Lack of WPTB Permit Hold Up Egg Co-Operative

The Chesterville District Co-operative, Ltd., organized to market the egg porducers' produce, is at a stand still. Approximately 200 farmers have expressed their desire to get behind the organization by paying cash, signing cheques or notes to buy shares which will finance the project. Shares are $10.00. Farmers' purchases range from one to ten shares. When the canvass is completed, (it is practically so now), enough capital will have been turned in to give the venture a strong financial backing. Tentative plans have been made but no real action can be taken until a WPTB Permit is secured. This permit has been promised but, as anyone who is acquainted with a similar experience realizes, it is futile to try to speed the Board's action. The services of A.C. Casselman and Lionel Chevrier, Federal members for Dundas and Stormont and the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture are all working to get action.

Last Tuesday night, Mr. George Wilson, of the Provincial Department of Agriculture met the temporary directors, Frank Casselman, John Sutherland, James McCadden, A. E. Smith, E.J. McMillan, Allison Graham and Eric Casselman, in the Public Library and the necessary forms, to obtain a charter and by-laws, were filled. This action puts the co-operative on a firm, lawful, business basis.

Mr. Wilson had met a similar group of temporary directors at Brinston in the afternoon. The farmers around Brinston have decided that it is time they started to take an interest in the marketing of their eggs and have taken the exact steps as have the Chesterville group and have stopped at the identical spot—the lack of the WPTB permit.

It is no co-incidence that two egg co-operatives are starting in Dundas County at the same time. At the present time the egg market is experiencing a mushroom demand. But this cannot continue indefinitely and farmers are beginning to realize that perhaps if they became interested in marketing, they might the better be able to judge required production.

The County Federation of Agriculture is prepared to arrange meetings to assist in the forming of any such organization.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank my neighbors and friends of Morewood and vicinity for their cards and letters, which I received while in the hospital. Also the Morewood Ladies Aid for their lovely Hydrangea. Mrs. Robert Stewart.

AMERICAN EAGLE IN BRITAIN.

This BBC weekly programme now in its fourth year designed as a link between United States Servicemen in Britain and their families in America, was started by the British Broadcasting Corporation in connection with the Eagle Squadron of U.S. volunteers in the Royal Air Force. General Dwight David Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces in Europe, recently visited the Rainbow Corner Club, London, during one of these programmes. He is seen in front of the BBC microphone, saying a few words to the men present.

Grantley Women's Assn. Held Meeting In Finch

The Grantley Women's Association were entertained at the parsonage, Finch, on Wednesday afternoon, May 3rd. The president, Mrs. S. B. Casselman opened the meeting with the hymn "My Faith Looks Up To Thee" and Mrs. Frank Darling read psalm 34. Miss Feader led in prayer. 12 members were present. Mrs. Claude Carr was given the office of Floral Convenor. Mrs. Bert MacMillan presented the program: readings by Mrs. Sutherland, Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Gordon and Miss Bessie Shaver; a contest won by Mrs. Frank Darling; a solo, "Eternal Love" by Mrs. S. B. Casselman and "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer" by Mr. Beach.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. The June meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Frank Darling.

Newly Weds Honoured By Friends and Neighbors

Many friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. Brock Barkley met in the Williamsburg Hall on Friday night, to honor them on their recent marriage.

The first part of the evening was taken up by a short programme consisting of community singing, songs by Messrs. Chas. Collingridge, Wm. Beckstead and Fred Beckstead; Violin solo by Mrs. Hugh McMillan and musical selections by the Elma orchestra.

After the programme Mr. and Mrs. Barkley were called to the floor and an appropriate address was read by Hugh McMillan, and the presentation of a two-tone walnut China cabinet and a two-tone walnut variety and bench was made by Arthur Thom, Arnold Bogart and William Beckstead.

Mr. Barkley thanked all those present for the gifts and all good wishes given them. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

A delightful lunch was then served and the balance of the evening spent in dancing, the music being supplied by the Elma orchestra.

CROP VERY DEPENDENT ON WOOD LOT

It is suggested by J.L. McKeever of Peterborough, that the Provincial Government should establish a staff of competent lecturers who could talk and demonstrate to every farm community the benefits to be gained from conservation of soil and trees and the methods whereby conservation may be achieved. Mr. McKeever says it is most distressing to witness the manner in which many farm woodlots are being ruthlessly slashed to take advantage of the prevailing wood shortage, entirely without thoughts for the future. In many parts of Ontario farmers and others are bewailing the drying up of streams and wells, and some notice is at last being taken of the effects of soil erosion. However, few seem yet to realize that it is the indiscriminate removal of the forest cover which is the prime cause of the trouble. It is to be hoped that some time in the not too distant future the principle will be recognized that trees are not entirely the property of the individual whose land they happen to be on, to be disposed of as he pleases, but that they belong to the community in the sense that trees cut on one property may affect the water and soil far beyond the confines of that property. The owner of the land should certainly be allowed to harvest his wood crop, but only if the harvesting is done in a manner to ensure future crops and the perpetuation of the particular area as a woodlot.

VICTORY GARDENS INCREASE

Again throughout the province the victory gardeners are preparing for the season's activities and much greater results are expected this year than was attained in 1943. The garden plot idea had its true growth in cities and towns, but in addition many thousands of wartime gardens were developed in villages and on farms. It is estimated that a total of 115 million pounds of vegetables were grown in 1943 in 209.200 wartime gardens in cities and towns. A survey disclosed that one urban householder in every seven in Canada had a wartime garden in 1943, an increase of about 15 percent over the number of wartime gardeners in 1942 and about 24 percent over 1940. Of the total quantity of vegetables grown last year approximately 37 percent were potatoes, 14 percent tomatoes, 10 percent carrots, 6 percent beets, 4 percent cabbages, 4 percent beans, 3 percent each of onions, cucumbers, turnips and rhubarb.

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE DRAGS ON

In the field of romance there are many phrases which have come in for general adoption such as "Hope deferred maketh the heart sad," and "there is many a slip twixt the cup and the lip," although the latter might also be attributed to a tipsy imbiber. There is the case of Mott vs. Trott, an Enniskillen township romance which has passed from the love stage to the courts. It can be said for Elmer Mott that he was no philanderer. When he was a poor and struggling man he was true to Ethel Trott and courted her, if not aggressively, at least assiduously. The only obstacle in the path of a happy marriage was lack of funds. Then the wheel of fortune turned and Elmer acquired wealth and became a successful beekeeper. With the acquisition of money and bees the affections of the once faithful swain cooled and at the age of 61 he declined to be burdened with the bonds of Holy Matrimony. Ethel Trott, of Oil City, near Sarnia, having attained to the age of 59 decided that a breach of promise action was in order. Her appeal to the courts was attended with varying results until at the sitting of the Ontario Supreme Court in Sarnia last September she was awarded $7,000. Elmer Mott, now thoroughly soured, carried the case to the Ontario Court of Appeal who sustained the judgment of the Sarnia Court. Nothing daunted, Elmer has decided to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, and failing there he may go on to the Privy Council if the supply of honey holds.

