HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Chesterville Woman's Arm Broken In Auto Accident

Monday afternoon as Mr .and Mrs. Kenneth Wood their son-in-law Willie Farrell and his little son were proceeding to their home near Chesterville, the car took the ditch about a half a mile west of the Winchester-Mountain boundary, when Mrs. Woods besides suffering from shock and bruises had a small bone broken in her right forearm. The other members of the party escaped with slight cuts and bruises. While attempting to avoid a bad sluiceway and also keep clear of a hole in the road, Mr. Wood, who was driving the car applied the brake suddenly with the result that the car skidded on the grass and took to the ditch, turning over and facing in the opposite direction when stopped.

R-100 Will Fly Over Ottawa At the Week End

Ottawa and Toronto will both be given an opportunity of seeing H. M. Airship R–100 this week end provided weather conditions prove favourable. Rumours that all flights in Canada might be cancelled were definitely allayed last night with the announcement by Wing-Commander R. B. B. Colmore, director of airship development, that the dirigible would undertake a flight to the Capital and Queen City if everything was satisfactory. The following statement was issued by the press liaison officer: "Provided repairs to the R–100 are completed satisfactorily, and weather conditions are favourable, there is every belief that the flight to Ottawa and Toronto will be made over this week end." No actual date or time of departure was included in the message.

Knight---Venne

On Monday, July 21st, at seven o'clock, a quiet but pretty wedding took place at the church of St. Anthony of Pauda, Syracuse, when Anna Isabella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Venne, Poltimore, P.Q., became the bride of Michael Earl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Knight of 306 Hamilton street, Syracuse, Rev. Fr. Watkins officiating.

The bride was charmingly and girlishly attired in light powder blue georgette dress with sand hat and shoes to match and carried an arm bouquet of white roses and maiden hair ferns. She was attended by her girl friend Miss Ida Wells, who wore peach georgette and carried pink roses. Mr. Raymond Knight, brother of the groom acted as best man.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served to immediate friends at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Elsworth Tregin, 297 Shirley drive, after which the bride and groom left on a motor trip to Poltimore, P.Q., where they remained for ten days returning by Ottawa, Niagara Falls and Buffalo.

On their arrival at the home of the bride's parents they were entertained at a large reception, two hundred guests being present, the bride receiving many beautiful gifts, including a number of cheques. On their return they will reside in Syracuse.

Bible Is Presented To Berwick Church

An interesting service was held in the United church, Berwick, on Sunday afternoon when the Ladies' Association of the Berwick Church presented to the church a volume of the Bible for pulpit use and two suitable offering plates. Mrs. Lewis Hutt, president of the association, made the presentation and was assisted by the secretary, Mrs. George Pollock. The elders, Harry Nugent, Alfred Casselman, Walter Whitteker and Lawrence Mongomery, received the gifts on behalf of the congregation and Harry Nugent expressed the appreciation of the officials and thanked the ladies for their thoughtfulness. An appropriately arranged dedication service followed, after which the pastor, Rev. G. N. Maxwell, B. A., B. D., recently inducted minister of the Finch charge, preached on the importance of the Bible, its place and influence

Embrun Lad Loses Leg Following Accidental Shot

Albert Laplante, 13-year-old son of Wilfred Laplante, of Embrun, Ont., had his right leg amputated below the hip Tuesday night at the Ottawa General Hospital, by Dr. J. Lorenzo Lamy, following wounds received in the right hip when a shotgun accidentally went off.

From information available the shotgun had been left on a table in his home when the unfortunate boy's younger brother seized it in such a manner that its contents were discharged in the boy's hip.

The accident occurred at about four o'clock in the afternoon and was discovered by the father who was attracted by his son's outcries. He did what he could to stanch the flow of blood by the application of first aid measures and about nine o'clock Tuesday night he was conveyed to the Ottawa General Hospital.

Dr. Lamy, after a survey of the boy's injuries, decided that amputation of the right leg was imperative, and accordingly performed the operation. The boy's condition was critical as he was suffering greatly from loss of blood.

Bill Tate Won Challenge Cup Brother In Third Place

Chesterville's fleet-footed boys, Bill and Allan Tate made a very fine showing on Monday at the Legion Track Meet in Cornwall when Bill won the Challenge cup in the United Counties mile race which he will hold for a year, receiving a replica of the large cup for his own. In the quarter mile open, Bill finished in second place, his trophy being a small silver cup. As a member of the Ottawa boys' relay team which won second place Bill received a medal. In the mile Challenge Cup race Allan held third place for which he received a medal.

Bowling Club Notes

Three rinks had a most enjoyable time at Winchester last week when they were guests of that club in friendly games along with a couple of rinks from Iroquois. After the games refreshments were served.

Saturday evening the local club entertained three rinks from the New Edinburgh club of Ottawa, in a friendly match when three games of eight ends each were played, resulting in the home rinks bing a few points up on the play.

The New Edinburgh rinks were as follows: H. Lee, Barnes, R. Askwith and M. Askwith, skip; J. Armstrong, George Robb, Beck and J. MacKenzie, skip; M. Yensen, J. Berton, William Cattroll and R. Hood, skip.

An invitation from the Burgh club to a return game was extended, and accepted by the Chesterville club, which will be arranged within a short time.

Monday a rink made up of Lacey, Dixon, Hutt, Hanna, skip, took part in the Eastern Association tournament in Ottawa and while not winning premier honours made a very good showing in being the runners-up in the Eastern after being eliminated in the Dominion in their third game by one point by Asseltine, of Kingston. In the Eastern they won three games and were again defeated by the same Kingston rink, which had also been relegated to the Eastern, the winners of which received silverware, the locals getting solid leather bags as their share at the termination of the play about two o'clock Tuesday morning.

Tuesday evening on the local greens excitement ran high in last week's postponed trophy night play when Hanna skipping Bernice Wood, Art. Robertson and Sam Peake carried off the prize.

The regular trophy play to-night as usual.

