SD&G's 911 system now on line

Rich Thorpe
Record Staff

AVONMORE — It was an unsettling but effective demonstration of the benefits of 911.

In the midst of the official ceremonies launching 911 in SD&G Monday, a panicky young man in obvious distress came fleeing out of the cafeteria at Tagwi Secondary School.

Within seconds, Archie Byers, Warden of the United Counties, was on the phone dialing the new emergency response number.

Within an instant the message was sent and the appropriate emergency response units were on the scene to tend to the injured victim.

Although the scenario— which unfolded in the Tagwi cafeteria in front of some very surprised spectators— was a mock demonstration, the message relayed to all concerned was simple. In times of crisis, the number to call in SD&G is 911.

The emergency response dispatch system has been in place since April 22, and was officially launched at a ceremony Monday.

911 works like this: In case of an emergency, remain calm and dial 911. Indicate the type of emergency and its location, and whether police, fire or ambulance is required. Be prepared to give a civic address number. Follow the 911 operators instructions.

The road to implementation of 911 was an arduous one for all involved.

In 1991, counties council began the process to begin the implementation of a 911 system.

Perhaps the most arduous task was the implemenation of a civic address system, a key component of 911.

Carolyn Laflamme was handed the task of devising a system. Along the way, she encountered a number of situations which made a difficult job more demanding.

First, the province handed over the responsibilities of highways 2, 31, 34, and 43 to the United Counties of SD&G, resulting in more than a few conflicts with road names.

Later in the process, the 20 municipalities within the united counties of SD&G went through amalagamation and were restructured into six new townships, once again resulting in a number of conflicts with road names.

"It has required the effort and support of many volunteers to make this a reality," said SD&G warden Archie Byers. "Thanks to the co-operation of fire, ambulance and police services along with Bell Canada and the Roxborough Telephone Company and the various dispatch services we now have 911 service available to residents of SD&G."

Just Ducky!
Jacqueline Foster (left) and Alisha Baldwin got into the spirit of Saturday's Duck Race in Chesterville. The annual fundraising event is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Chesterville and was once again, a huge success raising $3,100 for the local club. A large crowd gathered to watch the 750 rubber ducks glide their way across the finish line. Dale Beckstead of Chesterville won the top prize of $500.

Kilger will undergo surgery to clear arterial blockage

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor

OTTAWA – Stormont-Dundas MP Bob Kilger announced Tuesday he is tentatively scheduled for surgery May 1 at the Ottawa Heart Institute to repair an arterial blockage.

In a short press release, the MP states he visited the emergency department of the Ottawa Civic Hospital on Wednesday, April 22 after experiencing shortness of breath and a tightening in his chest while performing light duties. An ensuing examination revealed a singular arterial blockage.

Kilger stresses he did not at any time suffer a heart attack or stroke, and states he is in regular contact with his Parliament Hill office and Cornwall constituency office on important matters.

He expects to resume his duties as MP "following the usual period of recuperation."

Kilger, 53, was re-elected to his third term in the House of Commons as Member of Parliament for Stormont-Dundas in early June. A former National Hockey League referee and coach of the OHL's Cornwall Royals, Kilger serves as Chief Government Whip in the House.

South Stormont defends sewage contract

Rich Thorpe

OSNABRUCK CENTRE — Emotions were running high in South Stormont last Wednesday night as council defended its decision to award a contract to the Thompson-Rosemont Group based in Cornwall, to operate the municipality's sewage and water treatment facilities in Ingleside and Long Sault.

John Kingsbury, of the Ontario Clean Water Agency, representing a number of OCWA employees who reside in the township asked council why it chose the TRG bid, of $66,768 at its March 12 meeting.

Kingsbury suggested the OCWA bid of $55,000 for the year was a much better deal, representing a savings of 21.4 per cent for local taxpayers.

"This isn't a case of sour grapes," he said. "How were prices evaluated to determine the best value for residents? If price was the only factor, why was the highest price chosen?"

Of the three bids received, the TRG proposal was the only one the township considered to be complete.

Kingsbury suggested that the terms of reference which were sent by the township to OCWA were incomplete.

Kingsbury's next suggestion drew the ire of council. Kingsbury questioned why the contract was awarded to TRG, given the fact councillor Brian Gravely is an employee of M.S. Thompson.

"Brian was not present when the decision was made, he declared a conflict of interest," said deputy-reeve Jim MacGillivray who chaired the meeting at which the decision was made. "When it comes to any issue involving engineering, Brian always declares a conflict of interest. I am completely disgusted by that suggestion."

Reeve Brownell, who was on vacation in Florida at the time, said he checked with clerk-administrator Betty de Haan when he

Canadian farmers rise to global challenge

Rich Thorpe

FINCH — Canada's agriculture industry will have to continue to be innovative when it comes to meeting the challenge of competing in a global marketplace.

That was the message federal agriculture minister Lyle Vanclief delivered to area farmers and members of the Finch and District Lions Club on Thursday night.

Villeneuve, a 25-year member of the Maxville and District Lions Club, noted the outstanding support he received from his counterparts in Finch, during his four year term as president.

He also praised the outstanding co-operation the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food received from the federal government during January's ice storm.

"We worked well together during the ice storm," Villeneuve said. "We were able to arrange a good helpful deal for farmers."

"It is a tremendous way to pay tribute," he said. "It is an incredible industry. Noble and I work well together. We never let party politics stand in the way of doing what is right."

The federal minister acknowledged the strength of the local farm community, which banded together to survive the hardships created by the ice storm.

"It brought a lot of our own together," he said. "People kept their spirits up. It is typical of the agriculture industry, there have always been challenges involved."

Vanclief said there are new and exciting opportunities emerging for Canadians within the global market place. At the same time, producers must be aware that competition is increasing from outside sources.