STICKERS SAID TO BE IN WRONG PLACE

Motorists generally will meet with the suggestion of a Toronto man that the license stickers on cars be placed on the top centre of the windshield directly behind the rear vision mirrors. He maintains that placing car license stickers on the bottom of the left-side corner of the windshield is dangerous because it obstructs the view of the left-side fender and the hood; particularly in traffic when one tries to avoid scratching parked cars on the right. Considering similar circumstances of oncoming traffic either driver is in danger of collision through that obstruction of the left side windshield. Unintentional accidents of that nature certainly will be blamed on our Government regulation.

BEER COUPONS SHOULD HAVE NAME

In the urge for reform the United church Presbytery of Middlesex advocates the complete segregation of the sexes in beverage rooms as a measure of eliminating at least one contributing cause to the spread of venereal disease. Presbytery also asked the government to resist pressure to release more beer, and suggested that misuse of ration books for beer and wine might be curtailed if the owners were compelled to write their names on each coupon.

SMALL BUSINESSMAN LOOKS AT SOCIALISM

What are the chances of the small businessman under socialism? Socialist politicians have tended to ignore or evade this question, concentrating their attacks on so-called big business and giving the impression that the little fellow will be unharmed or benefited by their new order of society.

The fallacy of such an impression is exposed by Edward Highe in the latest of his entertaining pamphlets. Entitled "Mopping Up the Little Fellow", this is a dialogue between a small shopkeeper and a socialist politician. Benny, the politician, argues that Joe, the shopkeeper, would benefit from the government's taking over the big stores and relieving him of their competition. Joe however, points out that the government won't close the big stores, but will run them just as they're being run now.

"Only more efficiently," counters Benny.

"Okay," says Joe, "But what I mean is they'll still be in business. The government will operate them and the government will be able to buy in bigger quantities than ever. Where will that leave us? It'd be as Helen said—like running a small post office in competition with the postal department."

The promise that the government would give him a job running a grocery store after government competition had forced him out of business does not appeal to Joe. He has seen enough of wartime bureaucracy.

"Even with price control," he says, "Which I admit is a necessary evil in wartime, we have so many officials that they're nearly falling over themselves. But imagine the hordes of officials there'd be if the government was running business instead of just controlling prices. More generals than privates, more bureaucrats than workers—that's what it would come to. And d'you think I'd like a job under those conditions when I've been used to running my own show?"

LIKES HIS SPANIELS

London Free Press—Half a hundred Western Ontario people on learning that a soldier, about to go overseas, could provide no home for his dog—a spaniel—offered the dog a home with them until his master returns. Spaniel lovers will not be in the least surprised. What dog has so many graces and virtues? What other dog makes a better pet, a finer house dog?

In peace or in war, in prosperity or in famine, the dog is man's faithful companion, at least, the right sort of man. In the Orient a dog is a scavenger and is despised. With us he is a friend. The way to a man's heart may be through his stomach, or through a child. It may be through a dog as it was in this instance.

Stephen Foster, sweet singer of an earlier America, wrote: "He's gentle, he is kind; I'll never, never find, a better friend, than old dog Tray."

BRITAIN'S INLAND SHIP BUILDING INDUSTRY.

The smaller types of invasion craft for the coming liberation of Europe are being built by townsmen, in workshops all over England. When built, these craft receive their preliminary tests also on inland waters.

Picture shows: A completed invasion craft is transported from the "inland shipyard" at the start of its 60-mile journey to the Canal for launching and final tests.

This is the instinct of children, the experience of age. So long as men have dogs to comfort and console them they should not stray very far from the paths of self-respect and the humanities.

THERE WILL ALWAYS BE AN ENGLAND

THERE will always be an England
Where those, harried and oppressed
By the brutalizing forces
Of the continent find rest
For the homes of dear old England
Have such beauty and such grace.
They have made their dwellers foster
Refugees of every race.

And the God who blessed old England
In the ages that have gone,
Blesses still His willing helpers,
As the world meanders on;
For the English aims are peaceful;
Helpful is her delight:
But the marching of oppressors
Rouses her to face the fight.

And the English fight to conquer,
Not for conquest's sake alone:
But that fruits of free prosperity
In all lands may be shown.
There MUST always be an England,
For such service cannot die.
"God bless and prosper England,"
Is the prayer we lift on high.

India's Army:—2,000,000 strong is the largest army ever raised in Indian history and the largest volunteer army in the world. It has been absorbing recruits at a monthly rate of about 50,000 men.

NEW PLANE GOT TIRPITZ . .

The Barracuda—new British torpedo-reconnaissance—bomber aircraft of the Royal Navy's Air Arm, made its dramatic debut during the assault on the Tirpitz. First American-built Hellcats and Wildcats went in, concentrating their gunfire on the ship's anti-aircraft defences. Within a few seconds they were completely disorganized and the Barracudas went in and were completely free of flak so that they were able to take perfect aim. The attacking was so synchronized that the whole business was over in 60 seconds, proof not only of the success of the new Barracuda but of new air combat tactics.

Down Texas Way . .

He was one of those drill sergeants who make basic trainees quake in their GI brogans. One day he bellowed: "Eves right."

From the rear ranks came an unidentified drawl. "Yo she is, suh; you're a sergeant."

Furring Enterprise.

In war or peace, Yankee enterprise follows the American flag. Witness the following letter recently received by a Detroit man from his soldier son stationed somewhere in Australia.

"Dear Dad," runs the epistle. "I'm thinking about settling down here after the war and going into business. I'm planning on crossing kangaroos with raccoons and raising fur coats with pockets."

Thousands Of Boys Needed For Farm Work

Thousands of high school and collegiate institute boys are urgently needed for summer vacation work on the farms of Ontario, according to an appeal by Alex MacLaren, Director of the Ontario Farm Service Force, who is deeply concerned over the shortage of farm help to take care of the bumper crops expected in 1944. Applications have been received from thousands of farmers for boys to assist in their work during the busy summer season, the number being far beyond all previous records. Farmers who saw boys working on their neighbours' farms last year now want boys to assit them, so well did the boys do their work last summer.

The first call for help is for boys to fill the Farm Service Force camps. One of these, with 70 boys enrolled, is already in operation at Burlington and another is being opened this week at Leamington. Other boys' farm service camps will be opened in May and June in Harrow, Blenheim and Holland Marsh, and several hundred boys are wanted for these.

The great demand, however, is for boys to work on individual farms throughout the Province. These farms are carefully checked as to living and working conditions by the field placement officer of the Farm Service Force, to ensure that boys going to them will have the best of treatment. Excellent wages are being offered to boys by these farmers and this affords an opportunity for boys to spend their holidays rendering an essential national service in the production of food and at the same time saving a substantial amount of money during the season.