Dr. T. B. McCorkindale Accepts Port Dover Call

Dr. T. B. McCorkindale, minister of the Levis, P.Q., Presbyterian church, is leaving his pastorate on the south shore to accept a unanimous call to the Presbyterian church at Port Dover, Ontario, after eight and a half years of service. The call was sustained through the Presbytery of Hamilton. Dr. McCorkindale's induction in his new parish took place on Tuesday, July 29th, following his release being granted by the church authorities of the Quebec district.

Crew Aboard Dirigible Had Good Fare

If faces were a little pinched and drawn among the 44 travellers who disembarked from the R–100 after the 79-hour flight from far off Cardington, England, it was fatigue and not because belts were slack. It was a robust menu, fit for a hungry man, that faced the diners in their spacious dining salon high in the centre of the big dirigible framework.

Four meals a day was the fare, not fancy but substantial. The menu:

Breakfast: Bacon, milk, tea and sugar, or—sardines, milk, tea and sugar.

Dinner: Fresh meat, vegetables, bread or biscuit, or—preserved meat, tinned fruits, cheese, bread or biscuits.

Tea: Bread, jam, tea, milk and sugar or—biscuits, dried fruit, tea, milk and sugar.

Supper: Bread, cheese, cocoa, milk and sugar, or—bread or biscuits, preserved meat, cocoa, milk and sugar.

Cigarettes were a forbidden delicacy.

ABDOMINAL PAIN

The human body is provided with protective forces which are called into action when the need arises. Pain in itself is not protective; it is, however, a danger signal which warns and so, indirectly, it protects.

As long as conditions in the abdomen are nomal, we are unconscious of the movements of the bowel which propel the contents of the intestine. When an abnormal condition occurs, if any part becomes diseased, there is a change in the movement of the intestine.

If the condition becomes acute, the peristasis, as the movements are called, is stopped. This is nature's first step toward protection. The part is put at rest. Not only are the intestines put at rest, but the abdominal muscles are contracted, and so a rigid wall is made which further protects by keeping the parts motionless.

The next thing which happens is the sensation of pain; the danger signal flashes, and the individual is thus warned that something is wrong.

The majority of persons who have a pain in the abdomen say they have a stomach ache, and they generally blame something they have eaten. Believing this to be the case, they naturally conclude that the proper thing to do is to take some medicine which will act as a purgative and enable them to get rid of the offending food.

If a laxative is taken, it simply means that we are doing our best to set in motion the intestines which nature has put at rest for our protection. It means that we disregard the danger signal of pain whereby nature indicates what is the safe course for us to take.

It is true that many persons with abdominal pain have taken a laxative without serious or apparently harmful results, but it is equally true that many persons have lost their lives because they took a laxative to relieve abdominal pain.

If the pain has been caused by an inflamed appendix, the movements of the intestines set up by the laxative may cause the appendix to rupture and spread its contents, which results in peritonitis. If the pain is due to a ruptured ulcer or to an inflammation of any of the abdominal organs, movement of the intestine increases over and over the chances of the development of serious and fatal conditions.

When abdominal pain occurs, it is well to recognize that it should not be dealt with by stimulating the movement of the intestines which nature has put at rest as a means of protection.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Inspection of Farm Insurance Risks

"The constructive solution regarding the insuring of farm buildings against fire loss is an inspection carried on by authority of county or township such as is carried on in the City of Kingston by Fire Chief James Armstrong," said J. B. Sampson, insurance broker, in discussing recently the refusal of many companies to insure farm buildings against fire. Mr. Sampson stated that although insurance on farm buildings was so poor a risk that it was being refused, there was nothing very new in this policy although the rules were being more strictly enforced.

He quoted a recent case in the township of a farm valued at $6,000 with a $5,000 mortgage against it. The buildings, he said, were dilapidated, had not been renovated or painted and conditions were such as to make them absolutely uninsurable. This, however, Mr. Sampson stated, was not indicative of all cases of fire insurance on farm buildings.

Where the farm buildings were solidly constructed, brick or stone preferably, were kept clean and free from fire hazards, the owner did not have to ask twice for fire insurance. Mr. Sampson admitted that many farm buildings were risks upon which companies were bound to lose if they insured them. That, however, did not apply to owners who were known and who kept their buildings just as city dwellers and other buildings are required to be kept by municipal law.

Buttermilk Lubrication

Motorists of to-day with automobiles very nearly trouble-free miss the grief and thrills which were part and parcel of driving during the earlier years of the industry. Thomas Tomlin, a salesman at Birmingham, Alabama, comes forward with a first class reminiscence to illustrate the point. Back in 1912, he found himself in a perplexing predicament. He was driving in the deep ruts of a rough road, with the bottom of the crankcase scraping on the ground when the drain plug of the crankcase was knocked out and he lost all his lubricating oil. There were no service stations on the road and no telephones. Tomlin walked to the nearest farmhouse. The farmer had no oil, but just at the moment he happened to be churning. Tomlin bought six quarts of the buttermilk, plugged up the crankcase drain, and successfully drove 30 miles to Birmingham with the churned milk functioning as a lubricant. This was probably the first and only time that an automobile engine has been oiled with the product of the dairy.

Pre-Nuptial Shower

On Monday evening, August 4th, about one hundred and eighty friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. Fred S. McMillan to honour their eldest daughter, Luvia, with a miscellaneous shower prior to her approaching marriage. A very pleasant evening was spent in games and social intercourse. At eleven o'clock the gathering was called to order and the following address read by Miss Hilda Barkley:

Dear Luvia,—

We have gathered here this evening in order to show you our regards on the eve of your approaching marriage. You have grown up in our midst, so we are all acquainted with every phase of your character.

We, who have been fortunate in being your playmates, and we, who have been associated with you in public and high school, have many pleasant memories of you which shall never be forgotten.

In taking upon yourself the calling of school teaching you have carried out the task with pleasantness and with such efficiency that your work shall live long after you.

Your work as a teacher has given you an insight and training which we hope will be very useful to you in the years to come and will aid you to guide your matrimonial boat on the seas of life.

As a worker in our church you have carried out more than your share of your allotted work. You have been an enthusiastic member and teacher in our Sunday School. It is in our Young People's Society where you will be especially missed because it will be hard to find another to carry on the work as you have.

In our social functions your hand, talent, and time was always at our command.

