High Taxes A Factor In High Rents

You should write something about the rents in this town, it was suggested to us by a reader who is paying $85 per month for a roof over his head "that has two leaks". He feels he is being gouged by his landlord and with housing so hard to find in Alexandria it is quite possible some rentals have been jacked up unjustifiably.

Apartment rentals vary from $50 to as much as $100 per month, we gather, depending on the type of accommodation, length of tenure and other factors. It is almost as natural as breathing for a tenant to consider his landlord a "Scrooge". Since time immemorial there have been owners who qualified for the appellation by taking unfair advantage of tight housing situations.

That desirable rental accommodation is difficult to obtain here, we are kept aware by the harried housewives who try to obtain advance word of listings before the paper has gone to press. It is a problem not exclusive to Alexandria and what's to do about it we don't know.

Families unable to find suitable accommodation at a rental they can afford have our sympathy, but that can be cold comfort with colder weather just over the horizon.

In fairness to landlords, and we are among those who don't collect rents, it should be pointed out that municipal taxes are at an all-time high in Alexandria and the prospect is for yet more increases in mill rates. The new counties' assessment last year more than doubled the basis on which our office building is taxed and we understand higher assessments were general for property owners.

Despite a considerable jump in this municipality's total assessment, mill rates were also increased to meet public spending that is on a scale never before known in Alexandria. Separate School supporters are now paying almost $1.25 for every $10 their commercial property is assessed; $1.13 on residential property. There is little or no hope of a drop in municipal taxes; rather is the reverse to be expected.

Higher taxes on property invariably result in landlords passing on these increased overhead charges to their tenants. Municipal taxes may be only one of the problems facing the owner of property but they loom large in this day of high civic spending.

Higher municipal tax rates may not justify all rental increases on housing in our town but they must be an important factor. It is the consumer who is called upon to pay for all public spending and at the civic level the family paying rent must share the load with more affluent citizens who are owners of property.

This is something that should be kept in mind by every tenant when the municipal elections are next held here on December 2nd. There probably are more tenant voters in our town than property owners. Collectively they may have a majority say in the choice of councillors, Public Utilities Commissioners, school board trustees.

The citizen who cares not a whit how spendthrift are these elected bodies with public funds, because he is not directly paying taxes, may live to rue it in his rent.

All levels of government are over-spending today and so we know a cost of living that is sky-high and a dollar that is pleasantly plentiful, but so cheap it has very limited buying power. Our only control of public spending is at the polls, in the capacity for responsible administration of those we elect.

We have not always been selective at the polls and as a result we know uncontrolled public spending that is hurting every consumer whether or not he pays taxes on property.

Quebec Loses Its Premier Johnson

Quebec's Premier, Daniel Johnson, died of a heart attack last week at the age of 53. His sudden passing should serve as a reminder to Canadians resident in the other nine provinces that politics, as it is now being played in Quebec, demands much of those who aspire to the role of government leader.

That province is in political ferment and its premier daily must face puzzling and often harassing problems — problems that cannot be adjusted to the satisfaction of everyone. He must measure every word, walk a tight rope continually, see-sawing from side to side to compensate for the ever present winds of nationalism, federalism, provincial autonomy, separatism, bilingualism and all their shadings that have been blowing through Quebec since 1959.

The sudden death of Premier Duplessis then blew the lid on a political pot that long had been at the boiling point. The rush for progress, with its overtones of racism and statism, has continued through almost a decade and successive leaders of government have had to keep the turbulence and the clashing currents under control.

Premier Duplessis died September 7, 1959 under circumstances very similar to the demise of Premier Johnson. Hon. Paul Sauvé took over the reins of office and seemed ideally suited to the task until a heart attack struck him down on New Year's day 1960. That same year the Liberal's Jean Lesage carried the province and he survived the six years in which his administration tried to hurry Quebec into the 20th century.

Premier Lesage tried too much, too soon, it seems, and a wave of reaction returned the Union Nationale in 1966. Little more than two years later Premier Daniel Johnson has succumbed to the strain of striving for what is politically possible and economically best for his province.

