Needs local input

Economic plan for South Dundas

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

MORRISBURG—The South Dundas Economic Commission is reviewing its economic plan, and needs the input of the Morrisburg Chamber of Commerce.

"This is brought on by the Province's new funding through Jobs Ontario Community Action Fund. To access any money we need to have a community group formed that can meet and discuss the needs for the community," Chamber secretary Linda Bowers told the Chamber meeting Tuesday.

On November 30, the Ontario legislature passed the Community Economic Development Act. The Act permits communities to form corporations in order to raise credit and equity capital for local business ventures through Community Investment Share Corporations and Community Loan Funds.

Community Development Corporations may also be formed as a broadly-based community group to coordinate local economic development.

Funds for the Jobs Ontario Community Action program are accessed through strategic planning, and the province now stresses community involvement in long-range economic planning.

The South Dundas Economic Strategic Plan was completed in June 1989 by consultants Totten, Sims Hubicki Associates, and presented to the four participating municipalities. The plan is an comprehensive document on most sectors of economic activity in South Dundas, and cost between $20,000 and $30,000.

But four years later, there is a need to review and upgrade. "We took the strategic plan and pulled out parts that are dedicated to economic development, and the focus that they have on the different components and sectors of the economy, " Bowers said.

She invited Chamber members to establish a committee to meet with the Economic Commission. "This is to review the strategic plan and how it impacts the activities and objectives of the Chamber, what goals could be for the area as a whole."

Copies of the report were distributed for revision, together with information on Community Loan Funds, and Community Investment Share Corporations.

"These two could be put together and reviewed as possibilities for South Dundas," Bowers stated.

The Chamber would also have an interest in the revision, due to the significance of Morrisburg in South Dundas, in terms of business and population numbers.

"The people who get involved need to understand the existing plan, and know what we hope to accomplish by revisiting it," Bowers said.

Commissioners are to start reviewing the plan now to recommend for anticipated public meetings in February.

The Commission is also looking at a proposal from TD Graham & Associates to review the 1989 economic strategy in consultation with the commissioners for a fee of $1500.

Graham & Associates did the McIntosh apple logo and the slogan "We're Expecting You!" for the Commissions Customer Service campaign last year.

In a letter to Bowers, who is also Economic Commission project manager, Graham described how the review would involve input from other members of the community. Discussions would be held on the plans relevance, and notes made on recommendations for future action.

Ideas from the brainstorming sessions would be reviewed from March 1993,

Brockville Cable Company films at Howard Johnson's

MORRISBURG—Howard Johnson's will be the place to be Saturday as Community Channel 10 from Brockville will be in town filming one of its community access shows.

The show, entitled, "You Don't Have to be a Star" will feature approximately 8-10 pre-chosen local singers in conjunction with "Karaoke Krazy", a local entertainment company, and provide musical talent to film the half-hour television show.

Producers Lee and Greg Adams have scoured the local bars and hang-outs in search of talent, and are pleased with the response that the show has received. They are hoping that Morrisburg will be no exception.

Providing the background music and also entertaining will be Riverside Heights resident, Keith Johnston, who has been involved with "Karaoke Krazy" for just under a year.

"People love to sing," he says referring to the karaoke night held every Friday at Howard Johnson's. "Louis deSousa (manager of Howard Johnson's) was instrumental in bringing Karaoke back to Morrisburg and giving people an alternative to the nightclub scene."

The hotel is drawing a large crowd these Friday nights as everyone tries their hand at singing.

Showtime is slated for 1pm Saturday and everyone is welcome to come along and cheer for your favorite singer.

Reeve salutes community holiday spirit

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MORRISBURG—A Christmas spirit has taken over the community this holiday season, and the response has never been stronger, local leaders say.

Hundreds of residents already have begun to get into the cheery festivities, taking advantage of a number of promotional activities planned by the Business Improvement Association.

Organizers have noticed particularly strong public participation in the House Decorating Contest.

"In my thirty years, I've never seen the homes of Morrisburg decorated the way they are this year," says the Reeve, Gord McGregor. "There's no doubt in my mind, we'll be one of the highlights of the Seaway Valley."

Open to all residents in the village, the contest offers prizes of $500, $300, and $200 in BIA gift certificates to the three best decorated houses. Judging begins December 12.

Among the other events, the second "Shoot to Score" contest will be held this Saturday at 1 p.m. BIA President Sam Laurin encourages everyone to come out and try their luck; the person who scores the most goals in five shots will receive complimentary tickets to an upcoming Senators game. The Morrisburg Lions Club Choir will be on hand to help build the holiday atmosphere.

The Morrisburg BIA has planned an "Old Fashioned Christmas Party" in the Village Plaza beginning shortly after 4 p.m. There will be hot mulled cider provided, and Christmas Caroling at the clock tower.

The Reeve encourages everyone to come on down and enjoy a Hayride around town, provided by the Operating Engineering School.

"These people are good enough to provide the vehicle," McGregor says. "We'd like to see a lot of people take advantage of it."

Among the events already under way, the Bonus Buck campaign has been in full swing for a few weeks now.

Participating retailers have noted a fairly positive response so far.

"I find people like them," says Tom Morrow, owner of Pier 31. "Everybody that I've given them out to have been tickled to get them."

Biba's manager Ginette Smith has found a similar response: "I think the people are quite happy to get something after they purchase something."

Neither Smith nor Morrow, nor gift shop owner Orval Delage, have noticed too many people turning them back in just yet.

But as Delage says, it's still early in the season, and it's too early to tell if the campaign will be sucessful.

"We'll know better after Christmas."

All three owners believe their customers have been saving their tickets for a major purchase later this month.

Lance Cassell to appear on Home Grown Cafe

MORRISBURG—Lance Cassell will be appearing on CJOH's Home Grow Cafe's special Christmas show Sunday, December 19th at 6:30pm.

Lance, who won the junior division on the show last season, will be reciting, "The Night Before Christmas".

Don't miss this opportunity to see our local talent in action.

Christmas Exchange needs non-perishable foods

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MORRISBURG—The South Dundas Christmas Exchange (SDCE) still needs a wide variety of non-perishable food items, organizers say, before reaching their targeted goal of feeding 175 local needy families over Christmas time.

"We're looking for canned foods, pasta, anything non-perishable," says coordinator Robin Lane, adding that eggs, meat and other food products also are welcome.

"We'd like to give them all the fixings for dinner."

Lane, along with two other volunteers, Suzanne Strader and Dianne Wilson, met Friday afternoon to help formulate final strategies as the Dec. 20 "packing day" deadline fast approaches.

While the exchange has been receiving an "overwhelming response" for the children's toy drive, it hasn't been getting as many food items as organizers would like.

"People seem to have a soft spot for children, but we want to feed them too," Strader says.

For the next few weeks, she and the other volunteers will specifically target these neglected areas to ensure the exchange achieves a proper balance for Christmas.

Coordinating the efforts

It was for precisely these kinds of reasons the SDCE came into existence five years ago, amalgamating the efforts of local charitable groups behind a common agenda.

"It started with the church groups and the Lions Clubs," Lane remembers. Despite everyone's best efforts, the needs weren't being met adequately. "Everybody was off doing their own thing."

Noting a serious "duplication of services," social workers and church volunteers stared working together to try to better coordinate their efforts.

Over the next few years, other service groups and churches around town also joined the group, as did a number of clubs, schools and businesses.

Donating both their time and money, local volunteers created an operation unique to the local area, what Lane calls "a model" for other communities to emulate.

"It's really worked. The compassion in this community is overwhelming."

For example, the Morrisburg Public School will be holding a Christmas concert, with all admissions going to the Christmas exchange; the parent's community has organized a snowsuit drive, with proceeds donated to the exchange; the United and Anglican churches are getting together on Dec 19, for caroling and lessons, with all proceeds donated to the fund; the Bank of Montreal has set up an Angel Tree gift-exchange program; the local Beer Store has been selling gift bags for the effort; and the Lion's Club has donated $1,000, in addition to spending hours of time volunteering to ensure the program's success.

"I've had so many people coming up to me offering to support," Strader says, pointing to a series of letters and phone calls from concerned local residents.

At present, the SDCE has been storing most of the food in boxes donated from Odonto in the garage of Reverend Harry Brown, from the Anglican Church.

Later this month, they will be transporting everything to the Legion Hall for sorting.

Using the left-over donated money, the volunteers will purchase any neglected items at stores within the community.

"This year, it really seems to be running smoothly," Wilson says, pointing out how much easier the work becomes when everyone gets involved.

Rewards of giving

The SDEC still needs volunteers for packing day, especially to help sort out the gifts according to age and sex.

Handing out the packages, Wilson says, can be an especially rewarding experience because the volunteer gets to see how important the service has become to the families involved.

"They are just so appreciative, so grateful. I remember one Christmas, a recently unemployed man; he'd been so worried his children weren't going to have a Christmas that year."

With the unstable economy, there's a greater need now than ever before, she adds.

The SDEC serves needy families in Brinston, Morrisburg, Williamsburg and Iroquois. Focusing primarily on larger families, social service workers base their decisions on who qualifies on need.

The deadline for names on the anonymous "hotline" ended last Friday.

Christmas giving

Student returns to classes after 25 years

MIKE VAN RAALTE

INGLESIDE—Osnabruck resident Annie Desaulniers had helped her children with their schoolwork ever since they were little.