Although we know we shall always be welcomed in this most hospitable home, nevertheless, one shall be missing who has endeared herself to one and all.

We relinquish our hold on you with gladness not sorrow, for we know that the step that you are about to take may bring hardships but with them will come great happiness.

To further substantiate what we have already said, we present you with these mementoes with our best wishes.

May God's blessing go with them for a future full of health, happiness, and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of those present: Hilda Barkley, Audrey Carr, Jean Armstong, Evelyn Lane.

Miss McMillan ,in her usual pleasing manner, replied, thanking all for their presence, their good wishes and their beautiful gifts, and inviting all to visit her in her new home. All joined in singing "For She's A Jolly Good Fellow."

The Elma Orchesta furnished music while the dainty lunch was being served.

One Good Recipe Makes A Cook Famous

Much of the appeal of a meal lies in change from the usual. Combined with a simple meal which embraces cold meat and a salad and a dessert with iced tea or coffee, the frozen desserts prove most refreshing. While raspberries are in season the following recipe will be found appetizing.

RASPBERRY MOUSSE

1 cupful raspberry juice
1 cupful of sugar
½ tablespoon of gelatine
2 tablespoons of cold water
1 cupful of whipping cream
3 tablespoons confectioner's sugar

Heat raspberry juice and sugar. Soften the gelatine in cold water and dissolve in the hot liquid. Cool the mixture until it begins to thicken and fold in the cream which has been whipped until stiff and sweetened with the confectioners' sugar. Turn into a mold, pack in ice and salt and let stand for at least three hours. If canned raspberries are used in this recipe less sugar will be required. Serves six.

Visitor: "You always do as your mother tells you, don't you?"

Johnny: "Yes, and so does papa."

Seven Ottawa People Injured North of Morrisburg

Seven people were injured, one seriously, about 7.15 Monday evening when the car in which they were driving, turned over in the ditch about three miles north of Morrisburg.

The injured are:

Mrs. Charles O'Neill, 260 Queen street. Ottawa, who is suffering from a fractured nose, and a deep gash on her head which required eight stitches to close.

Doris O'Neill, daughter of Mrs. Charles O'Neill, who was unconscious from severe abrasions about the head and body.

Marjorie O'Neill, also daughter of Mrs. Charles O'Neill; Tony Bell, 182 Faraday street, and Evelyn Sarazin, 447½ Wellington street, all suffered from shock.

According to relatives the party had been to Cornwall for the Civic Holiday and were returning to Ottawa when the accident happened. Charles O'Neill said he had no idea what had caused the accident but was under the impression that something happened to cause Mrs. Gibson to lose control of the car.

All the party were able to return to Ottawa with the exception of Mrs. O'Neill and her daughter, Doris, who were taken to a nearby house.

Why Pullets Pay

eral principle that pullets pay better than hens as egg producers, and the reason for this is readily apparent in figures reported by poultry experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Mr. F. C. Elford, the Dominion Poultry Husbandman, is authority for the statement that it takes the first sixty eggs a hen lays to pay the cost of its keep, and any hen that only lays sixty eggs is nothing more than a bill of expense. The application of this observation is better appreciated when in the light of official records of egg laying contests which show that the present average annual production of selected layers is only 120 eggs in the pullet year. Throughout farm flocks generally there are still far too many birds kept whose egg laying ability is quite unknown and entirely a matter of guess work.

Why keep old hens? Mr. Elford's records show that the average profit over cost of feeding for a hen is $1.66 a year, while the corresponding figure for the pullet is $3.35 a year, or put in another way, the average cost of producing a dozen eggs through pullets is 20 cents, while through hens the cost is 35 cents.

But even more interesting is the detailed comparison of returns from pullets and hens over a period of years which is afforded by studies recently completed at the Lennoxville Experimental Station. Over a period of ten years, the pullet flock averaging 141 birds at a cost of $2.42 per bird to produce an average of 169 eggs per bird, which selling at the average price of 50 cents per dozen gave a net profit over cost of feed of $4.56. In contrast with this is the production statement over a period of eight years from an average flock of 78 hens. It cost $2.15 a year average to feed the hens who gave an egg production of 109 eggs per bird, which, selling at the average price per dozen of 50 cents produced an average profit over cost of feeding amounting to $2.15. In other words, the pullet flock produced twice as much profit as did the old hens.

This suggested a very interesting point, when is a hen old? The poultry experts find that with the first of each succeeding moult the egg producing ability of the hen shows a marked decline. This is particularly true with respect to the heavier breed types, the White Leghorn being the only exception to the general rule. During the pullet, or first lay, year the hen is at her best. After the pullet year she is more valuable as breeding stock than as an egg producing proposition, and is better out of the flock than in it.

Killers at Steering Wheel

Chicago News.—Of 2,017 fatal motor accidents in Illinois last year, 591 are classed by the State Health Department as having been due to the exercise of poor judgment. One hundred and ninety-nine of those cases were collisions between motor cars and railroad trains and 72 were collisions with electric trains. Dr. Hall shows that the judgment of motorists when instantaneous action is necessary to prevent mishaps is seriously hampered by defects of signt or hearing and in lung, heart and kidney action, and that many persons suffer from these defects without knowing it. Of 174 persons examined in Urbana applying for permission to drive cars belonging to the University of Illinois, one in seven needed glasses and was unaware of that need, several required changes in glasses and some had such serious defects of vision that it would never be safe for them to operate cars. Yet in Ontario any of those persons, to say nothing of the reckless joy-riders, the dipsomaniac or the lunatic at large, is free to drive a car when and where he will.

The Worm Turns

Up to date there is no organized Jaywalkers' Association, but in Old London there is actualy a Pedestrians' Association, the purpose of which is to encourage legislation for the protection of pedestrians. The association advocates 30 miles an hour as the maximum speed limit for motor cars.

Creatore Returns With Finer Band Than Ever

Famous maestro and His All-Star Group of Musicians and other Great Attractions for C.C.E.