In a recent conversation with an Ontario apple producer, Vanclief was told the producer's main competition now comes from China.

Similarly, Vanclief said more than 25 years ago, when he and his father were farming in Prince Edward County, most of the grain corn was grown in the Chatham area of Ontario. Eventually, producers started growing corn in eastern Ontario. With free trade, farmers must also compete directly with the United States cornbelt.

Another important factor affecting agriculture is the growing number of countries now becoming self-sufficient. He cited the example of China which despite a population of 1.2 billion, is now self-sufficient.

"How do all of us, producers, processors and suppliers compete and make a profit in a global economy?"

Trade is a major component of the agricultural economy, Vanclief said.

In 1997, agri-food exports were close to $21 billion. Presently, Canada has three per cent of the world market and within the next eight years, the federal government hopes to increase the market share to four per cent or $40 billion.

returned home and he supported the decision.

"We had an emergency situation at one of the plants which required council to make a decision quickly," he said. "(TRG) were the only company to provide us with the complete documentation required," the reeve said.

Kingsbury asked why employees of TRG were working in the two facilities before the tender was awarded.

"We were very concerned about the plant, it was not operating to the standards of our certificate of approval and we had to make decisions quickly," he said. "We could have been charged if we allowed it to continue. We made the right decisions. The plant is finally coming around and that is where it stands."

Farmers

Within Canada, agriculture and its related businesses and industries is worth $90 billion to the economy and it is growing at a rate of $2 billion per year, the minister said, adding that internationally Canada's reputation remains strong.

"There is no better trademark than the red maple leaf," he said. "It is well recognized and respected throughout the world.

The federal government is now preparing for the next round of world trade negotiations which will get underway in 1999. The government is planning to consult extensively with "everyone involved from the gate to the plate."

Vanclief remains upbeat about the future of agriculture in Canada.

"The team approach is the key," he said. "If we continue to grow stronger and are more successful than we are at the present time, rural Canada will be a better place to live."

Cornwall woman helps lobby for multiple sclerosis funding

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor

CORNWALL – It strikes in the prime of life. It can rob a person of their mobility, and recurring attacks can cause the disease to progress until a person is no longer able to work. But Multiple Sclerosis and its effects can be managed, in many who suffer, with the help of new drugs that are now on the market.

But those drugs are expensive, and they're not covered by OHIP. And a Cornwall woman is part of a new group lobbying provincial governments to fund those medications, to help reduce the physical effects of the disease and give those with MS a new and independent lease on life.

Sue Tarle has seen the benefit of modern drugs on the effects of MS. Now, 45, she has been coping with the disease since she was 24. She has been taking a drug called Copaxone since October, "and I haven't felt this great in years." The drug offers a "wall" that fools the disease, taking the hit instead of the person's central nervous system. It is administered through a daily injection, and is one of three new drugs being used by those with MS.

Tarle was fortunate to find an insurance company that would help her with her drug costs, which are $1,300 a month. But she knows not everyone is that fortunate. That's why she has helped found the Canadian MS Network, an organization whose members will lobby their respective provincial governments to fund medication for people with MS.

"I'm so very lucky. I think really that's why I'm fighting for other people," Tarle says. "This drug has changed my life."

Tarle was one of eight people from across Canada who attended the network's inaugural meeting in Montreal last month. She wants to raise awareness about the disease, help lobby for provincial funding for medication and promote a toll-free number through which people with MS and their families can tap into a free resource base.

According to the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada, this country is one of the highest risk areas in the world for MS. An estimated 50,000 Canadians have MS, which most often strikes women and men between the ages of 20 and 40. MS is the most common disease of the central nervous system, and 75 per cent of those affected are women. Symptoms range from double vision and numbness to paralysis. There are about 110 known cases of MS in the Cornwall area.

Tarle explains there are three forms of MS, the least severe of which gives a person occasional attacks, which may not recur for a year, and the most severe of which, called progressive MS, leads eventually to a walker, wheelchair and complete dependency.

Tarle has what is called remitting MS. An attack could bring paralysis or double vision and last a week to 10 days. When the attack subsides, though, it leaves some permanent effect with the person, meaning the more attacks experienced, the more serious their physical impairment.

"We'd like to see the province of Ontario cover treatments for people who have MS," Tarle says of the newly-formed Canadian MS Network. She notes while the province has announced another $2.1 million for long-term care facilities, supporting preventative measures – such as Copaxone and other drugs – would be a more effective and economical for the province to help.

If a drug like Copaxone can prevent remitting MS attacks, the accumulative effects of the disease over time are greatly reduced. That means a person with MS who has access to medications that make symptoms manageable will be able to stay mobile, stay in the workforce and contribute instead of becoming dependent, Tarle explains.

"We are trying to, in every province, make the government aware of the problems MS patients have. We want to find out what they know about MS," Tarle says. Early results are positive – letters have been sent to a raft of provincial legislators, and so far 46 have replied, asking for more information about the disease.

"We are going to lobby our MPPs to see what we can do. These three new drugs are not cures, but they give people their lives back."

The toll-free information line is called Shared Solutions, and the number is 1-800-283-0034. It is available from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays. Shared solutions is managed by five specially-trained nurses who have information about MS at their disposal. It is for MS patients, as well as their friends and family. "It's the best source of information we have now in the MS world," Tarle says.

The Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada has a chapter for Cornwall & SD&G. It holds regular meetings, and such events as a huge golf tournament at the Summerheights course every June, which raises funds for local patient services.

Tarle adds that May is MS month, and the annual carnation drive, which raises funds for research, is a good opportunity to get a bouquet of flowers for Mother's Day. They can be ordered through the local chapter.

