Ice Revue '70 Was Well Received Here

"Children of the World" was the theme of the "Morrisburg Ice Review of '70" held Saturday at Morrisburg and District Community Centre under auspices of Morrisburg Recreation Committee.

Canada, featuring Indians, Eskimos, Lumberjacks and settlers saw 30 costumed youngsters enacting various facets of early Canadian life.

Another group of older children represented England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales in a presentation picturing the British Isles. Holland, Mexico, China, Hawaii and various European countries were represented by smaller groups in enthusiastic performances.

Beverly Steinberg, Carol Devaul and Colleen Lewis were the clows adding spice and frivolity to the occasion.

Between acts and feature presentations Miss Bonnie Riddell, professional from Cornwall Skating Club, Miss Janice Willson, Cornwall and Miss Judy Gurnhill, Miss Bonnie MacDonald and Miss Mary Howald of Morrisburg Skating Club presented high calibre solo skating exhibitions.

Combines Drop Two; Play in Syracuse Saturday

It was a stormy weekend for the Morrisburg Combines after defeating Embrun Panthers 7-1 Wednesday night to take the best of 7 quarter finals 4 games to 2. This earned them the right to face Syracuse Stars in the best of 5 semi-finals.

Saturday night the Combines lost 5-3 in Syracuse and drove home unning into a storm and then playing a sloppy game Sunday night being swamped 7-1 by the Stars. The Stars led 1-0 after the first period and 3-1 after the 2nd period. Murray Death scored a hat trick, Brian Cornell a pair, and singles by Bill Craig and Jim Keon. Mel Tomalty assisted by Big Doug Casselman and Roy Pyke scored Combines only goal on a power play in the 2nd period. Combines outshot the Stars 27-20 but couldn't get them past Wayne Ryan. Derek Holmes assisted on 4 of the Stars goals.

8 minors were handed out, 3 to Saturday night the Stars led 3-0 the Combines.

at the end of the first period and 4-2 after 2 periods. Combines made it 4-3 at the 13 minute mark of the 3rd, with the Stars scoring again 3 minutes later. Combines scorers were: Pat Brophy with a slapshot from the point, on a powerplay, assisted by Allie Cameron and Lyle Ellis. Rick Rushford counted the 2nd goal with Brophy assisting. Little Doug Casselman scored the 3rd goal assisted by Ron Quenneville and Bob Carkner (his first assist of the season).

Next game in this series will be in Syracuse on Saturday at 8:00 p.m., with a fourth game if necessary, back in Morrisburg on Sunday at 8:00 p.m. If the game is to be here on Sunday, all area radio stations and channels 4 and 13 TV will be advised, so that fans may be informed.

Due to an appeal by Kemptville Royals, that they were eliminated from Intermediate "A" playoffs by a Senior "A" club, namely Syracuse Stars, who officially became a Senior A Club as of Dec. 31st, 1969 the ODHA has ruled that the Syracuse Stars are inelligible for intermediate A branch competition and therefore Morrisburg Combines will finish their series with Syracuse and will continue on in branch playdowns.

The winner of the Renfrew, Shawville series will thus meet Kemptville in a 2 out of 3 series beginning March 20th. The winner to be ready to meet Morrisburg in a 3 out of 5 final by March 25th or earlier if series only lasts two games.

The final series must be completed in time to play in Quebec by April 4th.

Photography Urged For Horticulturists

Alex Mullin, reporter-photographer, District Editor of Cornwall Standard-Freeholder, Cornwall, addressed Tuesday night's meeting of the Morrisburg Horticultural Society at the Civic Centre. Presenting a series of colorful slides to emphasize his remarks, he discussed photography for the amateur interested in flower and plant close-ups. Among his slides were several belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Thompson of Long Sault. These were carefully composed for background, focal point, elimination of shadows, graceful lines and color.

Subjects in the group of Thompson slides ranged from cacti against a warm stone wall, cosmos, crocuses in a trianglar arrangement with a natural background of grey-green foliage, brillian gladioli, a dramatically posed close-up of a narcissus to peonies roses and marigolds.

Mr. Mullin and Alfred Shorten, program director of the Morrisburg society had taken a series of photos studying errors of procedure in taking flower close-ups. These slides visually demonstrated practices that should be avoided. The speaker said, "As a general rule the subject to be photographed, a person, plant or animal should never be posed in too straight a position. A feeling of motion or freedom is important".

The address concluded with a demonstration of photographic equipment, some simple and some more complicated items used to obtain various effects. The use of a tripod is valuable for close-ups", he said, "since the closer the object the more difficulty there is in keeping the camera steady. The least motion gives a blurred image".

During the business session E. Bruce Tuttle, past president reported that Williamsburg branch of the Horticultural Society will plant a flower bed at the main intersection of the village, just west of the Bank of Montreal. Soil for the project has been donated and the bed will be planted under supervision of Mr. Shorten.

The Morrisburg tree-planting project is progressing. 140 trees have been ordered and anyone wishing to secure trees at a reduced price should contact Mr. Tuttle.

Discussion of a charter trip to Great Britain in 1971 was discussweeks trip would cost in the vicinied. It was estimated that the 3 - ty of $500. There are many details to be settled but anyone interested should signify the intention o any member of the Horticultural Society executive.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS FILMS PRESENTED BY DUTCH COMMITTEE

The Civic Auditorium held an over-capacity crowd, Thursday evening when members of the local Dutch Community entertained with films and music in celebrating the liberation of Holland in 1945 when Canadian troops marched into the country.

Kurt Polak of Morrisburg, welcomed those in attendance and expressed the appreciation of the Dutch people. He said, "From coast to coast, in Canada this year, all Dutch communities are co-ordinating activities which will be concentrated in October at Ottawa, to say "Thank You" to Canada. Funds are being raised to buy a National gift of a huge 3-ton pipe organ, made in Holland for the National Art Centre. Governor General Mitchner will be offered the gift. May 16.

Last fall the Dutch people of Morrisburg area and those of Iroquois planted in each village, 1000 liberation tulips for blooming this year.