On the head of Maestro Guiseppe Creatore, the famous band master, the hand of Father Time has laid itself lightly. For a quarter of a century this great musician has been touring the United States and Canada with his wonderful band and each year he continues to grow in popularity and attract larger audiences as age's milstones are passed. Creatore knows nothing of age. Time to him is just a period with something to do and do it well. It therefore is a source of gratification to music lovers to learn that the directors of the Ottawa Exhibition have arranged for a return engagement and that he and his band will be a feature for exhibition week, August 18th to 23rd.

People go to see and hear Creatore. First of all, he gives a most artistic and novel program. Next he conducts in a manner that is bound to attract attention. He promises the strongest band he has ever brought here with each man a musician of the finest calibre. Lovers of singing will be more than pleased to know that with the band will be that popular lyric soprano, Pauline Talma, in a series of songs ranging from the most difficult of operatic arias to simple melodies and folk songs. Miss Talma is today the most popular singer ever to travel with a band organization. She was discovered by Mastro Creatore four years ago while singing in a motion picture theatre in Los Angeles. After hearing her sing some operatic songs in which her voice came out sweet, pure and clear over the audience, Maestro Creatore immediately signed the young lady for a tour. She made such a fine impression at the very beginning and critics immediately took to her style that to-day she has become a real attraction. During a stay in New York, practically every well known critic came to see her. Robert Speare, writing in the Morning Telegraph, puts forth the following lines: "The bill of surprises and no mistake. This Creatore, rampant and vigorous as ever, introduced a young soprano, Pauline Talma. It is a voice of extreme purity, power, range and tenderness, one in a thousand. The singing of this young woman, a lovely girl, would make a visit worth while for any lover of lyric excellence."

With Creatore also comes Mary Brubaker, harpist, a brilliant artist who plays with vigour and assurance and her numbers have musical character and charm. Creatore, his band which includes a number of instrumental soloists, Miss Talma and Miss Brubaker, will be heard twice each day during exhibition week.

Best in 47 Years.

Many other stellar factors will combine to realize the hope of the directors to make the 1930 exhibition the best in the 47 years of the Central Canada Exhibition Association. These include the Winter Garden Revue, a spectacular music and dance production with pretty girls, colour, rythm, harmony; exhibitions by Siskin 'planes secured through the minister of national defence; aerobatics and formation flying arranged through the Ottawa Flying Club; an unusually strong bill of outdoor vaudeville attractions, a new midway, horse races, acquatic, field, and track sports, automobile show, pure food show, live stock and poultry, child wefare demonstrations, baby show, horticultural and other displays.

This year there will be an outstanding feature provided by the Ontario government. This will consist of all kinds of wild animals, birds ,and live fish, shown with elaborate reproductions of their natural habitat. Then, too, there will be a remarkable showing of gold and tropical fish by Anson Pratt, of Ottawa, who will arrange a display that has not been eclipsed in Canada.

Each Town Talks About

Its leading citizen. He leads everything from the Sunday School picnic to the annual banquet of the Eastern Star.

Its honest man. His word is as good as his bond. Two generations of little boys have had him pointed out as a model for their future years.

Its public scold. There is more bite in her tongue than there was to the dog that went mad on Main Street several years ago. Arouse her ire and you may as well go on your vacation.

Its man or woman who can prove positively that no other town in the province is as bad morally.

Its bad boy and its wicked girl; its horrible example; its tightwad; its know-it-all; its atheist, and its town arguer.

Probably we need these men and women to make our town a natural one.

The Old Gardener Says:

It is not advisable to wait until late autumn before transplanting delphiniums. They give best results when moved in late summer. New plants are readily grown from seed if the seed is fresh. Delphiniums do not resent a certain amount of shade from the midday sun, but should not be grown actually under or too close to trees. Established plants will persist for several years, but it is wise to keep a new lot coming on to provide for future needs. When the plants are growing in hot, sandy soil it is advisable to apply a mulch of well decayed leaf-mold or peat-moss, or some form of humus to keep the ground cool and moist.

This Is Canning Year

By Etta Bitta Pye.

This is by all means a canning year. When I say canning I refer not only to canning proper but to preserving, conserving, pickling, and jelly making.

In spite of the fact that millions of cans and bottles of excellent delicacies will be distributed by commercial canners, everything points to an exceptionally large year of good old-fashioned canning in the home.

Never before have we been so enthusiastice over the value of fruits and vegetables in the diet. For this reason alone we should be anxious to prepare a goodly quantity for winter consumption.

Fortunately, sugar is selling at as low a price as we have known since before the war, so that this particular ingredient does not need to cause us any financial worry. Incidentally, few appreciate the real value of the sugar used in canning and preserving. Not only does it bring out the flavour of the fruits and vegetables, but it furnishes quick-energy food during the winter months.

See to it that you can some beans, beets, corn, and peas this year as well as your usual amount of berries and fruits.

1. Clean the vegetabes and pare if necessary.
2. parboil or pre-cook as directed in the recipe.
3. Pack in sterilized jars. Those with glass tops and clamps are best.
4. Add salt and sugar, and hot water to fill jars.
5. Put new rubber rings in place; adjust tops but do not close them quite tight.
6. Place in steam pressure cooker and sterilize as long as specified in the recipe.
7. Remove from canner and seal tightly at once. Place where a draft will not strike them while cooling.

Here are two excellent recipes for canning beets and corn:

Canned Beets.

Use only young tender beets. Cut off the leaves but leave about 3 inches of the stem and all the root in order to prevent bleeding. Boil or steam 15 minutes. Remove skins and pack into hot jars. Cover with boiling water water and add 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon sugar to each quart jar. Sterilize immediately for 40 minutes at 10 pounds pressure.

Canned Corn.

Remove husks and silk and cut from the cob. Pour on boiling water to cover and bring to a boil. Pack loosely in jars and add 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar to each quart. Sterilize at once for 80 minutes at 15 pounds pressure.

Green Duck Profits

Few farmers appreciate the cash profit value of "green ducks." The poultry division of the Dominion Experimental Farms is authority for the statement that green ducks can be marketed at a profit of around $1.38 each at the age of ten weeks.

The Pekin ducks, experimental work shows, gain a little more rapidly in weight than do ducklings of other breeds. The term "green duck" denotes ducklings ten weeks old. With proper feeding young ducklings gain rapidly in weight, and when about ten weeks old will weigh around six pounds. After the tenth week feathers change and weight increase i s retarded.