So when she went back to school last summer to finish-off her grade 12, she didn't hesitate to ask them for assistance when she was stuck.

"Now it was their turn," she says, tugging at the pant legs of her eldest son, Jean-Paul, a grade 11 student at Rothwell-Osnabruck.

Desaulniers just graduated from R/O's Adult Education Program.

At Friday's commencement, she and her family celebrated the accomplishment - a full 25 years after she'd dropped out earlier to pursue a career in the fabric industry.

"I got fed up, just like everybody else at the time," she remembers, regretfully about the direction she took in her teenage years. "The jobs were good then. But I think now, don't quit school; get your education."

From the time she was 18, Desaulniers worked as a machine operator at Long Sault Fabrics. She'd met her husband Maurice while working there, and her whole life revolved around her job and taking care of her family.

But when the textile mill closed down in 1992, everything suddenly changed.

Her whole life crumbled around her, and it happened so fast.

Without skills to sell herself, Desaulniers found herself another of the victims of a devastating recession.

"It was such a big change," she remembers, looking back on those unhappy months.

"It was so hard to find a job because there were so many people out of work."

After taking a course at the Worker's Help and Development Centre, Desaulniers decided to return to school to get her diploma.

"I just got so bored at home; and they (employers) were asking for it (a diploma)."

In May, Desaulniers began taking four Independent Learning Courses, the amount R/O Students Services decided was necessary to go along with her previous academic history and work experience.

Working diligently four or five hours at home every night, sometimes until one or two in the morning, she rushed through the courses, finishing all four by September.

"I'd get so involved in it that I'd want to get on with it."

Desaulniers especially "pushed herself" the last few weeks because she'd been hired to work for Xenopus, a Morrisburg-based dental-bit maker.

"It's different, going back to school like that; I've never been much of a reader, so I had to adjust."

The teacher who helped guide her through the program, Mary Doig, said Desaulniers succeeded so quickly primarily because of her attitude and committment.

"She worked very hard. In-between jobs, she wanted to use her time constructively."

At present, Doig has five others working on Independent Learning courses, studying part-time in school and part-time at home.

prioritized, and recorded. From these would develop a list of activities from Tourism, Industrial, Commercial and Agricultural sectors of the economy.

A short list of activities would be determined after an assessment of the budget and available resources.

"You will still manage the overall flow of activity, and make decisions regarding the implementation of any activity," Tom Graham wrote.

Bowers didn't obtain any immediate response from the Chamber from her invitation to form a committee for review.

The Commission is still considering the consultant's proposal, as one of several options. The Commissioners may opt to review the plan themselves, thus saving $1500 when funding is tight.

It is possible the existing strategic plan may be acceptable to the government, with a few addendums and revisions.

Or it may be necessary to revise the plan, according to the government guidelines with community involvement from all sectors.

In the broader spectrum of SD & G and the City of Cornwall, the SD & G Community Futures Committee has announced their goal of promoting the "Community Planning Process" for strategic planning.

Well water is a big concern for Dundas County residents

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

SOUTH MOUNTAIN—Water quality issues were on the minds of over 20 participants at a workshop sponsored by the Dundas Environmental Awareness Group last Wednesday.

Over one quarter of Canadians use ground water as a drinking water source, and also for farm and agricultural purposes.

"I think we're much more aware of our ground water resources, and we realize that we need to be very careful and protect it," said, Marianne Wilson, water quality coordinator for the South Nation River Conservation Authority and vice chair of DEAG.

Awareness has grown because of septic tank problems, petroleum leakages from gas tanks, and also concerns about landfill sites.

Wilson outlined the following facts about groundwater, aquifers, and recharge cycles.

Ground water is found between grains of sand and gravel, and between cracks and fissures in rock formations. It is also found in openings it has dissolved in limestone rock.

Most ground water is located within the first 100 meters of ground surface, and almost 70 per cent of the fresh water supply is found in ground water.

As ground water travels downward through soil, it absorbs some of the carbon dioxide in the soil, forming a weak acid, and dissolving minerals around it. As the water travels through it deposits and picks up constituents, and is also being filtered by the soil environment.

Water quality is assessed by measuring the amount of substances in the water. "As far as ground water contamination sources go, there's an endless number," she stated.

Point pollution is from specific locations like septic systems, leaky gas tanks, municipal landfills, storage of livestock waste, land spreading of sludge or sewage, salt storage areas, or run-off from highways.

Non-point sources include fertilizers and pesticides on agricultural land, and contaminants that fall with precipitation. Carried into the soil by precipitation, materials are dispersed gradually into the ground water, and depending on the geology and type of aquifer, spread very slowly, or nowhere for 100 years, or very fast, affecting a large area in a short time.

Costly clean-up

"The big problem is when our ground water systems are contaminated, they're very expensive to clean up, and often impossible."

And if left to nature to recharge and clean, ground water may take anywhere "from two weeks to 10,000 years. It probably wouldn't be two weeks around here, probably not 10,000 years either, but many years."

"It's very important to prevent problems, and do as much as we can to help insure we're drinking safe water and have safe water in years to come as well," Wilson said.

During a 1991 water quality study in Huron County, information was gathered from 400 wells, and 301 were sampled. According to Ontario Drinking Water guidelines, the allowable limit of nitrate-nitrogen in drinking water is 10 mg/ liter, and 11.6 per cent exceeded this value.

The dug or bored wells had higher concentrations of nitrate than the drilled wells, with 30.5 per cent of dug wells exceeding guidelines, while only four per cent of drilled wells were over the limit.

Nitrates are leached from sources such as fertilizer-spreading, septic systems and weeping beds, manure applications. The constituent is especially harmful to babies, with excessive amounts resulting in "blue baby" syndrome.

Total coliform and fecal coliform bacteria levels were measured in the samples, and 37 per cent of wells or one in three showed levels above the acceptable limit of zero.

None of the water samples had measurable levels of pesticides, although atrazine showed in trace amounts.

In a 1992/3 province-wide study of 1300 farm wells by the University of Waterloo, 13 per cent exceeded the maximum nitrate levels, 31 per cent were high in coliform bacteria, and 20 per cent had fecal coliform bacteria. Eight per cent of wells had detectable levels of pesticides.

Old wells and shallow dug or bored wells were the most frequently contaminated, compared with new drilled wells.

Water policy

Ministry of Environment and Energy representative Mike Seguin outlined government policy for ground and surface water in Ontario according to the Ontario Water Resources Act of 1956, and a policy book "Water Management Policies" (1978).

The book outlines the management policies for ground and surface water quality and quantity.

According to the Act, water taking is restricted by a rule that no organization or individual may take more than 50,000 liters or 10,000 gallons a day from any water source without a permit.

Under another section, licenses are required for well contractors and well technicians, and permits required to construct a well in designated areas.

The Ontario Drinking Water objectives are guidelines to protect water for human consumption, with health standards set by limits on noxious substances and aesthetic qualities guided by parameters on temperature, odor, and taste etc.

As Ministry investigator for Dundas County, Seguin said some resients frequently asked about the water quality of their wells, and a common complaint was oil and gasoline contamination.

President of the Renwick Well Drilling in Ottawa, and Eastern Ontario director of the Ontario Ground Water Association, Roy Renwick outlined proper methods of drilling and sealing wells, and stressed the need for hiring a properly licensed contractor and technician.

Basic aquifers

Denis St. Pierre, a Winchester-area farmer, showed ministry outlines of several basic aquifers in Eastern Ontario, and plans of 40 towns who could obtain water from these aquifers.

An aquifer exists around Williamsburg and Winchester Springs, Mountain and Hallville, and one stretches from Winchester to Chesterville to Cumberland Township. An aquifer also exists between Iroquois and Kemptville, and from Hallville to Arnprior.

St. Pierre noted the province is being pushed by hydrogeologist and engineer lobby groups to pass legislation which would force municipalities to restrict land use around ground water recharge areas. Restrictions would be through the land use policies of municipal official plans, or nuisance by-laws on pollution would be enforced in ground water recharge areas and not in others.

Under restricted use, source points of contamination like liquid manure piles, and septic tanks would be prohibited in recharge areas.

St. Pierre noted restrictions on land use would have a negative impact on farmers, who should be compensated for their losses. Whether this should be by the municipality, or province is currently debated by the Ministry.

The annual meeting of the Dundas Environmental Awareness Group is planned for February, with other water issues as a tentative subject.

R.I.D.E. program saves lives

During this holiday month, drivers should not be surprised if they become part of a province-wide check into some of their driving habits, like the habit of driving while impaired by alcohol or other substances. Since its inception, a few years ago, the R.I.D.E. program has had a positive influence in removing from the busy traffic lanes, hundreds who are endangering not only their own lives, but the lives and property of millions of others.

The police officers who conduct these checks are doing it for only one reason—to save lives. They measure the success of a campaign by only one yardstick—the size of the reduction in the injury and fatality list.

All motorists should be happy to cooperate with the police in this effort. Any motorist sufficiently responsible to have a driver's licence should also be sufficiently responsible to avoid becoming a danger to him or her self, and to other citizens.

If you happen to be one of those checked, why not thank the officer for the good job being done? Don't forget, one of the lives they save could very well be yours!

But Santa wasn't confused

Almost any youngster will tell you that Santa Claus is a pretty reliable fellow, sliding down chimneys on the same evening, year after year. But this was not the case in 1752, when Christmas came 10 days early.