For information about the Canadian MS Network, call Sue Tarle at (613) 937-3818. The Cornwall & SD&G Chapter of the Canadian MS Society can be reached at (613) 938-6777.

Community Watch

Patrols increase as summer nears

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor

CHESTERVILLE – Chesterville's Community Watch is gearing up for another summer of making the village a safer and better community. Overnight patrols during weekends continue, and random overnight patrols on weeknights are increasing as the weather warms up.

"We're up to 40 members now, so we're doing quite good," says CCW chairman Michael Hunt. Numbers have been boosted as students return from college, and new families have come aboard.

With the current complement of volunteers, a member can expect to be called for patrol only once every two months.

Chesterville's Community Watch was born in late 1994, over concerns about vandalism and other incidents in the village. Through Community Watch, overnight volunteer patrols tour the village, armed with cellular phones. They do not intervene when trouble is spotted, but contact police immediately. They act as extra eyes and ears for police, with whom they are partners in community policing.

Hunt adds that the new Bell Mobility tower just west of the village has greatly enhanced the volunteers' ability to communicate.

But the CCW is always looking for support from the community it serves. New members are always welcome, and donations are gladly accepted from residents and businesses. Hunt said the CCW's patrols during the ice storm drew appreciative donations from the community.

The CCW will be holding a fundraising garage sale in July, and will once again provide security during the Chesterville Fair in August.

Chesterville Community Watch is holding a meeting Wednesday, May 6 in the former council chambers at 1 Mill Street. Anyone interested in learning more about the program is welcome. The meeting begins at 8 p.m.

"It's just making Chesterville a better place to live, a safe community," Hunt says of the program.

A three-digit lifesaver

As of now, dozens of emergency telephone numbers in eastern Ontario are replaced by a simple, easy-to-remember three-digit phone number. A 911 emergency phone system is now active in SD&G.

The benefits of 911 are easy to describe. No matter where you are in SD&G, these three numerals instantly put you in touch with a dispatcher who will summon the appropriate emergency response. If you're on the highway and see an accident, crime or fire, it doesn't matter if you're in Brinston, Finch, Ingleside or Alexandria, or whether you need police, fire or ambulance. The number is the same.

As local officials have surpassed five years' worth of hurdles to bring this service to us, it must also be noted that the public has a role to play as well in making it an effective life-saving system.

First and foremost, it is to be used only in emergency situations, when police, fire or ambulance personnel are required to attend a crisis that is in progress, Using it as a basic information number, or to report a break-in that happened three days ago, only ties up emergency operators who could be needed for more important calls. But by all means, don't hesitate to use it when you sense an emergency.

Secondly, all residents should be aware of their civic address number, or street address,at home and at work – and in the case of changes necessary because of municipal amalgamation, their street name. Remember, for example, that Main Street in Chesterville, in an emergency, should be referred to as "Main Street - County Road 7, Chesterville."

When emergency crews are dispatched, remember that life or property is at stake. Make sure you are giving the dispatcher accurate information. It's a good idea to list your street name and address, or rural address, by the telephone, just in case.

911 emergency telephone systems have been in place in most major cities in North America for several years, and it is proven that they save lives. Today, all residents of SD&G can breathe a little easier knowing they now have access to it.

While it is possible there may be some growing pains with the system, we will no doubt be hearing about emergency situations where it was used, and made a difference.

Really, it's the kind of thing you hope you will never have to use – but the kind of thing that if you do need it, it's important that it's there.

A father's advice to his son

Parenting Editor

Younger son Evan came home from school devastated one day last week. It seems his teacher, one of those gender-bender females whose mission in life is to ensure that little boys don't grow into big boys, had observed him and about a dozen classmates during recess doing what all 11-year-olds do on sunny days. Hanging out. Together. They did what all little boys are supposed to do. Wander aimlessly around the schoolyard discussing the great verities of life. Whether Hulk Hogan could whup the Undertaker's butt. How to get to the next level in an N64 game. Whose old man could take whose old man and who, and for what ungodly purpose, invented bicycle helmets, anyway.

Using that same tone of voice reserved for teachers (and wives, when you roll in at 3 a.m shouting, "Dear, don't pay the ransom, I've escaped!"), she informed this prepubescent gaggle that they were acting like a gang. And gangs carry knives and guns. And if she saw a repetition of this behavior, she'd be forced to call the police. The kid goes to a school called Central Public. Forgetting that she was dealing with real life and not a TV docudrama, she thought she was in South Central.

So the young lad comes home and wonders what could have prompted this kind of outburst. Lilith Fair, I replied. My talented and charming wife got into a high dudgeon and wanted to know if the teacher had ever played "We don't stop for anybody!" or snap the whip in the schoolyard (it's not for nothing that she's known in some circles as Tuffy).

He remained disconsolate, so I said to him, "Look Ev, it's time you and I had the old heart to heart. " Although he's gained a grudging respect for the Spice Girls (the apple doesn't fall far from the tree), they exist only in pictures while flesh and blood girls are strictly icky. So our heart to heart consisted of "all this will, in time, pass. Just consider yourself lucky that you're a guy."

So we ordered a pizza and decided to dispense with all semblance of manners. When it arrived we cut it in half, then folded each half into a funnel shape, sort of like a giant taco, and let the grease dribble down our chins as we polished it off, a two-litre bottle of Pepsi Max rounding out our repast.

"Ev," says I, "let's check the Net and then count our blessings."

So we hit some guy sites on the WWW and then considered the nature of the universe.

And here's some of what we came up with:

1. Your phone conversation never consists of more than, "Yup. Nope. 9:15. 'Kay? Bye."

2. You can wire the cable through the VCR and your Nintendo to the TV.

3. A two-week holiday means one suitcase.

4. Out of the 26 letters in the English alphabet, the only ones you'll ever really need to know are: N, H and L.

5. You understand why "Meatballs" is funny.

6. Ever met a woman who had a hot dog named after them?

7. Bathroom lineups are always shorter unless the guy ahead of you has the sports section, in which case, there's always the great outdoors.