In raising green ducks for market, frequent feeding promotes rapid growth. When very young, ducklings shoud be fed six times a day until they are two to three weeks old and after that they should be fed five times a day until ready for market.

The feed used for growing ducklings at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, is made up of equal parts of bran, shorts, and cornmeal with about 10 per cent beef meal added. A little charcoal, about 1 per cent, is recommended and the mash should be moistened sufficiently with water to make the meal stick together. It should not be made sticky or sloppy. When the mash is fed it should be sprinkled over with coarse sand, providing grit which aids digestion, and as much as the ducklings will clean up should be given at each feeding. After the ducklings are four or five days old some green food, such as freshly-cut clover or alfalfa chopped fine, shoud be given, starting with a small amount and gradually increasing until the mash contains about one-fifth green food.

When the ducklings are about six weeks old food should be gradually eliminated and with the seventh week the mash should be changed to increase its fattening properties. A fattening mash used at Ottawa is 50 pounds cornmeal, 40 pounds shorts, 15 pounds beef meal, sprinkled with coarse sand.

Don't Starve The Teeth

Teeth have to be built out of foods that are rich in phosphorus and calcium. Many children take into adult life teeth that are defective, unfit for the job that nature intended. Shredded Wheat with milk helps develop sound teeth, good muscles and good bones. It is rich in the bone-making salts. The crisp, crunchy shreds make chewing necessary and that develops healthy gums and good digestion.

The Morning After The Day Before

Regina Leader.—First, we threw away a pamphlet showing that the dairy industry had not been ruined, of which we had made some use during the campaign. It looked important last week but this week we suppose a lot of farmers and farmers' wives are still milking cows and putting the milk into a can instead of a typewriter. Which is just as well for the country.

We also ordered to be fyled a booklet that had a picture of Mr. Mackenzie King on the cover. It may come up useful four years from now if Mr. King and ourselves are still in working order. We also came across a picture of Mr. Bennett that had been sent in by an admirer of the gentleman from Calgary and that bore a note "Take a look at the next Premier of Canada." Well, at the time of writing we do not know whether our correspondent is right or wrong. If he were right we commend him for his good judgment; if wrong, we forgive him his sins. We also threw away a large bundle of editorial pages from the Montreal Gazette that we had been saving up to provide campaign material for our columns. Some of we tried to turn against the Tories; other items we did not get around to. It looks rather flat just now.

We also heaved overboard a couple of pages from The Ottawa Journal that had material that we once thought might be commented upon but that to-day is no doubt forgotten even by the man who wrote it. We have also ditched large chunks that we had clipped from the Manitoba Free Press and the Saskatchewan Star-Phoenix.

If the campaign had gone on long enough we might have got around to using this material but our newspaper experience is teaching us slowly that during election other things have to get into the paper besides politics and that if you keep on raising the size of the paper to get in all the politics you are liable to have a head-on collision with the bailiff. Business managers are sometimes slightly alarmed about how to get enough money to pay all the bills the editorial cheerfully incurs during an election campaign. Business managers are, of course, wrong in allowing the matter of paying bills to get in the way of a great idealism, but there they are and they have to be reckoned with, to some degree at least.

We have just thrown away some election poetry in which "thrumming" was made to rhyme with "Dunning" and "when it" to harmonize with "Bennett" and offer no apologies for getting this stuff out of sight with the least possible delay. We now think that we have completely rid the place of election poetry. A copy of the Mail and Empire has just gone overboard as it was about to give us a headache but a copy of our local contemporary has been ordered fyled in the event that on some later occasion it should attempt to reprove sin.

Three letters that were without signatures and that dealt with the now-famous Round Lake Sunday picnic at which, according to report, certain cabinet ministers were going to dance to the music of a Bohemian band and then walk on the waters of the lake are now lying on the floor because they missed the waste paper basket at which they were aimed. One half-used election cigar has just been removed from the window sill. It was not a good cigar. Copies of Hansard from which we had sought confusion for our enemies have been ordered back to the library where they may rest in peace, forgotten.

All that is left before us now are a couple of spikes containing some copy for the composing room—clippings about tree-sitting in the U. S. A. and a couple of editorials about the possibility of Christian Reunion and the Latest News from Egypt. Someone may read them the day after the election. At any rate they will help fill the columns.

We also have on hand one unsigned letter in which the editor of the Leader-Post is referred to as a skunk. We have looked it over twice, thinking perhaps, that there might be a grain of comfort somewhere, that he might have written "a refined skunk" or "a confirmed skunk," but, alas, there is no trace of a softening adjective. We now drop this letter in the waste paper basket, expressing admiration for the virile ,forceful style of the writer and forgiveness of his heat. We do this because when an election is over it is necessary to forget much, to forgive much and to get back to the job of living and making a living.

Which advice we recommend to all others on this 29th day of July.

Crawling Under Bed Just As Dangerous

"No more dangerous than crawling under a bed," was the casual statement of a leading officer of the British dirigible R-100, to the Canadian Press, referring to reports of great difficulty experienced by the crew in repairing the stabilizing fin damaged off Father Point, Que., during stormy weather Thursday.

"Reports have been much exaggerated," he said.

He asked that his name be withheld as he, like other members of the ship's crew, was sworn to secrecy regarding the R-100's performance during the flight.

"The repairs were made from the inside of the envelope. The fin is fairly thick," he continued, "and at its very thinnest point is four inches thick, wide enough for a man's arm.

"The repairs were effected by a man lying across the girders inside the envelope, and stretching to reach the highest point of the torn fabric.

"There was nothing very difficult about it.

"I'm sorry I cannot tell you more about, but there really isn't anything more to say.

"The crew made a fine job of the temporary repairs," he said.

"Too late; I've married her."

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

F. C. Patterson, district agricultural representative at Simcoe, reports Norfolk County's apple crop at two-thirds that of last year, with the quality apparently good. The new $100,000 cold storage plant at Simcoe will be finished shortly and in readiness to take care of the apple crop.

Labour Cost Important.

