material and bales it.

Leclair projects Winchester and Chesterville domestic trash will increase the material he handles be 30 to 35 per cent; he has been picking up waste paper from Winchester Cheese and other businesses for some time.

He hopes to begin a recycling program in Iroquois similar to Winchester's next spring.

Although he's moved from Chesterville, he will continue to be the village's representative on a public liaison committee for the joint waste management study involving municipalities in Dundas and Grenville until his appointment comes up for review.

Participation in Chesterville's newsprint recycling program increased to about 40 households Monday morning, the third pick-up since the project began. Guy Leclair, who initiated recycling programs in Winchester and Chesterville, believes special containers designated for recyclable materials would improve the commuity's response.

Scary crows

Brenda (left) and Brian Sanderson, of Finch, got into the Hallowe'en spirit early this year creating two scarecrows named "Mom and Dad" to keep watch at the front of their house. The two Sandersons took a half hour break from raking leaves to create their unusual lawn ornaments Friday.

Finch Twp. teenager injured in crash

FINCH (Staff) - A Finch Township teenager received minor injuries when she swerved to avoid a child on the road, rolling her car and entering a ditch.

Joy Robertson, 16, of R.R.2, Finch was taken to Winchester District Memorial Hospital after the accident last Wednesday on County Road 12 at the fourth concession in Finch township.

The child wasn't hurt. Robertson's 1979 Pontiac sustained damage estimated at $2,500.

Also last Wednesday, Carrie Lynn Poirier, 16, of Newington was taken to Cornwall General Hospital with minor injuries after she lost control of her car at the CP tracks on County Road 12 in Finch.

No charges were laid. Damage to Poirier's 1979 Chevrolet is estimated at $1,000.

A Peterborough man wasn't injured when his van caught on fire while he was driving on Highway 401 near Long Sault last Wednesday.

Ronald Brightman, 25, escaped injury when his 1979 Ford van caught fire at about 1 p.m. The Long Sault fire department responsed to the blaze, which caused an estimated $3,600 damage.

On Sunday, a 13-year-old Long Sault cyclist received minor injuries when he swerved into the path of a car on the second concession of Osnabruck Township.

Barry Rennie was taken to Hotel Dieu Hospital in Cornwall. He'd swerved into the path of 63-year-old Mary Hallis of R.R.3, Ingleside driving on the concession road west of Moulinette Road.

There were no charges.

In Winchester, a South Mountain man was charged with failing to signal after a collision Sunday at about 7:45 p.m. at the intersection of Main and St. Lawrence streets.

Winchester OPP say Donald Duncan, 30, was stopped to turn right onto St. Lawrence from Main. A second vehicle, driven by William Newman, 42, of Ottawa, pulled up beside him believing Duncan was driving straight through, police say.

Damage to Newman's 1987 Chevrolet is estimated at $1,000. There was no damage to Duncan's 1974 International truck, police say.

There were no injuries.

Police have also charged Gary Stephenson, 23, of R.R.2, Newington with dangerous operation of a motor vehicle causing bodily harm following an accident Oct. 11 that sent Stephenson and two Long Sault women to hospital.

The accident occurred at the Intersection of County Road 7 and Highway 43 south of Chesterville. Police say Stephenson was driving north on the county road while Dorothy Henderson, 59, and passenger Jeanette Robertson were westbound on the highway.

Geese find sanctuary

MORRISBURG (Special) - Thousands of migrant Canada Geese are beginning to descend on the Upper Canada Migratory Bird Sanctuary for their annual fall feeding which will last until mid-November.

Staff at the Sanctuary, operated jointly by The St. Lawrence Parks Commission and the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources, have grown and stored corn in preparation for the feast which began Sept. 14. This feeding will continue for the next eight weeks at 2:30 p.m. daily, seven days a week.

Resident geese in the Santuary attract migrant Canada Geese from the Atlantic Flyway populations. Fall migrants number from about 10,000 to 12,000 over the fall feeding period and these migrants stop here to feed or to avoid bad weather. Approximately thirty tons of corn are fed annually to these geese.

Visitors to the Upper Canada Migratory Bird Sanctuary can watch the feeding from the visitor centre and viewing tower. Information on the history and purpose of the Sanctuary is displayed at the centre.

The Sanctuary was officially opened in 1961 and its feeding and trail areas comprise about 1,400 hectares of wooded uplands, marshlands, waterways, crop land and goose pasture.

Newington water system approved more than two years after first proposed

OSNABRUCK CENTRE (Staff) - It may not be the fountain of youth, but the approval Monday of a proposed Newington water system will probably save township councillors more than a few grey hairs.

Township Deputy-Clerk Bart Whitton received the certificate of approval for the project Monday, more than two years after the project was first proposed.

The province's approval of the project was the last hurdle in a seemingly endless uphill battle for council to get the project into its final stages.

It was Sept. 6, 1985, when the project was first proposed in a letter drafted by consulting firm Oliver, Mangione, McCalla and Associates.

The firm proposed the system as "the only method of correction" for at least 36 properties in the south-western portion of the village suffering from sub-standard wells or septic systems.

Of the 115 commercial and residential properties in the village, 36 per cent had sub-standard septic systems, four of which were "discharging or ponding sewage."

"The survey results for water supplies, however, indicated that 86 per cent of the drilled and dug wells sampled failed to meet established water quality or quantity objectives," the Nepean consulting firm stated.

The near half-million dollar project is closer to actual construction now than it's ever been. Homemakers in favor of the project can now rest their minds, Whitton said.

Construction of the system could start in December and there's a very real possibility that it could be in operation by July of next year.

Having received the certificate of approval, council can now tender for a contractor, Whitton said. Council will likely decide in mid-December what company will do the work.

"It certainly is a major step ahead to think that this thing may get done," Whitton said Monday.

He was also confident that objections won't stall the project.

A clause has been included in the project bylaws allowing for the exemption of property owners. But any exemptions will likely need approval by the Ontario Ministry of Environment, he said.

But he added, "I would tend to think the exemptions are going to be few and far between."

The project shouldn't be derailed even if there are objections, he said. "At home point you have to look at the common good of the people."

The township had "excellent reaction" to the system in its survey over two years ago, Whitton said. Over 80 per cent of the 78 people who returned surveys were in favor of the project, he said. "The people themselves have asked to have it -- the majority of the people."

If the system goes through, village residents will be hit with a $750 bill for construction costs and a hook-up cost estimated at between $300 to $500.

A flat rate will also be charged residents annually to cover the system's operating costs. In a bylaw recently passed by council, the rate had been set at $136 for each domestic unit.

Under the system laid out in the bylaw, a single family dwelling labelled as one domestic unit, would pay $136 per year. On the opposite end of the scale, Newington Public School, labelled as four domestic units, would pay $544 annually.

The flat rate is still subject to change and could either decrease or increase, Whitton said, but added "it conceivably could be less."

For hook-up rates, just the "odd one" will be expensive "but most of them will be around the $300 mark," Whitton said.

Village residents should "shop around" for a good price for their hook-ups and could even group together and get a package deal, if possible, he added. The residents are paying 15 per cent of the project cost, so it's "well worth their money" to shop around.

Residents can make their payments for the construction cost over a 10-year period, at an interest rate of 12 per cent, Whitton said. "That's actually less than the overdue rate for taxes."

"The hook-up charge will be their own," he said. But if it's a "burden" for any resident, council may be willing to help out.

"I would tend to think they might have a sympathetic ear... that if someone's in dire straits and couldn't afford to do it...the township could make some sort of an arrangement."

But the village's water and sewer dilemma won't end until about 40 septic systems are also repaired, Whitton said.

"If the water can be in the lines by July, then you have a really nice time to get along with the septic tank business."

Residents repairing their septic systems wil be eligible for a provincial grant covering 85 per cent of the cost.

"In actual fact, the septic tanks are a big thing (problem) too," but it has been "overshadowed" by the proposed water system, Whitton said.

The Ontario Municipal Board has stated the connection costs for the water system and the annual operating charge would not require its approval.

R-O top priority for school board

CORNWALL (Staff) - Rothwell-Osnabruck School in Ingleside is the top priority for the SD&G County Board of Education's 1988 capital expenditure forecast.

A project, which is to include the addition of a cafeteria, and a processes and design-art room, has been named top priority by the board. The additions, estimated at $454,000, would give the school approximately 5,000 square feet more of floor space.

The second project on the board's priority list, also for R-O, includes the replacement of the school's boiler as well as roof work, ventilation work and lighting. Estimated cost of the project is $145,750.

R-O principal Doug Murray was not available for comment Tuesday. R-O vice-principal Earl Jeacle would not elaborate on the projects.

"Nothing's been approved," he said, but added, "there have been meetings and things have happened."

Jeacle said the projects have been on the board's priority list for five years.

The amalgamation of the public schools in Berwick and Finch has been placed sixth on the board's priority list. The board proposes the addition of four classrooms, a general purpose room and a library resource centre to one of the schools, should the two be amalgamated.