Two films were presented "The Canadians are coming" and "The Battle of Arnhem" in commemoration of the liberation by O.P. Officer Gordon McGregor.

During the intermission, music in keeping with the mood of Holland when the Canadian troops arrived, was played. Mr. Polak said, "There was a moment when we realized the war was over and we saw those heroes marching in with their motor trucks we were moved to tears.

Final Tribute At London to H. E. Paul

Many friends in Morrisburg and area heard with regret of the death of a prominent resident of the village for many years years in the person of Mr. Herbert Edwin Paull. Mr. Paull died in a Cornwall nursing home on Thursday last at the advanced age of 91, following an illness of some four months.

Mr. Paull was born at London, Ont., July 10, 1878, and from his young manhood followed the profession of banking. He became manager of the Molsons Bank and later of the Bank of Montreal at Morrisburg, and had resided here for more than 50 years. A past president of the Morrisburg & District Canadian Club, he was also a member of the R.C.Y.C., Toronto and of the Masonic Order. Prior to his residence in Morrisburg, he had held positions in Exeter, Toronto, Woodstock, Clinton and Alvinston.

Mr. Paull was a member and a faithful attendant at the Angilcan Church. His wife, whom he married at Norwich August 30, 1905, predeceased him several years ago.

Funeral services were held at London, Ontario on Monday March 16th, 1970 with the Very Rev. K.B. Keefe officiating. Interment followed at Woodland Cemetery, London.

Pall bearers were members of the Corps of Commissionairs.

Surviving are two brothers, Wm. A. Paull, of London and Canon F. H. Paull, of Bayfield and Brantford; also a nephew, Edwin Mitchell Paull.

Convery-Cornut Vows at Toronto

A quiet and lovely wedding took place at the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, in Toronto, on Tuesday, December 23rd at 11 a.m. The altar was lighted with white candles and decorated with standards of white chrysanthemums and pink carnations on either side.

Soft organ music played, when Carol Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Cornut of Ingleside, Ontario, was given in marriage by her father, to Sean Anthony, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Convery of Glasgow, Scotland, formerly of Ireland.

Rev. Father Hinphey officiated at the solemn, double ring, nuptial mass.

The bride was lovely in an ivory white satin and velvet, full length gown of classic simplicity. The Victorian gown featuring long sleeves and Empire waisted satin bodice, banded at the waist with narrow white velvet ribbon and bow, fell into a softly gathered ivory white velvet skirt. The sleeves of the gown also fell into fullness at the elbow and banded with narrow white velvet ribbon and bow. The full length veil of white tulle illusion was held in place with a matching velvet headpiece. The bridal bouquet was golden yellow rosebuds and snow white carnations.

The bridesmaid was Miss Rita McCurdy, friend of the bride, who wore a full length formal gown of burgundy velvet with a matching velvet bow headpiece. She carried a sheaf of golden yellow roses.

The bridegroom was handsome in a charcoal grey pinstripe suit, with blue and green tie and boutonierre of white carnations.

The groom was attended by Mr. Donald Roache as best man.

The bride's mother worea heavenly blue lace dress over ocean blue satin, with a corsage of white carnations and white velvet, fur-trimmed hat.

The signing of the register was registered by Mr. J. Lugton and Miss Rita McCurdy.

Immediately following the marriage, a reception and festive Christmas dinner was given for the wedding guests at the "Old Spanish Restaurant". A toast was proposed to the bride and groom by the father of the bride. Cables and telegrams of best wishes and congratulations, received from the bridegroom's parents, relatives and friends living in Scotland, and unable to be present ,were read by the best man.

The happy couple left by plane from Malton Airport for a trip to Montreal and Ottawa. They are residing in Toronto.

For travelling, the bride wore a dress of royal purple velvet with gold braid trim, and black suede and patent accessories; and a purple suede coat with white fox collar and cuffs.

J. L. Kinkaid Hosts Area Curlers

On Wednesday, March 11th, Mr. J. Lorne Kinkaid, a highly regarded snior citizen and an old member of the Morrisburg Curling Club, acted as host for a sociable day of curling.

The day opened with Mr. and Mrs. Kinkaid welcoming, and serving coffee and doughnuts, to the Skips and members of their rinks from Lachute, Seigniory Club, Maxville, Cornwall, Vaat Leek Hill, Russell, West Port, Metcalfe, Ottawa, Prescott, Smiths Falls, Winchester, and Morrisburg.

They proceeded to curl until 1:30 p.m. at which time Ladies of the Curling Club capably served a delicious Turkey Dinner with all the trimmings. Speeches then being in order were given by the Reeve of Morrisburg, Mr. C.F. McInnis, Mr. Ossie Howe, Q.C. of the Seigniory Club, each Skip present and several local citizens. All spoke very highly of Mr. Kinkaid and their prvious curling activities together during the past years.

In the evening more local rinks arrived and curling went on until 9 p.m. at which time the dance band of Ron Clare arrived to entertain in an evening of sing-song and dancing. A late lunch was served and the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow" closed a memorable social event.

Mr. Kinkaid is to be commended for making such a pleasurable day possible.

EARLY ISSUE NEXT WEEK

Next week's issue of The Leader will be printed on Wednesday evening, rather than on Thursday.

Former Residents Honored at Ottawa

ALBERT TAYLOR, right, senior engineering associate, received the President's Wallet from Hal Lilly, chief engineer, central area. Mr. Taylor retired January 30th, with 35 years' service.

On the occasion of his retirement after 35 years of service with Bell Canada Mr. and Mrs. Albert Taylor were guests of honor at a dinner and dance held in the Ukranian Hall at Ottawa on February 27th. The dinner party was attended by some 135 friends and former associates. The afterdinner presentations included the President's Service Award, the Telephone Pioneers of America life membership certificate, a 21 year first aid award from the St. John's Ambulance Association, and gifts of luggage and cuff links from friends and associates. Among those present from the Morrisburg area were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ing, Mr. and Mrs. George Baker and the guest of honors' father, Mr. A. G. Taylor.