The explanation for Santa's early appearance that year can be traced all the way back to the year 45 B.C., when Julius Caesar, the Roman Emperor, introduced one of the most important standards the world had ever seen—the Julian Calendar. Unfortunately, the Egyptian astronomer hired by old Julie to calculate the length of the year did not have access to the sophisticated equipment available today, so he came up with a slightly inaccurate estimate.

Because of this, the calendar fell behind a fraction of a day every year. In 1581, Pope Gregory XIII decided to turn the calendar forward to make up for the discrepancy over the years. for that year only, he decreed, the day following October 4th, would be October 15th. He also modified the system of leap years to keep the calendar on track from that date forward.

Catholic countries complied with the decree immediately. Other nations, including Britain and her American colonies, did not make the change until 1752, bringing the holiday season 10 days early that year.

Today, we can count on celebrating Christmas at the same time every year, thanks to the people who developed and perfected one of the most accurate, and most valuable time-keeping standards in the entire world.

Hope for the world's children

Nearly a half-century ago, a seven-year-old Czechoslovakian girl sent UNICEF an illustration thanking that organization for the assistance it had rendered to her war-torn village after World War II—and that illustration became the first ever UNICEF Card. Today, the UNICEF greeting card campaign is one of the most successful marketing programs in the world, and has, since its beginnings in Canada, raised more than $70 million. This revenue goes to fund projects in education, health, care and nutrition, clean water and sanitation for the world's most needy children in more than 120 developing countries.

Since that first card, the organization has added prodigiously to its inventory, so that you can now procure cards for almost any occasion, but also great games for children and attractive gifts for adults.

UNICEF's greeting cards do more than carry the season's greetings and holiday wishes to friends and family; they signify hope for the world's neediest children. It is the purchase of a UNICEF card or gift that has contributed towards the reduction of infant mortality rates in Botswana, the rise of immunization levels in Indonesia, higher literacy rates in Thailand and lower malnutrition rates in Bolivia and many other parts of the world.

These are real changes that UNICEF is trying to bring about and the sale of UNICEF cards and gifts plays a major part in these success stories. For the consumer, there is a large and attractive selection from which to choose. Designs depicting winter, holiday and nativity scenes by internationally-known artists are included with Canada's own, Jan Thornhill and Shirley Cheechoo.

The UNICEF holiday selection also embodies the spirit and principles of the organization. For instance, many of the UNICEF cards, all their white envelopes, the catalog and order forms are made from or printed on recycled paper. So, this holiday season, buy a UNICEF card or gift for someone special. The dollars you spend with UNICEF can bring not only good wishes to your friends and loved ones, but desperately needed assistance to those whose poverty is greatest.

In this area, cards are available at Whitteker's meat market in Williamsburg.

The Seaway Valley Tourist Council issued a statement saying it would not submit to pressure from any source in regard to its stand on the proposed 100-room resort hotel near Upper Canada Village. While none of the four executive members of the group responsible for the press release would say where that pressure came from, The Leader learned it could have originated in the Western municipalities of the organization.

Lake St. lawrence hotel and motel operators wanted the United Counties council and the Seaway Valley Tourist Council to increase the SVTC board of directors and begin investigations into developing more tourist attractions in the area.

The new year did not look to promising for 18 employees of Beavers Dental Products Ltd. who were awaiting early January laoyoffs. General manager Wally Latchem said an overall decline in the marketplace forced production cutbacks at the plant. This in turn, meant work shortages for many of the plant's 165 employees.

The Board of Industrial Development and Leadership awarded an $800,000 capital grant to the St. Lawrence Parks Commission for improvement of the exhibits, stores, food facilities and support services, Reuben C. Baetz Tourism and Recreation Minister announced. "Tourism in Eastern Ontario is a strategic element and the improvements made possible by the grant will help improve the image of the parks and attractions of the St. Lawrence Parks Commission as a first class destination," Baetz had said.

Danny Cassell and Chuck Lawlor were pictured on the front page of the December 14th issue of The Leader with eight Canada geese they shot to close out the hunting season. Steve Casselman was not pictured in the paper, but he was also a member of the hunting party.

Hartley Lewis McIntosh, 50, of Iroquois was a victim of an industrial accident at the National Harbors Board Elevator at Johnstown Friday, December 7th. He was found pinned by an elevator mechanism on the third level. He died of asphyxiation.

It was announced in the paper that the winter carnival would be held on February 16th. Attractions included the Figure Skating Club of Morrisburg, a snowmobile field day, Slide-a-Bed contest, a minor hockey tournament and fun and games for the children. There was also going to be a hockey game between the Morrisburg Old Timers and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police team from Ottawa.

The December 6th issue of The Leader reported that Morrisburg voters had turned thumbs down on Sunday sports, movies, lectures and theatrical performances. Of the 1,078 eligible voters, only 558 turned out at the polls. On the question of Sunday Sports, 43% of the ballots cast were affirmative while 55% were negative. The remaining ballots were spoiled.

The new St. Mary's School was being prepared for an Open House. It had opened its doors in September with a staff of three teachers and 76 pupils. The principal of the new school was Mrs. Blanche Pigeon of Iroquois.

The Morrisburg Dunbrik Orfuns Intermediate Hockey team opened its season with a 14-1 win over an All Star team masterminded by Keith Schell of Williamsburg. The Orfuns were coached by Henry Leduc, and referees for the game were Carl Casselman and Jack Hoy. Bill Magee, Bill Duvall and Barry Milne all fired hat tricks for the Orfuns in the winning effort.

At Brinston's Allied Food Market, hamburg was a dollar for three pounds and lettuce was 21 cents for a large head.

Headlines in the December 4th issue of The Leader read: Brewery warehouse held up. Four armed bandits robbed the local store and wounded two employees and one customer before making their escape. It was estimated that they made away with approximately $300. Employees Gordon Smith and Ted Smith, and customer Harry Tindal received serious head injuries when they were struck with the butt end of a revolver.

A capacity crowd, and one of the largest in the long history of the Morrisburg and District Canadian Club was on hand to hear John G. Diefenbaker, of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, deliver a fine speech.

Party dresses for the holiday season featured a full skirt formed by deep, unpressed pleats and soft drapery framed the sweetheart-shaped neckline.

The Blue Gardenia, with Anne Baxter and Richard Conte, was playing at the Cameo Theatre, and the Picadilly in Williamsburg was showing The Moon is Blue starring Maggie McNamara, William Holden and David Niven.

The December 8th issue of The Leader reported on the annual meeting of the St. Lawrence Hockey League held in the Dillon House, Cardinal. J.G. Miron of Cornwall, was elected president and J.A. Keeler of Iroquois, secretary-treasurer. The league was to be composed of four teams including Prescott, Cornwall, Cardinal and Iroquois and Morrisburg combined.

R.H. Bradfield and Company was advertising that you could skate faster with greater comfort in the CCMs offered from $2.75 and up. It was the hidden qualities in steel and leather, in workmanship and design that really made the CCM outfits worth more than ordinary skates and shoes, said the advertisement.

Officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Morrisburg-Waddington Ferry Club, which was to field a team in the Northern New York Senior Amateur Hockey League. Nine teams would participate: two from Hogansburg, four from Massena, the Frosch team, Potsdam, the Morrisburg-Waddington Ferry team and the senior City League team from Ogdensburg. The Morrisburg-Waddington team was composed of M. Ault, Aikman, Carson, Clark, Hutt, Locke, Merkley, E. McKoy, G. McKoy, H. Smith, F. Smith, Snyder, Robertson and Weegar.

Two teenage boys of Iroquois, James MacDonald and Alan Fisher, were presented with lifesaving parchments for rescuing two younger lads from the St. Lawrence River. The two lads who were in danger were Norman Whittle and Wilfred Merkley.

The Iroquois council was returned by acclamation. The members included W.M. Barclay, reeve, and councillors R.J. Ellis, J.S. Everett, C.S. Fisher and Ed Strader.

Anlon Young, the famous Canadian Operatic Baritone, was to be heard over the air weekly on CFRB, Toronto.

1933

It was reported in this issue of The Leader that Aultsville was to have a new barber shop in Mr. N. Dafoe's house on Main Street, opposite the Methodist Church. Mr. McGillivary was to be the manager.

Also at Aultsville, Mr. James Lount had the Delco Light installed in his house and a fine light on the front porch was greatly appreciated by all the citizens, especially when the evening mail was being distributed.

The Christmas season is upon us again; a fun time of the year when family and friends are on our minds. We also buy more at this time of the year than at any other time, so please remember that creating extra garbage is one holiday excess we can all do without.