8. Condiments and dessert are separate and equally important food groups.

9. There's no such thing as too much Tabasco.

10. Your wedding is already looked after (and I'm already off the hook for the bill for that one).

11. The remote will always be yours. That' s why it's called a control.

12. You don't have to go to the bathroom as a member of a pack.

13. You'll never have to worry about cleaning a toilet.

14. John Tesh will never be more than that goofy guy with the big teeth on Entertainment Tonight.

15. A seven-course mean can too consist of a hot dog and a six pack.

16. TSN Sports Centre.

17. Global Sportsline.

18. Fifteen dollar haircuts.

19. Underwear that comes in three-packs.

20. Ditto for socks.

21. Never having to say you're sorry. And if you do, you can get roses at Growers Direct for 10 bucks a dozen.

22. Auto mechanics, plumbers and electricians always tell you the truth.

23. You can pick your nose in the car.

24. You will remain alluring throughout your entire life, even when you're grey and wrinkly - that's called character, especially when it surrounds a Rolex.

25. Your mother will always keep your room ready for you.

26. You'll never have to get a new driver's licence just because your last name has changed.

27. Guys in hockey masks won't attack you, unless they've got something like "Philadelphia Flyers" written on them in which case you're already a millionaire so who cares?

28. A wallet is smaller than a purse.

29. You can open all your own jars.

30. Hockey Night in Canada.

31. Hockey Night in Canada doubleheaders.

33. Showered and ready to go in 10 minutes.

34. If you're this age and single, who cares?

35. Your birthday's just another day.

36. GI Joe beats Malibu Barbie any day.

37. Jeans look like high-water pants? Snip, snip. Voilà. Shorts.

38. Cellulite? Not in this lifetime.

39. You can open a beer bottle on a car door.

40. A good handshake rattles even the snottiest maitre d'.

41. You can lean on a parking metre and drink a can of Coke.

42. Just because a guy looks good in a movie doesn't mean you have to exist on a diet of lettuce and bottled water so you can look like him.

43. Walter Matthau can still get the good looking ones.

44. There'll always be a place for plaid pants.

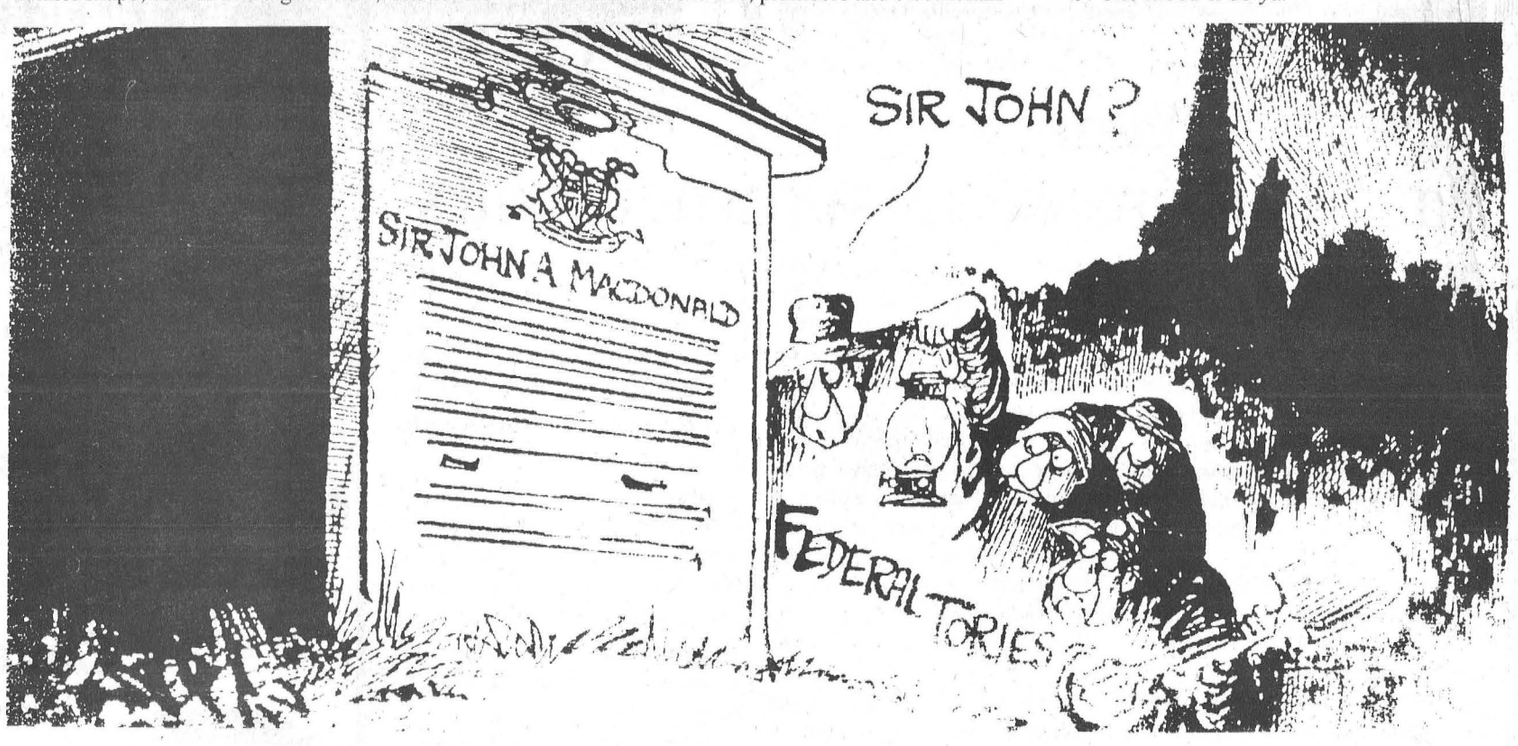
45. Feelings? Say what?