Reason Returns to Tax Debate

The debate over tax reform seems to have become more rational again. The strident voices of extreme right-wing groups like the Committee for Fair Taxation, which for a time seemed fated to dominate the discussion, have become muted. In the relative quiet, it is possible to hear again the voices of reasoned and moderate criticism which have been speaking ever since the White Paper on Taxation was tabled four months ago.

The new air of moderation can be sensed in many areas. Robert Stanfield who, during his brief interlude as an angry politician, was demanding total abandonment of the white paper now considers that the document might be salvaged if it is withdrawn for extensive patching. Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Benson have been at pains to repeat their earlier assurances that the whit paper is not draft legislation but a set of proposals that can be changed by convincing arguments.

Mr. Benson, regrettably, has not always helped promote this new, more serne atmosphere. His attempt to link Mr. Stanfield to the Committee on Fair Taxation, for example, was just simply unfair. The Conservative leader's views on taxation have been vague and contradictory but he has taken pains not to associate himself with the efforts of the extreme right to stir up irrational alarm.

It is important at the moment to maintain an atmosphere in which reasoned discussion can take place because now is the time when well-supported proposals can produce changes in the tax reform. Commons and Senate Committees have begun their hearings and Mr. Benson has promised them a free hand. As testimony of the govrnment's readiness to accept substantial changes, he has presented the Commons committee with a paper suggesting alternatives to the much criticized white paper proposal for a five-year valuation of shares in public companies.

There seems to be no reason not to take the government at its word and give it the opportunity to make changes in its original proposals when convincing alternatives are presented. When all these changes are made, however, it is clear that many of the white paper's critics will not be satisfied. There is not much doubt that, when the tax proposals reach their final form, people in the middle and upper income brackets will be paying more taxes and poorer people will be paying less. It is also quite likely that relatively well-off Canadians will be paying higher taxes than Amricans earning similar incomes. These things can not change, because, if they did, there would be no tax reform.

"Canada will definitley not be in the A Group at next year's world ice hockey championships in Switzerland", said John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, told a press conference last week. We hope that spokesmen for Canada's National Hockey Team will somewhere find the intestinal fortitude to agree with Bunny, the Canada will definitely not be in the A Group next year, nor in the B, C, D, or . . . . . Z Group so long as he and his cohorts are in charge of the arrangements for the so-called World Championship. Canada HAS the best hockey players and has no need to send over second-rate teams to Europe, just to entice the big crowds for Bunny's little girls' game.

The postal strike continues in Montreal and businesses, large and small, all across Canada continue to suffer because of it. The Prime Minister has indicated that he will take more definite steps to get the mail moving. And any steps that he does take will be approved by the long-suffering public.

TEACHERS' SALARIES

(The Markham Economist and Sun)

The Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation has "pink listed" Metro, since agreement has not been reached on a new contract. This is supposed to put the Metro Board into a sufficiently bad odour to repel prospective applicants for employment by any board in Metro. If they are not repelled, they will be in bad odour with the OSSTF. The Metro Board apparent ly has not panicked and foresees no difficulty in engaging the teachers required. The law of supply and demand is having an effect.

The Ontario School Trustees Council is supporting the Metro Board and has requested boards throughout the Province to delay the start of hiring scheduled for gains for the services of between March 13. The Metro Board barteachers in the Province, and there one-quarter and one-third of all fore deals from strength with the OSSTF. Other boards are in an inferior position unless they stick together.

In assessing the reasonableness of current salary demands (35 percent increase) by teachers, in relation to other salaries and wages, two things should be kept in mind teachers automatically receive an increment each year, up to the maximum — earned or unearned —aside from any other increases across the board or for special cat egories; secondly, they enjoy an excellent pension plan, heavily subsidized by the Provincial Government.

The aim of the Department of Education is to have one standard throughout the Province — although it is assuming very slowly (5 per cent increase this year) a greater share of the cost. Surely one standard includes teaching, and, implicitly, salary and all other matters entering into agreements, such as size of classes, sabbatical leaves, cumulative sick leave, etc., etc.

Bargaining should be between the Federation, Department of Education and Trustees Council. A salary schedule should be set for the entire Province, with some differentials according to districts, and a premium for the far north.

When a board is engaging teachers and makes a selection, it should be able to hand to a candidate for appointment a contract form uniform for the Province within the above differentials. Boards have a sufficient burden of responsibility without the annual confrontation over contracts.

Report from the Ontario Legislature

by:
Fred M. Cass, Q.C., M.P.P.

As with a great many people in our province and most of the news media, the attention of our provincial legislators has been fixed on the problems of pollution and education. Despite a careful recital both by the Minister in charge and the Prime Minister of the very significant and far-reaching actions taken and under way to reduce pollution of air and water, opposition parties seem determined not to see it or admit improvement Indeed the socialist party (NDP), speakers urge the closing of huge industrial plants until they can be re-opened with a lack of pollution effects from their operations as well as preventing establishment of new plants, however engineered. The effect of any such action on the economy and livelihood of does not seem to be a factor. Certainly pollution is a great threat to our way of life and must be eliminated - but in a reasonable and practical manner.

The welter of abritration awards, change of Divisional Board Boundary lines, and conflict between Teachers and Boards over 1970-71 teachers' contracts has made education matters a lively topic of question and debate in the House. And as usual that accomplished debater, the Minister of Education manages to field the cataract of complaints and questions with a minimum of information being disclosed while his officials search for a practica lsolution to the problems. And, indeed, there are many to be solved.

The announcement last week of the forthcoming creation of a new and quite rural regional municipality in Muskoka brings again into question the advisability of proceeding with others until there has been more experience gained from the operation of those recently created. It appears two or three more regional municipalities, mostly urban, in the areas adjacent to Toronto and Hamilton, as well as one in the Kitchener area, are slated for early birth. But it also appears there then may well be a pause. Certainly a great deal of evaluation of the operations of these new creations is direly needed before too many more of them come into being.