It is said that the cost of feed is the most important item in the cost of producing milk. It will amount to about one-half of the total costs. Labour, however, is a strong second. According to numerous surveys on this continent, the average cost of labour involved in the production of 100 pounds of milk will constitute about 25 per cent of the selling price. The same survey indicates that the labour per cow ranges from 150 to 170 hours. The larger the herd the less labour per cow is a very general rule.

The Dairy Herd in August.

August is the hardest month of the year for the dairy herds. "If milk production can be maintained during this month little concern need be felt about maintenance of the milk flow during the balance of the season," declares one authority who has developed several high record cows. For meeting the difficulties of this trying month, he suggests: Control of flies, protection from the hot sun, ample supply of cool water, and the use of a succulent feed to supplement the dried-out pasturage. The first of these three measures can be best secured by the use of a suitable spray. The second may be provided by means of shade trees in the pasture under which the cows may feed and rest out of the sun. Another method is to stable the cows during the day and let them pasture at night. Shading and screening the windows provides added coolness in the barn and also helps to control the flies. For the third, a succulent roughage may be fed as a supplement to pasturage. Ensilage or corn give very good results.

Weekly Crop Report.

Agricultural representatives of the province have reported during the past week that cutting of wheat is general throughout Ontario. In Algoma prospects are for a heavy yield, while in Dufferin premature ripening indicates that the crop will be smaller than usual. All prospects are excellent for a fine yield of grain in Frontenac, while in Huron wheat is expected to yield 35 to 40 bushels to the acre. Barley and oats and fall wheat have all been cut in Haldimand. Ideal weather prevailed for the hay harvest in Leeds and farmers there are obtaining $22 per ton for milk. Heavy rains in Lennox and Addington resulted in an abundance of pasture and live stock is doing exceptionally well. In Lincoln about 25 bushels per acre is said to be the fall wheat yield. Absence of rain has caused Middlesex pastures to dry up and farmers there may have to find some other source of food. Oats are not expected to live up to the early expectations in Oxford on account of too early maturity, while rain is hoped for in Perth. Bumper crops of grain are expected in Renfrew, while in South Simcoe, potatoes are not as promising as hoped. Welland reports early purchases on the market and a possible heavy grape crop.

Decrease in Alsike.

In 1929 over 2,000,000 pounds of alsike seed were sown in Haldimand County, but this year scarcely a field of alsike can be seen. It was too dry to get a catch last year. Red clover has also suffered. The growing of small seeds is important and there are no less than eleven cleaning plants within the county. Bluegrass, of which 1,000,000 pounds were produced last year, is mostly exported. It comes with the alsike or the year following and may yield around 200 lbs. to the acre.

Fertilizer Experiments.

Thirty-two field experiments of various kinds are being conducted in Wellington this summer under the Soil and Crop Improvement Association. Two fields of soy beans and a number of table turnip experiments are being carried out. The effects of fertilizer on spring grain are being studied by Prof. H. G. Bell and Mr. J. Bryden of the O A. C. On one farm a mixture of oats and barley was sown in two strips, one-half acre each. The first had been given an application of 0-14-6 fertilized and the other 3-10-5, in both cases 250 pounds to the acre. The fertilized oats and barley were decidedly stronger in growth and taller than the unfertilized portions of the fields. At harvest time equal representative areas of these plots will be carefully harvested and yields compared. Whether or not it will pay to use nitrogen will be gathered from a comparison of the results of the two fertilizers.

Sow Thistle Spreading.

That the perennial sow thistle, recognized as the world's worst weed, is spreading at an alarming rate in some points of Ontario is the statement of A. R. G. Smith, of New Hamburg, who, as district weed inspector, advises farmers to be on their guard. Mr. Smith reports that many fields sown to spring grain in districts where the weed was hitherto comparatively unknown, are at present a source of worry to farmers. He points out: "If a perennial sow thistle plant comes to bloom it will mature its seeds unless the plant is burned. Farmers should not thresh their grain outside because the blooms will spread over adjoining areas, each seed having a 'parachute bloom' which will carry for miles and stay up in the air for many hours." He advises farmers to cultivate, gang plough or plough immediately after harvest on fields that are not seeded down. It is important to keep sow thistle from blooming or going to seed wherever possible. More than 850 weed inspectors are now at work in Ontario and every farmer should make a point to report the presence of this weed to the nearest representative.

Canada to the Fore.

The fourth World's Poultry Congress, which has been in session at the Crystal Palace, London, England, holds a special interest for Canadians, especially poultrymen. This country's participation takes the form of a national exhibit, a live stock exhibit, a commercial exhibit, and a substantial contribution from Canadians in the form of papers read at the Congress. The keynote of Canada's National Exhibit is the economic worth of Canadian poultry for breeding stock. This is graphically presented in a novel and impressive exhibit which is in every sense a masterpiece of exhibition art.

Better Bull Areas.

At the close of last year the following counties had, by -by-law of the county council, proclaimed themselves Better Bull Areas: Bruce, Perth, Oxford, Wellington and Peel. In order that this by-law may be passed it is necessary that at least eighty per cent of the bulls maintained within the county are purebred. The work has been slow but the events accruing are such that public sentiment is behind the movement.

THE LAST FIGURE

"My, but it's blustery out," exclaimed Susanna Bryer. She breathlessly shut the storm door behind her and unwound the peacock-blue scarf that gave such piquant relief to her little, pointed face. "This house smells spicy, I'll say. I mean," she corrected herself, laughing a little, "there's a fragrant aroma about your domicile, ma'am, that is most entrancing. There you see, I'm like Hosea Biglow: I ken talk long-tailed ef I please."

"If you'd please oftener," responded her mother with fond severity, "it might get to be more of a habit with you. 'Twas all right for you to be kind of childish when you were Rosemary's assistant at the library, but now if you're going to be librarian—" She paused anxiously.

Susanna's face clouded. "It doesn't look much that way,' 'she remarked gloomily. "Rosemary resigned a month ago, and she's been off duty altogether for the last week, and Judge Brice has been in once or twice, and Mr. Fairbanks stopped in to-day after a book for his wife. Goodness, just as soon as an author writes his third book Mr. Fairbanks starts to read the first; I guess she thinks, if the publiccan stand him so long, he must be all right to put her time on. Anyway he was in—Mr. Fairbanks—and as nice as you please, but he did not say a word about the committee's plans. Oh, herro, grandad!" She peered into the living room. "Didn't see you! Have you come over to stay!"