The scope of the project is "subject to revision" depending on what recommendation the school committee makes to the board. Cost of the project is estimated at $469,560. The additions would provide the school with an extra 7,200 square feet of floor space.

Chesterville Public School is ranked seventh on the priority list. The school is to have one classroom, a Kindergarten and a library resource centre added to it.

Cost of the project is estimated at $367,794. It will provide an estimated 4,000 feet of floor space.

North Dundas District High School managed to rank 11th in terms of priority while Winchester Public School ranked 12th.

The installation of an elevator for handicapped students has been proposed for NDDHS. The project would cost an estimated $105,000. The 1928 section of Winchester Public School requires renovations estimated to cost $571,536.

Gift Shoppe raises $3,000

WINCHESTER (Special) - The October meeting of the Winchester District Memorial Hospital Auxiliary took place Oct. 8 in the conference room with 28 members present.

Gift Shoppe chairman Betty Barton reported that 230 hours work had been done by the Gift Shoppe volunteers and a cheque for $3,000 was presented.

Mrs. Jones, volunteer co-ordinator, reported a total of 326½ hours of work by in-service volunteers, while 32½ hours was given in meetings.

Mrs. Townson, teen volunteer co-ordinator, reported 56½ hours was done by teens.

The First East Christmas Party is already being planned and will take place on Dec. 15.

Delegates will be attending the Regional Conference on Oct. 21 in Ottawa and the president and secretary will be representing the auxiliary at the convention in Toronto.

Inquest prompted by 'unusual nature' of silo-related death on Mountain farm

CHESTERVILLE — An inquest has been called into the death of a South Mountain area man who was killed last month when he fell into a silo while unloading corn.

Dr. Gabriel Slowey, coroner for Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, said he called the inquest because of the "unusual nature of the death."

Wayne Smith, a 34-year-old father of tow, was asphyxiated by carbon dixoide Sept. 27 when he fell through a plastic liner bag into a concrete silo while unloading corn at the farm of Dwight Gilmer in South Mountain.

Slowey said he believed the death, which could be linked to the bag that was being used to make the silo air-tight, was the first of its kind in Ontario.

The inquest, which will be held in Winchester on Nov. 5, will include testimony from suppliers and manufacturers of the plastic bags, representatives from Workers Compensation, the Department of Forensic Science and Farm Safety Association consultant Harold Morphy.

Morphy said last week the accident was unlike other silo deaths that the association has investigated.

"I've never seen an accident similar to this," said Morphy. "I doubt if there's been one in Eastern Ontario."

What is different, said Morphy, is that silo fatalities usually involve nitrogen oxide, a deadly gas formed during fermentation of silage or haylage.

The gas may be visible as a reddish or yellowish-brown haze around the base of a recently-filled silo and is heavier than air.

High moisture corn, which Smith was emptying from the silo, gives off carbon dioxide, an odorless, colorless gas that is fatal in high concentrations.

"This was an unusual method of dying," said Slowey. "A man fell through a plastic bag into grain and died. Nobody has done that before in Ontario.

"We hope that by looking into this accident, where another gas was involved, that other deaths will be prevented."

Slowey said the construction of the plastic bags and their durability will be discussed at the inquest.

CARDS OF THANKS

CARD OF THANKS
We the sisters of the late Andrew Dawson wish to thank relatives, neighbors, friends, ambulance drivers, Brownlee Funeral Home, pallbearers, Rev. Douglas Henry for his comforting message and the many acts of kindness in the passing of our brother.
Our sincere gratitude to you all,
Lillian Gemmell,
Verna Guest

CARD OF THANKS
The Winchester District Memorial Hospital Auxiliary is again indebted to the countless people who helped make the International Bazaar and Festival a success. To all who donated time, decorations, baking, crafts, merchandise, cash and publicity, a heartfelt thank-you. These alone would not have raised approximately $7500 towards the new food delivery system, without the generous support of those who came. Many people contributed. The list is too long to be more specific, but we are most grateful for their help. Perhaps we can be forgiven for singling out our younger helpers - the Boy Scouts, who maintained control of the parking lot, the Girl Guides who minded the babies, and the teens who helped with the massive job of serving tea to 400 people in approximately 2 hours.
Gail VanNoy,
W.D.M.H.A.

Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

The occasion was the annual Feast of Passover. Pilgrims had been flocking to Jerusalem from all sectors of the Greco-Roman world. As they anticipated the Passover and prepared themselves for the upcoming rites, their conversation included Jesus of Nazareth -- the "Man of the Hour."

Word of his teaching and his mighty deeds had circulated widely. The raising of Lazarus had touched off messianic expectations. It formed the keystone in the arch of the Galilean's rising reputation.

It was no secret, however, that Jesus was a wanted man. With his life in danger, the question was often asked, "What do you think? That he will not come to the feast" (John II: 56)?"

Thos who doubed underestimated Jesus' courage. Of course he would come. He always had. Even as they speculated, he was preparing himself and his disciples in the little town of Ephraim, just thirteen miles distant.

"What do you think? That he will not come to the feast?" I would like to lift that question from the record and use it to open the question: "Would Jesus have time for today's Church?" Would he attend its worship, participate in its councils, identify himself with its life? I raise the question because a mood is building in our society, best expressed in the terse epigram: "Jesus, Yes -- the Church, No!"

The question is raised by those who are innately suspicious of anything institutional. People ot this bend are suspicious of institutional education, institutional philanthrophy, institutional politics, and, more especially, institutional religion.

Religious experience, it is held, is a deeply personal matter that withers when given structure or organization. When religion gets regularized and predictable, it loses its essential spontaneity. We are more likely to lose God than find him in contemporary churches. So the argument runs.

"What do you think? That he will not come to the feast?" This question is also raised by those who feel that the Church is out of touch with reality. The times, it is said, have passed the Church by. This conclusion is very often drawn by those who sincerely wish to see a relevant Church. Many young people in particular are tired of a Church that is apparently content to sing harmless songs in a narrow valley on its way to another world.

However, it is only fair to say that every institution in society is playing "catch up" with history. Change has overtaken us at unprecedented speed. Medicine is running to catch up, government is running, social work is running, business is running.

It stands to reason that "one cause" groups and individuals can adjust to the new easier than can institutions. A motorcycle can execute a U-turn quicker than a trailer truck can, but, in the long run, it is the truck that delivers the goods.

My recommendation to those whose jury is still out on the Church is to "stay with it." The institutional has a part in religious experience. The Church is destined to live in tension with the character and example of her Lord. "What do you think? That he will not come to the feast?" Would Jesus go to church? The answer is: Yes. He loved the Church and "for her life he died."

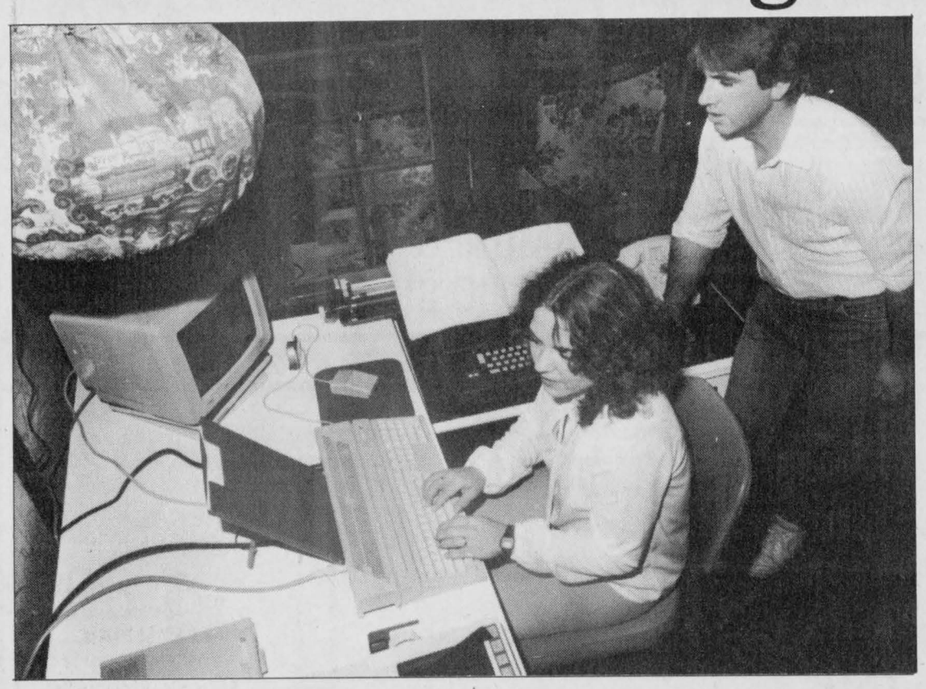
Holsteins Now regional voice for Eastern Ontario breeders



Deadline
Linda Grant and Pat Coyne prepare to launch Holsteins Now, a bi-monthly magazine about Eastern Ontario Holstein breeders and their industry. The first issue is expected to reach up to 2,000 subscribers next month.