Applications from boys are urgently needed, and any who are interested are urged to apply at once to the Ontario Farm Service Force, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

AS PLANE SIZE INCREASES . . AIRFIELD BECOMES LONGER

Increase in plane size and performance creates a problem to the men who build the runways on airfields in England. The added pressure creates more wear and tear on the runways and all fields which are not used exclusively for light aircraft, must have runways built like a main highway. Most of these have from 9 to 12 inches thickness of concrete, from 50 to 100 yards wide. Besides the main runway in the prevailing wind, an airfield usually has two subsidiary runways, for taking off into winds that deviate from the prevailing one.

We shall fight on ~~the~~ their beaches
We shall fight on ~~the~~ their landing grounds
We shall fight in ~~the~~ their fields...

These historic words, spoken by Mr. Churchill in June, 1940, when Britons were frantically preparing to meet an invasion, can be paraphrased to provide even more inspiration today when our own invasion forces are poised for the attack on the continent.

Yes, we shall fight on their beaches, on their landing grounds, in their fields; we must fight too in our factories, offices and homes, and on our farms. The Sixth Victory Loan is another great offensive launched against the enemy. Each and every one of us must strike a blow for freedom by buying Victory Bonds.

Cornwall Tax Collector Found Dead In Car

Joseph Leroux, 38, tax collector for the township of Cornwall, was found shot to death in his parked automobile about a half mile south of Rockland Monday afternoon about five o'clock.

His slumped body was discovered in the car by passers by who had seen him previously sitting in a parked automobile on the outskirts of Rockland. A revolver was found on the floor of the car at his feet.

It was believed that Leroux had been in financial difficulties.

Mr. Leroux had been tax collector for the township of Cornwall for about five years. His brother-in-law, Cheif Constable Adelard Descotes was called to the scene of the fatality and Constable Rene Labrosse also investigated.

Mr. Leroux was a former relief investigator for a number of years at Rockland where he had lived until five years ago when he was appointed tax collector for the township and moved to Cornwall.

THE HOME FRONT FOR VICTORY

Until the war is ended by Victory for the United Nations, it is imperative that not only a few, but everyone should purchase Victory Bonds.

As important as the support of guns, aeorplanes, ships, munitions, food and equipment for the men and women in the armed forces—men and women from almost every home in every street of the cities and towns of Canada and along the highways and side roads of the countryside—is the consciousness of the unflagging support of the people at home. The battle front is dependent on the home front just as the home front is dependent on the battle front.

Along the far flung battle line, in the air, across the wide expanse of several seas, men and women of our own kith and kin have given more than money—their lives. Many thousands of others this minute are facing great danger, great hardships, with great courage and must continue to do so until final victory is won. The more Victory bonds that are bought, the sooner victory will come, and the sooner the carnage and wastage of the war will be stopped.

The fighting forces must not be abandoned for lack of money. If they lose, we are lost. That is the stark, realastic truth. The earlier Victory bonds that you bought will always be worth their face value, in addition to the half yearly interest. The Victory bonds you buy in the Sixth Victor Loan will be as good an investment as those you made in previous loans. All of us may know these facts, but it is well to keep reminding ourselves of them. If it sometimes seems that the noise about buying more Victory bonds is becoming tiresome, we should remember that no noise can make those who have died with the fighting forces and those who will die while the war continues.

Victory bonds are a vital help towards the attainment of Victory and they are the best and safest investment that can be made.

DON'T LET STRONG COLONIES STARVE

The main honey flow will soon be starting. When it arrives and so as to reap what nature provides, every colony must contain as large a force of field bees as it is possible to secure, says C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The honey crop represents the results of a full year's work. Last autumn the colonies were carefully built up, fed and housed so that the bees might withstand the winter. This spring they have again been nursed along, this time to produce as big a field force as possible to gather the harvest. All the care and labour thus far expended may easily be wasted if the colonies are not closely watched during the period between the early flow from dandelion and fruit bloom and the main flow from clover. The early flow stimulates the colony to its maximum production of brood, but seldom does it permit a surplus to be stored for emergencies. Too often there is a dearth of nectar between the two flows, sometimes extending over a period of two or more weeks and because of the strength of the colonies any surplus, that may have been stored, rapidly disappears. Any shortage of food at this time results first in a reduction of brood rearing which in turn means fewer bees for the harvest and secondly it may end in starvation and death of the whole colony.

The colonies should be carefully watched once the dandelion and fruit bloom flow is over, giving special attention to those that are strong in bees, for they are the ones most likely to run short of food. A few pounds of sugar given at this time may save a colony of bees and a 100 or more crop of honey.

MORE TEA, COFFEE ALLOWED CONSUMERS

Larger stocks of tea and coffee now in Canada have warranted the 40 percent increase in the ration of both which became effective May 1, the process being accomplished by doubling the value of every tea or coffee coupon on that date and by making one of these coupons valid in the hands of consumers on the second Thursday of each month, with another falling due on the fourth Thursday. This double coupon value applies to all valid tea or coffee coupons in the hands of consumers, i.e. green coupons from No. 3 ration book, the first six yellow E coupons in the same book and the green T coupons in the No. 4 book. Under the new arrangement, coupon T-32 will become valid on May 11 and coupon T-33 on May 25. It is provided, however, that there shall be no change in the limitation that restaurants and hotels must not serve more than one cup of coffe or more than one serving of tea to one person at one sitting. The Ration Administration makes it clear that the stocks now on hand do not justify abandoning the ration and it points out that supplies reaching this country during coming months will be subject to changing war requirements for shipping space. Consequently, it is impossible to predict what amounts will be received from the sources of supply.

We Must See The Job Through

There is no letting up on the fighting fronts. Action increases day by day But our men there are conscious of their job—to carry on until victory is won. They will finish the job, and we must help them. Our job is an easy one compared to theirs.

We Must Buy More VICTORY BONDS

Yes, we bought bonds before, of course we did. The people of Chesterville and community have done a good job on every occasion which they have been asked to buy bonds. We're buying bonds again. Are we buying all the bonds we can? Are you buying all you can?

As long as the war lasts it is going to cost Canada money to carry on. And from now on the fighting will extend to new areas. The cost will mount higher.

THIS IS NO TIME TO REST ON THE JOB

We can't be content with what we have done. We must do more. We must keep on buying bonds until the war is won. Combined operations call for an all-out action from each unit on the home front as well as on the fighting fronts. Chesterville must go all-out to support the 6th Victory Loan. This community must do its share. And this means that each individual must help.

You Are Not Doing Your Part Unless You Are Buying Bonds —and You Are Not Doing Your Part Unless You Are Buying

ALL THE BONDS YOU CAN

You can buy bonds with cash . . . and you can buy more bonds on convenient deferred payments, with six months to pay for them.