46. You never have to worry about buying presents. Except for Christmas and then there are lots of reminders.

47. You can use the loo in even the scuzziest service station.

48. You don't have to shave to wear a bathing suit.

49. One mood'll do ya.



Cross Roads

By Clarence Cross

We had a lot of machinery on our farm. Dad was mechanically inclined and liked to tinker with it. We boys grew up with it, and even suffered from it. When I was six years old, I slid out of a straw mow feet-first into machinery stored on the barn floor. I didn't break any bones, but I was laid up for a couple of months.

Arthur Ball tells me that Dad's first tractor was a 8-16, with a chain drive. But the first one I remember was a 10-20 International. That meant 10 horsepower on the draw-bar, and 20 on the pulley, which drove a belt for machines like threshers and silo fillers. This tractor had steel wheels with large lugs on the rear wheels. These gave good traction, but were quick to dig in when the ground was soft.

Some makes of tractor had a tendency to dig in so deep that the rear wheels became stuck, and then the front end would rear up and even upset. I think it was the Fordson which had its weight so distributed that this type of accident might easily occur, often with fatal results for the driver. Our tractor had full fenders covering the rear wheels. Others did not, which sometimes led to accidents when the driver would lean forward to adjust something, got his coat caught by the lugs, and was dragged under the big wheel, causing serious injury or even death. This happened to my uncle Wesley Cross, who had the rear wheel pass over him from head to toe. Fortunately, the lugs were the smaller ones, the soil was very soft, and he survived, although he was marked on his forehead and along his body, and the following plough injured his back.

I started to drive our tractor at an early age, seated on my father's lap. When I was big enough to reach the clutch and brake pedals, and strong enough to turn the steering wheel (no power steering, but the steering ratio was a lot different and required less effort), I drove it on my own. At first, I would be working up the ploughed fields in spring, first with the disc, and then with the spring-toothed cultivator. In dry weather, there would be clouds of dust, which plugged up the air screen in the carburetor. I got quite adept at taking the screen out and cleaning it with a bit of gasoline. I myself would need a bath at the end of the day.

Starting the tractor could be a challenge. There was no battery; the engine was started by hand cranking. The gas and spark was set just so, on the levers under the steering wheel, and you would give the crank a spin. You had to be careful in grasping the crank handle, not with a natural grip, but with your thumb on the same side as your fingers. You never knew when the engine would catch or backfire. Some fellows had their thumbs dislocated; others had their arm broken. Arthur Ball says that he got a broken arm which still bothers him. If the weather was cold, and the oil thick as molasses, the engine would be almost impossible to turn over. A small fire was sometimes lit under the engine to warm it up (no block heaters in those days). Another trick to make cranking easier was to hold the clutch down with a wooden block.

As for the early tractor with the chain drive, my neighbour, Ernie Windsor, says there would be a sprocket wheel, with a heavy link chain, on each side. He says that some tractors used this system for years.

Not many farmers could afford a tractor in the 20s and 30s. You would have to buy not only the tractor, but machinery to go with it, although you could sometimes modify the horse-drawn machines. But you would still need the old machines if the spring was wet, and some fields low and poorly drained. The tractor ploughs were usually two-furrow mouldboard ones, with either a knife coulter or a rotating disc. Later the disc plough came into use, but it made such a rough-looking job that it put some farmers off.

Dad did nearly all his dealing with either Charlie McMillan, the agent for International, or Fred Marshall, the agent for Masey-Harris. Mother thought that we should give more business to Fred, because he was a loyal church supporter and Sunday School teacher, but I think Dad favoured Charlie. It was interesting to watch the dickering. A favourite selling point for a new machine was to say that Dad was considered a leader in his farming methods, and that if he bought this model, and he would get a good price on it, the agent could use Dad's example to persuade others to do likewise. I don't know how successful this approach was with my father.

There were other machinery agents in Chesterville. Fred Merkley was a blacksmith, who later also took on the agency for Frost and Wood, which had a factory in Smiths Falls, and also the Cockshutt agency. I used to wonder how Pat Grady, a blacksmith, could afford the fine brick house (later the convent), opposite the Catholic Church. But then I found out that he, along with Larry Jordan, was the International agent before the turn of the century, and had his depot where Lannin's garage is today.

Those early tractors were a bit easier to work on than the modern ones. Dad could do a lot of repairs himself. My cousin, Halbert Cross, was able to do a valve-and-ring job on his tractor. This was just as well, because the Township and the village tried to keep these tractors off their roads, because the steel lugs could do a lot of damage. Arthur Ball tells me that Harry Smith, a mechanic at Charlie Munro's garage, used to bring his tools out to the farm to repair his tractor.

Tractors today are much more complicated and expensive, but the dangers persist, often due to the power take-off. Farming has always been a dangerous occupation.

Fundraiser nearing goal

The Morrisburg and District Lions Club recently presented a cheque for $2,500 to the Elma Public School Committee to assist with the construction of a new playstructure. The total cost of the project is expected to be in the range of $33,000. Lions Club president Brian Quart made the presentation. The playground fund also received a donation of $1,000 from South Dundas township recently.