Grandad Blair's refusal to spend all of his time with either one or even with both of his children was a family joke. He had a comfortable, well-kept house of his own, with continually blooming geraniums in the windows, and with cheerful sunny rooms that a spinster niece presided over. Occasionally he spent a few days with Alberta, Susanna's mother. When he wished to get away from town he hitched up the horses and drove out to the farm and stayed a while with Tom and his family.

"Get the cream of ye now," he chuckled. "Always company I be. Always entitled to preserves and new cookies," He laughed now at Susanna's familiar greeting. "Not yet," he told her tranquilly. "Well, Susanna, I s'pose you're going to be head of your institution down there, now that Rosemary's getting through."

Susanna shook her head. "I was just telling mother it doesn't look that way. Rosemary's been gone a week now, and none of the board has said anything to me. That's what comes of trying to make something of yourself in the town where you were born and raised." Her usually sunny face was unsmiling. "If I'd gone up to Boston as Rosemary did and taken a library course— It isn't that I'm too young, you know. Rosemary isn't more than a year or two older than I am. But—"

"Pretty competent, be ye?" inquired granddad gently. He was so bland about it that Susanna laughed.

"O granddad, you'd make me laugh if I were leaving the library altogether. Yes, I am competent, and I ought to be too. I've had just the same thing as a library course and lots of practical experience. Rosemary's been a brick. From the first minute when I begged to go in and help her just for the love of the books and before they voted me any salary at all she began teaching me. And it wasn't in any catch-as-catch-can fashion; she taught me all about the work as sympathetically as if she'd been planning to have me take her place. And I can do it. or I could if I had the chance. But I'll bet," she concluded inelegantly, "just because I was born in this town and went to school here, and Judge Brice has known me ever since the day he picked me down off the cherry tree when I got stuck thee, that he and Mr. Fairbanks and the rest of 'em think I don't know the Duchess from Shakespear. Mother, if I have to wait till supper for one of those cookies I'll—" With a luxurious sigh she bit into one of the rich brown disks. Mother was not to suspect. she thought fondly. how much the library worried her. Granddad sat figuring at the old walnut secretary desk. Presently he began to stir restively.

"Drat this figuring anyway," he muttered. "I declare I'd better keep my money under a brick on the hearth even if it don't earn me a cent than spend my last days getting all het up figuring interest. Sanna, you come here and look at this thing, will ye, and see what I've done?"

Susanna chuckled. Grandad was always funny, but he was funniest of all when he was petulant. His cheerful, rosy face with its crown of white hair contrasted so oddly with hi cross, old-man tone. She bent over the page of neat figures.

"I've got it all reckoned out," granddad told her defensively. "I done it by the rules too, just as I always do. But drat the thing, Sanna, I ain't got it right. Burt Fletcher owes me a lot more'n nine hundred and fourteen dollars. I know he does. Why, he ain't but two sizable payments, and that mortgage was for twenty-four hundred. And here I can't make it but nine hundred and fourteen. I must've made some mistake."

Susanna interrupted him with a shout of laughter. "I should say you had, granddad. Why, see here—"

"The old man peered down at the page. "Sho," he murmured deprecatingly. "Found it, have ye? Multiplied, I s'pose, when I'd ought to have subtracted, or something about like that."

Susanna ment off into another gale of laughter. "No," she answered as soon as she caught her breath, "you didn't make such an intelligent mistake as that, granddad. Mother, come here; it's too good to keep to myself. He's added all right and multiplied all right and done everything all right—"

"Of course it isn't. But it's all right as far as you've gone; it's all right, granddad, only you haven't finished. You haven't brought down the last figure! See this 'one'? There! One thousand, nine hundred and fourteen. Isn't that right?"

"Cricky," commented granddad explosively, "course it's right. Well! Well! There it was, all that work done on it and done right too. And there I was complaining about the answer," he went on, placidly ignoring Susanna and addressing himself; "no matter how right you was you could't expect to get it until you'd put down the last figure."

Susanna stared at him. A flush crept slowly over her cheeks, and doubt came into her eyes. "Granddad," she said sternly.

Granddad looked up and met her gaze innocently. "What is it, Sanna?"

"Was that a real example? Or did you just make it up?"

His eyes widened. "Real enough, I guess." he chuckled. "Bet Burt Fletcher'd be glad enough if I was always such a ninny at figuring." His faded blue eyes never wavered from his granddaughter's. After a moment he put out his hand and patted her arm. "Hate to see an example that's all done right get stuck 'cause some one don't put down the last figure," he said kindly. "Coming, Alberta! My, it's nice to be company; always cookies and preserves, ain't there, Sanna?"

Suddenly Sanna's brief anger faded. He was such a dear, and so kind, and such a shrewd teacher. She put her hand quickly through his arm.

"I do mind, granddad," she whispered a little brokenly. "I don't want mother to know how much it means to me, but I don't care if you do. I really am as competent now as Rosemary, and there isn't any reason why I shouldn't have her place. I can't think now of any figure I can put down, but I'll think it over, granddad—and thank you."

His hand closed over hers. "You're a good sport, Sanna. It's a kind of a Blair trait. You think it over, and something'll come to ye I guess. You're competent—" He paused "But maybe you haven't said so."

It rained all the next day, drenching, flooding sheets of rain, and Susanna had the library virtually to herself. But it was a busy day nevertheless, for she was having a debate with herself.

"What's the use?" she demanded. "They know I'm here, and they know that I kInow perfectly well how to catalogue books, or I'm sure they wouldn't let me stay and do it."

"Maybe it won't be of any use," she retorted to herself, "but how can you know till you try it? Granddad's answer might have been right or it might have been wrong; he coudn't tell till he put down the last figure. And anyway, why don't you want to do it? Too shy?

"Of course not," declared Susanna indignantly; "but I've never talked to Judge Bruce; and he's such a silent, gruff-when-he-does-speak sort of man that I—I just hate to.