Although your Member is not a member of his Party Caucus and so does not learn of government policy until it is announced in the House — or by news media, he hazards a guess that there will shortly be a drastic change of direction in the methods of developing and applying the new provincial assessment. The cries of anguish from those areas in which it has been implemented are too loud and numerous and too real and too proper to be ignored by the government.

INSOMNIA PROBLEM

Dear Miss Brookfield:
I never seem to get sleepy and can only fall asleep with the aid of pills, prescribed by the doctor. He will not, however, keep me supplied continuously. Have you any suggestions or remedies? I cannot take walks. I am 75. B.A.

Dear D.A.
Many people seem to think that everyone requires eight hours of sleep nightly, but this isn't so. Some require more, others less. But as we grow older, more rest is necessary. An afternoon nap, or, if you cannot sleep, an hour of complete physical inactivity will be beneficial.

Your doctor is the best source for help and advice because insomnia stems from different causes. Among the most common ones are anxiety, excitement, annoyance or excessive mental stimulation before bedtime. Also: drinking large quantities of fluids, coffee or other stimulants before retiring tends to retard sleep.

The atmosphere in the bedroom can also lead to insomnia, particularly if there is too much noise or if the temperature or humidity is improperly adjusted. Some air circulation is necessary. This noes not mean that the windows have to be thrown wide open or that a direct flow of air is always essential. There are many ways of achieving indirect ventilation.

Once these stimulating and irritating conditions are eliminated, you might try a warm bath and a warm glass of milk, both of which are helpful in relieving insomnia.

A JOB AT 60

Dear Miss Brookfield:
Where can an intelligent, honest widow of 60 find a job? Although I look younger than my years, whenever I file an application I am never hired. If I lie about my age, the years I obtained degrees are questioned. (I am too old to renew my nursing degree, but a few years ago I became a chiropractor.) I have applied to the Teachers Corps and the Peace Corps but was placed on the waiting list. I would like to work with retarded children. I am active. I swim, play tennis, jog, bicycle, hike, camp, hunt, bowl, fish, roller skate, garden, travel, farm and read. I like boating. I also do carpentry work. I saw, hammer and build houses. I have a great zest for life. I would rather wear out than rust out. Any suggestions? D.F.

Dear D.F.
Yes, bua give us time to catch our breath. We're worn out just reading your list of achievements and activities. We doubt that you'll ever "rust out." While we can't guarantee success, we do have a few suggestions.

Contact the National Association of Retarded Children (which may your state); talk to a senior counbe listed under a different title in selor at the state employment office (perhaps with your experience you can find employment in an allied nursing or medical field); and also arrange an interview at the Department of Continuing Education for Women. Good luck.

QUIET HUSBAND

Dear Miss Brookfield:
What can one do about a husband who hardly ever talks? If I try to start a conversation, he grunts a "yess" or "no" but that's about it. He is not a great conversationalist but he does talk whe we're with friends. To them, not to me: I have no other complaints except this, but I certainly am not looking forward to the day when the children are married and we are alone. Can you advise me?

G.M.

Dear G.M.:
Undoubtedly, communications between you did not break down overnight. Why not try having a long talk with him — even if all you get are monosyllabic replies. Try to find out what's bothering him instead of airing your grievances and you may make some progress.

STRANGE PALS. A young Russian girl displays her affection for a nine-month-old female wolf that has taken a shine to her. They hit it off as strong pals last year when the wolf, then a cub, wandered into the girl's farm home in Kursk, Russia, in search of a meal. The reception was favorable — as you can see. — TTS Photo

Sun shines a day at a time

This has been quite a winter, in more ways than one. Cold, snow, cold, snow. When it wasn't cold enough to freeze the brains of a brass monkey, God, or the weatherman, or somebody, let fly with the confetti as though it were the biggest wedding in the world.

And I'm stuck with three females: A broody wife, a moody daughter, and a pregnant cat. So things haven't exactly looked up as spring hides well around that corner.

However, there are always bright spots, and I've had a fair share of them. Terry Barker took me to task, in a long, intelligent letter in rebuttal to a rather disgruntled column I wrote about teaching. He didn't convince me, but let's say that I am a little more disgruntled than I was.

There are deep and satisfying rewards in teaching, along with the frustration, red tape and the feeling that you're hopelessly entangled in a huge cobweb. There's a real thrill in seeing young people grapple and grope with new ideas, and light up as the ideas get through.

Then I had a thoughtful letter from a Qualium Beach, B.C., reader enclosing a clipping from the North Battleford (Sask.) News-Optimist stating that "Bill Smiley is by far our most popular syndicated columnist." That's great for the old ego, which needs a little balm once in a while.

Another ego-booster was an invitation to speak to the Vimy Branch, Royal Canadian Legion, a unique organization in London, Ont. It meets only twice a year, to observe Remembrance Day and Vimy Day. A charming and kind chap called Joyce Roadhouse made the contact, pointing out that it was a toss-up between me and some Major-General. The branch is studded with Brigadiers, Colonels and Wing Commanders, and there was a terrible temptation to take advantage of this chance to stand up and tell the brass what I've always thought of them. But I had to decline.

However, the brightest spot of all has been the tremendous and moving response to a recent column about my daughter. Every day letters have been coming in from all over Canada, full of sympathy and warmth. Many of them have been addressed to Kim herself.

Old friends have rallied round, and complete strangers have taken time to write cheering, encouraging letters and cards. This has not restored my faith in human nature, because I've never lost it, but it has bolstered it.

Here's an excerpt from a typical letter. "Whatever happens, don't blame yourselves. It's very easy to do this as parents. You did what most of us try to do — you taught her to stand on her own feet — and let her go. She fell. So she'll get up again and be twice the girl she was before."

And here's another. "Dear Bill: Detected grave concern beneath your casual request for a prayer. I have solicited our Father on your daughter's behalf and I feel that He has answered your prayer. May God bless you and yours in the name of his son Jesus Christ." That was all from a complete stranger.

From Red Deer came a long letter full of scriptural comfort and the assurance that his (or her) prayers would be with us. Others sent prayers that had helped them in time of trouble.