Here are some tips that will reduce garbage so you can have a great, green Christmas:

- trees bought from a Christmas tree supplier or tree farm can be chipped and used in flowerbeds and around the trees in yard.
- or a living Christmas tree to be replanted after Christmas.
- decorations made from strung popcorn and/or cranberries not only are good for the environment but also give a new look to your tree.
- crochet snowflakes and/or angels for decorations; there are endless other ideas for making decorations for your tree.
- when using Christmas lights from previous years please remember to cut down on energy consumption by not leaving lights on for long periods of time.
- for your upcoming parties why not use cloth tablecloths, napkins, stainless steel cutlery, china plates, cups and glasses instead of plastic, paper and styrofoam materials.
- gift wrappings, ribbons, bows can be saved and reused for next year (or if you have saved yours from previous years they can be used this year.)
- coloured comic section of the newspaper is great for wrapping children's gifts, the sport section for your sport fan/athlete, and the finance section for your financial wizard.
- cloth bags are great for gifts and become part of the gift.
- for people with limited space in their home, how about a decorated tree purchased at a local grocery store? Not only is it a nice decoration, but it can be planted in their yard in the spring.
- instead of a gift - think about a donation for a good cause, e.g., CHEO, Kidney, Heart, Liver Foundations, etc. in the name of the gift recipient.
- an acre of rainforest preserved in the recipients name ($25 covers certificate, information kit and decal). Write: World Wildlife Fund, 60 St. Clair Avenue East, Ste. 201, Toronto, Ontario M4T 1N5.
- membership in an Environmental Group ($20-$30; some groups charge less for students). Usually includes a magazine or newsletter.
- Dundas Environmental Resource Centre membership is $10 single; $15 family; $25 corporate.
- composter and tools, Green Consumer Guide, environmental games, etc.
- subscription to local newspapers, magazines (for any age group) are a welcome change.
- long distance certificates;

Fabric store closes after 20 years; GST cited as factor

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

MORRISBURG—Saturday marked the end of an era for D & K Fabrics, as the fabric store opened for its last day of business.

The store had a combined history of over 20 years under previous owners Don Kennedy, and George Dempster, and the present owner Gloria Brown. And for a period, D & K Fabrics was situated across from its present location in the center court of the Morrisburg Shopping Plaza.

In September 1988, Gloria took over the business and for the last five years has operated it, helped by part-time employees Inez Gurnhill, Lorna Sayeau, Verla Perrier, and Cathy Pitruniak.

And this year on December 19, Gloria will be leaving the area to join her husband Robert in Pointe Claire, P.Q. Robert, an aero-space engineer, and senior manager with the Space Agency was transferred to St. Hubert in August.

Closing business was not a happy occasion, since Gloria has enjoyed the last several years. "It was a happy time, a very interesting five years, and I've learned a great deal."

"What I enjoyed the most was helping people who come into the store, on a very personal level. They'll be one aspect of the business I'll miss most," she said.

Gloria first acquired a lifelong love of quilting, by piecing quilts at her grandmother's side at the age of five. She now enjoys sharing her knowledge by teaching others.

She offered evening and day-time classes in quilting, knitting, crochet, and sewing, from once to three times a week. There were usually only four or five students per class, and classes were focussed on hands-on activities.

"People are more relaxed (when classes are small). There's more time to spend with them, to answer individual questions and problems," she said.

Although Gloria has no definite plans for opening a store at Pointe Claire, she plans to teach quilting, as some people have already contacted her to set up a class.

With the help of five other ladies, Gloria also helped found the Upper Canada Quilters Guild in 1988. The group of about 40 members meets on the first Tuesday evening of every month at Morrisburg Public School, to discuss quilting. Speakers were invited in and workshops were held, including one by Gloria.

"You don't have to be an expert quilter, or even a quilter to be a member, you just have to love quilting," she said. "It's a lot of fun, and a forum where you can exchange information."

The store initially held more yarn, and craft-making materials, but over the years Gloria changed the stock from crafts to fabrics according to customer demand.

GST a turning-point

Gloria noticed a downturn in business after the introduction of the GST. "The high unemployment, the recession in general, and the GST have had a devastating impact on the local economy, and I would strongly urge the people to support the local businesses," she said.

"It was a turning point, it made people rethink their purchases much more carefully, and they were indignant. That wasn't the beginning of cross-border shopping, but there were a lot of dollars going out of Morrisburg on weekends," she stated.

Although it is still cheaper to sew quality garments than to purchase ready-made clothes, Gloria believed people were using a lot of items accumulated over the years. In addition, more women are working out of the home, reducing the numbers of those who have time and inclination to sew.

Gloria would advise those starting a new venture to do "an in-depth market analysis of the area in which you're interested in opening a business."

Such an analysis would provide valuable information on the demand for the type of business, and the sufficiency of population to support it.

Gloria said her staff had been "fantastic, supportive. That's what a small business person needs. You can leave the store and not worry about it."

"And I'd like to thank everyone for their friendship and warm support," she stated.

"It'll leave a gap in Morrisburg," said Inez Gurnhill, an employee of 18 years, who worked with Gloria and also with partners Kennedy and Dempster.

"I'd like to see someone take it over and start it up again, although times aren't good for that," Inez stated.

"It provided the essentials for sewing and quilting. A lot of people came from out of town for their sewing needs," she added.

A quilter's goodbye

No more will these lovely quilts be shown at D & K Fabrics, which closed business on Saturday. Gloria Brown, the owner of the store, and sewer of these quilts, is moving to Pointe Claire, P.Q. The business is for sale.

clothing, book and music store certificates are greatly appreciated gifts.

- theatre tickets (Upper Canada Playhouse is one example), dinner tickets (various restaurants in our area) or upcoming concert tickets are a welcome surprise.
- gift certificates from your special someone's favourite hair salon or barber shop is another gift idea.
- writing paper and envelopes made from recycled paper with stamps for each envelope are great for a loved one far away.
- chinaware wrapped in a tea towel and tied with a bow, jewellery nestled in a scarf, mitts stuffed with cassette tapes or small toys are great ways to cut down on paper wrappings.
- old Christmas cards can be cut (with pinking shears for fancy edges) into gift tags.
- wonderful gifts can be found in used books, clothing or furniture stores.
- purchasing old wool clothing (e.g., sweaters) at second-hand stores can be unravelled and then knit into a new sweater, hat, mitts, and/or socks for someone special. This is also great for a craft person on a limited budget.
- local thrift stores are now accepting household articles and clothing pertaining to Christmas. In the spirit of Christmas, don't throw out but pass your items along to these organizations so they are available for people who need them. Some of the local organizations are The House of Lazarus in South Mountain, The Thrift Store and New-to-You in Prescott, Cardinal Craft and Clothing Store and the Anglican Church in Chesterville, etc.

The list is endless but hopefully the above ideas can be helpful to you or someone you know. If you need more ideas or information an any of the above, please call or visit our office.

Remember: Include the Earth on your Christmas shopping list this year!

Dear Editor — Why should I help people in far away countries when there is so much need right here in Canada? This is a question I hear countless times. Because The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada (USC Canada) has thousands of Canadian supporters. I feel it more approriate to ask why do so many Canadians continue to support people in other less fortunate countries when we have pressing economic problems at home.

Generous Canadians give support to our world's poorest, not as a replacement but in addition to our efforts here at home. We pride ourselves on being compassionate people, and I think this is still our strongest motivation for giving. There is also a growing awareness that there is a mutual benefit derived from helping others. Lending a hand to Ethiopian farmers, helps conserve priceless diversity in the grains we eat. This diversity is essential to food security for us as well as for Ethiopians. Helping to plant trees in Nepal reminds us that we too have to protect our own Canadian forests and also use them wisely. Providing training and access to credit for women in Bangladesh, has improved the quality of life for thousands of children.

It is important to remember as we celebrate Christmas and Hanukkah that we depend on one another for our survival, for our economic prosperity and for breaking the pattern of poverty.

Embrun man describes "llamas for fun and for profit" operation

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

WMSBG TWP—In the last couple of weeks, motorists driving on Smith Road off Highway 31 may have thought they were seeing things.

Some may have thought it was a large type of deer, but if they guessed they were seeing llamas, they were quite correct.

Embrun resident Richard Wagner has set up the "Tuxedo Llama Ranch"on Smith Road across from the Skyway 730 Truck Stop. The ranch is home to a herd of 16 pedigreed llama's, soon to be 17.

Richard said he got into the business, inspired by his sister Barbara Armstrong, who first fell in love with llamas on a trip to Colorado, after looking at different animals, like deer and buffalo.

She started with three llamas and now has around 90 and 30-40 alpacas on a farm near Crysler, which her husband Ron and son Jeff help manage.

Developing a ranch

About three years ago, Richard bought his first llama and through selective breeding has increased his herd.

Although Richard grew up on a farm, he is a motor home salesman by occupation and does not consider himself a farmer. He calls himself "a rancher" instead, and does not consider working with llamas or doing the chores as farm work.

And while ownership is enjoyable, Richard doesn't consider this primarily as a hobby, more as an occupation, and "the best livestock investment there is."

He bought his first animal as livestock: classified as such, llamas are GST-free.

He purchased the 80-acre farm especially for raising llamas and alpacas, and may add Texas long-horn cattle to the collection, with the intention of eventually making the ranch a full-time occupation.

On the property is a seven-acre pond with small islands, which he would like to develop into a camping or recreational area. The islands might be connected with bridges, and people could amuse themselves by taking the llamas for a walk.

Llamas can carry packs between 25-30 per cent of their weight and Richard is thinking about the packing business as a side line. They can also pull carts, although they are not ridden except by children. Barbara has one trained to pull a cart, which can also carry a child with a pony saddle on its back.

The llama's foot is two-toed with a soft leathery pad, thus it has less impact on the environment than a hoofed animal. In addition, their evolution in mountainous habitat has made sure-footedness an acquired trait.

Llamas are part of the camelid family, which includes alpacas, guanacos and vicunas. As their native terrain is the Andean homeland, they are well suited to the harsh Canadian climate.

Light, warm fiber

The fiber from these animals, especially the alpaca is warm, light, and is tolerated by many who are allergic to sheep's wool.

