Froats---Barkley

On Wednesday evening, September 30th, the marriage was quietly solemnized at the Lutheran Parsonage at Williamsburg, of Miss Grace Barkley and Mr. Jason Froats, of Dunbar, with Rev. Cronmiller officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Edith Barkley, while the groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Stanley Froats. After the ceremony a dainty wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, the young couple leaving later by motor for Toronto.

John McGregor, of Ormond, Died Suddenly on Thursday

A very large crowd was present on Sunday afternoon last to pay their last respects to Mr. John McGregor, who passed away suddenly on Thursday, October 1st. Rev. J. A. Waddell, of Winchester, conducted the funeral service at the family home north of Ormond, after which the remains were interred in Springhill cemetery.

Widely Known Bus Driver Is Buried on Monday

After two years' treatment for tuberculosis, death came as a welcome relief on Saturday morning last to Mr. David Bellinger of Winchester who was only 29 years of age.

For several years previous to this illness he was in charge of the bus running from Ottawa to Morrisburg and was known as a very courteous and accommodating driver. The appreciation of the company operating the Colonial Coach Lines was shown by the sending of a large and beautiful wreath, also by sending a representative to attend the funeral.

Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bellinger, David is mourned by one brother, Herbert, of Winchester and a half-sister, Mrs. Dan McDougall, who lives near Perth.

The funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. D. Turner, assisted by Rev. J. A. Waddell, in the Presbyterian Church on Monday at two p.m., after which interment was made in Maple Ridge Cemetery. Mrs. Hazel Hutt sang very feelingly, "When I've Gone the Last Mile of Way."

Rex Theatre to Have Talkies

About the middle of this month Chesterville will come in line with the larger places of Ontario in the matter of moving pictures when the talkies will be introduced to local patrons of the silent drama. Last week Mr. E. B. Gravelle, proprietor of the Rex Theatre, here, entered into a contract with a New York firm for the necessary equipment to give his patrons the best in talking pictures. Two machines have already been shipped and it is expected if there is no delay in the customs that they will be installed about the middle of the month when Chesterville will blossom forth with the finest of entertainment.

Former Chesterville Boy Marries Gananoque Girl

St. Andrew's Church, Gananoque, was the scene of a pretty fall wedding on Saturday evening last when Orma Kathleen, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gibson Haig, was married to James Arnold Kyle, of Toronto. Rev. C. E. Kidd officiated and the wedding music was played by Mr. Fred Laughton.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon embroidered in rhinestones. Her veil of embroidered silk net was worn cap style and caught at the sides with sprays of orange blossom and lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. J. Homer Shaw, of Perth, sister of the bride, as matron of honour, and Miss Audrey Kyle, of Toronto, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid, were gowned in frocks of serpentine green and tropic sun georgette with large golden rose felt hats, shoes and gloves of the same shades. They carried arm bouquets of butterfly roses. Audrey Shaw, niece of the bride, made a charming flower girl dressed as a miniature bride in a long white organdie dress and veil of net caught at the sides with cornflowers and ribbon streamers. She carried a basket of roses and cornflowers. The groom was attended by Mr. Morley Tomlinson, of Toronto, while Mr. J. Ford Haig and Mr. Orland Kyle acted as ushers.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was decorated with streamers and flowers in the shades of the attendant's frocks. The bride's mother, gowned in brown and beige crepe with a corsage bouquet of roses, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Robert Armstrong, in black georgette and lace with a corsage of orchids, received the guests with the bridal couple.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Kyle left for New York and Atlantic City, the bride's travelling costume being a blue and grey ensemble. On their return they will reside in Toronto. There were guests present from Ottawa, Perth, Avonmore, Napanee, and Toronto.

Child Badly Bitten by Dog

Ray Servage, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Servage, who live five miles southwest of here, was badly bitten by a dog while playing at the home of Mr. Ernest Shane on Saturday, receiving a bad gash which necessitated several stites to close.

The dog ran out at young Servage as he went to Shane's, who are close neighbours, and frightened him. One of the children, Emmett Shane, told Ray the dog wouldn't bite but as they went on with their play young Servage was attacked by the dog. After first aid was given he was rushed to Chesterville where his arm was dressed by a doctor.

David's Store Moved From King to Queen Street

This week Joe David has moved his dry goods store from the Baldrey Block on King street to the brick building on Queen street opposite the Flynn hotel, which for many years has been used for purposes other than trade, notwithstanding that it had been built for that purpose. For a good many years it was used as a convent by the Sisters of St. Mary's Church, and when given up by them several years ago has since been used as a meeting place by the Standard Church and now reverts to the purposes of trade.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Mrs. John Norton wishes to thank the many friends and neighbours for the many acts of kindness and sympathy shown during the illness and death of their dear mother.

United Young People Convene at Chesterville

With slightly under a hundred delegates present, the third annual conference of the Young People's Societies of the Dundas-Grenville Presbytery was convened in Chesterville United Church last Friday and continued in conference until Sunday evening. The delegates and workers were welcomed to Chesterville in an address by Mr. Hunt, a member of the session of the local church, and by Miss Lillian Tate in behalf of the Young People. Rev. Norman Coll, of Parkdale, contributed an address.

Other sessions of the conference were opened with the service of worship taken by groups from the societies of Prescott, Elma and Hallville, and addresses on the different occasions by Rev. J. E. Eastcott, of Dundela, Rev. D. T. I. Forsythe, in charge of the young people's work in the Ottawa-Montreal conference; Rev. R. E. Newman, of the local church, and Rev. H. E. Campbell, of Hallville.

Saturday evening the dining hall of the church was the scene of a banquet tendered the delegates when about ninety sat down to the well-laden tables to which ample justice was done amid much merriment and good fellowship.

Sunday afternoon the usual sacramental service in connection with the conference was joined by members of the congregation under the pastor and session of the local church when a powerful sermon was delivered by Rev. Forsythe.

For the final service of the conference Sunday evening, Rev. H. E. Campbell, of Hallville, the speaker of the occasion, was greeted by the largest gathering of the day when the Sunday School rooms had to be thrown open to accommodate the crowd. The service was followed by the "Camp Fire" in which many of the delegates took part and which was the final gesture of the conference.