This is only a sampling. I am not an emotional or sentimental person. My wife calls me Old Stoneface. But it has touched me deeply that so many people have tried to communicate with, and help, a stranger. Sometimes a columnist feels that he is writing in a great, cold void. It's not a good feeling.

Now I know better, and I will be of good heart. Meanwhile, we live a day at a time, the sun shines, spring is on its way. Thank you all. It's good to know that there is still a great deal of human kindness in a world that sometimes looks a bit bleak.

MORRISBURG'S HOCKEY BANTAMS STILL WINNING

Morrisburg Bantams shut out Maxville 7-0 last week to win the right to play against Kemptville, coming back from a 5-4 deficit in Saturday's game in Maxville.

Friday night the team went to Kemptville for the first game of a home to home goals to count. The crew had to fight back from a 3-1 lead by Kemptville in the first period, but with their hard skating and close checking they were able to come through with a 5-3 win.

Chuck Lawlor and Terry Mains tallied twice and Hughie Gillard added the final goal.

The Bantams are without the services of Doug McNairn, who has a knee injury and is out for the rest of the season. The boys miss him and wish he were back in the line up.

Tuesday Kemptville visited Morrisburg for their second game and were defeated 5-3. Scoring for Morrisburg was Ernie Duvall with 2, and Hughie Gillard, Bruce Beaupre and Chuckie Lawlor with one each.

Their next series is undecided yet, but they still have 5 possible games left.

The Bantam boys wish their coach John Rice a speedy recovery.

Three Brownies, representing the First Morrisburg Pack, visited Winchester District Memorial Hospital in February to make a special donation. In recognition of the 60th Anniversary of Guiding in Canada the little girls deprived themselves of a few luxuries and as a result $17 which they generously offered to help in either the maternity or children's wing. Superintendent of Nursing Miss Legris accepted the money on behalf of the staff and took the girls on a tour of the hospital. Following the tour, she treated the little guests to delicious 'brownies' and chocolate milk in the hospital cafeteria. UNIQUE SALES TECHNIQUE IS DEPLORED HERE

Mrs. George M. Gorrell, Morrisburg is a frustrated victim of the Reader's Digest's unique sales technique. Some time last year, she ordered through the Reader's Digest Service Department advertisement, a musical album. She was billed and sent a cheque to cover the required amount. She has her cancelled cheque, with which she refuses to part.

Since that time she has been bombarded with requests for payment, which she conscientiously answered giving full details. Her most recent correspondence from the Reader's Digest chides her for not returning the account bill sent to her and stating: "Unfortunately I am unable to locate your previous letter and I would ask you to let me know the details of your complaint". It was signed "Judy Wilson for the Association.

Christopher Young, Ottawa newseditor wrote his experience with the Association and among letters of correspondence, sent as a result is that from J.A. Hopps, Ottawa which is original and witty. He said, "Correspondence with the Digest can be a real joy if one enters into the spirit of the thing. Consider the quality of some of their leading performers. First, there is Jean Gray, a woman of many talents and of multiple split personalities. Jeannie can write you one week extolling the virtues of "belonging" to the brotherhood of Digesters, the next week to acknowledge a sin of omission or commission, and a week later to disavow any knowledge of ro responsibility for the circumstances which have prompted your initial correspondence.

Just when you and Jeannie have come to know and love one another, The Digest will throw in that superb performer Douglas Robins, a sort of latter-day St. Francis of Assisi, innocent as a newborn babe friend of all who pay their accounts.

However, Douglas is just there to set the mood and introduce the main act, SERIOUSLY OVERDUE, featuring Everett Campbell, a credit manager. As the plot unwinds, it appears that Everett—single handed—has restrained a covey of Jean Grays from sending a nasty letter (copy enclosed) but that he will be unable to continue the fight much longer.

Mr. Hopps continues "By then you should have entered the game with unrestrained enthusiasm, and dispatched a tense line or two of protest. This will evoke a letter from Jean Gray—who else!—expressing incredulity that you have experienced anything less than joy in your relationship with R.D. And so it will go on. With a little ingenuity you can keep the ship aflot for years".

The writer had saved and photostated all correspondence with the Reader's Digest. Unfortunately Mrs. Gorrell failed to do this, thinking that each letter would settle the matter. At one stage, o "get them off her back" she sent a second cheque for the required amount, just in case she had been mistaken But, as with Mr. Hopps and hundreds of others, the "ship" stays "afloat". Refusal to answer correspondence might be one way to sink the ship.

O.P.P. REPORT

Most motor vehicle trips are uneventful and routine when drivers are fortunate. Once a car trip becoms eventful, it can be terrifying.

The automobile's horsepower and thousands of separate parts are controlled by a person of varying moods, uneven skills, incomplete knowledge, unprecise judgment and affected by a mass of dreams and worries.

At high speed, in heavy traffic, the potential for mishap is great. Collisions would be even more humorous if drivers were not protected by driving habits developed through experience.

The defensive driver is always on the alert for possible road hazards. He keeps his mind alert and is ready for the unexpected to happen. He drives according to road conditions showing courtesy to other motorists. He is a person who through his driving habits today will drive again tomorrow.

Ontario Provincial Police in Dundas County patrolled 11,719 miles while working 955 hours. During this time, officers laid 52 charges and issued 59 warnings. Officers from Morrisburg and Winchester Detachments investigated 2 thefts, 2 disturbances and 22 miscellaneous complaints. Seven persons were charged under the Liquor Control Act of Ontario.

Area highways were quiet with officers investigating 4 property damage accidents and 1 personal injury accident which resulted in 3 persons receiving minor injuries.

Provincial Court was quiet with officers spending 5 hours in court while registering 33 convictions.

RESEARCH PAYS OFF WITH MORE MILK DOLLARS

Over a four-year period, the MacDonald College Dairy Herd Analysis Service (D.H.A.S.) has increased its farmer subscribers' earnings by 2.4 million dollars. Fees paid for this period was $261,639.00 resulting in a net improvement of $2.17 million or over $8.00 for every fee dollar.