He had in the last years to face all the difficulties of a government saddled with immense spending obligations, a narrowing scope for borrowing and a limited range for increasing taxation. Every political leader knows these problems in varying degrees but the Quebec premier had the added problem of presiding over a province much divided in its own views, and aims, and wishes. Premier Johnson had been striving to establish some sort of reasonable consensus within Quebec and to adjust it to a reasonable consensus of the rest of Canada.

This called for manoeuvres necessary to maintain even a tolerable balance among conflicting forces. Most Canadians must have appreciated his position even when statements emanating from him might have carried overtones not to their liking.

Premier Johnson recently declared: "Let us seek our goals with the quiet assurance that there are two cultures, and in all parts of this country, men and women who will work together in friendship and fraternity to build the Canada of tomorrow".

That is an outlook we can hope not only his successor as Premier of Quebec, but every Canadian, possesses.

One Less Day Of Poor Service?

Canada's postal service will adopt the five-day week next February 1st when all post offices will close on Saturdays and there will be no mail deliveries that day. In making the announcement in the Commons late last week Postmaster-General Eric Kierans declared there is no need for postal services on the weekend and the move would result in large savings to his department.

Perhaps Mr. Kierans is right in his thinking Saturday service is not needed, though we see with the change still further delays in delivery of our paper in the larger cities and their environs.

If the Postmaster-General could guarantee adequate postal services the other five days of the week we might see something constructive in the move. Instead his announcement indicates only another fringe benefit for postal workers and we doubt any reduction in his department's spending will result.