Kemptville was chosen as the place of meeting for next year.

Boys' High School Team Defeats Finch in Softball Game

The boys' softball team from the local High School avenged the defeat given the local girls' team in Finch last week by defeating the softball players of Finch High School in Finch on Tuesday afternoon by the score of 18 to 14.

When Eyes Are Right.

Your eyes will never ache or smart. Cold winds will not cause them to water, and no amount of reading will cause weariness of the eyes. No matter how close one's work, if the eyes are normal, they will do their work perfectly and without a sign of trouble.

BUT WHEN THEY ARE WRONG trouble begins. At first it is only a sensation of tiredness after work—you feel "sleepy" and probably rub your eyes. After a time your eyes will ache or smart occasionally, then you will perhaps have headache of a severe kind.

DIMNESS OF VISION

Then you may begin to notice that you cannot see as well as you could—small print "blurs" and close work becomes difficult. You can still see clearly, but you have to make a distinct effort to do so and you soon become weary. If so, call and see your optometrist.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Grow in Popularity

In 1927 Canada's consumption of sheep and lambs stood at 6.09 lbs. per capita per annum, and by 1930 this hand increased to 7.10 per cent. This increase of one per cent, roughly, is seemingly small, but it is really impressive. With our present population, the one pound increase represents 10,000,000 pounds, or about 300,000 animals, or eight per cent of our total sheep population.

Cement Wash Helps

The increased use of wall-board in the construction and lining of poultry houses shows that birds sometimes peck at the wall-board material and do considerable damage. An effective way to overcome this difficulty is to use a mixture of equal parts of lime and cement mixed with water to a thick paste and apply with a brush. This mixture forms a hard, durable surface on which the birds can make no impression.

Crop Report

The production outlook for agriculture in Ontario is excellent, according to reports received from representatives. The harvesting of a record crop in several lines of production is about completed and most of it has been garnered in good condition. Pastures in Western and Central Ontario have been good and recent rains in the eastern sections have greatly improved the condition of this very important crop. Live stock has been in good condition. Farmers are well advanced with their work. More after- harvest cultivation has been done this year than in any recent seasons. Soil conditions have been favourable to the preparation of fall wheat land and early sown crops are looking well. Fall ploughing is well advanced. Marketing conditions continue extremely discouraging.

Record O. A. C. Enrolment

Figures furnished by Dr. G. I. Christie, president of the O A. C., reveal that the registration of new students this year is the largest in the institutions history.

With a total of 395 new term arrivals enrolled for the present term at the O. A. C. and Macdonald Institute, there is still a shortage of accommodation despite the opening of the students' dormitory in the new million-dollar administration building, and the building of a new residence for girls. Students are housed in the old burser's house and the agricultural engineering building, while approximately forty are living in private homes. In addition to the regular students, it is expected that short courses this winter will enrol more than 100 boys and girls.

O. A. C. Team Wins

The O. A. C. Dairy Judging Team in the contest at Springfield, Mass., won first in the judging of cheese; second in milk, third in butter, and fifth in ice cream. The team was placed fourth in a class of teams from nine colleges. This is an excellent standing for the O. A. C. boys. They are to be highly congratulated. The members of the team, are: S. G. de Jong, C. M. Hayes, and H. C. Christensen. They were coached by Professor Sproule of the Dairy Department.

Use Home-Grown Feeds

During the year 1930 Canada imported approximately 4,000,000 bushels of corn from the United States, and over 5,000,000 bushels from other countries, principally the Argentine. A large part of this was used for feeding purposes. This looks like an enormous amount of feed to be imported into a country that is essentially agricultural and should be self-sustaining to a very large degree in feed stuffs. Feeders will do considerable toward helping the agricultural situation by insisting on home-grown feeds. With prospects of a very large crop of excellent corn in Ontario this year it is not too early for both dealers and farmers to begin planning to dispose of that crop. Ontario corn, properly dried, is the equal of the best imported corn; Ontario corn properly selected and carefully handled is superior to imported strains for seed purposes.

Reforestation Work

Farmers generally are taking increased interest in reforestation work and it is interesting to note that over 6,000,000 forest trees were distributed from the Government Station at St. Williams alone in 1931 to reclaim waste land. More than 2,600 private landowners procured forest trees last spring either for reclamation work or for windbreaks. The nursery stock at the St. Williams Station is in excellent shape and more than 8,000,000 trees will be available in 1932.

Render Important Service

The important work which agricultural representatives are doing in the rural districts of Ontario is probably not fully appreciated although it is receiving greater recognition every year. Many of the representatives have been with the department over a long period of years, have gained a very useful knowledge and are serving their respective districts most capably. It is learned that thirty of the representatives have been in the service for five years or more; 14 for fifteen years or more; 9 for sixteen years; 8 for seventeen years, 7 for eighteen years; 5 for nineteen years, and one for twenty years. Since the present director, R. S. Duncan, assumed office 14 years ago, there has been a turnover of 55 agricultural representatives in the service. Twelve are now farming, 36 are still connected with agriculture in some way or another, and 18 have allied themselves with other businesses.

Prepare for Chicago Grain Show

Many Ontario farmers are now preparing exhibits of grain and small seeds for the 13th International Grain and Hay Show which takes place at Chicago, November 28th to December 5th.

Last year Ontario exhibitors set up a record by forwarding to Chicago the largest exhibit of grain and small seeds of any Province in the Dominion. This exhibit consisted of 111 entries. More than 40 prizes, including two championships and a reserve championship, came back to Ontario.

For the first time in a number of years the corn borer regulations have been so modified that it is now possible to exhibit corn from Ontario providing it is heat treated before the show. Arrangements are being made to have all exhibits of corn heat treated in the Ford Motor Co. ovens at Windsor.

The prize list this year is much more attractive in that the number of prizes in each class has been materially increased.

In addition to regular prizes, the Ontario Department of Agriculture is offering specials of $50 to each Ontario exhibitor winning a first prize and $25 to each Ontario exhibitor winning the highest award in alfalfa, alsike, six-rowed barley, oats, red clover, peas and field beans. Winners of first prizes are not eligible for the $25 specials.