CLUBS FOR CHILDREN

Five clubs have been opened in London for school children up to fourteen years of age by the Save the Children Fund to give the children somewhere to go between four o'clock, when school ends, and seven when their parents come home from work. In some instances bombed public houses and shops have been converted into clubs. The membership fee for these clubs is two cents a week. The clubs are run by professional welfare workers, but they remain more or less in the background in order that the children should regard the club and its grounds as their own. The children have helped to convert and decorate the premises and their activities are interesting and varied and include, carpentry, pottery, cooking, shoe repairing, etc., as well as games and entertainments of all kinds. There is lots of activity and plenty of noise, but one can see after a time that out of this seeming chaos comes order, self-discipline and a community sense. Outings are arranged for the children and they are taken to organized games in the parks, swimming parties and excursions to the museums.

They gave Wellington a glorious funeral. It took six men to carry the beer.

GOOD PASTURES RESPOND TO ABUNDANCE OF FERTILITY

To produce and maintain a good pasture requires a higher level of soil fertility than for most other farm crops. Moisture permitting, pastures grow from early spring to late autumn—five to six months of the year. Hence, they are continually drawing on soil fertility. Practically all other crops require only three to four months from seeding to harvest which means a correspondingly less draft on soil plant food. Of course in the latter instance everything is actually removed from the field while on a pasture there is a certain revolving of fertility through animal droppings.

All pasture crops require nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. Nitrogen is essential for promoting the growth of grasses, while phosphorus and potash encourage the growth of clovers. Therefore if the pasture consists largely or wholly of grasses a high nitrogen fertilizer is advisable. If, however, clovers predominate the fertilizer should contain high percentages of phosphorus and potash.

Like most other crops, pastures thrive on a slightly acid to neutral soil. However, all the grasses and such clovers as alsike, and white dutch, will tolerate and grow well on an acid soil; but alfalfa, sweet clover and red clover require a neutral soil for best results.

For further detailed information on the use of fertilizers for hay and pasture the reader is recommended to write for a copy of the 1942 Handbook on Soil Fertility and Fertilizers from the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto, or from the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

USEFUL HINTS TO WARTIME GARDENERS

Recruits in the increasing battalions of wartime gardeners, will find the following tips from an experienced gardener helpful: A few simple tools of good quality are a better investment than tools of low grade material. Incidentally the supply of garden tools for 1944 is adequate to meet all demands. Tools that are kept clean and bright will give longer service and do better work. A sharp hoe does the best work with the least effort. Rubber garden hose should be handled with special care. When not in use keep it coiled and under cover.

The best way to determine the right planting time for garden vegetables is to get information from the local Horticultural Society, the nearest Experimental Farm or Agricultural representative. Temperatures can vary so much between localities, that often the right time in one community is not all right in another community only a few miles away. It is well to make sure of the right planting dates for your own locality. Planting at the right time is one of the most important elements in making a successful garden.

The pamphlet "The Wartime Garden" contains a lot of useful information. A copy can be obtained free by writing to Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. It tells how to plan the garden, how to prepare the soil, what equipment is required and how to grow the various garden crops.

More Women Wanted In Army Corps

"There are 5,000 more women between the ages of 18 and 45 needed immediately by the Canadian Women's Army Corps, in order that physically fit army men can be released from such jobs as clerks, typists, switchboard operators, postal sorters, cooks, dental assistants, canteen helpers and other trades usually filled by women in civilian life," according to a statement made recently by Capt. D.M. Adcock, District Recruiting Officer for the CWAC.

It is essential at this time, when the Army is being geared for invasion, that every possible man be freed for service in the battle areas, and their jobs taken over by the women's corps.

A mobile recruiting unit will be in the Brockville, Cornwall and Ottawa areas from the 8th to the 18th of May to give information about the corps. Permanent recruiting centres are situated at the Plaza Recruiting Hut, Elgin Street, Ottawa and 122 Pitt Street in Cornwall.

To become a recruit in the CWAC a woman must be in sound health and have a good standing in the community. As a member of the corps she receives 80 percent of the pay of a Canadian soldier, the second best paid among the soldiers of the United Nations. She also is given full medical and dental care and a clothing allowance, and enjoys all the benefits of the army educational services.

When a woman joins the corps with previous experience in a trade she is placed in a job immediately after she finishes basic training, with congenial living quarters and recreational facilities provided. If she has not had previous training she may qualify for one of the trade courses.

The CWAC has been a part of the Canadian Army for nearly three years, and is giving efficient service both in Canada and Great Britain. Carefully selected officers and N.C.O.'s ensure the welfare, happiness and comfort of those under their command.

Grantley

The concert put on by the male choir of Williamsburg United church last Friday night in the church here, was greatly enjoyed by all present. Sacred songs, negro spirituals and patriotic music made the evening pass too quickly. Their pastor Rev. Mr. Lacey gave a very interesting talk on the subject, "Russia's Secret Weapon", which is not a weapon as we interpret it, but the determination of the people of that great country, to master some of the world's greatest problems. One, health and hospitalization for rich and poor alike on the same plane. The choir was composed of the following, Mrs. Hugh Thompson, organist and leader, Messrs. Edgar McIntosh, Lt. Donald McIntosh of Radio Dept. RCN VR and Strader McIntosh, Geo. Tupper, Milton Shaver, Hugh Thompson, Ward Casselman, Mr. Shaughnessy.

Mr. Raymond, game warden of Apple Hill, was a guest of his daughter, Mrs. Willis Darling and Mr. Darling on Tuesday.

LAC Ray Darling, RCAF, Arnprior spent the week-end at his home here.

Mrs. John Kittle spent a couple days in Cornwall last week.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mason Robinson at the week-end were Mr. Will Robinson, Seattle, Wash., who is attending a manager's convention of Life Assurance underwriters in Philadelphia, Penn., and Mrs. S.C. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hill and family, Miss Nettie Hill, all of Ottawa, Mrs. Bert Link, Cass Bridge and Miss Natalie Fetterly, Morewood.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McMillan are spending this week-end in Hamilton and Hagersville. Their son Donald will graduate and receive his wings on Friday at Hagersville Flying School.

The Dance and Bingo of Grantley unit of the Red Cross, held in the Community hall, Chesterville, on Monday evening, May 1st, was a decided success. The handsome sum of $134.50 was realized. The evening's entertainment was conducted by W. E. Morris, of Cardinal, a former Chesterville boy. Lucky bingo winners were awarded handsome prizes. The door prize $2 was won by Miss Doris Flegg. Kirkwood's orchestra furnished the music for dancing which old and young alike thoroughly enjoyed. A large crowd was present.

TWO BRITISH GENERALS AND AIR MARSHALL ESCAPE FROM ITALIAN PRISON CAMP.