CRYSLER (Staff) - The latest Eastern Ontario agricultural publication is expected to be in the hands of local Holstein breeders by mid-November.

Holsteins Now, a bi-monthly magazine about the Holstein industry in the 11 counties comprising Eastern Ontario, will be ready by the first or second week of November. Up to 2,000 subscribers are expected to receive the first issue.

The magazine is also among the first ventures of The Foxworth Scribe, a publishing and word processing partnership established in January by Crysler entrepreneurs Pat Coyne and Linda Grant.

The first issue, which could have up to 40 pages, will feature profiles of the cattle nominated for the all-eastern-Ontario awards. Later issues will include regular columns on veterinary care, articles on the latest developments in the breed and marketing, and features on prominent Eastern Ontario breeders.

"The idea wasn't exactly ours," explained Coyne, 32, who describes himself as the partnership's business scout. "Some of the breeders in Eastern Ontario wanted an advertising vehicle but also an informative magazine where they'd be able to feature their stock."

"They're also interested in having something they can take out of Eastern Ontario...There are some good cattle in Eastern Ontario and I guess it's time the world started to know that they exist."

Grant, 31, will be handling the production of the magazine. Holsteins Now isn't her first involvement with agricultural publications: for two years, she prepared the annual yearbooks for the Eastern Ontario goat society and served as editor of the Ontario Dairy Goat Society's bi-monthly provincial magazine in 1982 and 1983.

'Snowball'

The idea for Holsteins Now grew out of the Eastern Ontario council, which is a committee of the Ontario branch of Holstein Canada.

Winchester's Ralph Fawcett, one of three Eastern Ontario directors to the provincial branch, said the council discussed the idea at a planning meeting last spring.

"It just seemed to kind of snowball from there."

He hopes the regional publication will be more accessible than the national Holstein Journal, which features "very, very little in Eastern Ontario". Its advertising charges, he said, are also beyond the reach of most local breeders. A full page advertisment in Holsteins Now will cost $225.

The new magazine will join another new Holstein publication on the market, a provincial magazine published by the Ontario Farmer newspaper.

"Generally speaking, I think there's a lot of pleasant excitement about the publication," said Grant.

Businesses that serve Holstein breeders realize the industry spends a lot of money, she said. Response from agribusiness to a magazine they haven't yet seen has been good.

She said she's been telling potential advertisers, "It'll either make Holstein people money or save them money."

She estimated about a solid month of work has gone into the launching of the project so far.

"There's a lot of stuff you do with the first issue that you'll never do again. Just preparing the ad rates has taken a lot of time."

"Any investment, you know, you can't just look at it. You have to put time and money to work to have it materialize into anyting," added Coyne.

Grant will design and lay out the magazine on a desk-top publishing unit in her home. "You can get away with $2,000 in equipment, she said. The actual printing will be done by Eastern Ontario Graphics Limited.

Since the company's start-up ten months ago, it's prepared a manuscript from the Canadian Goat Society for Agriculture Canada. Among individual orders has been a pamphlet catalogue of a car model collector's stock.

The Foxworth Scribe also produces a bi-monthly newsletter, mailed to about 120 subscribers, for Drahthaar Group Canada, a national breed association promoting the German hunting dog. The breed, which resembles a pointer, is only now being introduced to Canada.

Coyne believes there's a need for small firms like The Foxsworth Scribe. (With a chuckle, Grant described the origins of the company's name: "He liked Foxworth and I wanted scribe, so we put them both together.")

"We sort of felt there was a need for regional publications. I think right now the national market is, I wouldn't say saturated, but well covered."

What's lacking, he said, are smaller publishing firms to cover regional projects that could otherwise be overlooked.

Outreach discussed by UCW

KEMPTVILLE (Special) - On Sept. 15, ninety-five ladies from Ottawa Presbyterial and ninety-six from Seaway Valley UCW Presbyterial met in St. John's United Church in Kemptville.

President Linda Kubelka opened the meeting at 10:15 with a reminder that today is International Day of Peace when church bells will ring a Peal for Peace at noon in 50 countries. She thanked those who were present for their donations of packaged food for the Emergency Food and Clothing Centre in Ottawa. Scripture on the topic of Peace from Isaiah and Romans was read followed with prayer.

The skit written by Lorna Chapman for Summer Event is available for the asking -- U.C.W. Past, Present and Future. A reply from Anne Squire, our Moderator, had been received thanking Seaway Valley Presbyterial for its support. The moderator will be in the area in February. The tools for peace campaign raised nearly $15,000 for Nicaragua.

Lillian Hobbs introduced Rev. Paul Miller of Trinity United Church in Vankleek Hill, chairperson of Division of World Outreach in M&O Conference. World Outreach is one of the most important divisions of our church, he told us, and the easiest to ignore. Since the beginning the Christian church has been a missionary church with an urge to move outward. Not just our United Church as we are bound to all the other branches of the vine, some of which were started by our own missionaries.

The UCW is closely bound to the DWO as the one church group that studies and learns what the church is doing. About 100 missionaries work abroad on the invitation of the indigenous church and their work is planned for them by that host church.

Today most Christians live in Africa, Asia and Latin America. Their churches are alive and growing while ours decline. The mission study for 1988 is food production in Canada and Africa outlined in Mandate as Creation in Crisis.

The afternoon program opened with singing led by Sheila Urquhart and pianist Liette Butrym of Bainsville. We are asked to continue saving Campbell's soup labels.

Nora Peach was introduced by Linda Kubelka. She had been a co-ordinator for the Cuernavaca Intercultural Dialogue on Developement. In November 1983 twenty people from the United Church had gone to Cuernavaca for the first time.

Maureen Kabwe was one and she introduced the centre to Mrs. Peach who found it a life-changing experience to be there "with the people at the bottom of the pile." For some time after, she was volunteer co-ordinator for the groups of 20 who go yearly from Canada.

The Mexican leader of the centre takes the groups to visit the people. It is not money they need so much as compassion. We learn about our poverty and their richness, their simple belief.

Why should Canadians go? They become aware of how a patriarchal powerful society exploits the poor and as Christians are motivated to find out what they can do on returning home.

Feeling Blue

The fall of the provincial Tories -- who hold only 16 seats after the recent Ontario election -- once filled headlines.

Six weeks later, the party can't drum up interest in the upcoming race to replace leader Larry Grossman, who lost his own Toronto seat in the Sept. 10 election.

Rumors the provincial legislature won't be recalled until early in November doom the party to obscurity for at least another couple of weeks.

And even then, the Progressive Conservatives, who have fallen from the government to the Opposition to third-party status in less than three years, may remain in the shadow of the massive Liberal majority and the humbler New Democrats.

A party without a leader has a tendency to shoot itself in the foot while members scrambling for a role at the top put their ambitions ahead of the party, the development of policy and being an effective voice in the legislature.

A party with a leader disheartened by personal defeat at the polls is an even sadder spectacle.

The Progressive Conservatives now have an interim leader in Sarnia MPP Andy Brandt. But without the hoopla of a leadership convention, he'll be seen by both the party faithful and the public as a standby until the real thing can be found.

The low profile the party has kept may give it the breathing space it needs to try to mend the problems it's faced over the last few years.

With only 16 members of caucus, the elected representatives can think through the philisophical direction the party will follow -- and try to avoid the right and left wing splits it's seen in the past.

But it's unfortunate for the province the party faces up to two years of internal jockeying for position until a formal leadership convention is called.

With such a massive majority, for the government, a strong if small opposition is needed to challenge Liberal initiatives.

Without a quick unification of the party behind a strong leader, the Tories may once again find they're playing second fiddle to the NDP in the public's eyes.

Chesterville's Past

07 From the Record Thurs., Oct. 31, 1907

Mr. F. Wood, who has been a resident of this place for the past four years, and successfully carried on the furniture business he purchased from Mr. Stoddart, recently sold his business to Mr. R. McCormick of this place. Since his coming here, he, together with Mrs. Wood have made many warm friends, who will be sorry to hear of their removal.

One of the greatest living curioisities in the cattle line was on exhibition at the Ogdensburg fair. It is a five-legged cow, three hips and two udders, giving milk from both. The cow was born in St. John's, Que. and is owned by Joseph Dion. The fifth leg hangs from the middle of the back and the peculiar sight of a cow being milked from the top of its back is witnessed. The animal is a fine healthy one. It gives six quarts of milk at each milking, four being secured the ordinary way and two from the middle of the cow's back.

Mrs. James Nicoll of Nelson, B.C. has arrived here and intends spending the winter at her parental home at "Orchardside", the residence of Mr. Geo. H. McMillan.

John R. Clarke, the noted orator and lecturer, spoke three times on Sunday in the Methodist Church to fair sized gatherings, the weather being rather disagreeable. On Monday evening he appeared in Foster's Hall and took as his topic "The Rose, Shamrock and Thistle", or "John Pat and Sandy".