The Canadian Shredded Wheat Co. is again offering a special prize of $25 to the Ontario exhibitor winning the highest award in the White Winter Wheat Class.

All entries and exhibits forwarded to the Field Husbandry Department, O. A. C., Guelph, will be sent to Chicago and returned to Guelph free of charge.

Mr. James Laughland, of the Field Husbandry staff, will supervise the Ontario exhibits while at Chicago. Entries should be made to Mr. Laughland not later than Nov. 7th, and exhibits, except corn, should reach Guelph not later than Nov. 17th.

The Field Husbandry Department has also offered to analyze any four-ounce samples sent in early and to offer suggestions for improvement in the sample.

Due to the ever increasing interest taken by Ontario exhibitors in the Internationl Grain and Hay Show, to the more attractive premium list, and to the fact that corn can now be shown, it is expected that Ontario this year will be represented by the largest exhibit of grain and grass seeds ever sent to Chicago from this province.

Police Are Probing Mysterious Death

Cornwall.—The finding of a body in Lake St. Francis, about 20 miles from Cornwall, on Wednesday afternoon, last week, is causing the police of two countries much concern in trying to solve the mystery surrounding the death of the man, who has been identified as being Angus Thompson, 40-year-old Indian of St. Regis Reservation.

At the time the body was found, the man was believed to be a native of Poland and an inquest was considered unnecessary. A permit was issued for the burial which took place, and it was not until Tuesday that the identification of the man was positively made by a number of Indians.

Ontario Provincial Police, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, New York State Troopers and United States Customs officers are co-operating in an investigation of the case and are centring their activities around Hogansburg, N. Y., a village a few miles south of the border.

On the evening of September 23rd, Thompson disappeared and although a wide search was made for him by his relatives, no trace could be found, and upon discovery of the body in the river his relatives visited Lancaster and were responsible for the body being exhumed, when they identified the man as being Thompson by his clothing.

The Indians are of the opinion that Thompson met with foul play at the hands of rum-runners or high-jackers and despite an autopsy held by doctors A. J. Lalonde and J. A. Hurteau, the cause of death could not be determined. Bruises were found on the side of the head and face and doctors were unable to state whether water had been present in the lungs, owing to the condition of the body. The scalp, lungs, and heart were sent to the Ontario Medical College for examination. The body was released to Thompson's relatives and will be buried at St. Regis. It is believed that Thompson met his death at Cornwall Island, near Cornwall, as his boat was found in that vicinity on September 24th. Police are making a thorough investigation in the case.

Flour and Feed Store Burns At Avonmore Monday Night

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the flour and feed store, grinding mill and outbuildings owned and operated by William Grant, Avonmore, on Monday night, causing damage estimated at $8,000, partly covered by insurance. The fire appeared so threatening at one time that help was sent from Finch, Maxville, Newington and Cornwall, to save the nearby buildings which were somewhat damaged and scorched by the heat.

A. Morrison passing on the other side of the street at the time, first noticed the fire and gave the alarm. It was evident at the beginning that the blaze broke out in the upper floor of the shop.

The Avonmore volunteer fire department turned out immediately, but the flames gained such headway in the frame tin-sheathed building, that help was asked from the nearby towns.

Mr. Grant was away from his shop at the time of the outbreak, and the shop was closed. Included in his loss of the buildings was his entire stock of flour and feed and his grinding mill.

A motor pump sent from Cornwall arrived after the fire was under control, but rendered assistance in saving the buildings endangered nearby.

Mrs. John Norton Dies At Home of Daughter

It has pleased God in His infinite mercy to call from the midst of her dear friends and relatives, Mrs. John Norton, who passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Albert Courville, on Wednesday, September 30.

Although Mrs. Norton had been in ill health for some time, her death came as a shock to the whole community. For some time previous to her death she had been with her daughter and was given the most tender and loving care, but fond hopes and ardent wishes were of no avail.

During her illness she was comforted by Rev. Father Leahy and Rev. Father Rouleau who administered the last rites of the church at her death.

She bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude and resignation. It was God's holy will she leave the world for a brighter and happier home.

The late Mrs. Norton was in her 71st year, her husband, John Norton, predeceased her seven years ago, and most of her life she lived in the Connaught vicinity where she enjoyed the warm regards of a wide circle of friends, her patience and charity and humility were remarkable and she was always willing to assist those in need.

She leaves to mourn her death three sons and four daughters,—James, of Wales; Vincent, of Trenton, and John, on the homestead; Mrs. L. Baker, Cannamore; Mrs. John McCadden, Cornwall; Mrs. John Grady, Connaught, and Mrs. Albert Courville, of Berwick; also two brothers and five sisters,—Thomas Coyne, Sylvester Coyne, Mrs. J. T. Civitin, Mrs. Guy Origan, Mrs. Pat Farmer, Mrs. A. Cole, of Anthon, Iowa and Mrs. D. McMulley, Inkerman; also twenty-eight grandchildren.

The funeral, which was one of the largest, took place from the home of Mr. Albert Courville and proceeded to Our Lady of the Rosary Church, Crysler, where requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Roleau, and thence to Crysler cemetery for interment.

Spiritual offerings were received from the following:

Hector and Yvonne Courville, Mrs. Bid. McCadden and family, Mrs. John P. Grady and family, Crysler; Mr. Vincent Norton and family, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Norton and family, Mr. and Mrs. James Norton and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Norton, Mrs. Bid. McMullay, Mrs. Michael Norton and family, Mr. and Mrs. N. Beehler, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Manley, Mrs. Victor Beehler, Mrs. John Murphy and family, Mr. and Mrs. P. Kirby, Mr. Wm. M. Grady, Crysler; Mr. Martin and Catherine Coyne, Mrs. Edward Curran and family, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donohue, Misses Stella and Rose Beehler, Mr. Michael D. Grady, Mrs. Wm. Galvin and family, Miss Margaret Grady and Brothers, Berwick; Mr. and Mrs. Pat Graham and son, Joseph. Miss Hazel L. Racine, Mr. and Mrs. P. O'Donohue and family, Miss Margaret O'Grady and Brothers, Crysler; Mr. and Mrs. F. Courville, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Kearns, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Walsh, Mr. James McMahon, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Kearns and Will and Sam, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Beehler, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Moran and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Ruddy and family, Mr. Chas. and Miss Beehler, Mr. and Mrs. W. Devanney and family, Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kearns, Mr. and Mrs. John Rady, Mr. A. D. Hurt and family.