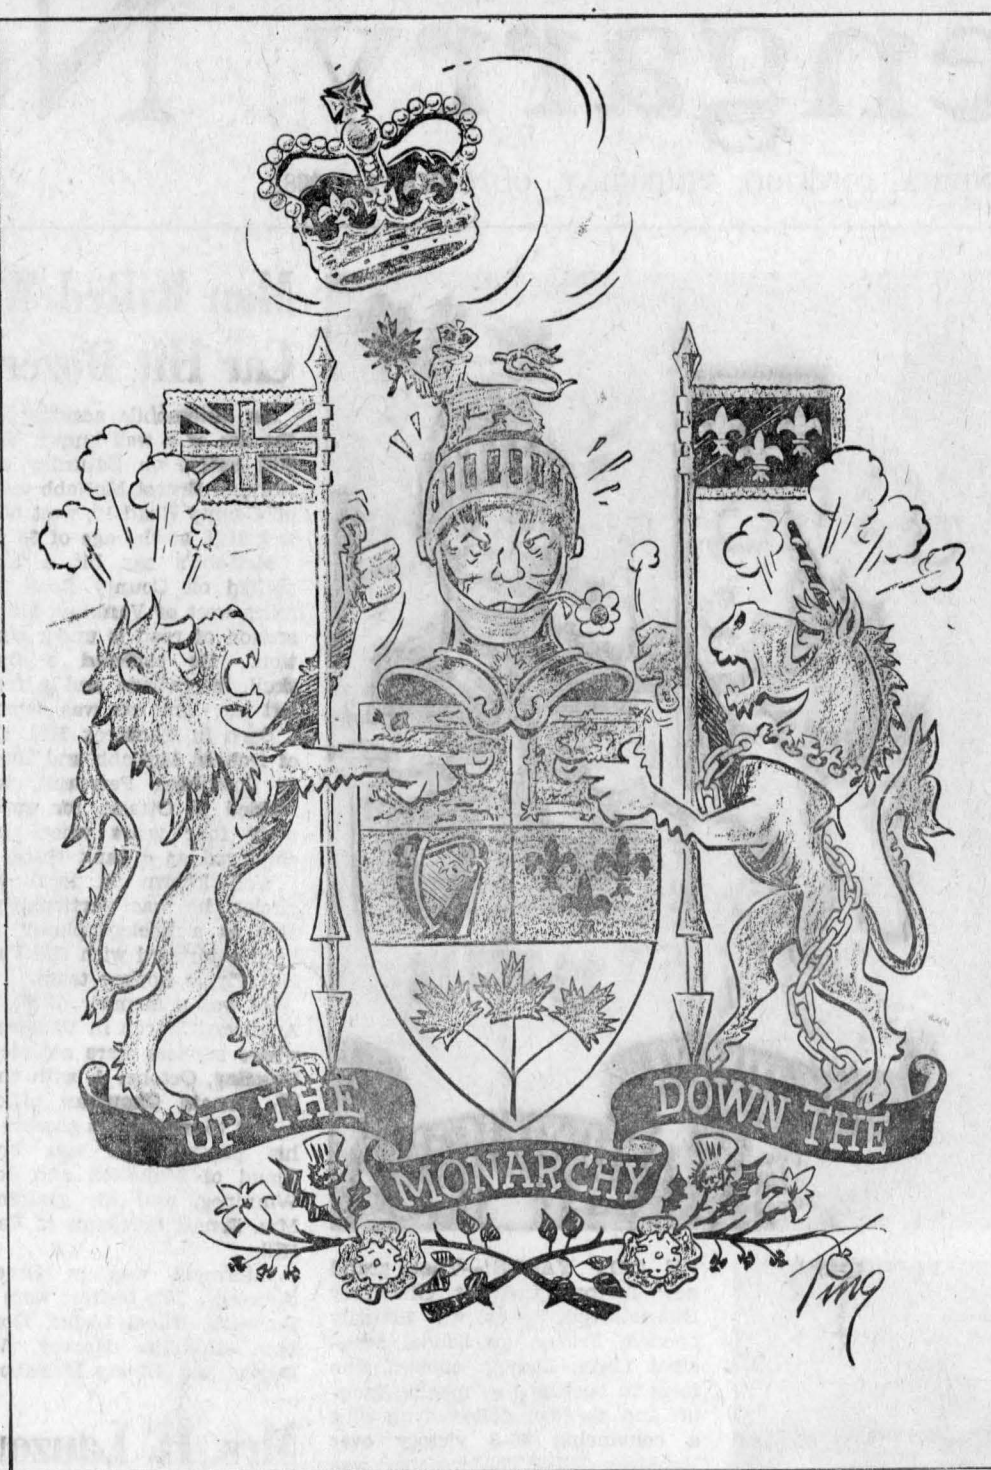

Canada's postal services apparently are in the same sad situation as those of the United States. A recent editorial in Life Magazine described the U.S. Post Office as antiquated, inefficient, in constant danger of total collapse; "and its service, as a result, is awful".

The problem is less one of mismanagement than of non-management, suggests Life. Personnel practices are hopelessly antiquated, caught between politically appointed postmasters and unions that go directly to Congress through powerful lobbies. No professional management corps can develop, employees are almost all in the lowest pay grades, are seldom promoted and many quit every year.

A government commission on postal organization advises scrapping of the existing system and a fresh start under a federally owned, non-profit corporation that would set up a career service. Hires and management would be on a non-political basis and promotions by merit only.

Mr. Kierans might better be studying some such method of reorganization of the entire postal service rather than dreaming up further curbs on service.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

MY TRIBUTE TO ALEXANDRIA

St. Quentin, NB.

The editor,
The Glengarry News

This is the third consecutive year that I visit Alexandria and my dear daughter, Mrs. Andre Comeau at the Royal Bank building on Main Street. Each successive year I am more and more impressed with your locality and its townspeople. I find them genial and friendly. I became acquainted with Dr. Dolan and Gerald McDonald, the barber. Dr. Dolan, this genial old gentleman, was to me, most cordial and gave me the impression of being a fine family doctor. On occasion I would drop in on Mr. McDonald at the barber shop and talk with him on what appeared to me to be his favorite topic, politics. I spent several minutes with him on these occasions.