Lieutenant General Sir Richard O'Connor, Lieutenant General Phillip Neame, V.C., and Air Marshall O. T. Boyd, have escaped from their P.O.W. Camp in Italy and are safely back in Algiers. Air Marshall Boyd was captured by the Italians in November, 1940, when his 'plane made a forced landing while he was on his way to take up his new appointment as deputy to Viscount Wavell, then C.-in-C. Middle East. General O'Connor and General Neame were captured together in April 1941 when they were held up by a German motor cyclist armed with a tommy-gun while their staff car was leaving Derna for a new H.Q. The three senior officers took advantage of the confusion among the guards at their camp when the news of Italy's capitulation came through. The method of their escape is still secret.

THE TALL STORY WINNER

I met a jolly farmer in a lonely Western vale,
A man of fertile fancy, who was never known to fail;
Who, when I told of hailstones six ounces full in weight,
Said he had seen twelve-ounce ones back in eighteen-sixty-eight.

And when I spoke of fish I'd caught in certain foreign rills
That measured twenty-seven feet from narrative to gills,
He said with brow unruffled and manner frank and free
That he caught them twice as long in eighteen-sixty-three.

And when I spoke of having met a fellow in Berlin,
Whose mouth was large enough to get three large potatoes in,
He wished Jim Henderson, his cousin was alive,
He's seen him hold six apples in his mouth in "sixty-five."

It seemed to make no odds to him how I'd exaggerate,
He'd always go one better—so I thought that I'd narrate
How with an ass's jawbone did the mighty Samson slay
Ten thousand of his foemen—just to see what he would say.

He listened most intently, with an ever-broadening smile,
And I thought he was a person who had never heard of guile,
When I had done, he told me that he knew the tale was true,
For Sampson's self had told it him in eighteen-sixty-two.

KISSING CRAZE

Saturday Night—No sane adult can understand why, but some Vancouver adolescent misses have gone kiss crazy. They kiss the weirdest things with their sticky lips: Envelopes containing (presumably) passionate letters to the boy friends overseas, the bottom of saucers in restaurants, looking glasses in public dressing rooms, store windows, doorknobs, milk bottles, outside posters, and, as the auctioneers put it, many other articles, far too numerous to mention.

The outstanding example of the kiss craze is a wall in the Crystal Pool, Vancouver's de luxe bathing establishment. There are 57—count 'em—57 distinct and different lipstick impressions. There would be more, but the janitor rubbed a lot off before he quit.

Children's Welfare

This is the Fourth in a Series of Seven Articles which will appear in these columns.

In this series of articles we have been looking backward to the dawn of the Children's Protection Movement in Ontario and following its development down the past half century. We have emphasized and re-emphasized the democratic nature of the Children's Aid Society in your own and every other community. We must never forget that with great wisdom, vision and high social intent our Children's Aid Societies were founded as organizations to be placed in the hands of the people of our communities.

This work of protection of children sprang from the hearts and was developed by the efforts of good and tender men and women. Legislation followed and the Children's Aid Society emerged as the instrument for the carrying out of the ideal that every child has a birthright in a civilized society!

Let us put it this way: The organs for the carrying out of the work are the Societies; the structure of the whole enterprise is the legislation defining the powers and purpose of the Societies, but the life-blood that flows through the whole organization of protection is your zeal, your interest, your concern and your support of your Children's Aid Society.

In a later article we shall show what the public-spirited lover of children can do for his or her Children's Aid Society by serving on its boards or one of their committees; how such people can broaden and extend its services, strengthen the hands of its trained and paid officials and enlist the whole-hearted co-operation and intelligent understanding of other men and women of the community.

It is the intention now to give as clear a picture as is possible in a brief space of some of the various functions performed by your Children's Aid Society under Ontario statutes. Under the Children's Protection Act the Society is constituted the specialist in guardianship, being legally appointed to appraise and determine the suitability of a child's own natural guardians.

Let us review a typical case that came before one of the societies: Here we have a married couple with three children ranging in age from 2 to 6 years. Neither are vicious, but they are irresponsible, lazy and shiftless to the point that their children are being neglected and suffering. The man has lost one job after another, due to inefficiency. What he does earn he and his wife spend in the beer parlour. At the time the Society is called in by neighbours the man has lost his job; nearly all the furniture has been sold; there is scarcely any food in the house, the gas and electric power has been cut off and the children are sleeping on a chesterfield. But those parents are not actively unkind to their children, who obviously have affection for them. Is there any hope of salvaging this family? Certainly not without a very severe discipline and surveillance! The Society decides to charge them both with neglect and bring them into court, applying for temporary wardship of the children. Pending the disposition of the case father and mother are detained and finally both placed on probation. They are told they must be able to show a rehabilitated home and a sincere desire to accept their parental responsibility before their children will be returned to them. In this case the couple did make amends. They went to work; re-established their home and today, under the watchful eye of the Society, have their children back with them. Had they not straightened up the children would have had to be made permanent wards.

Can a Society remove children from their home? Yes. It can and must lay evidence and produce information that these children are in unfit hands. Court action is taken and the judge or magistrate decides whether to commit them to the Society, either permanently or temporarily. "Ward care"—that is, the over all cost of maintenance in foster home or institution—is paid for under statute of the municipality. What this guardianship implies in the moral, physical and spiritual care of these little future citizens will be discussed later. It involves the whole policy of Children's Aid.

The Unmarried Parent's Act gives the Society very definite powers. These make it obligatory for it to act as a protective agent to any child born out of wedlock and, lacking the protection it is entitled to, wardship action is taken. Another function is to contact the putative father and arrange for maintenance of his child. But outside of its statutory obligations there is always assumed by the Society a service in helping to re-establish the unmarried mother. Close follow-up work is not only socially sound and humane, but financially advantageous to the public. A second child, under such circumstances is nearly always a public charge—and so the liabilities increase!

So we come back again to the part the men and women of every community can and should play in their Children's Aid Society. Prevention and more prevention is becoming the keynote in every enlightened community. First, in the interest of the child's happiness and well being—that must always come first! Secondly as a matter of dollars and cents.

STARS OF TOMORROW.

"Singing Stars of Tomorrow" is a Sunday feature from Toronto on which the Jean Dickensons and the Edward Johnsons of tomorrow are being sought. Here are two pretty candidates for singing fame rehearsing for their spotlight broadcast with three well known radio personalities.

"Singing Stars of Tomorrow" is heard Sundays at 5.03 p. m. EDT, over the National Network of the CBC.

A REAL REFORM

London Spectator—One of the most important bits of news of the week is contained in a couple of lines in Monday's Times, to the effect that "Australian research workers have taken the 'tickle' out of wool." I hope the discovery will make their fortunes. They deserve it. This is not a time to dwell on minor sufferings, but the total volume of anguish scratchy vests have inflicted through the ages must amount to something terrifying. The chief reason why I hope (without any very assured expectation) to keep out of prison for my remaining days is dread of what the underclothing may be.

SHOPPING NOTE.

It is comforting to know that the RCMP are right on the job but occasionally they may be a bit too zealous. Take the recent case in a Western city. A Mountie entered a drug store and asked, "That soldier who was in here, was he after dope?" The druggist laughed. "Sure the soldier is haggard and anxious," he said. "The poor fellow is afraid he'll lose his girl if he can't sometime turn up with a box of chocolates but no store along the street has any. This chocolate shortage is making things tough for young fellows engaged in wooing."