Airmen Cross Pacific In Single Hop

Wenatchee, Wash., Oct. 5.—Two shoeless American aviators, Hugh Herndon, jr., and Clyde Panghorn, first men ever to make a non-stop flight from Japan to the United States in a heavier-than-air machine, made a spectacular landing here at 7.14 o'clock, Monday morning, safe after flying 4,600 miles in 41 hours and 13 minutes.

They won the $25,000 prize from the Japanese newspaper Asahi, and a representative of the newspaper was waiting here with the cheque. Wenatchee to-night made whoopee with a parade and general celebration and a little woman, Pangborn's mother, is weeping for joy.

The fliers narrowly missed disaster as their red monoplane, its landing gear dropped in the sea soon after leaving Japan, flopped on its belly in a cloud of dust on the landing field here, skidded along and then went up on its nose, up and nearly over. But after hovering a second the 'plane dropped back right side up on the dirt runway and a thousand cheering, wilding shouting Wenatchee greeters stormed around it. Herndon was cut on the forehead in the rough descent to United States soil, the first land the ship had touched since 7. a.m. Sunday morning, Japanese time, 2 p.m. Saturday, Seattle time.

The surprising shoelessness of the fliers was explained by them as due to force of habit acquired in their many weeks in Japan.

Only once were they in peril in their long flight over the Pacific, they said, and that was when ice formed on the wings of their 'plane near Dutch Harbor, Alaska. The 'plane bore up under the extra load, and they held to their course, they said. They passed over Seattle shortly after 3 o'clock this morning. Several policemen, changing shifts, reported they saw lights of the 'plane. The fliers circled Mount Ranier three times deciding what to do, and finally went east over the Cascades almost to Spokane, where a well of fog turned them back to Wenatchee and a landing.

Wenatchee was fooled in the arrival of the fliers this morning as they came out of the east instead of the west, and they almost reached the dirt runway of the landing field before a crowd of 1,000 persons realized that it was Herndon and Pangborn. But fooled or not, this "apple capital" in the Cascades, has broken loose in the greatest demonstration in its history to welcome the fliers.

Herndon and Pangborn plan to stay in Wenatchee a week, repairing their 'plane, which suffered a damaged propeller and wing in the wheelless landing.

As they each had only about 30 minutes' sleep on the flight, they were put in guarded seclusion at the Hotel Cascadian after eating a hearty breakfast of baked apples, ham and eggs, toast and coffee, and they slept until late this afternoon, when a parade, formal welcome, and formal presentation of the $25,000 award by representatives of the Japanese newspaper was held.

In the clear sunshine of early morning at the airport all eyes were turned west awaiting the first sight of the 'plane coming over the mountains. Few noticed a red monoplane, flying low, slip over the mountains to the east.

"Just another 'plane," someone said. The 'plane was over the airport before the crowd realized that it was without landing gear and was the ocean craft. The fliers circled the city and then circled the airport four times. They made a long glide and skimmed along the dirt, finally stalling the motor. The 'plane plumped down, skidded roughly, hidden in a cloud of dist, nosed up and then settle back, at a standstill.

The crowd, cheering and shouting, broke across the field in a mad rush. The two fliers, grimy, with Pangborn daubing at a cut on his forehead, stepped out of the cabin; someone tossed them cigarettes, someone else held matches.

Through the cheering and the tumult, Pangborn said: "Boy, are we glad to be here! And lots of gas left, too." Then he apologized for their lack of shoes. His mother, tears in her eyes, and his brother and sister-in-law pushed through the crowd. Pangborn embraced them happily.

Village Council Had Fairly Busy Session

Under instructions from the Railway and Municipal Board, the by-law necessary for legalizing the construction of Victoria street, which was undertaken last year, was finally passed by the village council at the October meeting on Tuesday night. Victoria street was re-surfaced last year without the necessary by-law being passed.

Messrs. A. J. Forward and Stanley Shay waited on council with a proposition for the repairing of South street from the corner near the High School to the west town line. This street is in very poor condition, Mr. Forward said, and he stated that the farmers of his section would draw crushed stone free of charge if the council would supply it, and furnish help to load and spread. Councillor Allison was instructed to obtain prices on crushed stone and to present them at a special meeting to be called when the proposal will be further discussed.

Considerable discussion was entailed over the question of unemployment relief for the coming winter. Reeve Casselman advanced two plans to take care of this, one was to buy a tract of bush and give employment in the cutting of it and then marketing the product, while the other suggestion was to put the unemployed at cracking stones by hand, the stones to be supplied by the municipality, and the crushed stone thus produced to be used in repairing the streets. Nothing definite was decided on, and the matter was left over for a future meeting. It was disclosed that Chesterville's share of direct relief last year was only $16.15, and hope was expressed that employment could be found for the out-of-work this winter and so keep the cost of direct relief again at a low figure.

The application of the High School Board for debenturing the cost of the permanent improvements made to the school buildings this year, $1311.21, was passed on a motion by Councillors Allison and Barrie. One change was made, that of the date of the first payment, which was advanced from December, 1931, to December, 1932. The reason given for this was the fact that the requisition to the Counties' Council has already been made for 1931 and, as the counties pay 80 per cent of these improvements, the delaying of the first payment will thereby save the municipality a tidy sum.