Starting with 17 herds in May 1966 there are presently 1,500 herds enrolled. These represent 5 percent of the provincial milk cow population. Due to superior management resulting from D.H.A.S., these farms provide over 8 percent of the provincial milk supply and represent a gross value of $25,000,000.00

These high producing herds — 10,600 lbs. per cow per year —have had an average annual production increase of 500 lbs. of milk per cow. This means that with an average herd size of 33 cows and with increased annual earnings of $30. per cow, the average member can anticipate a further improvement in earnings of $1,000.00 in the coming year.

Research in food and agriculture is important to both producer and consumer. The Dairy Herd Analysis Service is a direct result of applied research carried out by the Animal Science Department. Presently, there are over 200 research projects being carried out by the various departments and institutes at Macdonald where nearly 200 post graduate students are following M.Sc. and Ph.D. programs.

Leafs "shot" after trade

By DONALD FREDERICKS

The Tim Horton trade to New York Rangers is the latest example of sports' complete disregard for the paying spectator.

If the Rangers had immediately given Toronto players — even if they were of little help — the trade could not be criticized. The worst that could be said is that the general manager of the Leafs made a trade for the sake of a trade just to prove he is earning his money.

But the Leafs picked up no players for this season, trading instead for "four or five" after the season is over. And Leaf vice-president Harold Ballard admitted the players are not front-line Rangers.

What this means is that Toronto has officially accepted the fact that the 1969-70 season is a complete failure.

For loyal Leaf supporters who pay up to $6 each game for the chance to see their heroes in action, this is indeed a bitter pill to swallow. Surely, hockey needs legislation to protect the fans as well as the players and owners. The fans paid top dollar to see Toronto play to win. Management, by making the trade, is saying: 'Wait until next year.'

President Clarence Campbell has said the Horton deal is perfectly legal under existing hockey rules. But to the fans in Boston, the deal must seem strange indeed, unless of course Toronto offers to send the Bruins Dave Keon in exchange for another four or five players later on. This kind of trade, too, would probably help the Leafs since the farm teams are weak in talent — almost as weak as the parent team.

Hockey is not alone in permitting trades designed to help contenders at the expense of tail-enders.

The New York Yankees were helped to several American League pennants by picking up such proven relief pitchers as Johnny Sain. And when Detroit Tigers were battling for the American League pennant in 1967, San Francisco Giants sent them veteran relief man Don McMahon. He didn't help them win in '67, but was a factor the following year when Detroit finally won a World Series.

Last year, the Tigers floundered while the Giants were in the thick of the National League race. So what happens? You guessed it, the Tigers return Don McMahon to the Giants. Obviously, the deal was made with the agreement that McMahon would be returned if the Giants needed him. Sport obviously believes in a lend-lease arrangement.

The difference between the hockey and baseball system of aiding the "haves" instead of the "have-nots" is that baseball makes it appear aboveboard. The Tigers paid money for McMahon, just as the Giants later bought him back.

Horton started playing defence for the Rangers the day after the trade was announced, leaving his Leaf mates during a California road trip. Toronto was forced to recall Pat Quinn from the minors to replace Horton. If Quinn wasn't good enough one day, he certainly hadn't improved overnight.

For the remainder of the season, wherever the Leafs play, fans will be paying big-league prices to see a team that admits defeat. Furthermore, Tim Horton was the Leafs only all-star in 1968-69.

It is true he threatened to quit hockey, but he had a change of heart brought on by a contract estimated to be worth $75,000.

It is also true that the Leafs will probably benefit in the long run, although only a dreamer would expect the Rangers to be as generous as the Leafs and give up players of the calibre of Bob Nevin, Arnie Brown and Rod Seiling. Let's hope the NHL takes steps to prevent such deals in the future.

FIRST PERMANENT BUILDING FOR NEW COLLEGE

Construction of the first permanent building for the Brockville campus of St. Lawrence College began Monday (March 16) at the Parkdale Avenue site .

The building is scheduled to be completed in August and ready for first-year students in September. It will be afullyintegratedcollege building complete with library facilities, totaling 34,000 square feet.

Polaris Steel Limited was awarded the building contract after open tender competition.

The completion of negotiations and start of construction was announced today by college president R.C. Short. Simultaneously, he announced the appointment of Donald Anderson as principal of the new full-fledged campus.

In making this announcement, Mr. Short paid tribute to the work of Mr. Anderson who, as coordinator of the Brockville facility during the past year, established an active program of evening college courses using rented accommodation. Seven hundred people have taken evening courses with St. Lawrence College in Brockville in the past two years.

A graduate of the Royal Military College and Queen's University, Mr Anderson joined St. Lawrence College at its founding in 1967 as a mathematics and electronics teacher. His background includes engineering and business experience as well as service as an officer in the R.C.A.F.

Mr. Anderson's first official function as principal was to announce the appointment of Howat Noble as chairman of the applied arts and business departments at Brockville.

Also a graduate of the Royal Military College, with a degree in Commerce, Mr. Noble holds a master's degree from Carleton University and spent three years at Queen's University in a doctoral program in political science and sociology. His background includes experience in his own businesses as well as teaching at Queen's University.

Mr. Noble joined St. Lawrence College (Kingston campus) in September 1969, teaching in both Brockville and Kingston. He has been instrumental in organizing the cooperative education program between the Brockville Regional School of Nursing and St. Lawrence College, which began last month.

Applications are now being received at the Brockville office from students wishing to enroll in programs for the 1970 fall semester. First-year courses offered by the Brockville campus will allow students to proceed toward college diplomas in the following disciplines: polytechnical (mechanical, civil, electronics, chemical, process control, water resources); business (data processing, finance, manufacturing, marketing, accounting, secretarial science) and applied arts (child care worker).

One hundred and twenty-five college students and 100 adult retraining students are expected on a full time basis this September. Part-time students, including those from the Regional School of Nursing, will enroll in 500 student-courses.

By 1972, full-time enrollment is expected to exceed 500.