27 From the Record Thurs., Oct. 27, 1927

Mr. H. Cadieux, who has his harness and shoe shop in the Baldrey Block moved his week to Water Street where he has his business located in the Whalen Block, three doors east of Fulton Bros.

On Thursday, November 17th, the L.O.L. 2686 of Chesterville, celebrated the dedication of their new Hall, which was lately purchased. In spite of the unfavorable weather, a number from a distance and surrounding country and village members of the Orange Lodge and lady friends came out to witness the ceremonies.

On the afternoon of October 29th, Miss Nell Elliott and Miss Rena Grey entertained a number of ladies in the form of a miscellaneous shower, the occassion being a total surprise as a benefit in honor of Miss Jessie Nesbitt. At Miss Elliott's request Miss Nesbitt was invited to the Elliott home for the afternoon, and on her arrival was completely surprised to find such a number gathered to honor her.

Mr. T.A. Kidd, MP, Grand Master of the Loyal Orange Association of Ontario East, while officiating at the Dedication of the New Orange Hall on Thursday, November 17th, had dinner and was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Brownlee.

47 From the Record Thurs., Oct. 30, 1947

A successful euchre party was held in the Community Hall last Monday evening when thirty-two tables were occupied and twelve games played. Prizes were won by the following ladies: 1st, Mrs. C. Swayne, Smiths Falls; Consolation, Mrs. Wm. Fyke. Gentlemen: 1st, Mr. Erwin Merkley; Consolation, Mr. Fred McLean.

Chesterville Rotary Club was addressed on Monday night at the regular meeting by Frank Stevens, History teacher of the local high school. Mr. Stevens told of a summer he spent at Chapleau, Ont., as sports director of that railroad town.

The directors of the Winchester District Memorial Hospital announce the receipt of a donation of $1,000 toward the building fund from Beach Foundry Limited, Ottawa, for which they wish to express their sincere gratitude. A few donations like this is all that is needed to meet the expense of having the building erected, and that is the urgent wish of the finance committee. Another donation of $200 from Mr. J.D. Stewart has also been received with grateful thanks.

Mrs. Farren Beckstead, Mrs. Phillip Merkley, Mrs. John Darling, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beckstead and Misses Betty and Anna motored to Montreal at the week-end, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R.F. Merkley.

67 From the Record Thurs., Nov. 9, 1967

Entrance scholarships and under-graduate awards in the amount of $44,500 were presented at the fourth award banquet of the University of Guelph. Top award winner was Miss Joyce E. Bugden of Morrisburg, formerly of Chesterville, who won the Clara E. Elliott Scholarship of $2,400. Established in 1966, it is presented to a Macdonald Institute student who has completed the fourth semester with first class honours and who has made a significant contribution to the university community.

77 From the Record Wed., Nov. 9, 1977

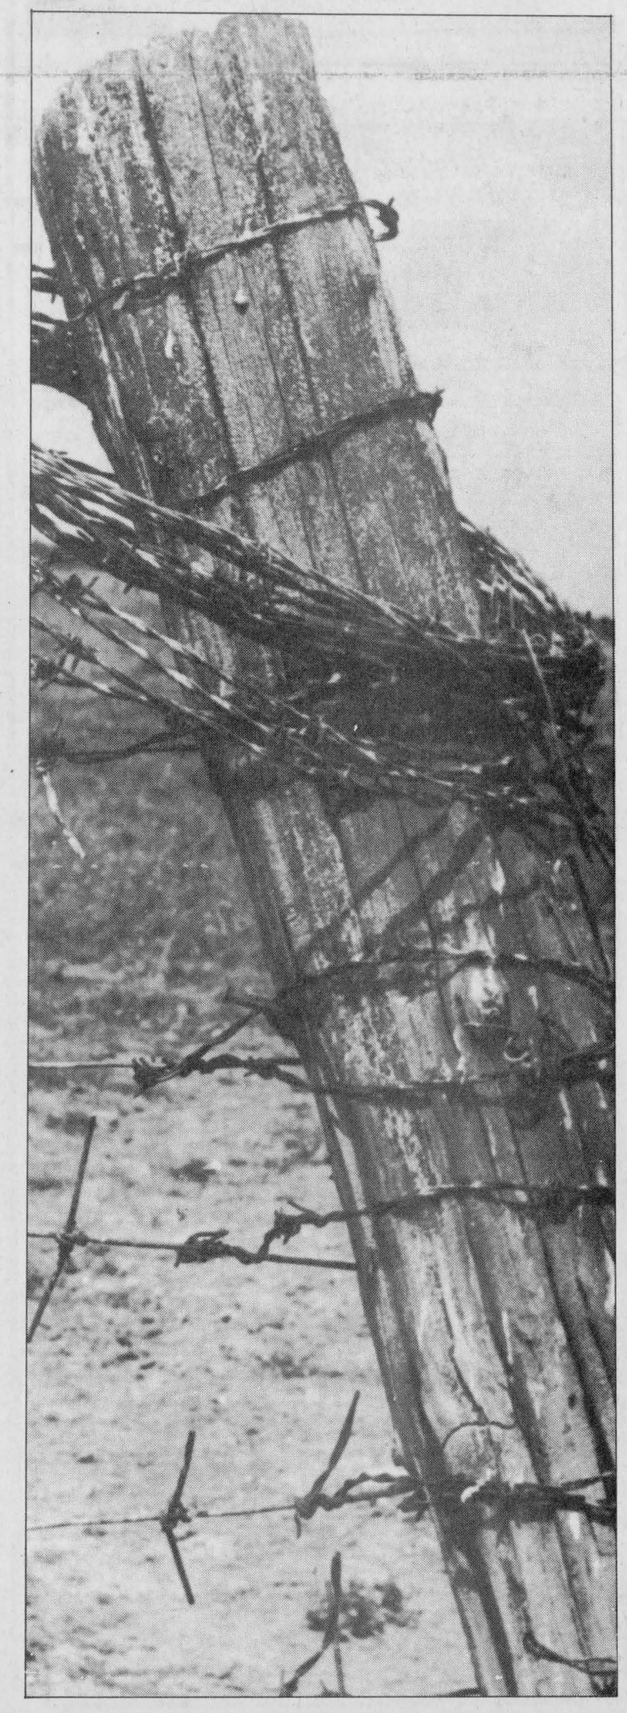
Chesterville Village Council has denied rumors that the Chesterville Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club are trying to gain exclusive liquor-licensing rights for the Community Hall and arena. "Nothing has been put on the agenda, nothing has been done (in regards to this matter) and there's no way we could make any quick decisions on the matter," said councillor Mac LaSalle at last Tuesday's meeting.

The Ladies Broomball Club had expressed concern to council that community groups other than the Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce might be cut off from their share of bar profits.

Four of Winchester Township's nine municipal bridges should be replaced according to the bridge appraisal study carried out by the Cornwall consulting engineering firm of R. Kostuch Associates Ltd.



For the Record

Diane Johnston

The leaves are falling and my temperature is rising.

The brisk fall air isn't responsible for the flush on my cheeks, the temperature of which is hovering a few degrees above a comfortable 98.6 degrees F.

While the kleenex box on my desk at work is quickly emptying, the one at home is bare -- I'm down to scratchy paper towels once again.

Last night, I spent 10 minutes in a darkened kitchen struggling with the childproof cap on a bottle of grape-flavored cough syrup. For the first few minutes, I ignored the passing time, allowing my mind to focus only on the sounds of a sleeping house filtering through a stuffed up head.

But frustration grew with each futile turn of the cap, each click reminding me I couldn't master something designed to foil a seven-year-old.

Just when I was ready to give in and smack the bottle against the counter, the cap did what it was supposed to do and twisted off in my hand. Trembling with surprise, I managed to spill most of two teaspoons' worth down my throat and stumbled off to bed.

The common cold -- what a misnomer. Each attach against one's nose and throat seems worse than the last in the imaginative ways it can cause discomfort. Each battle -- fought with boxes of tissues, cough drops and sweaters -- seems more terrible than the last.

Illness can have its good points. For a time -- only a brief time -- it earns one the sympathy of co-workers.

"You've been working too hard." "You don't look too well today, are you sick?" "You should drink more orange juice."

The gallons of orange juice came too late, as did all the cold remedies ever suggested: lemon-flavored tea, soaking the feet in hot water, toast with honey. The sale on menthol cough lozenges has ended.

They turn up the furnace to ward off pneumonia and there are even scattered, half-hearted offers to cover a meeting that night.

Their pity and concern are comforting but unfortunately short-lived, dying under a barrage of sniffles, sneezes, sighs, coughs and whining.

I do what I can to capitalize on their pangs of sympathy. I've a real knack for making my voice rough and raspy -- enough to make Janis Joplin proud -- and at the same time speaking through my nose.