On a motion by Thos. Allen and Dr. Clayton, the following bills were ordered to be paid:

Ralph Hummel, work on river $ 5.10
Archie Harrison, work on river 5.10
Ken. Wood, work on river $2.40
work on drain $4.20....6.60
Jas. Black, cutting weeds..... .50
Jas. A. Beckstead, cutting weeds 2.50
Melvin Durant, gate & lock for dump, and tile..... 8.75
G. C. Lacey, printing voters' lists, tax notices, & advt. 24.50
High School Board, requisit'n 1000.00
John Wardell, work at town hall 8.20
Bell Telephone Co., Clerk's phone 2.20

Wilburn Harper, hauling cinders 1.30
Jas. Hanna, auditor 15.00
P. S. Boyd, auditor 15.00
C. W. Casselman, acting clerk 25.00

Street Commissioners, Dr. Clayton and R. J. Barrie, were directed to advise those in charge of the laying of the new water main to the skating rink that the damage to Francis street caused by the improper filling in of the excavations, would have to be repaired.

Some correspondence was read by the clerk but none of it required immediate attention and it was laid aside for the next meeting.

Harry McMurray has been given the job of repairing the roofs of the fire and town halls.

Reception in Honour of Young Dunbar Couple

On Tuesday evening, about one hundred and thirty neighbours and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Froats to welcome their son, Jason, and his bride. The evening was spent in games and dancing and friendly chats, which were enjoyed by both young and old. About eleven o'clock the bride and groom were asked to come forward when an address was read by Mr. John Clement and the young couple was presented with a set of two chairs and a setee.

The following is the address:

Dunbar, October 6th, 1931.

Dear Mr .and Mrs. Froats,—

We, your friends and neighbours, having learned of your recent marriage, have gathered here to-night in honour of the occasion, to wish you a very long and happy voyage over matrimony's sea.

To both of you, with whom many of us are well acquainted, we can say that we have found in you pleasing friends and willing helpers at all times. We are glad to know that you will be dwelling among us and that we will be receiving your staunch support in all our undertakings.

We sincerely hope your future life together will be one of perfect bliss, and that your trials and tribulations will be few and far between. Let us extend to you this wish, that, as the years go by, you will both be able to look back on this as one of the happiest times of your life.

In token of our respect, we beg of you to accept these gifts and trust that they will remind you of your many friends.

Let us again on closing offer you our best wishes for success throughout your married life.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours.

Mr. Froats thanked the people on behalf of his wife and himself for the gift received, and invited all to come and visit them in their home. After singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed until the wee sma' hours.

EDUCATED YOUTHS NEEDED ON FARMS

THE sooner we can put out of business in Ontario the chaps who think all there is to farming is ploughing, sowing, and reaping, the better it will be for the province, Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, told the Optimist Club, Toronto, at a luncheon where he was guest of honour.

"What we need," he said, "is more young men with education on our farms. When we get them you will see Ontario farm production rise from $510,000,000 to $700,000,000 and prosperity will trickle through to everybody."

"When times are good put a little away," the Miinster urged. "The farmers of Ontario, an old province, have learned that secret," he said. From their present condition the Western farmer would learn the same thing, he prophesized.

$200 Lost Every Minute From Fires in the Dominion

During the past ten years 386,000 fires in Canada have destroyed property valued at $413,000,000, and in addition 3,926 lives have been lost and 9,858 persons seriously injured by fire. These figures were given out by J. Grove Smith, Dominion fire commissioner, in the course of an appeal for observance of fire prevention week which commenced on Sunday, October 4th.

Last year 39,200 fires were reported, with a property loss of $46,110,000.

"If we analyze these figures," Mr. Smith says, "we can better grasp the magnitude of the problem. The average annual waste by fire in Canada represents an expenditure of $280,000 daily or roughly $200 for every minute throughout the year. Capitalized at five per cent it represents the gigantic sum of $2,000,000,000 which is only a little less than our present national debt."

Continuing, the Dominion Fire Commissioner makes the following suggestions:

"Let the owners and occupants of property insist upon clean premises and clean communities. Every neglected pile of rubbish is a potential fire breeder and disorder invariably is a sign of fire hazard. Then, let every individual recognize his responsibility towards the common causes of fires.

"Cities, towns and villages everywhere need better building laws and proper ordinances for the removal of fire hazards and for the correction of dangerous conditions in buildings and many of them need better equipped fire departments. It is to the interest of everyone to urge public action in respect to these things, thus improving conditions in the communities in which they live."

WHERE APPLES GIVE FARMERS OVER HALF THEIR REVENUES

APPLES have long been an important farm product in certain sections of the Province of Quebec. A measure of this importance may be found in the September issue of the Economic Analyst issued by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The figures are based on an analysis of 74 reports from farmers in an area 30 to 40 miles south and east of Montreal, though apples are also grown in many other areas.

The farms covered by the survey are not large, but for the most part are highly specialized, 58 of the farmers obtaining over 50 per cent of their revenue from the sale of apples, and 25 of these obtaining over 90 per cent from apples. The average size of the young orchards was nine acres, and the average for those farms on which new plantings were reported was 12.4 acres. 54 out of 74 farmers having orchards growing into bearing. The average young orchard is almost double the size of those in Nova Scotia, and nearly three times larger than those in Ontario. On the farms reporting non-bearing orchards the average is nearly five acres above that in the other provinces. The farms in the district under survey are highly capitalized. This is due not only to the limitation of land suitable for the production of apples but also to their proximity to Montreal. Real estate represents the bulk of investment. Live stock is not important on these farms, representing only about 3.6 per cent of the total.

The average gross receipts from these farms were $3,386. Of this amount $2,402, or 70.9 per cent, was obtained from the sale of apples.

IMMUNITY

THE word "immunity" has come into common use, and it would seem desirable, therefore, that its meaning be clearly understood. It is for this reason that we are devoting this article to a discussion of immunity.

It is a matter of common observation that the person who has recovered from an attack of one of the communicable diseases does not, as a rule, contract the disease a second time. It is evident that after recovery, the individual possesses certain powers of resistance to the germ of the disease from which he has recovered. This resistance is known as immunity.

When the body is attacked by a disease germ, certain substances are developed which are the fighting forces produced by the body to combat that particular disease. These fighting forces defend the body against the germs and against the poisons which the germs produce.

The immunity present after recovery is due to the continued presence of these fighting forces or antibodies, which, because they are present, prevent the occurrence of a second attack of the disease.

Immunity is specific. By this we mean that the fighting forces developed to fight scarlet fever give protection against scarlet fever only. Just as there is a definite germ responsible for each of the communicable diseases, so the antibodie produced and the immunity secured are for the one definite disease which has attacked the person.