Alpaca wool is made into a very, warm, light sweater or other knitted garment, and in its beautiful natural colors, may not even need to be dyed. At $70 a pound, it is also quite expensive but guaranteed high quality.

"There's a whole industry built around the fiber, everything from jewellery to clothing, to carts to judging," Richard said.

Their appeal is instant, and another endearing attribute. After purchasing the first animal, Richard said it is easy "to fall in love with them. The babies, male or female, you can't help but love them. You want to keep that baby and see what the baby's going to turn out like, and it goes from there."

"This is what happens, people get attached to them: and the more you get, the more you like them," he added.

Llamas are very affectionate pets, and are easy to train, can know and respond to their individual names. "They come up to you, and hum to you. They look at you and give you little kisses on the nose," Richard said.

A herd animal, they are quite social and need the company of their species. Therefore they should never be sold alone, and should always be sold at least in a pair.

Llamas have a gentle nature, and appear to like older people and young children because they do not appear so aggressive, Richard stated.

"Anyone, no matter what age can handle them," he commented. "In nursing homes, they're used for therapy. We sold males to the elderly who want something to take for a walk."

Although they are gentle, llamas have a hierarchy which they observe. "There's a dominant female who prefers to get all the food, or the best of everything. They have a pecking order from the dominant female right down to the baby. They'll spit at each other. It's like people, they know where their class is. They don't hurt each other, that's their defense."

The young males will butt chests, run into each other and chase each other. These are placed in separate pens, and are divided again after the first and second year.

"Low maintenance pets"

Richard said llamas are easy to keep, and are low maintenance pets, grazing on a few acres of pasture land. Llama owners in the west often have 15 to 20 on five to six acres, and as many as 90 animals may be kept on 20 acres.

Richard also feeds hay to his llamas, with 10 consuming approximately a bale a day. A little enriched meal from Ritchie Feed and Seeds is added once a day as a supplement.

Another feature which makes llamas desirable pets is their fastidiousness. Richard finds them "Quite clean. They have designated dung piles in the field. And you can bring one in here (storage area in the barn) all day, and they won't mess on the floor."

Even in the field, the animals avoid eating in the place where they defecate. Richard has had llamas walk through motor homes, without soiling the floor, or upsetting anything because they are sure-footed.

In Canada, there are approximately 250 llama farms, with 2500 registered animals. There are an estimated seven million llamas and an equal number of alpacas in South America; with 20,000-25,000 llamas and 1400-1600 alpacas in the United States and Canada.

Although camelids were native to North America some 40 million years ago, they dispersed to South America about three million years ago. By the end of the last ice-age (10-12,000 years ago, they were extinct in North America. Domesticated from guanocos in the Andean highlands 4,000 to 5,000 years ago, llamas are among the world's oldest domestic animals.

Their main use among native South Americans is as a pack animal, but they also provide herdsmen with meat, fibre and hide for clothing and shelter, and manure pellets for fuel.

"In South America, the whole civilization lives around them from fiber to meat, to leather to the pack animal. The whole civilization of the Incas depended on it," Richard added.

Llamas are trendy

The U.S. millionaire Randolph Hearst was one of the first to bring llamas back to North America, about 25 years ago. Since then, they have become trendy as pets, and are the choice of the rich and famous. Movie stars Kim Novak, Sylvester Stallone, and Michael Jackson are llama owners.

"People who used to be into Arabian horses are now getting into llamas," Richard states. "It's the same cycle of people."

There is profit in llamas: some select animals have been sold at enormous prices, as high as $200,000 U.S.

Pedigreed llamas can be shown, and Richard and Barbara travel with their animals to national conferences, shows, and have frequently participated in parades. This fall, two llamas were one of the top attractions in the Williamsburg Fall Parade. An eye-catcher, llamas are also useful for advertising and promotions.

In North America, llamas are used for breeding stock, packing, driving, fibre-production, therapy and pets. The animals may eventually have a larger role to play in Canadian society, although currently, the main apparent reason for ownership is sheer enjoyment.

"People buy them because they enjoy them. I'm in it for the pleasure and the profit too," Richard said.

Llama cria

A flock of llamas

Litter on highways concerns clerk

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MATILDA—It happens at night usually, when it's dark and most have gone to bed.

Local residents, having loaded their trucks with worn-out fridges, stoves or deteriorated tires, stop by the side of the road and make a dumping in the ditch.

Disregarding concerns for the environment, for the safety of the local inhabitants, or for the cleanliness of the parks, they abandon their garbage, cluttering up the municipal drainage systems.

It's becoming a serious problem, says Matilda clerk Bill Horner, costing the municipality a great deal both in disposal fees and lost human resources.

"Appliances and tires - they're scattered all over the township," Horner says, describing the problem. "But someone has to pick it up."

For the most part, this work has been done by municipal road workers in their spare time. It's heavy lifting, often requiring several workers or a backhoe.

"Instead of grading, they're out there picking up someone else's garbage," Horner says, in disgust.

The situation has deteriorating recently, as residents attempt to avoid the $10 per unit dumping fee.

"What should be happening is people who own these appliances should be taking them to the dump. They'd sooner pollute than be responsible."

Horner doesn't anticipate relief in the immediate future, especially considering provincial legislation taking affect next year will require all appliances to have their freon removed before dumping.

At $35 per unit, Horner doesn't know where the municipality will get the money to pay for all the discarded appliances.

There's presently a $78.75 fine for anyone littering along the highways, says Staff Sgt. Ralph Thompson of the OPP.

"It's hard to identify people who have done it unless there's a witness," the Sgt. adds. Unlike paper garbage, there's rarely any names attached to give police clues.

Thompson doesn't believe everyone who dumps illegally sets out to do so; it's often just laziness which causes the problem:

"If people are going to the dump and it's closed, they'll throw the garbage along the sides of the roads rather than take it back home."

A more pressing concern for the OPP are the number of drivers who casually throw discarded paper food-wrappers and beer bottles out their car windows.

Winchester women remember massacre

WINCHESTER-Canada's National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence Against Women was honored December 6 in Winchester at noon.

December 6 is Canada's National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence Against Women. On this day in 1989, 14 women were killed by one man in Montreal.

Violence is a global issue as women and girls around the world face emotional and physical abuse, rape, sexual assault, mutilation, dowry deaths, slavery, and female infanticide.

Approximately 25 women and children from the area attended a brown bag lunch and showing of the video "After the Montreal Massacre" at the Winchester Municipal Building. After the video, women from services addressing the issue of violence against women led a discussion.

Judith Running, director of Naomi's Family Resource Centre, discussed the results from the Stats Canada survey, which indicates that one in two women over the age of 16 has experienced at least one incident of physical or sexual abuse. Statistics for Wife Assault indicate one in four women has experienced violence at the hands of her current or past partner.

"We thought the former statistics of one in eight were conservative," said Running. "This survey confirmed our feeling it was higher."

She also brought to the attention of the group, the definition of violence as "physical, or sexual assault," consistent with the legal definition of a chargeable offense.

This would not include psychological innuendo, although threats of death are also a criminal offense, and chargeable.

"We were pleased with how it (Remembrance Day) went," Running said.

The Naomi Women's Shelter Center has had a busy year. From last November's annual general meeting to this November meeting, 102 children and 69 women sought shelter and were housed temporarily.

"A lot of families need our services. And there's a waiting list to see our counsellors," she added.

The Board and Administration felt it necessary to hire outreach counsellors to advise the clients, and there are now 1.5 counsellors to assist.

Michelle Hurtibise, Center coordinator for the Sexual Assault Support Services for women of SD & G and Akesasne, also addressed the meeting, discussing reactions to the National Film Board video with the audience. Also discussed were incidents of violence against women, and the importance of December 6.

During that evening, approximately 80 men, women and children of the tri-counties and Akwesasne attended a rally and candlelight vigil starting at 6 p.m. in front of the Clock Tower on Water Street in Cornwall. Speakers were Judith Running (Naomi's Family Resource Centre), Nicoline Guerier (Maison Baldwin House), Lee Frappier (La Montee D'Elle, Josee Laramee (Sexual Assault Support Services for Women of Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry and Akwesasne), and Bob Tarbell.

Hurtubise said she felt the Day of Remembrance was a success. "This is the first time we ever did it. It will absolutely be repeated next year, but we hope for broader activities in the Counties."

Women in need of assistance may contact Naomi House at a toll free number, 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 1-800-267-7395.

For further information, please contact Michelle Hurtubise, Centre Coordinator, Sexual Assault Support Services for Women of Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry and Akwesasne, 1-800-461-8192 or 932-1548.

The new man in town
Sandra Murphy, Head Nurse at the Iroquois Branch of the St Lawrence Medical Clinic, welcomes Dr. Geoffrey Peters to the area. Peters opened his Morrisburg/Iroquois practice in Family Medicine on November 22, 1993.

Doctor glad to come back home

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

IROQUOIS—It was a worthwhile experience, but the doctor had seen enough and was ready to come home.

St Lawrence Medical Clinic's newest General Practitioner and Anesthetist, Dr. Geoffrey Peters, has just returned to Eastern Ontario following more than a year abroad, working in a poor, rural area in the southern United States.

"I was doing a little county medicine," the doctor says, reminiscing about his experiences. "There's a real shortage of general practitioners down there, and the hospital did all the work (to get a Green Card)."

After spending five years in Kemptville and the Winchester hospital, he and his wife Susan wanted to "do something different, travel a little" while they still could.