In passing, let me say how I admire the beautiful tree-lined streets just off of Main. I must also mention how I enjoyed your lovely park and the lake. For several days during the warm weather around the week of the 15th I strolled along the lake and the park and on one occasion I lay on the grass and slept. It seems to me that you don't appreciate enough these beautiful surroundings, as there are many amusements there, especially for children.

I must also mention your good stores of every description, where you can buy practically everything necessary for an enjoyable life. I must also praise your public buildings, the hospital and several manufacturing institutions.

My genial son-in-law, Andre, several times took me out to the outlying districts which I greatly enjoyed. Space does not permit me to go into full detail of the many attractions that your community holds but I must say that I for one as a visitor greatly enjoyed it.

Let me say in passing "wake up Alexandrians and publish in some tourist reviews the beauties of your lake and surroundings. If God permits, I hope to come and see you again.

L. Bert Somers.

The Weeklies Say

RENEWAL HAS SCOPE

"Urban renewal" is a nebulous phrase. It is intended both as surgery and preventive medicine against "blight" in a downtown core. This does not just mean the removal of rickety old buildings. It can also involve the relocation of businesses if they are in the wrong place; the opening up of green space; providing room for traffic to circulate freely. . . . in fact, a tremendous range of possibilities.

Isolation Would Be Costly

(Wingham Advance-Times)

Several ministers of the Quebec provincial cabinet have recently sounded off on the subject of the French language. The latest outburst comes from Jean-Noel Tremblay, who demands that French become the only working language in that province. In other words, everyone should speak French in the courts, in business, in schools and churches—or get out.

Unless these hot-heads settle down to common sense they may well get their way. And the inevitable consequence will be a gradual but final exodus of business and citizens from Quebec to Ontario. French cultural pride may prove a costly luxury to a people who are in desperate need of the co-operation of their fellow-Canadians.

At a meeting in Saskatoon last month we were approached by several English-speaking Quebec publishers who quietly inquired about any newspapers that might be for sale in this part of Canada. They are fed up with the hysterical verbal attacks on their racial background and want to locate in a society which places its values on people rather than language.

Montreal is at present the headquarters of several large Canadian business firms which employ thousands of Quebecers, both English and French. If the government of Quebec continues to harass and annoy these firms and their Anglo-Saxon employees it is safe to predict that investments will soon be diverted to Toronto and Kitchener and Guelph. Quebec may win the autonomy it seeks but the price will be high and French Canada will pay the bill for generations to come.

WITH OUR

by Ed.

The leather of two evils, one might term these cowhide skirts some kids are sporting. Maybe there's something to hide; but we can't see it.

WE FEEL SLIGHTED

More than a little dismaying it is, when one rambles to foreign parts, to find that practically no one knows where Alexandria is located at, or even that it exists. Our civic spirit has often been bruised by such widespread ignorance and we keep telling strangers how lucky are both Canada's Capital and Montreal to be located only some 60 miles from Alexandria, the hub of Glengarry.

We're an Alexandria booster and we take a dim view of an article like Maclean's Magazine carried in its last issue. It told of the sustained run by thirsty Quebec residents on border liquor outlets through these months of the Quebec liquor store strike. It mentioned Lancaster, Vankleek Hill and Hawkesbury, with special emphasis on that smiling impresario, John McLaren, at the Lancaster oasis.

Not one word, though, that Alexandria has a liquor store the staff of which has been running from pillar to post—and carrying buckets of Quebec money to the bank—trying to quench a thirst that requires cases and cases of almost anything that's in the least alcoholic.

Ben Proulx and his staff have been run ragged right through the summer and they're probably glad the Maclean's article didn't advertise the fact Alexandria has a liquor outlet.

We see it as poor journalism, though, and as a slap at our civic pride. It's also a disservice to the magazine's readers in Quebec.

Out at the golf course, one day last week, we played with a loner from Montreal. He had travelled to Cornwall to replenish his supply of spirits and en route home had learned there was a golf course in Alexandria he had not yet challenged. He enjoyed his game and he's coming back. Next time he'll save gas, cause now he knows Alexandria can serve his every want.