SOUVENIR

Back on the airwaves of the east comes Gwen Bradshaw, this week when the Winnipeg program "Souvenirs of Song" shifts from the west to the Trans-Canada Network of the CBC, beginning Monday, April 3, at 8.45 p.m. EDT. Gwen is a popular young singer on any air-lane and eastern listeners well remember her for her songs in "Singing Strings", under the baton of Geoffrey Waddington. Adding to the "Souvenirs of Song" is the smooth piano team of Parks and Burdett.

Safe Jumping

It takes a jerk of 5½ tons to break the 28 cords of the British Army's parachute. Each rigging line is made of the finest braided silk cord, tested to a breaking strain of 450 lbs. The whole business weighs 30 lbs., including harness and container bag, and costs £70 ($308).

As a consequence, it is now calculated that parachute jumping is no more dangerous than jumping off a slow bus. Minor injuries, such as sprained ankles and wrists, are down to less than three per thousand. Careful packing is an additional factor in this record. A flight-sergeant who has ben responsible for the packing of 38,000 parachutes, has never had one fail to open.

Up until the time of the battle of El Alamein in October 1942, one Indian division, the redoubtable 'Fighting Fourth' had suffered 15,000 casualties but had captured and made prisoner over 100,000 Germans and Italians in the Middle East. The Fighting Fourth crowned its achievements by capturing the Nazi General Von Arnim; and now it is in Italy together with the Eighth Division.

FARMERS CAN GET LOANS FROM GOVT.

The Canadian Farm Loan Board which has a branch office in every Province of Canada was established by the Dominion Government in 1929 under Dominion legislation for the purpose of providing the farmers in Canada with a system of long-term mortgage credit at cost. As the Board borrows money from the Canadian government on the security of its own bonds, and reloans the money to farmers at a slightly higher rate of interest, using the spread between cost and income to pay for its administration, ascertained losses, and to set up a reserve account for possible losses.

At the present time the Board borrows money at 3½ percent per annum and lends it at 5 percent on first mortgage bonds. According to the latest annual report, the cost of administering the Board during the year was less than one percent of the value of assets under administration.

In addition to a first mortgage loan, the borrower may also obtain a second mortgage loan with interest at 6 percent per annum. While borrowers are expected to carry out their obligations as provided by the contract, sympathetic consideration is given by the Board to those who through no fault of their own, by reason of crop failure, illness or other unforseen expenses, are unable to pay as agreed.

The head office of the Canadian Farm Loan Board is Plaza Building, Ottawa.

Willie: Why, Mom, didn't you hear Dad say several times last night that it was too dry for him? Well, I put it in the sink to soak.

Will Hold Draw In Aid of Red Cross

For the past three years the Holstein Breeders of Canada have annually held a War Effort Calf Auction from which total receipts amounting to $25,000 have been forwarded to Britain for war relief purposes. This year the Calf Auction has been discontinued, the project being replaced by a War Effort Draw, proceeds of which will go to the Canadian Red Cross. The 8,500 members of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada are selling tickets on a high-class heifer calf which has been donated by President J. J. E. McCague, Alliston, Ont. This heifer will be drawn for at the National Holstein Sale scheduled for May 31 at Brampton. It is felt that the replacement of the Calf Auction, to which calves were contributed free by individual breeders, by the Draw will result in a more equitable distribution of the financial burden throughout the membership of the Association. Tickets are 25 cents each or a book of five for $1.00.

The heifer calf offered is Glenafton Laurel Blossom born February 6th, 1944. She is a very richly-bred individual carrying the blood of three "Extra" sires, Johanna Rag Apple Pabst (3 crosses), King Toitilla Acme and Echo Hartog Mercedes..

Alice Up-to-Date.

Tell me dear fairy, said Alice. How do you manage not to be seen by people, even though they walk right past you every day?

I lend them money, replied the fairy.

An Adventure In Utopia

By Bruce Hutchison

THE year was 1960, the spring morning sunny and Mr. John Jones was feeling good. As he walked briskly towards the CCF government bank, his mind was busy with the details of his great invention which, he was confident, would revolutionize the shirt industry of Canada and bring a blessed relief to the whole male population.

Mr. Jones' idea was simple but tremendous. He proposed to manufacture a shirt which would be sold to the consumer without any pins in it. As every male Canadian had been in revolt for half a century against the capitalist nuisance of ten pins, which were cunningly hidden in every fold of a new shirt, and had to be extracted, like a Chinese puzzle, just when a man was in a hurry to dress, Mr. Jones felt sure that his invention would receive the support of the CCF banking system.

All Mr. Jones wanted was a small loan to finance a pinless shirt factory. But the bank manager pointed out that Mr. Jones must first get the approval of the government shirt controller. This took two months, and 15 letters and two long-distance calls to Ottawa.

Three months were required to secure the authorization of the button controller, because he insisted on Mr. Jones adding two extra buttons to his shirt design to enable the government's button cartel to sell more buttons.

There was also a month's argument with the technicians who controlled the length of the shirt tails, for at this time, due to a change in the CCF party line, tails were fluctuating from day to day as the issue was debated in Parliament.

But in the end, after two years of negotiation, Mr. Jones had the approval of the government controllers except in one vital particular. He had been pinned down by the government pin controller.

The Pin Controller—A powerful figure who had been appointed because of expert knowledge gained in the growing of apples in the Okanagan and because he had been defeated for Parliament by a man who had once been a capitalist—took a dark view of Mr. Jones' invention. Therefore, just as it was about to make a loan to Mr. Jones, the bank was instructed by telegram from Ottawa to hold up the whole project while the pin controller looked into it.

The pin controller could not look into it for five months because he was then fully engaged in his historic struggle with the government's safety pin trust to enforce the three-pin plan for diapers, which Premier Coldwell had found very damaging to the housewives' vote.

Finally defeated on the three-pin plan, the pin controller was further shocked to hear that Mr. Jones intended to eliminate pins from shirts altogether. In a memorandum to the Central Planning Bureau, accompanied by 17 blueprints and a marked copy of "Make This Your Canada" the pin controller reported that if Mr. Jones started the fashion of the pinless shirt, the government's socialized pin industry would be ruined.

In a long, secret interview with the Planning Committee of the Cabinet the pin controller showed that such a dangerous invention was bound to spread, because it would be popular and the customers would demand it. Presently there would be no market for the government's output of pins, workers would be thrown out of work, factories closed and incidentally, there would be no more need for a pin controller and his thousand assistants.

While some members of the Planning Committee of the Cabinet, being shirt wearers themselves, had some secret sympathy with Mr. Jones' project, they patriotically disregarded their own convenience for the sake of the Great Central plan, and supported the pin controller's argument.