In December, 1967, the board of governors of St. Lawrence College decided to locate a campus in Brockville. It was anticipated enrollment projections would justify this early in the 1970's. After rigorous site studies in the area, formal application was made by the college in September, 1968, to acquire 35 acres of the Ontario Hospital farm land on Parkdale Ave. from the Department of Public Works.

Subsequently, three acres of this original 35-acre tract were sold to the Brockville Marine Club. The College is proceeding to develop its site on the remaining 32 acres.

Mrs. Helen Laurin, Morrisburg conducted an interesting demonstration of hair styling using wigs and hair pieces. The speaker was thanked by Mrs. Dick Richardson who presented her with a gift on behalf of the organization.

Mrs. Gerald Erratt reported on flowers and cards sent to sick and shut-ins during the past month.

By:
DONALD C. MacDONALD, M.P.P.,
Ontario Leader
New Democratic Party

The debate on the Speech from the Throne continues in the Legislature. Among the members of the New Democratic Party who have participated is the newest member of the Ontario Legislative Assembly Ken Bolton.

Archdeacon Bolton, a man of some stature in the Anglican Church of Canada which he has served as a clergyman for over 30 years, was elected last September in the riding of Middlesex South near London. Middlesex South had previously been held by a Conservative since 1943, and therefore it was with some interest that the Legislature listened to his first effor in a Throne Speech Debate.

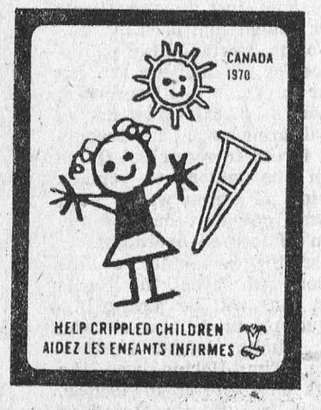
In my opinion, Archdeacon Bolton's speech was so well put together, and is so important in terms of the principles of life that it lays out, that I have decided to quote of it for his column.

He begins by suggesting to the Legislature that there is a message for the government in his election in Middlesex South. He suggests that the farmers, the Indians, and the labour force in that area are fed up with governmental action. He goes on to say:

"I notice too that the Throne Speech makes no reference to youth We do well to remember that people under the age of 25 will soon form the majority of our population, and the reason that I refer to youth in that they are giving increasing evidence of heir alienation from the society in which they live and they do this with very good reason. They find that we who are older are not listening. They find that we who are older seem unaware of the urgency of the times. They believe that we live in a world of words unmatched by action. They see the ever widening gap between the haves and the have nots, between the weak and the strong, the favoured few and the neglected many. They see the world as a global village and they object to our narrow parochialism. They think because we give so little understanding of the pace of our age that we should be replaced. They believe that society must have a moral purpose and that thi will call for social planning. Society in the western world cannot survive without eliminating poverty and all its implications in terms of housing, health, and education.

I speak as a conservative. I believe society has a duty to conserve many things. The ancient virtues of honesty, compassion and justice, for example. I believe that each the environment. This generation generation has a duty to conserve must answer for polluted streams and lakes, and ravaged land and poisoned air. What a monument to man is his use of the land committed to his charge, that in the name of private profit he has reaped so much public destruction. That lovely old word conservative implying the sense of stewardship, marks and the upholding of eterthe safeguarding of ancient landnal verities has become debassed into a blind reverence for the status quo.

These are not the days for political posturing, nor are these the days for bureaucratic delay or irresponsibility. The people, once patient, even apathetic, are demanding of us something better than they have experienced . . . This in my view is part of the message of Middlesex South."



FINISHED? After losing the first round of his court battle against a "reserve clause" in his baseball contract, Curt Flood, former St. Louis Cardinals outfielder, figures his ball-playing days are all over. Flood says he doesn't think one of the 24 owners of major league baseball teams would now touch him with a 10-foot pole.—TTS Photo

COMEBACK. NDP leader Tommy Douglas, a former amateur boxer, revived his old form in Ottawa recently when he punched a youth during a scuffle at an anti-Vietnam war rally on Parliament Hill. Douglas said he threw the punch when the youth pushed a girl. — TTS Photo

Spoon sales a natural hit

DEAR DORIS — Please send me "Pointers In Reporting Meetings." Also, do you have any leaflets on money-raising projects?

New Broom

DEAR NEW BROOM — Not a leaflet, but I do have an idea or two for you. Like a rummage sale, car wash (popular with teens groups), bean guessing contest, or an evening of skits.

A real money-maker, and one that makes a hit, is a sale of souvenir spoons. Spoon collectors abound all over Canada, and the spoons I have in mind feature crests of the provinces, and of Canada; engravings of the Vaniers and other famous men and women.

Right now, the Manitoba Centennial is causing great activity in the sale of two spoons featuring "Manitoba 1870-1970." I'm sending details (and will supply them to anyone writing in).

DEAR DORIS — After our first date, a boy asked me to go steady. I accepted. We walk home together at noon. But he hasn't asked me out in three months. I know how boys are. They like staying with their sex, too, but now I wonder if he still likes me. We haven't had any quarrels.

Do you think there is something wrong with me?

Confused

DEAR CONFUSED — Not a thing wrong with you. Just with his idea of going steady. Maybe it means walking you home from school every day.

Next time there's a school dance or basketball game suggest that it might be fun to go. If this draws a blank, tell him to forget the going-steady bit. You want to get around.

What's the percentage in a steady who keeps you from going anywhere?

DEAR DORIS — After 10 years of marriage my husband left a good job to start his own business. He put every cent into it and lost it all.

Now he just won't settle down again. He has lost two jobs and is selling from door to door. The commissions are miserable. When I ask him what to do for money he tells me to borrow from somebody. I've done that too much already.

He walks out if I try to button him down.

Worried Sick

DEAR WORRIED — He won't talk because he is stumped, too, and he feels guilty. Worst of all, he has lost confidence in himself, and a door-to-door job is no way to get it back.

Now is your turn to keep your faith in him and build up his opinion of himself. Canada Manpower might well come through with vocational guidance to point him in a new direction which would use his special talents.

Other ideas: Temporary financial help through a government agency; a part-time job for you while the children are at school; budgeting helps to make the money stretch.