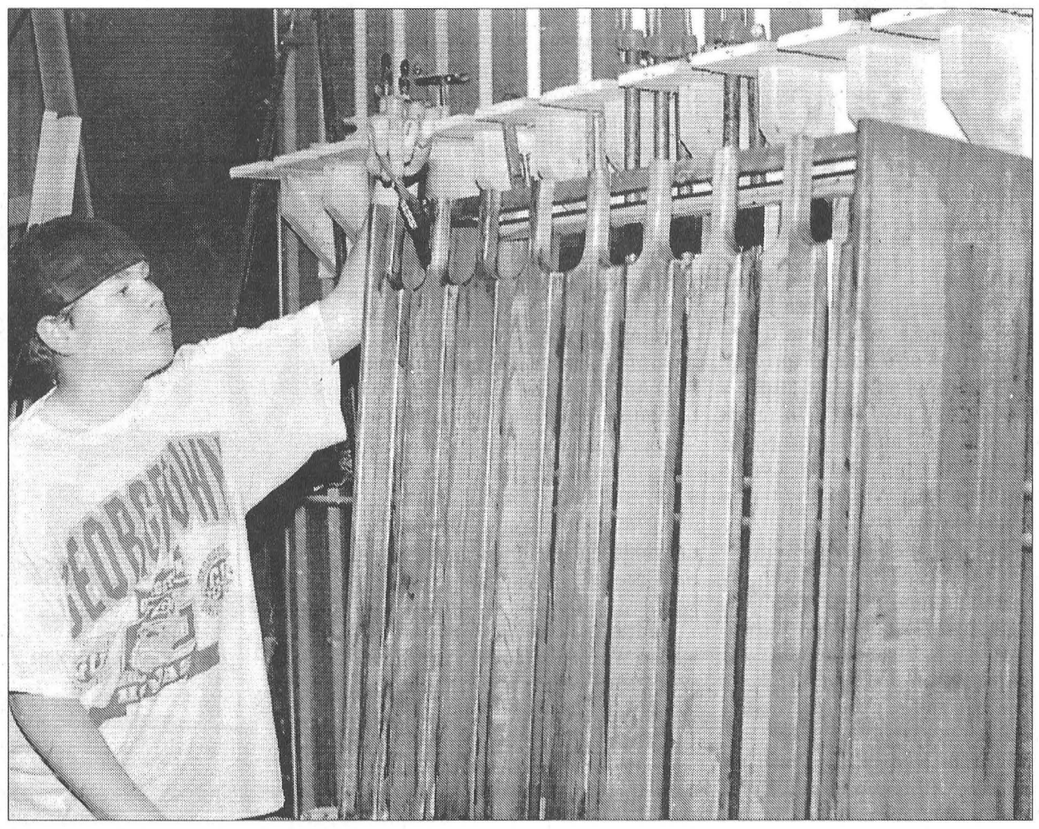
An alternative to the classroom:
Open house will showcase PAL program

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor



PAL student Matt Pilon finishes a wine rack made through the program, which is taught at the T.R. Leger School's Winchester Campus. An open house May 12 will showcase the program's benefits for the community.

WINCHESTER – Tucked inside the Winchester Campus of the T.R. Leger School is a busy workshop, the kind that might be found in any high school. Indeed, young teens are at work here, shaping wood and raw materials into finely-crafted objects in return for school credit.

But there is a difference. There are no hallways, no morning announcements and no hourly shuffle between classes. Seven students spend half their day in the shop, and half the day in an adjoining classroom for academics. They are taking part in the PAL program, and it's giving them another chance at an education.

PAL stands for Program for Alternative Learning. It offers an alternative to students at risk of dropping out and who experience difficulties in a regular classroom setting. And while the students are benefiting from the program, community service is another focus, says instructor Gord MacDonald.

The public will have a chance to see the product of this alternative, in the form of students at work and the cabinets and other objects they make, at an open house May 12. It's also an opportunity for MacDonald to demonstrate the effectiveness of the program.

Students in the program have taken their skills out into the community, completing a variety of jobs. Most recently, they did woodworking on the countertops for the new North Dundas municipal office in Winchester. Since the program started in November, 1994, they have built an arboretum for the Nor-Dun Seniors, worked on Camp Sheldrick, a Boy Scout camp near Winchester Springs, built a privy at the local landfill site and built and manage the runways that were used in NDDHS's Fashion Fever event earlier this month. The Chesterville Lions Club last year commissioned students to build starting blocks for Chesterville's swim team.

Aside from two instructors' salaries, the program does not receive any funding. The objects students make are marketed under the ClassCraft name, which with other commissioned projects brings in about $8,000 a year. It helps fund materials, and students also receive a small cut.

The PAL program started in 1994. "We've created the program, It wasn't something we were told to do," MacDonald says. At first, students in the program were earning personal life skills credits. Now, they are able to receive full technical credits toward their Ontario Secondary School Diploma.

The classroom academics, taught by instructor Jason St-Denis, complement the learning that goes on in the shop. MacDonald says he tries to teach academics such as math and communication through shop activities, as a way to reinforce the classroom lessons. Students are learning what he calls "transferable skills." The program uses an open-ended concept – unlike regular schooling, students with unfinished credits in June can pick up in September where they left off. They can set their own pace.

The average age of PAL students is 14 to 17, but some 18 and 19-year-olds have participated. About 60 altogether have gone through its doors since 1994.

The PAL program's open house takes place Tuesday, May 12 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Winchester Campus of the T.R. Leger School, 594 St. Lawrence Street. A luncheon will be held at noon, and local dignitaries will be in attendance.

Letters To The Editor

Can't we design a fire-proof barn?

To the editor:

The recent tragic fire that destroyed the barn of Donald and Roy Simmons of Newington and the loss of their fine herd of dairy cattle, the product of two generations of the art of animal breeding, is nothing less than a national sacrifice. This and other disasters in the past makes one think of how such disasters might be prevented in the future.

As farmers make the move to even larger operations, the odds that some little mistake in electrical wiring or some area of overheated forage could be present somewhere in the structure are increased.