Immunity is also relative in the sense that it does not imply a definite amount of resistance, nor is it definite as regards the length of time it will last. Two individuals who have recovered from diphtheria will be immune to diphtheria. Both produce sufficient antibodies to resist a second attack, but one will likely produce more than the other. Immunity, in general, tends to wear off. It gradually disappears but its rate of disappearance is not uniform; when it has worn off. a second attack of the disease may occur.

As stated, immunity is acquired through an attack of the disease. These attacks kill a considerable number of persons and damage the bodies of many who recover from the attack. Because of the deaths and damage which occur, it is obviously not safe or desirable to rely upon an attack to gain immunity.

The ideal would be to have everyone become immune without being exposed to the dangers of an actual attack of the disease. This is the real hope of Preventive Medicine as regards the communicable diseases which are spread, in a direct manner, from the sick to the well. At present, we can secure immunity to smallpox through vaccination and diphtheria immunization protects us against diphtheria. We have the best way to control these two diseases.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto will be answered pearsonally by letter.

IT'S A CURIOUS FACT, isn't it?

THAT there has been a job printing office in Chesterville for 37 years and still many say to us after they have placed an order for printing out-of-town that, "I didn't know I could get it done at home. It never occurred to me that you could do it." . . . Curious, isn't it?

Well, it should never be so. THE RECORD has been established in Chesterville for 37 years and during all these years there has been a job printing office in connection that has been turning out satisfactory work.

Don't be misled . . . Bring us your next printing job and see how you can be satisfied, right here at home.

FOLKS

"IT must be wonderful to travel and see all manner of folks!" said Emily, sighing.

"Yes," agreed her mother, absently. "I suppose it is nice, but after all they're just folks, whether they are here or somewhere else."

"Just like pigs is pigs," added Emily's sister, Peggy. "But say, Em, weren't those costumes pretty? Wouldn't that red and yellow Chinese thing make a fine sport dress? Wonder if she'd sell it?"

"Well, hardly," said Emily, "after she'd brought it all the way from China to show people!"

"Eight o'clock, Emily," her mother reminded her. "Miss Anderson will be getting worried. Don't forget to bring me home two yards of that black and white ribbon. We'll trim my hat to-night."

All the way down the tree-lined village street to the one millinery shop where she trimmed hats, Emily mused over the lecture that a returned missionary had given in their church the night before. If only she could go and see how other folks lived and what they did! She glanced over the handful of mail that the post-office clerk handed her. There was a bill for Miss Anderson, an envelope that probably held a check, two advertisements, a post card for her father and a large folder for herself. The last two she put carelessly into the pocket of her coat and, quickening her steps, crossed the street to the shop that displayed the sign: "Miss Anderson's; Stylish Millinery."

Miss Anderon greeted her with a little frown of concentration. "Emily, do you think I'd better put jet or ribbor, on my hat this spring?"

"Neither," replied Emily promptly, taking the battered frame from her thin hands. "We could steam this and reshape it; but, why not have a new hat this spring? There's a soft black straw on the shelf; let me get it."

Emily plunged happily into the day's work and forgot about her desire to travel. There were two hats to sell to the Roberts twins, two hats that Emily herself had chosen from the salesman's assortment. She trimmed Miss Anderson's hat and pronounced it successful. Two or three customers came in for little things like a bit of ribbon, a flower, or buckle. One or two looked at hats; they frankly admitted they could not afford to buy a new hat that spring, but they did like to get ideas from Emily for freshening up old ones. To one and all, whether they made a purchase or not, Emily was pleasant and gracious, agreeably helpful. During the noon hour at home she helped with the dishes, found time to pin the ribbon on her mother's hat and then opened her neglected mail. The folder was an offer from a book company to represent it on the road during the summer. No matter what salary she was making, she could easily treble it! Moreover, the work was delightful and would take her among the cultivated families of her community. There was still one district open in that part of the state; if she wanted it, please address— Emily folded the paper carefully, put it away in her desk and turned to her mother.

"Mother, could you spare me this summer? I'd be able to help with the expenses just the same, for I'd be making more money than I am now. I could easily treble my present salary, and it would me a chance to see other people." Her words seemed to tumble over one another.

Mrs. Booth patted Emily's hand gently. "Of course I could spare you. Maybe a change would be just the thing you need. You're much too thin to suit me. What is it, books or something no household should be without?" she asked with a twinkle in her eyes.

Emily smiled. "It's books," she admitted, "but I believe they are good books ,a small medical library. You know how much we've used the one father bought a long time ago. And I believe I could sell them," she added confidently.

"Of course you could!" agreed her mother. "You're a born salesman. Well, if Miss Anderson can spare you I've no objection. I think it will do you good."

Emily sped joyously down the street, looking eagerly round for some of her friends to share her good news. But no one was out yet, and at the store Miss Anderson met her with an open letter in her hand and a troubled look on her face.

"Emily, whatever shall I do? Here is sister Sara, whom I haven't seen for several years, writing that she is sending her Eleanor to visit me for the summer. She wants to have a few months of quiet and rest, and she adds that Eleanor will probably be able to help in the store, since she took a practical course in school last year. Now, what shall I do?"

"Why, it's just the thing!" cried Emily. "She shall take my place for the summer. You see, Miss Anderson, I've had a very good offer to-day for the summer's work, and this thing will let us both out. Your niece can work for you, and I'll sell books for myself. All the summer materials are ordered, and the hats are made up. You can send me a card when the fall salesman is coming, and I'll come home for that. I think it has worked out lovely."

"Well, maybe," admitted Miss Anderson. "But what do I know about Eleanor? Oh, dear, this is so upsetting, your leaving—"

"Just for the summer," Emily interrupted her.

"And a strange girl coming! I've no doubt in my mind that she won't like it here, and that she won't be able to help me much either."

The book company to which Emily sent her letter of acceptance was gratifyingly prompt. Within the week she received her outfit, the cost of which was five dollars,—to be deducted from her sales at the end of the summer,—and was only waiting for Eleanor before setting out on her high adventure. The plain blue voile dress with white collar and cuffs that was to be her working dress hung ready in the closet.