That trick is good for a couple more days of special treatment but then they start to question why, if I'm so obviously headed towards the hospital, I don't first go to the doctor.

But I'm leery of doctors -- on one occasion, after I'd suffered through hearing problems after bouts of coughing, for several days, I screwed up the courage to make a doctor's appointment. He had the gall to tell me I almost wasn't sick.

After a few more days of misery, the cold clears up, to my own relief and everyone else's.

By then, someone else has caught the bug and, with compassion reserves depleted, I'm in no mood to dispense sickbed cheer.

The Farmer's Wife

by Wyn Thompson

Nobody asked me but...I am normally a peace-loving, fun-loving person, not easily riled, optimistically taking 'my lumps', secure in the knowledge that I'll live to fight another day...

This summary of my sterling qualities was being delivered to the Farmer, who sat in front of me, reading the weekly newspapers.

"Some as might say so. Others mightn't," came a voice from behind me. There stood Sam.

"Sam, you were eavesdropping," I exclaimed.

Some as might say so," he drawled, "but with the pitch and carryin' powers of your voice, some as mightn't."

"What's got ya so mad, anyway," he continued, "the Farmer seems peaceful enuff."

"I'm not mad, Sam, only angry," remembering in time to lower my voice on the last two words.

"Well then, what is it?" Sam picked.

"Well, now that you've overheard a private discussion, I'll tell..." I paused for breath. A mistake.

"Overheard nothing. I heard you from halfway across the field," Sam was warming to the discussion.

"Be that as it may, I was telling the Farmer that I can't decide who I am mad..., uh angrier at, Canada Post or the Banks."

"How come?" Sam enquired easing himself into a chair, accepting the proferred cup of coffee.

"Three weeks ago I mailed an insurance cheque to Toronto, yesterday I received by mail a notice of final premium request advising, if not paid, of policy cancellation. I went to my Bank to put a stop payment on the previous cheque and I was charged $6.50," I said.

"Wuh," replied Sam.

"Now Sam, a $2.50 administration charge I wouldn't mind, but $6.50 is highway robbery and I said as much," I emphasized, "and now it's going to cost me another whopping courier charge to send that premium cheque to Toronto, plus a telephone charge incurred advising the company that the payment is on the way."

"As a matter of fact, payments to this insurance company and to OHIP are the only ones that can't be paid through the Bank, and that makes me furious too," I paused for breath.

"Also, I would like to see some recourse mechanism put into place whereby "little Joe and Jill citizen and-or business' might be recompensed for such inconveniences and add-on charges for services for which we already pay handsomely," I concluded.

"I know how ya feel," Sam said, "got caught myself last postal strike. I was some ma..., eh angry. Now I agree management and union deserve each other, but we don't deserve them."

"As for the Banks, they's trying to recover all their default losses from 'little Joe and Jill', too," he cackled," "and heaven help yer hide if ya ask them for a little assistance or information. There's a charge for that, as well, but ya can't keep your money in a sock no more..."

"But, I didn't come to debate with ya. Manda sent me. It seems we're havin' a few neighbors in for Thanksgiving luncheon and you're invited," he grinned.

"Why, I'd love to come, Sam," I replied.

"If I'm not picking corn, I'll be there Sam, and thanks," said the Farmer.

Sam departed. I picked up a couple of dailies in which the Farmer had marked some articles on Free Trade.

"Shades of Laurier's days," I commented.

"You remember those days," the Farmer laughed.

"No, but I do remember my history," I told him. "You and Sam and Canada Post and the Banks have tried my patience almost to the limit today."

"If it's any comfort, you and thousands of others, I am sure," he assured me.

"I know I do not stand alone in my frustration," I agreed. As for this Free Trade deal...I wonder how it will shake out. There is such a divergence of information and opinions that it is enough to boggle the mind of any sane person."

"We'll have to wait and see, I guess," and he returned to his papers.

There was a freeze the other night, I told him later as we had our bedtime snack that brought forth a peculiar final harvest of old blankets, sheets and towels. It was strange produce I saw as I drove to town the next morning: humped and lumpy sheets in their lovely colors spread over huddled squash.

"You'd have thought some families had come into the area the night before and finding no room at the inn, had plopped down to sleep in people's tomato beds and melon patches."

"This great Eastern Ontario White Sale that never fails to get staged each fall at frost time is a little silly, in some respects, isn't it? These are vegetables, after all, that we are protecting, not children nor jewels," I concluded.

"And, in fact, we don't even need that last offering," continued the Farmer, "for the freezers, the cupboards, and garages are full to overflowing."

"Still, our habit of emptying the clothes closet on the garden's behalf does give us a way to know one another," I laughed, "up the road is a man who covers his garden with the same sheets and blankets, arranged in the same order from one year to the next. And that's a real gardener. How does he remember."

"And who would have guessed that conservative, steady Sam and the Missus slept on flowered sheets? I must kid Sam some time."

"You and Sam deserve each other, you know that don't you?" said the Farmer over his shoulder on the way to bed.

The hunter's moon lights my living room. Beautiful, dramatic October, I wish it would last for a year!

Smorgasbord of cultures perfect combination for festival

Kidding around

MAPLE RIDGE (Staff) - Music, dance and hordes of food proved to be a winning combination at the international bazaar and festival here Saturday, raising about $7,000 for the Winchester District Memorial Hospital auxiliary.

People from throughout the surrounding area packed the North Dundas District High School from 1 p.m. Saturday until almost 4 p.m. buying up an endless variety of mouth-watering pastries and other foods and crafts. Expenses still have to be deducted from the $7,000.

The auditorium was filled with booths set up by different ethnic groups throughout the area and almost anything could be found to fancy a person's sweet tooth, from cookies and cakes to honey.

The afternoon wouldn't have been complete without the entertainment from various area artists. Entertainment ranged from an exotic Polynesian dance, done by Pene Arnold, Chesterville, to down-home French Canadian jigs.

The crowd of about 750 people was also entertained by Irish folk songs, traditional Dutch dances and a strolling accordionist.

Convenor Olive Cass, of Chesterville, said she was pleased with how the program came together and especially praised the 50-60 volunteers who helped make it a success.

"A lot of people helped out with this thing," she said. All the work preparing for the event was all done by volunteers and the food and prizes were donated by area residents and businesses.

"Most people were very, very co-operative," Cass said.

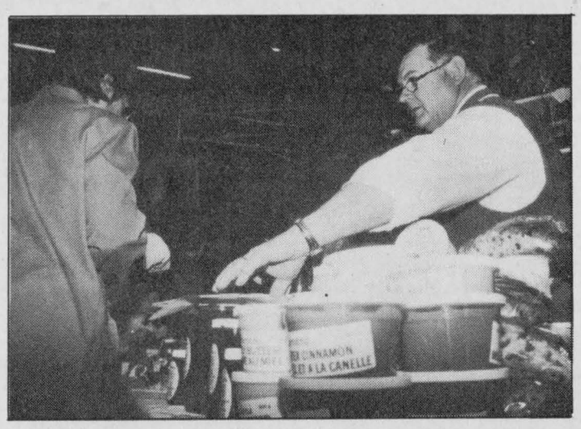
Money was raised for the auxiliary through the sale of baked goods, crafts, a number of draws, and the auctioning of a political cartoon done by Citizen cartoonist Alan King.

The cartoon, which portrays the policing of the Oleomargarine Act, was bought by Dr. Charles Adamson of Chesterville, for $115. The framed and autographed cartoon was donated by King and auctioned by Harold Ball.

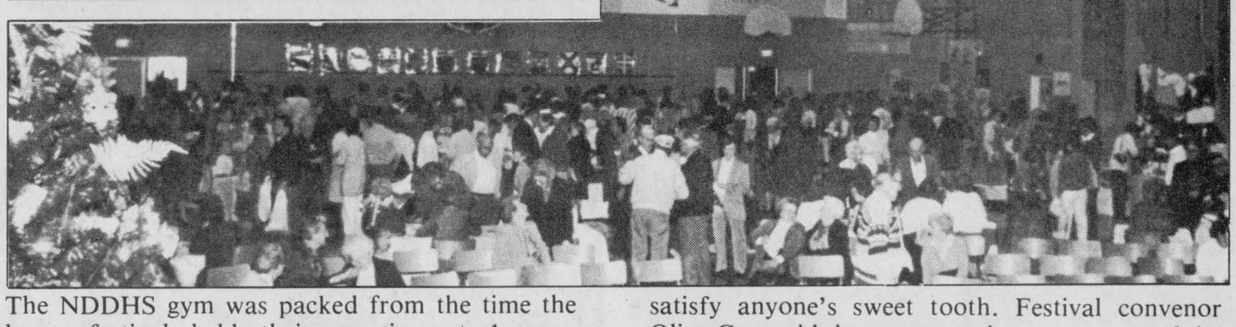
The bake table netted $1,135 in proceeds and the craft table took in $888, Cass said. A 50-50 draw held at the event netted $500 for the auxiliary.