The notion of an incombustible barn may seem incredible to some but it is far from impossible. Walls constructed from metal studding with steel sheathing on both sides. Trusses made of metal rather than wood. Forage storage areas, including silos, equipped with sprinkler systems pre-charged with anti-freeze to prevent freeze-up in winter. A structure built completely with reinforced concrete incorporated with insulation might be another alternative.

We must begin to think compassionately about our animals, who provide our living and whose fate in a burning structure, the door of which they cannot open, is a foregone conclusion.

Chesterville & District Lions Club member Gord MacDonald on Monday presented a cheque for $2,000 to St. Mary's Playstructure Committee members Pam Kirkwood and Evchen Moore. Looking on are future beneficiaries (from left) Stephen Moore, Kyler McMillan, Brittney McMillan, Drew Kirkwood and Marianne Moore. The Chesterville & District Lions last week also donated $2,000 to the playground fund at Elma Public School. Inset is a small model of the school's future playstructure.

Tammy McRae Band, auction highlight playground fundraiser

Tickets available for Saturday night event in Chesterville

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor

CHESTERVILLE – First the adults can play, then the kids.

Local country singer Tammy McRae and her band will kick up their heels Saturday night at the Chesterville Arena, a licensed event to raise money for much-needed playground equipment at St. Mary's School in Chesterville. The event also features the auction of thousands of dollars of interesting items, and a midnight snack.

The fundraiser continues a community-based push to replace the outdated equipment, a campaign supported totally by parents, students and the public.

Playstructure Committee chairperson Ellen MacNaughton explains that a new playstructure will be put into the schoolyard by September, regardless of how much has been raised. The success of Saturday's event will help dictate how elaborate the new equipment will be. She calls it "a drive to the finish."

Through a number of previous fundraising events, such as a wildly successful auction at the school in September and student pop-can and penny drives, $10,260 has already been raised for the project. Service clubs such as the Finch Lions, Finch Ladies Recreation, Finch Legion, St. Bernard's CWL and St. Bernard's Knights of Columbus have also contributed. The Chesterville Lions Club presented a cheque for $2,000 on Monday.

The original goal of $26,000 has been scaled down, so that something can be put in place for the coming school year. The committee hopes to raise $17,500 in total.

MacNaughton and committee member Sharon Anderegg say Saturday's event is a good opportunity for people to have fun and raise funds at the same time, plus walk away with such auction items as a cap autographed by Ottawa Senators Captain Randy Cunneyworth, a children's party for eight at Kiddy Kars, gift certificates for The Mill, The Keg and Quinn's Inn restaurants, Norm's Gym in Embrun, family passes to Upper Canada Village and Ottawa Lynx tickets.

Other auction items include a Pocket Gameboy and game cartridge, a golf putter, two rounds of golf at Cloverdale Links, a decorative birdhouse, wheel alignment, ten dozen eggs, a will package and more. All items are donated by local and Ottawa-area businesses, individuals and organizations. The auction will be performed by the entertaining Hugh Fawcett, who has donated his services for the evening.

"The kids need to be able to play," Anderegg says. "It's not a luxury. They need it, and it's got to be a safe place."

The existing play structure has served its purpose, and will be replaced by a modern wood and plastic model. MacNaughton believes the modern type of structure, which can be upgraded to accommodate physically-challenged children, would be a first for a separate school in eastern Ontario. She notes studies have shown better exercise promotes better learning, and kids need a stimulating play structure that looks inviting and fun.

The Tammy McRae Band is not to be missed by anyone looking for fun, with their new country sound as well as their flexibility. Both MacNaughton and Anderegg have seen the band, and were impressed with their sound, their ability to play requests and the way they socialized between sets. McRae is also a St. Mary's parent, as is the band's drummer, Barry Billingham.

Tickets for the event are $8 and are available in advance at the Seaway Valley Pharmacy in Chesterville, Finch Red & White, Chesterville Record and Winchester Press. They can also be obtained by calling Sharon Anderegg at 987-2241 or Ellen MacNaughton at 984-2520. Tickets are $10 at the door.

A White Elephant sale to benefit the playstructure fund is also planned. It takes place Saturday, June 6 at the school.

Bank robber was "scruffy"

Crime Stoppers this week is asking for the public's help in solving a pre-Christmas robbery at the Bank of Montreal in Finch. A lone male walked into the branch around 4:50 p.m. on December 19 and handed a teller a note indicating he had a gun and wanted money. He fled the building after receiving money and was last seen in the south parking lot of the bank.

The suspect is described as white, 35 to 40 years old, scruffy and heavy-set, with a round face. He was about 5'6, 200 lbs, with brown hair and a 2-3 day growth of beard. He was wearing a red ballcap, a dark blue jacket, green work pants and white running shoes.

If you have any information on this or any other crime, call Seaway Valley Crime Stoppers toll-free at 1-800-265-TIPS. If your tip leads to an arrest, you may qualify for a cash reward of up to $1,000. You do not have to reveal your identity to help police solve a crime.

Snowmobilers raise $500,000 in 24th annual Snowarama

BARRIE - Despite the worst winter weather that el Niño could send our way, resulting in little snowfall in many areas and poor trail conditions, snowmobilers across Ontario once again took up the challenge to raise $500,000 for Easter Seal kids. What makes this fundraising figure particularly outstanding is that out of 61 planned rides, only 45 were able to take place.

From Vermilion Bay to Collingwood and from the ice-laden Ottawa Valley to Strathroy, dedicated snowmobilers across Ontario rallied to support the 24th Annual Snowarama by participating in a series of events that started in January and wrapped up at the end of March.

The Chesterville leg of the 24th annual event raised over $7,500.