"What's that but shy?" she gibed herself. "You might as well get over it one time as another. What if Judge Bruce does remember you as wearing pigtails? You're not wearing pigtails now; so you might as well go and talk to him and show him that you're grown up.

"Very well," agreed Susanna. "I'll do it, and then maybe after that you'll stop bothering me. I'll talk to them all," she finished magnificently.

She went to the telephone. "Give me 645. Is that Judge Bruce's residence? May I speak to him, please? Judge Bruce, this is Susanna Bryer, Miss Rosemary Weston's assistant at the library. I wonder if you can give me a few moments of your time—to talk over a matter of business," she added desperately. Except to her own ears her voice was quite composed. "At seven? Thank you, Judge Bruce."

Doggedly, and with burning cheeks, she called the rest of the four members of the library committee and made similar requests, arranging matters so that she could see them all that evening.

At seven o'clock she was ringing the Judge's doorbell. The judge's wife greeted her kindly. "Come right in. The judge is expecting you, Susanna. How is your mother?"

"Very well, thank you, Mrs. Bruce," Susanna replied mechanically, but her thoughts ran swiftly. "That's it," she told herself forlornly; "it's because they all know me. Who wants to ask advice about books from a girl they saw in her gocart?"

"Right in here, dear." At the sound of Mrs. Bruce's tranquil voice she straightened herself. "The judge has sent for the other members of the committee. He thought probably you wanted to speak about your work at the library; so to save time he had them come over here."

Four of them, solid citizens who had watched her grow up and who regarded her as not yet fully grown! Why, oh, why, had she come? If they wanted her, they would have told her. They would think she was too forward.

"Anyway," declared Susanna sternly to herself, "granddad'll be glad I put down the last figure, even if I don't get the right solution." And she threw up her head gallantly, "with a real Blair gesture," granddad would have said, and walked into the judge's study.

"Good evening, gentlemen," she said. She was as composed and as formal as if it were her first visit to Meadville, and the judge had never seen her skirts an inch less than their present length.

"How do you do, my—how do you do, Miss Bryer." The judge rose and held out his hand.

"Er, nice evening, Susanna," boomed Mr. Fairbanks, clumsily extending his hand. Even old Mr. Willis, who was old enough to have sat in the presence of any woman, made acknowledgement of the pretty womanhood of Susanna Bryer.

Then Judge Bruce found her a chair. "I assumed," he remarked comfortably, "that you wished to talk about the library; so we are all here."

"Yes," agreed Susanna, "I did." She was amazed at her assurance—the assurance of desperation, she guessed. "I wished to say that I should like very much to be permitted to take Miss Rosemary Weston's place. Not fill it," she added hastily; "it would require a long time I think, before Meadville could find anyone to do that. But I am sure Miss Weston will tell you that I am competent to do the work. I like it very much, and I'd like to be allowed to try."

With her hands folded in her lap, she sat very straight. A great weight had rolled off her mind, and she found suddenly that she hardly cared whether they decided in her favour or not. She had put down the last figure. Perhaps she could be the new librarian's assistant.

"Miss Bryer," said the judge, "I'm going to be frank with you." Susanna's heart sank a little, but she smiled. "We have talked with Miss Weston, and she recommended you strongly for the position; but we felt that you were very young, and that the importance of this town in the summer season made it necessary to have some one with experience and poise in the library. In short, Miss Bryer, we were afraid that you would not have enough dignity. But I think," he paused and glanced at the others, "and I believe my fellow members of the board will agree with me, that you have erased that impression. Your businesslike directness in making apointments with us and coming straight to the point are greatly in your favour. And I wish to add," said the judge boyishly, "that a young lady who can walk into the presence of a group of men, one of whom I know picked her down from a cherry tree—only a few days ago, it seems—and the rest of whom have no doubt seen her in similarly embarrassing predicaments of the tomboy age—well, a young lady who can walk into the presence of such a group and soberly begin her remarks 'Gentlemen' possesses dignity enough to hold any position that Meadville has to offer. Is the young lady to be our librarian, gentlemen?"

And suddenly they were all congratulating Susanna warmly, but with a little reserve and deference too that was balm to her.

Before she went upstairs to tell mother, before she even stopped to take off her hat, she telephoned granddad.

"Sorry to get you out of bed," she apologized shamelessly. "But I put down the last figure. granddad, and the answer was right.

This May Be True

The editor has been informed recently that there is a little town in North Carolina that has no officials, no courts, and no taxes.

One firm employs the male population and pays the same salary to each employee. On Sunday, men, women, and children attend church and Sunday school.

The inhabitants of Salter Path, for this is the town, apparently take the eighteenth amendment seriously. At any rate, drunkenness is something that does not happen unless a travelling man or a tourist brings his own supply and gives the townspeople a horrible nightmare. With no policemen, firemen, or aldermen we do not know what would happen with a good old-fashioned drunk in Salter Path.

Perhaps this is only newspaper talk. There may be no such town. But the statement that there is, was given to me on excellent authority.

'Fresh from the gardens'

Corn on the Cob, Oh Boy!

What is better than two or three ears of your favourite corn, fresh, tender, sweet, and on the cob?

If it comes from your own garden, or fresh from the garden of a neighbour, so much the better. It will have its full flavour and full deliciousness.

Boil it,—not too long. Serve it piping hot with good rich butter and a touch of salt.

But when you boil the corn be sure to use a touch of sugar in the water instead of the salt. Most women know this little hint, but the knowledge should be universal because of the results obtained.

"You used to boast that your love for pretty girls was just a passing fancy. And yet you got married."

"Yes; I lingered too long in passing the last one."

Never Too Late To Mend

It is never too late to start thinking about money matters, and Mr. John D. Rockfeller, who is 91, has just seen the error of his ways. He used to be famous for his prodigal habit of distributing dimes to children, caddies, and other deserving citizens. Easter he reduced the dime to a nickel. If he had mended his ways a little sooner he might have been quite well off by this time.

Jellied Vegetables

By Etta iBtta Pye.

Lemon Cake Pie.

After 10 minutes reduce the heat to moderate (350 degrees) and continue baking twenty minutes longer, or until filling is firm.