We won't insist on Maclean's making a public apology for its slight of our town. It better smarten up, though. Some of its readers in Quebec may be standing in a long line at Lancaster for hours, totally unaware our Alexandria store provides almost instant service when it's not packed tight with thirsty out-of-province buyers.

Greenwich Mean Time, they call it. Probably because when we're meaning to go to bed, Britons mean to get up. Both are mean decisions.

IT'S ABOUT TIME

We sat up till some time after 1 a.m. Sunday to watch a football game which proved uninterestingly one-sided as Hamilton Tri-Cats flashed back to form and chilled the Eskimos in Edmonton.

Sitting-up late is a habit of ours and if the game had been close we probably wouldn't have wondered why it's necessary for people in Edmonton to be getting up, eating their meals and going to bed three hours later than we do these same functions in Glengarry day after day.

Why, in fact, do we have to have time zones across Canada and right around the world. Isn't it silly to lose an entire day at a certain point in the Pacific while air-hopping from Hawaii to Japan? And isn't it still crazier to leave Tokyo on Tuesday and arrive in Vancouver on Monday of the same week? Whoever it was that came up with the idea of dividing the earth into 24 time zones probably figured it was only fair for everyone, everywhere, that the sun should rise at 6 or 7 of a morning. That was in the days of sailing ships and maybe the Swiss hadn't got into the business of supplying the world with standard 24-hour clocks and watches. People glance at their wrist now to see what time it is. Sun dials are long out of date and we doubt many people look to the sun to see if it's time for lunch. If they did, daylight saving time might leave them an hour late.

Today's airlines and the people who jet across continents would be relieved of a big headache if all the countries of the world set their clocks at Greenwich Mean Time. Then it would be one minute after 1 a.m. simultaneously in Greenwich, Green Valley, in Green Lake, Sask., on Guam, in Greece and Grenobles, France. The dawn might come at unlikely hours across the globe but the sun would still rise and set to provide a daily period of light and warmth for all God's peoples. The seven-hour flight that left Montreal at noon, would reach Paris at 7 p.m., as we might expect it should; but it

Pledge Day's Pay
After Talk On Missions

The Seaway Valley Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, meeting at Maxville Thursday, September 26th, unanimously pledged themselves to give one day's pay for overseas development and relief as an over and above gift. This concern action followed a presentation on the Mission of the Church given by Rev. Donald Pipe, formerly of Avonmore, now Field Secretary for Montreal-Ottawa Conference Department of Missionary and Maintenance.

In his official capacity as chairman, Rev. L. M. Ferguson conducted the business of Presbytery, with Rev. J. L. Dean as secretary. Business included discussion of re-alignment and amalgamation of some of the pastoral charges within the bounds of Presbytery; the appointment of Commission and Committee Members; various reports and correspondence.

Following the dinner served by the choir of Maxville United Church, worship and a panel discussion presentation of the highlights of General Council was given by Commissioners, Rev. George Clifford, Mrs. C. Larmour, and Harry Shaver.

Jens K. Jensen was received as a candidate for the ministry in the United Church of Canada.

Revolutionary the idea might seem to you, but it would be a real boon to the women of the house whose television set is now tuned to football from noon to midnight all weekend. That game from Edmonton would have started here at 2 p.m. and been over in time to tune in the Tonight show. Each network would have to settle for only one game of an afternoon if all were starting at 2 o'clock, whether in New York, Chicago or Los Angeles.

With this revolutionary time switch there'd be time off from the steady football fare that finds one peering at the idiot box trying to remember who's playing whom.

It could be a constructive idea but we see no hope of the United Nations ever adopting it. The TV people would be against it and they are all-powerful in scheduling events so that every hour of every day they can be programming something.

Football is about the only offering we find time to watch. But we could do with a little less of it on Saturdays and Sundays.