Apples and cheese sold at the bazaar were donated as well as cheesecakes which were drawn for and ceramic Christmas trees.

Cass said she though the event topped last year's bazaar but she wasn't sure if one will be held again next year. Cass has been bazaar convenor for the past two years. The decision on whether to have the event again will likely be left to the new convenor, she said.



Dundas Dairy Princess Colleen Acres, right, presented a gift to Anne Keon, wife of Ottawa cardiac surgeon Wilbert Keon.



The NDDHS gym was packed from the time the bazaar-festival held their opening at 1 p.m. Saturday until it wrapped up at almost 4 p.m. The gym was filled with a wide variety of ethnic displays and there were enough baked goods available to satisfy anyone's sweet tooth. Festival convenor Olive Cass said the event may have even topped the great success it had last year. Inset, above left, Ian Crerar puts a little sweetness in someone's life with some honey from his honey farm.

Chesterville woman finds fulfillment working to help elderly and disabled

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Working in the homes of strangers who quickly became friends filled a void in Ethel Fraser's life.

For the past five years, the Chesterville woman has used her nursing experience as a Red Cross homemaker, enabling dozens of clients ranging from a temporarily disabled mother of three preschoolers to a 91-year-old to remain in their own homes.

The province has designated Oct. 18 to 24 as homemaker's week and on Thursday afternoon, Fraser reflected on her job as a Red Cross employee while baking cookies in the home of one of the service's recipients.

She recalled applying for the position after seeing an ad in the newspaper. Her children were away at school and "I really needed to get out of the house."

"I thought I needed something and it sounded like something I would like to explore. It's worked out beautifully," the 60-year-old woman said.

Her tasks are varied, ranging from running errands to the grocery store to light housekeeping to physiotherapy. She summed up her responsibility to the clients simply: "You try to lessen their load for the time you're not there."

Fraser is one of 85 homemakers in Dundas and 315 across the United Counties, Prescott and Russell. Elaine MacKinnon, regional homemaker supervisor with the Canadian Red Cross Society in Cornwall, said between 900 and 1,000 clients are visited regularly by homemakers in the five counties.

Ninety-five per cent of the recipients are elderly and 95 per cent are female. MacKinnon said the program's main objective is keeping people in their homes and out of expensive institutions. This year the society have budgeted $2.5 million for homemaking services in the five counties.

A new program announced by the province Oct. 1 allowing people to apply for the service without a referral from a physician or professional agency is expected to swell the number of recipients.

"They're starting off slowly. It's anticipated to grow significantly," MacKinnon said. "We certainly need more homemakers to meet the demands of the IHP (Integrated Homekaing Program)."

Among homemakers' clients are victims of strokes, arthritis, cancer and cardiac illness.

Fraser said it's difficult at times to distance herself from the pain many of her clients face.

"It depends on how involved you become with the person. That's something that you have to watch out for," she said.

"You can still become involved to the extent that you care for the person but not to the extent that you're a wreck."

Homemakers provide as much relief for the families of the ones in need of care as they do for the ill themselves. They're available for overnight or longer stays with the very sick or dying.

A longer visit, said Fraser, relieves the family, "just to give them space."

Fraser's experience has included work as an operating room nurse from 1948 to 1963 and stints in a nursing home and an Ottawa hospital. But not all homemakers can draw on the same amount of practical experience.

She first apprenticed as a homemaker then took a month-long course through St. Lawrence College that taught the basics of personal hygiene, cooking, cleaning, first aid and health care. There are several workshops held during the year to refresh homemakers' skills.

It can be difficult entering new clients' homes to do the routine chores or personal grooming they're no longer able to do for themselves.

"I always ask, 'Is there anything special you would like me to do today.' If there isn't, then you assess what you think you should do...You have to play it by how you see it."

But any feelings of discomfort quickly disappear as the client and homemaker come to know each other, she said.

"I've met such fabulous people. It's been fun, no, you can't say fun. It's been rewarding."

Homemaking services may be purchased by the individual or, if eligible, arranged through agencies including the Ontario Ministry of Health, insurance agencies, the Department of Veterans Affairs, municipal social services or outreach programs of the Ministry of Community and Social Services.

Anyone weeking more information on either receiving the service or applying to become a homemaker is asked to contact the Canadian Red Cross Society at its offices in Winchester or Cornwall.

Lending a helping hand

Getting a head start on Christmas baking is only one of the many tasks Chesterville Red Cross Homemaker Ethel Fraser performs for her clients. Under a new provincial program announced Oct. 1, more people in Prescott, Russell and the United Counties are expected to qualify for the help that allows them to remain in their own home.

Finch Friendly Circle tours Ottawa Winter Fair

FINCH (Special) - The Finch Friendly Circle continues to prove true to its name, as members enjoy local happenings together in good fellowship.

On Aug. 15, we shared in the happy celebration of the 60th wedding anniversary of Hattie and Ernie Naidow, both founding members of our club.

On Sept. 27, we were pleased to assist in the 50th wedding anniversary celebration of Leola and Mac Otto, also members of our club.

On Wed., Oct. 7, 41 members boarded a charter coach to view the autumn splendor along the Seaway and the Thousand Islands. Although Mother Nature dampened the brilliant foliage, she failed to dampen the spirits of the seniors on the bus. Outlet shopping, a Royal video, lunch at Hill Island Restaurant and a Boat Cruise were enjoyed by all.

On Oct. 15 we were off again to spend the evening at the Ottawa Winter Fair. We are very grateful to the Finch and District Lions' Club which provided the bus and made arrangements for this trip.

Flyers lose pre-season games

Coach readies team for regular season opener

FINCH (Staff) - Two more losses in the EOJCHL pre-season is no need for concern, says Chesterville Flyers' coach.

"They're only exhibition games and I'm not going to push the panic button now," said Kevin Mackler. "There is still a problem at Christmas then we can start worrying."

The Flyers dropped a pair of games to North Stormont 86s over the weekend. The 86s won Saturday's contest in Chesterville by a 6-4 margin and took Sunday's game 12-1 here.

Both Mackler and 86s coach Steve McRae said Chesterville didn't have its full team on the ice and the games couldn't be used to measure how the year will go.

"He's (Mackler) not trying out his best players yet," said McRae. "He used his rookies to get a look at them while we are basically the same team as last year."

The Flyers used two lines Sunday made up mainly of rookies (with three returning players) as they lost 12-1.

Rodney Casselman scored the opening goal of the game for Chesterville but with one minute to play in the first period, the 86s scored twice to go up 2-1.

North Stormont scored 10 more goals -- seven in the third -- to win handily over the basically new Chesterville squad.

Bernard Grady and Greg Mesich both had two goals and an assist in the game for the winners.

The North Stormont coach said, "We sort of outplayed them," but he added, "Exhibition games mean nothing to me," it's a chance to see the younger players.

McRae said the other game, "I think they (the Flyers) had a tighter skating game Saturday."

The Flyers lost 6-4 in the match-up but were up 3-0 at one point.

"We came out flying but they chipped away," said Mackler.

Chesterville scored three goals in the first two minutes 11 seconds to go up 3-0. John Mackler, Casselman and Kevin Byers scored the goals to put the team up early in the game.

Marc Beehler put the 86s on the board six and a half minutes later but the first period ended 3-1 in favor of the Flyers.

Less than two minutes into the second, the Finch team scored twice to tie the game. Mike Grady and Todd Blaine scored the goals for the 86s.

Sean Beckstead put Chesterville up in front again but North Stormont scored three more goals before the end of the period to go up 6-4. There was no scoring in the third a the 86s won. Bernard Grady, Blaine and Dale Murphy scored the other goals for the team.

Flyers' president Tom Van Dellen said he was pleased with the work the younger players on the team did in the two games.

"They hustled from the beginning of the game to the end. "If they skate with the regulars, we'll have a very good team."

Coach Mackler is also as optimistic of the season.

"It's going to take a lot of hard work but once we get rolling Finch will see a different team. They're (the 86s) are a big strong team and will be tough all year. If we can keep pace with them we'll be in the middle of everything."

The Flyers will open their season this Saturday against last season's champions St. Isidore Eagles in Chesterville.

Kevin Mackler is anticipating a good game despite the absence of some players.

"St. Isidore is a going to be strong (with the same line up as last season). It's going to be tight."

While the attendance in the pre-season was not the best, both the coach and president are hoping for the regular Saturday support.

"I hope so, they'll be in for a good game (Saturday)," said coach Mackler.

Van Dellen doesn't expect a repeat of last year's incidents during the finals.

"I don't think there will be any bad blood (between the fans). St. Isidore doesn't usually bring many fans with them during the regular season."

Fan fighting broke out in the fourth game of the final here between Chesterville and St. Isidore. One person was sent to hospital in the fracas.

Van Dellen is also hoping for fan support during the regular season and said the season ticket sales have been "pretty good."