As Minister of Propaganda Lewis pointed out, if the government once admitted that the customer, not the government, could decide what kind of goods he should buy, the Great Plan would be fatally undermined. With this Premier Coldwell agreed but instructed Mr. Lewis to issue an announcement reiterating that the CCF government wanted to encourage sound private enterprise.

The bank manager telephoned Mr. Jones to communicate the government's instructions that no loan could be issued to eliminate pins from shirts, but Mr. Jones had disappeared. He was an old man by now and had been confined to the government's comfortable institution for the violently insane. Here he was kindly treated and, apart from his habit of sticking pins into the guards when they weren't looking, appeared to be a quiet and happy inmate. As for the public, it didn't care about the decision to keep pins in shirts because it had lost its shirt long ago. And, as Minister of Agriculture Noseworthy said in a notable speech, the country had been rescued from a capitalists' plot and was now safe for the stuffed shirts.

GIANT "FROGS" NOW EXTINCT.

With the coming of spring and warmer weather many of the dormant animals take a new lease on life. One of these, Rana, the frog, our most familiar amphibian, once again croaks his well-known song. In his swampy home he reenacts to some extent the life of his ancestors. Among these ancestors were the grotesquely huge amphibians that lived in a bygone era many millions of years ago. In the Royal Ontario Museum may be seen examples of these animals in fossil form. A glance at these fossils reveals a head two feet or more long, the total length of the animal being often over six feet. In addition some of them had long broad tails. If their 'songs' were in proportion to their size, imagine the weird sounds of the swampy jungles on April evenings, 300,000,000 B.C.

Thoughts of Spring and paint-minded people everywhere are "suddenly" aware of the familiar Martin-Senour sign (although it's there all the year 'round) because Spring is the usual and accepted time to repaint for fresh beauty and protection!

And this sign is a sure sign of an enduring paint because Martin-Senour is 100% pure!

Whenever you see the sign of Martin-Senour, there will be found the paint of endurance and longer lasting beauty. It is the sign which in one breath welcomes Spring and the chance to beautify as well as to do the patriotic job of protecting property!

Canadian Duty Question Stumps Quiz Experts

The three regular wizards of Information, Please, the originator and proprietor of the show, and the guest artist, who is an authority on Canadian-American affairs, all puzzled their brains, but couldn't give the answer as to who pays the duty, if any, on sets of the Encyclopedia Britannic won by Canadians.

Oscar Levant detached his gaze from a girl reporter's ankles and blinked; John Kieran swallowed and grinned; F.P.A., otherwise Franklin P. Adams, cocked his cigar at the ceiling and looked at where it was cocked; Lester B. (Mike) Pearson, Canada's Minister-Counsellor at Washington, adjusted his necktie and looked at Master of Ceremonies Clifton Fadiman, who smiled toward Dan Golenpaul, who pays the bills. And Dan Golenpaul said: "Darned if I know. Canadians win sometimes but I never found out just how they got their awards."

In Toronto to do their regular weekly show as a special feature of the Sixth Victory Loan campaign, the 6-year-old brains feature landed in Toronto in a unit which disbanded after breakfast. Kieran and Adams went for a walk which took them, inevitably, to a university, which they concluded was Queen's. Levant went on a hunt for coffee, which he consumes by the gallon daily. He had to spend most of the morning visiting restaurants to get enough cupsfull. They gathered in the afternoon for a press conference which was attended by unassigned newspapermen who wanted a closeup of the gifted question-answerers, and also by a whole mob of people whom nobody seemed able to recall ever having met before.

Like Canadian Suds

Kieran and Adams, old-time newspapermen, are both smallish; the former is slight, sandy, blue-eyed, with a quizzical mouth and ears that perhaps account for the tremendous number of things he seems to have heard in the past; the latter is dark, full-lipped, slender, slightly dogmatic in a manner that hints that it is a pose, and with a gift for winding up sitting between the two best-looking girl interviewers. Levant, surprisingly tallish, is sleekish, dark, with a full, expressive mouth, big smoky eyes and a slight air of impatience. Levant drank coffee; the others like b—r, especially Canadian suds.

And one thing did come out of the interviaw—how it all got started. Golenpaul, taller than all the others, smart and alert, used to "get hot under the collar, listening to smart-aleck, wise-cracking masters of ceremony getting some poor average guy in front of a microphone and making him look foolish with tough question.

"So I wondered how experts would look," he said. "It took quite a while selling the idea of questioning experts before we got on as a sustaining show. Five months after a sponsor grabbed us. We've been on steady ever since for six years."

Receive 5,000 Questions

And the experts miss an average of two and a half out of 12 complete questions. The show receives an average of 5,000 questions submitted every week. Out of that are chosen about 10 by an editorial board of six to 12 readers. Golenpaul runs everything; he picks final questions and rewords them if necessary. He hires the experts, including picking the guest stars weekly. He wouldn't say just why "Mike" Pearson, Canada's smart young man of the diplomatic service, was chosen. Fadiman, very youthful despite a million dollars won from the publishing business, sees the questions a few hours before the show is staged, everything completely written out, answers and all. The others hear them positively for the first time during the show.

Perhaps their favorite guest star is Fred Allen, veteran vaudevillian, though Kieran and Adams both slightly favored any one of a half-dozen ladies who have appeared with them. Urbane Mr. Fadiman, who says Information, Please, is his 72nd job, starting with doing butcher-boy errands at the age of 7 and including teaching school and selling insurance plays no favorites. He likes them all.

"We", said Mr. Kieran, "don't try to swat up, though we know darned well we'll get more Canadian questions than usual this week. You can study a thing for a hundred years an' they won't ask you a darned thing about what you studied. The best thing is just go rambling along and hope for the best."

EXPLOSION ROCKS PLANES

For many months before the security wraps were removed from the new six-ton "factory buster" a team of men in a Royal Ordnance factory in Northern England kept it a dark secret. They were hemmed in by rules, which if broken might have meant a sudden and terrible death. They handle enough explosives to wipe out a town in a split second. To give an idea of the bomb's terrific destructive power, it is reported that when the bomb is released the aircraft jumps into the air due to the loss of the 6 ton weight and the explosion will rock a plane several thousand feet above it, lighting the sky up like daylight.

POTATO EYES FROM CERTIFIED SEED

Those who sell potato eyes, whether to large or small growers for planting this year, must conform to the requirements of an order of the Dominion Minister of Agriculture passed recently. This order prescribes that all potato eyes sold for planting must be cut from certified seed, that the average weight of the eyes shall not be less than half an ounce; that not more than five percent of the eyes shall be less than ¾ of an inch in depth; and that the eyes shall be free from visible damage caused by bacteria, fungi or insects.

The order also requires that each container in which potato eyes are sold shall have attached to it a label or tag issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture stating that the eyes conform to the rationing regulations under the order. The shipper is also required to show on the label the certificate number and the name of the variety of the certified seed potatoes from which the eyes were cut.