Fine New Gridiron Grand Setting For Football Team's Win Over VCI

(by Angus H. McDonell)

A few short years ago if you had told even the most optimistic sports fan, here in the Glens, that in late September, 1968, one of the finest school football fields in Ontario would be part of an expanded high school complex, on that big city scale in Alexandria, that fan might have replied very dub-

In this first game on the new gridiron, encircled by an Olympic-standard trial track, GDHS was too strong for the visiting Vankleek Hill students. The locals were out in front 46-6 when the last-minute flag was lowered and they took over second place in the BOSSA "B" standing right behind Hawkesbury.

As if by design of the new school addition's architect, the west side of the playing field forms a natural stage background. The sloping embankment was multi-colored by the students' attractive fall apparel and the wild-growing evergreens just beyond the fringe completed quite an eye-catching picture that would compare, to a degree, with quite a few stadia that this writer has had the privilege of visiting.

In any top ranking stage play or cinema plot the leading actor is always the hero. In Friday's game, again as if by design, Paul Poirier starred in filling this role as he literally stole the show by romping from his right halfback slot to tally four touchdowns for GDHS.

From the opening kickoff Alexandria was in command. Neil Macdonald, who has a White Tuck-er flair as a receiver, latched on to a MacGillivray pass and GDHS were away and running 6-0. The convert was wide.

Before the teams changed ends, pilot Hugh MacGillivray sent Paul Poirier on an end run and the Elgg student went all the way. MacGillivray was good on the extra point try and the Hill squad were behind 13-0.

GDHS ripped through VCI defenses in the second round for three more majors. Bruce MacGillivray hung on to a 15-yard toss, while Paul Poirier collared two payoff passes from Hugh MacGillivray. Two convert tries were good and the half-time score was GDHS 33, the Hill 0.

The Hill coach made some defence changes at half time and VCI came right back with plenty of pressure. After gaining considerable ground early in the third quarter VCI quarter back Bob Smith, triggered a flawless pass to Sidney McCallum who was in the clear at the GDHS 20 and he jogged over into pay dirt for the visitors TD. The convert boot was wide.

One of the game's feature plays followed this score. Hugh MacGillivray on the GDHS 40 stepped back and fired a big league strike to Paul Poirier on the visitors' 40 and this resulted in TD No. 4 for Paul. There was trouble with the snap on the extra point try, but MacGillivray scooped up the leather lemon and Neil Macdonald for the second time sensing the fumble edged into the clear, caught the pass and stepped over for the extra point.

An indication of the depth on the GDHS bench was shown in the final quarter. Bruce Libbos was given a shot at the signal calling by Coach Stan Fraser and Bruce kept the home forces moving. The first of a TD sequence was a sticks' moving pass to Neil Macdonald. Then Libbos sent Michel Boisvenue knitting through the VCI line. In one of the final plays Libbos had to scamper way over to his left and then from the west side field chalk line heaved an arc throw to Bruce MacGillivray for the final major that was not converted. Final, GDHS 46, VCI 6.

Officials Robert Brien and Robert Reardon, Ottawa, had an easy game to handle as the play was clean, although rugged all the way.

Missioner Spoke To WCTU Meeting

Miss Olive Bjerketh, a former missionary to the Congo, was the guest speaker at the Women's Christian Temperance Union achievement night exercises held in the Kirk Hill United Church Hall on Thursday, Sept. 19th.

The program was opened by the reading of Psalm 124 by Miss Tracy Myers, followed by prayer by Rev. John Fortier of Lancaster. Miss Bjerketh was then introduced to the audience by Mrs. R. H. McKelvy, who told of meeting her for the first time at the Semons from Science Pavilion at Expo in 1967 where both had been counsellors.

Miss Bjerketh, in her interesting talk which was illustrated by colored slides of the Congo, told of the perilsous days in that country during the rebel takeover. She had been one of the missionaries imprisoned with Rev. Hector MacMillan on the day he was killed by the rebel soldiers. Her testimony of how the Lord Jesus Christ had helped them and of how the 124th Psalm had been especially meaningful to them will not soon be forgotten.