North Stormont will play their first game tomorrow (Thursday) against Casselman-Cambridge Stars, who have already lost two regular season games.

McRae is expecting Casselman to come right at the team after their two losses "but they always come right at you. It's going to be pretty good although some guys (from the 86s) are fighting injuries."

McRae said fans wishing to go the Rockland game Sunday should be at the Finch arena at 5:30 if they want a ride on the bus.

Jr. C hockey

Embrun downs Stars twice to start season

CASSELMAN (Staff) - Embrun 72's started their EOJCHL (Eastern Ontario Jr. C. Hockey League) season with a pair of wins over Casselman Cambridge Stars.

The 72's scored 20 goals in the two games and allowed 10 to take the victories.

Dan Savage was the leading scorer here Sunday as he put in four goals and added an assist to give Embrun a 10-7 win.

Casselman led 2-1 after one period but were down 6-2 after two. They closed the gap in the third but fell 10-7 to the 72's.

Savage scored the winner on one of the two power-play goals. The team added another goal on a power play and capped off the scoring with an empty net goal with 27 seconds remaining while short-handed.

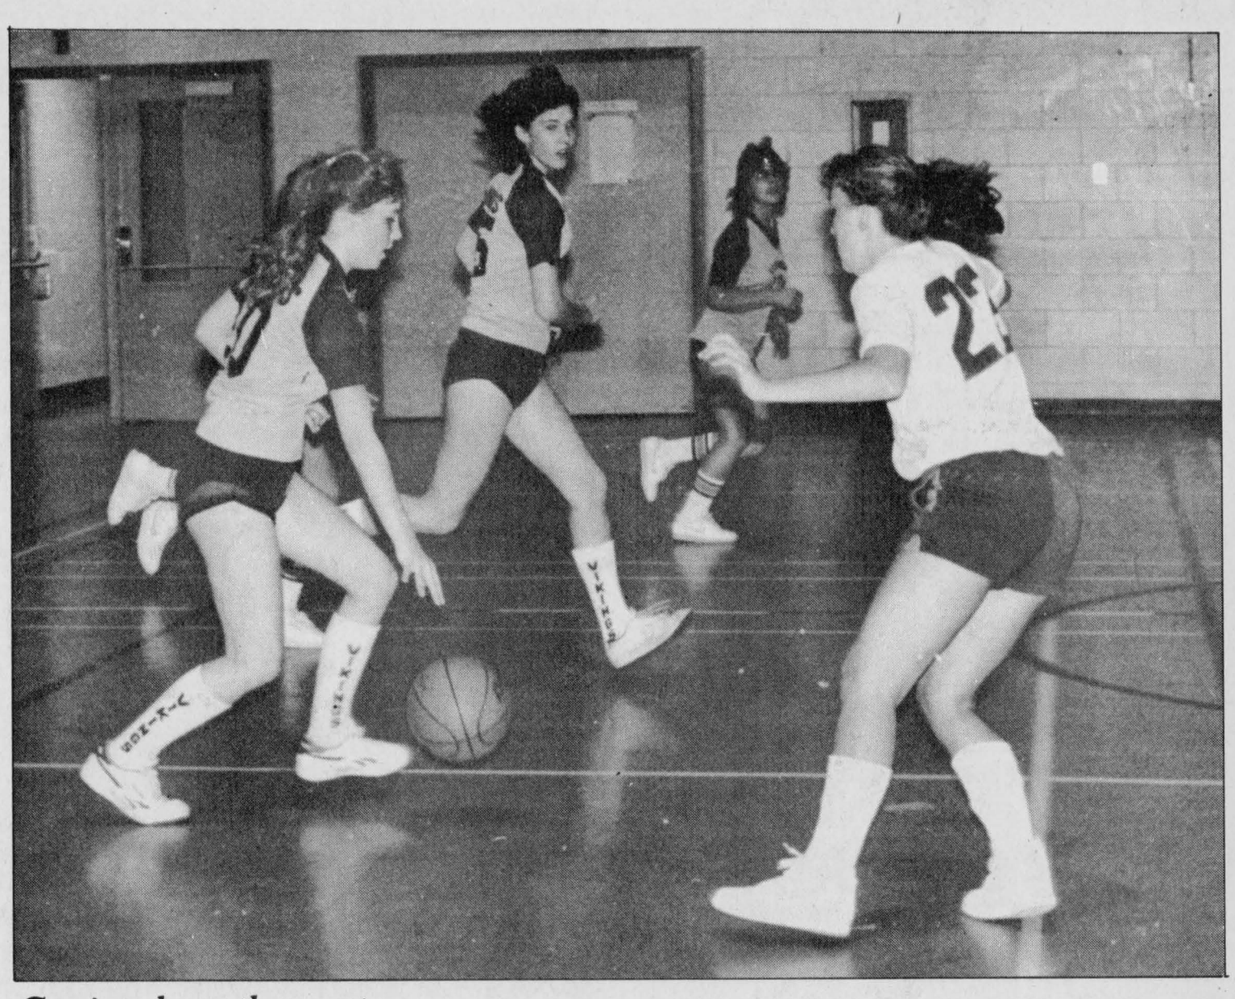
There were 42 minutes total penalties in the game. Embrun got that amount alone in the season opener, Oct. 16, when there were 74 minutes in total penalties.

There were six power-play goals scored, with Embrun getting four of them. The 72's won the game 10-3.

Embrun had over 11 minutes of penalties in the second but Casselman couldn't put one in as they trailed 3-2.

Embrun's Alain Gignac had three goals and Mario Lapalme stopped 35 shots as they team won 10-3.

In other league action, St. Isidore Eagles, last season's champions, won 10-2 over newcomers Rockland Nats Sunday. The Clarence Twp. Beavers' and Russell Lions' game was postponed and must be played within 30 days.



Coming down the court

Tagwi junior girls basketball team was no match for the General Vanier team when they met Oct. 14. GVSS won 40-14 over the shorter Warriors' team. The senior Warriors had better luck wining their game.

Tagwi loses game to taller GVSS team

AVONMORE (Staff) - They might as well have been playing the senior team.

When the General Vanier junior girls' basketball team came onto the floor, Tagwi Warriors' coach Ashley Coventry said, "I thought they had lined up the wrong team, I thought they were the senior team. They had height."

The height proved a big difference as Tagwi lost 40-14, but they had more going for them.

"They're (GVSS) the best fast-breaking team I've seen in a while, they have hustle."

Tagwi now has a 0-4 (win-loss) record but there are still a few games to go.

"We still have a chance to pick up ground on the other teams," said Coventry.

The Warriors will play St. Joe's today (Wednesday) but will be missing a key player in their line up. Cindy Doszormeny will be out with a torn ligament and a chipped bone in her right ankle.

Coventry said, "This will cause problems with the St. Joe centre, who is tall."

He is optimistic, however. "Our chances are good and we're ready to win one. Hopefully we can control and take the game."

The senior court minders had better success against the General Vanier team. They won, doubling GVSS's score.

Panthers give up first goal in broomball

WINCHESTER (Staff) - While the other games were shutouts, Dunbar Panthers finally allowed a goal in their four starts in the Winchester and District Broomball League.

Ormond scored with seconds remaining in the game to put a blemish in the zero goals against column of the Panthers.

In the other games, Morewood retains a share of first with the Panthers after an 8-0 win over Winchester; Prescott Road has moved into the A Pool with their 5-0 win over winless Newington and Toyes Hill's 6-0 loss to Russell.

Dunbar Panthers seemed to be on their way to another shutout after leading 1-0 but with 38 seconds remaining in the game, Doug Sloan put one in the net to tie the game for Ormond Ault and send it into overtime.

Larry Gallinger scored in the overtime to give the Panthers the win but not before they had been handed their first goal against.

Laurie Blanchard scored the Panthers other goal.

Dunbar remains tied for first place in the A Pool with four wins. Ormond receives one point for the overtime loss and moves into second place of the B Pool alone.

Morewood Vikings are tied with Dunbar after their 8-0 shutout of Winchester Raiders.

The Vikings scored seven of their goals in the second half. Jack Hoogeveen, Dan MacMahon and John Stewart all scored twice in the game while Hoogeveen also added an assist.

Three players scored all the points as Russell won 6-0 over Toyes Hill.

Steve Bekker had two goals and three assists while Mike Bols and Frank Bols each had two goals and two assists to give the team the win.

Russell remains in third place of the A Pool following the win but Toyes Hill drops into the B Pool.

Prescott Road moves up into the A Pool after handing Newington a 5-0 loss.

Bill Veley scored twice in the second half as Prescott Road had four goals to win the game.

Newington is still winless and remains in last place of the B Pool.

High School soccer

Tagwi one game away from playoffs

AVONMORE (Staff) - With one game remaining, the Tagwi boys' soccer teams could find themselves in the playoffs next week.

The senior Warriors are currently in third place with a 5-1-1 (win-loss-tie) record behind Glengarry (6-0-1) and St. Lawrence (6-1-0).