She hastened eagerly to the store to meet Eleanor the morning after she arrived. Miss Anderson introduced them and found an opportunity to draw Emily aisde. "We'll get along just splendid! Eleanor has such good ideas I feel real pleased," she said, beaming.

"That's good," said Emily, though for some reason she was not quite happy over Eleanor's capability. Nevertheless, she went to the front of the store, pleasantly ready to help the newcomer.

"Shall we go over the stock, first thing, Eleanor?"

"Go over the stock?" The girl flashed a merry glance about the tiny shop with its scantily-stocked shelves. "I don't think that is necessary, do you? I should think I could go over it in an hour most any time."

"Oh, yes," said Emily. The boxes that had seemed so full of riches shrank strangely.

"Really, my dear," said the new new girl, "if you want to go on with your canvassing, I don't see the least reason why you shouldn't start to-day."

"Oh—I—Miss Anderson expects me to start to-day," replied Emily in confusion.

"Suit yourself!" cried the girl airily. "The first thing I'm going to do is to re-arrange that window. I think I shall make it all pink. Something for a drapery, a wreath of flowers, and that pink straw hat."

"Take all the other hats out?" inquired Emily. "But people like to stop and look at them."

"Of course," replied Eleanor laughing, "and get ideas and walk on! This way I'll intrigue their fancy; they'll be curious and come in, and I'll do the rest! This is going to be the best season. Aunt Minnie has ever had."

Bewildered, Emily helped Eleanor to remove the display. Then she obediently brought out the piece of pink velvet and warned Eleanor that it would soon fade in the sun.

"Perhaps," was Eleanor's indifferent answer, "but it pays to advertise."

By noon the window had taken on a smart, city air. Eleanor admitted that the display was attractive, even though she regretted the disadvantage to passers-by.

"Really, there's no use your wasting the whole day here," insisted Eleanor kindly. "You surely have some last minute things to do?"

"Yes," said Emily. "I suppose I may as well go," and she looked reluctantly about the room. "There's one thing I want to show you. This black hat is for Mrs. Benton, a tall, plump woman. Don't show it to her until the last thing; then she'll be sure to take it, and it just suits her."

"Then, why not show it to her first and be done with it?" inquired Eleanor.

"Because she never takes the first one, always the last one," explained Emily. "And when Helen Neel comes in—she has bright red hair—don't let her take that pink straw you've put in the window, as she's bound to want it. I've a cream straw here and a green taffeta; either will be becoming to her. You won't let her take it, will you?"

"Why not, if that's what she wants?" Eleanor laughed. "I'm here to sell people what they want. The important thing is to sell hats," she added.

"Oh, no!" cried Emily. "In a week Helen would be sorry she had bought the pink hat, and she can't afford to buy two. She'd have to wear it all summer, hating it so. Selling isn't all of it," she insisted earnestly.

"Well, I'll try to be good, but you can't expect me to pamper all these people the way you do. We'll get along," she added good naturedly.

Feeling extremely small and insignificant, Emily stepped off the train at the town to which she had been sent. But after she had hunted up the address that her pastor had given her, had made arrangements for boarding at the house and had eaten a wholesome dinner, she felt some of her first excitement returning. To be sure, Mrs. Hoyt, who kept the boarding house, seemed much the same as her own mother; she even rinsed the teapot with the same motion of her arm. But other people would be different. She might just as well start at once.

Mrs. Hoyt nodded approvingly. "I'm right glad you made that sale the first day It will keep you heartened. Sales won't be very brisk; times are hard in the country."

"Well, just so I make expenses," replied Emily, happy and undaunted. "I'm really doing this to meet the people. I've never been away from home before."

"I guess you won't find the people in this part of the country much different from what they are at home."

"Why, that's what my mother said!" cried Emily.

The days passed with varying degrees of success. As Emily counted up her profits at the end of the first two weeks she felt amply repaid. But there was a growing dissatisfaction in her heart; she was beginning to realize that her mother and Mrs. Hoyt were right; folks were folks. And with the realization came a doubt whether she had done right in leaving Miss Anderson for summer. "Though she didn't need me with her niece there," she reminded herself. "But I do wish Peggy would answer my questions."

Peggy's letter, however, continued to be evasive in their replies to her inquiries. Finally Emily could stand it no longer "I'm going home over Sunday," she said to Mrs. Hoyt. "I guess I'm homesick. Anyhow, I've just got to go!"

Mrs. Hoyt nodded understandingly.

"That's right. You've done real well these weeks; you must be a good saleswoman. Isn't any place quite like home and the home folks, is there?"

"Home folks," thought Emily. "People aren't much different wherever you go. They have different customs and manners, but underneath they are all the same. I'll be glad when this summer is over and I get back to Miss Anderson's. Maybe she won't want me. What if Eleanor stays?"

It was a disquieting thought. Emily tapped her fingers together nervously. Could she find another place in town? She was a good saleswoman; she was sure of that. But surely every place—and there were few—was filled already.

The train drew in at the unpainted home station. As Emily hurried to descend the car steps the rush of a young girl, eager to get aboard, almost pushed her out of the way. Emily looked after her in amazement. Surely that was Miss Anderson's niece!

A window was thrown up above her, and Eleanor's face peered out. "That really you, Emily Booth? I guess Aunt Min will be glad to see you. I'm leaving. I couldn't stand it there another hour. Good luck to you!" she called as the train started.

Emily hurried anxiously up the main street. In front of Miss Anderson's shop she paused, horrified. "I should never have left her!" she thought. There was a single hat in the window—a brilliant red one such as nobody in the town ever would buy. "I wonder if she bought much of that stuff? I think I'd better go in."

As she opened the door Miss Anderson came forward with both arms outstretched. "Emily Booth! Is it really you? Sometimes I don't know if I'm awake or having a nightmare. Did you ever see such a place?" she demanded tragically.

Emily shook her head. The shop was bare of hats—they had all been put away in drawers . Grotesque wreaths of flowers, bunches of ribbon and folds of silk were all that remained on the few counters that had not been stored in the back room to make way for spindle-legged tables.