Taking their three young boys along with them, they ended up in Carlisle, Kentucky, where the doctor found employment for 15 months in a county hospital.

Almost immediately, Peters noticed a "striking difference" in the quality of care between those who have money and those who don't.

"We had a lot of patients with no health coverage at all. People weren't going to the doctor because they couldn't afford it."

The Kentucky lifestyle didn't help matters either:

"We lived in a tobacco-growing area, so there were a lot of smokers. Also, the high cholesterol diet tended to create a lot of overweight people requiring medical attention. There was a lot of sickness overall, with the poverty and poor education."

During Peters' time at the county hospital, however, no patients were denied medical attention because they didn't have coverage.

"It's illegal to turn anybody away; you treat everybody."

Kentucky doctors don't get paid for charity work, although the general practitioners do end up making roughly the same amount as Canadian doctors, and the specialists in the big cities do even better.

But overhead expenses remain a lot higher as well, the doctor adds, pointing to the added paperwork necessary when dealing with dozens of different insurance companies.

Peters did see some benefits to the American system, especially in the waiting period required to see specialists.

"If a patient had the coverage, he could see the specialist the next day, and have available to him exposure to the best equipment we don't have."

Health Care Reforms

Over the past year, the American government has been holding a series of conferences on health care reforms.

Peters was involved in one such conference, and he remembers becoming particularly upset when he heard a Kentucky senator suggest Canadians were dying because of long line-ups.

"That's a little far-fetched," he says, referring to the politically-motivated statement. "But health care reform is such a big issue over there right now. Costs are skyrocketing and they're going to have to control it."

Another major problem legislatures will have to deal with, Peters adds, is the growing numbers of lawsuits aimed against doctors.

The high settlements have scared American doctors to "cover their backs" by ordering costly tests not usually necessary.

The doctor says he was never comfortable working in the American system, and he's delighted he found employment so close to home, especially considering the scarcity of available jobs for Canadian doctors.

"We're happy to be back. We missed the area, our family is here, and Ontario is a nice place to raise a family."

Added to the group of physicians already working at the St Lawrence Clinic, Peters will be working both in the Morrisburg and Iroquois locations. He'll be spending some additional time at the Winchester hospital, where he'd worked previously.

The University of Toronto graduate presently is accepting new patients. He and his wife have rented a home on Lakeshore Drive.

Toy and food exchange a major success story

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

INGLESIDE—The two lines stretched from one end of the hall to the other, then around a corner and down another.

Each day, as several new items appeared, the lines got bigger and bigger - to the point where there was room for little else.

Over the past several weeks, Rothwell-Osnabruck elementary students held a toy-and-food drive to help the local needy. Collecting both new and used toys, as well as non-perishable food items, they would place them in a line along the walls in the school's corridor. At every available opportunity, the students would measure the line, checking to see how much it had grown.

By Friday's deadline, the students had accumulated more than 101 metres in toys and another 46 metres in canned goods.

Over the next few days, everything will be picked up by the local fire department and distributed to needy families.

"There's Barbies and doll clothes out there, but there's also trucks for boys and stuff for toddlers too," said student council president Wes Bilmer. "Some people brought weird stuff, like rubber snakes, too."

Building on an idea suggested by a concerned parent, Bilmer and others on council helped organize the initiative.

"I wanted to get everybody to do stuff together," he said, "get everybody involved."

He's mostly been in charge of encouraging students to bring in the goods and in keeping the hall tidy.

"I've been straightening up stuff, making sure everything is organized."

He's been also in charge of policing the halls, making sure nothing goes missing.

"The kids; they've been very protective," said Principal Doug Anderson. "I don't anything has disappeared."

It's the first time R/O has ever held this kind of drive, said student council advisor Maureen Hart, and it's been "one of the most successful projects" the school ever tried.

"The parental support has been fantastic. This community always responds well to anything we try."

Donations have "more than fulfilled" everyone's expectations, and the students' responses have generated tremendous school spirit and pride.

"They'll look everyday to see if the line is longer. It's been really nice to see all those little faces shine, to say, I gave this."

What made the project particularly satisfying, Hart said, was recognizing how the true meaning of the season returned over the past few weeks.

"This has been my Christmas - just watching, and knowing that families will benefit."

Anderson said he's noticed it too: "At this time of year, with such consumerism, isn't it nice to see the kids changing focus to one of giving, the whole purpose of the season."

To promote the event, R/O organizers sent newsletters home, advertised during parent-teacher interviews and made a number of P.A. announcements at the school. Hart also went to a number of local industries, business, clubs and organizations to get their cooperation.

Happy Sweet 16th Sarah

MORRISBURG—What a difference a week makes.

The Morrisburg junior "B" Lions posted three wins last week to take back sole possession of second place in the St. Lawrence division of the EOJBHL.

They are also thanking the Char-Lan Rebels, leaders of the pack, who posted a 7-3 win over the former second placed team, Alexandria.

That Rebel win qualified the Lions for the Boxing Day Tournament in Brockville.

"As far as I know, we're in it," said Lions' coach John Morrow, who was happy with his team's effort Friday night, but confessed that if they played like they did Sunday in Kemptville their next win may be a long time coming.

"We've got two tough games this week, (Winchester tonight, and Char-Lan Friday)" said Morrow. "They better not play like they did Sunday, that's for sure."

The coach chalked up their lackadaisical effort against Kemptville to that "Sunday night game thing".

"It was just another Sunday night effort," he said. erall though, Morrow was pretty pleased with their effort over the last three game nights.

The Lions cruised through their first two wins last week with a 7-3 win over Brockville (7-14) last Wednesday, and a 5-2 home-ice victory over the Westport Rideaus (15-7) Friday night.

However, they ran into a bit of trouble with the Kemptville 73s Sunday and an overtime period to break the two-all deadlock.

"There was only one guy playing last night," said manager Doug McNairn Monday, as he pointed to net minder Patrick Loyer's name on the game sheet.

Loyer picked up two of the Lions' wins last week, while Denis Villeneuve played the crease at home against Westport.

Morrisburg 7 Brockville 3

In Brockville last Wednesday night, the Lions used a hat trick by Mike McAllister to sail to a 7-3 win over the Tikis.

Brockville scored once in each period as Loyer turned away 28 shots to John Kostuch's 25.

Morrisburg held 2-1 and 5-2 leads at the period breaks.

Brockville opened the scoring at 8:41 of the first period as John Hunt scored on the powerplay.

Morrisburg replied at 4:52 when Mark Donnelly scored from Andrew McEwan and Jeff Hyndman, and went ahead with McAllister's first goal with just under a minute remaining.

McEwan and Hyndman claimed the assists once again.

In the second period, the Lions counted one from A.J. O'Conner at 18:02 as he was assisted by Hyndman and Chad White.

Just two minutes later, McAllister tallied number

Morrisburg led 3-1 after the first period with goals two with help from McEwan and Donnelly.

On the powerplay at 10:14, McEwan scored from McAllister for a 5-1 lead, but with just 2:04 left in the period, Brockville's Brian Byrnes scored with a man advantage.

In the final period, O'Conner got by Mike Murray who replaced goalie Kostuch with assistance from White and Josh Gowsell.

Another powerplay goal from the Tikis saw Derek Cattelier get past Loyer.

McAllister finished up his hat trick with number three at 3:45. Gowsell and McEwan had the assists.

Morrisburg was whistled for six minors and a spearing charge, while Brockville had six minors, a misconduct and a game misconduct.

Morrisburg 5 Wesport 2

The Lions hosted the leaders of the Rideau division Friday, the Westport Rideaus and easily handled them in a 5-2 bout.

McAllister picked up another hat trick in the game while McEwan had three helpers to lead the scoring.

from Donnelly, and two from McAllister.

Tim McAllister replied for Westport.

In the second, White scored the only goal of the period to put the Lions up 4-1.

In the final period, McAllister claimed his trick with McEwan's help, and Westport came back with Dave Wilson's unassisted shot with five minutes remaining.

Morrisburg 3 Kemptville 2

Josh Gowsell scored the winning goal Sunday as the Lions picked up their third win of the week with a 3-2 upset over Kemptville.

The game was tied at two apiece after the first period, and Loyer and Keptville goal tender, Dom Cuglietta held tough throughout the second and third frames to post a 2-2 tie at the end of regulation.

With 3:16 gone in the overtime period, Gowsell picked up from White to score the winning shot.

David Waddell and Travis Froats had the other two goals for Morrisburg, while Aaron Heath and Sean Audet scored for Kemptville.

Morrisburg Mutters

•Geoff Hare skated in practice last Wednesday, but Friday he was still hobbling. He says he should be back within a week or so, and was seen cavorting with the opposing GM, Eddy Mullville of the Rideaus.

•Andrew McEwan seems to have picked up from where he left off in the scoring race as he collected eight points in three games. Seven of those were assists.

•Mark Donnelly is back in the swing of things as well.

•Coach Morrow laughed when asked how big Josh Gowsell really is. "He's 5'7", about 170 pounds. I'm being nice," he said. Josh is the player profiled this week.

•Mike McAllister is making his presence known as he knocked in six counters and added a assist last week. The team missed him Sunday though as he was cramming for a Monday exam.

•Patrick Loyer was the net man to score on Saturday at the Morrisburg Mall in the "Shoot to Win Senators Tickets" contest. He and his younger counterpart, Mike McCann, faced three hours of no-holds-barred slap shooting. Patrick stopped 208 of 235 shots on his backstop. He says he had a good time, except for the rain, and it was "good practice" for Sunday night's encounter. As for McCann, he stopped 190 out of 205 shots.