DEAR DORIS — I teach a Sunday school class of 10 preschoolers. I have one four-year-old girl who is spoiled rotten and needs a good tanning, but of course I'm not the one to do it. Her older sisters baby her.

The problem is that she won't stay with the other children without having her older sister with her. At first I thought she was timid, but now I know she thrives on all the attention that crying and being obstinate bring her. So I have decided to tell her she's not allowed in our class.

Doris, do you think this is the best solution for the present?

Trying To Be Christian

DEAR CHRISTIAN — Don't make her an outcast among her peers. A child who has been too much indulged hardly knows which side is up, and will soon respond to firmness as a welcome security.

Insist she stay without her sister; seat her next to you and put your arm around her if she cries. Draw her into your play so that she will become absorbed in what is going on with the other children.

Two or three weeks may make all the difference, if you can stick it out.

White Paper palming reality

The toughest job facing Finance Minister Edgar Benson these days must be finding someone who agrees 100 per cent with his White Paper on Taxation.

In fact, it would probably be easier to find people who disagree 100 per cent.

But now that Prime Minister Trudeau has come out solidly behind Mr. Benson, it is obvious the White Paper will become law — if not in its present form at least in a form closely resembling the Benson plan.

No piece of legislation has previously been given the advance presentation of the White Paper. Canadians were invited to comment by Mr. Benson in the belief that only by thorough examination could the Government know the feelings of all Canadians.

Some pressure groups couldn't miss the opportunity of jumping in with both feet. A Toronto tailor, John Bulloch, attacked the section on corporation taxes, claiming that the change to a straight 50 per cent level of taxation for all corporation profits would kill the little businessman. Quickly, a public relations firm organized the Canadian Council for Fair Taxation, and the main battle was on. Groups were formed in cities across the country and money poured in to the Council's office.

At a meeting in Toronto, Bulloch, who is general secretary of the council, described the White Paper as "absolute Communistic confiscation."

This phrase was jumped on by Mr. Trudeau, who commented: "That may get him a headline, but it does not get us ahead."

It is unfortunate that the corporation section has drawn so much publicity while sections affecting the vast majority of Canadians lack a leader, although Robert Stanfield lately has been coming on strong.

The "silent majority" surely must consist of the 1 million or so taxpayers that are living on a next-to-starvation income level. In this day and age, it hardly sounds reasonable to give a married man a basic exemption of $2,000 — regardless of his income. He can hardly afford to pay tax if he only makes $5,000.

And the so-called middle-income group (those making between $10,000 and $25,000) must wonder who advised Mr. Benson when he came up with the plan to reduce the tax rate for those making more than $25,000 annually. At the same time, the middle-income group's tax share will go up — which is hardly following the concept of equal taxation. If money must be found to support the poor, that's one thing. But surely the rich don't need to be subsidized as well.

No one quarrels with the plan to eliminate taxation for the low-income group. The Greater Toronto Business and Professional Federation suggests a basic exemption of $4,200 for a married man with two children. It also suggests that instead of eliminating the tax benefits for small corporations, the Government should reduce the benefits.

Few Canadians object to the capital gains tax in view of the obvious need for additional revenue by the Government. But we feel the idea of including all household effects in this category and declaring a tax every five years is uncalled for. In fact, if the measure is carried out, we predict the Government will spend more money collecting the tax than the revenue received.

Finally, Mr. Benson and Mr. Trudeau are correct when they say Canadians are prepared to get less and pay more than Americans in order to remain Canadians.

But surely there doesn't have to be such a major difference between the average Canadian and average American. The Monetary Times estimates that a Canadian makes 30 per cent less than his American counterpart and after paying for his taxes and food and shelter, the Canadian winds up with about 30 per cent less.

In other words, the $10,000-man in the U.S. pays about the same in taxes as the $7,000-man in Canada. The additional $3,000 is all to spend or save.

Let's hope the authors of the White Paper on Taxation will consider this when drafting the legislation later this year.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

Weekly Report

THE FARM WOODLOT

It is a far cry from the humble homes and rough farms of the early settlers to modern farms with their fine buildings and well-groomed fields.

It is difficult to realize, as we drive along smooth highways through the beautiful countryside of Eastern Ontario, that we are traversing country that was once covered with dense forest. Most of the settlers came by the waterways that were in reality the highways of the time.

The task of making a home in such a vast wilderness seemed almost superhuman. But the settlers were courageous and energetic, willing to work, and work hard. The clearing of a farm was a long and tedious process and in those days the settlers found that fire was the easiest way of clearing land.

Few gave thought to the disappearing forests. The settlers' interest was mainly in farming and its attendant needs, and the sooner the forest was out of the way, the more fields there would be for cultivation.

There was little realization that there was a relationship between the disappearance of the trees and water supply, between the removal of the forest and the quality of the soil. In many cases, the fertility of the soil became poorer, erosion and flooding increased.

In time, many of the woodlots were cut off or neglected, and a shortage of wood resulted. To-day, in many parts of the country, the farmer should give the problem of an adequate woodlot his consideration.

The woodlot should be considered as a definite part of the farm capable of providing an annual or periodic crop of wood for such products as pulpwood, fuel, fence posts and lumber. Research has shown that the woodlot can be maintained with a minimum of effort or expense, and that the financial returns are satisfactory. The main essential is that care be taken to select the proper trees for cutting and o preserve the young growth which will be needed for future use.

The best woodlot is made up of trees of all ages so that in some part of the woodlot there will be found areas of seedlings, saplings, polewood and mature trees. A wood lot consisting of trees of all ages is produced by selection cutting, that is, selecting only the mature trees for cutting each year.

There is one important consideration often overlooked. Cattle on no account be allowed in the woodlot. They not only idestroy young growth, but, by constant trampling, so pack the soil that trees will not flourish and water runoff increases. If a shady spot is needed for farm livestock, a small portion of the main woodlot could be fenced off for them.

If you would like further information or assistance in managing your woodlot, please contact the nearest office of the Department of Lands and Forests .