The success of Snowarama '98 is a testament to those responsible snowmobilers who enjoy their sport, and use it for the greater good of giving something back, to their community.

"When all the dollars are in, we are expecting to actually break the $500,000 mark," says Jackie Steele, Easter Seal Snowarama manager. "We are very thankful to all the volunteers, service clubs and snowmobile clubs for their hard work in what was a most challenging year."

Money raised at Snowarama events is vitally important to Easter Seals, enabling us to assist many children with physical disabilities and their families. Special thanks must also go to the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs (OFSC) for making The Easter Seal Society their official Charity of Choice again this year."

Exciting plans are already underway for the 25th anniversary of Snowarama in 1999. Service clubs and snowmobile clubs who are not already involved in this amazing event are encouraged to call Jackie Steele at 1-800-461-3391 to find out how they can take part in the largest charity fundraising event for snowmobilers in Canada. "We want to get everyone involved in a Snowarama event in 1999," says Steele.

"Every community should have a Snowarama Day. It's a fantastic achievement to be celebrating 25 years for a fundraising event, and Easter Seals is proud to be associated with snowmobiles who ride the trails to help these special kids."

The Easter Seal Society, Ontario, provides essential services and programs to children with physical disabilities and their families through integrated pre-school programs, community support, financial assistance for equipment, camps, parent support programs and funding for research.

Volley for Cancer set for Aug. 15

Volleyball and horseshoe players will take to the nets and the pits Sat., Aug. 15, to see who will prevail for the prized trophies at the fourth annual Volley for Cancer held once again at the Van Allen's on Lightning Street in South Dundas.

In the first three years of the daylong event, $39,000 has been raised for the Canadian Cancer Society. The goal for this year is $20,000 and with an anticipated increase in contestants, this should be reachable.

The Volleyball section of the tournament, which is strictly recreational, will be divided into three divisions this year, ensuring each team three games.

As with last year a quilt in the queen lovers know pattern in navy and pink will be raffled off. Quilters are Sue Keeler, Verla Perrin and Inez Gurhnhill.

At the time of writing, eight bands have assured organizers of their presence. The dunking tank will be there also and organizers aren't quite sure who will have the honor of aiding the cause in this way. The tank will be run by the Riverside Heights Snowmobile Club.

To ensure that adequate food will be available, a new approach for provisions is being prepared. The beer tent will be there again and will be run by the South Dundas Snowmobile Club.

Once again Olin Smith is organizing an antique car display and all are encouraged to look over these beauties and talk to their owners.

It should be emphasized that because of the focus of the event, all the concessionaires donate most or all of their profits to Volley for Cancer. It is really a community affair.

Because of the size of the event, volunteers are badly needed. If you could offer several hours, it would be greatly appreciated and helpful to the cause. For information or to volunteer, call Carl or Ruby at 613-535-2772.

Hi sports fans! Well, have we started to cut our lawns yet? If not, don't push it, you will get lots of chances this summer.

This Saturday, May 2, St. Mary's Fundraising Committee will be holding a fundraising dance at the Chesterville Arena, starting at 8:30 pm, featuring "The Tammy McRae Band". In conjunction with the dance, there will be a live auction held with many items up for bids. Come and meet your friends, have a good time and support a good cause.

The Dundas County Players performed last week at the Upper Canada Playhouse in Morrisburg. This week, April 30, May 1 and 2 and next week, May 7, 8 and 9. They will be performing in Winchester at Henderson Hall. These local players will be performing a hilarious comedy by Jack Sharkey called "Honestly Now!!" Show time will be 8 pm.

Planning and preparations are well on their way for North Dundas District High School's 35th reunion, which will be held Sat., May 1, at the Winchester Community Centre. There will be a catered dinner and entertainment. During dinner music will be provided by the North Dundas Jazz Band. After your meal you will be able to dance to the music of Ambush. Tickets are available at the Country Boy in Winchester, the Brookslyn in Chesterville and at North Dundas High School. So come on, you must have made some friends at school that you would want to see again?

On Sat., May 2, there will be an umpire's clinic held at the Winchester Community Centre from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.. I wonder if they are giving eye tests at this one?

On Mon., May 4, there will be a Dairyfest meeting at the Winchester Community Centre board room at 6 p.m. The Dairyfest committee is looking for volunteers and your ideas to make this year's Dairyfest bigger and better.

All you anxious ball players out there should be happy to know that the diamonds will be ready to use in the first week of May, providing Mother Nature doesn't get testy.

Well that's it for this week, and here's my thought for the week: "Success is not the result of spontaneous combustion. You must first set yourself on fire."

TOWNSHIP OF SOUTH DUNDAS

IMPORTANT NOTICE
BRUSH CHIPPING

Over the past several weeks the Township work crews have been putting forth every effort to chip brush left from the ice storm. There has been a tremendous quantity of brush to deal with and we must compliment the public for their patience and understanding as we endeavour to complete the chipping. We must also thank those individuals who have removed brush on their own and encourage others to do the same. Brush can be disposed of at no charge at the compost sites in Iroquois or Morrisburg or at either of the Township disposal sites.

We wish to notify you that the chipping program is soon to be terminated. The final day for putting your brush at the curb will be Saturday, May 9th. Commencing Monday, May 11th, our work crews will make a FINAL pass of all roads and streets under the jurisdiction of the Township of South Dundas. This will be your last chance to have brush chipped by our crew.

Please note that chipping on County Roads 1, 2, 4 (including Ottawa Street), 5, 7, 8, 11, 16, 18, 28, 31, 40 and 41 will not be done by the Township of South Dundas but rather by work crews from the United Counties of S.D.&G. The Township does not have a time schedule for that works to be done.

Thank you for your co-operation.

Hugh Garlough, CRS-S
Manager, Public Works