"Futurist, she called it," said Miss Anderson, sniffing. "Only future thing I could see about it was bankruptcy. What shall I do?"

Emily took off her hat and laid it with her suitcase in the corner. She wanted to go home, but the folks were not expecting her. She set to work resolutely. "Shut the door and draw the blinds. We'll make a new window to-night. Did you buy much of this stuff?" she asked, holding out the bizarre hat.

"We've only a few. She went to the city and bought them. But if you'd see the things she ordered from Miller for winter," Miss Anderson's voice failed her.

"But you were to send for me when Miller came,' protested Emily.

"She wouldn't let me. He came day before yesterday."

"Then that's all right," said Emily briskly. "I'll send him a message to cancel the order . Then I'll meet him in Daleton as he circles back this way and put in a new order. Now, let's see, haven't you sold anything?"

"Yes, the wrong things to the wrong people. Helen Neel bought the pink hat." Emily gasped. "And Mrs. Benton didn't buy anything. She said there wasn't anything fit to be seen in the store. She's going over to Rockwood next week to buy. Isn't it dreadful?"

"Oh, not so bad but that it would be worse. We've only a few of these funny hats, and I may be able to do something with them. I'll have Helen bring her hat to me, and I'll paint it a pretty brown with a bottle of colouring I got in town. And when Mrs. Benton sees our window on her way to church to-morrow she'll be in again. I can sell her a hat yet—you needn't have a doubt of it!" said Emily so confidently that Miss Anderson's face lost some of its worried lines.

It was late when Emily and her employer closed and locked the door behind them but there were loiterers on the streets. One of them darted forward and caught the girl's hand.

"Emily Booth! Have you really come back?" cried Helen Neel. "Did she tell you what that girl let me buy? Said I should express my own desires. Now I've got to go bareheaded this summer."

"Oh, no," replied Emily, laughing. "You bring the hat round Monday, and I'll see what I can do for it. Tell everybody I'm home, will you?"

"I don't need to tell them," retorted Helen. "Anyone who sees that window will know."

Over her late cup of cocoa and toast Emily looked at her mother musingly. "I'm not sorry I went, mother. Financially, I'm about even. But I've learned a lot. Folks are folks, just as you said. But there's something nice about being with folks who need you, your own home folks."

"Yes," said her mother, nodding understandingly.

"So that's settled," said Peggy lightly, but with a loving look for her older sister. "Just as pigs is pigs, so folks is folks!"

The elders laughed to hide ther feelings.

SOME REAL BARGAINS TO BE HAD IN FARMS

A GOOD FARM in the Stratford district was bought the other day for $4,500. The property included excellent buildings and about 130 acres of improved land with a suitable amount of bush. It was stated that the same farm could have been sold ten years ago for $10,000. The Beacon-Herald points out that the man who wants to start farming now has a chance to do so with a minimum burden to carry. Of course the returns would not be as great as formerly, but, says the Beacon-Herald: "The truth is that many have had to carry their high overhead into a period of low cash returns, and that is what is bothering a good many of them to-day. Farmers are willing to concede that the man who gets 130 acres with fairly good buildings for $4,500 has a better chance to make it go than the one who paid twice that much for a farm a few years ago. There are some real bargains in farms to-day."

We will appreciate your sending in your week-end and Thanksgiving visitors, either mail or telephone.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

By Etta Bitta Pye

Grape Crab-Apple

To each two pounds of grapes use one pound of crab-apples. Stew the grapes and crab apples- until soft, then pass through a sieve. To each pint of the pulp add one cupful of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, if liked. Simmer slowly until of the right consistency for preserve or jam.

Easy Grape Juice

Pick over the grapes, taking out all imperfect or unripe ones. Into each quart preserving jar put a half cupful of sugar and cupful of grapes; fill jar withb riskly boiling water. Put on the rubber rings and screw tops on the jars, and store in a cool place. A jar or two can be made at a time whenever you have a few grapes. Ready for use in a few weeks.

Sweet Green Pickle

1 peck green tomatoes
1 cupful salt
2 quarts boiling water
5 quarts cider vinegar
3½ pounds brown sugar
2 green peppers
3 red peppers
1 tablespoonful white mustard seed
1 cupful of mixed cloves, cinnamon bark, mace blades, horse radish, celery seed, cardamon seeds.

Slice the tomatoes thin, discarding the ends. Sprinkle with salt and allow to stand over night. In the morning drain, add the boiling water and one quart of vinegar and boil for 15 minutes. Drain again. The following morning cook all together for 10 minutes the gallon of vinegar, the sugar, the peppers cut into thin shreds and the seeds and spices tied in a bag. Add the tomatoes and simmer for one hour, stirring occasionally.

One night a drunken hubby returned home more soused than usual, and had fallen asleep in the front garden.

His wife, determined to cure him of his bad ways, and with the aid of a sheet and an electric torch, transformed herself into a very fair imitation of a ghost. Then she went out to the drunkard and shook him.

"Whash that?" mumbled the toper.

"Satan," came the reply in a sepulchral tone.

"Shake hands, old horsh, I married your sister."

Barber: "How is it your hands are so dirty?"

Apprentice: "Nobody had a shampoo to-day."

Presented With Hymnary By Appreciative Friends

After more than twenty years' residence in Elma, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Carruthers left Wednesday to make their future home in Morrisburg. In going away, Elma loses two loyal citizens and the United Church two earnest and faithful members.

On Monday evening fellow members of the Official Board of the United Church and other friends met at their home to express their sense of loss at the thought of their going away. Words of appreciation of their worth and services were spoken by W. A. Beckstead, A. N. Barkley, and M. E. Beckstead. The pastor, Mr. Morrison, in presenting a beautifully bound copy of the new Humnary to Mr. and Mrs. Carruthers, expressed the hope that they be long spared to carry on elsewhere the good and kindly services in which they had a part at Elma.

Mr. Carruthers with deep feeling, replied and thanked the friends for their presence, the kind words spoken, and the gift, which he much appreciated.

A light lunch was served and Messrs. McBride and McPherson moved a vote of thanks to the hostess, Mrs. Harry Carruthers, and the singing of the old hymn: "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," brought the evening to a close