Awards were presented to the winners of the Study Course, poster, essay and health book contests, by Rev. Carson and Mr. Philip Kronberg of Vankleek Hill. In addition, 11 young people were recipients of the beautiful five year pin presented to those who have written the study course lessons for five years.

Another feature of the evening was the presentation of a gift of money to Mrs. R. H. McKelvy by the County WCTU in recognition of her many years of faithful service in presenting the necessity of total abstinence from alcoholic beverages to the young people of our area. Mrs. William Brodie, county president, read the address and Miss Mary MacLennan, county treasurer, presented the gift.

SPORTS

in the GLENS

by ANGUS H. McDONELL

We suggest to our erudite News historical correspondent, Hugh F. MacMillan, for the time being to forget about those fur traders and canoe pilots and assist the Rambling Reporter and this writer in recording the sport achievements of two fellow clansmen Ivan and Stanley MacMillan.

Now the MacMillan boys, young sons of Mrs. Doreen MacMillan, Alexandria, didn't set any recent canoe records between Dan Flaro's dock and Tab Laroche's corner in Williamstown but like our esteemed friend Hugh P. when he was paddling this course, young Ivan recently stirred up quite a wasp's nest (football variety) in the Montreal Metropolitan Junior Football conference.

Now this football wasps nest that was disturbed was a real jim dandy.

We were in Montreal with Rough Riders last Saturday night and checked out earlier sport reports relative to this matter carried by both the Montreal Star and Gazette.

We gather that this furore, involving our GDHS 17-year-old student and fine young football player, started last spring when a regarded big wheel in junior football circles one Doug Wilmut, commissioner, refused Verdun's bid for a franchise. This was overruled by the QRFU Board of Governors. However, it appears obvious that Commissioner Wilmut and Verdun GM Jim Pierson were about as friendly as Charles De Gaulle and Britain over the European Common Market.

The next step was the discovery that Ivan MacMillan while playing soccer with Verdun Celtic Seniors and junior football with Invictus was really living in Verdun with his sister and returned to his mother's home in Alexandria on Labor Day to attend school.

So the commissioner lowered the boom on Ivan. Outtown's promising young football player, a specialist in field goal kicking, had to sit out an important game with NDG and Verdun claimed that with MacMillan they could have won. The score was 20-18 and without Ivan, Verdun missed three converts and a field goal.

Now, as yet, no official anywhere has ever pushed around a sportsman from that area along the Lachine Rapids through Ville La Salle, Verdun and Point St. Charles.

So, and quite justifiably, Verdun asked why they could not use MacMillan when the elite of the league, NDG Leafs, had five Americans who were attending college?

The decision was reversed and Ivan MacMillan rejoined Verdun last week in time to greatly help his team win decisively 43-12 over Marieville Castors.

Ivan's older brother Stan drew the attention of Montreal football coaches at least a year ago.

The MacMillan boys, not unlike the Gerela brothers of BC Lions, kick placements and converts soccer style stressing the instep contact instead of the head down toe to leather boot like a golf swing.

Stan moved up from Cornwall Juniors last year to Montreal Beavers and was with Alouettes this year until one of the final cuts.

We gather from Montreal critics, and a local scout, that Ivan MacMillan at 17 is showing CFL potential. As we have said many times: "The Glens go marching on."

A BUDDING STAR

Just a few short years ago this writer dropped into the Gardens on a blistering winter Saturday.

Clad in heavy slacks with matching jacket and fur lined mitts, standing on a bench behind a cluster of sprites was Mrs. Howard (Gwen) Morris.

Gwen, a knowledgeable hockey mentor, was drilling her youthful brood.

Gwen noticed we appeared especially interested in a dark haired little fellow moving around with a display of confidence and know how which prompted Outtown's sprites' coach of that era to say, "There is a natural athlete, a boy that could go places."

Last Friday standing on the sidelines of our new football field we saw Gwen Morris' prediction move one step closer to becoming a reality.