The junior team is tied for second with St. Lawrence with a 6-1-1 record with Glengarry in first (7-0-1).

In the league, the first two teams play in the finals. In both the junior and senior cases, the Tagwi teams must win over La Citadelle Monday while St. Lawrence loses to Rothwell-Osnabruck on the same day.

In last weeks action, the senior Warriors won both their games while the juniors won one and lost one.

The senior shut out St. Joe 7-0 Oct. 14 and handed Seaway an 11-1 loss Monday.

The junior Warriors tied St. Joe at three but defeated Seaway 6-3.

The junior R-O Lancers won a 2-1 decision over La Citadelle Oct. 14 but assistant coach Elton Beckstead said even though the teams were evenly matched the score could have been higher.

"There could have been more goals on either side. There were a lot of chances for both teams."

The junior Lancers will play St. Lawrence in their final game and Beckstead said the team could win it.

"The team could win but sometimes they have to be wakened up."

The senior Lancers were shut out 5-0 by La Citadelle with many of the players playing hurt.

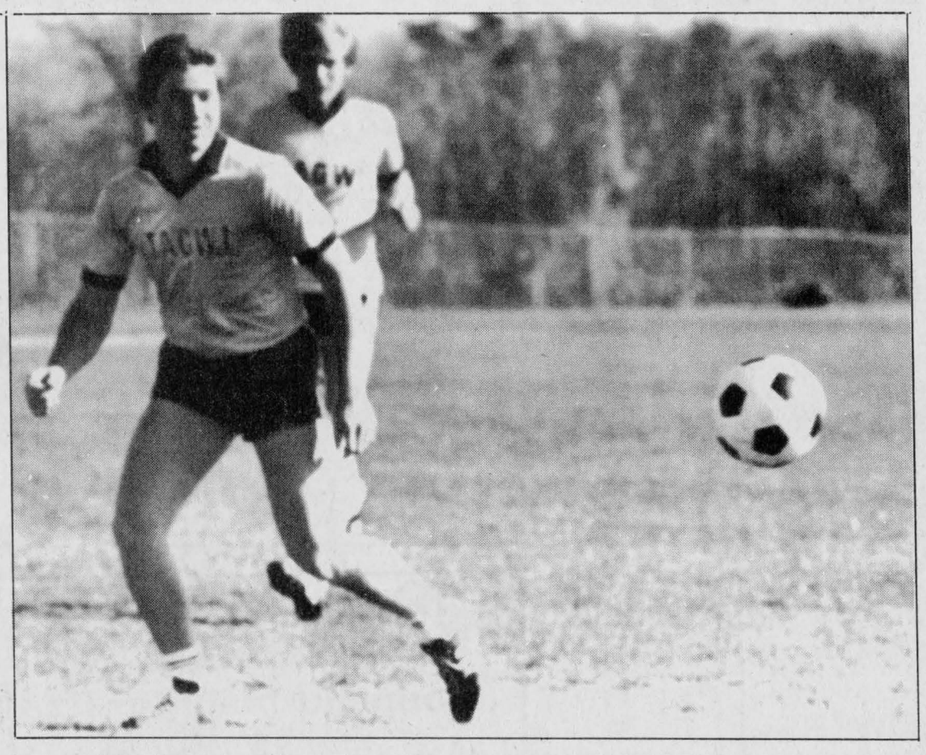
The North Dundas Devils' junior team had one tie and a loss during the past week while the seniors won one and lost one.

The junior Devils tied 0-0 with Char-Lan Oct. 14. On Monday, the lost 2-1 to St. Joe.

The Devils were down 1-0 at the half and tied it in the second. St. Joe's added the winner late in the game. Darin Lampman scored NDDHS's lone goal.

After dropping a 2-0 decision to Char-Lan, the senior Devils won 3-1 over St. Joe's. Ole Schewelies, Chris Fraser and John Tessier scored the Devils' goals.

The Devils will play their final game at home against Seaway Monday.



Levitating soccer

The Senior Tagwi Warriors boy's soccer team easily won a 7-0 game over St. Joe's at Tagwi Oct. 14. They also won 11-1 over Seaway Monday to be in third place of the division. The team could end up in the playoffs pending the outcome of next weeks' games. The junior team tied St. Joe's 3-3 and beat Seaway 6-3 to be in a two way second place tie in the division.

League finalizes preparations

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Final preparations are in process as the North Dundas Minor Hockey League readies for league play in November, said league president.

Bob Larose said a few of the registered players have been placed on teams after the training camps held last week.

"Some players have been fitted on certain teams but it will be finalized this week."

There were about 240 participants in the training camps and Larose said this a "a good number".

One change in the league was the reducing in the number of pee wee teams and the increase in the number of bantam teams. There will now be three pee wee teams instead of the four and three bantam teams, up from two.

The third bantam team will play out of Chesterville Thursdays and Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and have William "Jr." Helmer as coach.

There are still some positions available on other teams, said Larose.

"We're still looking for help in the midgets. In fact we're not sure if there will be a team."

Lee Neilsen will be the coach for the midgets but the team is still missing an assistant coach and a trainer.

Despite these problems, Larose said, "I'm pleased the way things are progressing.

"What we've seen on the ice was pretty good and we should have competitive teams at all levels."

Exhibition games are being scheduled for the next two weeks and the regular season schedule will be ready after the Oct. 28 meeting of the league.

The league had Archie Mulligan of the ODMHA hold a coaches demonstration last week. He showed the coaches, using the bantams, how to put teams through practices.

"It can be said after two hours the bantams were tired but it was worthwhile," said Larose.

Ringette: competitive sport in Chesterville

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Ringette could be another competitive sport offered by the village if enough people are interested, said village recreation director Tom Lee.

For the second year, the village is trying to get girls to register for ringette. Lee said he is hoping to get the girls interested to set up league play in future years.

"You can't get this overnight, it takes time," he said.

He said there are enough girls now to form one group of 14 to 16 year olds "except for a few more girls."

He doesn't think, however, a team could play in a league this year.

"We have to know if there's going to be a team before approaching a league. We have to be sure. But I doubt we could get into a league because it is too late."

If there is a team but no league to play in, Lee said he would like to set up exhibition games with other leagues.

He is also hoping to get a group of 9 and 10 year olds to form a team.

Registration will be extended until Monday, Oct. 26 since there was a date mix-up for this week.

Last year, the first year it was attempted, Lee said there were 20 girls "but the age gap was too large to form a team."

Junior girls winners

Chesterville Public School won the B side of the junior girls soccer in Winchester, Oct. 6. The team lost their first game 4-0 to Winchester but won their next two, 1-0 over Morewood and 1-0 over Morrisburg, to win the division. Pictured here are the winning team members. Senior girl Devils win one, lose one

MAPLE RIDGE (Staff) - The North Dundas Devils senor girls' soccer team split their games after action here Oct. 15.

The senior girls won 2-1 over St. Lawrence but lost a close 1-0 game to La Citadelle. Kerry Kennedy and Kathy Barkley scored the Devils' goals in the win.

In other senior action, the Tagwi Warriors also split their games. The team lost 2-1 to La Citadelle but shutout St. Lawrence 3-0.

In junior play, the North Dundas team played to a scoreless tie with La Citadelle. Shelley Summers was in nets for the Devils.

The junior Warriors won their game with La Citadelle by a 4-3 margin. Monica Tanner, Margo MacIntosh, Tracey McNichol and Esther Speck scored for the Warriors.

Maple Ridge takes second at senior girls soccer

MORRISBURG (Staff) - Maple Ridge finished with a 1-0-2 (win-loss-tie) record but could only manage finishing second at the Dundas County Public School Senior Girls Soccer here Oct. 14.

The winning team, Nationview, had the same record but had a better goals for-goals against average than the Maple Ridge team. Maple Ridge scored one goal and didn't allow any while Nationview scored four goals and allowed one.

Nationview and Maple Ridge played to a 0-0 tie in their match-up. Maple Ridge also had a 0-0 tie with Morrisburg and beat Iroquois 1-0.

Nationview tied Iroquois 1-1 and shut-out Morrisburg 3-0 to win the senior girls soccer for this year.

In junior girls' action in Winchester Oct 6, Chesterville Public School won the B side with a 2-1-0 record. They lost 4-0 to Winchester but won 1-0 over both Morewood and Morrisburg.

Warriors lose games as volleyball begins

ALEXANDRIA (Staff) - The Tagwi Warriors' boy's volleyball teams started the season off with two losses each after play here Oct. 13.

The senior team lost to both Glengarry and St. Lawrence in straight games.

The juniors had a better outing winning one game in each match.

Joseph Stelmach, senior coach, said the junior team is the better of the two.

"The juniors are expected to improve and become a good team. The senior team will be competitive but will need some work."

Both teams have a 0-2 (win-loss) records.

The teams played again yesterday but the result was not available at press time. They play again Monday, Oct. 26 at General Vanier.