•The Lions host Char-Lan Friday at 8:30pm, and tonight, the team travels to Winchester for a 7:30 pm game.

Lions string three

Friday, the junior Lions hosted Westport, where they easily handled them in a 5-3 upset. Rideaus' goalie Ryan Halladay makes a nice save on a shot by Mark Donnelly. Mike McAllister keeps an eye on Westport's Matt Derbyshire (11).

Jr. "B" Lions watch

PROFILE

Josh Gowsell
#9 Left Wing

Josh Gowsell made his debut with the Lions' junior team last year. He posted a good impression as he was named the Rookie of the Year, as well as to the Rookie All Star team.

Josh is a South Stormont Minor Hockey graduate.

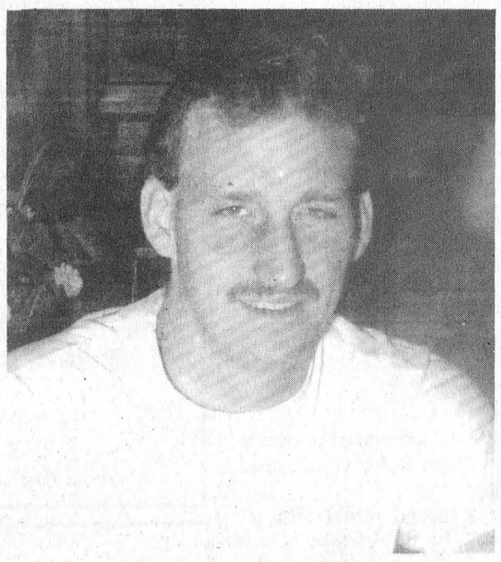
His teammates chuckle when he says his best attribute to the team is his size. This "5'9" 170-pound" south paw can hold his own on the front lines alongside centre Chad White and right winger A.J. O'Connor.

The 18-year-old is from Long Sault, and he attends CCVS at Cornwall, where he says his best subject is Physics. He also enjoys hand gliding, and hanging out at Beckers. A favorite food of his is pizza.

Josh is the son of George and Karen Gowsell.

Coach's Corner

Jeff Pashak, Bantam C



Jeff Pashak

MORRISBURG — While serious injuries are rare, the potential always exists in contact sports like hockey. Accidents can happen anywhere, anytime, to anyone, and you must be prepared if a serious injury occurs.

The CAHA recommends that all of your team's volunteers obtain formal training in First Aid and CPR. This will provide you with the knowledge and confidence to deal with medical emergencies.

As a coach, Jeff is responsible for developing and implementing an Emergency Action Plan (EPA) or his team.

Being trained in CPR himself, Jeff says he has never had an incident requiring his training, but if the need ever arose, he would be prepared.

"The first thing you need to do is see how badly the play is injured, and try to keep everyone calm," says the first-year Bantam "C" coach.

The EAP prepares you in the event of a serious injury and it requires the cooperation of three individuals:

PERSON IN CHARGE—the most qualified person with training in First Aid and emergency procedures

•tends to injured player and directs others until medical personnel arrive

•familiar with emergency equipment arena

CALL PERSON—keeps list of emergency telephone numbers, knows location of telephones and makes call for emergency assistance

•guides emergency crew to arena and in and out of facility

CONTROL PERSON—secures room for Person In Charge and emergency crew to treat injured player

•discusses EAP with officials, opponents and arena staff

•ensures route for emergency crew is clear and seeks other medical personnel if requested by Person In Charge

Outline the details of your EAP, discuss it with your staff, and keep a copy, including emergency telephone numbers and diagram of the facility, in your First Aid kit. In a medical emergency, time is short, and teamwork is crucial.

About the coach

Jeff was recruited by one of the players on the Bantam "C" team this season. He said that there wasn't a coach for the boys and Matt DeJong asked if he would like to help out.

"I always wanted to get back into coaching," he said.

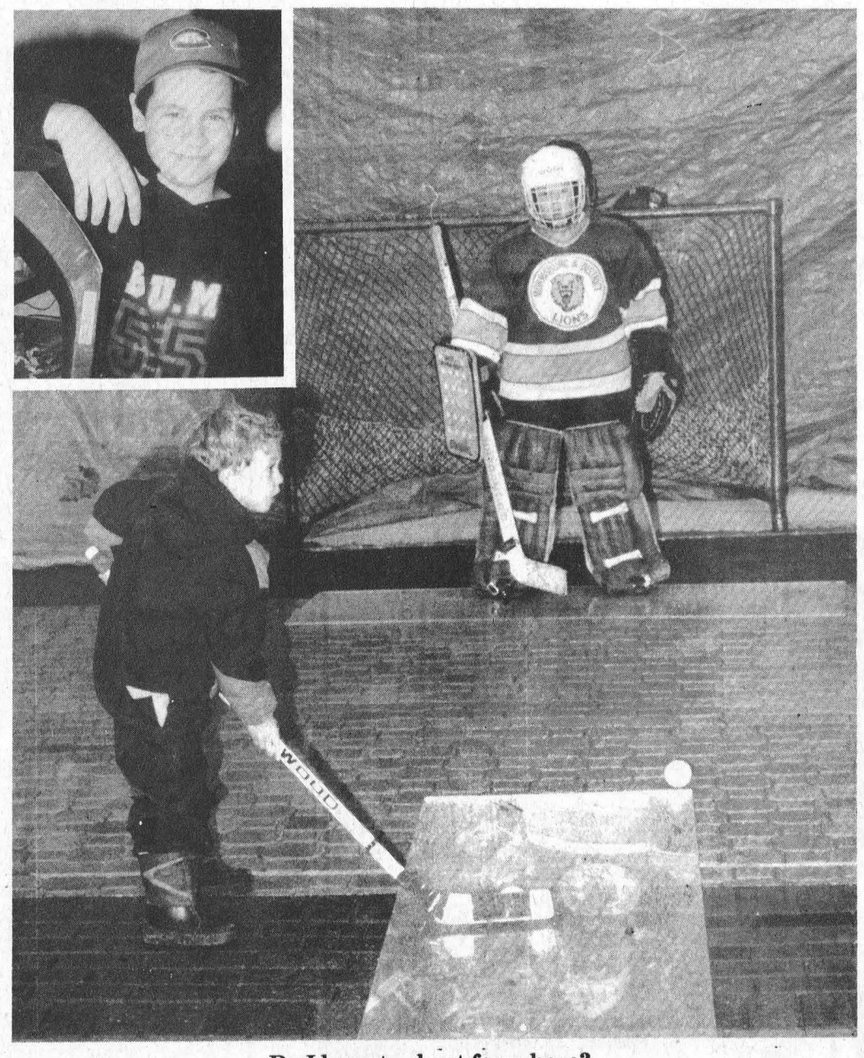
Jeff used to coach at the Atom level in Cardinal in his late teens, and says coaching the team he has this year has been fun.

"The boys are starting to come together and they are passing the puck well," he said.

Presently, the Bantam "C" team has a record of four wins, five losses and a tie.

The team's next home game is Sunday against South Grenville at 6pm.

Next week: Planning Your Tournament Schedule with Pee Wee B's Steve Casselman.



Do I have to shoot from here?

Young Nicholas Cryderman asks his dad where he has to shoot from in the "Shoot to Score" contest here Saturday. Goalie, Mike McCann waits patiently for the shot. Inset, Brad Boivin was the winner the competition as he sank three of five goals to claim a pair of Ottawa Senators tickets. There's another competition Saturday, and two more Sens' tickets up for grabs. Action starts at 1pm and continues till 3pm on the Morrisburg Mall.

Brad Boivin wins two tickets to see Ottawa Senators

MORRISBURG—It just goes to show you that even the young kids have a chance.

Brad Boivin, 13, fired three of five goals on net minder Mike McCann here Saturday during the Shoot to Score contest and won himself a pair of Ottawa Senators tickets to see them and the Quebec Nordiques in action December 23rd.

"It's was steady all day," said BIA president and organizer of the event, Sam Laurin. "It was a good turn out. Too bad it was rainy all afternoon though."

For just one dollar, anyone who dared had five chances to score on either McCann or junior "B" goal tender Patrick Loyer, depending on the participant's age.

The older the entrant, the farther back from the net he or she had to shoot. Over 15 years of age, the participant had to try and get by Loyer. Under that, the net minder to score on was McCann.

The Morrisburg Minor Hockey Association profited from the event as they were the ones who looked after setting up the contest. The organization raised approximately $100.

It took Boivin a few "practice" shots before he could get more than two past McCann who is the Atom goaltender this year, and has been called up to Pee Wee on a few occasions where he boasted a couple shutouts.

It actually took Boivin $5 to win the Senators' tickets worth $66 apiece.

He was doing a lot of smiling while being presented with the tickets Monday, however he said he wasn't going to be able to get to the December 21st game as he and his family will be going to Florida.

"Can I change them," he asked. "I got a friend who'd love the Boston tickets."

There were four other participants who shot two goals apiece. They included Kevin Wells, Mike Merpaw, Mark Jarvis and Fred Harper who all shot on Loyer. Boivin also scored twice on two separate occasions.

The goaltenders' records for the day were: McCann with a 92.69% save record and Loyer with 88.51% saves.