By this time that little dark haired lad is on the verge of maturity, a grade 12 student, Paul Poirier, a GDHS budding star of the gridiron as a halfback under the expert guidance of Coach Stan Fraser.

Showing some of the football mannerisms of a Dave Rainey or Vic Washington, and behind some fine blocking, Paul deked his way into the clear with last Friday's opening kickoff piskin and ran all the way back over the VCI goal line.

As frequently happens on these brilliant runbacks the TD was nullified due to a team clipping penalty.

But Paul bounced right back to score three majors before half time. It could have been four had one more block developed just before the clock ran out. In the third Paul counted still another TD and this could have been quite conceivably number six.

Success is very heavy wine even to some old pros, not mention youngsters, but we think this will have no such effect on the Elgg athlete for these reasons. Paul on his maternal side is a grand nephew of a noted Glengarry field athlete before World War One, the late Dan Cuthbert. Paul's dad, to our knowledge can't claim any athletic awards but we will wager a Grey Cup ticket that he is the Glen's champion manipulator of a squid of snuff. More than that, few, if any, can match Omer Poirier's contribution to sport here in the Glens, especially minor hockey.

A perfectionist never stops trying, Paul, so keep digging those cleats and hold your sites at a lofty level. Your reward will be worthwhile.

HITHER AND YON

Ralph MacSweeney is with Philadelphia Flyers on their current Maritime exhibition swing . . . while Karen MacSweeney, quite a gal with the spiked shoes, is training at the Potomac Center, Maryland.

Willie Terry is in St. Catharines with the Hawks' Dallas squad . . . Cornwall Ray Miron, Tulsa team manager of the Central Pro loop, is keeping an eye on Terry should Dallas have surplus defencemen. Willie tips the scales just better than 200.

Stan MacMillan of Halifax St. Mary's kicked the convert that topped St. FX 7-6 lately . . . Burns McPherson has taken over Paul Brule's fullback spot with St. FX . . . Brule is now with Peg Bombers.

Perhaps you heard this one but it should be worth a repeat . . . Frank Clair was rushing through the Chateau entrance as he was late for a speaking seal. The revolving door almost knocked a guest back for yards . . . "Sorry" barked Clair, "but no offence". "Right", quipped the shaken guy, "and no defence either, professor".

Weekend predictions: GDHS over Hawks and Riders to squeak by Argos. Then Ticats will take over Thanksgiving festivities well anyway by that time we will have a good idea who are the men among the boys.

Electric Club Had Achievement Day

The Glengarry 4-H Farm and Home Electric Club held its Achievement Meeting in the Glengarry-District High School, Thursday evening, September 26th. While organized under direction of the Extension Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, this 4-H Club is sponsored by Ontario Hydro through the Farm Sales Supervisors for this area. Bruce MacDonald, Winchester, and Norman Matheson, Vankleek Hill. The meeting was under general chairmanship of R. C. Bradford, Associate Agricultural Representative for Glengarry County.

Bruce MacDonald conducted the Achievement program. Mr. MacDonald spoke briefly on the importance of effective communication in day to day contacts between individuals and on an individual to audience basis while stressing the life long usefulness of such an ability. Each club member was called upon to give an oral report on his or her club project outlining observations made in the safe use and economic value of electricity on the farm.

The panel of adjudicators appraising these reports included J. Y. Humphries, Agricultural Representative for Glengarry, Ron Trivers, Agriculture and Science teacher on staff of the Glengarry-District High School and Grant Weber, Farm Sales Supervisor with Ontario Hydro in the Toronto area.

Mr. Weber addressed the meeting attended by club members, parents and friends, outlining Ontario Hydro's role in the 4-H Agricultural Club Program and in the technological development of the rural agricultural industry from the beginning of rural hydro service to the present time. Mr. Weber commented in the project reports given and congratulated each one of the 4-H members on ability displayed in presenting their reports. 4-H Club members giving reports were: Linda O'Brien, Stewart Irvine, Nancy Croil, Lynn Robertson, Nancy Vallance, Wendy Calvank, Anne McDonald.