The principal purpose of the order is to prevent the spread of disease and to give greater assurance of quality to purchasers of potato eyes.

The doctor replied: "Get married and keep your mouth shut."

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! There is something about a steaming casserole of savory stew that brings a smile to every face at the table. And when the fragrant stew is topped by fluffy golden crust, appetites grow as they take in the sight of it.

Now here is such a dish—it has everything. Make your stew by one of the listed recipes. Then top it with potato puff. The potato puff is made from mashed potatoes. You need three cups full. Add the beaten yolks of eggs, and enough hot milk to moisten it, along with two tablespoons of fat and any seasoning you like, such as a bit of onion or parsley. Beat the mixture well. Fold in stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and pile the puff on top of the stew. Bake in a moderate oven until it is brown.

And here is something else you can do with these delicious potatoes. Put the puff in a greased baking dish and bake it separately. Serve it with meat loaf or an omelet. You can probably think of other combinations that would be good too.

MEAT PIE FILLING

¾ pound hamburg steak, 3 teaspoons salt, few grains pepper, ½ cup tomatoes, 6 small carrots, sliced, ½ cup peas, 3 large potatoes, diced, 3 onions.

Grease the casserole. Add one layer of the meat, flaked with a fork. Sprinkle with part of the salt and pepper, add some pieces of the vegetables and continue to within an inch of the top of the casserole. Use enough of the vegetables to fill the space; distribute the meat and seasonings well. Pack lightly so there will be space for them to expand as they cook. The tomatoes and the natural meat and vegetable juices will provide sufficient moisture. Serve as soon as baked. It is simply delicious. Bake in electric oven at 350 degrees.

BEEF STEW

1½ pounds shank, neck, plate, flank rump or brisket, ¼ cup flour, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 small onion, 1-3 cup cubed carrots, 1-3 cup cubed turnips, 4 cups potatoes, cut in quarters.

Wipe meat, remove from bone, cut in cubes of about one and one-half inch. Mix flour with salt and pepper and dredge the cubes of meat with it. Cut some of the fat from the meat and heat in a frying pan. When part of the fat has dried out, add the cubes of meat and brown the surface, stirring constantly to prevent burning. Put this meat, with the melted fat in which it was browned, into the stew kettle. Add enough boiling water to cover the meat or a pint of tomatoes, stewed and strained, and simmer on electric element until the meat is tender (about three hours). The carrots and turnips are to be added during the last hour of cooking, and the potatoes twenty minutes before serving time.

PORK PIE

2 or three pounds thick end of loin of pork, 1 cup stock or water, salt and pepper, 1 or 2 tablespoons catchup, parsley, onion or celery.

Cut pork into thick slices. Put a layer on the bottom of a casserole and sprinkle chopped parsley and onion, salt and pepper over it. Repeat until the dish is 2-3 full and then pour in stock or water and catchup. Bake in electric oven 1½ hours. Top with potato puff, pie paste or biscuit crust. Bake another 30 minutes.

TAKE A TIP

When using all-purpose flour for making pastry you will get good results if you follow these rules:

1. Use 2 tablespoons less of all-purpose flour to substitute for each cup of pastry flour called for in a recipe.

2. Blend in lard or hydrogenated fat until the mixture is mealy. Fat should be finely blended with all-purpose, whereas it should be only blended with pastry or cake flour until it is the size of coarse oatmeal.

3. Add water quickly and lightly. Every unnecessary stroke tends to make pastry tough.

4. Chill thoroughly in a covered bowl.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. M.H. asks: How do you cut out rolls without sticking to the dough and how do you prevent a dry crust.

Answer: Grease the cutter frequently when you are cutting out dough. Place buns on greased bake sheet and cover with a damp towel. Let rise until double in size. Brush with top milk. Bake in electric oven, having preheated oven with top element off.

Mrs. J.V. says: 1. Keep watercress standing in a jar with a little water in it.

2. Heat lemons before you ream them to get the most juice.

At Battle Front Getting The "Word" Is Shock

A strange, new language is growing out of this war, and there are many expressions and phrases that ring strange to civilian ears. One of these is known as "getting the word" This means that a serviceman receives word from home that his girl has jilted him. Not a day passes that the same heart-rending story is not heard in one of the 125 Red Shield centres in Canada. Sometimes it's more than a jilt. It's a jolt—a divorce—or threats of one, with in-law complications and babies and allotments and other considerations.

Dogged determination on the part of The Salvation Army officer in charge brings about unheard of results. You might ask: How? There's a different answer for every problem, because every problem is different. But the application of thoughtfulness kindness and love of fellow men to each individual case is the basis for the cure-all of heart-break.

A Salvation Army worker in a Red Shield canteen met a boy we will call Philip. Philip stalked into the canteen one day with the bleak, baffled face that spells deep trouble inside. He was taciturn, surly. Spoke only in mono-syllables. Refused all services. Stalked out.

The report of this worker reads: "One afternoon, in spite of previous rebuffs, I sat down beside him and said: "If you would only tell me about it, we might be able to work out an answer together."

"That's what you think," was his reply. "Why do you care anyhow?"

"Because I have a son, and I believe any boy's mother would break her heart if she saw her boy looking and acting as you are."

Tears came into his eyes and in a choked voice, he stammered that his mother was dead. Bit by bit, his confidence in me grew with each successive visit and eventually I learned the whole story:

Philip was the musical son of foreign born parents. From the age of five, encouraged by his mother, he had studied music, graduated from university. His baritone voice was hailed by teachers as being unusually promising and he continued his study under an internationally known singer.

The same teacher had another pupil, a girl. For three years they studied together, sang together. Philip fell in love with her. Then his mother died. His father, unsympathetic to the study of music, withdrew financial assistance.

Without money he found himself without a girl. He packed up his music, closed the piano and vowed he would never sing again. He got work in a factory, hated it, began drinking, began hating himself . . . and finally in the uniform of his country he was seeking oblivion from everything he had known, hoping he could end it all honorably.

The Salvation Army worker took him to her home and cooked him the kind of meal he liked best. The boy made friends with others in the family and soon he was helping to dry dishes, shovel the snow and generally make himself useful about the house. The day came when he sat down at the piano and began to play and sing.

He agreed to take part in the Sunday night song service in the canteen. Crowds gathered and listened spellbound. Soon he was the talk of the camp and requests and invitations poured in from all sides.

He was considered so important to morale building that the commanding officer placed a "no shipping if avoidable" order on his file.

The Salvation Army worker's report usually ends: "We were able to help him". Terse, simple words. No mention of the time or the patience or the understanding that played such an important role in this drama.

He asked The Salvation Army worker one day if she knew what made him realize what a fool he had been. He gave her the following explanation:

"You said I shouldn't let any girl or anyone on earth make me lose my self-respect, or my belief in myself. You said that God made me, that I am the son of a King! You said that He had given me my voice, my hands my heart . . . I shall never forget it."