Next week, the prize up for grabs will be two tickets to see the Bruins in Ottawa December 27th.

If you want a chance to shoot on McCann or junior "B" goal tender, Denis Villeneuve, for these tickets, come out to the Morrisburg Mall between 1-3pm this Saturday for your chance to "Shoot to Score".

Yvon Lambert to visit Ho Jo's

LAURIE DAY
Leader staff

MORRISBURG—Former Montreal Canadien's left winger, Yvon Lambert, will be making a special appearance at the Howard Johnson's pub Thursday night.

Lambert spent from 1971 to 1981 with the Canadiens and was traded to Buffalo where he stayed until he retired in 1984.

He will be in Morrisburg to catch up with an old friend, Louis deSousa, manager of the Howard Johnson Hotel, and sign a few autographs.

The hotel has been having an ongoing "Name the Pub" contest for a few months now, and Lambert will be presenting the winner with a pair of tickets to see the Montreal Canadiens at the Forum.

"He'll actually be giving a letter to the winner," says deSousa. "Then the winner can call and confirm when she wants to go."

DeSousa says "she" because there are three women who chose the same name for the pub but just one can be a winner.

"We'll have to draw the name from a hat," he says.

He also stated that the those women in the running are Gwen Weir from Delta, Cheryl Elliott of Iroquois, and Angela Richer of Morrisburg.

Inside sources say that the name they all chose was "Ho Jo's".

So Thursday, Lambert will be drawing just one winner from these three entries.

Lambert, who has four Stanley Cup rings, will be staying at the hotel for the night.

"He's a good friend of mine, and a very nice guy," says deSousa. "And he has a great sense of humour."

The "Name the Pub" party begins at 7pm, so get there early, and bring your Canadiens' paraphernalia for an autograph.

The team's first game of the day was a 5-1 win over the host team.

Wayne Garlough scored twice, while Adams, Greg Millard and James McConnell picked up singles.

Assists went to Adams, Brad Boivin, and Josh McIntosh with two apiece, while James Paradis, Nick Hart (Pee Wee "C" affiliate) and Bobby Bird had single helper credits.

In the A final against Brockville, Morrisburg came back from a 2-1 deficit after pulling the goal tender and tied the score at two apiece to force the overtime period.

"After five minutes of (scoreless) overtime, we went to the shootout," said Casselman. "They scored and we didn't."

Morrisburg only had nine players for this game after benching a few injured players.

"I'm very proud of them though," added Casselman.

League action

On Saturday, the Lions were in Napanee where Bobby Bird, the team's left winger, played nets and recorded a 4-0 shutout.

James McConnell scored twice, while singles came from Joel Adams and Brad Boivin.

Adams had a pair of helper credits, while Joey Dufresne , Greg Millard and Josh McIntosh had single helper credits.

In league play, the Pee Wee Bs are supporting a 15-point total on seven wins, no losses and a tie.

Including tournament and exhibition games, the team is 18-5-2.

Their next home game is Thursday when they meet Metcalfe at 7pm. Sunday, the team hosts Kingston at 5pm.

Cornwall Aces top St. John's

CORNWALL—Last Wednesday, the Cornwall Aces upset St. John's 3-2 thanks to a early goal in the third period by Chris Lindberg.

With just 4:38 gone in the final frame, Wade Klippenstein and Rick Kowalsky set up Lindberg with the winning shot. That goal also assisted him in being named one of the game's three stars, behind the goal tending of Garth Snow in the winning effort.

Ken McRae of St. John's was named the game's third star.

In the first period, Cornwall came on strong with Paul Willett's shot with 1:49 gone. He was assisted by Mike Hurlbut.

With 13:54 gone in the first, Reggie Savage gave the Aces a 2-0 lead. Denis Chasse and Alain Cote picked up the helper credits.

The visitors came back to tie the game in the second with Matt Mallgrave shot past Snow unassisted at 13:32.'

Alexei Kudashov scored from Chris Snell with 15:37 on the clock.

That finished the scoring until Lindberg's winning shot in the final period.

Bruce Racine was the net minder for the visitors.

On Saturday, the Aces lost 6-3 to the Rochester Americans.

With the score tied at two apiece after the first period, Rochester came back in the second to go ahead two with the only two goals of the period.

Mike Hurlbut scored the Aces' first goal of the game at 1:06.

Jeff Parrott, and Denis Chasse scored the other two counters.

Matthew Barnaby, Todd Simon, Mikhail Volkov, Doug MacDonald (2), ad Jason Dawe were the marksmen for the Americans.

With 1:57 left, Parkers' Jason Smith was unassisted, but Castles tied the score for the final time as Moss and David Lapier gave Bill Nose-worthy the opportunity to score the tying shot.

Two three-minute offences were whistled to Castles, while Parkers had a pair of three-minute penalties and one two-minute minor.

In the second game, Charlie's doubled Hills 6-3 led by John Morrow with two goals and three assists.

Children celebrate Christmas the old-fashioned way at UCV

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

MORRISBURG—During the last three weeks, 1200 children from the eastern region have been privileged to enjoy an old-fashioned Christmas at Upper Canada Village.

"Holiday Traditions," an annual school program started at Cook's Tavern, and included Christ Church, and the Education Center.

"The program was to show children the differences between Christmas in the 1860's and the 1890's," said educator Gabrielle Thomas.

The Christmas tree tradition had started by the 1860's, but existed more in commercial, and public establishments than in private homes, Thomas explained. But by the 1890's, more Christmas trees were seen in homes and on a regular basis.

"Christmas was less celebrated and less commercial than in the 1890's. Some families celebrated and some didn't. There was a big difference from one family to the next, depending on family descent."

German families would be among the first to start celebrating Christmas, while British families adopted the tradition later on.

The children spent time in the kitchen at Cook's Tavern, helping prepare a Christmas meal of roast turkey in a reflector oven at an open hearth. Some children peeled apples, while others made pie crust, or mixed ingredients for plum pudding, and still others grated spices like nutmeg and cinnamon.

In the barroom, children added letters to a seed motto hung on the wall, declaring messages like "Joy to the World", or "Peace on Earth". Beans of one color were used for the inside of letters, which were outlined in legumes of a different color. And upstairs, children listened to costumed characters reading Dickens "Christmas Carol".

Crysler's General Store was another stop, and toys and games popular in the 1860's were discussed. Like modern merchants eager to make a buck, Crysler had started to promote Christmas and had these items on display. Also discussed were festive foods for sale which were generally not available, like apricots, nuts, and raisins.

At Christ Church, the children learned about Christmas carols and engaged in singing.

At the Education Center, the students made small items like lavender sachets and candy bars to place on the Christmas tree, and which they were allowed to take home. They also dressed in nineteenth century costume, and performed a Christmas tableau, with the reading of poems, singing, and dancing.

Thomas said an Ottawa teacher commented, how much she enjoyed bringing her students to this program at Upper Canada Village. During December, school days tend to be hectic, with report cards and Christmas concert preparations.

"It gives a great perspective on Christmas without the madness around it," she said.

The three-week program was given in French and English, with participants from Grade 2 to Grade 8, including student teachers from Queen's University. Students from around the Eastern region attended, from areas as diverse as Ottawa, Alexandria, Greely, Cornwall, Kingston, Orleans, Athens, Gloucester, Nepean, Douglas, Ontario and even the Province of Quebec.

"The program adjusts to any age group," Thomas said. "And the kids are really keen to do the work."

Although "Holiday Traditions" has been successful over the last few years, Thomas said it was not certain it would be offered again next year, due to program uncertainties.

FRASER—Even at the danger of over exposure, I cannot but say a big thank you to all the people who made a night to be remembered by yours truly. From Reeve McGregor and council of Morrisburg to the Prime Minister of Canada, the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 48 and Legion Choir. Behind all the goings on was one tireless little girl, with vigor, vitality and versatility who did a pretty good undercover peace of work, secretly planning the surprise for my 95th birthday. I refer, of course, to Mrs. Terry (Judith) Laurin. To those who attended and also for the many good wish cards, I can only say "May all the richness of your blessing be returned to everybody with interest," and looking forward to Branch 48's Burns Dinner on January 21.
—James F. Fraser 49p

Community choir ready for first concert, "Sing We Merrie"

MORRISBURG—The community choir was conceived a year ago and now they are ready for their first official concert.

The Seaway Valley Singers will be presenting "Sing We Merrie" to local residents on Friday, December 10th at the Upper Canada Playhouse.

They have been practising a wide range of music since September for this pre-Christmas concert.

The 35-member choir came together in January, following a carol sing with the Morrisburg Legion. Many churches were invited to attend. when they were all together, they started talking about forming a community choir. Today, that idea has become reality.

Pianist, organist and conductor Michael Goodwin directs the choir and Margaret Brown is the accompanist. Choir members come from all over the County.

The choir performed several songs, as the opening act to an Upper Canada Playhouse fundraiser in spring. They practice every Wednesday evening for two hours at Lakeshore Drive United Church in Morrisburg.

The cost for the concert is $7 per person, or $5 for seniors and students. One dollar of each ticket will go toward the Winchester District Memorial Hospital. A reception will follow the concert.

Tickets are available at Pier 31 in the Morrisburg Mall, and at Berry's Pet Foods on Highway 2.

Choir members are looking forward to a great performance, so come out and enjoy an evening of beautiful music that will prepare your hearts for this festive Christmas season!
